(7) The place in dispute in this case is hardly 5 to 8 feet broad (एक चरमा) and could not have been needed for residence. It was rented as a shop and could have been required only for carrying on business. As it was not needed for residential purposes within the meaning of S. 4 ग of Madhya Bharat Sthan Niyantran Vidhan no interference is called for in the judgments of the Courts below. I therefore dismiss the appeal with costs.

B/V.B.B.

Appeal dismissed.

A.I.R. 1953 M. B. 196 (Vol. 40, C. N. 76)

(GWALIOR BENCH)

DIXIT J.

Baijnath and others, Applicants v. The State.

Criminal Revn. No. 88 of 1952, D/- 29-8-1952.

Evidence Act (1872), S. 78 — Proof of Government Notifications.

Notifications issued by the State Government under the authority of an Act must be produced and proved in accordance with the provisions of Evidence Act before the Court can take judicial notice thereof. (Para 3)

Anno: Evidence Act, S. 78 N. 2.

Munnalal Srivastava, for Applicants; Mungre, Govt. Advocate, for the State.

CASES CITED:

(A) The State v. Bachu Lal (MB)

(B) (53) AIR 1953 Madh-B 84: 1953 Cri LJ 605: (Cri Revn. No. 1 of 1952)

ORDER: The applicants before me were tried by the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Pichhore of an offence under S. 46(1), "Ayat Niryat Kar Vidhan" (Import Export Taxation Act) and found guilty. They were each sentenced to imprisonment till the rising of the Court and to a fine of Rs. 50/-. The learned Magistrate also passed an order confiscating to the State the carts said to have been employed by the applicant in the commission of the offence. In appeal the learned Sessions Judge of Guna affirmed the convictions and sentences but set aside the order of the trial Magistrate with regard to the forfeiture of the carts. The applicants have now come up in revision to this Court.

(2) The charge against the applicants was that on the morning of 20-12-50 they exported from village Nand Pura in Madhya Bharat to Jhansi in Uttar Pradesh in four carts 47 maunds and nine seers of Tilli and one maund of Urad without a permit in that behalf from the competent authority and thus contravened Notification issued under S. 9 of the Act and published in the Madhya Bharat Gazette dated 14-8-48. It is said that under this Notification the export of Urad and Tilli without a permit was prohibited.

(3) The convictions and sentences of the applicants must be set aside for the sole reason that the Notification of which they are alleged to have committed a breach was never produced in the case and has not been proved. It has already been pointed out by a Division Bench in the case of — 'The State v. Bachu Lal', (A) and also by a Single Bench in — 'Panna Lal v. The State', AIR 1953 Madh-B 84 (B) that judicial notice of notifications such as the one in the present case cannot be taken. Such notifications must be produced and proved in accordance with the provisions of the Evidence Act. I must observe that I cannot view with the equanimity the tendency prevailing in the lower Courts of just taking it for granted that a notification of which the accused persons are alleged to have contravened exists.

(4) For the above reasons this petition is accepted and the convictions and sentences awarded to the applicants are set aside. The amount of fine, if already paid, be refunded to them.

C/K.S.

Convictions set aside.

A.I.R. 1953 M. B. 197 (Vol. 40, C. N. 77)

(GWALIOR BENCH)

SHINDE C. J. AND DIXIT J.

Jamnabasad Mukhariya, Applicant v. Lachhiram Ratanmal Jain and others, Opponents.

Misc. Case No. 2 of 1953, D/- 9-3-1953.

†(a) Constitution of India, Arts. 226, 227 and 329(b) — Jurisdiction of High Court to interfere with decision of Election Tribunal — (Representation of the People Act (1951), S. 105).

Article 329(b) of the Constitution excludes the jurisdiction of the Courts with regard to matters forming a part of the whole procedure whereby a candidate is returned to the legislature. But it does not take away the jurisdiction of the High Court in regard to proceedings before the Election Tribunal set up under the Representation of the People Act. The effect of Art. 329 (b) is that so far as calling in question any election is concerned, it can be done only "by an election petition" by presenting to "such authority" and "in the manner" prescribed by a law of the appropriate Legislature. AIR 1952 SC 64 and AIR 1952 Madh-B 97 (FB), Ref.

(Para 6)

Section 105, Representation of the People Act, which gives finality to every order of the Tribunal cannot be taken as preventing the High Court from setting aside a decision of the Tribunal given without or in excess of its jurisdiction. (1951) 1 All ER 268; (1874) 5 PC 417 and AIR 1940 PC 105, Ref.

(Para 6)

†(b) Constitution of India, Arts. 226 and 227 — High Court when can interfere with decision of Election Tribunal.

Though it is not open to the High Court to exercise its powers under Art. 226 or Art. 227 so as to interfere with a decision of the Election Tribunal merely upon the ground that the decision is erroneous either in respect of facts or in point of law, it has the power to examine and correct any decision of the Tribunal on the ground of jurisdiction, fraud or violation of the principles of natural justice.

(Para 8)

(c) Constitution of India, Art. 226 — Inferior Tribunal.

The Election Tribunal set up under the Representation of the People Act has a limited jurisdiction and authority and as such it is a Tribunal inferior to a Court of general jurisdiction viz., the High Court.

(Para 9)

The expression 'inferior Tribunal' is now used to denote Courts of special or limited authority constituted "on such principles that their proceedings must show jurisdiction." The inferior or superior character of a Court or Tribunal is not determined by the position or the status of the persons constituting it. It depends on the powers and jurisdiction conferred on the Tribunal or the Court by the statute establishing it. (1910) 2 KB 859, Rel. on. AIR 1945 PC 83, Dist. (Para 9)

(d) Constitution of India, Art. 226 — Certiorari if can be issued to quash erroneous decision of inferior Tribunal within its jurisdiction — (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9).

A writ of certiorari cannot be granted to quash the decision of the inferior Court within its jurisdiction on the ground that the decision is wrong.

(Para 14)

If a certain state of facts has to exist before an inferior Tribunal has jurisdiction to do certain things, the Tribunal must, to enable itself to obtain jurisdiction, find that those facts exist. The Tribunal cannot give itself jurisdiction by a wrong decision on them and the superior Court may by means of proceedings for certiorari, inquire into the correctness of the decision. The decision as to those facts is collateral because, though the existence of jurisdiction depends thereon, it is not the main question which the Tribunal has to decide. If on the other hand the Tribunal is given jurisdiction to determine certain facts and those facts form a part of the very issue which the Tribunal has to decide and the Act constituting the Tribunal gives it the power to come to a final decision on that matter then the decision of the Tribunal cannot be treated as one going to its jurisdiction and cannot, therefore, be questioned in any court. AIR 1952 SC 179; AIR 1952 SC 192 and AIR 1952 SC 319, Rel. on.

(Para 14)

Anno: C. P. C., S. 9 N. 3.

(e) Representation of the People Act (1951) S. 97.

The right of the returned candidate or any other party to give evidence under S. 97 is no doubt conditioned by certain requirements. But the jurisdiction of the Tribunal in no way depends on the existence of any of the facts stated in S. 97.

(Para 12)

The Tribunal has jurisdiction to determine finally whether a person desiring to give evidence has or has not satisfied the conditions laid down in S. 97 of the Act and the question of the fulfilment of those conditions is not collateral to any main question which the Tribunal has to decide but is the very issue which the Tribunal has to enquire. It follows, therefore, that even though the applicant may think that the Tribunal arrived at erroneous decision, he would not be entitled to say that the decision of the Tribunal was one given without jurisdiction or that the Tribunal gave itself or deprived itself of jurisdiction by a wrong decision. (Para 14)

(f) Representation of the People Act (1951), S. 86 — Trial of election petition when commences.

The trial of an election petition does not commence either with its presentation to the Election Commission or with the appointment of a Tribunal. Nor does it commence with the publication of an election petition under S. 90. The trial of an election petition commences when after the filing of a reply thereto and of a recriminatory petition, if any, the points in controversy between the parties are settled and their investigation begins.

(Para 15)

(g) Representation of the People Act (1951), Ss. 97 proviso, 86 (5) — Notice of recrimination, validity.

The giving of a notice of recrimination to the tribunal is an act required to be done before the commencement of the trial. That being so, under S. 86(5) and S. 97 a notice of recrimination to the Tribunal in order to be valid must be given to the Chairman.

It is incumbent on the applicant to deliver the notice within time to the Chairman of the Tribunal by presenting the notice personally or by sending it by registered post so to reach him within time in the ordinary course of post. (Para 15)

Obiter: Held on facts that the presentation of the notice to a member of the Tribunal who was not authorised either by the Act or by the Chairman himself, to receive the notice was not a valid presentation of the notice. (Para 15)

Anand Bihari Misra, for Applicant; Shivdayal, for Opponent (No. 1 Lachhiram); Ramsahai, opponent No. 2 in person; K. A. Chitale, Advocate-General amicus curiae.

CASES CITED :

- (A) ('52) AIR 1952 Madh-B 97: MLR 1952 (Civil) 1 (FB)
- (B) ('52) AIR 1952 SC 64: 1952 SCR 218
- (C) (1951) 1 All ER 268
- (D) (1874) 43 LJ PC 39: 5 PC 417
- (E) ('40) AIR 1940 PC 105: 67 Ind App 222 (PC)
- (F) ('45) AIR 1945 PC 83: 1945-2 Mad LJ 314 (PC)
- (G) (1910) 80 LJ KB 185: 1910-2 KB 859
- (H) ('52) AIR 1952 SC 179: 1952 SCR 519 (SC)
- (I) ('52) AIR 1952 SC 192: 1952 SCR 583 (SC)
- (J) ('52) AIR 1952 SC 319: 1952 SCR 696 (SC)
- (K) (1888) 57 LJ QB 513: 21 QBD 313
- (L) (1841) 113 ER 1054: 1841-1 QB 66
- (M) (1857) 27 LJ QB 5: 8 El & Bl 529
- (N) ('10) 12 Bom LR 737: 34 Bom 659
- (O) (1851) 15 Jur 1037

DIXIT J.: This is an application under Arts. 226 and 227 of the Constitution of India for an order to quash a determination of the non-applicant tribunal, whereby it determined that as the applicant had failed to give to the Tribunal a notice of his recriminatory petition within the prescribed time, he was not entitled to give evidence in support of it, and for a direction to the tribunal to receive the evidence that may be tendered by the applicant to prove that the election of the opponents Ramsahai and Sunnulah would have been void if they had been the returned candidates and a petition had been presented calling in question their election.

(2) The matter for our consideration arises in this way. At the general election of the Madhya Bharat State Assembly held in January 1952, seven persons were nominated as candidates for election to fill two seats in the Bhelsa constituency. The applicant Jamnaprasad and the non-applicant No. 7 Chaturbhuj were declared duly elected. A petition was shortly afterwards lodged with the Election Commission under S. 81, Representation of the People Act, 1951 (hereinafter referred to as "the Act") by one of the unsuccessful candidates, namely, Lachhiram opponent No. 1, praying for a declaration that the election of the returned candidates was void and that the non-applicants Ramsahai and Sunnulah have been duly elected. The election petition is being tried by a tribunal consisting of Mr. Dongre, the District Judge of Dhar as the Chairman and Mr. Surajbhan, the District Judge of Gwalior and Mr. Bhagwan Swaroop, an Advocate of this Court as members of the Tribunal.

On the publication of the election petition under S. 90 of the Act in the Official Gazette of 21-8-1952, the applicant Jamnaprasad gave notice to the Tribunal of his intention to lead evidence to prove that the election of Ramsahai and Sunnulah would have been void if they had been the returned candidates, by presenting before Mr. Surajbhan — a member of the Tribunal — at Gwalior a recriminatory petition addressed to the Chairman of the Tribunal. The recriminatory petition was filed on 4-9-1952. Mr. Surajbhan received it and then forwarded it to Mr. Dongre the Chairman of the Tribunal by registered post. Mr. Dongre received the notice on 11-9-1952. At the hearing of the election petition the non-applicant Lachhiram took the objection that the recriminatory petition had not been presented within time to the proper authority, namely, the Chairman of the Tribunal. Thereupon the Tribunal framed an issue as to whether the notice of "recrimination" under S. 97 of the Act had been presented to the proper authority within time.

After hearing the parties on this issue, the Tribunal came to the conclusion that as under the proviso to S. 97 read with S. 86(5) of the Act notice of "recrimination" was required to be given to the Chairman of the Tribunal within fourteen days from the date of publication of the election petition under S. 90, the presentation on 4-9-1952 of the recriminatory petition by the applicant Jamnaprasad to Mr. Surajbhan a member of the Tribunal did not constitute a valid notice to the Chairman of the Tribunal and that when the notice was received on 11-9-1952 by the Chairman per registered post, the time limit prescribed in the proviso to S. 97 for giving notice had already elapsed. The Tribunal, therefore, did not permit the applicant to give any evidence in support of his recriminatory petition.

(3) In this petition, challenging the correctness of the decision of the Tribunal, the applicant states that inasmuch as the trial of an election petition commences when it is presented to the proper authority and as the giving of a notice to the Tribunal under S. 97 of the Act is a matter to be done after the commencement of the trial, sub-s. (5) of S. 86 cannot be applied in construing the meaning of the word 'tribunal' used in S. 97; that in relation to S. 97 'tribunal' means the Chairman and all the members of the Tribunal; that when a copy of the election petition was served on the applicant under Section 90, the applicant was also given a notice in writing that the petition would be heard on 13-10-1952 at 11 A.M., in Gwalior in the Court Room of the District Judge, Gwalior, and that he should appear on this date either in person or through his pleader and file his reply to the petition on or before the date of hearing and that in the event of there being a change in the place of the trial the applicant would be able to obtain the necessary information from the Court of District Judge Gwalior; that after the receipt of this notice there was no change in the place of the trial; that on 4-9-1952 Mr. Surajbhan one of the members of the Tribunal alone was in the Court of District Judge in Gwalior and the Chairman and the other members were not to be found in Gwalior; and that in these circumstances the recriminatory notice presented before Mr. Surajbhan on 4-9-1952 should be "considered to have been validly presented to the proper authority". The applicant's grievance is that the Tribunal has acted without jurisdiction in deciding that the notice of recrimination was not given in time to the proper authority and that "in passing the impugned order the Tribunal has failed to exercise jurisdiction vested in it".

(4) In the returns filed on behalf of the non-applicants Lachhiram and Ramsahai, the petition is opposed firstly on the ground that under Art. 329(b) of the Constitution the Election Tribunal has exclusive jurisdiction to determine whether a notice of recrimination has or has not been validly given and that, therefore, the decision of the Tribunal on merits cannot be challenged before this Court under Art. 226 and Art. 227 of the Constitution of India. Secondly it is stated that on merits the decision of the Tribunal is in accordance with law; that under S. 86(5) of the Act the Chairman of Tribunal is deemed to be the 'tribunal' as respects any matter to be done before the commencement of the trial and as the receipt of the notice of recrimination is a matter anterior to a trial which commences in law only at the stage where the examination and determination of a cause is undertaken by a Tribunal, the notice presented by the applicant to Mr. Surajbhan was not a valid notice to the Tribunal; that the applicant was fully aware of the fact that the office of the Chairman of the Tribunal was in Dhar; and that the fact that the applicant was informed that the election petition would be heard in Gwalior was not relevant in determining the place where matters required to be done before the commencement of the trial should be done.

(5) The first question that this case raises, is of some importance. It is whether this Court can enquire into the validity and correctness of the proceedings or orders of the Election Tribunal constituted under the Representation of the People Act, 1951. The question turns upon the construction of Art. 329(b) of the Constitution and S. 105 of the Act. Article 329(b) is:

"Notwithstanding anything in this Constitution, no election to either House of Parliament or to the House or either House of the Legislature of a State shall be called in question except by an election petition presented to such authority and in such manner as may be provided for by or under any law made by the appropriate Legislature."

Section 105 of the Act is as follows:

"Every order of the Tribunal made under this Act shall be final and conclusive."

(6) The meaning and scope of Art. 329(b) has been explained by the various High Courts including this Court, and the Supreme Court in cases where nomination papers of candidates seeking election were rejected by the returning officers. I am not going to refer to all these cases. But I should like to refer to this Court's decision in — 'Shankar Rao v. State of Madhya

Bharat', AIR 1952 Madh B 97 (A) and to the decision of the Supreme Court in — 'Ponnuswami v. Returning Officer, Namakkal', AIR 1952 S C 64 (B). In the first case a Full Bench of this Court held that Art. 329(b) of the Constitution means that notwithstanding anything contained in Arts. 225, 226, 227 and 228 and other Articles of the Constitution, no election can be called in question by invoking the powers of the High Court under these Articles and that the word 'election' in Art. 329(b) means the whole procedure whereby a person is elected to the Parliament or to the State Legislature in accordance with the provisions of the Act and that the acceptance or rejection of a nomination paper forms a part of the election. It was also observed by this Court that Ss. 105 and 170 of the Act did not by themselves in any way affect the jurisdiction of the High Court under Art. 226 or Art. 227 and that the jurisdiction of the High Court to enquire under Arts. 226 and 227 into the validity of any election was taken away not by the Act but by Art. 329 itself.

In 'the case of Ponnuswami (B)' the Supreme Court also held that the word 'election' had been used in Part XV of the Constitution in the wide sense, that is to say, to connote the entire procedure to be gone through to return a candidate to the legislature; that Art. 329(b) ousted the jurisdiction of the Court in regard to electoral matters and was enacted to lay down the only mode in which an election could be challenged and to provide that any matter which has the effect of vitiating an election should be brought up only at the appropriate stage in an appropriate manner before a special Tribunal and should not be brought up at an intermediate stage before any Court. It is thus plain from the meaning put by the Supreme Court on the word 'election' that Art. 329(b) excludes the jurisdiction of the Courts with regard to matters forming a part of the whole procedure whereby a candidate is returned to the legislature.

The learned Advocate-General appearing as amicus curiae suggested that the words "notwithstanding anything in this Constitution" and the words "in such manner as may be provided for by or under any law made by the appropriate legislature" must be read as meaning that the jurisdiction of the High Court is taken away not only with regard to matters forming a part of the whole procedure whereby a candidate is returned but also in regard to the proceedings and orders of the Election Tribunal set up under the Act to try an election petition calling in question an election. As I understood him, he said that as the Constitution created the right of calling in question an election and prescribed a remedy under a statute specially enacted for enforcing that right, that procedure and remedy and no other must be followed; that if, therefore, the special statute, namely, the Representation of the People Act, 1951, provides that every order of the Tribunal made under the Act shall be final and conclusive, then this Court has no power under Art. 226 or Art. 227 to determine whether the order of the Tribunal is valid or correct.

It is quite true that the words "notwithstanding anything in this Constitution" which occur in Art. 329(b) override all other provisions of the Constitution. But it appears to me that the argument of the learned Advocate-General does not give due weight to the words "election" and "by an election petition" which occur in Art. 329(b). The words "in such manner as may be provided for by or under any law made by the appropriate legislature" on which the learned Advocate-General laid considerable stress have to be read with the preceding words "except by an election petition presented to such authority". The effect of Art. 329(b) is that so far as calling in question any election is concerned, it can be done only "by an election petition" by presenting to "such authority" and "in the manner" prescribed by a law of the appropriate legislature. The word 'election' must now be read in the sense indicated by the Supreme Court in the case of Ponnuswami.

It is no doubt true that the Supreme Court explained the meaning of the word 'election' while dealing with the question whether rejection of a nomination paper is a part of election. But there is nothing in the decision of the Supreme Court to justify the view that the word 'election' would include proceedings and orders of an Election Tribunal and that "calling in question an election" could cover calling in question the working of the machinery set up for "calling in question an election". There is, however, a strong probability that very different language would have been used by the Constituent Assembly if "election" as used in Art. 329(b) had been intended to bear what I cannot help calling the artificial meaning for which the learned Advocate-General contends.

The learned Advocate-General drew our attention to the observation of the Supreme Court in the case of Ponnuswami that the words "notwithstanding anything in this Constitution" give to Art. 329(b) "the same wide and binding effect as a statute passed by a sovereign legislature like the English Parliament" and said that inasmuch as the Representation of the People Act is the law contemplated in Art. 329(b), S. 105 of that Act must be taken to have the same binding effect so as to exclude the jurisdiction of this Court to question the validity of proceedings and orders of the Election Tribunal. As I read the observation which is to be found at the end of para 14 of the judgment of the Supreme Court in 'the case of Ponnuswami (B)', I think it refers to the binding effect of the provisions of Art. 329(b) and not to the binding effect of any law contemplated by it. In that observation their Lordships of the Supreme Court did not import that the Representation of the People Act, 1951, had also the same binding effect "as a statute passed by a sovereign legislature like the English Parliament". Even assuming that the Representation of the People Act, 1951, has the binding effect suggested by the learned Advocate-General, I do not think that the provision in S. 105 of the Act that "every order of the Tribunal made under the Act shall be final and conclusive" can be taken as preventing this Court from setting aside a decision of the Tribunal given without or in excess of its jurisdiction.

In this connection I need only refer to what Lord Goddard, C. J., has said with regard to statutes passed by the English Parliament making the decisions of a Court or individual or a statutory authority final and conclusive. In — 'R. v. Northumberland Compensation Appeal Tribunal', (1951) 1 All E R 268 (C) he said at p. 273:

"Many statutes have taken away certiorari in respect of the matters with which those statutes have dealt, but that never debarred the Court from granting certiorari if it was a question of jurisdiction. If an inferior Court had wrongly given itself jurisdiction, certiorari would lie to quash its order, because it had no jurisdiction to make it. The taking away of certiorari by statute no doubt prevented the Court from inquiring into what I may call the merits of the determination, but it did not prevent the Court from inquiring whether or not the inferior Court had any jurisdiction to make the order. Many cases are found in the reports where certiorari had been taken away, the statute providing that the decision of the inferior Court was not to be removed into any Court by writ of certiorari or otherwise, and yet the Courts granted certiorari in respect of those very matters on the ground of jurisdiction."

(6) The proposition that where a statute lays down that orders made or proceedings taken under it shall be final and conclusive, the finality cannot be attached to proceedings and orders coram non iudice also follows from the decisions of the Privy Council in — 'Colonial Bank of Australasia v. Willan', (1874) 5 P C 417 (D) and in — 'Secretary of State v. Mask & Co.', AIR 1940 PC 105 (E). In the former case Sir James Colville in delivering the judgment of the Privy Council pointed out that:

"There are numerous cases in the books which establish that, notwithstanding the privative clause in a statute, the Court of Queen's Bench will grant a writ of certiorari, but some of those authorities establish, and none are inconsistent with, the proposition that in any such case that Court will not quash the order removed, except upon the ground either of a manifest defect of jurisdiction in the Tribunal that made it, or of manifest fraud in the party procuring it."

(7) In 'AIR 1940 PC 105 (E)' the Privy Council observed as follows:

"It is settled law that the exclusion of the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts is not to be readily inferred, but that such exclusion must either be explicitly expressed or clearly implied. It is also well settled that even if jurisdiction is excluded the Civil Courts have jurisdiction to examine into cases where the provisions of the Act have not been applied with or the statutory Tribunal has not acted in conformity with the fundamental principles of judicial procedure."

(8) I am, therefore, inclined to think that while it would not be open to this Court to exercise its powers under Art. 226 or Art. 227 so as to interfere with a decision of the Tribunal merely upon the ground that the decision is erroneous either in respect of facts or in point of law, this Court has the power to examine and correct any decision of the Tribunal on the ground of jurisdiction, fraud or violation of the principles of natural justice. Indeed, the learned Advocate-General thought at first he was disposed to say that the jurisdiction of this Court under Art. 226 or Art. 227 of the Constitution to review a decision of the Tribunal was completely barred, conceded later on that this Court was not prevented from inquiring whether or not the Tribunal had any jurisdiction to make the order challenged.

(9) During the course of their arguments the learned Advocate-General and Mr. Shivdayal learned counsel for the opponent Lachhiram contended that a writ in the nature of certiorari could not be made in respect of an order passed by the Election Tribunal as it was not an inferior Tribunal. Learned Counsel relied especially on the fact that under S. 86 of the Act a Judge of a High Court could be appointed a chairman of the tribunal and on the Privy Council decision reported in — 'Goonesinha v. O. L. de Kretser', AIR 1945 PC 83 (F). There is no force in the contention that the Election Tribunal is not an inferior Tribunal. The Tribunal is a creature of the Representation of the People Act and its jurisdiction is strictly controlled by the Act which brings it into existence. It has to function within the four corners of the Act. It is a tribunal of limited jurisdiction and authority. That being so, it is clearly a tribunal inferior to a Court of general jurisdiction. It may be mentioned that the expression "inferior Court" came into use as a means to distinguish between the Superior Court and other Courts over which the Superior Court exercises a supervisory jurisdiction by writs of mandamus, certiorari or prohibition or other writs but the expression is now used to denote Courts of special or limited authority constituted "on such principles that their proceedings must show jurisdiction". The inferior or superior character of a Court or tribunal is not determined by the position or the status of the persons constituting it. It depends on the powers and jurisdiction conferred on the tribunal or the Court by the statute establishing it. On the question of the subordination of all tribunals of limited jurisdiction to the High Court, there is a significant decision of the Kings Bench Division in the 'King v. Assessment Committee of the Metropolitan Borough of Shoreditch; Ex parte Morgan', (1910) 2 K B 859 (G). Farwell L. J., observed as follows at page 880:

"The existence of the provisional list is a condition precedent to their jurisdiction to hear and determine, and as the claimant is entitled to require them to hear and determine, they cannot refuse to take the steps necessary to give rise to such jurisdiction; if they do, their refusal may be called in question in the High Court. No tribunal of inferior jurisdiction can by its own decision finally decide on the question of the existence or extent of such jurisdiction; such question is always subject to review by the High Court, which does not permit the inferior tribunal either to usurp a jurisdiction which it does not possess whether at all or to the extent claimed, or to refuse to exercise a jurisdiction which it has and ought to exercise. Subjection in this respect to the High Court is a necessary and inseparable incident to all tribunals of limited jurisdiction for the existence of the limit necessitates an authority to determine and enforce it: it is a contradiction in terms to create a tribunal with limited jurisdiction and unlimited power to determine such limit at its own will and pleasure — such a tribunal would be autocratic, not limited — and it is immaterial whether the decision of the inferior tribunal on the question of the existence or non-existence of its own jurisdiction is founded on law or fact; a Court with jurisdiction confined to the city of London cannot extend such jurisdiction by finding as a fact that Piccadilly Circus is in the ward of Chepe."

(10) In our country having regard to the provisions of Arts. 226 and 227 of the Constitution, the High Court must be regarded as a superior Court to whom all tribunals of limited jurisdiction are subordinate. The Privy Council decision reported in 'AIR 1945 PC 83 (F)' is not an authority for the proposition that where a Judge of the High Court is the chairman or a member of the Tribunal then the Tribunal becomes a superior Court to whom another superior Court cannot issue a writ of certiorari. In that case the Privy Council affirmed an order of the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Ceylon refusing to issue a writ of certiorari, to quash an order passed by a Judge of the Supreme Court as the Election Judge on the ground that the order was passed by the Election Judge as a Judge of the Supreme Court and that the cognizance of election petition was under an Order-in-Council an extension of, or addition to, the ordinary jurisdiction of the Supreme Court. The Ceylon case is not in point here.

(11) This brings me to the question whether the Election Tribunal had jurisdiction to hold that the notice of recrimination given by the petitioner was not presented in time to the proper authority and whether by so holding the Tribunal gave itself jurisdiction which it did not possess or deprived itself of jurisdiction which had been entrusted to it by the Act. Learned counsel for the petitioner made no attempt to show how the decision of the Tribunal which he was attacking was without jurisdiction or how by that decision the tribunal assumed a jurisdiction which it did not possess. He, however, urged that the tribunal had divested itself of jurisdiction by a wrong decision. The learned Advocate-General and Mr. Shivdayal who adopted the arguments of the Advocate-General relying on the Supreme Court's decisions in — 'Parry & Co. Ltd., Dare House Madras v. Commercial Employees Association Madras', AIR 1952 S C 179 (H); — 'Veerappa Pillai v. Raman and Raman Ltd.', AIR 1952 S C 192 (I); — 'Ebrahim Aboobakar v. Custodian General of Evacuee Property, New Delhi', AIR 1952 S C 319 (J) contended that the question whether the applicant had or had not presented in time the notice of recrimination to the proper authority was not a matter of jurisdiction of the Tribunal and that, therefore, even if the Tribunal's decision was erroneous it could not be said that it was made without jurisdiction or that by that decision the Tribunal assumed a jurisdiction not given to it or refused to exercise the jurisdiction vested in it.

(12) When one considers the provisions of S. 97 of the Representation of the People Act, it seems plain that the contention put forward on behalf of the applicant is untenable. Under that section the returned candidate or any other party after fulfilling certain conditions is entitled to give evidence to prove that the election of a particular candidate would have been void if he had been the returned candidate and a petition had been presented calling in question his election. The conditions are: that the returned candidate or such other party must give a notice to the Tribunal of his intention to give evidence within fourteen days from the date of publication of the election petition under S. 90; he must also give the security referred to in Ss. 117 and 118; and the notice must be accompanied by the statement and list of particulars required by S. 83 in the case of an election petition and the notice must be signed and verified in like manner. The question whether the notice is to the Tribunal or whether it has been given in proper form and within the time prescribed or whether the security has been furnished are all matters for the decision of the Tribunal. The jurisdiction of the Tribunal to decide these questions is inherent in its very constitution as an Election Tribunal under the Act. It cannot, therefore, be maintained that the decision of the Tribunal on these questions is one without jurisdiction.

Now, it must be remembered that the questions whether the notice is in proper form, or to the proper authority and within the prescribed time are a part of the very issue which the Tribunal has to decide in seeing whether the returned candidate or any other party concerned is entitled to give evidence. They are not what have been called collateral facts which have to be decided first by the Tribunal to enable itself to obtain jurisdiction before it proceeds to decide any main issue or to decide whether it shall or shall not do certain things. Having decided that the party desiring to give evidence has fulfilled the conditions laid down in s. 97 of the Act, the Tribunal is not required to take any further decision. If the party concerned has satisfied those conditions, then the Tribunal in exercise of the jurisdiction conferred on it under s. 90 of the Act records such evidence as may be tendered by that party. If on the other hand the party has failed to observe the preliminaries referred to in s. 97 then he is not entitled to give any evidence. The right of the returned candidate or any other party to give evidence under s. 97 of the Act is no doubt conditioned by certain requirements. But the jurisdiction of the Tribunal in no way depends on the existence of any of the facts stated in s. 97. It may seem rather fine distinction but I think there is a distinction between a jurisdiction which is in fact limited by certain requirements, and a case in which a person having satisfied certain conditions becomes entitled to do or not to do a particular thing. In the latter case the question whether the person has or has not fulfilled certain conditions is a part of the very issue which the Tribunal has to decide when the person claims the right to do a particular thing and the decision of the Tribunal on those questions is not one which goes to its jurisdiction.

In —‘R. v. Income Tax Special Purposes Commissioner’, (1888) 21 Q. B. D. 313 at p. 319 (K), which is the leading case usually cited on this question, Lord Esher M. R. stated the law in this way :

“When an inferior court or tribunal or body, which has to exercise the power of deciding facts, is first established by Act of Parliament, the legislature has to consider what powers it will give that tribunal or body. It may in effect say that, if a certain state of facts exists and is shown to such tribunal or body before it proceeds to do certain things, it shall have jurisdiction to do such things, but not otherwise. There it is not for them conclusively to decide whether that state of facts exists, and, if they exercise the jurisdiction without its existence, what they do may be questioned, and it will be held that they have acted without jurisdiction.

But there is another state of things which may exist. The legislature may entrust the tribunal or body with a jurisdiction, which includes the jurisdiction to determine whether the preliminary state of facts exists as well as the jurisdiction, on finding that it does exist, to proceed further or do something more. When the legislature are establishing such a tribunal or body with limited jurisdiction, they also have to consider, whatever jurisdiction they give them, whether there shall be any appeal from their decision, for otherwise there will be none. In the second of the two cases I have mentioned it is an erroneous application of the formula to say that the tribunal cannot give themselves jurisdiction by wrongly deciding certain facts to exist, because the legislature gave them jurisdiction to determine all the facts, including the existence of the preliminary facts on which the further exercise of their jurisdiction depends; and if they were given jurisdiction so to decide, without any appeal being given, there is no appeal from such exercise of their jurisdiction.”

(13) Again in the Privy Council case —‘(1874) 5 P. C. 417 (D), after observing that absence of jurisdiction may be founded either on the character and constitution of the tribunal or upon the nature of the subject matter of the inquiry, or upon certain proceedings which have been made essential preliminaries to the inquiry, or upon a fact or facts to be adjudicated upon in the course of the inquiry, Sir James Colville proceeded to say :

“Objections founded on the personal incompetency of the judge, or on the nature of the subject-matter, or on the absence of some essential preliminary, must obviously, in most cases, depend upon matters which, whether apparent on the face of the proceedings or brought before the superior Court by affidavit, are extrinsic to the adjudication impeached. But an objection that the judge has erroneously found a fact which, though essential to the validity of his order, he was competent to try, assumes that, having general jurisdiction over the subject-matter, he properly entered upon the inquiry but miscarried in the course of it. The superior Court cannot quash an adjudication upon such an objection without assuming the functions of a Court of Appeal, and the power to retry a question which the judge was competent to decide. Accordingly the authorities of which —‘Reg. v. James Bolton’, (1841) (1 Q. B. 66) (L) and —‘Reg. v. St. Olave's Board of Works’, (1857) 8 El & Bl. 529 (M) may be taken as examples, establish that an adjudication by a judge having jurisdiction over the subject-matter is, if no defects appear on the face of it, to be taken as conclusive of the facts stated therein, and that the Court of Queen's Bench will not on certiorari quash such an adjudication on the ground that any such fact, however essential, has been erroneously found.”

(14) These cases have been applied by the Supreme Court in —‘AIR 1952 S. C. 319 (J)’, and —‘AIR 1952 S. C. 179 (H)’, and also by other High Courts in several cases. The law to be gathered from the Supreme Court's decisions relied upon by the opponents and especially from the English cases referred to above, is that, if a certain state of facts has to exist before an inferior Tribunal has jurisdiction to do certain things, the Tribunal must, to enable itself to obtain jurisdiction, find that those facts exist. The Tribunal cannot give itself jurisdiction by a wrong decision on them and the superior Court may by means of proceedings for certiorari, inquire into the correctness of the decision. The decision as to those facts is collateral because, though the existence of jurisdiction depends thereon, it is not the main question which the Tribunal has to decide. If on the other hand the Tribunal is given jurisdiction to determine certain facts and those facts form a part of the very issue which the Tribunal has to decide and the Act constituting the Tribunal gives it the power to come to a final decision on that matter then the decision of the Tribunal cannot be treated as one going to its jurisdiction and cannot, therefore, be questioned in any Court.

Here I must explain the decision of the Bombay High Court to which I referred during the course of the hearing of the petition. It is the case of —‘Sarafally Mamooji, In the matter of’; —‘34 Bom 659 (N)’. In that case in a Municipal Election petition, the Chief Judge of the Small Causes Court, unseated two of the successful candidates and found cause of objection against the candidate in whose favour were recorded the next highest number of votes. He declined to inquire further into the claims of any other candidates or to declare any other candidate elected, as, on his interpretation of s. 33 (2), Bombay Municipal Act, 1888, he was not enabled to do so. Macleod J., issued a mandamus holding that s. 33 empowered the Chief Judge to fill up any number of vacancies, created by setting aside the election of any number of the returned candidates, from the list of unsuccessful candidates and that the case fell within the general principle referred to in —‘Ex parte Milner (1851) 15 Jur. 1037 (O)’, that where an inferior tribunal improperly refused to enter upon a complaint, a mandamus would lie. The Bombay decision accords with the principles enumerated above. That was a case where by a wrong construction of s. 33, Bombay Municipal Act, the Chief Judge divested himself of the jurisdiction to decide the main question of the claim of other candidates that they were duly elected. The construction of s. 33 was not the main issue which the Chief Judge had to decide.

The case which is very much apposite here is the one to which I have already referred, namely, — ‘(1888) 21 QBD 313 (K)’. In that case a person claimed to be entitled under a statute to a refund of excess income-tax paid on proving certain facts to the satisfaction of the Commissioners for General Purposes. A certificate for refund was issued by the Commissioners but the Commissioners for Special Purposes refused to act upon it and order repayment of the amount saying that as the ‘facts’ necessary for a refund had not been proved, the Commissioners for General Purposes had no jurisdiction to give a certificate for repayment. It was held by the Court of Appeal that the Commissioners for General Purposes had been given jurisdiction to finally determine the requisite facts for a refund and that the Commissioners for Special Purposes could not question the decision of the Commissioners for General Purposes on those facts, even if erroneous as without jurisdiction. I think the present case is clearly one where the Tribunal has jurisdiction to determine finally whether a person desiring to give evidence has or has not satisfied the conditions laid down in S. 97 of the Act and the question of the fulfilment of those conditions is not collateral to any main question which the Tribunal has to decide but is the very issue which the Tribunal has to enquire. It follows, therefore, that even though the applicant may think that the Tribunal arrived at erroneous decision, he would not be entitled to say that the decision of the Tribunal was one given without jurisdiction or that the Tribunal gave itself or deprived itself of jurisdiction by a wrong decision. It seems to me that the formula stated by Lord Esher M. R., in —‘(1888) 21 QBD 313 at p. 319 (K)’, and applied by the Supreme Court in —‘AIR 1952 S. C. 319 (J)’, makes it impossible for us to treat the petitioner’s complaint as going to jurisdiction of the Tribunal and on the rule laid down by the Supreme Court in the cases reported in —‘AIR 1952 S.C. 179 (H)’; —‘AIR 1952 S.C. 192 (I)’ & —‘AIR 1952 S. C. 319 (J)’, that a writ of certiorari cannot be granted to quash the decision of the inferior Court within its jurisdiction on the ground that the decision is wrong, the applicant’s prayer for an order of certiorari for quashing the decision of the tribunal must be refused.

(15) In view of what I have said above it is really unnecessary for me to express an opinion upon the question whether the Tribunal arrived at a right decision. For, even if the Tribunal has wrongly construed certain provisions of the Act and arrived at an erroneous decision, that would not entitle the applicant to say that the decision was given without jurisdiction. But it appears to me extremely difficult to maintain that the decision of the Tribunal is wrong or manifestly unjust or that in giving that decision the Tribunal has acted contrary to the principles of natural justice. The notice which was received by the Chairman on 11-9-1952 being admittedly not within time, the short point is whether the presentation of a notice to a member of the Tribunal at the place of the trial is a valid presentation to the Chairman under s. 97.

The applicant argues that as the trial of an election petition commences when it is presented to the Election Commission or at least when a tribunal is constituted, the word “tribunal” in s. 97 of the Act has not the meaning given to it by s. 86(5); that under s. 97 a notice need only be given to the Tribunal and not to the Chairman; & that if at the time of giving of a notice at the place of the trial only one member is present and the others are not, then the presentation of the notice to the member present would be a valid presentation of the notice for the purposes of s. 97.

In my opinion, this view is not correct. The fact that on presentation of an election petition to the Election Commission, if the petition is not dismissed under s. 85, an Election Tribunal is appointed for the trial of the petition, points with reasonable clarity to the inference that the trial of an election petition does not commence either with its presentation to the Election Commission or with the appointment of a Tribunal. Nor can it be contended that it commences with the publication of an election petition under s. 90. Such a contention would not be in conformity with the natural meaning of the word "trial" which means a judicial examination and determination of issues between the parties, whether they be of law or fact by the Judge. I take this definition from the Oxford English Dictionary. On this definition it is clear that the trial of an election petition commences when after the filing of a reply thereto and of a recriminatory petition, if any, the points in controversy between the parties are settled and their investigation begins. The meaning of the word 'trial' suggested by the learned counsel for the applicant if accepted would render s. 86(5) of the Act wholly nugatory. In my opinion the giving of a notice of recrimination to the Tribunal is an act required to be done before the commencement of the trial. That being so, under ss. 86(5) and 97 a notice of the recrimination to the Tribunal in order to be valid must be given to the Chairman. As a matter of fact in the present case notice was given to the Chairman. Therefore, the question whether the notice was addressed to the proper authority does not arise.

Now though it is provided by s. 81 of the Act that an election petition shall be deemed to have been presented to the Election Commission when it is delivered to the Secretary of the Commission or to such other officer as may be appointed by the Election Commission in that behalf, by the person making the petition or by any person authorised by him in writing or when it is sent by registered post is delivered to the Secretary to the Commission or the officer so appointed, there is no analogous provision in the Act with regard to the presentation of a recriminatory petition. The Act nowhere says that a notice of recrimination shall be deemed to have been presented to the Chairman when it is left at the office of the Tribunal or at the place of the trial or when it is delivered to any member of the Tribunal or to any person authorised by the Chairman in that behalf. It is also not the case of the petitioner that the Chairman could have authorised a member of the Tribunal to receive the notice on his behalf and that in fact he did so authorise Mr. Surajbhan a member of the Tribunal. It was, therefore, incumbent on the applicant to deliver the notice within time to the Chairman of the Tribunal by presenting the notice personally or by sending it by registered post so to reach him within time in the ordinary course of post. The fact that the applicant was informed by a notice that the trial would be held in Gwalior on 13-10-1952 would at the most indicate that the office of the Tribunal would be in Gwalior on 13-10-1952 and that the Chairman and the members of the Tribunal would be in Gwalior on that date. The petitioner was not justified in reading into that notice an intimation to the effect that the office of the Tribunal was located in Gwalior for all time or that the Chairman of the Tribunal would be in Gwalior before 13-10-1952.

By the notifications published in the Gazette of 7-8-1952 page 323 and 21-8-1952 page 366 the applicant was left in no doubt that Mr. Dongre the District Judge of Dhar was the Chairman; that a copy of the election petition which was served on him was issued from

Mr. Dongre's office in Dhar and that Mr. Dongre was discharging his duties as Chairman of the Tribunal from his address in Dhar. It cannot, therefore, be maintained that the petitioner was not made aware of the address of the Chairman of the Tribunal or of the location of the office of the Tribunal and was misled by the Tribunal itself as to the place where the notice of the recrimination had to be served on the Chairman of the Tribunal. The petitioner should have delivered the notice of recrimination to the Chairman of the Tribunal at Dhar. The presentation of the notice to Mr. Surajbhan who was not authorised either by the Act or by the Chairman himself, to receive the notice was not a valid presentation of the notice. In my judgment the Tribunal came to a right decision in holding that the notice of recrimination was not presented within time to the Chairman of the Tribunal.

(16) For the above reasons the conclusion that I come to is that this application must be dismissed, leaving the parties to bear their own costs.

(17) SHINDE C. J. : I agree.
A/K.S. Application dismissed.

A.I.R. 1953 M. B. 204 (Vol. 40, C. N. 78)

(INDORE BENCH)

DIXIT AND MEHTA JJ.

Vishwanath, Applicant v. Kanakmal, Non-Applicant.

Misc. Appln. No. 8 of 1952, D/- 7-2-1953.

Constitution of India, Art. 133 — Final order.

An order appointing a receiver is not a final order within the meaning of Art. 133.

AIR 1950 FC 77; AIR 1933 Pat 293, Rel. on.
(Para 3)

Pandey, for Applicant; Waghmare, for Non-Applicant.

CASES CITED:

- (A) ('50) AIR 1950 FC 77; 1950 SCJ 139 (FC)
- (B) ('49) AIR 1949 FC 1; 1947 FCR 180; 49 Cri LJ 625 (FC)
- (C) ('20) AIR 1920 PC 86; 47 Ind App 124 (PC)
- (D) ('33) AIR 1933 PC 58; 60 Ind App 76 (PC)
- (E) ('33) AIR 1933 Pat 293; 12 Pat 723
- (F) ('50) AIR 1950 Mad 215; 1949-2 Mad LJ 601
- (G) ('50) AIR 1950 FC 140; 1950 SCJ 567 (FC)
- (H) ('36) AIR 1936 All 495; 58 All 949 (FB)
- (I) ('43) AIR 1943 All 1; 204 Ind Cas 210 (FB)

ORDER: This is an application under Art. 133, Constitution of India, for leave to appeal to the Supreme Court from our decision dated 27-11-1951 in Civil Miscellaneous Appeal No. 42 of 1951, upholding an order made by the Additional District Judge, Indore, whereby he appointed a receiver of the mortgaged property in the plaintiff-non-applicant's suit to enforce four mortgages executed by the applicant.

(2) We have heard learned counsel for the parties. In our opinion, this application must be rejected because the order sought to be appealed from is not a final order and the proposed appeal does not involve any substantial question of law. The question as to what is a "final order" for the purposes of S. 109, Civil P. C. and S. 205, Government of India Act, 1935, has been considered in a number of cases. In — 'Mohammad Amin Brothers Ltd. v. Dominion of India', AIR 1950 FC 77 (A), it has been observed that:

"The expression 'final order' in Section 205, Government of India Act, has been used in contradistinction to what is known as 'interlocutory order' and the essential test to distinguish the one from the other has been discussed and formulated in several cases decided by the Judicial Committee. All the relevant authorities bearing on the question have been reviewed by this Court in their recent pronouncement in — 'Kuppuswami Rao v. The King', AIR 1949 FC 1 (B) and the law on the point, so far as the Court is concerned, seems to be well settled. In full agreement with the decisions of the Judicial Committee in — 'Firm Ram Chand Manjimal v. Firm Goverdhan Das Vishandas', AIR 1920 PC 86 (C) and — 'Abdul Rahman v. D. K. Cassim and Sons', AIR 1933 PC 58 (D), and the authorities of English Courts upon which the pronouncements were based, it has been held by this Court that the test for determining the finality of an order is whether the judgment or order finally disposed of the rights of the parties. To quote the language of Sir George Lowndes in — 'AIR 1933 PC 58' (D), "The finality must be a finality in relation to the suit. If after the order, the suit is still a live suit in which the rights of the parties have still to be determined, no appeal lies against it. The fact that the order decides an important and even a vital issue is, by itself, not material. If the decision on an issue puts an end to the suit, the order will undoubtedly be a final one, but if the suit is still left alive and have got to be tried in the ordinary way, no finality could attach to the order."

(3) The expression "final order" as used in Art. 133 has to be construed in the light of these observations. Mr. Pandey learned counsel for the petitioner while accepting the proposition that the true test of finality is whether the order finally disposes of the rights of the parties, argues that in the present case the order appointing a receiver is a final order inasmuch as it has affected the right of the applicant to remain in possession of the property during the pendency of the suit. We are unable to accept this contention. The appointment of a receiver is in the discretion of the Court, and is made whenever it appears to the Court that it would be just and convenient to appoint a receiver. The appointment of a receiver is not intended to affect, and does not in any way decide, the rights of the parties. The object of appointing a receiver in a mortgage suit is merely to protect the security. That being so, it cannot be maintained that an order appointing a receiver or refusing the appointment of a receiver is a final order within the meaning of Art. 133. This view is supported by the case of — 'Rajni Prasad v. Nrisingha Charan', AIR 1933 Pat 293 (E), where it was held that an order refusing the appointment of a receiver was not a final order under S. 109 (a), Civil P. C. This decision of the Patna High Court was followed by the Madras High Court in — 'Rayarappen Nayanar v. Madhavi Amma', AIR 1950 Madras 215 (F). The Madras case was no doubt reversed subsequently by the Supreme Court (see — 'Rayarappen Nayanar v. K. V. V. Madhavi Amma', AIR 1950 FC 140 (G)). But it was reversed on a different ground and not on the ground that an order removing or appointing a receiver affected the rights of the parties and, was, therefore, a final order. Learned Counsel for the applicant sought to distinguish the Madras and Patna cases by saying that those cases dealt with an order refusing the appointment of a receiver. The appointment of a receiver being discretionary, and made by the Court not on a consideration of the rights of the parties to remain in possession of the property during the pendency of the suit but only on the consideration of preserving the property no distinction can be made between an order appointing a receiver or one refusing to appoint a receiver. Indeed, if as the learned counsel for the applicant contends, the appointment of a receiver affects the right of the party already in possession to continue in possession of the property while the suit lasts, it is clear that an order refusing the appointment of a receiver would also affect the right of the party claiming the appointment of a receiver and the dispossession of the other party during the pendency of the suit. It is thus clear that no distinction can be drawn between an order appointing a receiver and an order refusing the appointment of a receiver.

(4) Even if it is taken that in the present case the order appointing a receiver is a final order, the appeal intended to be filed therefrom does not involve any substantial question of law. The contention that O. 41, R. 1, sub-clause (1) has been interpreted differently in — 'Ram Swarup v. Anandi Lal', AIR 1936 All 495 (H) and, therefore, the case involves a substantial question of law may be disposed of by saying that the decision of the Allahabad High Court in — 'AIR 1936 All 495' (H) was doubted in — 'Mt. Tulsha Devi v. Shah Chironjee Lal', AIR 1943 All 1 (FB) (I) and subsequently sub-rule (1) of R. 1, O. 40 was amended in Allahabad so as to make it clear that a party to the suit is not included in the words "any person". Learned counsel for the applicant also raised the objection that the trial Court had no jurisdiction to try the suit and pass an order appointing a receiver. As to this, it is sufficient to say that the point was never raised while proceedings were pending in the Court below or in this Court. As the point was not raised and decided, it cannot be said that the order appointing a receiver rested upon a consideration and decision of that point and that a substantial question of law was involved in the case. Learned counsel for the applicant also advanced the argument that as this Court while maintaining the order of the lower Court appointing a particular person as a receiver, observed that the applicant was not precluded from stating his objections in the lower Court to the appointment of that person as a receiver, the order passed by this Court was not an affirming order. There is no substance in this contention. The result of our decision was to confirm the order of the lower Court as regards the appointment of a receiver and the selection of a particular person by the Court as a receiver. The direction given by us, namely, that if the applicant thought that the person selected should not have been appointed as a receiver or that he should have been asked to give security, the applicant was at liberty to put his objections in the trial Court in no way varied the order passed by the lower Court.

(5) The result is that this application is dismissed with costs.

A/V.S.B.

Application dismissed.

A.I.R. 1953 M. B. 206 (Vol. 40, C. N. 79)
(INDORE BENCH)

KAUL C. J. AND MEHTA J.

Krishnakant Vyas and another, Applicants v. State, Opponent.

Criminal Misc. Case No. 44 of 1951, D/- 30-4-1951.

Constitution of India, Arts. 134(1)(c) and 215 — Contempt of High Court — Nature of proceeding — Principles governing granting of certificate in criminal cases — Certificate refused.

Article 134(1)(c) of the Constitution confers a wide discretion upon the High Courts. Under it an appeal shall lie to the Supreme Court from any judgment, final order or sentence in a criminal proceeding of a High Court if the High Court certifies that the case is a fit one for appeal to the Supreme Court. There is, however, nothing in the Constitution to indicate in what cases or classes of cases a certificate of fitness to appeal may be granted by the High Court.

In the absence of anything in the Constitution to guide the Courts in this matter, the question should be determined on general principles and such inferences as may be drawn as to the nature and scope of the discretion conferred upon the High Courts from the existing criminal law of the country. There is another Article in the Constitution, Art. 136, under which the Supreme Court may in its discretion grant a special leave to appeal from any judgment, decree, determination, sentence or order in any cause or matter, passed or made by any Court or tribunal in India. How the discretion conferred upon the Supreme Court will be exercised in criminal cases was indicated in the recent decision of that Court in — 'Pritam Singh's case', AIR 1950 SC 169. (Principles laid down in AIR 1950 SC 169, indicated).

(Paras 6, 7, 9)

Observations in AIR 1950 SC 169 may well furnish some guidance to the High Courts in granting of certificate applied for under Art. 134(1)(c). In granting a certificate for leave to appeal the High Court must be satisfied that there is reasonable ground for thinking that grave and substantial injustice may have been done by reason of some departure from the principles of natural justice. (Para 11)

The High Court when considering an application for grant of a certificate under Art. 134(1)(c) does not sit in judgment upon its own decision. It has, however, been authorised to grant a certificate of fitness to appeal to the Supreme Court in any case that it might consider appropriate. It would not be proper for any Judge to attempt to define in a few clear cut categories in what cases or classes of cases a certificate of fitness should be granted and thus to restrict the wide generality of the language advisedly used by the framers of the Constitution. Every case should be considered on its own facts and circumstances, but a certificate should not be granted unless there is something exceptional or special in the case calling for a review of the decision of the High Court by the Supreme Court. (Para 12)

The jurisdiction exercised by the High Courts under Art. 215 of the Constitution is criminal jurisdiction. It is true that the High Court exercises as special and summary jurisdiction in cases of contempt of itself. But from the earliest times it was never intended that the exercise of this jurisdiction should be made subject to a review by an appeal and there is a serious doubt whether a certificate of fitness can at all be granted in such a case except possibly under some extraordinary circumstances. High Court would not be justified in applying to petitions for grant of a certificate under Art. 134(1)(c) in cases of conviction for a contempt of itself, a standard of scrutiny different from that by which it judges applications for certificates of fitness in other cases.

(Paras 6, 13, 16)

Liability of an editor and printer when they are not connected with the work of the press at the relevant time when the contempt was published is not a question of general importance, since the law on the subject is well-settled. Similarly when the ground upon which the certificate is sought challenges a finding of fact, it is not a ground for granting certificate.

(Paras 20, 21)

M. B. Rege, for Applicants; Govt. Advocate, for the State.

CASES CITED :

- (A) ('50) AIR 1950 SC 169: 51 Cri LJ 1270
- (B) (1867) 36 LJ PC 51: 16 LT 752
- (C) (1887) 56 LT 615: 12 AC 459
- (D) ('09) 9 Cri LJ 226: 33 Bom 221
- (E) ('53) AIR 1953 Madh B 35: (Cri Misc Case No. 159 of 1950 MB)
- (F) (1852) 14 ER 19: 8 Moo PC 47
- (G) (1845-47) 5 Moo PC (NS) 466
- (H) (1899) 68 LJ PC 137: 1899 AC 549
- (I) (1889) 61 LT 502: 58 LJ Ch 706
- (J) (1896) 12 TLR 291
- (K) (1903) 72 LJ KB 839: (1903) 2 KB 432
- (L) (1906) 75 LJ KB 104: (1906) 1 KB 32
- (M) (1806) 13 Ves 237: 33 ER 283

KAUL C. J.: This is an application made by Krishnakant Vyas and C. M. Shah for a certificate under Art. 134(1) (c) of the Constitution.

(2) By an order of 23-4-1951 the petitioners Krishnakant Vyas and C. M. Shah along with one Shyamsundar Vyas were convicted for contempt of this High Court. Krishnakant Vyas and Shyamsundar Vyas were sentenced to one month's simple imprisonment each and C. M. Shah was ordered to pay a fine of Rs. 100/- or to undergo simple imprisonment for 15 days in default.

(3) The contempt in respect of which they were convicted and sentenced consisted in a story written by Shyamsundar Vyas which cast foul aspersions on the integrity of one of the Judges of this Court in discharge of his judicial functions. The story was published in a Hindi daily newspaper issued from Indore whereof Krishnakant Vyas is the Editor and C. M. Shah the Printer and Publisher. Krishnakant Vyas and C. M. Shah have expressed their intention to appeal to the Supreme Court against our order and made the present application for grant of a certificate that the case is a fit one for appeal to that Court.

(4) The applicants asked for a certificate on the following grounds:

1. That they were advised that this is a fit case for being taken in appeal to the Supreme Court as it involves questions of general importance, viz., the liability of the Editor and Printer when they were not connected with the work of press at the relevant time.

2. That the judgment of this Hon'ble Court assumes (when holding that the petitioners did not express regret after the comment appeared in the Indore Samachar) that the petitioners knew or had reason to think that the story "हातीके दात" had reference to V. M. Mehta J. of the Madhya Bharat High Court.
3. That there is no ground for holding that the petitioners Krishnakant Vyas had knowledge of the comment in the Indore Samachar. The affidavit regarding this was filed at a very late stage and did not form subject of the rule.
- (5) There is also a prayer that Krishnakant Vyas be released on bail.

(6) It is admitted that the jurisdiction exercised by the High Court under Art. 215 of the Constitution is criminal jurisdiction and the matter in which the present application had been made is a criminal matter. Article 134 (1) (c) of the Constitution confers a wide discretion upon the High Courts. Under it an appeal shall lie to the Supreme Court from any judgment, final order or sentence in a criminal proceeding of a High Court if the High Court certifies that the case is a fit one for appeal to the Supreme Court. There is however nothing in the Constitution to indicate in what cases or classes of cases a certificate of fitness to appeal may be granted by the High Court.

(7) Before dealing with the specific grounds raised by the application I shall briefly consider the conditions which must be fulfilled before the High Court will be justified, in granting a certificate under Art. 134(1)(c). In the absence of anything in the Constitution to guide us in this matter the question should be determined on general principles and such inferences as may be drawn as to the nature and scope of the discretion conferred upon the High Courts from the existing criminal law of the country.

(8) In our country all offences must be investigated, inquired into, tried or otherwise dealt with according to the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure (S. 5). The Code contains comprehensive and detailed provisions about appeals in criminal cases. It is clear that except as provided by the Code or any other law for the time being in force the decisions of the High Courts in criminal matters are generally speaking final. This finality was, before the present Constitution came into force, subject to three exceptions:

1. An appeal could be entertained against the decision of the High Court by the Judicial Committee of Privy Council in exercise of the royal prerogative on behalf of the Crown.
2. There was a right of appeal in a limited classes of cases against the decisions of the High Courts of Calcutta, Bombay and Madras under Cl. 41 of the Letters Patent of the said High Courts; and
3. An appeal under S. 411A(4).

(9) For obvious reasons there can be no question of appeal to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. Article 134(1)(c) of the Constitution however gives a right of appeal to the Supreme Court in criminal matters. There is another Article in the Constitution Art. 136 under which the Supreme Court may in its discretion grant a special leave to appeal from any judgment, decree, determination, sentence or order in any cause or matter passed or made by any Court or tribunal in India. How the discretion conferred upon the Supreme Court will be exercised in criminal cases was indicated in the recent decision of that Court in — 'Pritam Singh v. The State', AIR 1950 SC

169 (A). It was observed that in granting special leave in criminal cases though the Supreme Court was not bound to follow the decisions of the Privy Council too rigidly, it was not inclined to depart from the principles laid down by the Judicial Committee which should govern the exercise of discretion of the Court in grant of special leave to appeal in such cases.

(10) These principles stated briefly and in very general terms are that there must be something which in the particular case deprives the accused of the substance of a fair trial and the protection of the Law, which in general tends to divert the due and orderly administration of Law into a new course which may be drawn into an evil precedent in future, — 'Reg v. Bertrand', (1867) 16 L. T. 752 (B) or if by a disregard of a form of legal process or by some failure of principles of natural justice or otherwise substantial and grave injustice has been done: — 'In re Dillet', (1887) 12 A C 459 (C).

(11) It was laid down in 'Pritam Singh's case (A)' that generally speaking Supreme Court will not grant special leave to appeal in criminal cases unless it is shown that exceptional and special circumstances exist, that substantial and grave injustice has been done and the case in question presents features of sufficient gravity to warrant a review of the decision appealed against. It was further observed that the power with which the Supreme Court was invested under Art. 136 should be exercised sparingly and in exceptional cases only. I am of opinion that these observations may well furnish some guidance to the High Courts in grant of certificates applied for under Art. 134 (1)(c). The language of sub-cl. (c) of Art. 134(1) bears a close resemblance to that used in Cl. 41 of the Letters Patent of the High Courts of Calcutta, Bombay and Madras and it may be permissible to refer to decisions given under that clause in this connection. It was held by a Bench of Bombay High Court in — 'In re Bal Gangadhar Tilak', 33 Bom 221 (D) that before granting a certificate for leave to appeal the High Court must be satisfied that there is reasonable ground for thinking that grave and substantial injustice may have been done by reason of some departure from the principles of natural justice.

(12) The High Court when considering an application for grant of a certificate under Art. 134 (1)(c) does not sit in judgment upon its own decision. It has however been authorised to grant a certificate of fitness to appeal to the Supreme Court in any case that it might consider appropriate. As was observed by me in — 'State v. R. B. Rajkumarsingh', AIR 1953 Madh B 35 (E), it would not be proper for any Judge to attempt to define in a few clear cut categories in what cases or classes of cases a certificate of fitness should be granted and thus to restrict the wide generality of the language advisedly used by the framers of the Constitution. Every case should be considered on its own facts and circumstances, but a certificate should not be granted unless there is something exceptional or special in the case calling for a review of the decision of the High Court by the Supreme Court.

(13) It might possibly be urged that cases where a person is convicted and sentenced for contempt of Court are of a peculiar nature, inasmuch as the High Court exercises a special jurisdiction in dealing with these cases and its decisions in such matters are not subject to any appeal or revision in the High Court itself. This is a reason why an application for a certificate of fitness in such a case should not be subjected to the same strict scrutiny as in other cases. It is true that the High Court exercises a special and summary jurisdiction in cases of contempt of itself. But from the earliest times it was intended that the exercise of this jurisdiction should be made subject to review by an appeal and I entertain serious doubt whether a certificate of fitness can at all be granted in such a case except possibly under some extraordinary circumstances. It was observed in the case of — Rainy v. Justices of Sierra Leone, (1852) 3 Moo P C 47 at p. 54 (F):

"It is the opinion not only of the members of the Committee who heard the petition, but also of the other members who usually attend here, to whom the petition has been submitted, and we have had the benefit of their judgment as well as our own, that we cannot interfere with such a subject. In this country every Court of record is the sole and exclusive judge of what amounts to a contempt of Court."

(14) That case was referred to as an authority by the Judicial Committee in the case of — McDermott v. The Justices of British Guiana, (1845-47) 5 Moo P C (N S) 486 (G).

(15) The question of competency of an appeal to the Privy Council in cases of conviction for contempt of Courts was raised in the last mentioned case. Lord Chelmsford who delivered the opinion of the Judicial Committee observed:

"There could be no appeal against an order of a Court of record committing a person for contempt, and that, in order to support the propriety of the leave to appeal, the appellant must show either that the Court was not a Court of Record, or that, if it was a Court of Record, yet that there was something in the order committing the appellant which rendered it improper, and therefore the subject of appeal."

(16) I do not think that the High Court would be justified in applying to petitions for grant of a certificate under Art. 134(1)(c) in cases of conviction for contempt of itself a standard of scrutiny different from that by which it judges applications for certificates of fitness in other cases.

(17) These observations should in my opinion be borne in mind in considering a matter like the one before us. I will now turn to the facts of this case and to the grounds on which a certificate of fitness is applied for.

(18) It was held by me that Shyamsundar Vyas was guilty of scandalising this Court by imputing to one of its Judges dishonesty and corruption in the discharge of his judicial functions and was thus guilty of a gross contempt of Court. This foul aspersion was cast upon a Judge of this Court in a story written by Shyamsundar Vyas which was published in a special issue (Dipawali Anka) of Nai Duniya a newspaper of which the applicant Krishnakant Vyas is the Editor and C. M. Shah the Printer and Publisher. In fairness to Mr. Rege learned counsel for the applicants, it may be said that he frankly conceded that if the present petitioners were technically guilty the story in question did not constitute contempt of Court. The plea put forward by Krishnakant Vyas was that "he was in mourning during the period of the offending article and did not come to Nai Duniya Office and thus he had nothing to do with its publication". In other words that the story was published in the Nai Duniya without the editor's knowledge. It has, however, been held by us that undoubtedly Krishnakant Vyas was aware of the contents of the offending story within a few days of its publication. His case was that according to the information received by him the name of Mehta J. had inadvertently crept into the publication; that this was "a slip of pen" I however came to the conclusion that even after Krishnakant Vyas was aware of the mistake — if it was a mistake indeed — he decided not to correct it but to leave it as it was. In view of this conclusion I hold that the original want of knowledge of Krishnakant Vyas at the time the story was first published lost all significance and that in these circumstances the plea of want of knowledge could be given no weight either as a defence absolving him from the liability for contempt of Court or as a circumstance mitigating the punishment to which he must have made himself liable.

(19) I will now consider the grounds on which a certificate of fitness of the case for an appeal to the Supreme Court is applied for.

(20) The first ground mentioned is that the case involves a question of general importance, viz., the liability of the Editor and Printer when they are not connected with the work of the press at the relevant time. I am clear that there is no substance in this ground. The law on the subject is well settled. The editor is a person who prepares the newspaper for publication. The printer and publisher as the name implies is the person who actually carries on the work of printing and publishing. It was observed so far back as 1899 by Lord Morris in — McLeod v. St. Aubyn, (1899) A C 549 (562) (H):

"A printer and publisher intends to publish and so intending cannot plead as a justification that he did not know the contents."

(21) The same view was taken in — American Exchange in Europe Ltd. v. Gilling, (1889) 58 L J CH 705 (D):

"Neither the printer nor the publisher can escape the liability by alleging that he did not know that the contemptuous words were inserted in his newspaper." (See — Cheshire v. Strauss, (1896) 12 T L R 291 (J); — R. v. Parke, (1903) 2 K B 482 (K); — Rex v. Davies, (1906) 1 K B 32 (L) and — Jones Ex Parte, (1806) 33 E R 283 (M).

(22) These observations apply with equal force to an editor.

(23) The next ground challenges a finding of fact arrived at by this Court on material on record. I am clear that this cannot constitute a good reason for granting of a certificate.

(24) The third ground is also directed to disputing the correctness of the finding of this Court that Krishnakant Vyas in any case, even if we assume that he was originally not aware of the so-called mistake, which according to him had crept into the story became undoubtedly aware of it within a very few days of the publication of the offending story. This, like ground No. 2, cannot form the basis for grant of a certificate of fitness under Art. 134(1)(c).

(25) I am therefore of opinion that we will not be justified in the present case in granting the certificate of fitness applied for.

(26) The application is rejected.

(27) In view of the conclusion at which I have arrived there can be no question of releasing the petitioner Krishnakant Vyas on bail.

(28) I may mention before bringing this order to a close that though none of the grounds mentioned in the application related to the severity of the sentence passed a fair part of Mr. Rege's argument at the hearing was devoted to this subject. I have given my reasons for inflicting the sentence passed in the present case in my judgment of the main case and have nothing to add to what I said there.

(29) MEHTA J.: I agree.

A/R.G.D.

Application rejected.

*A.I.R. 1953 M. B. 209 (Vol. 40, C. N. 80)

(INDORE BENCH).

(FULL BENCH)

SHINDE, C. J., DIXIT
AND MEHTA JJ.

Udaybhan, Appellant v. Firm Shankar Lal Motilal, Respondent.

Second Appeal No. 354 of 1951, D/- 5-9-1952.

(a) Madhya Bharat High Court of Judicature
Act (8 of 1949), S. 27 — M. B. High Court Rules, Ch. 1 Rule 1, (II) — Change in rule — Appeal to be heard by Single Bench — Right of appellant — (Constitution of India, Art. 133)
— (Civil P. C., (1908), S. 109.)

In exercise of the powers vested by S.
27, M. B. High Court of Judicature Act,
1949, on 24-12-1951 the Rules of the M. B.
High Court were altered so as to provide 'inter alia' that an appeal from an appellate decree of a District Court in which the value of the subject-matter in appeal or of the subject-matter in appeal and any cross-objection therein under O. 41, R. 22, Civil P. C., did not exceed Rs. 4000 could be heard and disposed of by a Judge sitting alone.

Held (1) that this new R. 1(II) of Chapter 1 of the Rules of Madhya Bharat High Court governed appeals arising out of cases instituted before 24-12-1951 that is, before the rule came into force. (Para 2)

(2) that on a consideration of the provisions of Art. 133, Constitution of India read with Ss. 109 and 110, Civil P. C., the appellant against whom a suit for recovery of Rs. 2893 had been filed had no right of appeal to the Supreme Court under sub-cl. (a) or sub-cl. (b) of Cl. (1) of Art.
133 and that he would not be entitled to claim that leave to appeal under sub-cl.
(c) must be given to him as a matter of right. That being so, the alteration in the rule about the jurisdiction of the Single Judge and the Division Bench did not affect any substantive right of the appellant to appeal to the Supreme Court. (Para 18)

*(b) Madhya Bharat High Court of Judicature Act (8 of 1949), S. 23 — Powers and jurisdiction.

When a new High Court is created then its powers and jurisdiction must be determined according to its own Constitution, and not the Constitution of the old Court, the pending cases of which have been transferred to the new Court for disposal.
The Indore High Court having ceased to exist on the establishment of the Madhya Bharat High Court in 1948, the Constitution of the Indore High Court and the Rules of that Court cannot be said to have survived. Hence, it is not the Constitution of the Indore High Court, but the Madhya Bharat High Court of Judicature Act, 1949 and the Rules framed by the M. B. High Court under that Act, that must be taken into consideration while considering the question of the powers and jurisdiction of the M. B. High Court, and the practice and procedure of the Court. (1949) Madh-B L. R. 8 (FB), and AIR 1951 SC 253, Rel.
on. (Para 5)

(c) Madhya Bharat High Court of Judicature Act (8 of 1949), S. 27 — Extent of power to make rules.

1953 M B/27 & 28

The power to make rules includes the like power to vary, rescind and amend those rules. It is thus within the power of the M. B. High Court to provide by rules framed under S. 27 whether the jurisdiction in appeals to it under S. 23, M. B.
High Court of Judicature Act, 1949 read with Ss. 96 and 100, Civil P. C., is to be exercised by a single Judge or by a Bench of two or more Judges. Such a rule would be one not affecting the right of appeal but exclusively regulating the procedure of the hearing of the appeal. And, therefore, if under the rules of the Court or under a statutory provision an appeal is to be heard by a particular number of Judges, it is not a vested right of any party. A litigant has no vested right in the procedure as such surrounding the hearing of appeal in the High Court. He has under S. 23, M. B. High Court of Judicature Act read with Ss. 96 and 100, Civil
P. C., a right of appeal to the High Court and not to any particular Bench of the High Court. AIR 1937 All 19; AIR 1928
Cal 640 (FB) and AIR 1950 Nag 177 (FB),
Rel. on; AIR 1929 Mad 381 (SB); AIR
1952 Punj 103 (FB) and AIR 1952 Pat 341
(FB), Ref. (Paras 5, 7, 8)

(d) Constitution of India, Art. 133(1) — Distinction between Cl. (a) or (b) and Cl. (c).
AIR 1952 Punj 103 (FB) and AIR 1952 Pat 341 (FB), Dissented from.

There is a real distinction between an appeal under sub-cl. (a) or (b) of Cl. (1) of Art. 133 and under Sub-cl. (c). An appeal under Sub-cl. (a) or (b) is one as of right, for a party becomes entitled to appeal under either of these sub-clauses
'ex facto' when certain facts and conditions are found to exist after investigation.
There is no such right of appeal under sub-cl. (c). An appeal under sub-cl. (c) of Art.
133(1) depends solely on the volition and discretion of the High Court. It is a misnomer to say that the appellant has a right of appeal under that sub-clause. A person cannot be said to have a right to do anything when he cannot do it except with the permission of some other person or authority. AIR 1950 Nag 177 (FB),
Foll; AIR 1952 Punj 103 (FB) and AIR 1952 Pat 341 (FB), Dissented from.

(Para 9)

(e) Constitution of India, Art. 133(1) — "An appeal shall lie to the Supreme Court — (Civil
P. C., (1908), S. 109).

The expression "an appeal shall lie to the Supreme Court" as used in S. 109, Civil
P. C., or in Art. 133 of the Constitution of India means in the context of those provisions no more than this: that if a person has obtained the requisite certificate, he can go to the Supreme Court in appeal and the Supreme Court shall have jurisdiction to entertain the appeal. A distinction has to be drawn between "the power of appeal to the Supreme Court" and "the authority of the High Court to grant leave to do so."
That expression has no reference at all to the grant or refusal of leave to appeal under those provisions. From the fact a person acquires a right of appeal to the Supreme Court after having obtained a certificate under sub-cl. (c) of cl. (1) of Art.
133 it cannot reasonably be inferred that he is entitled to claim that leave to appeal under this sub-clause must be given to him as a matter of right. AIR 1927 PC 242, Expl.; AIR 1952 Punj 103 (FB), Criticised.

(Para 13)

Newaskar, for Appellant, Waghmare, for Respondent, K. A. Chitale, amicus curiae.

CASES CITED:

- (A) (51) AIR 1951 Madh-B 1: ILR (1952) Madh-B 15
- (B) (1905) 74 LJ PC 77: 1905 AC 369
- (C) (27) AIR 1927 PC 242: 9 Lah 284 (PC)
- (D) (28) AIR 1928 Cal 640: 56 Cal 512 (FB)
- (E) (52) AIR 1952 Punj 103: ILR (1951) Punj 395 (FB)
- (F) (49) 1949 Madh-B LR 8 (FB)
- (G) (51) AIR 1951 SC 253: 1951 SCR 474 (SC)
- (H) (37) AIR 1937 All 19: ILR (1937) All 191
- (I) (50) AIR 1950 Nag 177: ILR 1950 Nag 532 (FB)
- (J) (52) AIR 1952 Pat 341: 31 Pat 446 (FB)
- (K) (50) Second Appeal No. 24 of 1950 MBI (FB)
- (L) (29) AIR 1929 Mad 381: 52 Mad 361 (SB)
- (M) (1864) 10 LT 434: 10 HLC 704
- (N) (01) 28 Ind App 11: 23 All 227 (PC)
- (O) (1901) 70 LJ PC 76: 1901 AC 495
- (P) 35 CLR 69
- (Q) (1880) 49 LJ PC 82: (1880) 5 AC 371
- (R) (1905) 74 LJ PC 155: (1905) AC 601
- (S) (1862) 10 WR 324: 15 Moo PC 181
- (T) (1873) 30 LT 510: LR 5 PC 494
- (U) (1888) 57 LJ PC 104: 13 AC 780

DIXIT, J.: This is a second appeal by the defendant in a suit for the recovery of Rs. 2893-6-0 in respect of certain transaction in silver. The suit was filed by the plaintiff respondent on 3-4-1947 in the Court of Munsiff Indore. The trial Court decreed the plaintiff's claim to the extent of Rs. 1226/6/-. The District Judge of Indore held the defendant's appeal from the decision of the Munsiff as barred by time, and rejected it. Thereupon, the defendant preferred the present second appeal to this Court on 22-11-51. Under the rules of this Court in force at the time of the institution of the appeal, an appeal against a decree passed by a District Judge in the exercise of his appellate jurisdiction and arising out of a suit for money or moveable property of value exceeding Rs. 2000/- or a suit for land or other suit of value exceeding Rs. 1000/- for purposes of jurisdiction had to be heard by a Division Bench. Accordingly, this appeal was first placed before a Division Bench on 27-11-51 when it was directed to put up with the record of the case. On 24-12-1951 the Rules of this Court were altered so as to provide that an appeal from an appellate decree of a District Court in which the value of the subject-matter in appeal or of the subject-matter in appeal and any cross-objection therein under O. 41, R. 22 did not exceed Rs. 4000 could be heard and disposed of by a Judge sitting alone. When the appeal came on for hearing before a single Judge under the new Rules, an objection was taken on behalf of the appellant that the new rule was inapplicable to the hearing of the appeal and a single Judge was not competent to hear and dispose of the appeal. Kaul C. J. before whom the appeal was placed for hearing passed an order on 7-1-1952 directing that the appeal be placed before a Division Bench for the consideration of the question raised as to the jurisdiction of a single Judge to hear and dispose of the appeal. The appeal was then placed before a Division Bench consisting of my Lord the Chief Justice and Mehta J. In view of the considerable importance of the question, likely to affect a number of appeals pending in this Court, the learned Chief Justice and my brother Mehta directed on 22-4-1952 that the appeal be placed before a Full Bench.

(2) No specific question has been referred to the Full Bench for opinion. But I take it that the question for our decision is whether the new Rule 1, (II) of Chap. 1 of the Rules of Madhya Bharat High Court governs appeals arising out of cases instituted before 24-12-1951 that is, before the rule came into force.

(3) Mr. Newaskar the learned counsel appearing on behalf of the appellant maintained that a single Judge had no jurisdiction to hear this appeal. He presented before us his case in two aspects. First of all, it was said that the suit out of which the present appeal arose was filed in the trial Court in 1947 when Indore State was a separate entity; that under the Constitution of the Indore High Court a second appeal from the judgment and decree passed by a Munsiff had to be heard and disposed of by a Bench of two Judges of the Indore High Court; that the right of second appeal to the High Court and of its being heard by a Bench of two Judges was on the basis of the decision of this Court in — 'Gulab Chand v. Kudilal', AIR 1951 Madh B 1 (A) which followed — 'Colonial Sugar Refining Co. v. Irving', (1905) A C 369 (B); — 'Delhi Cloth and General Mills Co. v. Commissioner of Income Tax Delhi', AIR 1927 PC 242 (C) and — 'Sardar Ali v. Doliluddin', AIR 1928 Cal 640 (D) among others, was a vested right of the appellant which accrued to him at the time of the institution of the suit and that this right could not be taken away by a rule of the High Court; nor could the rule be so construed as to destroy this substantive right.

The second way in which the case was submitted before us was that the new rule was a clog on the appellant's right of appeal to the Supreme Court under Art. 133. It was said that if the appeal was heard under the old rule of this Court by a Division Bench, the appellant would be entitled to appeal to the Supreme Court after satisfying the requirements of Art. 133; while on the other hand if it was heard under the new rule by a single Judge, no appeal would lie to the Supreme Court because of the prohibition in Art. 133(4) of an appeal to the Supreme Court from the decree or order of a Judge sitting alone. It was contended that as on the date of the presentation of this appeal, the appellant had a right of appeal to the Supreme Court after having his appeal heard by a Division Bench at the first stage, this right could not be interfered by having the appeal heard first by a single Judge and then asking the party aggrieved by the decision of the single Judge to take the matter in appeal to a Division Bench with the leave of the Court under S. 23, Madhya Bharat High Court Act, 1949. Learned counsel for the appellant strongly relied on a judgment of the Punjab High Court in — 'Gordhan Das Baldeo Das v. G. G. in Council', AIR 1952 Punj 103 (E).

(4) Mr. Waghmare learned counsel for the respondent supports the appellant on the question of the jurisdiction of a single Judge to hear and dispose of this appeal. We have, however, had the advantage of hearing able and elaborate arguments of Mr. Chitale, Advocate-General in support of the opposite view and we are indebted to him for appearing as 'amicus curiae'. The argument of Mr. Chitale, briefly summarised, is that the appellant cannot avail himself of the Constitution and rules of the Indore High Court which have ceased to exist and of which this Court is not a successor Court; that the Madhya Bharat High Court is a new Court and appeals to this Court and the mode of their hearing is governed by its own Constitution, namely, the Madhya Bharat High Court Act, 1949 and the rules of practice and procedure framed by this Court under S. 27 of the Act. In support of this proposition Mr. Chitale relies on a Full Bench decision of this Court in — 'Bharose Lal v. Dwarka Prasad', 1949 Madh B L R 8 (F) and on — 'State of Serai Kella v. Union of India', AIR 1951 S C 253 (G). It is further argued that under S. 27 of the High Court Act this Court has the power to make rules for the exercise of the original and appellate jurisdiction vested in it, by one or more Judges or by Division Courts and also amend them; that a rule laying down the powers of a single Judge or a Division Bench is a rule of practice and procedure as to the internal arrangement within the Court for disposal of cases and that no party has a vested right of being heard by a particular Judge or by a particular number of Judges; and that by the change in the rules the appellant's right of second appeal to the High Court under S. 23 of the High Court Act read with S. 100, Civil P. C. is not affected. Mr. Chitale cites — 'Har Prasad v. Boolchand', AIR 1937 All 19 (H); — 'Radha Kishan v. Shridhar', AIR 1950 Nag 177 (I); — 'AIR 1952 Punj 103 (E)'; and — 'AIR 1928 Cal 640 (D)' to support the contention that a party cannot claim that his case should be heard by so many Judges any more than by such and such Judges.

As to the contention of the appellant that by the change in the rule, his right of appeal to the Supreme Court is affected, the reply of Mr. Chitale is that without entering into any controversy as to whether the appellant, who had no right of appeal to the Privy Council or the Federal Court at the time of the institution of the suit, can appeal to the Supreme Court under Art. 133, and assuming for the purposes of this appeal that he can, the appeal would be under Art. 133(1)(c) at the discretion of this Court, as the amount or value of the subject-matter of the dispute in the Court of first instance and in this appeal, is less than twenty thousand rupees, that as observed in — 'AIR 1950 Nag 177 (I)' a distinction must be drawn between the appeals which satisfy the conditions of valuation prescribed in sub-cl. (a) and (b) of Art. 133(1), which are appeals as of right and an appeal under sub-cl. (c) which being at the discretion of the Court cannot be said to be a right of the litigant. Mr. Chitale has also drawn our attention to a recent Full Bench decision of Patna High Court in — 'Mahendra Raut v. Darsan Raut', AIR 1952 Pat 341 (J) in which the learned Judges while observing that the distinction made in the Nagpur case between appeals which satisfy the condition of valuation and appeals with the leave of the High Court cannot be accepted as a valid distinction, have held that a change in the rule of the Court whereby an appeal is heard by a Single Judge instead of by two Judges cannot be said to affect the right of appeal given under Art. 133 of the Constitution of India read with Ss. 109 and 110, Civil P. C.

(5) Proceeding now to consider the submissions of the learned counsel for the appellant, I do not think that the contention that on the date of the institution of the suit there accrued to the appellant a vested right of having his second appeal to the High Court heard by a Division Bench, is tenable. The contention is founded on the Constitution of the Indore High Court. It is true that in 1947 when the suit was filed, the Indore State was an independent political entity that the appellant had a right of second appeal to the Indore High Court and that S. 6 of the Constitution of the Indore High Court provided that second appeals from the decrees passed by a Munsiff shall be heard and disposed of by a Bench of two Judges of the Indore High Court. It may also be conceded that the provision in the Constitution of Indore High Court for the hearing of a second appeal from a decision of a Munsiff by a Bench of two Judges was a statutory provision which the Indore High Court could not alter by making any rules about the practice and procedure in the High Court; and in fact the Indore High Court had under the Constitution, no power to make rules in respect of matters dealt with by Ss. 5 and 6 of the Constitution of the High Court. But from the fact that there was a statutory provision in the Constitution of the Indore High Court for the hearing of the second appeal by a Bench of two Judges, it does not follow that the hearing of an appeal by a Bench of two Judges was a vested right of the litigant. For, all that S. 6 of the Constitution of Indore High Court did was to determine the procedure to be followed in the hearing of second appeals to the High Court. This section really dealt with a matter of procedure, and as I will presently point out, that if under the rules of the Court or under a statutory provision an appeal is to be heard by a particular number of Judges, then it is not a vested right of any party. If, during the existence of the Indore High Court, its constitution had been amended so as to enable one Judge to exercise the jurisdiction of the High Court in the hearing and the disposal of a second appeal, leaving the right of appeal to the High Court intact as before, it would have been impossible, in my opinion, to contend successfully before that Court that any litigant had a right to a hearing before two Judges.

In fact, it is not the Constitution of the Indore High Court, but the Madhya Bharat High Court Act, 1949 and the Rules framed by this Court under that Act, that must be taken into consideration while considering the question of the powers and jurisdiction of this Court, and the practice and procedure of the Court. The Indore High Court having ceased to exist on the establishment of the Madhya Bharat High Court in 1948, the Constitution of the Indore High Court and the Rules of that Court cannot be said to have survived. As has been held by a Full Bench of this Court in '1949 Madh B L R 8 (F)', the Madhya Bharat High Court is not a successor Court of all the High Courts of the Covenantee States; nor has it only those powers which the defunct High Courts exercised. I observed in that case that Courts are established by the Sovereign Authority by a Statute or Letters Patent or Charter; and sometimes they also subsist by prescription on the implication that at one time there must have been a grant from the Sovereign Authority with regard to the establishment of the Court, which has now been lost. I pointed out that the power and jurisdiction of a new Court must be determined with reference to the Statute or Letters Patent alone under which it is established and that the provision in S. 35(a) of the Madhya Bharat High Court Ordinance (No. II of 1948) that all cases pending in the High Court of any of the Covenantee States, shall stand removed to the Madhya Bharat High Court, could not be read as a provision vesting the Madhya Bharat High Court with all the powers and jurisdiction of the various High Courts of the Covenantee States. This view now finds support in the decision of the Supreme Court in 'AIR 1951 SC 253 (G)'. In that case the Supreme Court has clearly laid down that when a new Court is created then its powers and jurisdiction must be determined according to its own Constitution, and not the Constitution of the old Court, the pending cases of which have been transferred to the new Court for disposal.

(6) Learned counsel for the appellant referred us to a Full Bench decision of this Court in —

'Rajkumar Mills Ltd. v. Pratapsingh and the Hukam Chand Mills Ltd.' (M B I) — Second Appeal No. 24 of 1950 (K) and said that this decision in effect holds that if a party has vis-a-vis the Indore High Court a vested right, that right would be available to the party in this Court also. In my view, the decision in the case of Rajkumar Mills (K) is not in point here. In that case, the question was whether an appeal from a decision of a Division Bench given after the incorporation of S. 25 in the High Court of Judicature Act was competent. It appears from the judgment of the Full Bench that Mr. Chitale who appeared on behalf of the appellant in that case relying on 'AIR 1951 SC 253 (G)' sought to argue that the principle of the right of appeal being a vested right applied only when an appeal lay to the same Court and that if a new Court was created and a right of appeal was for the first time granted to that Court or within the Court from a decision of a Division Bench to a Full Bench, then that principle did not apply. The learned Judges constituting the Full Bench while observing that the Supreme Court decision reported in 'AIR 1951 SC 253 (G)' had no bearing on the case before them, and that a Court exercised only the powers which it possessed, held that inasmuch as the appellant in that case had at the time of the institution of the suit no right of appeal from the decision of a Division Bench of the High Court he could not take advantage of the right of appeal subsequently conferred under S. 25 of the High Court Act. The Full Bench decision in the 'Rajkumar Mills case (K)' is not an authority for the contention that in determining the powers and jurisdiction of this Court, the Constitution of the Indore High Court or of any other High Court of a Covenanted State ought to be taken into consideration. On the other hand that decision also recognises the fact that the powers and jurisdiction of this Court must be regulated by the Madhya Bharat High Court Act, 1949. The point that was taken by the counsel for the appellant in that appeal does not arise in the present case because here the appellant's right of second appeal to the High Court is unaffected and as I have said above he cannot claim that the hearing of an appeal by a Bench of two Judges is a vested right. The question, therefore, whether the principle of the right of appeal being a vested right only applies when an appeal lies to the same Court, does not arise for consideration here.

(7) The question, which then arises, is of the power of this Court to make rules regulating its own practice and procedure. Section 27 of the High Court Act, 1949 empowers this Court by its own rules to provide "for the exercise by a single Judge or by Divisional Benches consisting two or more of its Judges, of the original and appellate jurisdiction vested in it in such manner as may appear to it to be convenient for the due administration of justice."

It cannot be disputed that the power to make rules includes the like power to vary, rescind and amend those rules. This power of the Court to make rules and vary or amend them is preserved by Art. 225 of the Constitution of India which 'inter alia' says that the jurisdiction of any existing High Court and the respective powers of the Judges thereof in relation to the administration of justice in the Court including any power to make rules of the Court and to regulate the sittings of the Court and of members thereof sitting alone or in Division Courts, shall be the same as immediately before the commencement of the Constitution. It is thus within the power of this Court to provide by rules whether the jurisdiction in appeals to it under S. 23 of the High Court Act read with Ss. 96 and 100, Civil P. C. is to be exercised by a single Judge or by a Bench of two or more Judges. Such a rule would be one not affecting the right of appeal but exclusively regulating the procedure of the hearing of the appeal. If, therefore, in 1948 it was provided by the Rules of this Court that a second appeal arising out of a suit for money exceeding Rs. 2000/- in valuation would be heard by a Division Bench and if the rule has been now altered so as to enable a single Judge to hear and dispose of such appeals, it cannot be maintained that by the change a vested right of a party is affected. For a litigant has no vested right in the procedure as such surrounding the hearing of appeals in this Court. He has under S. 23 of the High Court Act read with Ss. 96 and 100, Civil P. C. a right of appeal to the High Court and not to any particular Bench of this Court. The principle that under such circumstances a party has no vested right to have his appeal to the High Court heard by a particular number of Judges is found asserted in a number of cases. The case of — 'AIR 1937 All 19 (H)', raised very much the same point as the one under consideration here. Sulaiman C. J. and Allsop J. observed as follows:

"The question referred to this Bench is whether the appellant can claim as of right that this appeal should be heard by a Bench of two Judges of this Court. The valuation of this appeal is Rs. 1200/- and at the time when it was filed it was cognizable by two Judges under the Rules made by this Court. Recently the pecuniary jurisdiction of a Single Judge has been raised upto Rs. 2000/- and the appeal is now cognizable by a Single Judge. The learned counsel for both the parties urged before us that there was a substantive right vested in the appellant to have the appeal heard by a Bench of two Judges only and not by a Single Judge. No doubt it is well established that the right of appeal is a substantive right and any rule taking away the right of appeal cannot have a retrospective effect so as to destroy that right. But under S. 100, Civil P. C. the appellant had a right of appeal to the High Court from the decree passed in appeal by the Subordinate Judge on the grounds mentioned therein. The right was to appeal to the High Court and not to any particular Bench of this Court. Under S. 108 (1), Government of India Act, this Court has made its own rules providing for the exercise of its appellate jurisdiction by one or more Judges or by Division Court constituted of two or more Judges. This rule is exclusively for regulating the procedure in this Court as regards the Constitution of Benches. We are unable to hold that the appellant has any vested right in such a Constitution. If by an amendment of the rules the Constitution of the Benches is altered the appeal still lies to the High Court and the appellant cannot claim that the appeal must be heard by a Bench as constituted before the rule was amended."

To the same effect is the case of — 'AIR 1928 Cal 640 (D)', where a Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court stated that:

"Now, there is a certain paradox in regarding the right of appeal within the High Court from the decision of a Single Judge as a right 'vested' in the litigant at the date of the suit, since it is in no way certain that the case will ever be decided by a Single Judge. Again as the right of second appeal is the right given by S. 100, Civil P. C. to appeal "to the High Court" it does not seem unreasonable that a litigant should take the internal arrangements, of the High Court as he finds them when he gets there."

Following these two cases Hidayatullah J. observed in — 'AIR 1950 Nag 177 (I)'

"A party cannot be heard to say that the case should be heard by so many Judges any more than by such and such Judges. No litigant has a vested right in procedure and must take the rules in force as he finds them. In other words, the rules prescribing the number of Judges is really a matter of procedure and all changes in the procedure of the Court made even during the pendency of an action must be taken to apply to that action unless such changes and alterations touch a substantive right."

A similar view has been taken in — 'In re. Vasudevasamiar', AIR 1929 Mad 381 (L); — 'AIR 1952 Punj 103 (E)' and — 'AIR 1952 Pat 341 (J)'.

(8) It is thus clear that the appellant cannot claim that he had, whether at the time of the institution of the suit or at the presentation of the present appeal to this Court, a vested right of having his appeal heard by a Division Bench. If the matter stopped there, of course, it would be obvious that an alteration in the rule of the Court about the jurisdiction of a single Judge and Division Bench to hear and dispose of appeal could be made without affecting any vested right of any party. Learned counsel for the appellant, however, points out that the matter does not rest there, but the change effected on 24-12-1951 in the rules of the Court has interfered with the appellant's right of appeal to the Supreme Court under Art. 133 of the Constitution read with Ss. 109 and 110, Civil P. C., which is a vested right; and therefore, the new rule cannot be applied to the hearing of this appeal.

(9) It cannot be gainsaid that if the appellant has a right of appeal to the Supreme Court under Art. 133 and if that right is in any way interfered with by a change in the rule of this Court about the jurisdiction of a single Judge and a Division Bench, then the rule though in form one of procedure would really be of a character affecting the substantive right of appeal. The normal presumption that a statute is not intended to interfere with vested rights must then be applied to the construction of the rule and it must be held that the new rule which is not retrospective by express words or necessary intent and which came into force on 24-12-51 has no applicability to this appeal as also to other like appeals, pending in this Court on the said date. If any authority in support of this construction of the rule were necessary, I think it is to be found in a decision of our Court in — 'AIR 1951 Madh-B 1 (A)', and in the cases relied therein. I will assume for the purposes of my judgment that the appellant who had at the date of the institution of the suit in 1947 no right of appeal to the Privy Council or the Federal Court can appeal to the Supreme Court under Art. 133, though I do not wish to be considered as expressing an opinion on the point. But the crucial question for consideration is whether he can as of right appeal to the Supreme Court. The answer, in my view, must be in the negative. As the amount of the subject-matter of the dispute in the Court of first instance was and is in this appeal less than twenty thousand rupees, it being respectively Rs. 2893-8-0 and Rs. 1226-8-0, the appeal to the Supreme Court would clearly not be under sub-cl. (a) or (b) of Cl. (1) of Art. 133. The appeal would be one under sub-cl. (c) of Cl. (1) on the certificate of this Court that the case is a fit one for appeal to the Supreme Court. Now there is a real distinction between an appeal under sub-cl. (a) or (b) of Cl. (1) of Art. 133 and under sub-cl. (c). It will be observed that whereas under sub-cl. (a) or (b) the appeal to the Supreme Court is dependant on the establishment of the appealable amount or value and also on there being a substantial question of law where the decree to be appealed from is one of affirmance, under sub-cl. (c) the appeal is solely dependant on the discretion of the High Court. An appeal under sub-cl. (a) or (b) is one as of right, for a party becomes entitled to appeal under either of these sub-clauses 'ex facto' when certain facts and conditions are found to exist after investigation. There is no such right of appeal under sub-cl. (c). An appeal under this sub-clause is quite independent of the existence of any fact or conditions and lies only at the discretion of the High Court. It is true that in all these cases the High Court issues a certificate of appeal. But while a certificate for an appeal under sub-cl. (a) or (b) declares a determination of the existence of certain conditions on which the right of a litigant to appeal arises and on which the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court to entertain the appeal rests, a certificate for an appeal under sub-cl. (c) merely embodies the will of the High Court itself, which is sufficient to give jurisdiction to the Supreme Court to entertain the appeal, that the question involved in the case is one which by reason of its general or public importance or otherwise ought to be submitted to the Supreme Court for determination. If, therefore, an appeal under sub-cl. (c) of Art. 133 (1) depends solely on the volition and discretion of this Court, it is a misnomer to say that the appellant has a right of appeal under that sub-clause. A person cannot be said to have a right to do anything when he cannot do it except with the permission of some other person or authority.

(10) The distinction between appeals under sub-cl. (a) and (b) on one hand and appeals under sub-cl. (c) on the other has been forcefully brought out in the Full Bench decision of the Nagpur High Court in — 'AIR 1950 Nag 177 (I)'. In this case the nature of appeals under S. 109 read with S. 110, Civil P. C. was considered and it was held that while under cl. (a) and (b) of S. 109 a substantive right is involved the same cannot be said of appeals under cl. (c) of that section. Hidayatullah J., with whom Bose C. J. and Kaushalendra Rao J. agreed, after considering the effect of the cases of — '(1905) AC 369 (B)'; — 'Attorney General v. H. J. Sillam', (1864) 10 HLC 704 (M), and — 'Banarasi Prasad v. Kashi Kishen Narain', 23 All 227 (PC) (N), said that the only appeal which cannot be taken away except by the clearest piece of legislation is an appeal which vests in a party as of right; that an appeal is merely a limitation of a Court's jurisdiction to pronounce a final decision in matters litigated; that where the decision is appealable as of right the limitation is imposed 'ab extra' but if the limitation arises from the volition of the Court itself, it having the power to grant leave to appeal exercising its own discretion, then the appeal is not one as of right and it is wrong to think that a discretion conceded to a Court is a right of the litigant.

(11) Learned counsel for the appellant has placed reliance on — 'AIR 1952 Punj 103 (E)', to support the contention that the distinction made by Hidayatullah J. is not a valid distinction. The Punjab decision, no doubt, supports the appellant. In the Punjab case which is also a Full Bench case, Bhandari J. said:

"Section 109 draws no distinction whatsoever between appeals which can be preferred under any of three clauses of the said section for it provides that "an appeal shall lie" to the Supreme Court, (a) from any decree or final order passed on appeal by a High Court or by any other Court of final appellate jurisdiction, (b) from any decree or final order passed by a High Court in the exercise of original civil jurisdiction; and (c) from any decree or order, when the case as hereinafter provided, is certified to be a fit one for appeal to His Majesty in Council."

"Leave to appeal to the Supreme Court can be granted either when the case fulfils the requirements of S. 110 or when it is otherwise a fit case for appeal to the Supreme Court. In either case the petitioner has to apply for a certificate either that the case fulfils the requirements of S. 110 and is, therefore, a fit case for appeal to the Supreme Court or that for other reasons it is a fit case for appeal to the Supreme Court. Ordinarily it is not difficult to satisfy the Court that the case fulfils the requirements of S. 110 as far as the value of the subject-matter is concerned. It is more difficult to satisfy the Court that the case involves the decision of a substantial question of law. It is still more difficult to satisfy the Court that even though the matter in controversy is not measurable by money the case is a fit one for appeal to the Supreme Court. But the fact that it is more difficult to obtain a certificate in one case than in another, does not, in my opinion, alter the fact that a person who procures the certificate under cl. (c) has as much to prefer an appeal to the Supreme Court as the person who procures a certificate under either of the other two clauses. The only construction that may reasonably be placed on the words "an appeal shall lie to the Supreme Court" is that a person who satisfies any one or more of the conditions specified in Ss. 109 and 110, Civil P. C., is entitled to claim that leave to appeal must be given to him as a matter of right. If for example, he satisfies the Court that his case fulfils the requirements of S. 110 or that the case is a fit one for appeal to the Supreme Court, the Court has no discretion to refuse leave to appeal and must grant it as a matter of course."

Soni J. agreed with Bhandari J. But Kapur J. who was the third member of the Full Bench expressed some doubt as to the question whether an appeal under S. 109 (c) was one as of right. The Patna High Court also in — 'AIR 1952 Pat 341 (J)', agreed on this point with the view taken by the Punjab High Court. In the Patna case Das J. has adopted the reasons given by Bhandari J. for holding that no distinction can be drawn whatsoever between appeals which can be preferred under any of the three clauses of S. 109 read with S. 110, Civil P. C. With very great respect to the learned Judges of the Punjab and Patna High Courts, I think the view taken by the Nagpur High Court is correct.

(12) As I have already said the provision that leave to an appeal to the Supreme Court has to be obtained in all appeals under Art. 133 does not indicate that there is no distinction between appeals under sub-cl. (a) and (b) and sub-cl. (c). The distinction arises not because of the comparative ease or difficulty with which the requirements of sub-cl. (a), (b) or (c) can be satisfied for obtaining the leave. It arises because whereas under sub-cl. (a) or (b) of Art. 133 (1) on proof of the existence of the prescribed monetary value and of a substantial question of law where the decree ought to be appealed from is one of affirmance, a person becomes entitled to appeal as a matter of law, the appeal under sub-cl. (c) is not dependent on the existence or non-existence of any conditions, but on the discretion of the Court.

It is true the Court has to exercise its discretion judicially. But the manner in which the discretion is to be exercised cannot convert the discretion vested in the Court into a right of a party so as to compel the Court to exercise the discretion in his favour on his showing certain conditions.

(13) Considerable stress has been laid in the Punjab decision on the words "an appeal shall lie to the Supreme Court" which occur in S. 109, Civil P. C. and it has been observed that the only construction that may reasonably be placed on these words is that a person who satisfies any one or more of the conditions specified in Ss. 109 and 110, Civil P. C. is entitled to claim that leave must be given to him as a matter of right. I must confess, I am unable to see how the words referred to above bear the construction put on them by the learned Judges of the Punjab High Court. In my opinion, the expression "an appeal shall lie to the Supreme Court" as used in S. 109, Civil P. C. or in Art. 133 of the Constitution of India means in the context of those provisions no more than this: that if a person has obtained the requisite certificate, he can go to the Supreme Court in appeal and the Supreme Court shall have jurisdiction to entertain the appeal. A distinction has to be drawn between "the power of appeal to the Supreme Court" and "the authority of the High Court to grant leave to do so". A certificate from the High Court being necessary in all cases in determining whether an appeal under sub-clause (a), (b) or (c) of Cl. (1) of Art. 133 or under any of the clauses of S. 109 read with S. 110, Civil P. C., is an appeal as of right, the point to be considered is not whether the litigant can as a matter of right go to the Supreme Court after having obtained the certificate; but it is whether he can claim that under any of those clauses leave to appeal must be given to him as a matter of right. The expression "an appeal shall lie to the Supreme Court" as used in Art. 133 or S. 109, Civil P. C., has no reference at all to the grant or refusal of leave to appeal under those provisions. I do not think that from the fact a person acquires a right of appeal to the Supreme Court after having obtained a certificate under sub-clause (c) of Cl. (1) of Art. 133, it can reasonably be inferred that he is entitled to claim that leave to appeal under this sub-clause must be given to him as a matter of right. If as I have already shown, he is not so entitled, then clearly the appeal under sub-cl. (c) of Art. 133 (1) is not an appeal as of right.

(14) A reference has also been made in — 'AIR 1952 Punj 103 (E)', to a Privy Council case reported in — 'AIR 1927 PC 242 (C)', and it has been said that in this case the Privy Council regarded the appeal provided by sub-cl. (2) of S. 66-A, Income Tax Act, 1922 from any judgment of the High Court delivered on reference made under S. 65 of the Act to it, if the High Court certifies the case to be a fit one for appeal to the Privy Council, as "a statutory right of appeal". Here again, if the distinction between "the power of an appeal to the Privy Council" & "the authority of the High Court to grant leave to do so" is borne in mind, it becomes clear that the statutory right of appeal referred to by the Privy Council is the one which the litigant acquires after having obtained the leave to appeal. The precise question which is under our consideration did not at all arise in the Privy Council case. The question that was considered by their Lordships of the Privy Council was whether the reference to the Civil P. C. in sub-s. (3) of S. 66-A, Income-tax Act was made in terms sufficiently comprehensive to include within the class of appealable cases all that are defined in the provisions of the Code relating to appeals to the Privy Council. Their Lordships held that the words of qualification "so far as may be" in sub-s. (3) are apt to confine the statutory right of appeal to the cases described in sub-s. (2). It is thus clear that the question whether an appeal under cl. (a), (b) or (c) of S. 109 read with S. 110 of the Code is an appeal as of right or one dependent on the discretion of the High Court was not for decision before their Lordships. The Privy Council case cannot, therefore, be taken as an authority to support the proposition that a litigant is entitled to claim leave to appeal under cl. (c) of S. 109 as a matter of right and that, therefore, the appeal provided for by this sub-clause is an appeal as of right. The Privy Council case must be considered in the light of the facts of that case and it would not be correct to extract from it a proposition on a point which was not presented to their Lordships for decision. After all a case is only an authority for what it decides. See — 'Quinn v. Leatham', (1901) AC 495 (O).

(15) In this connection it may be noted that the distinction drawn by Hidayatullah J., in — 'AIR 1951 Nag 177 (I), between appeals to the Privy Council as of grace, as of right and at the discretion of the High Court is supported by a clear authority of the High Court of Australia in the — 'Commonwealth and another v. Mimerick Steamship Co. Ltd.', 35 CLR 69 (P), which recognizes the distinction. In the — 'Australian case', the question for determination was whether S. 39 (2) (a) of the Judiciary Act, 1903-1920 had the effect of excluding an appeal as of right to the Privy Council from a decision of the Supreme Court of New South Wales exercising Federal jurisdiction, and of giving to the High Court jurisdiction to entertain an appeal from such a decision. While considering this question Starke J., observed as follows:

"It is essential in the first place, to determine whether this Court can entertain the appeals made to it — whether they are competent. This question depends upon the nature of the authority and jurisdiction conferred upon the Supreme Court of New South Wales. "The king in virtue of his prerogative has", as Bentwich says (Privy Council Practice, p. 36) "authority to review the decisions of all Colonial Courts and all Courts on which British jurisdiction has been conferred, whether the proceeding be of a civil or criminal character, unless His Majesty has parted with such authority". In such cases leave to appeal is sought as an act of grace. But, in addition His Majesty has issued, "either by virtue of the royal prerogative or in pursuance of enabling statutes". Orders-in-council granting an appeal as of right in certain cases, and at discretion in other cases. And authority has been conferred upon the Supreme Court of the British possessions to give leave to appeal in accordance with the terms of the grant. Again, some of the self-governing possessions have, in virtue of other Constitutional powers granted rights of appeal to His Majesty in Council and given jurisdiction and power to their own Courts to give the necessary leave. An instance may be found in the Supreme Court Act 1915 of Victoria, S. 232; and see — 'Goldring v. La. banque d' Hochelaga', (1880) 5 AC 371 (Q); — 'E. W. Gillet and Co. v. Lumsden', (1905) AC 601 (R). The appeal in all these cases is by right of grant and the jurisdiction and power of the local Courts is limited by the grant. Even if leave to appeal has been given by the local Courts, still that "does not make the thing right if it ought not to have been done" — 'Macfarlane v. Laclaire', (1862) 15 Moo PC 181 (S); — 'Sauvageau v. Gauthier', (1873) LR 5 PC 494 (T); — 'Allan v. Pratt', (1883) 13 AC 780 (U); — 'Goldring v. La Banque d' Hochelaga'; — 'E. W. Gillet and Co. v. Lumsden', (Q)."

To the same effect are the observations of Isaacs and Rich JJ.

(16) Before I conclude, I must consider the Full Bench decision of the Patna High Court in — 'AIR 1952 Pat 341 (J). This decision while agreeing with the view taken by the Nagpur and Punjab High Courts that a rule laying down the powers of a Single Judge is a rule of practice and procedure as to the internal arrangement within the Court for disposal of cases, does not accept the distinction made by Hidayatullah J., between appeals which fall under cls. (a) and (b) of S. 109 and appeals which come under cl. (c) of S. 109 and dissents from both the Nagpur and Punjab High Courts on the point of the effect of a change in a rule with regard to the powers of a Single Judge or Division Bench on the right of appeal to the Supreme Court. It holds that a change in such a rule whereby an appeal instead of being heard by a Division Bench is heard by a Single Judge does not at all affect the right of appeal given under Art. 133 of the Constitution of India read with Ss. 109 and 110, Civil P. C. The material observations are in para 19 of the judgment. In this para Das J. has observed:

"Unless it is predicated that a party appealing to the High Court under S. 100, Civil P. C. has a vested right to be heard by two Judges, a change in the rules relating to the powers of a Single Judge does not take away or affect the right of appeal given to the party by the Statute. The nature of the right given by the Statute has to be kept in mind. The right is to ask for a certificate that the appeal fulfils the requirements of S. 109 or S. 110, Civil P. C., but the right is only given in such cases as are heard in the High Court by two or more Judges: there is no such right in a case which is heard by a Single Judge, there being a different right of appeal with regard to Single Judge decisions under Cl. 10, Letters Patent. If it is conceded that no party has a vested right to be heard by two or more Judges in the High Court, it follows as a necessary corollary that a change of rules with regard to the powers of a single Judge does not affect the right of appeal given by the Statute. That right still remains the same as before. All that happens is that the Statutory prohibition under S. 111, Civil P. C., now cl. (3) of Art. 133 of the Constitution, comes into operation."

(17) With very great respect to the learned Judge, I do not find myself in agreement with this view. To me, it seems that when no appeal lies to the Supreme Court from the decision of one Judge of a High Court and when a litigant is entitled to claim that leave to appeal from decision of a Division Bench must be given to him as a matter of right under sub-cl. (a) or (b) of Art. 133, it is difficult to say that this right of appeal to the Supreme Court is not in any way interfered with by the change in the rule of the Court whereby an appeal is heard by a Single Judge instead of by two Judges. No doubt a person can with the leave of the High Court appeal from the decision of the single Bench to a Division Bench of the Court in Part A States under the Letters Patent of the High Court and here under S. 23, Madhya Bharat High Court Act and then he can appeal to the Supreme Court from the decision of the Division Bench. But if his appeal could formerly be heard straightway by a Division Bench, then to tell him that under the new procedure also he has a right of taking an appeal to the Division Bench from a decision of a Single Judge and then of appealing to the Supreme Court, is clearly to clog with a condition the right of appeal to the Supreme Court which the party had before the alteration in the rule. A rule of the High Court providing for the exercise of its appellate jurisdiction by one or more Judges is certainly a rule of procedure. But from this it does not follow as a necessary corollary that a change in the rule cannot in any way affect a substantive right of a litigant. A procedure may be of such a character as to affect a substantive right by a change in it. It may then become necessary to keep the procedure intact to preserve the substantive right. In these circumstances to say that an appeal must be heard by a Division Bench as under the old rule in order to preserve a right of appeal to the Supreme Court, is not to assert first the premise that a party has a vested right to be heard by two Judges and then from the premise come to the conclusion that the right of appeal is a substantive right. It is rather the other way. The right of appeal is a substantive right quite independent of any procedure surrounding it and the real question that one has to consider is not whether in abstract the rule of a Court providing for the hearing of the appeal by one or two Judges is a rule of procedure in which no party has a vested right; it is whether a change in it affects a substantive right of appeal to the Supreme Court.

(18) On a careful consideration of the provisions of Art. 133 read with Ss. 109 and 110, Civil P. C., I am disposed to think that the appellant has no right of appeal to the Supreme Court under sub-cl. (a) or (b) of Cl. (1) of Art. 133 and that he would not be entitled to claim that leave to appeal under sub-cl. (c) must be given to him as a matter of right. That being so, the alteration in the rule of this Court about the jurisdiction of the Single Judge and the Division Bench does not affect any substantive right of the appellant to appeal to the Supreme Court. The new rule must, therefore, govern the hearing of this appeal as also of all appeals arising out of cases instituted before the rule came into force. This conclusion could not of course be applied to appeals satisfying the requirements of Art. 133 (1), (a) or (b) as regards amount or value, if the rule had been so altered as to provide for the hearing of such appeals by a single Judge instead of Division Bench. As it is such appeals are today heard, as heretofore, by a Division Bench.

(19) SHINDE C. J.: I agree.

(20) MEHTA J.: I concur and have nothing to add.

A/V.S.B.

Decided accordingly.

A.I.R. 1953 M. B. 216 (Vol. 40, C. N. 81)

(GWALIOR BENCH)

DIXIT AND CHATURVEDI JJ.

The State v. Narain Singh and others, Respondents.

Criminal Appeal No. 69 of 1951, D/- 27-8-52.

Penal Code (1860), S. 511 — Attempt to export without permit — Essential Supplies (Temporary Powers) Act (1946), S. 7) — (Madhya Bharat Foodgrains Export Restriction Order (Sm. 2005).)

Accused carrying cart-load of jwar and wheat without permit towards border of State — Accused stopped by authorities on the road leading towards a border village within State, at a place two furlongs from the border — Intention to export without permit not proved — Held that no offence of attempting to export without permit was committed. (Para 2)

Anno: Penal Code, S. 511 N. 2.

Mungre, Government Advocate, for the State; Abdul Haiz, for Respondents.

JUDGMENT: The respondents were convicted by the First Class Magistrate of Kurwai of an offence under S. 7, Essential Supplies (Temporary Powers) Act, 1946 and sentenced to six months' rigorous imprisonment and to pay a fine of Rs. 50/- each. In appeal the learned Sessions Judge of Shajapur set aside the convictions and sentences and acquitted the accused persons. This appeal is directed against the order of acquittal passed by the Sessions Judge, Shajapur.

(2) The charge against the respondents was that on the night of 12-12-1950 at about 2 a.m. the respondents exported without a permit wheat and jwar in a cart to Central Provinces and thus contravened Notification No. 14 published in the Gazette dated 16-12-50 and issued by the Director of Food and Supplies under the Food Grains Export Restriction Order, Samvat, 2005, which is an order issued under S. 3, Essential Supplies (Temporary Powers) Act.

This appeal is devoid of any force. From the evidence of the prosecution witnesses themselves, it is clear that the cart in which the respondents were carrying wheat and jwar was stopped by the authorities at a place in the Madhya Bharat itself, and that this place which was at a distance of about two furlongs from the border of Central Provinces, was also on the way to Karnodia Basoda a village situated in the Madhya Bharat itself. It is clear from this evidence that the accused had not exported the foodgrain to Central Provinces. It cannot also be held from this evidence that the accused were attempting to export without a permit the wheat and jwar which was in their cart. From the mere fact that the place where the cart was stopped was at a distance of two furlongs from the border of Central Provinces, it cannot be concluded that the respondents were attempting to export the foodgrains to Central Provinces. As this place was situated on a road to the village Karnodia Basoda in Madhya Bharat, the possibility that the respondents were taking the wheat and jwar to this village cannot be excluded. In the absence of any evidence to show the intention of the accused to export the wheat and jwar to Central Provinces, they cannot be held guilty even of the offence of attempt to export the foodgrain without a permit. In fairness to the learned Government Advocate, it must be said that he admitted that the evidence on record was not sufficient to press on this Court that the accused should be convicted of the offence with which they were charged.

(3) In the result, this appeal is dismissed.
C/K.S.

Appeal dismissed.

A.I.R. 1953 M. B. 217 (Vol. 40, C. N. 82)

(INDORE BENCH)

(FULL BENCH)

SHINDE C. J., DIXIT AND
ABDUL HAKIM KHAN JJ.Gokul Das and others, Appellants v. Mohan Kunwar Bai and another, Respondents.

Second Appeal No. 326 of 1951, D/- 22-9-1952.

†(a) Madhya Bharat High Court Act (8 of 1949), Ss. 25 and 25A — Jurisdiction of High Court to entertain appeal from judgment of Division Bench — (Indore High Court Act (4 of 1948), Ss. 21(c), 23).

Section 21(c), Indore High Court Act did not give right of further appeal in the High Court from a decision of a Division Bench; on the contrary, such an appeal was expressly prohibited by S. 23 of that Act.

Even assuming that S. 21(c) did confer on the appellant such a right, it is further clear from the opening words of S. 21(c) namely "save as otherwise provided by any law for the time being in force" that if any other statute prohibits an appeal with-in the High Court from a decision of a Division Bench, then S. 21(c) would give way and the provisions of the other statute would prevail. Hence as the Madhya Bharat High Court Act, 1949 negatives the existence of any such right of appeal, the appellant cannot exercise the right said to have accrued to him under S. 21(c), Indore High Court Act.

Section 25, M. B. High Court Act, 1949, which replaced the M. B. High Court Ordinance No. 2 of 1948, no doubt, provided for appeals to a Full Bench in certain cases from decisions of a Division Bench. But on 25-1-50 by Ordinance No. 1 of 1950, a new section 25A was inserted in the Act and the new section took away the jurisdiction of that Court to hear and determine any appeal from a decision of a Division Bench given after 25-1-50.

It follows from this that whatever might have been the law prior to 25-1-50, the High Court has now no jurisdiction at all to entertain any appeal from a decision of a Division Bench given after 25-1-1950. AIR 1951 MB 149 (FB) Ref. (Para 9)

(b) Madhya Bharat High Court Act (8 of 1949), S. 25A — 'Notwithstanding anything contained in S. 25' — Meaning.

The words "Notwithstanding anything contained in S. 25" which occur in S. 25(A) only override the provisions of S. 25. They do not limit the deprivation of jurisdiction only to appeals falling under S. 25. The words only mean that S. 25 shall be no impediment to the non-existence of the jurisdiction. If the intention had been to limit the taking away the jurisdiction of the High Court only to appeals under S. 25, then one would have found the qualifying words "under S. 25" after the words "any appeal" and before the word "from" in S. 25(A). But as it is S. 25(A) uses the unqualified words "any appeal" which mean that any appeal whether under S. 25 or under any other provisions of law. (Para 9)

(c) Madhya Bharat High Court Act (8 of 1949), Ss. 23, 24, 6, 37 — Existing and current law binding on Madhya Bharat High Court.

Majority view: Madhya Bharat High Court is not a successor Court of the High Courts of the Covenantee States. It is a new Court and the powers and jurisdiction of the Court are those conferred under the Madhya Bharat High Court Ordinance No. 2 of 1948 and the Madhya Bharat High Court Act (8 of 1949), under which it has been established and is continuing.

The Indore High Court having ceased to exist, the Indore High Court Act, 1948, cannot be said to have survived. If the Indore High Court Act cannot be regarded as operative today, it follows that it is not an existing or current law which the Madhya Bharat High Court is required to apply under S. 6, Madhya Bharat High Court Act to civil, criminal and other proceedings. AIR 1953 Madh-B 209 (FB), Rel. on; Case law referred. (Para 6)

Per KHAN J.: In ascertaining the jurisdiction of the Madhya Bharat High Court, it is not only Ss. 23 and 24, Madhya Bharat High Court of Judicature Act (which define its civil and criminal and appellate jurisdiction) that are to be looked at, but all the relevant sections of the Act have also to be considered. Thus Ss. 6 and 37 of the Act cannot be left out of account. (Para 21)

The scope of the jurisdiction of the High Court is widened by Ss. 6 and 37 of the Act, in so far as these sections enjoin on the High Court to apply the laws of the covenantee States also, (including the right of appeal which may exist under some law of any of the Covenantee State) till such time as they were modified. In this view of the matter, if the Indore High Court Act of 1948 had really provided for an appeal from the decision of a Division Bench then having regard to Ss. 6 and 37, Madhya Bharat High Court of Judicature Act, such an appeal was competent. AIR 1951 SC 253, Expl. and Rel. on. (Para 22)

Bharucha, for Appellants; Rege, Samvatsar and Kotwal, for Respondents.

CASES CITED:

- (A) ('51) AIR 1951 Madh-B 1: ILR (1952) Madh-B 15 (FB)
- (B) ('50) Second Appeal No. 24 of 1950 (Madh-B)
- (C) ('51) AIR 1951 SC 253: 1951 SC J 474
- (D) ('53) AIR 1953 Madh-B 209: (S. A. No. 354 of 1951) (FB)
- (E) ('51) AIR 1951 Madh-B 149: 52 Cri LJ 1467 (FB)
- (F) ('51) AIR 1951 Bom 147: 53 Bom LR 556
- (G) ('40) AIR 1940 Bom 216: ILR (1940) Bom. 426
- (H) ('48) AIR 1948 Lah 64: 49 Pun LR 230
- (I) ('49) 1949 Madh-B LR 8

(1) (52) AIR 1952 Bom 303; ILR (1952) Bom 906

(2) (50) AIR 1950 Madh-B 112; (Special Cri. Appeal No. 1 of 1949) (FB)

DIXIT J.: This is an appeal by the plaintiff from a decision of a Division Bench of this Court, whereby the decree of the Additional District Judge, Indore, was set aside and the plaintiff's claim for the specific performance of a contract for sale of a house was dismissed with costs throughout. The suit out of which this appeal arises was instituted on 2-7-1943 by the plaintiff in the Court of Additional District Judge, Indore. A decree in favour of the plaintiff was made by the trial Court on 28-2-1950. The defendant, then, filed an appeal to this Court on 29-6-1950 from the decree of the Additional District Judge Indore. The appeal was heard by a Division Bench and allowed on 12-7-1951 and the plaintiff's suit was dismissed. The present appeal is directed against the decision dated 12-7-1951 of the Division Bench and was filed on 2-11-1951.

(2) The preliminary question that arises for consideration in this appeal is as to the competence of the appeal. Prima facie under the Madhya Bharat High Court Act, 1949 (Act 8 of 1949), as amended by Ordinance No. 1 of 1950, no appeal lies from any judgment, decree, order or sentence passed or made by any Division Bench of this Court after 25-1-1950. Mr. Bharucha learned counsel for the appellant admits that the present appeal is not under the old S. 25 of the High Court Act which provided for appeals under certain conditions from decisions of any Division Bench and which was repealed on 25-1-50 by Ordinance No. 1 of 1950. He, however, claims that the appeal is under S. 21 (c), Indore High Court Act 1948 (Act 4 of 1948 of Indore State). The argument is that on the date of the institution of the suit in the Court of the Additional District Judge, the Indore High Court Act, 1948 existed; that under S. 21 of the Act an appeal lay to the Indore High Court from a decree passed by the District Judge in the exercise of his original civil jurisdiction and a further appeal lay within the High Court itself from the decision of the Court in a first appeal from decree of the District Judge, that this right of two appeals which according to the Full Bench decisions of this Court in — 'Gulab Chand v. Kudi Lal', AIR 1951 Madh-B 1 (A) and in — 'The Rajkumar Mills v. Pratap Singh and the Hukam Chand Mills Ltd.', (Indore Bench) Second Appeal No. 24 of 1950 (Madh-B) (B), is a right which vested in the appellant at the time of the filing of the suit; that this right of further appeal in the High Court has not been taken away by express provisions or necessary intendment of any piece of legislature; and that on the other hand the provision contained in Madhya Bharat High Court Ordinance, 1948 (Ordinance 2 of 1948) and Madhya Bharat High Court Act (Act 8 of 1949) by which this Court was established and then continued and the Indore High Court ceased to exist, that the High Court is to "apply the laws and usages prevailing in any State forming part of the United State to Civil, Criminal and other proceedings in that State till such time as a duly constituted authority modifies them"

(S. 6 of Act 8 of 1949) and that all appeals, petitions for revision, etc., which lay to the High Court of any Covenanting State according to the laws in force in that State, shall lie to the High Court (See S. 37 (1) of Act 8 of 1949) distinctly show that so far as appeals to this Court, arising out of suits instituted in the quondam Indore

State are concerned, the Indore High Court Act, 1943 is still operative. On this reasoning, it is maintained that the right of the appeal within the High Court itself which the appellant had with respect to the Indore High Court, enures also in regard to this Court and that, therefore, this appeal is competent.

(3) The reply of Mr. Samvatsar, learned counsel appearing on behalf of the respondent is that the Madhya Bharat High Court being a new Court, its powers and jurisdiction must be determined with reference to Ordinance 2 of 1948 and Act 8 of 1949 constituting it and not with reference to the Indore High Court Act 1948; that under Act 8 of 1949 as amended on 25-1-50 this appeal is clearly incompetent. Mr. Samvatsar relies on the decision of the Supreme Court in — 'State of Serai Keila v. Union of India', AIR 1951 SC 253 (C), to support this proposition. It is further urged that as on the establishment of this Court, the Indore High Court ceased to exist, the Act under which High Court was established, namely the Indore High Court Act, 1948 also ceased to be operative and that Act cannot be said to be an existing law which this Court is enjoined to apply under S. 6 of the High Court Act to Civil, Criminal and other proceedings; nor can it be said to be a law at present in force in the territories of Madhya Bharat comprising of the former Indore State under which the appellant can claim to file this appeal by virtue of the provision of S. 37 (1), Madhya Bharat High Court Act. Mr. Samvatsar proceeded to point out that even under the Indore High Court Act, 1948, the appellant had no right of appeal from a decision of a Division Bench; that S. 21 (c) of the Act only provided for an appeal within the High Court from a decision of a single Judge passed in the exercise of his appellate jurisdiction; and that on the other hand S. 23 of the Act stated in express words that

"no appeal shall lie from any decree or order passed by the High Court in the exercise of its civil or criminal jurisdiction except as provided in the enactment."

(4) As Mr. Chitale had addressed us arguments on an allied question in 'Udaybhan v. Firm San-karlal', AIR 1953 Madh-B 209 (FB) (D), appearing as amicus curiae, we thought it desirable to hear him in that capacity in this case also. Mr. Chitale supported the arguments of the learned counsel for the respondent and added that even accepting as correct the proposition that as the hearing of an appeal by a Single Judge or a Division Bench of the High Court is merely a matter of procedure, the appellant would have been entitled under S. 21, Indore High Court Act to a further appeal within the Indore High Court if his appeal from the decree of the Additional District Judge had been heard by a Division Bench, the appellant cannot claim that right in relation to this Court for the reason that the opening words of S. 21, Indore High Court Act, namely "Save as otherwise provided by any law for the time being in force" clearly show that, that right would now be subject to the provisions of the Madhya Bharat High Court Act, 1949. It is contended that whatever might have been the law prior to 25-1-50 with regard to appeals from decisions of a Division Bench of this Court, on 25-1-50 this Court was deprived by Ordinance No. 1 of 1950 of any jurisdiction to hear and determine any appeal from the decisions of any Division Bench given after 25-1-50 and that as under Art. 225 of the Constitution of India the jurisdiction of this Court is the same as that vested immediately before the commencement of the Constitution and as on that date this Court had no jurisdiction to hear and determine any appeal against the decisions of any Division Bench given after 25-1-50, it follows that this Court has no jurisdiction to entertain, hear and determine this appeal. In support of this contention Mr. Chitale has cited a Full Bench decision of this Court in — 'Baldeo Singh v. The State', AIR 1951 Madh B 149 (FB) (E) relying on — 'James Chadwick & Bros. Ltd. v. National Sewing Thread Co. Ltd.', AIR 1951 Bom 147 (F); — 'Vaman Ravji v. Nagesh Vishnu', AIR 1940 Bom 216 (G) and — 'Hanuman Chamber of Commerce Ltd., Delhi v. Jassa Ram Hira Nand', AIR 1943 Lah 64 (H). Mr. Chitale further argued that this appeal is really what is commonly described as "inter Court-Appeal" that appeals within the High Court itself are the peculiarities of the Constitution and the rules of practice and procedure of the specific High Court; and that if the Court is abolished its Constitution and rules cannot survive and therefore, even if this appeal could have been entertained by the Indore High Court under its own Constitution, if the Constitution and rules of practice and procedure of this Court do not provide for an appeal from a decision of a Division Bench, then the appeal cannot be entertained.

(5) It will be seen from the arguments summarised above that the appellant stand upon the provisions of the Indore High Court Act, 1948 and his contention is twofold: (1) that in relation to appeals arising out of suits instituted in the territories of Madhya Bharat comprising of the former Indore State, the Indore High Court Act, 1948 is still operative and that the power and jurisdiction of this Court must in the matter of these appeals be determined with respect to the Indore High Court Act; (2) and that the appellant had in any case acquired under that Act while it was in force a vested right of appeal within the High Court from a decision of a Division Bench and this right is available to him in this Court also. In my opinion, both these contentions are unsound and must be rejected.

(6) The contention that the powers and jurisdiction of this Court in respect of appeals of the type referred to above must be determined with reference to the Indore High Court Act, 1948 must be repelled for the reasons which I have already given in — 'AIR 1953 Madh B 209 (FB) (D)' which raised very much the same consideration as the present. In that case relying on the Supreme Court decision in — 'AIR 1951 SC 253 (C)' and on a Full Bench decision of this Court in — 'Bharosi Lal v. Dwarika Das', 1949 Madh B L R 8 (I), I have held that this Court is not a successor Court of the High Courts of the Covenantee States but that it is a new Court and the powers and jurisdiction of this Court are those conferred under the Madhya Bharat High Court Ordinance No. 2 of 1948 and the Madhya Bharat High Court Act (8 of 1949) under which it has been established & it is continuing. It seems to me a truism to say that the Indore High Court having ceased to exist, the Indore High Court Act, 1948 cannot be said to have survived. If the Indore High Court Act cannot be regarded operative today, it follows that it is not an existing or current law which this Court is required to apply under S. 6, Madhya Bharat High Court Act to civil, criminal and other proceedings; and which would 'proprio vigore' entitle the appellant to prefer this appeal.

Learned counsel for the appellant strongly relied on the Full Bench decision of this Court in — 'Second Appeal No. 24 of 1950 (Madh B) (B)' and also drew our attention to a decision of the Bombay High Court reported in — 'Dajisaheb v. Shankarrao Vitha'rao', AIR 1952 Bom 303 (J) and pressed on us to hold that the powers and jurisdiction of this Court in regard to appeals arising out of suits instituted in the former Indore State must be determined with reference to the provisions of the Indore High Court Act 1948. These cases, in my view, have no application here. I have already considered the decision in — 'Second Appeal No. 24 of 1950 (Madh B) (B)', in the opinion which I have just delivered in — 'AIR 1953 Madh-B 209 (FB)(D)' & pointed out that the decision is not an authority for the contention that in determining the powers and jurisdiction of this Court, the Constitution of the Indore High Court or of any other High Court of a Covenantee State ought to be taken into consideration. The Full Bench decision did not, and of course could not, reject the proposition laid down by the Supreme Court in the case of — 'State of Serai Kella v. the Union of India', (C) that when a new Court is established, its jurisdiction and powers are those as defined by the statute constituting it. In the 'case of Raj Kumar Mills (B)' also this principle was recognised and the learned Judges constituting the Full Bench examined the provisions of the Madhya Bharat High Court Act, 1949 and then came to the conclusion that there was nothing in S. 25, Madhya Bharat High Court Act or any other provision of that Act to show that the right of appeal conferred by S. 25 was available to a party who did not possess such a right at the time of the institution of the suit. Now, it must be remembered that it is one thing to say that in the matter of appeals the power and jurisdiction of this Court are regulated by the Indore High Court Act 1948 and that as under that Act a party had no right of appeal, he cannot claim the right in this Court; but it is quite different to say that under the powers and jurisdiction of this Court as defined in the Madhya Bharat High Court of Judicature Act, 1949, a right of appeal, which had not vested in a party at the time of the suit, was not available to him in this Court or that a right which had so vested in him has been preserved or taken away. It is essential to bear in mind the ratio decidendi of the Supreme Court decision in the case of 'the State of Serai Kella (C)'. The 'ratio decidendi' is, that the Supreme Court being a new Court established under the Constitution of India, its power and jurisdiction are those as defined in the Constitution itself and that if the Constitution expressly bars the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court with regard to any matter, then notwithstanding the fact that the Federal Court had jurisdiction to entertain the matter or that it was pending before the Federal Court at the time of the establishment of the Supreme Court and was removed to the Supreme Court for disposal, the Supreme Court would not have jurisdiction to entertain the matter.

(7) The learned Judges of the Bombay High Court in — 'AIR 1952 Bom 303 (J)' simply applied to the case before them the principle laid down by the Supreme Court in the case of 'the State of Serai Kella (C)'. The decision in — 'AIR 1952 Bom 303 (J)' is of no assistance to the appellant.

In 'the Bombay case (J)' the question under consideration was whether in respect of appeal to the Supreme Court arising out of suits filed prior to the coming into force of the Constitution, the limitation as to value or amount prescribed in Art. 133 of the Constitution of India applied. Their Lordships held that although under sub-cl. (a) and (b) of Art. 133 no appeal lay to the Supreme Court where the subject-matter in dispute was less than Rs. 20,000, the Supreme Court has been given under Art. 135 the same jurisdiction and powers with respect to any matter to which the provisions of Art. 133 or 134 did not apply, if the Federal Court had jurisdiction to entertain the matter. They also held that S. 27 of the Adaptation of Laws Order, 1950 expressly preserves the right already accrued to a party to appeal to the Supreme Court in cases where the amount or value of the subject matter in dispute was Rs. 10000 or more. The Bombay case was decided on the basis that the Constitution itself gives to the Supreme Court the jurisdiction to deal with appeals where the amount or value of the subject matter in dispute is less than Rs. 20000, - if the appeal is one arising out of a suit filed before the coming into force of the Constitution. As the learned Judges of the Bombay High Court pointed out whereas in the case of the State of Serai Kella (C) the question was of absence of jurisdiction under the Constitution in the Supreme Court, in the case before them there was no such absence of jurisdiction. The Bombay case, therefore, does not support the contention of the appellant, which in my opinion, is untenable.

(8) The contention that the appellant had acquired, under the Indore High Court Act, a vested right of appeal within the High Court from a decision of a Division Bench is not supported by the wording of Ss. 21(c) and 23, Indore High Court Act. Section 21(c) is as follows:

"Save as otherwise provided by any law for the time being in force, an appeal shall lie to the High Court from (c) a decree or an order appealable under the Indore Code of Civil Procedure or any other law for the time being in force, passed either by a Judge of the High Court or a District Judge in the exercise of his appellate jurisdiction."

Section 23 says:

"No appeal shall lie from any decree or order passed by the High Court in the exercise of its Civil or Criminal jurisdiction except as provided in this enactment."

(9) It is clear from these provisions that the appellant had under the Indore High Court Act no right of further appeal in the High Court from a decision of a Division Bench, on the contrary such an appeal was expressly prohibited by S. 23 of that Act. Assuming for the sake of argument that S. 21(c) did confer on the appellant such a right, it is further clear from the opening words of S. 21(c) namely, "save as otherwise provided by any law for the time being in force" that if any other statute prohibits an appeal within the High Court from a decision of a Division Bench, then S. 21(c) would give way and the provisions of the other statute would prevail. If, therefore, the Madhya Bharat High Court Act, 1949 negatives the existence of any such right of appeal, the appellant cannot clearly exercise the right said to have accrued to him under S. 21(c), Indore High Court Act. That this Court has under the Madhya Bharat High Court Act, 1949, as it stands today no jurisdiction to hear and determine any appeal from a decision of a Division Bench, is clear enough. The Madhya Bharat High Court Ordinance No. 2 of 1948 did not confer on this Court any such jurisdiction. Section 25 of the High Court Act, 1949 which replaced the Ordinance, no doubt, provided for appeals to a Full Bench in certain cases from decisions of a Division Bench. But on 25-1-50 by Ordinance No. 1 of 1950, a new section, namely S. 25(A) was inserted in the Act and this new section took away the jurisdiction of this Court to hear and determine any appeal from a decision of a Division Bench given after 25-1-50. Section 25(A) was in these terms:

"Notwithstanding anything contained in S. 25, the High Court shall have no jurisdiction to hear and determine any appeal from any judgment, decree, order, and sentence passed or made after the promulgation of this Ordinance by any Divisional Court of the High Court on its original or appellate side."

It must be noted that the words "Notwithstanding anything contained in S. 25" which occur in S. 25(A) only override the provisions of S. 25. They do not limit the deprivation of jurisdiction only to appeals falling under S. 25. The words only mean that S. 25 shall be no impediment to the non-existence of the jurisdiction. If the intention had been to limit the taking away the jurisdiction of this Court only to appeals under S. 25, then one would have found the qualifying words "under S. 25" after the words "any appeal" and before the word "from" in S. 25(A). But as it is S. 25(A) uses the unqualified words "any appeal" which in my opinion, mean that any appeal whether under S. 25 or under any other provisions of law. The word "any" is a word which as used in S. 25(A) excludes limitation or qualification. It follows from this that whatever might have been the law prior to 25-1-50, this Court has now no jurisdiction at all to entertain any appeal from a decision of a Division Bench given after 25-1-1950. The effect of S. 25A of the High Court Act and Ordinance No. 1 of 1950 has already been considered by a Full Bench of this Court in — 'AIR 1951 Madh B 149 (E)' and it has been held in that case that as at the commencement of the Constitution of India, this Court had no jurisdiction to hear and determine any appeal against the decisions of any Division Bench given after 25-1-50, the inference follows from Art. 225 of the Constitution of India that it has none today. For these reasons the contention of the appellant that he had at the institution of the suit a vested right of appeal within the High Court or that if he had such a right he is entitled to exercise it in this Court also must be rejected.

(10) In this view of the matter, it is not necessary to consider the further argument of Mr. Chitale about the nature of appeals within the High Court itself i.e. of "inter-Court" appeals. Such appeals are, in my view, no doubt, something quite special being peculiar to the Constitution, and the rules of practice and the procedure of the particular Court. It, however, appears to me that the real question raised by this argument is whether the principle of the right of appeal being a vested right applies to appeals within the High Court, and that so far as this question is concerned, it is for the present, concluded by the Full Bench decision of this Court in — 'Second Appeal No. 24 of 1950 (Madh B) (B)'. As I have held that this Court has no jurisdiction at all to entertain any appeal from a decision of a Division Bench, the question whether the appellant can take advantage of an inter-Court appeal, when at the time of the institution of the suit, there was no such appeal provided, does not arise. It would not, therefore, be proper to examine the correctness of the decision in — 'Second Appeal No. 24 of 1950 (Madh B) (B)' in this case, where the point covered by that decision does not arise.

(11) In the result, I have come to the conclusion that this appeal is incompetent and must be dismissed directing the appellant to pay to the respondent half his costs here.

(12) SHINDE C. J.: I agree and have nothing to add.

(13) A. H. KHAN J.: This appeal arises out of suit No. 53 of 1948 for specific performance, which was instituted on 2-7-1948 and in which a decree was passed in favour of the plaintiff by the Additional District Judge of Indore on 28-2-1950. The defendant filed an appeal No. 19 of 1950 before the Madhya Bharat High Court, which was allowed by a Division Bench of this Court on 12-7-1951, and the plaintiff was non-suited. Aggrieved by the decision of the Division Bench, the plaintiff has filed this second appeal.

(14) A preliminary objection has been raised that the appeal is incompetent. It is said that the High Court of Judicature Act, Madhya Bharat (Act No. 8/1949) as it stands today does not provide for an appeal from the decree of a Division Bench to a larger Bench of this Court. No doubt that under S. 25, High Court of Judicature Act, such an appeal was possible, but first by Ordinance 1 of 1950, and later on by Act 3 of 1952, S. 25 was done away with. In the circumstances, it is contended that the plaintiff is not entitled to prefer this appeal.

(15) The learned counsel for the appellant, Mr. Bharucha contends that this appeal is not brought under the repealed S. 25, High Court of Judicature Act, but that it is preferred in accordance with S. 21 (C), Indore High Court Act (4 of 1948). It is contended that the Indore High Court Act provided for two appeals in the High Court, and, by virtue of S. 6 read with S. 37, Madhya Bharat High Court of Judicature Act (8 of 1949), this High Court has to apply the law that prevailed in the High Court of the former Holkar State, and, as such this appeal is competent. It is further argued that the right of appeal is a vested right & according to the well established principle of law as affirmed in the decision of this High Court 'Daulat Singh v. State', AIR 1950 Madh B 112 (FB) (K) this right inheres in a party at the commencement of the proceedings, and, because at the time of filing the suit, the Indore High Court Act was in force, which provided for two appeals in the High Court, this appeal is competent.

(16) Learned and lengthy arguments have been addressed to us by the counsel of both the parties and we had also the benefit of hearing Mr. Chitale, the learned Advocate General, who has appeared as amicus curiae.

(17) I would uphold the preliminary objection and dismiss the appeal on the short ground that as contended by the learned counsel of the appellant, no appeal is provided against the decision of a Division Bench in the Indore High Court Act, 1948 (Act 4 of 1948). All that S. 21(C), Indore High Court Act intends to provide is that in the event of an appeal being heard by a Judge of the High Court (Single Bench), an appeal would lie to the High Court. In other words it provides that on a case being decided by a single Bench another appeal before a larger Bench could be filed. But the Act nowhere says that if an appeal was initially heard by a Division Bench, the aggrieved party had a further right of appeal to a larger Bench. In the course of the arguments, I asked Mr. Bharucha whether he could cite any authority or for the matter of that refer to the practice of the Indore High Court, to substantiate the point that under Indore High Court Act, it was possible to appeal against the decree of a Division Bench. His reply was not satisfactory. I am, however, quite clear in my mind that it was not possible and the reasons are two: First, there is no provision express or implied in the Indore High Court Act for such an appeal, secondly, the Indore High Court consisted of a Chief Justice and two puisne Judges vide S. 2(1), Indore High Court Act (Act 4 of 1948). Now if an appeal was initially heard by a Division Bench it was not physically possible for the High Court to constitute a larger Bench to hear an appeal from it. Furthermore, S. 23, Indore High Court Act says:

"No appeal shall lie from any decree or order passed by the High Court in the exercise of its Civil or Criminal jurisdiction except as provided in this enactment....."

(18) There being no provision for an appeal from the decision of a Division Bench in the Act, a second appeal was barred by S. 23 of the Act itself.

(19) For the reasons stated above, I have no hesitation in holding that under the Indore High Court Act, no appeal could be heard by a larger Bench against the decision of a Division Bench, and, as such this appeal is not competent. In the view I take of the preliminary objection, regarding the competence of this appeal, it is, in fact, unnecessary to examine and discuss any further arguments, but en passant, one or two arguments advanced with great vehemence may be noticed.

(20) Mr. Chitale, the learned Advocate General, has specially referred to the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of — 'AIR 1951 S C 253 (C)' to establish the proposition that when a new Court is established, its jurisdiction and powers are those as defined by the Statute constituting it, and that in considering the competence of this appeal, the Indore High Court Act of 1948 should be brushed aside altogether, and, that we should determine the question only by reference to the Madhya Bharat High Court Act (Act 8 of 1949) under which this Court is constituted. But what if the Madhya Bharat High Court Act itself enjoins on us to take the Indore High Court Act into consideration? I refer to Ss. 6 and 37, Madhya Bharat High Court Act, the material portions of which run as follows:

"Section 6: The High Court shall apply the laws and the usages prevailing in any State forming part of the United State to Civil, Criminal and other proceedings in that State till such time as a duly constituted authority modifies them. Section 37.....and all cases pending before the said High Court, Tribunal or Authority, shall be transferred to the High Court of the United State for disposal, and all appeals, petitions for revision etc., which lay or lie to the said High Court, Tribunal or Authority, according to the laws in force in that State, shall lie to the High Court of the United State."

On reading the 'State of Seraikella case (C)', I find that what their Lordships of the Supreme Court have observed, is thus:

"that the Supreme Court was a new Court established by the Constitution of India and the jurisdiction of the Court has, therefore, to be ascertained 'by considering all the relevant articles of the Constitution'. It is in that light, the provisions of Art. 363 have to be read and interpreted."

(21) I would like to point out that their Lordships have laid particular emphasis on the fact that 'all the relevant Articles have to be considered in ascertaining the jurisdiction' of the Court, and this being so, in ascertaining the jurisdiction of the Madhya Bharat High Court, it is not only Ss. 23 and 24, Madhya Bharat High Court of Judicature Act (which define its civil and criminal and appellate jurisdiction that are to be looked at, but all the relevant sections of the Act have also to be considered). Thus Ss. 6 and 37 of the Act cannot be left out of account.

(22) It was also held in 'the State of Seraikella case (C)' that Art. 363 controlled Art. 374(2) of the Constitution in determining the question of jurisdiction. In other words Art. 363 put an embargo on the operation of Art. 374(2) of the Constitution. But in our case the jurisdiction to hear appeals, as contained in Ss. 23 and 24, Madhya Bharat High Court of Judicature Act, suffers from no such restraint as is placed on Art. 374 by Art. 363 of the Constitution. On the contrary, the scope of our jurisdiction is widened by Ss. 6 and 37 of the Act, in so far as these sections enjoin on this High Court to apply the laws of the Covenanting States also (including the right of appeal which may exist under some law of any of the covenanting State) till such time as they were modified.

Thus on analysing the Supreme Court case, I find that it does not exclude the consideration of the Indore High Court Act of 1948; on the contrary it directs us to consider all the provisions of the Statute which created the Madhya Bharat High Court. In this view of the matter if the Indore High Court Act of 1948 had really provided for an appeal from the decision of a Division Bench (and I have held above that it did not so provide), then having regard to Ss. 6 and 37, Madhya Bharat High Court of Judicature Act, this appeal was competent.

(23) It has been contended that in the abolition of the Indore High Court, the Indore High Court Act came to an end. This statement is only partially true. In so far as the Indore High Court Act created the Indore High Court and contained provisions of an administrative and procedural nature, it must be held to be inoperative, but so much of the Indore High Court Act which relates to the right of appeal in the Indore High Court, must be deemed to have survived because the right of appeal is a vested right and it inheres in a party at the commencement of proceedings. And S. 6 read with S. 37 referred to above, is responsible for keeping that right alive.

(24) It has been argued that the opening words of S. 21, Indore High Court Act, "save as otherwise provided by any law for the time being in force" imply that if any other law bars the jurisdiction of the Indore High Court to hear an appeal from the decision of a Division Bench, then that law would supersede the direction contained in S. 21(C). Now it is contended that Madhya Bharat High Court of Judicature Act as it stands today, negatives the existence of any such right and therefore, it must prevail over the Indore High Court Act of 1948. But this argument ignores the existence of Ss. 6 and 37, Madhya Bharat High Court of Judicature Act, whereby the laws of the Covenanting States are made applicable in cases that lay or may lie till such laws are modified. However queer the position may appear to be, yet it is a fact that on one hand the Madhya Bharat High Court of Judicature Act (Act 3 of 1949) lays down its own constitution for the hearing of appeals filed before it in Ss. 23 and 24 of the Act, and on the other it enjoins on us that the laws of the Covenanting States shall be applied as well. At the first blush, it may appear to be somewhat non-plusing and even incongruous, but when one considers the circumstances and conditions under which the State of Madhya Bharat came into being one can well appreciate the nature of such a Statute. Although the High Court of Madhya Bharat is a new Court and it cannot be regarded as a successor Court of the various High Courts (small and big) that existed in the covenanting States, yet the proposition cannot be gainsaid that in many respects the M. B. High Court was intended to take the place of the covenanting High Courts that were abolished as a consequence of the merger and the emergence of the United State of Gwalior, Indore and Malwa (Madhya Bharat). The Legislature had not a clean slate to write upon and a good deal was already there. It is in this context that the Madhya Bharat High Court of Judicature Act should be construed and interpreted.

(25) In result I agree with the conclusion of my learned brother Dixit J., that the appeal is not competent & that it should be dismissed with half the costs.

(26) BY THE COURT: The decision of the Full Bench being ready, it is pronounced by me today. The appeal stands dismissed as the same is not competent. The appellant shall pay half of the costs of the respondent in this Court and bear his own.

A/D.R.R.

Appeal dismissed.

A.I.R. 1953 M. B. 222 (Vol. 40, C. N. 83)

(GWALIOR BENCH)

DIXIT AND CHATURVEDI JJ.

Chhatar Singh, Applicant v. State of Madhya Bharat and another.

Civil Misc. Case No. 25 of 1952, D/- 21-1-1953.

Constitution of India, Arts. 226, 228 — Another remedy open — (Madhya Bharat Police Act (76 of S. 2007), S. 12).

Where the petitioner applying under Art. 226 for quashing the District Magistrate's order posting additional police in the village at the cost of the petitioner and other residents, has already paid his share of the cost, the right which he can claim to enforce under Art. 226 is not a right to restrain the opponents from recovering from him any portion of the cost, but it is the right to the refund of the amount already realised from him on the ground that it was an illegal exaction. The challenge to the order and the proclamation is plainly incidental to the establishment of the applicant's right to the refund of the money paid by him and if he thinks that the amount paid by him was illegally recovered from him, he has the remedy of a suit for the refund of the amount already paid by him. This remedy is equally effective, beneficial and convenient. A suit for such a remedy lies in the Civil Court and the fact that in the suit the validity of S. 12, Police Act would be questioned and the question would be referred in the High Court under Art. 228 cannot be regarded as a valid ground for short-circuiting the proper remedy of a suit and holding that the remedy of suit is not as effective, beneficial and convenient as the one this Court can give under Art. 226 of the Constitution.

(Para 4)

Anno: Civil P. C., Appendix III, Constitution of India, Art. 226 N. 8; Art. 228 N. 1.

Patankar, for Applicant; K. A. Chitale, Advocate-General and Mungre and Shiv Dayal, Govt. Advocate, for the State.

CASES CITED:

- (A) ('51) AIR 1951 Rajas 150(2): 1952-21 ITR 33
- (B) ('51) AIR 1951 SC 41: ILR (1951) Hyd 461
- (C) ('51) AIR 1951 Nag 58: 52 Cri LJ 1140 (FB)

ORDER: The petitioner moves this Court under Art. 226 of the Constitution of India for an order or a writ quashing an order dated 11-7-52 passed by the District Magistrate of Morena by which additional police was posted in certain villages of Morena District and cost of the additional police was levied on the residents of those villages, and for an order prohibiting the opponents from enforcing the said order and realising the cost of the additional police from the petitioner and other residents of those villages.

(2) The petitioner states that he is a Gujar Thakur by caste and a resident of the village Ghuraiya Basaia in Pargana Jaura of District Morena; that on 10-7-52 the Government issued a proclamation under S. 12(1), Madhya Bharat Police Act Samvat 2007 declaring 5 villages including Ghuraiya Basai of Dist. Morena as a disturbed & dangerous area; and authorised under sub-s. (2) of S. 12 the Commissioner Northern Division to employ adequate police force in addition to the ordinary fixed complement in the above villages, that on 11-7-52, the District Magistrate of Morena purporting to act under S. 12 of the Police Act and under the proclamation issued by the Government on the previous day, quartered additional police in the villages and imposed on the residents of those villages the cost of the police, exempting Harijans, Vaishya, Brahmins and other minor communities such as barbers, washermen, gadariyas etc., from liability to bear any portion of the cost of the police. The petitioner further states that he and other residents of the five villages had applied to the District Magistrate of Morena to withdraw the order dated 11-7-52; but that the District Magistrate did not cancel the order. The validity of the proclamation and the order of the District Magistrate is challenged mainly on the grounds:

- "1. The proclamation was not issued in conformity with S. 12(1) of the Police Act.
2. That under the proclamation the Government did not authorise the District Magistrate to quarter additional police.
3. That the order of the District Magistrate by which he exempted certain castes from liability to bear the costs of additional police being repugnant to Arts. 14 and 15 of the Constitution, was bad;
4. and that S. 12 of the Police Act which permits exemption of any person or class or section of inhabitants from liability to bear any portion of cost of additional police is itself void in view of Arts. 14 and 15 of the Constitution."

On these allegations after stating that he had no other speedy, effective and other adequate remedy, the petitioner prays that the order dated 11-7-52 of the District Magistrate be quashed and a writ in the nature of mandamus or appropriate order be issued either restraining the opponents from realising the cost of the additional police from him and other residents of the village or enjoining them to exempt the applicant and other residents from liability to bear the cost of additional police. On behalf of the opponents a return has been filed opposing the application.

(3) This petition was filed on 23-8-52. It was admitted by us on 27-8-52 and after the issue of the notice to the opponents, it was put up before us for hearing on 6-1-1953. In the meantime the petitioner from whom on the date of the filing of this petition, no demand had been made to pay any portion of the cost of additional police, paid the amount of his share & the proclamation issued by the Government as well as the order of the District Magistrate which were to be operative for a period of two months from the date of their making, ceased to be in force. In these circumstances the learned Advocate General took the preliminary objection that the reliefs prayed for by the applicants could be of no avail to the applicant and that the petition should, therefore, be thrown out as infructuous.

(4) Having heard the learned counsel for the petitioner and the learned Advocate-General on the preliminary point, I am disposed to uphold the objection of the learned Advocate General. The petitioner has prayed the relief that the order of the District Magistrate be quashed and the opponents be prohibited from realising from him and other residents any cost in respect of the additional police. It is not disputed by the learned counsel for the applicant that the order passed by the District Magistrate and the proclamation issued by the Government are not now operative. The question, therefore, of the issue of any order by this Court to quash the order of the District Magistrate or the proclamation of the Government does not arise. It is true that the liability to pay the cost of additional police quartered under the proclamation of the Government and order of the District Magistrate subsists even after the expiry of the proclamation and the District Magistrate's order, and if a demand is being made from the petitioner to pay any portion of such cost, the applicant can still complain that the proclamation and the order of the District Magistrate being both illegal, the demand is wholly without jurisdiction. But in the present case the petitioner has already paid his share of the cost of additional police. That being so, the right which he can now claim to enforce is not a right to restrain the opponents from recovering from him any portion of the cost, but it is the right to the refund of the amount already realised from him on the ground that it was an illegal exaction. The applicant has not averred in this petition that he has already paid his share of the cost and claimed the relief of the refund of that amount. The reliefs of the nature asked for by the applicants have now become inappropriate and when on the petition as it is framed there remains now no right of the applicant to be enforced, the applicant is clearly not entitled to a mere declaration that the proclamation and the order of the District Magistrate were illegal. The challenge to the order and the proclamation is now plainly incidental to the establishment of the applicant's right to the refund of the money paid by him and if he thinks that the amount paid by him was illegally recovered from him, he has the remedy of a suit for the refund of the amount already paid by him. This remedy is equally effective, beneficial and convenient. Mr. Patankar learned counsel for the petitioner had to concede that the remedy of a suit for the refund of the cost was equally effective, beneficial and convenient remedy. He, however, felt some doubt as to whether such a suit could at all be entertained by a Civil Court. I myself have no such doubt. If the petitioner's complaint is that the proclamation and District Magistrate's order were illegal and ultra vires and the amount realised from him was beyond the competence of the District Magistrate and was, therefore, an illegal exaction, then a suit claiming refund of the amount would lie in the Civil Court. I realise that if in the suit the question that S. 12 of the Police Act is void in view of certain provisions of the Constitution is raised, that question would have to be referred in this Court for its opinion under Art. 228 of the Constitution of India. But his consideration can hardly be regarded as a valid ground for short-circuiting the proper remedy of a suit and holding that the remedy of suit is not as effective, beneficial and convenient as the one this Court can give under Art. 226 of the Constitution.

(5) A further point was made by the learned Advocate General that as on the date of the petition, no demand had been made on the petitioner to pay his share of the cost of the police and as no action had been taken under the order of the District Magistrate to his detriment, the petitioner had no such interest as to be competent to maintain the application under Art. 226 of the Constitution of India for an order restraining the opponents from imposing on all the residents of the five villages the cost of the additional police. To this contention the reply of Mr. Patankar learned counsel for the respondents was that although on the date of the application, the petitioner was not called upon to pay any cost of the police, he and other residents of the five villages were persons who in the immediate future were to be affected by the order of the District Magistrate and that therefore, the petitioner had a cause of action consisting in the threatened infringement of his right to property. The objection raised by the learned Advocate General is no doubt supported by a decision of the Rajasthan High Court in — 'Pratap Mal v. Commissioner, Income-tax', AIR 1951 Rajas 150 (2) (A) in which following the observation of the Supreme Court in the case of — 'Chiranjit Lal v. Union of India', AIR 1951 SC 41 (B) that only those persons whose interests are directly affected by a statute can apply for redress under Art. 226, it was held that an interim injunction under Art. 226 restraining the Income-tax Officer from assessing income-tax on all the residents of the locality could not be granted, where no action had been taken against the applicant & the applicant wanted the injunction to be issued not only in his favour but also in favour of all residents of locality, who had not come to the Court. It also finds some support in the observations of Hidayatullah J., in — 'Sheo Sankar v. State of Madhya Pradesh', AIR 1951 Nag 58 (FB) (C). At this time it must be said that the contention of the learned counsel for the applicant that on the date of the application the petitioner had a cause of action in the threatened infringement of his right cannot be rejected summarily as devoid of any substance. As this application fails on the ground that it has become infructuous, it is not necessary to decide the objection whether in the circumstances existing on the date of the petition, the petitioner was competent to maintain this application, the point might be profitably considered on a more appropriate occasion, when it arises in some other case.

(6) In the result I would dismiss this petition leaving the parties to bear their own costs.

A/H.G.P.

Petition dismissed.

A.I.R. 1953 M. B. 224 (Vol. 40, C. N. 84)

(INDORE BENCH)

CHATURVEDI J.

Setanbai, Appellant v. State.

Criminal Appeal No. 119 of 1951, D/- 19-1-52.

Penal Code (1860), S. 318 — Evidence and proof — Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 367.

The same evidence which has not been believed for an offence of murder should not be believed for an offence under S. 318 when there is no eye witness who can depose that the accused herself came to the Charwada and secretly buried the body of the child there. The fact that she absconded soon after the incident is not sufficient to base a conviction under S. 318 thereon. Even grave suspicion against an accused cannot be taken to be substitute for proof.

(Para 2)

Anno: Penal Code, S. 318 N. 1; Cr. P. C., S. 367 N. 6.

Upadhyay, for Appellant; Govt. Advocate, for the State.

JUDGMENT: The appellant Setanbai was challaned and committed to Sessions for offences under Ss. 302 and 318, Penal Code. She is a young Hindu widow and according to the prosecution she was pregnant and delivered a child who was found dead and buried in a Charwada, in village Laxamkhedi, on 12-3-1950. The Sessions Judge, Ujjain acquitted her of the charge under S. 302, Penal Code but convicted her under S. 318 and sentenced her to rigorous imprisonment for one year. She has now preferred this appeal against the judgment of the learned Sessions Judge.

(2) The learned Sessions Judge has commented very severely on the latches and lapses of the Police in this case and has rightly acquitted the appellant of the charge of murder but I feel that the same evidence which has not been believed for an offence of murder should not have been believed for an offence under Section 318, Penal Code, as there is no eye witness who can depose that Setanbai herself came to the Charwada and secretly buried the body of the child there. No witness is forthcoming even to depose that Setanbai was seen near the Charwada. The fact that she absconded soon after the incident is not sufficient to base a conviction under S. 318 thereon. The learned Sessions Judge has relied upon circumstantial evidence in the case but that is not incompatible with the innocence of the appellant. It is just possible that Setanbai's father Hindusingh or a servant or some other friend of her might have taken the child & buried it in one corner of the Charwada of the village. I am sure that a conviction under S. 318, Penal Code cannot be based in this case on the mere circumstantial evidence referred to in the judgment of the learned Sessions Judge. I have gone through the statements of Bheru P.W. 9 & Lalu P.W. 10, relied upon by the learned Government Advocate in his arguments but there is nothing in those statements which may incline me to take a view that Setanbai was seen inside the Charwada secretly leaving or disposing of the dead body of the child. In my opinion there is surmise and conjecture against Setanbai but even grave suspicion against an accused cannot be taken to be substitute for proof. In this view of the matter I would allow the appeal, set aside the conviction and sentence and order that she be acquitted. She is already on bail and she need not surrender to her bail bonds which are hereby cancelled.

C/D.H.

Appeal allowed.

A. I. R. 1953 MB 225 (Vol. 40, C. N. 85)
(INDORE BENCH)

SHINDE, C. J. AND NEVASKAR, J.

Firm Lunaji Narayan and another, Appellants
v. Purshottam Charan & another, Respondents.

Second Appeal No. 291 of 1951 and Civil Misc.
Appeal No. 33 of 1950, D/- 10-2-1953.

(a) Civil P. C., (1908), S. 13 — Judgment against foreigner.

The judgments pronounced by foreign Courts against non-residents foreigners are not absolute nullities in the sense that they are void from their inception. They are valid and binding in the country of the forum which passed them and are execut-able there until they are satisfied or become barred by the operation of statute of limitation or otherwise become inoperative:
AIR 1951 Bom 125 (FB) Foll. (Para 32)
Anno: C. P. C., S. 13, N. 9.

(b) Constitution of India, Art. 261(3) — Execution of decree passed by court in Part A State by court in Part B State.

Article 261(3) cannot be availed of for the purpose of pressing an application of execution in the territory now forming part of Part B State where the final judgment of which the execution is sought was given by a Court in the territory now forming part of Part A State prior to 26-1-1950. AIR
1951 SC 124, foll. (Para 44)

Even apart from the provisions of Art.
261 (3) such decrees have not become exe-cutable in courts in Part B States by reason of change in the status of the judgmentdebtor from that of a foreigner to that of national of India, AIR 1951 Bom 190, foll.
(Para 56)

(c) Civil P. C. (Amendment) Act (1951), S.
20 — Execution of decree passed by court in Part A State by Court in Part B State. AIR 1952 Mys 69 Dissented from.

Executability of a binding judgment within a certain territory is a matter not affecting vested right of a judgment-debtor. It is therefore competent for the decree-holder who obtained an ex parte decree against a resident of a Part B State from a court in a Part A State before the promulgation of the Constitution to execute the same through a court in Part B State: AIR 1951
Bom 125 (FB), foll. AIR 1952 Mys. 69,
Dissented from. (Paras 65 and 73)

M. B. Rege (in No. 291 of 1951) and K. A.
Chitale (in No. 33 of 1950), for Appellants; S.
M. Samvatsar (in No. 291 of 1951), for Respondents.

CASES CITED:

- (A) ('51) AIR 1951 Bom 125: 53 Bom LR 398
(FB)
- (B) ('51) AIR 1951 Bom 190: ILR (1950) Bom
640
- (C) ('51) AIR 1951 SC 124: 52 Cri LJ 391 (SC)
- (D) ('52) AIR 1952 Mys. 69: ILR (1952) Mys
201
- (E) ('94) 22 Cal 222: 21 Ind App 171 (PC)
- (F) ('50) AIR 1950 Cal 12: 53 Cal WN 817

NEVASKAR J.: This judgment will dispose of two appeals viz., Civil Second Appeal No. 291 of 1951 and the other (what is styled as) Civil Miscellaneous Appeal No. 33 of 1950 as in both the aforesaid cases the same question of law is involved viz., whether it is competent for the Courts in Madhya Bharat to execute decrees passed ex parte by Courts outside Madhya Bharat but within the territories of India.

(2) On 30-11-1949, a decree was obtained by the respondent Purshottam Saran, resident of Muradabad in U. P., against the appellants who is a Firm owned by Mishrimal and his son Sohanlal of Ratlam (Madhya Bharat) in the Court of Munsiff Muradabad for Rs. 2400/-. This was obtained ex parte.

(3) On 18-12-1950 decree-holder applied for execution praying for transfer of decree for execution to the Civil Court of Ratlam. Thereupon, an order for transfer of decree for execution was passed and a transfer certificate dated 22-12-1950 was issued by Muradabad Court under O. 21, R. 6, Civil
P. C.

(4) On the basis of this transfer certificate, the decree-holder applied for execution on 8-2-1951 in the Court of Civil Judge Ratlam in Execution Case
No. 20 of 1951 and prayed for attachment and sale of the properties of the judgment-debtors.

(5) A notice thereupon was served on the judgment-debtor under O. 21, R. 22, Civil P. C. The judgment-debtors thereupon on 24-3-1951 submitted various objections to the execution of the decree principal among them were as follows:

I. Muradabad Court was a foreign Court when the decree was passed. This Court had no jurisdiction to pass the decree as the judgment-debtors never submitted to its jurisdiction. The decree thus passed ex parte against a non-resident foreigner was nullity.

II. The decree was not given on merits and was fraudulently obtained.

(6) The Court of the Civil Judge, Ratlam, overruled these objections holding that the decree is executable and ordered the amount in execution to be deposited within a fortnight. Failing to make the deposit, it was further ordered that process for attachment be issued.

(7) Judgment-debtor thereupon preferred an appeal to the District Judge Ratlam who relying upon a Full Bench decision of the Bombay High Court reported in — 'Bhagwan Shankar v. Rajaram', AIR 1951 Bom 125 (A) dismissed the appeal.

(8) The judgment-debtors have now preferred this second appeal.

(9) In Civil Miscellaneous Appeal No. 33 of 1951 the facts are as follows: Kunwar Adityaveer-sinh obtained a decree in Civil Suit No. 569 of 1949 on 30-11-1949 in the Court of Munsiff Bijnaur (U. P.) for Rs. 4509/- against Choudhari Shivdansinh ex parte.

(10) On 9-9-1949 the decree-holder obtained an order for the transfer of decree to the District Judge, Mandsaur on an application for execution.
A transfer certificate under O. 21, R. 6, Civil P. C. was issued by the Court which passed the decree.
On 29-4-1950, the decree-holder submitted the transfer certificate and other papers connected with it to the District Judge at Mandsaur and applied for appropriate order to be passed after hearing. No regular application for execution was submitted. The District Judge after hearing the parties passed an order on 2-5-1950 holding that "there is a serious doubt if the decree could be executed in a case like this by reason of the provisions of the Indian Constitution as contended on behalf of the decree-holder" and he therefore refused to execute the decree.

(11) The decree-holder thereupon has preferred this appeal.

(12) In both these appeals, therefore, one by the judgment-debtor and the other by the decree-holders the question is whether it is competent for the decree-holder, who obtained an ex parte decree against a resident of Madhya Bharat from a Court situated in a State outside Madhya Bharat before the promulgation of the Constitution of India, to execute the same through Courts in Madhya Bharat (i.e. Part B State) on the basis of transfer certificate issued by the former Court under O. 21, R. 6, Civil P. C.

(13) On behalf of the decree-holder, it is contended that whatever may be the position prior to 26-1-1950 after the Constitution came into force on this date the judgment-debtors ceased to be foreigners; and the Courts in the States (former British Indian Provinces, States or now Part A States) ceased to be foreign Courts and the judgments passed by the Courts in those States ceased to be foreign judgments.

(14) At any rate, it is contended, that when on 1-4-1951 Indian Civil Procedure Code, 1908 was made applicable to Part B States and the definition of foreign Court and foreign judgment was altered such judgments have become enforceable in what are now Part B States.

(15) The status of the judgment-debtor altered from that of being a foreigner to that of a national of 'India' (which includes Part A, B and C States by the act of State).

(16) This alteration of status brought with it as a necessary result that the protective shell afforded by the existence of two different States or political entities was removed and the enforceability now merely rested on the question whether the judgment pronounced was by a Court competent to do so under the domestic law of the State in which the Court passing such judgment was situate.

(17) The judgment pronounced by a Court in a foreign country against a non-resident foreigner, it is contended, is not an absolute nullity in the sense that it is nowhere good. It is good as regards the country of the forum in which it is pronounced and if by accidents of political changes its territorial limits got extended it cannot have a different effect as regards its executability or enforceability in different parts of the same country.

(18) Secondly it is contended that Art. 261(3), of the Constitution, provides:

"Final judgments or orders delivered or passed by Civil Courts in any part of the territory of India shall be capable of execution anywhere within that territory according to law."

(19) This gives constitutional sanction to the execution of decrees of any Court within the territorial limits of India (i.e., Part A, B and C States) anywhere in India. The words 'Civil Courts in any part of the territory of India' should be taken to mean Civil Courts within the geographical limits of what is now 'India', whether existing before or after the Constitution came into force. The words 'according to law' are intended to give effect to the legal provisions in some of the States which till the Indian Civil Procedure Code was applied to them continued to have a separate Code of Civil Procedure with a distinct definition of 'foreign Court' and 'foreign judgment'.

(20) Reliance is placed on behalf of the decree-holders, for some of the aforesaid contentions mainly on cases reported in — 'Chunnihal Kasturchand v. Dundappa Damappa', AIR 1951 Bom 190 (B) and 'AIR 1951 Bom 125 (FB) (A)'.
(21) On behalf of the judgment-debtors, it is contended that Art. 261(3) of the Constitution cannot be availed of for enforcement of decree passed before the commencement of the Constitution of India. The Courts then functioning will not be the Courts within the territory of India as defined in the Constitution. Before 26-1-1950 there was no territory of India in existence as defined in the Constitution, and therefore final judgments passed by such Civil Courts were not by Civil Courts within the territory of India and therefore not executable under this provision. Reliance for this view is placed on — 'Janardhan Reddy v. The State', AIR 1951 S C 124 (C). It was also urged that execution cannot be levied in Madhya Bharat regarding decree of Muradabad or Bijnaur (U. P.) because the decrees when passed were nullities by international law and this characteristic continued to attach to them when the question of execution arose. The appropriate time to consider the validity of the decree is the time when the decree was passed and not when the execution is sought to be levied and order therein is passed.

(22) On behalf of the judgment-debtors reliance is placed upon the cases reported in — 'Subbaraya Setty & Sons v. Palani Chetty & Sons', AIR 1952 My 69 (D). The Mysore case dissents from the view expressed in 'AIR 1951 Bom 190 (B)' and 'AIR 1951 Bom 125 (FB) (A)' and takes the view favouring the judgment-debtor that the decree passed by Courts situate in the territory which now forms part of Part A State is not executable in Courts situated in what is now Part B State when an ex parte decree was passed before the Constitution and there was no submission to the jurisdiction.

(23) Before I proceed to consider these two opposing views I shall briefly state changes in the Civil Procedure Code at different stages both in Madhya Bharat and that part of territory of India which was formerly British India or 'the States' and which now form Part A States. I am omitting from consideration the changes in Civil Procedure Code in other Part B and Part C States as the same is not relevant for the purpose under consideration.

(24) In territories which now form Part A States, the Civil Procedure Code of 1908 was in force before. According to this Code, by S. 2(5) 'Foreign Court' was defined thus:

'Section 2 (5):—

"Foreign Court means Court situated outside British India etc. (leaving out portion not material for the present purpose)."

(25) Foreign judgment was defined as judgment of a foreign Court.

(26) Later on, the words 'British India' were changed to Provinces of India and subsequently to 'States' and by the Adaptation of Laws Order, 1950 for the word 'States' the words Part A and Part C States were substituted.

(27) Thus it will be clear that even when India became politically one by the passing of the Constitution, for the purpose of Civil Procedure Code, Part B States' Courts continued to be foreign Courts by reason of statutory provision contained in Civil P. C.

(28) It is only when the present amendment came into force on 1-4-1951 that S. 20 of the Amending Act provides as follows:

"If, immediately before the date on which the said Code comes into force in any Part B State, there is in force in that State any law corresponding to the said Code that law in that State shall stand repealed.

Provided that the repeal shall not affect:

- the previous operation of any law so repealed or anything duly done or suffered thereunder or
- any 'right', 'privilege', obligation or liability 'acquired', accrued or incurred under any law so repealed or
- any investigation, 'legal proceeding or remedy' in respect of any such right, privilege, obligation, liability or penalty, forfeiture, or punishment as aforesaid and 'any such' investigation, 'legal proceeding' or 'remedy' may be instituted, continued or enforced and any such penalty, forfeiture or punishment may be imposed 'as if this Act had not been passed'."

Before this Amending Act was brought into force, there was in Madhya Bharat what is known as Madhya Bharat Indian Civil P. C., Angikaran Vidhan. This came into force from 22-1-1950. This provided that Indian Civil P. C. as it existed on the date when this Vidhan came into force is adopted with necessary changes 'Mutatis Mutandis' and with all the amendments as are indicated in Sch. 'A' attached to this Act. It also provided that any subsequent amendment in Indian Civil P. C. will be deemed to be engrafted 'Mutatis Mutandis' in this Code. Before this there were different Civil Procedure Codes for different States which constituted Madhya Bharat, confined to the territories of the corresponding States and more or less akin to the Indian Civil Procedure Code.

(29) The material question which will arise for consideration while considering the executability of the decrees passed by Courts of territories which now form part of Part A States in the territory of Madhya Bharat through Madhya Bharat Courts is which Civil Procedure Code will be applicable to these proceedings in execution. Whether the new Civil Procedure Code which came into force on 1-4-1951 by the Amending Act No. II of 1951 to the Indian Civil Procedure Code of 1908 or the Indian Civil Procedure Code, Angikaran Vidhan which came into force on 22-1-1950.

(30) Civil Procedure Code deals with vested rights as well as rights which are of purely procedural character. Section 20 of amending Act provides that in so far as the vested rights are concerned they will not be affected by the repeal and the Courts have to regard as if the new Act has not been passed and therefore as if the old Act has not been repealed but continued to have its force. But as regards rights which are purely procedural in character the new law will apply, as law relating to procedure is generally interpreted to have retrospective operation, and the question which we will have ultimately to consider is whether facts involved in the cases under consideration affect vested rights of the judgment-debtors. If not, the new Civil Procedure Code will apply and the decrees will be executable. However if vested rights are likely to be affected by reason of the change in the Civil Procedure Code then we will have to assume as if the new Act had not been passed and the decrees will remain un-executable.

(31) Analysing these respective contentions of the two sides and legislative changes in the Civil Procedure Code which has a bearing on the subject of enforcement of final judgments the following points arise for consideration:

Firstly — Are the decrees when passed being foreign decrees against non-resident foreigners absolute nullities?

Secondly — Whether Art. 261 (3) of the Constitution affords constitutional sanction to the execution of decrees of any Court within the territorial limits of India anywhere in India even if the judgments had been pronounced prior to the coming into force of the Constitution of India.

Thirdly — Whether apart from the provisions of Article 261 (3) have the decrees in Courts situate in what are now Part 'A' States become executable in Courts in Part 'B' States by reason of change in the status of the judgment-debtor from that of foreigner to that of national of India.

Fourthly — Assuming that the decrees will not become executable merely by reason of the coming into force of the Constitution and change in the status of the judgment-debtor by reason of the Legislative hindrance due to the existence of two different Civil Procedure Codes the two States, one in which the decree was passed (which has now become Part 'A' State) and one in which the decree is sought to be executed (which has now become Part 'B' State) will these decrees become executable by reason of the passing of the Amending Act No. II of 1951 on 1-4-1951.

Will this Act have retrospective operation in the sense that this Act will apply to the execution applications in respect of decrees passed prior to the coming into force of the Constitution?

(32) As regards the first question it is clear from the discussion of the question in — 'AIR 1951 Bom 125 (FB) (A)', with which I respectfully agree, that the judgments pronounced by foreign Courts against non-residents foreigners are not absolute nullities in the sense that they are void from their inception. They are valid and binding in the country of the forum which passed them and are executable there until they are satisfied or become barred by the operation of statute of limitation or otherwise become inoperative. In this Full Bench case his Lordship Chagla C. J. has explained the phrase 'absolute nullity' used by their Lordships of the Privy Council in — 'Gurdial Singh v. Raja of Faridkot', 21 Ind App 171 (PC) (E), thus:

"Therefore the decree is not an absolute nullity. Something which is an absolute nullity can never be enforced in any part of the world under any circumstances. But the Privy Council itself contemplates that such a decree can be enforced in the forum by which it was passed provided special local legislation authorises that forum, and therefore in one sense the decree is a nullity in a limited sense. The other way of putting the same idea is that the decree is a valid decree, but it is not enforceable in Courts other than Courts where it was passed by reason of private international law. Therefore, once the position is made clear that the decree is not an absolute nullity, but merely there is an impediment in the way of its being executed, then no difficulty arises in coming to the conclusion to which, again with respect very rightly, Rajadhyaksha J. and Shah J. came."

(33) I will now consider the second of the aforesaid questions. Article 261 of the Constitution of India lays down:

"261 (1) Full faith and credit shall be given throughout the 'territory of India' to public acts, records and judicial proceedings of the 'Union' and by every 'State'.

(2) The manner in which and conditions under which the acts, records and proceedings referred to in Clause (1) shall be proved and effect thereof determined shall be as provided by law made by Parliament.

(3) Final judgments or orders delivered or passed by Civil Courts in any part of the 'territory of India' shall be capable of execution anywhere within that territory according to law."

(34) Now the word 'Union' in this is meant Union of State (India) of Bharat and the word 'State' means Part A, Part B or Part C State.

(35) Before the Constitution of India came into force there was no such thing as 'Union' or Part A, B and C States. Therefore, when under Art. 261 (1) 'Full faith and credit' clause is introduced it has necessary reference to the period subsequent to the introduction of the Constitution and not to the earlier one.

(36) You cannot conceive of public acts, records and judicial proceedings of the Union unless the union itself came into existence and so is the case of a 'State'.

(37) Clause (3) again provides for execution of final judgments or orders of Civil Courts in any part of the territory of India and lays down that these will be capable of execution anywhere within the territory of India.

(38) Now territory of India is defined thus:

"Article 1 (3)

The territory of India shall comprise

(a) the territories of the States

(b) territories specified in Part D of First Schedule

(c) Such other territories as may be acquired."

(39) The term 'States' is defined as the States specified in Part A, B and C in the First Schedule.

(40) Now Courts in any part of the territory of India will be Courts in existence after the coming into force of the Constitution. The Courts existing and functioning prior to that would be Courts of different political entities such as Madhya Bharat or Holkar State, Gwalior State, Bombay State or Province etc. They would be Courts of respective territories of those States within those territories but by no means within the territories of India because India as understood in this Clause was not in existence.

(41) This view is fully supported by the decision of the Supreme Court reported in — 'AIR 1951 SC 124 (C)'. Question there was regarding the entertainability of application for special leave to appeal to Supreme Court against a decision given by Hyderabad High Court on 12th, 13th and 14th December 1949.

(42) Before this, on 23-11-1949 Nizam of Hyderabad issued a 'firman' whereby he declared that the proposed Constitution of India was suitable for the Government of Hyderabad as one of the Part B States.

(43) The Constitution of India became therefore applicable to Hyderabad on 26-1-1950 and it became one of the Part B States under the Constitution of India. The question before the Supreme Court was whether the judgment passed by Hyderabad High Court on 12th, 13th and 14th December 1949 was the judgment of a Court within the territory of India and it was held in the negative. The reason given was that the territory of Government of H. E. H. the Nizam was never the territory of India till 26-1-1950 and therefore the judgment passed by the Hyderabad High Court on 12th, 13th and 14th December 1949 cannot be considered as judgment of Court within the territory of India and on that ground special leave to appeal was refused as Art. 136(1) of the Constitution of India was held inapplicable.

(44) From this it is clear that Art. 261 (3) cannot be availed of for the purpose of pressing an application of execution in the territory now forming part of Part B States where the final judgments of which the execution is sought was given by a Court in the territory now forming part of Part A States prior to 26-1-1950.

(45) This view has been taken in — 'AIR 1952 Mys 69 (D)'.

(46) Taking the third question for consideration we now consider whether, by reason of change in the status of the judgment-debtor from that of a foreigner to that of a national of India, the decree against him became executable. This question will depend upon whether there are more than one obstacles in the matter of execution. When an ex parte decree is pronounced by a foreign Court competent to do so according to the domestic law of the country of the Court pronouncing it against a non-resident foreigner it is nullity by private international law and such a foreign judgment cannot be enforced even by a suit based on it although it is good in the country of the Court which passed it. When the two countries cease to be foreign there is no basis for applying private international law and the decrees would be executable if there is no legislative hindrance according to the laws in force. Some times this second obstacle exists as in the present cases.

(47) In spite of the fact that after 26-1-1950 judgment-debtor ceased to be a foreigner in the international sense he continued to be a foreigner for the applicability of private international law by reason of definition of foreign Court and foreign judgment under the Civil Procedure Code applicable in the territory where the decree is sought to be executed. The Civil Procedure Code is accepted as good law, until changed, by the Constitution under Art. 372 of the Constitution. The result is that as long as the two Civil Procedure Codes applicable in the two territories i.e. Part A and B States were different the ex parte decree of one could not be executed against the resident of another who had not submitted to the jurisdiction of the Court pronouncing it. This result follows not because we apply private international law because of the status of the judgment-debtor as a foreigner but by reason of legislative fiction by which he is reckoned to be so.

(48) From what has been discussed above, it is clear that when this political merger of two countries took place at least one of the bars existing in execution of the decrees is removed, one existing by reason of the countries being different. But as long as the Civil Procedure Codes which cover the subject of execution of decrees continued to be different there remained an internal bar by the existence of a valid legislation binding upon all and the decrees could not be executed.

(49) This aspect is accepted even in the earlier Bombay case reported in — 'AIR 1951 Bom 190 (B)', wherein Shah J. in Para. 30 says as follows: "Now, it is true that prior to 28-7-1948 the Civil Procedure Code as passed by the Jamkhandi State was applicable to the State territory. That Civil Procedure Code was in terms the same as the Civil Procedure Code, Act V (5) of 1908, of British India as amended till 1914, with this alteration that the expression 'British India' whenever it occurred in the latter Code was substituted by the expression 'Jamkhandi State'. However for all practical purposes there were two separate Codes of Civil Procedure of two different States."

(50) In order to fully appreciate points underlying the present question it will be useful to deal with the aforesaid Bombay case in somewhat detail.

(51) The facts of this case were that an ex parte decree was passed by Belgaum Court which was in the Province of Bombay forming part of British India against a person who was the subject of Jamakhindi State. When the decree was initially sought to be executed in 1940 it was a foreign Court and execution was sought on the strength of reciprocity arrangement (Section 44, Civil P. C.) between Government of Bombay and Jamakhindi State. This execution petition was dismissed by District Judge, Jamakhindi on 10-3-1948 on the ground that this was an ex parte decree against a non-resident foreigner who had not submitted to the jurisdiction of the Court which passed the decree viz., Belgaum Court and therefore a nullity by international law.

(52) This case was then taken in appeal to the High Court of Bombay. There it was heard by a Division Bench consisting of Rajadhyaksha and Shah JJ. both of whom decided upon its executability by the Jamakhindi Court.

(53) The line of reasoning adopted by both the learned Judges was that:

1. The decree passed by Belgaum Court on 11-3-1938 was good and operative within the limits of British India as Belgaum Court by the Municipal laws of British India of which Belgaum formed part was authorised under S. 20 of Indian Civil Procedure Code 1908 to pass a judgment against a non-resident foreigner.

2. It was invalid and unexecutable or 'absolute nullity' by private international law for the purpose of any place beyond British India and therefore so far as the territory of Jamakhindi State was concerned upto a certain date i.e., till the two States were separate, it was invalid.

3. When Jamakhindi State acceded to India and Raja Sahib of Jamakhindi executed an agreement some time prior to 25-2-1948 transferring his sovereignty in favour of Central Government, Jamakhindi ceased to be a foreign territory and Court in Jamakhindi ceased to be a foreign Court. Therefore when on 10-3-1948 the Court of Jamakhindi passed order refusing execution it was not a foreign Court but a Court constituted or continued by the Government of India. Both the Belgaum Court and Jamakhindi Court were Courts of the same State (vide Shah J. page 202, Para. 30); consequently Jamakhindi Court was bound to execute it.

4. Even assuming that before the application of Indian Civil Procedure Code to Jamakhindi territory on 28-7-48 by the Indian States Application of Laws Order 1948 for the first time, Jamakhindi Court was a foreign Court qua Belgaum Court till that date and so on 10-3-1948 the Court can take into account subsequent events and grant relief accordingly if it is expedient to do so in the interest of justice and to shorten litigation.

(54) It was conceded in this case that if fresh execution were levied the decree would be executable.

(55) It appears from the judgment of both the learned Judges that they were not unwilling to hold:

"1. Till 28-7-1948 i.e., till the Indian States (Application of Laws) Order came into force Jamakhindi Court was a foreign Court vis-a-vis Belgaum Court.

2. The decree of Belgaum Court therefore could not be executed in Jamakhindi territory till that date and the order passed by the lower Court on 10-3-1948 might be said to be correct."

But they held that on 28-7-1948 the Jamakhindi C. P. C. was repealed and Indian C. P. C. was applied. Clause (6) of the Order saved the jurisdiction of local Courts for the purpose of proceedings then pending before the Courts.

(56) Now till 1-4-1951, Civil Procedure Code applicable to Madhya Bharat defined in S. 2 (5) foreign Court as a Court situate beyond the territory of Madhya Bharat and foreign judgment meant a judgment of a foreign Court thus defined. Therefore till that date the decrees of Bijnaur or Muradabad Courts were unexecutable in Madhya Bharat.

(57) This sort of allocation of jurisdiction creating exclusiveness under the same sovereign, in the sense in which it is understood, where territories are different can be seen as in the case of British India, England and other countries under British Crown.

(58) In — '21 Ind App 171 (PC) (E)', it is said at page 185:

"As between different provinces under one sovereignty (e.g. under the Roman Empire) the legislation of the sovereign may distribute and regulate jurisdiction; but no territorial legislation can give jurisdiction which any foreign Court ought to recognise against foreigners who owe no allegiance or obedience to the Power which so legislates."

(59) This brings us to the fourth question. What is the effect of passing of Act No. 2 of 1951 by which Indian Civil Procedure Code, 1908 was extended to Part B States and the definitions of foreign Court and foreign judgment were modified?

(60) Will the decrees now be executable by applying this newly applied Civil Procedure Code? This will depend upon the question whether this is likely to affect vested rights. In case it does, new Civil P. C. cannot be applied but if no vested rights are affected by the repeal of Indian Civil Procedure Code, Angikaran Vidhan (Madhya Bharat) and applying the new Act then the new law will apply.

(61) According to Mysore case reported in—'AIR 1952 Mys 69 (D)', vested rights are affected by the repeal. This matter is very briefly touched in the Mysore case by stating that the Amending Act No. 2 of 1951 cannot have retrospective operation. It seems there to have been assumed that the question as regards execution of duly obtained decree in a territory within which it was not executable before the Amending Act would necessarily affect vested rights.

(62) In Bombay cases emphasis is laid on the fact that it is not by reason of the repeal of any law that the decrees became executable but by reason of change in the status. But the judgment clearly indicates that if the execution is held permissible that does not affect vested rights.

(63) It was urged by Mr. Rege for the judgment-debtor in Civil Second Appeal No. 291 of 1951 before us that a man has a vested right that a decree passed by a Court of another country shall not affect him until he goes there and that beyond those territorial limits he has got an immunity. It is difficult to agree with this. It is difficult to conceive of a vested right that a concluded and binding judgment will only be enforceable within certain geographical limits not capable of extension by any political events. In fact the existence of territorial limitations in the enforcement is attributable to the inability of the sovereign to enforce them beyond those limits and do not touch the rights of parties.

(64) A converse case is reported in — 'Dominion of India v. Hiralal', AIR 1950 Cal 12 (F), where a decree of what was before the division of India and Pakistan a decree of a domestic Court now situated in Pakistan was after the division sought to be executed in India. It was held that the decree cannot be executed straightway.

(65) Executability of a binding judgment within a certain territory is a matter not affecting vested right of a judgment-debtor because he cannot be said to have acquired a vested right not to have the decree executed beyond certain territorial limits. This is a matter that affects procedure in enforcement. For this reason, it is the Act No. 2 of 1951 that should be made applicable and not the Madhya Bharat Act which it repeals.

(66-67) The Mysore case dissents from the Bombay view because as the learned Judge Vasudevamurthy J. puts it:

"The Bombay cases do not in my opinion recognise the cardinal principle by which ex parte decrees were not being allowed to be executed by the Courts of another."

At another place, the same learned Judge says:

"With great respect to learned Judges who decided the two Bombay cases I think the way in which this question has to be approached is to see whether such decrees, 'which when passed were according to international law nullities' in the foreign State where they were to be enforced, have by reason of any subsequent change in the status either of the native State or of its former subject becomes executable."

The other learned Judge Venkataramayya J. observes in Para. 19 of the judgment as follows when dealing with the aforesaid Bombay cases:

"This limitation with respect to execution 'is considered' to have been removed and decrees freed from being foreign 'by the Constitution' so as to render them executable as that of a Court in the 'territory of India'."

In Para. 20 the same Judge observes:

"There is no reference in the decisions relied upon to Article 261 of the Constitution of India which expressly provides for execution of decrees passed in Courts within the Union."

(68) I think with great respect to the Judges of Mysore High Court the view thus expressed by them regarding the Bombay decisions is difficult to appreciate.

(69) On reading the Bombay decisions, it becomes clear that they do not fail "to recognise the cardinal principle by which such foreign ex parte decrees were not being allowed to be executed by Court of another."

(70) Nor can the approach to question of execution under the circumstances of Bombay cases be considered erroneous.

(71) The Bombay cases make no reference to Constitution nor do they assume that it is by reason of the Constitution of India that the decrees become executable. They nowhere hold that the phrase 'the territory of India' has to be construed to have retrospective operation. As the facts in those cases stood, it was unnecessary to make a reference to the Constitution or Art. 261 (3). The Bombay decisions do not take their stand on Art. 261 (3) of the Constitution.

(72) On the whole therefore I generally agree with the line of reasoning adopted in Bombay cases; principle of which can now be extended to the present cases.

(73) The decrees in these cases are not absolute nullities. They are good. They were not executable in Madhya Bharat till 1-4-1951 but after this they became executable as no vested right is likely to be affected and although when the order was passed it may be good no useful purpose will be served by holding that the decrees are now executable without affording relief on the changed circumstances. As the substantial points arising in these cases are covered by the Bombay and Mysore decisions referred to above it is unnecessary to refer to other cases which follow the one or the other of these lines of reasoning.

(74) One more point deserves some reference and that is in case such executions are permitted it will lead to obvious prejudice. When a foreign Court is dealing with a cause a party who is non-resident foreigner is entitled to take no notice if he is sure that he has no earthly reason to go within the territorial limits of the country of that forum and if he does so and a judgment is passed 'in absentum' why should he not be afforded a chance to meet the case which he had no reason to meet before? This may be a good reason for the Legislature to make a positive law to relieve likely hardship if any and not for Courts to consider it.

(75) The result is that Civil Second Appeal No. 291 of 1951 is dismissed with costs and the execution application is ordered to proceed.

(76) Civil Miscellaneous Appeal No. 33 of 1951 is allowed with costs and the order of the lower Court dismissing the execution application is set aside and the execution is allowed to continue.

(77) SHINDE C. J.: I am in entire agreement. A/V.R.B. Order accordingly.

AIR 1953 M. B. 230 (Vol. 40, C. N. 86)
(INDORE BENCH)

NEVASKAR J.

N. K. Chitnis, Applicant v. State through Factory Inspector, Indore, Opponent.

Criminal Revn. Nos. 53 to 57 of 1952, D/-7-4-1953.

(a) Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 439 — Conviction proceeding on plea of guilty — No question of legality or extent of sentence involved — Revision will not be entertained.

(Para 9)

Anno: Cr. P. C., S. 439 N. 9.

(b) Factories Act (1948), Ss. 51, 52 and 92 — Prosecution in respect of each worker.

By reading Ss. 51, 52 and 92 together, a contravention in respect of each worker in a factory and not in respect of a factory considered as a unit has been made punishable under S. 92.

(Para 14)

D. G. Bhalerao, for Applicant; N. H. Dravid and P. R. Sharma, Govt. Advocate, for the State.

CASE CITED:

(A) ('21) AIR 1921 Bom 322(1): 21 Cri LJ 728

ORDER: These are five revision petitions in five different cases arising out of convictions of Mr. N. K. Chitnis, Engineer and Manager, Hukumchand Mills Ltd., Indore for offences under Ss. 51 and 52 of Indian Factories Act No. LXIII of 1948 as applied to Madhya Bharat. He was sentenced to pay a fine of Rs. 150/- in respect of each of the offences aforesaid in each case.

(2) Appeals preferred against this decision of Additional City Magistrate, Indore, who was the trying Magistrate, were dismissed by the Sessions Judge, Indore.

(3) The accused has preferred these five different revision petitions to this Court and they are all being heard and disposed of together by a single judgment as the question involved in all of them is the same.

(4) The facts which gave rise to the present prosecutions are undisputed. They are that on 15th of May 1951, Factory Inspector inspected the said Mills and he found that the said Mill continued to work for over an unbroken period of 10 days i.e. from 27th April 1951 to 8th May 1951 in its five departments of warping, winding, sizing, folding and dyeing and the workers therein were required to work contrary to the provisions of Ss. 51 and 52(1)(a) of the Indian Factories Act, 1948 as applied to Madhya Bharat by being made to work for more than 48 hours a week and for being made to work for over an unbroken period of 10 days.

(5) He therefore submitted five different complaints one in respect of each of the departments, wherein the transgression took place, in respect of workers working therein, against the petitioner Mr. N. K. Chitnis the Manager of the said Mills among others.

(6) The accused submitted a written statement. He was asked whether he pleaded guilty in each case whereupon he admitted the guilt and acting on his plea of guilty the accused was convicted in each of the cases and was sentenced to pay a fine of Rs. 150/- in respect of each of the two charges in each case.

(7) The accused preferred an appeal and ordinarily no appeal would have lain against the conviction except as to the extent or legality of the sentence. The appeals however were entertained and dismissed by the Sessions Judge after repelling the contention raised on behalf of the accused that conviction could only be had in one case in respect of the entire factory (Mills) considered as a unit and not in respect of each of the departments of the said factory.

(8) The accused has preferred these revision petitions against his conviction in all the five cases and it is prayed that the conviction should only be confined to one case and in the rest of the cases the accused be acquitted.

(9) If no offence is legally made out on the prosecution case taken at its highest then perhaps revision petitions can be entertained but where such is not the case it is difficult to entertain petition for revision where conviction proceeds on a plea of guilty and no question of legality or extent of sentences is involved.

(10) The point urged by Mr. Bhalerao for the petitioner is that having regard to the wording of S. 92 on which the conviction is based the contravention which is made penal is in respect of the factory treated as a single unit and this Section cannot be used distributively in respect of the cases of individual workers or cases of different departments. In this connection, he brought to my notice provision of S. 4 of the Act which authorises the State Government to direct by an order in writing that different departments or branches of a specified factory shall be treated as separate factory or for all or any of the purposes of the Act and as in this case no such thing is done different departments of the factory cannot be treated as a separate factory and the Manager of the Factory i.e. the Mill cannot be held guilty separately for each of the departments of the Mills. He further brought to my notice the provisions in the earlier Act where the penal provision is differently worded and it is laid down that the transgression of the provisions of the Act in respect of the individual workers was penal.

(11) On giving careful thought to the contentions raised by the learned counsel I am inclined to hold that having regard to the provisions of Ss. 51 and 52 read with S. 92 of the Indian Factories Act there is hardly any material departure in the earlier provisions and those in the present Act pertaining to the point involved in these cases.

(12) Section 51 lays down:

that no adult worker shall be required to work in a factory for more than forty-eight hours in a week.

(13) Section 52(1)(a) lays down:

that no adult worker shall be required to work in a factory on the first day (Sunday) of the week unless he has or will have a holiday for a whole day on one of the three days immediately before or after the said day.

(14) Section 92 lays down (omitting portion not material for the present purpose):

If in, or in respect of any factory there is any contravention of any of the provisions of the Act the Manager of the factory shall be guilty of an offence and punishable with imprisonment for the term which may extend to three months or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees or with both.

Thus by reading these three Sections together a contravention in respect of each worker in a factory has been made punishable under S. 92 and the use of the words "in respect of the factory" cannot have the effect of confining it to the cases not of individuals but of factory considered as a unit.

(15) In this case, no doubt the complaints, fortunately for the Mills, are confined to individual department and one prosecution for all the workers in that department. But cases can be conceived where a prosecution can be made in respect of each individual worker to whatever department he belongs.

(16) The case reported in — 'Vrijvallubdas Jaikisondas v. Emperor', AIR 1921 Bom. 322 (1) (A), indicates possibility of such a thing and if that case is correctly decided, as I feel it is, then there cannot be any doubt that convictions in these cases cannot be challenged as unsustainable.

(17) Moreover the convictions proceed upon the plea of guilty and since no question regarding the sustainability of conviction is involved revision petitions will be incompetent.

(18) They are therefore dismissed.

A/V.R.B.

Petitions dismissed.

A. I. R. 1953 M.B. 231 (Vol. 40, C. N. 87)
(GWALIOR BENCH)

CHATURVEDI AND NEVASKAR, JJ.

Jiyajirao Cotton Mills Ltd., Applicant v. The Chairman Industrial Court, Madhya Bharat, and another, Opponents.

Civil Misc. Case No. 605 of 1951, D/- 24-3-1953.

(a) Bombay Industrial Relations Act, (11 of 1947), (as adapted in M. B. State), S. 73A — S. 73A is not discriminatory within scope of Constitution of India, Art. 14.

Section 73A, Bombay Industrial Relations Act, 1947 (as adapted in Madhya Bharat State) does not amount to discrimination in the eye of the law and is, therefore, not within the inhibition of the equal protection clause contained in Art. 14 of the Constitution. (Paras 14, 16)

(b) Bombay Industrial Relations Act, (11 of 1947), Ss. 87 and 88 — Industrial Court is not Court of law.

Per Chaturvedi, J.: The Industrial Court, though called a Court, is not a Court of law but is only an arbitral tribunal; and 'arbitration' is a term which, taken by itself, connotes a process for the settlement of disputes by submitting them to the decision of an arbitrator or to the decision of arbitrators selected by the parties or accepted by them. The Industrial Court can in no way be restricted to legal points but it has to settle disputes on equitable considerations. 11 Com-W.L.R. 1; 11 Com-W.L.R. 311, Ref. (Paras 19, 21)

(c) Bombay Industrial Relations Act, (11 of 1947), S. 73-A — Nature of right conferred by S. 73A.

Per Chaturvedi, J.: The right conferred on a representative union to make a reference to Industrial Court of a pending industrial dispute is not a substantive right. In fact, it is in the nature of a liability imposed on the union. Even if it be considered to be a right then it appears to be a mere right of procedure with regard to moving the arbitral tribunal. And, it is too well known that questions of procedure do not enter into or form the basis of fundamental right. (1877) 169 U. S. 557, Rel. on. (Para 22)

G. P. Patankar, for Applicant; K. A. Chitale, Advocate General, for Opponent No. 1.

CASES CITED:

- (A) ('51) AIR 1951 SC 41: ILR (1951) Hyd 461 (SC)
- (B) ('52) AIR 1952 SC 235: ILR (1952) Bom 995 (SC)
- (C) ('53) AIR 1953 SC 10: 1953 Cri LJ 180 (SC)
- (D) (1909) 54 Law Ed. 536: 216 US 400
- (E) ('53) AIR 1953 SC 91: 1953 SCR 404 (SC)
- (F) 11 Com-WLR 1
- (G) 11 Com-WLR 311
- (H) 40 Sc LR 265
- (I) (1877) 42 Law Ed 853: 169 US 557

NEVASKAR J.: This is a petition under Art. 226 of the Constitution by the petitioner Jiyajirao Cotton Mills Ltd., Birla Nagar, Gwalior for the issue of a writ of prohibition & also one of certiorari or for any other suitable direction. The writ of prohibition is prayed for in order to prevent the Industrial Court of Madhya Bharat from proceeding with the reference made to it under S. 73A, Bombay Industrial Relations Act as applied to Madhya Bharat. The writ of certiorari is prayed for in order to secure the quashing of proceedings before that Court.

(2) The facts which gave rise to the present petition are that: A notice of change as contemplated under S. 42(2), Industrial Relations Act in force in this State and under R. 52 of the Rules thereunder, was given by the President Mazdoor Congress Gwalior to the Management of the petitioner Mill. This was dated 23-12-1950. This notice of change was based on the allegation that the clerical employees of the Mill were not granted bonus equal to 3 months basic salary as was granted to the other employees of the Mill.

After this notice of change was served upon the management the matter was referred for conciliation. It is alleged that while the proceedings before the Conciliator were still pending the President of the aforesaid Union of workers, which is a registered Union as contemplated under the Act applied for referring the matter to the Industrial Court under S. 73A of the aforesaid Act.

The Industrial Court entertained the reference and issued notice dated 16-2-1951 to the petitioner as required under the Act.

The petitioner appeared before the Industrial Court and contended that S. 73A under which the reference was purported to be made was ultra vires of Art. 14 of the Constitution. The reference was, therefore, bad in Law and inoperative and that that Court had no jurisdiction to proceed with such a reference.

The Industrial Court by its order dated 30-3-1951 overruled the objection on the ground that the 'Court was not a Civil Court and was therefore unable to pronounce on the constitutional question raised before it.'

It is after this that the petitioner has moved this Court.

(3) None of the parties submitted any returns. The only question which was raised before this Court was whether the provisions of S. 73(A), Bombay Industrial Relations (Adaptation) Act Madhya Bharat No. 31 Samvat 2006 is contrary to Art. 14 of the Constitution and is, therefore, void.

(4) It was contended by Mr. Patankar for the petitioner that the impugned provision of the Act is clearly contrary to Art. 14 of the Constitution as it places two persons or bodies belonging to the same category in different positions for, whereas if there is an industrial dispute it is open for a Registered Union which has in its rules a rule not to sanction a strike unless all methods of settlement were exhausted as provided in the Act & a majority of members vote by ballot in favour of such a strike, can make a reference so as to compel the employer to submit to an Arbitration by the Industrial Court. No such corresponding right is conferred upon the employer to enable it to make a reference upon the existence of the Industrial dispute & he has to rest content and face the ordeal until the Government chooses to make such a reference. This makes an invidious distinction between the employer and the employees who have formed themselves into a Registered Union of employees although having regard to the object of the Industrial Relations Act there is no reasonable basis for classification between them.

(5) Although both the employer and the Registered Union of employees, the counsel contended, belong to the same category for the purposes of the Act yet the employers are singled out for a discriminatory and hostile legislation. The counsel then cited three Supreme Court cases — 'Charanjit Lal v. Union of India', A. I. R. 1951 SC 41 (A); — 'Lachmandas Kewalram v. State of Bombay', AIR 1952 SC 235 (B) and — 'The State of Punjab v. Ajaib Singh', AIR 1953 SC 10 (C). On the basis of these authorities the counsel sought to deduce the following propositions: Firstly — Classification sought to be made in a legislative provision must be based on intelligible differentia which distinguish persons included within the group from those left out of the group. Secondly — The classification must bear a reasonable and just relation to the object sought to be achieved by the legislation.

(6) The object of the Act, urged the counsel, is to secure industrial peace and thereby to step up production for the good of the country and having regard to this object there is no reasonable basis for making a distinction between the employer and the employees and both are entitled to parity of treatment under the Act. This not being done this provision of the Act, viz. S. 73A is contrary to Art. 14 of the Constitution and is void.

(7) On the other hand the Advocate General, Madhya Bharat who appeared before us and represented the State contended that the classification made between the employer and the employees of a Registered Union has in its Constitution a rule not to resort to strike until all avenues of conciliation are exhausted and a majority of them decide by ballot to do so cannot be said to be arbitrary or unreasonable. The learned Advocate General traced the history regarding this branch of legislation and analysed various provisions of the Act to indicate general scope and object of this Act and from this he tried to indicate that the classification though apparently indicating inequality of treatment cannot be said to be arbitrary or unreasonable.

(8) Now it cannot be denied that the principle of collective bargaining has come to stay in the present stage of social development. In the process of collective bargaining the employees can within certain limits, resort to strikes thus paralysing the industries. The industries or the employer in order to counteract the force of a strike which may bring losses to the employer may themselves form into union of industries and act in a composite unit or may resort to victimization or may resort to lock-outs. The forces of evil may spring up creating condition of unrest, breach of peace both industrial and general.

In the present stage of the country's economy the evils resulting from strikes or lock-outs as weapons resorted to for trial of strength or for coercing the other party to give in may be very great and may give a considerable set-back to material progress of the country.

(9) In order to lessen the evil effect of this conflict which is inherent in the process of collective bargaining if it is allowed to operate unbridled the legislature has made various laws one of which is the Industrial Relations Act.

One of the objects of the Act is to secure Industrial peace and thereby step up production. Now this can be achieved by stimulating, amongst the employees the formation of Registered Unions, which will resort to strike only as a last resort after all possible avenues of conciliation and arbitration have failed. As long as it is possible both the industries and the employees must try to meet each other half way by avoiding unreasonable attitude and when maximum approach has been secured the remaining differences can then be ironed out either by conciliation or ultimately by arbitration.

Arbitration, by mutual agreement of reference, is provided. What is objected to is arbitration at the desire of one of the parties.

These are all matters of legislative sagacity with which the Courts of law are not expected to deal. Suffice to find that reasons for classification are conceivable which may bear reasonable and just relation to the object sought to be achieved by the provision.

(10) The experience must have shown that in the absence of some such provision tendency amongst the employees to resort to strike for enforcing their demands against the employer and the attitude of the employer not to bend down would continue unabated and unless this zeal for strike is channelled out by a healthier, more peaceful and rational method of settlement the evil could not be remedied. It is conceivable that the legislature must have seen that the employers have got whip-hand in many ways and the present provisions in their case of inducing the authorities to make a reference if the need arises, might be thought adequate, the urgency in their case being obviously less.

(11) There is no doubt that this provision which enables a Registered Union of employees of particular description as indicated above will have the salutary effect of stimulating formation of such Unions and of inducing them to have in their Constitution a rule not to resort to strikes except under the conditions laid down in the Act. This will tend to make them rational and peaceful in their demands.

(12) This may be one of the objects sought to be achieved. Many others can legitimately be conceived. Can it then be said that this classification is arbitrary or unreasonable or that it bears no reasonable and just relation to the object sought to be achieved by the Act?

(13) In the case of — 'AIR 1951 S. C. 41 at p. (58) (A)', Mukherjea J. said:

"The legislature undoubtedly has a wide field of choice in determining and classifying the subject of its law, and if the law deals alike with all of a certain class, it is normally not obnoxious to the charge of denial of equal protection; but the classification should never be arbitrary. It must always rest upon some real and substantial distinction bearing a reasonable and just relation to the things in respect to which the classification is made; and classification made without any substantial basis should be regarded as invalid. (See — 'Southern Railway Co. v. Green', (1909) 216 U. S. 400 at p. 412 (D)).

In a recent case — 'Ammeerunnissa Begum v. Mahboob Begum', AIR 1953 S. C. 91 at p. 94 (E) the same learned Judge has laid down:

"The nature and scope of the guarantee that is implied in the equal protection clause of the Constitution have been explained and discussed in more than one decision of this Court and do not require repetition. It is well settled that a Legislature which has to deal with diverse problems arising out of an infinite variety of human relation must, of necessity, have the power of making special laws to attain particular objects; and for that purpose it must have large powers of selection or classification of persons and things upon which such laws are to operate. Mere differentiation of inequality of treatment does not 'per se' amount to discrimination within the inhibition of the equal protection clause. To attract the operation of the clause it is necessary to show that the selection or differentiation is unreasonable or arbitrary that it does not rest on any rational basis having regard to the object which the Legislature has in view".

Thus no challenge can be based merely on the inequality of treatment.

(14) There is no doubt that the Legislature has made classification and therein included all the Registered Unions which have a rule of the sort indicated above in its Constitution and has conferred upon them this specific right.

In the group thus classified no inequality has been brought about and the law acts equally to all within the group. Nor can it be said that the employers who were left out of this group from reaping advantage of S. 73A have been so left out without any rhyme or reason.

As I have said above the employers may have a whip-hand in many ways but even beside it it is conceivable that even inducing the Union of employers to form into Registered Unions of the sort contemplated in S. 73A may in itself be sufficient basis for the classification though other reasons may possibly exist.

(15) On the whole I am inclined to hold that S. 73A, Industrial Relations Act cannot be said to run counter to Article 14 of the Constitution. It is somewhat significant that this provision viz, Section 73A has been on the statute book in the State of Bombay for over three years after the Constitution of India came into being and yet the counsel for the petitioner has not been able to bring to our notice any case from the High Court of that State where this provision was successfully challenged on the grounds urged by him.

As no other basis of challenge is put forth there is no force left in this petition. It is dismissed with costs to the Government. The counsel's fee be taxed at Rs. 100/-.

(16) CHATURVEDI J.: I agree with my learned brother Nevaskar J. that S. 73A, Bombay Industrial Relations Act, 1947 (as adapted in Madhya Bharat State) cannot amount to discrimination in the eye of the law and is, therefore, not within the inhibition of the equal protection clause of the Constitution. The aforesaid S. 73A (without the proviso which is not material here) runs as follows:

"Notwithstanding anything contained in this Act, a registered union which is a representative of employees and the rules of which provide for the matter specified in cl. (vi) of sub-s. (1) of S. 23, may at any time refer any industrial dispute for arbitration to the Industrial Court".

Section 23 deals with "approved unions" and cl. (vi) of sub-s. (1) lays down that no strike shall be sanctioned or resorted to by the said union unless all methods provided by or under this Act for the settlement of an industrial dispute have been exhausted and the majority of its members vote by ballot in favour of such strike.

(17) Section 73A is a later addition in the Act, as it was inserted by S. 13 of the Bombay Act 43 of 1948. Mr. Patankar, learned counsel for the petitioner, urges that inasmuch as a registered union has been empowered to refer any industrial dispute for arbitration to the Industrial Court and the employers have not been so empowered to refer such a dispute to the Industrial Court, there is inequality of treatment. The argument would have been cogent if there had been only two ordinary private litigants and if one of them had been given a legal right to approach a Court of law for the decision of the dispute and the other had been denied that right. I shall hereafter attempt to show that such is not the position. The argument of the learned counsel, it appears, overlooks the very object of the enactment which is the preservation or restoration of industrial peace. The Act has been entitled "the Bombay Industrial Relations Act" and is intended to regulate the entire relations of the employers and the employees and its aim is not confined simply to determine differences between an employer and his employees. The arbitration of the Industrial Court was made compulsory in the interest of the whole general population to avert disastrous industrial disorganisation. From the standpoint of the Act, the immediate combatants are not necessarily the chief objects of regards. Though a strike, for example, entails severe loss to the employers and the employees while it lasts, it is the non-combatants, the rest of the community, who after all suffer most. Except to protect the general public dependent upon the peaceful and orderly continuance of industries there could have been no legal or moral warrant for state control of any industrial-quarrel. The employees and the employers both had formidable weapons e. g. the strike and lock-out, in their hands, for carrying out their economic warfare; but it was realised that the settlement of industrial disputes in some more humane and reasonable way than by strike or lock-out, with the disturbance of industrial conditions, the bitterness, the cruel consequences to the weak and helpless, the dislocation of trade, the monetary loss to the community, which those crude methods involved was more a matter of national than of private concern.

The machinery of the Bombay Industrial Relations Act is therefore directed to arresting the disease before the unrest and commotion have taken the usual deplorable form of a strike or a lock-out, with all the attendant miseries. The prevention and settlement of industrial warfare is the end marked out for attainment, and, conciliation and arbitration are the designed means to that end. Conciliation first, and if that fails, arbitration must be attempted before the weapons of strike and lock-out are taken in hand. If the voluntary settlement first attempted proves impossible, the Act enjoins upon a tribunal to proceed to the compulsory settlement. The provisions embodied in Sections 72 and 73, Bombay Industrial Relations Act enable the State Government to refer an industrial dispute at any time to compulsory arbitration irrespective of the consent of the parties. Under S. 72 the Government can refer any industrial dispute to the arbitration of a Labour Court or the Industrial Court; but under S. 73 the Government can refer an industrial dispute to the arbitration only of the Industrial Court if it is satisfied that, by reason of the continuance of the dispute, a serious outbreak of disorder or a breach of the public peace is likely to occur, or serious or prolonged hardship to a large section of the community is likely to be caused; or the industry concerned is not likely to be seriously affected or the dispute is not likely to be settled by other means, or, when it is necessary in the public interest to do so. It will be seen that these are wide powers vested in the Government, on behalf of the non-combatants, and in the interest of industrial peace, to arrest the disease by referring an industrial dispute to the arbitration of the Industrial Court. If the employers foresee any trouble, (about any strike or disorder) they can approach the State Government and move it for taking action under this section. Though the powers of the Government are wide enough in this respect still it may happen sometime that Government may not get the requisite information before a strike is declared by a registered union.

In order to provide for this contingency, and, as a measure of precaution only, in 1948, by virtue of S. 73A, a registered union was also enabled to refer any industrial dispute for arbitration to the Industrial Court. The section confers no privilege on the union but further curtails its right to declare a strike. It is to my mind a liability imposed upon a registered union. Lock-outs may not have been considered so bad or so frequent as strikes by unions and so before declaring lock-outs the employers are not required to refer an industrial dispute to the arbitration of the Industrial Court. If lock-outs had been more frequent a similar provision would have been inserted in the Act for preventing employers declaring lock-out before exhausting every other method of settling a dispute. But as it is, the right of the employers to lock-out their employees in order to compel them to accept certain harsh conditions remains, to a certain extent, uncurtailed. There is nothing to prevent the legislature to undertake this legislation in future as soon as lock-outs become frequent and cause anxiety. The inequality, if it can be so called, in the treatment, cannot be said to be palpably unreasonable and arbitrary but bears a reasonable and just relation to the facts as they exist. The varying needs of the employers and the employees required separate treatment and the discrimination is founded on an intelligible differential which has a rational relation to the object of preservation or restoration of industrial peace sought to be achieved by the Industrial Relations Act.

(18) We have, however, arrived at this decision on the basis of the arguments addressed to us.

But I feel, I should make it clear that Mr. Patankar's arguments involved certain misconception about two important points.

(19) Firstly, he assumed that the Industrial Court is a Court of Law. It is important to bear in mind that though it is called a Court it is not a Court of law but is only an arbitral tribunal; and 'arbitration' is a term which, taken by itself, connotes a process for the settlement of dispute by submitting them to the decision of an arbitrator or to the decision of arbitrators selected by the parties or accepted by them. Both the parties surrender their rights to reach a Court of law and desire that the arbitrator or arbitrators should make an agreement for them by which they mutually consent beforehand to be bound. The range, then, of the authority of the arbitrator, if the submission is wide enough, is co-extensive with the powers of the parties to settle their disputes without him. Whatever they can lawfully agree to, he may lawfully award. And it is also important to note that there is no substantial difference between a voluntary arbitration and a compulsory arbitration. I am fortified in this view by certain observations of their Lordships of the High Court of Australia in —The King v. The Commonwealth Court of Conciliation and Arbitration and the President thereof & The Boot Trade Employee's Federation Ex Parte Whybrow & Co., 11 Com-W LR 1 (F), and in —the Australian Boot Trade Employee's Federation v. Whybrow and Co., 11 Com-W LR 311 (G). Though the powers and the functions of the Commonwealth Court of Conciliation and Arbitration differ considerably from our Industrial Court and there is also no unanimity of opinion on the points pressed in the cases adverted to above, still I have derived considerable help from the general observations of certain learned Judges on the nature of proceedings in an arbitral tribunal.

(20) 'Arbitration' is defined by Lord Trayner in —McMillen & Son Ltd. v. Rowan and Co., 40 Sc. L. R. 265 at p. 267 (H), in the following words: "An agreement to submit to arbitration simply means that the parties have agreed to have their differences determined otherwise than by a Court of law, but does not even suggest whether the Court they have chosen for themselves shall consist of one member or many or how many members."

The essence of the matter, then, is that the differences are to be decided otherwise than by a Court of law.

(21) The term 'arbitration' then, has expanded in meaning during the last century so as to include methods and principles of adjudication, differing in many respects from those connoted by the term as known to the Common Law. It is abundantly clear that, in many enactments, it has been used in Great Britain and other countries of the Commonwealth of Nations during the last hundred years by arbitral tribunals, resort to which was compulsory, and in the constitution of which the disputants had no choice. The numerous enactments in force, while maintaining the method of arbitration, have made partial and successive inroads into the principle of voluntariness and they are decisive of the position that the term 'arbitration' does not connote a possible choice of arbitrators. In the face of these enactments, it is impossible to maintain that arbitration ceases to be arbitration unless it retains its voluntary character. And when we have regard to the use of this word in connection with the settlement of industrial dispute, it becomes still plainer that there is well recognised use of the word as describing permanent public arbitral tribunals for settlement of industrial disputes, constituted not by choice of the parties, but by public authority. Even when the tribunal has been appointed by law instead of the parties, and even if the submission has been compulsory instead of voluntary, it is significant to note that the Industrial Court under the provisions of the Bombay Industrial Relations Act is a tribunal which is bound to settle trade disputes by way of arbitration and by no other method. It follows that it can in no way be restricted to legal points but it has to settle disputes on equitable considerations; and according to S. 63 the proceedings in arbitration under Chap. II of the Act are to be in accordance with the provisions of the Arbitration Act 1940, in so far as they are applicable. It will thus be manifest that the very basis of Mr. Patankar's arguments that the Industrial Court is a Court of law is not sound.

(22) Then, secondly, Mr. Patankar thought that the right conferred on a representative union to make a reference to Industrial Court of a pending industrial dispute is a substantive right. This too does not appear to be sound. I have already taken the view that it is in the nature of a liability imposed on the union. Even if it be considered to be a right then it appears to be a mere right of procedure with regard to moving the arbitral tribunal, and, it is too well known that questions of procedure do not enter into or form the basis of fundamental right. All that is essential is that in a recognised way, inquiry shall be made into the dispute, &, that the employer or employees will be heard about the way in which the dispute is to be settled. As the tribunal is bound to settle dispute by way of arbitration the essential rights of the employers are already safeguarded. As observed in —A. Backus, Jr. and Jone v. Fort Street Union Depot Co., (1877) 169 U. S. 557: 42 Law Ed 853 at p. 859 Col. 2 (I) there is no vested right in a mode of procedure. Each succeeding legislature may establish a different one, provided only that in each is preserved the essential elements of protection. In this American case the respondents had alleged that they were entitled to a trial by jury of inquiry; but had been forced to trial by a common law jury presided over and controlled by a circuit judge. The Supreme Court of Michigan State had upheld this procedure and had changed its previous decision. It was held by the Supreme Court of U. S. A. that it was a question about a matter of procedure and therefore the adjudication of the Supreme Court of a State could not be set aside as an unjust discrimination or a denial of the equal protection of the laws merely because it had changed its previous decision. The question whether a legislature could prescribe a different mode of procedure than that which had been existing was considered and Brewer J. who delivered the judgment of the Supreme Court of U. S. A., observed as follows:

"An Act of the legislature which in terms gave to one individual certain rights and denied to another similarly situated the same rights might be challenged on the ground of unjust discrimination and a denial of the equal protection of the laws. But that does not prevent a legislature, which has established a certain rule of procedure and continued it in force for years, from subsequently repealing the Act and establishing an entirely different mode of procedure. In other words, there is no absolute right vested in the individual as against the power of the legislature to change modes of procedure."

If an existing mode of procedure in a Court of law can be altered by the legislature, it has also the power to alter the mode of procedure in an arbitral tribunal, and, I am clear in my mind that this alteration cannot be challenged on the ground of denial of the equal protection of the laws.

(23) Considering the question from every point of view, I am of opinion that the petition must fail and therefore I agree with the order proposed by my learned brother.

A/V.S.B.

Petition dismissed.

A. I. R. 1953 M. B. 236 (Vol. 40, C. N. 88)

(GWALIOR BENCH)

SHINDE C. J. AND DIXIT J.

Mahendra Bahadur Singh, Applicant v. State of Madhya Bharat and another; Opponents.

Civil Misc. Case No. 1 of 1953, D/- 9-4-1953.

(a) Arms Act (1878), S. 2 — Commencement in Part B States — (Part B States (Laws) Act (3 of 1951), S. 3) — (General Clauses Act (1897), S. 5).

Arms Act came into force in the State of Madhya Bharat on 1-4-1951.

Section 3 of Act 3 of 1951 amends the Acts and Ordinances specified in the Schedule to that Act as they existed at the time of the enactment of Act 3 of 1951 & if, therefore, at that time any of the Acts or Ordinances mentioned in the Schedule (Arms Act (1878), being one of them) having already come into force was in an active and not in a dormant state, then the extension of such an Act or Ordinance to a new territory or area would necessarily imply that the Act or Ordinance has been brought into force in the area or territory to which it has been extended.

The Arms Act which had already become effective at the time of the amendment in its extant clause by S. 3 of Act 3 of 1951, is effective also in the Part B States to which it has now been extended by the amendment, from 1-4-1951. No fresh notification under S. 2, Arms Act was necessary. (Paras 5, 6)

Anno: Gen. Clauses Act, S. 5, N. 1.

(b) Arms Act (1878), Ss. 14, 16 — Sections are not unconstitutional and void on ground that they infringe fundamental rights — (Constitution of India, Arts. 19(1)(b), (f), 19 (5) and 31).

The restriction put on the right of assembly by Art. 19(1), (b) does not import in Art. 19(1), (f) an unrestricted fundamental right to acquire, hold and dispose of arms. The right to hold, acquire, dispose of property is not absolute. It is subject to the limitations specified in Art. 19(5) and to the provisions contained in Art. 31. (Para 8)

Reasonable restriction on the exercise of the right to acquire, hold or dispose of property can be imposed either in the interests of the general public or for the protection of the interests of any Scheduled Tribe; secondly a person may be deprived of his property by authority of law; and thirdly the State may acquire any property or take possession of it for public purposes on payment of compensation. (Para 8)

The question whether the restrictions imposed are reasonable or unreasonable has to be decided in the context of, social, economic and political conditions in which they are imposed. (Para 8)

The restrictions imposed by law, the substantive as well as the procedural provisions of law should be examined and the question whether the provisions of the Act provide reasonable safeguard against the abuse of the power given to the executive authority to administer the law is not relevant for the true interpretation of the law. AIR 1950 S. C. 211, AIR 1951 S. C. 118, Relied on. (Para 8)

The restrictions imposed on the possession and disposal of arms by Ss. 14 and 16, Arms Act are reasonable restrictions necessary to the preservation of peace and prevention of danger to life, and property and permissible under cl. 5 of Art. 19 of the Constitution. Consequently, it cannot be held that these two sections in so far as they prohibit the possession of arms except under license, require a person to deposit the arms already in his possession, if his possession thereof becomes unlawful, and restrict the sale of arms to persons whose possession of the same would be unlawful, constitute an infringement of Art. 19(1), (f) of the Constitution and are, therefore, void. (Para 9)

Article 31 of the Constitution which is operative only when a person is deprived of his property or when his property has been acquired or taken possession of for a public purpose has no applicability here. The Article that is relevant here is Art. 19(1), (f) which applies in cases where property has not been taken away under Art. 31. The argument that as under certain conditions such as those stated in Ss. 24 and 26, Arms Act the arms in possession of a person can be confiscated without compensation or detained, they are repugnant to Art. 31 overlooks the fact that Art. 31 (1) implies that a person may be deprived of his property by authority of law & that in the exercise of police powers a person may be deprived of his property for the prevention of danger to life or property even without compensation. (Para 10)

Ss. 14 and 16, Arms Act are not therefore void on ground of repugnancy with Art. 31. (Para 10)

Anno: Arms Act. S. 14, N. 1.

(c) Arms Act (1878), S. 14 — Is not void of as delegated legislation — (Constitution of India, Art. 245).

Delegation of the character which S. 14 involves cannot on any view be held to be invalid. The Legislature has laid down in S. 14 itself the principle that no person shall possess fire arms except under a license. Such matters as the authority competent to issue licenses, the form in which they should be issued and the terms and conditions on which they should be granted are all matters of detail. Section 17, Arms Act does no more than enable the Government to make rules to carry out the principle embodied in S. 14. This delegation of power to administrative bodies is permissible. AIR 1951 S. C. 332, Relied on. (Para 11)

(d) Constitution of India, Art. 226 — Point not taken in petition but based on statement in return cannot be allowed.

In regard to applications for prerogative writs, the settled practice of English and American Courts is that no ground shall be relied upon or relief sought at the hearing of the motion except the grounds and relief set out in the application and a writ would be refused where the case tendered by the petition is radically different from that set up upon argument. The practice being one which only carries out the object with which a copy of the application for the issue of a writ is served on the opponent and he is called upon to show cause in respect of the grounds stated in the application, must be adopted as regards applications under Art. 226 also. The applicant cannot be permitted to argue and raise objection on the basis of an incidental statement in the return. (Para 12)

Anand Bihari Misra; for Applicant; K. A. Chitale; Advocate-General, for the State.

CASES CITED:

- (A) ('50) AIR 1950 SC 211: 52 Cri LJ 550 (SC)
- (B) ('51) AIR 1951 SC 118: ILR (1951) Hyd 221
- (C) ('51) AIR 1951 SC 332: 1951 SCR 747 (SC)

DIXIT J.: This is an application under Art. 226 of the Constitution of India for the issue of a suitable writ or a direction to the State of Madhya Bharat to forbear from acting in any manner by virtue of or under the Indian Arms Act, 1878 and for an order to the District Magistrate restraining him from enforcing a notice, directing the petitioner to deposit certain arms in his possession with the officer in charge of the police station in Laxmi Ganj Lashkar.

(2) The petitioner stated that he is in possession of two guns, two rifles and two revolvers; that he is the owner of these arms, which were duly registered under the Gwalior State Arms and Ammunition Control Order; that in anticipation of the extension of the Indian Arms Act to this State by the Part B States (Laws Act) 1951 (Act 3 of 1951) which came into force on 1-4-1951, the Madhya Bharat Government issued a notification in the Gazette dated 25-3-1951 directing persons in possession of fire arms to apply for licenses in accordance with the Indian Arms Act; that accordingly he applied to the District Magistrate for a license in respect of the six fire arms in his possession, that on 4-10-1951 the District Magistrate gave a notice to the petitioner directing him to deposit the fire arms within a week at the nearest police station. The petitioner further states that, thereupon, he made a representation to the District Magistrate and in reply the District Magistrate assured him that he would be granted the necessary licenses. The petitioner's grievance is that the District Magistrate instead of issuing the licenses again gave him a notice on 23-12-1952 to surrender all the arms in his possession at the nearest police station. The petitioner challenges this action of the District Magistrate and the validity of the Indian Arms Act 1878 on several grounds. The main grounds are that the Indian Arms Act, 1878 though extended to this State has not yet been brought into force and that the Arms Act being repugnant to Arts. 19 (1) (f) and Art. 31 of the Constitution of India is void. He prays that an order be issued to the State and the District Magistrate of Gird restraining them from giving effect to the Act and to the notice calling upon him to surrender the arms in his possession.

(3) The non-applicants oppose the petition. In the return filed on behalf of them it is said that the Indian Arms Act, 1878 came into force in this State on 1-4-1951 under a notification issued by the Central Government under S. 1 (2), Part B States (Laws) Act, bringing the latter Act and the several Acts and Ordinances mentioned in the schedule to it into force with effect from 1-4-1951. It is admitted that in anticipation of the coming into force of the Indian Arms Act 1878 the Government of Madhya Bharat published 'a directive' to the citizens of Madhya Bharat to apply for licenses as required by that Act; that in response to this notice the petitioner did apply for a license in respect of the six fire arms in his possession. It is further stated that the petitioner being in possession of revolvers of prohibited bore was asked to explain how he came to possess those revolvers, as under Rr. 7 and 31, Indian Arms Rules 1951 no license in respect of revolvers of prohibited bore could be granted unless it was lawfully procured or purchased; that the petitioner did not give any satisfactory explanation of his possession of the revolvers; that as the power of granting or refusing a license in respect of revolvers and pistols is vested under R. 31 (1), (aa) in the Chief Secretary or any officer authorised by him, the District Magistrate subsequently reported to the Home Secretary that the petitioner could not explain satisfactorily his possession of the revolvers and was suspected of smuggling arms and ammunition, and that, therefore, no license should be granted to him in respect of the revolvers; that the Home Secretary having been authorised by the Chief Secretary to deal and dispose of matters concerning the administration of the Indian Arms Act, 1878 considered the report submitted by the District Magistrate and came to the conclusion that no license should be granted to the petitioner and that he should be called upon to deposit all the fire arms in his possession at the nearest police station. The District Magistrate, therefore, in compliance with the orders of the Home Secretary issued a notice dated 23-12-1952 to the applicant calling upon him to deposit the fire arms in the Laxmi Ganj Police Station, Lashkar.

The opponents deny that the Indian Arms Act, 1878 in any way interferes with the fundamental rights of the petitioner or that it is confiscatory in nature. In the return it is further stated that the order dated 23-12-1952 directing the petitioner to deposit his arms at the nearest police station is purely an executive order passed by the appropriate authority in its discretion and as such is not open to challenge under Art. 226 of the Constitution.

(4) In the petition, the applicant has taken several grounds. But at the hearing of the petition Mr. Anand Bihari Misra learned counsel for the applicant confined his arguments to two points only, namely, that the Indian Arms Act 1878 has not yet come into force in the Madhya Bharat and that Ss. 14, 16, Arms Act under which he is being required to obtain a license and deposit the fire arms at the nearest police station being repugnant to Arts. 19 (1), (f) and 31 of the Constitution are void and inoperative.

(5) On the first question, the contention of the learned counsel for the petitioner is that the Part B States (Laws) Act 3 of 1951 which came into force on 1-4-1951 no doubt extended the Indian Arms Act 1878 to Part B States; but by the mere coming into force on 1-4-1951 of the Act 3 of 1951 the Indian Arms Act did not come into force on that date in this State. It is argued that the Arms Act contains a special commencement section, namely, S. 2 which provides that the Act shall come into force on such day as the Central Government by a notification in the Official Gazette appoints. But nothing appears to have been done so far under this provision and that, therefore, the Arms Act cannot be said to be in force in Madhya Bharat. I do not accept this submission. I think the learned Advocate-General is right when in reply he says that S. 3 of Act 3 of 1951 amends the Acts and Ordinances specified in the schedule to that Act as they existed at the time of the enactment of Act 3 of 1951 and that if, therefore, at that time any of the Acts or Ordinances mentioned in the Schedule having already come into force was in an active and not in a dormant state, then the extension of such an Act or Ordinance to a new territory or area would necessarily imply that the Act or Ordinance has been brought into force in the area or territory to which it has been extended. The Arms Act when it was enacted in 1878 extended to British India. Section 2 of the Act provided that it shall come into force on such day as the Government by a notification in the Gazette appoints in that behalf. A notification bringing the Act into force was issued on 1-10-1878. Subsequently the Act was extended to other areas by various Acts and Regulations, and on the date of the passing of the Part B States (Laws) Act, 1951 it extended to the whole of India except Part B States and was effective in that territory. Now, S. 3 Part B States (Laws) Act 1951 is as follows:

"The Acts and Ordinances specified in the Schedule shall be amended in the manner and to the extent therein specified, and the territorial extent of each of the said Acts and Ordinances, shall, as from the appointed day... be as stated in the extant clause thereof as so amended."

(6) The Indian Arms Act, 1878 is one of the Acts specified in the Schedule and has been so amended as to include in its territorial extent Part B States. It must be noted that S. 3 besides amending in certain respects the Acts and Ordinances specified in the Schedule also amends the extant clause of each of those Acts and Ordinances so as to extend them to Part B States. It does not re-enact the provisions of the Acts and Ordinances mentioned in the Schedule with the modification that they shall extend to Part B States. The question, therefore, of bringing into force any 're-enactment' by the issue of a notification such as the one contemplated by S. 2, Arms Act does not arise.

What we have to consider is whether the law amended by S. 3 of Act 3 of 1951 was an effective or inactive law at the time of the amendment. If the law was effective when its territorial extent was amended then the result of the amendment would be to make the Act actually effective in the territory to which it has been extended. If on the other hand the law was inactive at the material time then an amendment of its territorial extent would mean a change in the area in which the law would be effective when it is put in force. This follows from the fact that in relation to laws the term 'amendment' means a change in some of the provisions of law as they are at the time of the amendment. Amendment is of an existing law and not of a law as it was in the past or as it would be in the future. It will thus be seen that the Arms Act which had already become effective at the time of the amendment in its extant clause by S. 3 of Act 3 of 1951, is effective also in the Part B States to which it has now been extended by the amendment.

The learned Advocate-General relied on S. 6, Part B States (Laws) Act 1951 as supporting this conclusion "in a negative manner". He argued that as S. 6 of Act 3 of 1951 repeals from 1-4-1951 any law in force in any Part B State corresponding to any of the Acts or Ordinances attended to that State and as an intention to create a vacuum cannot be attributed to the Legislature, it must be taken that the extended law came into force in the State also from 1-4-1951.

I do not think that S. 6 is of much assistance in deciding the point before us. For, the question whether under S. 6 any corresponding law in force in Part B State is or is not repealed itself depends on the question whether the material provisions of the extended Act have become operative in the Part B State concerned, and this question in its turn depends on the terms of the extended Act and S. 3, Part B States (Laws) Act 1951. For example, if as in the case of the Bar Councils Act, 1926 or the Legal Practitioners Act, 1879 with the extension of the Act to Part B States, only some sections come into force leaving the substantial provisions of the Act to be brought into force by a subsequent notification, then it cannot be said that with the mere extension of such an Act by S. 3 of Act 3 of 1951, the corresponding law in any Part B State would stand repealed under S. 6. However, no such provision is to be found in the Indian Arms Act, 1878.

Section 2 of the Act is concerned with the issue of a notification bringing the provisions of the Act into force for the first time after its enactment. The object of postponing the effectiveness of the Act until the issue of a notification under S. 2 was obviously to give to the public sufficient notice of the enactment of the law. Sections 1 and 2 of the Act do not say that S. 1 alone shall extend to the whole of India and the rest of the Act shall come into force in any territory to which the Act applies on such date as the Government may by a notification appoint. It is noteworthy that the Parliament in enacting S. 1 (2), Part B States (Laws) Act, 1951 which empowers the Government to appoint a suitable date by a notification in the Gazette for the commencement of the Act, took notice of the fact that it would be a hardship to the general public if the first intimation of the President's assent to the Part B States (Laws) Act, 1951 was also to be the date of the coming into force in Part B State of the Acts and Ordinances specified in the Schedule. It cannot, therefore, be maintained that the issue of a notification bringing the Arms Act into force in Part B States was necessary also on the ground of giving to the public sufficient notice of the Act. It must also be stated that although the Arms Act after its enactment in 1878 was extended between the years 1878 to 1951 to various territories by several laws and regulations and brought into force in those territories without a notification under S. 2, there does not appear to be any case in which an objection similar to the one raised here was taken and decided by any High Court. Learned counsel for the applicant was unable to draw our attention to any such decided case, I am, therefore, disposed to reject the contention of the learned counsel for the applicant that the Arms Act has not come into force to this State as no notification under S. 2 of the Act has been issued.

(7) The next contention of the learned counsel for the petitioner is that Ss. 14 and 16 of the Act abridge the petitioner's fundamental right under Art. 19 (1) (f) of the Constitution to acquire, hold and dispose of arms and are, therefore, void. Section 14 prohibits possession inter alia of fire arms except under a license and in the manner and to the extent permitted thereby. Section 16 (1) provides that any person possessing arms, ammunition or military stores shall deposit them with the officer in charge of the nearest police station or with the license dealer, if his possession thereof becomes unlawful for any of the reasons stated in that section. The person so depositing the arms is under S. 16 (2) entitled to receive them back if his possession again becomes lawful or to dispose, or authorise the disposal of the arms by sale or otherwise to any person whose possession of the same would be lawful and to receive the proceeds of any such sale. Sections 16 (4) and 17 empower the Government to make rules to determine the officers by whom, the conditions, fees, subject to which any license shall be granted and the condition subject to which arms, ammunition etc. may be deposited with a license dealer and the period after the expiry of which things deposited under S. 16 (1) shall be forfeited to Government, if they are not returned or disposed of within that period. In exercise of these powers the Government has framed complete and exhaustive rules laying down the purposes for which licenses to possess arms may be granted, prescribing the authority by whom the licenses may be granted or renewed, and the manner in which any person wishing to obtain a license should apply. It seems to me unnecessary to summarise here all these rules. For our purposes it is sufficient to state that under the rules no license for the possession of revolvers, pistols, muskets and rifles of certain prohibited bore is granted unless the authority granting the license is satisfied that it has been lawfully procured by the person applying for a license. The authority empowered to grant or renew a license may in his discretion refuse to grant or renew a license (R. 41). An appeal is also provided by R. 41 from an order refusing to grant or renew a license.

(8) The argument of Mr. Anand Bihari Misra learned counsel for the applicant is that Art. 19 (1), (f) confers on the petitioner the fundamental right to acquire, hold and dispose of property which includes arms; that the only restriction put by the Constitution on the possession of arms, is that under Art. 19 (1), (b) the assembly of citizens with arms is prohibited; that, therefore, the Constitution gives to the petitioner a fundamental right to possess arms for purposes other than that of assembly; and that inasmuch as Ss. 14 and 16, Arms Act and the rules framed under the Act interfere with the rights of a citizen to possess, hold and dispose of arms and also in some cases totally prohibit a person from possessing arms and deprive him of the arms in his possession without any compensation, they are repugnant to Art. 19(1), (f) and Art. 31 and are, therefore, unconstitutional.

In my opinion the contention is without any substance. A right to acquire, hold and dispose of arms is no doubt a right to property. But I am unable to see how the restriction put on the right of assembly by Art. 19 (1), (b) imports in Art. 19 (1), (f) an unrestricted fundamental right to acquire, hold and dispose of arms. The right to hold, acquire, dispose of property is not absolute. It is subject to the limitations specified in Art. 19 (5) and to the provisions contained in Art. 31. It is obvious from an examination of the provisions of Art. 19 (1), (f) read with cl. 5 of the Article, and Art. 31 firstly that reasonable restriction on the exercise of the right to acquire, hold or dispose of property can be imposed either in the interests of the general public or for the protection of the interests of any Scheduled Tribe; secondly a person may be deprived of his property by authority of law; and thirdly that the State may acquire any property or take possession of it for public purposes on payment of compensation.

When, therefore, it is urged that Ss. 14 and 16, Arms Act and the rules framed thereunder interfere with the petitioner's right to property, what we have to see is whether the restrictions imposed by the impugned provisions on the right to possess arms are reasonable, and in the interests of general public, there being no question of the protection of any Scheduled tribe here. Now, it is plain that the question whether the restrictions imposed are reasonable or unreasonable has to be decided in the context of, social, economic and political conditions in which they are imposed. Again as pointed out by the Supreme Court in the case of — 'Dr. Khare v. State of Delhi', AIR 1950 SC 211 (A) in deciding on the reasonableness or otherwise of the restrictions imposed by law, the substantive as well as the procedural provisions of law should be examined and the question whether the provisions of the Act provide reasonable safeguard against the abuse of the power given to the executive authority to administer the law is not relevant for the true interpretation of the law. In — 'Chintamanrao v. State of Madhya Pradesh', AIR 1951 SC 118 (B) it was observed as follows:

"The phrase 'reasonable restriction' connotes that the limitation imposed on a person in enjoyment of the right should not be arbitrary or of an excessive nature, beyond what is required in the interests of the public. The word 'reasonable' implies intelligent care and deliberation, that is the choice of a course which reason dictates. Legislation which arbitrarily or excessively invades the right cannot be said to contain the quality of reasonableness and unless it strikes a proper balance between the freedom guaranteed in Art. 19 (1), (g) and the social control permitted by Cl. (6) of Art. 19, it must be held to be wanting in that quality."

(9) This reasoning applied equally to Art. 19 (1), (f) and Art. 19 (5). Judged by these tests I do not think that the restrictions put by Ss. 14 and 16, which I have already summarised above, on the possession and disposal of arms can be stated to be unreasonable in relation to the present-day economic, political and social conditions. That a person should not possess arms except under a license; that he should not be allowed to sell them to persons whose possession of the arms would be unlawful; that a license in respect of dangerous arms of prohibited bore should not be granted unless it is shown that they are lawfully procured; that the authority empowered to grant a license or renew it should have the power to refuse it to persons whose possession of arms would be quite incompatible with the maintenance of peace, good order requires no expatiation whatsoever. The restrictions imposed on the possession and disposal of arms by Ss. 14 and 16 are reasonable restrictions necessary to the preservation of peace and prevention of danger to life and property and permissible under cl. 5 of Art. 19 of the Constitution. Consequently, it cannot be held that these two sections in so far as they prohibit the possession of arms except under license, require a person to deposit the arms already in his possession, if his possession thereof becomes unlawful, and restrict the sale of arms to persons whose possession of the same would be unlawful constitute an infringement of Art. 19 (1), (f) of the Constitution and are, therefore, void.

(10) The contention that these provisions of Arms Act offend Art. 31 is equally untenable. Here, the petitioner has not been deprived of the arms in his possession. He has been merely asked to deposit them at the nearest police station. If he obtains a license in respect of them, the arms would be returned to him. Otherwise he would be entitled to receive the proceeds of the sale of the arms to a person whose possession of the same would be lawful. That being so, Art. 31 of the Constitution which is operative only when a person is deprived of his property or when his proerty has been acquired or taken possession of for a public purpose has no applicability here. The Article that is relevant here is Art. 19(1), (f) which applies in cases where property has not been taken away under Art. 31. Article 31 is of no help in judging the validity of the provisions such as those impugned here, which do not deprive any person of his property or acquire or take possession of his property but simply lay down the conditions under which a person is entitled to hold and dispose of the property. The argument that as under certain conditions such as those stated in Ss. 24 and 26, Arms Act the arms in possession of a person can be confiscated without compensation or detained and, therefore, they are repugnant to Art. 31 overlooks the fact that Art. 31(1) implies that a person may be deprived of his property by authority of law and that in the exercise of police powers a person may be deprived of his property for the prevention of danger to life or property even without compensation. I am, therefore, unable to accept the contention that Ss. 14 and 16, Arms Act being repugnant to Art. 31 are void.

(11) Learned counsel for the petitioner also took the objection that S. 14 was ultra vires the Legislature which passed the Act as by simply providing that no person shall have in his possession any fire arms, ammunition etc. except under a license and in the manner and to the extent permitted thereby and by empowering the Government to frame rules to determine the officer by whom, the form in which, and the terms and conditions subject to which a license may be granted, the Legislature virtually abdicated its legislative power in favour of the executive. I do not see how the question of delegated legislation arises in this case. The Supreme Court considered the question as to how far 'delegated legislation' is permissible. 'In re Art. 143, Constitution of India and Delhi Laws Act 1912 Etc.', AIR 1951 S C 332 (C), and a reference to its final conclusion will show that delegation of the character which S. 14 involves cannot on any view be held to be invalid. The Legislature has laid down in S. 14 itself the principle that no person shall possess fire arms except under a license. Such matters as the authority competent to issue licenses, the form in which they should be issued and the terms and conditions on which they should be granted are all matters of detail. Section 17, Arms Act does no more than enable the Government to make rules to carry out the principle embodied in S. 14. This delegation of power to administrative bodies is permissible.

(12) Learned counsel for the petitioner also sought to argue that under S. 14 read with S. 17, Arms Act he was entitled as of right to obtain a license; that a Government was not empowered to frame a rule giving the authority empowered to grant a license, a discretion to refuse the license; that under the Indian Arms Rules 1951 the authority empowered to grant a license for the possession of D.B.B.L. Guns and S.B.B.L. Guns is the District Magistrate, and Chief Secretary is empowered to grant licenses for revolvers and pistols; and that, therefore, the order dated 11-11-1952 of the Home Secretary rejecting the petitioner's application for license was one without jurisdiction and invalid. On these grounds it was urged that a direction be issued to the Chief Secretary and the District Magistrate to grant to the petitioner the necessary licenses for the arms in his possession.

I agree with the learned Advocate-General that the applicant cannot be allowed to raise this objection which has not been taken in the petition but which is founded on the statement in return, namely,

"that the Home Secretary Mr. Bamroo after a perusal of the whole record and taking into consideration the opinion of the District Magistrate, by order dated 11-11-1952 refused the application for license of the petitioner and ordered that the applicant should be called upon to deposit all fire arms."

In his application the petitioner has only stated the facts and grounds for the enforcement of a right to possess arms without any license and to have the notice given to him for the deposit of the arms cancelled. The rule nisi was issued to the opponents to show cause in respect of the grounds and relief stated in the petition; and the opponents have filed their answers to these grounds and not to the grounds which the petitioner is now putting forward. The petition is not for quashing the determination of any authority refusing a license to the applicant and the non-applicants have not been called upon to show cause why a license should not be granted to the applicant. In regard to applications for prerogative writs, the settled practice of English and American Courts is that no ground shall be relied upon or relief sought at the hearing of the motion except the grounds and relief set out in the application and a writ would be refused where the case tendered by the petition is radically different from that set up upon argument. The practice being one which only carries out the object with which a copy of the application for the issue of a writ is served on the opponent and he is called upon to show cause in respect of the grounds stated in the application, must be adopted as regards applications under Art. 226 also. In my view, the applicant cannot be permitted to argue on the basis of an incidental statement in the return that the Home Secretary has passed an order rejecting his application for license, that the order is illegal and that he is entitled to the grant of a license as of right. If he thinks there has been a determination refusing a license to him and it is illegal, and that a license must be granted to him, the applicant is at liberty to take appropriate proceedings for quashing the determination and for enforcing his alleged right to obtain a license.

In so far as the notice given to the applicant by the District Magistrate is concerned, it is merely one by way of reminder to the applicant that as after the coming into force of the Arms Act his possession of arms without a license has become unlawful, he must under S. 16 deposit the arms with the officer in charge of the nearest police station. Even without a notice from the District Magistrate the applicant is under an obligation to deposit the arms under S. 16 if his possession thereof under the Arms Act is unlawful. The notice, therefore, cannot be objected to on the ground that it violates the provisions of S. 16 or on the ground that the District Magistrate as the Chief Administrative and executive authority of the District was not competent to draw the attention of the applicant to these provisions.

(13) For the above reasons, I am of the opinion that this application must be dismissed with costs, fixing the counsel's fee at Rs. 75/-.

(14) SHINDE C. J.: I agree.

A/R.G.D.

Application dismissed.

A. I. R. 1953 M. B. 241 (Vol. 40, C. N. 89)
(INDORE BENCH)

NEVASKAR J.

Ramlal Hazarimal, Applicant v. Hiralal Ramlal and another, Opponents.

Criminal Ref. No. 86 of 1952, D/- 31-3-1953.

(a) Criminal P. C., (1898), Ss. 516 A, 517 and 523 — Property seized by Police — Jurisdiction of Magistrate to pass orders in respect thereof.

After property is seized by the Police orders for its final disposal can only be passed by the Court and the Police are expected to hold the property subject to the orders of the Magistrate. Therefore if the property is with the Police the Magistrate alone has got jurisdiction to pass orders.

(Para 4)

Anno: Cr. P. C., S. 516A, N. 1; S. 517, N. 1; S. 523, N. 1.

(b) Criminal P. C., (1898), Ss. 523 and 561A — Power to re-call property wrongfully disposed of.

Where the property seized by the Police is not produced before the Magistrate and is wrongfully handed over by them to the complainant, the Magistrate and the High Court in exercise of its inherent powers have power to re-call the property, to require the police to produce the property for final disposal by the Magistrate under S. 523 and to give effect to this order.

(Para 6)

Anno: Cr. P. C., S. 523, N. 6; S. 561A, N. 4.

W. Y. Pande, for Applicant; P. R. Sharma, Govt. Advocate, for the State; Rameshwarji Bhatta, for Municipality Sitamau.

CASE CITED:

(A) ('38) AIR 1938 Cal 17: 39 Cri LJ 245

ORDER: Accused Hiralal Ramlal was prosecuted before the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Sitamau for a charge under S. 409, Penal Code and was acquitted on 25-9-50. During the Police investigation the petitioner who is the father of the accused Hiralal had handed over a sum of Rs. 701-2-9 to the Police Officer in charge of the investigation on 5-12-1948. This sum, it appears, immediately after the receipt of the same from the petitioner Ramlal was handed over by the Police to the Municipality Sitamau in which the accused was serving and in respect of which the offence is alleged to have been committed without any specific order of the Court to that effect. On reference to the Panchanama Ex. P/3 with regard to the seizure of this sum it appears that this sum was seized or attached by the Police during the course of investigation.

In various columns in the forms printed for the purpose of use of Sitamau Police it was mentioned that this sum of Rs. 701-2-9 was being seized in connection with the criminal breach of trust in respect of the funds of the Municipal Committee by Sub-Inspector Suryamal from the custody of the petitioner Ramlal. After the accused was acquitted the petitioner submitted an application to the Sub-Divisional Magistrate Sitamau for the refund of this sum seized from his custody by the Police. The application purported to be made under S. 517, Criminal P. C. This application was rejected by the Magistrate on the ground that the sum was not produced before the Court during the inquiry or trial and therefore he had no jurisdiction to pass any order in respect of the same. The petitioner thereupon submitted an application for revision to the Sessions Judge Mandsaur who has made this reference.

(2) The grounds set forth by the learned Judge for setting aside the order of the learned Magistrate are that under S. 523, Criminal P. C., the Magistrate had jurisdiction to pass order in respect of the property seized by the Police though not produced before it. Reliance for this purpose is taken on the decision reported in — 'Mahomed Yusuf v. Krishna Mohan', AIR 1938 Cal 17 (A).

(3) Before me counsel both for the petitioner as well as for the Municipality appeared. Mr. Pande who appeared for the petitioner suggested that the order for directing the delivery of the property from the Municipality to the petitioner could be passed under S. 523, Cr. P. C., by the joint operation of powers under S. 523 and the inherent powers of the Court. While it was contended by the counsel for the Municipality that no order can be passed under S. 523, Cr. P. C., as the only order contemplated under S. 523 is one in respect of the property that is seized by the Police and is in their custody. If the Police rightfully or wrongfully part with the possession of that property in favour of some person the remedy in that case is by having recourse to the Civil Court for the enforcement of the right of the claimant and not by an application made under S. 523 or 517, Criminal P. C. No authority has been brought to my notice which covers the case of the description that is before me and therefore I will have to consider the matter on the principles indicated in the various sections of the Criminal Procedure Code in respect of such properties which are seized by the Police.

(4) There are two kinds of properties that are dealt with under the Criminal Procedure Code. Firstly those that are seized by the Police and produced before the Court during the inquiry or trial and those which are seized by the Police and not produced during the inquiry or trial. The Police are empowered to seize the properties during the course of investigation as will appear from S. 165, Cr. P. Code, and also on reference to S. 523, Cr. P. Code. A duty is cast upon the Police to prepare a list of such property and to report the fact of the seizure to a Magistrate. If the property is produced before the Court the Court is empowered to pass orders in respect of it under S. 517, Cr. P. Code, for its disposal after the conclusion of the inquiry or trial.

During the course of inquiry or trial the Court before whom the property is produced is empowered to pass such orders as it thinks fit for the proper custody of such property pending the inquiry or trial under S. 516A Criminal P. C. Thus it will appear that Ss. 516A and 517 deal with the power of the Court with regard to the custody of the property during the inquiry or trial and for its disposal by delivery or otherwise after the conclusion of the trial. But if the property is not produced before the Court but remains with the Police then under S. 523, Cr. P. Code the power is given to the Court to make such order as it thinks fit respecting the disposal of such property or the delivery of such property to the person entitled to the possession thereof or, if such person cannot be ascertained, respecting the custody or production of such property.

A procedure is indicated in sub-cl. (2) of S. 523, Cr. P. Code for the delivery of the same where the person entitled is known, after ascertaining the claimant before passing final orders thereon. In the latter case an inquiry is contemplated. On consideration of all these provisions it is plain that after property is seized by the Police orders for its final disposal can only be passed by the Court and the Police are expected to hold the property subject to the orders of the Magistrate. Therefore if the property is with the Police the Magistrate alone has got jurisdiction to pass orders. But the difficulty in this case arises on account of the wrongful action by the Police in handing over the sum directly to the Municipality and the question is whether in view of this fact it is competent for a Magistrate to re-call the property from the person to whom it has been wrongfully handed over and to pass orders in respect of the same.

There is no provision in the Criminal Procedure Code directly bearing on the point, and the only question is whether recourse could be had to the inherent powers of Criminal Court to remedy wrongs committed during the course of proceedings before it. Such an inherent power is conceivable with reference to subordinate Criminal Courts and the High Court. Section 561-A, Criminal P. C., specifically declares that such a power exists in the High Court to give effect to any order under that Code or to prevent abuse of process of any Court or otherwise to secure ends of justice.

(5) In this case justice of the petitioner's case is quite clear. The Police seize the property in the course of investigation. This was, therefore, liable to be disposed of by the Magistrate under S. 523, Cr. P. C. The Police unauthorisedly handed over the property to the Municipality. The fact of the delivery to it by the Police is admitted by the counsel for the Municipality appearing before me. The person to whom this sum of Rs. 701-2-9 is made over is nobody else than the real complainant. He was given a hearing before this Court to justify the action of the Police. All that he could urge is that the petitioner be asked to file a Civil Suit against the Municipality. Accused is acquitted in this case. Since the property which is the subject matter of this petition was cash unidentifiable in its nature it could not be urged that an offence with respect to it was committed.

(6) Under the circumstances both the Magistrate below as well as High Court in exercise of its inherent powers have power to re-call the amount wrongly handed over by the Police to the Municipality. They have further power to require the Police to produce the property seized by it for final disposal by the Magistrate under S. 523. They have also powers to give effect to this order. To drive the petitioner to a costly and troublesome civil action would be sheer injustice and abuse of the process of Court.

(7) The result is that the reference is accepted, order of the lower Court is set aside and it is ordered that the subject matter of this petition viz. Rs. 701-2-9/- seized by the Police and made over to Sitamau Municipality shall be recalled.

(8) The Police may also be directed to produce that property for final disposal under S. 523, Cr. P. C. After the property is secured by either of these methods the same be made over to the petitioner.

A/V.R.B.

Reference accepted.

A. I. R. 1953 M. B. 242 (Vol. 40, C. N. 90)
(INDORE BENCH)

ABDUL HAKIM KHAN J.

Dewilal Kukaji Sutar, Applicant v. Ramotar Dwarkaprasad, Opponent.

Small Cause Revn. No. 123 of 1950, D/- 25-9-1952.

Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (1887), S. 25 — Interference on question of fact — (Civil P. C. (1908), Ss. 115, 100-101).

Small Cause suit for arrears of rent brought by heir to property of J — Judge holding that plaintiff was not heir of J — Question whether plaintiff was heir of J or not held was question of fact — Finding of Judge not being perverse or obviously wrong High Court held could not interfere on revision side. AIR 1944 Mad 181 and AIR 1925 All 172, Ref. (Para 3)

Anno: Provin. Sm. Cause Courts Act, S. 25 N. 11; Civil P. C., S. 115 N. 29; Ss. 100-101 N. 28, 52, 53.

Mrs. Gandhe, for Applicant; Balwantsingh, for Opponent.

CASES CITED :

(A) ('44) AIR 1944 Mad 181: 45 Cri LJ 464

(B) ('25) AIR 1925 All 172: 22 All LJ 1035

ORDER : This revision arises out of a Small Cause suit No. 39 of 1950 which was dismissed by Small Cause Judge, Ujjain, on 26-9-1950. One Dewlal brought the suit against Ramotar for arrears of rent amounting to Rs. 357/- plus interest on it. The suit was brought as an heir to the property of Jaganath who had given the house on rent to Ramotar. Defendant admitted the Tenancy of Jaganath, but pleaded that the plaintiff was not the heir of Jaganath and that in consideration of the rent he had been supplying  $\frac{1}{2}$  seer of milk daily to Surajbai, the widow of Jaganath. The Small Cause Judge, Ujjain held that plaintiff was not the heir of Jaganath, and, that Surajbai is the real successor of Jaganath. Aggrieved by this the plaintiff has filed this revision.

(2) In — 'Duraishwami Nadar v. Sivanupandia Nadar', AIR 1944 Mad 181 (A) it has been held that under S. 25, Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (the section under which this revision has been filed) the High Court cannot constitute itself a court of appeal. In — 'Bengal N. W. Ry. v. Manorath Bhagat', AIR 1925 All 172 (B) it has been held that unless there was no evidence before the Judge to support the finding or unless the finding was impossible or perverse one, it is unfair to interfere on the revision side.

(3) What I have to decide in this case is whether the plaintiff is the heir of Jaganath or not? This is a question of fact and finding (of?) the Court below not being perverse or obviously wrong, I see no interference by way of revision.

(4) Revision rejected with costs.

C/H.G.P.

Revision rejected.

A. I. R. 1953 M. B. 243 (Vol. 40, C. N. 91)
(GWALIOR BENCH)

DIXIT, J.

Kanhaiya Lal, Applicant v. The State.

Criminal Revn. No. 3 of 1952, D/- 22-7-1952.

Madhya Bharat Essential Supplies (Temporary Powers) Act, (S. 2006), S. 11 — "Report in writing of the facts in constituting such offence" — (Criminal P. C., (1898), S. 537).

The sine qua non is a report in substantial compliance with requirements of S. 11. Absence of objection goes to the root of the case and can be taken at any stage of the case. It cannot clearly be cured under S. 537, Criminal P. C., which applies to mere errors of procedure and not to substantive errors of law affecting the jurisdiction of the Court to take cognizance of an offence. Case Law Rel. on. (Paras 5, 6, 8)

Anno: Cr. P. C., S. 537, N. 6, 10.

Patankar, for applicant; Mungre, Govt. Advocate, for the State.

CASES CITED:

- (A) ('44) AIR 1944 Bom 139: 45 Cri LJ 691
- (B) ('44) AIR 1944 Bom 247: 46 Cri LJ 354
- (C) ('46) AIR 1946 All 416: 47 Cri LJ 876
- (D) ('49) 1949 GWL 66
- (E) ('49) AIR 1949 Oudh 66: 50 Cri LJ 469

ORDER: The applicant Kanhaiya Lal is being prosecuted in the Court of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate Susner for having contravened the provisions of the Madhya Bharat Cotton Textile Control Order of 1948 by selling on 13-1-51, 1½ yard cloth to one Nanda in excess of the control price. Soon after the charge was framed, the applicant objected to his trial for the offence on the ground that the police charge sheet on the basis of which the Magistrate took cognizance of the offence is not a report by a public servant and is, therefore, not in compliance with S. 11, Essential Civil Supplies Act, 1946 under which Act the Cotton Textile Control Order was made. The objection was rejected by the trial Magistrate. The applicant then preferred a revision petition to the Sessions Judge of Shajapur raising the additional contention that the report did not contain the facts constituting the offence alleged against him and was, therefore, not in substantial compliance with the requirements of S. 11, Essential Supplies Act. The learned Sessions Judge rejected the revision petition. The petitioner has now come up in revision to this Court.

(2) Mr. Patankar, the learned Counsel appearing on behalf of the petitioner, did not dispute before me the fact that the Sub-Inspector who filed before the Magistrate the Charge-sheet against the applicant is a public servant and the charge-sheet against the accused is a report by a public servant as required by S. 11, Essential Supplies Act. The only point pressed before me on behalf of the applicant is that there was no jurisdiction in the Magistrate to try the petitioner because the charge-sheet filed by the Sub-Inspector did not contain a report of the facts constituting the offence, but only mentioned the bare fact that the applicant had sold in "black market" 1½ yards of cloth to Nanda and had thus committed an offence under S. 8, Madhya Bharat Essential Supplies (Temporary Powers) Act of Samvat 2006. It was argued that this charge-sheet was not in compliance with S. 11 and the Magistrate could not take cognizance of the offence on this report. In support of this contention, learned counsel cited before me — 'Jayantilal Jagjivan v. Emperor', AIR 1944 Bom 139 (A) and — Purushottam Devji v. Emperor', AIR 1944 Bom 247 (B); — 'N. G. Chatterji v. Emperor', AIR 1946 All 416 (C); 1949 Gwl. 66 (D).

(3) On behalf of the State, Mr. Mungre contended that the accused raised no objection before the Magistrate as to the charge-sheet being defective on account of the omission therein of the facts constituting offence with which the applicant was charged; that this point was raised in the Sessions Court for the first time; and that therefore, the applicant cannot be allowed to question the validity of the charge-sheet in this Court. It was further submitted that S. 11, Essential Supplies Act was directory only, and that an omission to satisfy its provisions could not affect the jurisdiction of the Court. The learned Government Advocate sought to distinguish the cases relied on by the learned counsel for the petitioner by saying that they related to R. 130 (1), Defence of India Rules which spoke of a report of the facts constituting a contravention of the Defence of India Rules and not of a report of the facts constituting an offence, as S. 11, Essential Supplies Act does. It was said that there is a difference between a "report of the facts constituting an offence" and a "report of the facts constituting a contravention of Rules" such as the Defence of India Rules. It was further maintained that the charge-sheet against the applicant contains a statement of facts constituting the offence alleged against the applicant.

(4) In my opinion, the contention of the learned counsel for the applicant is well-founded. Section 11, Essential Supplies Act is as follows:

"No Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under this Act except on a report in writing of the facts constituting such offence made by a person who is a public servant as defined in S. 21 of the Indian Penal Code."

(5) It is obvious that a Magistrate cannot take cognizance of any offence under the Act if there is before him a report which does not contain the facts constituting the offence alleged or if the report whether complete or incomplete in the facts, is by a person who is not a public servant. The object of this section is to protect persons from being needlessly harassed by rash, baseless or vexatious prosecutions at the instance of private individuals. For taking cognizance of any offence punishable under the Act, the 'sine qua non' is a report in substantial compliance with the requirements of S. 11 of the Act. It would be observed that S. 11 of the Act uses the expression a "report in writing of the facts constituting such offence" and not the expression a "report of such offence". The report must state facts which constitute the offence. This is a requisite of fundamental importance. Mere assertion that an offence under certain section has been committed is only a report of the offence and cannot be regarded as compliance with the letter or spirit of S. 11 of the Act. In the present case on 13-1-51 one Hazarat Shah sent a slip to the Sub-Inspector Police stating merely "Maine kapadeka blek pakada hai Aap fouran aye." On the basis of this slip, the police took up the investigation and then on 16-2-51 presented a charge-sheet against the applicant. In col. 7 of the charge-sheet, it was stated:

"Is abhiyogaka sankashipta wiwarana yah hai ki Hajarat Shah putra Chhotekhan wilayati niwasi Zedawadne tehriri report kee ki muljim Kanhaiyalal putra Hiralal Mahajan niwasi Nalkhedase sawa gaj kapda lathha blek marketse Nanda putra Mera chamar niwasi Namukhediko becha tha. Mukaddama kayam hokar anusandhan kiya gaya."

Anusandhanki pragatise abhiyukta Kanhaiyalalke wiruddha aparadha dhara 4 Awashyak Padartha Ashaya Widnan Samvat 2006 sabit hai.

Atayewa Kanhailal abhiyukta Swikrut aropa paura number 6:51 dwara prastut hai."

(6) In other columns, the names of the accused and witnesses are given. It will be seen that this charge-sheet does not give the facts constituting the offence alleged to have been committed by the applicant. The first part of the statement of facts contained in col. 7 only refers to the report made by Hazarat Shah to the Sub-Inspector that Kanhaiya Lal had sold 1½ yards of cloth in 'black market' to Nanda. The other portion of the statement only says that after investigation the offence against the accused was found established. The concrete facts which constituted the alleged offence have not been mentioned anywhere in the charge-sheet. The assertion that the applicant sold a piece of cloth in 'black market' to Nanda and the police found the offence established after investigation gives no idea, whatsoever, of the specific acts done by the accused and as to the manner in which they constitute the offence. If the facts constituting the offence are not before the Magistrate, then he is clearly not in a position to apply his mind to the suspected commission of the offence and to take the decision whether he should take judicial notice of the offence. In my opinion, the charge-sheet presented against the applicant does not at all fulfil the requirements of S. 11, Essential Supplies Act and on this charge-sheet, the Magistrate had no power to take cognizance of the offence. The whole of the proceedings are, therefore, without jurisdiction and must be regarded as invalid.

(7) This view is supported by the authorities cited before me by the learned counsel for the applicant. In 'AIR 1944 Bom 247 (B)', the question was whether a charge-sheet by the police against the accused person was in compliance with the provisions of R. 130, Defence of India Rules which provided that "no Court shall take cognizance of any alleged contravention of these Rules except on a report in writing of the facts constituting such contravention made by a public servant."

In that case, cognizance had been taken upon submission of a charge-sheet in which it was stated that the accused persons were being prosecuted for exporting Toor. The charge-sheet did not contain the facts constituting the contravention. Nor did it mention that the offence committed was of the contravention of the Bombay Retail Trade and Licensing Order. The Bombay High Court held that the charge-sheet did not comply with the provisions of R. 130, Defence of India Rules inasmuch as it did not contain the facts constituting such contravention, & therefore, the Court could not properly take cognizance of the offence charged.

To the same effect are the decisions reported in 'AIR 1944 Bom 139 (A)'; 'AIR 1946 All 416 (C)' and — 'Rachpal Singh v. Rex', AIR 1949 Oudh 66 (E). These decisions stress the point that the jurisdiction of a Court taking cognizance of an offence of contravention of the Defence of India Rules depends upon a report made by a public officer in which the facts constituting such contravention are stated. These decisions, no doubt, dealt with the question of a report in accordance with Rule 130 of the Defence of India Rules. But the principle laid down in these cases is applicable with equal force while considering the question of a report in accordance with S. 11, Essential Supplies Act. I do not think that the distinction drawn by the learned Government Advocate between the language of R. 130, Defence of India Rules and that of S. 11, Essential Supplies Act, is a valid one. If the contravention of rule is an offence, then, there is clearly no difference in the meaning of the expression "a report of the facts constituting an offence" and the expression "a report of the facts constituting a contravention of the rule."

(8) The other objection of the learned Government Advocate may be disposed of by saying that the objection raised by the applicant touches the jurisdiction of the Court. It is one which goes to the root of the case and can be taken at any stage of the case. It is one which if upheld vitiates the entire proceedings. That being so, it cannot clearly be cured under S. 537, Criminal P. C. which applies to more errors of procedure and not to substantive errors of law affecting the jurisdiction of the Court to take cognizance of an offence.

(9) For the above reasons, this petition is accepted and the proceedings held by the Magistrate are quashed.

C/D.H.

Revision allowed.

A. I. R. 1953 M. B. 244 (Vol. 40, C. N. 92) (GWALIOR BENCH)

DIXIT AND CHATURVEDI JJ.

State v. Gangaram and another, Respondents.
Criminal Appeal No. 97 of 1951, D/- 14-11-52.

(a) Essential Supplies (Temporary Powers) Act (1946), S. 7 — Proof — (Evidence Act (1872), S. 78).

Sale of cloth above maximum controlled price — Notification of Textile Commissioner issued under Madhya Bharat Textile Control Order fixing maximum price of cloth in question not produced and proved — Accused cannot be convicted under S. 7 — Cri. Appeal No. 37 of 1951 (MB), AIR 1953 Madh B 30 and AIR 1953 Madh B 84, Ref. (Para 3)

(b) Essential Supplies (Temporary Powers) Act (1946), S. 7 — Vicarious liability.

Sale of cloth above controlled price by munim in shop — Owner absent from shop — Owner of shop cannot be held vicariously liable for act of his servant. (Para 3)

Mungre, Govt. Advocate, for the State; Patankar and Anand, for Respondents.

CASES CITED:

- (A) ('51) Cri. Appeal No. 37 of 1951 (Madh B)
- (B) ('53) AIR 1953 Madh B 30: 1953 Cri LJ 240: (Cri. A. No. 47 of 1951)
- (C) ('53) AIR 1953 Madh B 84: 1953 Cri LJ 605: (Cri. Revn. No. 1 of 1952)

JUDGMENT: This is an appeal by the State from the decision of the City Magistrate Lashkar acquitting the respondents of a charge under S. 7 (1), Essential Supplies (Temporary Powers) Act 1946.

(2) The charge against the respondent was that on 20-3-51 they sold to one Mohan Lal some cloth in excess of the control price and thus contravened the provisions of the Madhya Bharat Cotton Control Order, 1948, issued under the Essential Supplies (Temporary Powers) Act, 1946.

(3) At the hearing of this appeal, the learned Government Advocate rightly and frankly conceded that in view of the decisions of this Court in — 'The State v. Bachchu Lal', Cri. Appeal No. 37 of 1951 (A); in — 'State v. Brijlal Dhodi', AIR 1953 Madh B 30 (B) and in — 'Panna Lal v. The State', AIR 1953 Madh B 84 (C) he is unable to support the appeal as the notification of the Textile Commissioner issued under the Madhya Bharat Textile Control Order fixing the maximum price of cloth alleged to have been sold was not produced and proved and further that inasmuch at the time of the alleged sale Ganga Ram Saboo was not present at the shop, he could not be held to be vicariously liable for the act of his Munim Kishan Lal.

(4) The appeal is, therefore, dismissed.
C/K.S. Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1953 M. B. 245 (Vol. 40, C. N. 93)
(GWALIOR BENCH)
FULL BENCH

SHINDE C. J., DIXIT AND CHATURVEDI JJ.
Malojirao Shitole, Petitioner v. C. G. Matkar, and another, Opponents.

Civil Misc. Appln. No. 5 of 1953, D/- 19-3-53.

(a) Constitution of India, Art. 215 — Exercise of jurisdiction — (Contempt of Courts Act (1926), S. 1).

The jurisdiction in respect of contempt proceedings should be exercised only when the case is clear and beyond reasonable doubt. The petitioner is not entitled to invoke this special jurisdiction for a decision on the important and complicated collateral question as to when a certain notification became operative: Case law discussed. (Paras 4, 5)

Anno: C. C. Act, S. 1 N. 2.

(b) General Clauses Act (1897), S. 5 (3) — Applicability to notifications.

Section 5 (3) only applies to the construction of Acts and Regulations and is not made applicable to any notification that may be issued under an Act. (Para 4)

(c) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 39, R. 1; O. 41, R. 5 — Effect of application and notice to opposite party.

The presentation of an application for stay or for a temporary injunction and the giving of the notice of the same to the opposite party itself does not operate as a stay order or a temporary injunction till the hearing of the application. (Para 6)

Anno: C.P.C., O. 39, R. 1 N. 2; O. 41 R. 5 N. 2.

(d) Constitution of India, Art. 215 — Contempt, what constitutes — (Contempt of Courts Act (1926), S. 1).

In the absence of any interim prohibitory order from the court, or of an undertaking by a party, it is not contempt for the party to do any act resulting in some proceedings pending before the court being rendered infructuous. A party should not anticipate order of the court even in his legitimate actions: 1941 Rang LR 747, Rel. on. (Para 6)

Anno: C. C. Act, S. 1 N. 3.

(e) Constitution of India, Art. 215 — Considerations of propriety — (Contempt of Courts Act (1926), S. 1).

On considerations of propriety, the jurisdiction of the High Court to commit for contempt cannot be exercised. (Para 6)

Anno: C. C. Act, S. 1 N. 3.

(f) Constitution of India, Art. 215 — Contempt of Court, what constitutes — (Contempt of Courts Act (1926), S. 1).

High Court dismissing application for prohibitory order against Government on ground of want of jurisdiction — Government issuing required notification pending such application — Issue of notification held caused no real prejudice to applicant — No substantial interference with due course of justice — Theoretical consideration of High Court taking different view was not sufficient to constitute notification contempt of Court. AIR 1931 Cal 257, Rel. on. (Para 6)

Anno: C. C. Act, S. 1 N. 3.

P. R. Das, Advocate, Supreme Court, for Petitioner.

CASES CITED:

- (A) (1808) 15 Ves Jun 248: 33 ER 748
- (B) (1895) 64 LJQB 694: (1895) 2 QB 264
- (C) (1870) 39 LJ Ex 189: 18 WR 982
- (D) (1895) 54 LJ Ch 720: 29 Ch D 204
- (E) (1895) 64 LJQB 200: 1895-1 QB 378
- (F) ('41) 1941 Rang LR 747
- (G) ('31) AIR 1931 Cal 257: 58 Cal 884: 32 Cri LJ 675

DIXIT J.: By this application, the petitioner prays for the issue of a rule against the non-applicants for having committed contempt of this Court by issuing a notification No. 66 dated 4-12-1952, published in the Extra-ordinary Gazette of 4-12-1952 appointing 4-12-1952 as the date of resumption of all Jagir lands in the State of Madhya Bharat under S. 3 (1) of the Madhya Bharat Abolition of Jagirs Act, 1951 and directing that "on and from the above date of resumption" all Jagir lands mentioned in the schedule annexed to the notification shall stand resumed to the State.

(2) The background of this application, briefly stated is that sometime in December 1951 the petitioner and other persons filed applications under Art. 226 of the Constitution of India challenging the validity of the Madhya Bharat Abolition of Jagirs Act (Act No. 28 of 1951). On the admission of those applications, this Court issued an order on 7-12-1951 restraining the State from giving effect to or acting in any manner by virtue of or under the Act, till the disposal of those petitions. The petitions were decided on 4-12-1952. It was held by this Court that the Act with the exception of certain provisions of Sch. 1 of the Act was valid. The petitioner was also granted leave to appeal to the Supreme Court. The order of this Court disposing of the applications under Art. 226 was pronounced at about 11.30 a.m. on 4-12-1952. Immediately afterwards an application was presented to this Court on behalf of the petitioner praying that the status quo be maintained and the State be prohibited from issuing any notification under S. 3 (1) of the Act till the disposal of the appeal which the petitioner proposed to file in the Supreme Court or at least till such time within which the petitioner could obtain an order of injunction from the Supreme Court.

The Advocate-General who was present in the Court at the time of the presentation of the said application, took notice of it. In order to enable the learned Advocate-General to reply to the application, we directed that the petition would be heard later in the day at 2.30 p.m. During the interval between the presentation of the application praying for a prohibitory order, and its hearing the Government issued the notification referred to above. The application for a temporary prohibitory order was dismissed by us on the ground that we had no jurisdiction to grant the order after the disposal of the applications under Art. 226. We also observed that the petition praying for an order restraining the Government from issuing any notification, under S. 3 (1) of the Act, had become infructuous as the Government had already issued the notification. The petitioner now complains that the issue of the notification constitutes a contempt of this Court.

(3) Learned counsel for the petitioner firstly urged that the notification in question would in law be deemed to have come into force from the midnight of 3-12-1952 and that as during the midnight of 3-12-1952 and the pronouncement of this Court's order on 4-12-1952 at about 11.30 a.m., the prohibitory order made by this Court in 1951 was operative, the issue of the notification constituted a breach of the order issued by this Court restraining the State from issuing any notification under S. 3 (1) of the Act till the disposal of the application under Art. 226. It was secondly urged that by issuing the notification the opponents 'tied down' the hands of this Court and interfered with the freedom of this Court in passing appropriate orders on the application made after the disposal of the petitions under Art. 226 for a temporary order restraining the State from issuing any notification under S. 3 (1) of the Act.

(4) On giving my careful and prolonged consideration to the contentions advanced on behalf of the petitioner, I have come to the conclusion that this application must be rejected. The contention that inasmuch as the notification issued on 4-12-1952 would be deemed to have become operative from the midnight of 3rd December, it constitutes a breach of the prohibitory order of this Court which was then in force, is easily disposed of, if the terms of the prohibitory orders are borne in mind. By the order dated 7-12-1951 this Court directed the Government to forbear only until the disposal of the application under Art. 226 from giving effect to or acting in any manner by virtue of or under the Madhya Bharat Abolition of Jagirs Act. The order did not prohibit the Government from exercising its powers under the Act after the disposal of the applications under Art. 226 and from issuing a notification having such legal effect as has been attributed by the learned counsel to the notification of 4th December. Therefore, I am at a loss to understand how the notification in question amounts to a disobedience of the prohibitory order of 7-12-1951. Even if the prohibitory order of 7-12-1951 is read as preventing the Government from issuing after the disposal of the applications under Art. 226, a notification resuming Jagirs from the midnight of 3-12-1952, learned counsel must show that the notification of 4-12-1952 has clearly that effect and there has been a wilful breach of the prohibitory order. It is well settled that the jurisdiction in respect of contempt proceedings should be exercised with scrupulous care and only when the case is clear and beyond reasonable doubt.

Learned counsel for the applicant took it for granted that the proposition that the notification issued on 4-12-1952 became operative from the midnight of 3-12-1952 was plain beyond argument. In my opinion the question is not free from doubt or difficulty. The rule laid down in S. 5 (3) of the General Clauses Act 1897 does not afford much help as it only applies to the construction of Acts and Regulations and is not made applicable to any notification that may be issued under an Act. The question as to when the notification in question can be said to have come into force has to be decided on the general principles. The notification in question no doubt appoints 4-12-1952 as the date of resumption of all Jagir lands and says "on and from the above date of resumption" all Jagir lands mentioned in the schedule shall stand resumed to the State. But there has been a great diversity of opinion as regards the legal effect of the use of the words "on and from" and the word "from" with reference to the computation of time and as to whether it must be treated as inclusive or exclusive of a terminus a quo. Some of the earlier English cases attempted to lay down hard and fast rules on the point. But later on, it was realised that no universal rule could be laid down on the question as to whether in computing time from an act or event, the first day, that is, the day on which the act was done was included or excluded.

In — 'Lester v. Garland', (1808) 33 ER 748 (A), Sir William Grant M. R. on a consideration of various earlier authorities observed as follows:

"It is not necessary to lay down any general rule upon this subject; but upon technical reasoning I rather think it would be more easy to maintain that the day of an act done or an event happening ought in all cases to be excluded than it should in all cases be included. Our law rejects fractions of a day more generally than the civil law does. The effect is to render it a sort of indivisible point so that any act done in the compass of it is no more referable to any one, than to any other portion of it, but the act and the day are co-extensive; and therefore the act cannot properly be said to be passed until the day is passed. But it is not necessary to lay down any general rule; whichever way it should be laid down, cases would occur, the reason of which would require exceptions to be made."

(5) Again in — 're North; Ex parte Hasluck', (1895) 2 QB 264 (B), Smith L. J. said that "in the reckoning of time each case must depend on its own circumstances and subject matter". To the same effect are the observations of Kelly C. B. in — 'Isaacs v. Royal Insurance Co.', (1870) 18 W R 982 (C) and of Chitty J. in — 'Railway Sleepers Supply Co., In re', (1895) 29 Ch D 204 (D). In Stroud's Judicial Dictionary, it is said that "from" is akin to "after" and when used with reference to computation of time, for example, from a stated day prima facie excludes the day of the date. There is also authority to say that the words "from" and "on and from" have the same meaning. (See — 'Sidebotham v. Holland', (1895) 1 QB 378 (E)). My object in referring to those various authorities is only to show that the question whether the day on which the notification was issued is to be included or excluded and whether the notification became operative at midnight of the 3rd December 1952 does not admit of a clear and easy answer, and that being so, the petitioner cannot say that there is a clear case of wilful disobedience for this Court to exercise the Extraordinary jurisdiction that it possesses in matters of contempt. The petitioner is not entitled to invoke this special jurisdiction of the High Court by way of proceedings for contempt of court for a decision on the important and complicated collateral question as to when the notification became operative.

(6) The petitioner's contention that the act of the Government in issuing the notification after receiving a notice of the petitioner's application praying for a prohibitory order and before its hearing amounts to a contempt of court, involves the assumption that the presentation of an application for stay or for a temporary injunction and the giving of the notice of the same to the opposite party itself operates as a stay order or a temporary injunction till the hearing of the application. I know of no authority for any such assumption. No doubt by the issue of the notification the petitioner's application for a prohibitory order was rendered infructuous. But to say that even in the absence of any interim prohibitory order from the Court, or of an undertaking by a party, it is not (sic) contempt for the party to do any act resulting in some proceedings pending before the Court being rendered infructuous and that if he does, then the act amounts to an interference with the course of justice, is to assert the proposition that a party should anticipate orders of this Court even in his legitimate actions. Such a proposition appears to me wholly unwarranted. No authority was cited by learned counsel for the petitioner in support of his contention. But I think it is relevant here to refer to a decision of the Rangoon High Court in — 'S. P. L. P. Narayanan Chettyar v. Doraikkannu', 1941 Rang LR 747 (F), which dealt with a problem somewhat similar to the one before us. In that case the Court came to a decision to appoint a receiver but did not name any officer or individual as receiver. In the meantime a party who was aware of the Court's decision to appoint a receiver collected and disbursed moneys which it was intended the receiver should collect and disburse, and thus rendered the appointment of a Receiver ineffective to a certain extent. Thereafter, contempt proceedings were instituted against the party collecting the rent.

It was held by the Rangoon High Court that for a party bound by a judgment to do anything which would make that judgment ineffective, was not in itself a contempt of court and, therefore, the act of the person, who was a party to the proceedings and who knew of the decision of the Court to appoint a receiver, in collecting and disbursing moneys did not amount to a contempt of court. The same principle applies here 'a fortiori'. Learned counsel for the petitioner characterised the action of the Government in issuing the notification as one done in "ugly haste". The action of the Government may be undignified, ill-advised, ill-considered and done in an indecent hurry. But on such considerations of propriety the jurisdiction of this Court to commit for contempt cannot be exercised. It must be remembered that the application for the grant of an order restraining the State from issuing any notification under S. 3 (1) of the Act was dismissed by us also on the ground that we had no jurisdiction to make any such order after the disposal of the petitions under Art. 226. It cannot, therefore, be maintained that the issue of the notification by the Government caused a real prejudice to the applicant and thus there was a substantial interference with the due course of justice. The fact that if a different view had been taken by the Court on the question of jurisdiction, then the Court would have found itself hampered by the notification in issuing the prohibitory order prayed for and that the notification, therefore, theoretically tendered to interfere with the administration of justice is not, in my opinion, sufficient to hold that the issue of the notification constitutes such a contempt as this court would be justified in dealing with summarily in the exercise of its jurisdiction in contempt. As was said by Rankin C. J. in — 'Anantalal v. A. H. Watson', AIR 1931 Cal 257 (G):

"The Court's jurisdiction in contempt is not to be invoked unless there is real prejudice which can be regarded as a substantial interference with the due course of justice. It is not every theoretical tendency that will attract the action of the Court in its very special jurisdiction. The purpose of the Court's action is a practical purpose, and it is reasonably clear, on the authorities, that this court will not exercise its jurisdiction upon a mere question of propriety."

(7) It has been stated in para. 13 of the petition that the Government conceived of the idea of issuing the notification long before the delivery of the order of this Court disposing of the petitions under Art. 226 and accordingly set its machinery in motion to prepare the matter for exercising the power under S. 3 of the Act and the date of the notification was "wrongly given as 4-12-1952". I do not see anything wrong in a party keeping himself in readiness, with an intelligent anticipation of the Court's order, to take a particular action. The petitioner does not allege that the notification bearing the date 4-12-1952 was actually issued and published before the delivery of this Court's order with regard to the petitioners under Art. 226. The petitioner also complains in para. 16 that the Government have by issuing a press communique attempted to nullify the Supreme Court's order restraining the State from proceeding further under the Act. As to this, it is sufficient to say that the petitioner should address the complaint to the Supreme Court and not to this Court.

(8) For the above reasons, I am of the opinion that this application should be dismissed.

(9) SHINDE C. J.: I agree.

(10) CHATURVEDI J.: I concur.

A/D.H.Z.

Application dismissed.

A. I. R. 1953 M. B. 247 (Vol. 40, C. N. 94)
(INDORE BENCH)

NEWASKAR J.

Dr. B. R. Choudhary, Applicant v. P. V. Bhagwat, Opponent.

Small Cause Revn. No. 25 of 1951, D/- 24-3-1953.

(a) Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101 to 103 — Suit for rent — Part of sum claimed relating to dues in respect of electric charges — Defendant denying existence of liability — It is for plaintiff to prove by tangible evidence how sum was made up.
(Para 5)

Anno: Evidence Act, Ss. 101 to 103 N. 37.

(b) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 38, R. 5 — Sufficiency of grounds.

The question of reasonability or justifiability of apprehension in the mind of the plaintiff regarding the fact that his dues might remain unpaid or his justifiability of his being nervous about their recovery are not factors which should weigh in determining the fact whether the attachment before judgment was applied for on sufficient grounds. The sufficiency of grounds will have to be determined with reference to the legal requirements under O. 38, R. 5.

Anno: C. P. C., O. 38, R. 5 N. 11.
(Para 6)

†(c) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 95(1)(a) — Attachment applied for on insufficient grounds.

Where the defendant whose property is attached before judgment furnishes security and gets the property released but before the removal of attachment protests that the attachment was on insufficient grounds, he is entitled to claim compensation. AIR 1942 All 261, Distinguished.

(Para 8)

Anno: C. P. C., S. 95 N. 4.

†(d) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 95(1) — Compensation for injury. 164 Ind Cas 73 (Cal), Dis-sented from.

General damages or compensation for injury on account of pain, suffering, humiliation etc., can be awarded under S. 95. AIR 1940 Mad 77, Rel. on. (Paras 10 and 12) Anno: C. P. C., S. 95 N. 7 Pts. 2 and 3.

S. L. Dube, for Applicant; D. G. Bhalerao, for Opponent.

CASES CITED :

(A) ('42) AIR 1942 All 261: ILR (1942) All 360

(B) ('36) 39 Cal WN 915: 164 Ind Cas 73

(C) ('40) AIR 1940 Mad 77: 189 Ind Cas 887

(D) ('83-86) 5 WR 91: 10 Moo Ind App 563 (PC)

ORDER: This is a petition for revision filed by the defendant-petitioner against the decree of Small Cause Judge, Indore. Plaintiff P. V. Bhagwat filed a suit on 12-12-1949 for recovery of Rs. 259/2/6 in respect of arrears of rent, electric and water charges due from the defendant on account of the leased premises in the possession of the defendant. The claim 'inter alia' consisted of Rs. 4-15-0 as balance due in respect of dues of June 1949 and Rs. 2-9-0 as balance of dues of July 1949. Along with the plaint the plaintiff submitted an application for attachment before judgment supported by an affidavit. Both the application & the affidavit were based on the allegations that the defendant had closed his business of medical practice, he was a resident of other State, and the defendant himself had stated that he would sell away his truck. There were further allegations that all this, probably meant closing of business and intended disposal of truck, was meant for defeating the plaintiff's claim. An order for attachment was passed ex parte on this application and the affidavit of the plaintiff and defendant's property consisting of furniture and type-writer was attached.

The defendant thereupon appeared the next day and submitted an application complaining that the attachment was secured by misrepresentation and he offered to furnish security and prayed for its release. The security bond was furnished. This was accepted on reference to the plaintiff's counsel on 13-12-1949. The property however was delivered back to the defendant on 29-12-1949. In pursuance of notice to show cause why the order for attachment before judgment or for security be not made absolute the defendant submitted a reply denying substantially the allegations as regards the stoppage of business of medical practice, his being a resident of outside Madhya Bharat and his intended sale of the truck. He also claimed compensation for the wrongful attachment.

(2) The defendant denied the items of Rs. 4-15-0 and Rs. 2-9-0 in respect of the dues for the month of June and July 1949. The rest of the claim was admitted omitting a small item of As. 7/- for notice charges which were disallowed.

(3) The trial Court decreed the claim of the plaintiff even in respect of the items of Rs. 4-15-0 and Rs. 2-9-0. It further held, while considering the question regarding the grant of compensation to the defendant for the alleged wrongful attachment that there were reasonable grounds for apprehending for the plaintiff that the defendant would leave this place, thereby defeating his claim of arrears of rent. He further held that the defendant had not proved any special pecuniary injury. Therefore relying on — 'Gyan Prakash v. Kishorilal', AIR 1942 All 261 (A) and — 'Chandulal Seraogi v. Purna Chandra', 164 Ind Cas 73 (Cal) (B) he disallowed the claim for compensation. The defendant has now come up in revision.

(4) Mr. Dubey who appears for the petitioner has urged firstly that the finding of the Court below regarding the liability of the defendant for the items of Rs. 4-15-0 and Rs. 2-9-0 is not legal. Secondly, it is contended that the decision on the question of award of compensation under S. 95, Civil P. C. has resulted in failure of justice.

(5) As regards the first point I am inclined to hold, on the materials as they stand that the view of the lower Court is not legally supportable. The defendant had denied these items for the months of June and July 1949. In his statement on oath he denied existence of any liability in respect of any period prior to August 1949. The plaintiff therefore ought to have shown by tangible evidence how the sum was made up. The sum did not relate to an admitted monthly liability for rent but to the dues in respect of electric charges as will appear from plaintiff's notice Ex. P/1. It was for the plaintiff therefore to prove this part of the case.

The trial Court holds that the plaintiff had demanded these items by notice Ex. P/1 to which no objection was raised by a reply to that effect. It was further said that according to plaintiff, receipts for rent paid, to be paid and the balances were mentioned in the original receipts and as original receipts are not produced plaintiff would be held entitled to these sums. I am afraid this course is not permissible. Receipts Ex. P/7 and P/8 which purport to be duplicates of the original receipts are not proved to have been delivered to the defendant. A question was put to the defendant to the effect that the duplicates bore the receipts of his son which he did not admit. In his examination-in-chief plaintiff leaves these items sublimely vague. The decision therefore on these points of the lower Court cannot stand. These items are disallowed.

(6) As regards the other point the finding of the Court below is that it was natural for the plaintiff to apprehend from the circumstances of the defendant closing his place of business of medical practice, by pledging his truck and irregularity in payment of rent, that the defendant might leave this State suddenly without satisfying his dues and the mere fact that he possessed considerable valuable furniture was not enough for him as the same was liable to be disposed of any moment. It was further observed that the defendant had expressed before Mr. Pande that as his business did not flourish in Indore he might go elsewhere and this was sufficient to unsettle the plaintiff's mind. For these grounds, he holds that the attachment was obtained on sufficient grounds.

In my opinion this is far from correct. The entire approach to the question by the trial Court is erroneous. The question of reasonability or justifiability of apprehension in the mind of the plaintiff regarding the fact that his dues might remain unpaid or his justifiability of his being nervous about their recovery are not factors which should weigh in determining the fact whether the attachment before judgment was applied for on sufficient grounds. The sufficiency of grounds will have to be determined with reference to the legal requirements under O. 38, R. 5, Civil P. C. for obtaining attachment before judgment and a finding whether they have been complied with or not.

(7) Neither the statement of plaintiff nor that of Pushpasheelrao Pande are enough to satisfy the Court that the order for attachment before judgment was obtained on sufficient grounds. The contents of the application for the purpose of the affidavit do not in any way improve the matter. There is hardly any material worth the name to establish that the defendant was about to dispose of the whole or any part of his property or was about to remove the whole or any part of his property from the local limits of jurisdiction of the Court of Small Causes, Indore, with intent to obstruct or delay the execution of any decree that may be passed against him.

(8) Mr. Bhalerao for the plaintiff contended that since the defendant furnished security and attachment was therefore withdrawn he cannot claim compensation and in support cited — 'AIR 1942 All 261 (A)'. But in the Allahabad case the defendant did not appear and show cause why the attachment should not be made. On the other hand, he paid the amount in suit and at a later stage applied under S. 95, Civil P. C. when the entire amount in suit was paid in Court. This is not the case here. The defendant appeared before the removal of attachment and protested that the attachment was on insufficient ground. No doubt the attachment was withdrawn on his furnishing security but the matter did not end there and the question with regard to validity of attachment continued to be the only material and vital issue on which parties came to grips. They led evidence and the Court gave a finding that the attachment was justifiable.

It cannot, in this case, therefore, be urged that the attachment was taken lying down and later after the Court had become 'functus officio' or in a subsequent suit the matter is sought to be agitated without an adjudication having been pressed for at an earlier stage. It would be strange result if the view were to prevail that no compensation would be claimable in case the defendant whose property is conditionally attached objects to the validity of attachment but furnishes security and gets his property released. This would mean that a person in order to claim compensation must suffer the inconvenience of allowing his goods to remain under attachment until the question of sufficiency of grounds for the attachment is determined and an order for vacating the attachment on that ground is obtained.

(9) The next point decided by the trial Court and pressed on behalf of the plaintiff before me is that no compensation would be claimable under S. 95, Civil P. C., in the absence of proof of special damages thereby meaning that the actual pecuniary loss resulting from wrongful attachment ought to be proved and that no compensation for loss of reputation or mental pain and suffering can be claimed. Reliance is placed on the cases reported in — 'AIR 1942 All 261 (A)' and — '164 Ind Cas 73 (Cal) (B)'. In the former case this point is not decided the case turning on another point which is discussed above. The latter seems to support this view. There are authorities which take a contrary view such as — 'Palanisami Goundar v. Kaliappa Goundar', AIR 1940 Mad 77 (C).

(10) Viewing the matter on the wording of S. 95, Civil P. C., the question would be whether the word injury would cover the cases of pecuniary loss or would also include other kind of injury such as one contemplated for the award of general damages. In my opinion there is nothing to limit the meaning of the word injury to actual pecuniary loss. On the other hand the use of the words "expenses or injury" would indicate actual pecuniary loss suffered as also other kind of injury in respect of which compensation can be awarded. In many cases such injury may be quite as substantial as actual pecuniary loss.

(11) In — 'Mudhun Mohan Doss v. Gokul Doss', 10 Moo Ind App 563 (D), their Lordships considered the question whether general damages apart from actual pecuniary loss can be awarded for wrongful attachment and it was held that the same were claimable. Their Lordships held:

"The principle ordinarily applied to actions of tort is, that the plaintiff is never precluded from recovering ordinary damages by reason of his failing to prove the special damage he has laid, unless the special damage is the gist of the action. Thus, in an action of slander of words actionable 'per se', when the plaintiff lays special damages, and fails to prove it, he is nevertheless entitled to such damages as the jury think right to give him. It would be otherwise if the words were not actionable 'per se'. In the present case, the gist of the action is not the special damage, but the unlawful attachment; and the plaintiff would not have been precluded from recovering ordinary damages for that actionable wrong, even if he had wholly failed to prove the special damage laid."

There is no reason why the principle underlying this view cannot be applicable to the case under consideration.

(12) I therefore hold that general damages or compensation for injury on account of pain, suffering, humiliation etc. can be awarded under Section 95, Civil P. C.

(13) In this case I consider Rs. 50/- as the sum that should be awarded on this account to the defendant.

(14) The result is that the revision is allowed. Plaintiff's claim in respect of the two items of Rs. 4-15-0 and Rs. 2-9-0 is reduced. The decree of the lower Court is modified in that respect. The defendant is awarded Rs. 50/- as compensation under S. 95, Civil P. C.

(15) The petitioner is awarded costs of this revision petition. The costs in the trial Court will be according to the success or failure of the parties.

A/V.R.B.

Revision allowed.

A. I. R. 1953 M. B. 249 (Vol. 40, C. N. 95)
DIXIT AND CHATURVEDI JJ.

Lalaram Surajmal, Appellant v. The State.
Criminal Appeal No. 102 of 1951, D/- 4-12-1952.

(a) Criminal trial — Benefit of doubt.

The principle of giving benefit of doubt to the accused operates only in those cases where there is prima facie satisfactory and extremely evenly balanced evidence on either side and the conduct of the accused is consistent with his guilt as well as innocence. Where the evidence led against the accused persons is rejected as utterly untrustworthy, there is no question of giving the accused persons any benefit of doubt. In such circumstances, the accused is acquitted not because there is any doubt about his guilt, but because there is no evidence even prima facie to indicate his guilt. (Para 8)

(b) Evidence Act (1872), S. 1 — “Falsus in uno falsus in omnibus” — (Criminal Trial — Witness) — (Maxims).

The maxim ‘falsus in uno falsus in omnibus’ is not applicable to India where codified rules of evidence exist and it is open to a Court to accept a part of the evidence of a witness while rejecting the rest of it. But the principles on which the Court so acts is not that though a witness has deliberately made some false statement, he may yet be considered to be a truthful witness as regards some other statements. The Court, however, acts on the principle that certain statements of such a witness being corroborated by the probabilities of the case and other reliable evidence appear to be true and should, therefore, be accepted. AIR 1936 All 747, Ref. (Para 9)

Anno: Evidence Act, S. 1 N. 9.

(c) Evidence Act (1872), S. 1 — False statement by witness — (Criminal Trial — Witness).

Where a witness is shown to have made deliberately false statements, he is prima facie utterly unreliable and there is no guarantee of the truth of any statements made by such a witness. (Para 9)

Anno: Evidence Act, S. 1 N. 9.

(d) Evidence Act (1872), S. 32 (1) — First information by person who is dead — (Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 154).

A first information report made by a person in the case is admissible as substantive evidence under S. 32 (1) if he dies before the matter comes before the Court. AIR 1927 Cal 17; AIR 1943 Cal 74; AIR 1930 Lah 450, Ref. (Para 11)

Anno: Evi. Act, S. 32 N. 2; Cr. P. C., S. 154 N. 10 Pt. 2.

(e) Evidence Act (1872), S. 32 (1) — Value of dying declaration.

If a portion of a dying declaration is untrue, the rest of it cannot necessarily be rejected. However, if a part of such statement is shown to have been concocted deliberately, the Court may decline to believe the rest of it without corroboration. AIR 1936 Cal 793; AIR 1946 Nag 301, Ref. (Para 11)

Anno: Evidence Act, S. 32 N. 9.

Dey and J. P. Gupta, for Appellant; Mungre, Govt. Advocate, for the State.

CASES CITED:

- (A) ('50) AIR 1950 All 355: 51 Cri LJ 993
- (B) ('36) AIR 1936 All 747: 37 Cri LJ 1104
- (C) ('27) AIR 1927 Cal 17: 54 Cal 237: 28 Cri LJ 99
- (D) ('43) AIR 1943 Cal 74: 44 Cri LJ 322
- (E) ('30) AIR 1930 Lah 450: 31 Cri LJ 475
- (F) ('36) AIR 1936 Cal 793: ILR (1937) 1 Cal 475: 38 Cri LJ 243
- (G) ('46) AIR 1946 Nag 301: 47 Cri LJ 625

DIXIT J.: The appellant Lalaram and his brother Karansingh were tried by the Sessions Judge of Morena for an offence under S. 302 read with S. 34, Penal Code for the murder of one Jalim. At the end of the trial, the learned Sessions Judge acquitted Karansingh giving him the benefit of doubt. But agreeing with the opinion of the assessors, he found the appellant Lalaram guilty under S. 302, Penal Code and sentenced him to transportation for life. Lalaram has now appealed to this Court against the conviction and the sentence.

(2) The prosecution case was that the appellant Lalaram was a servant of Sukhpal Singh, the zamindar of Kodaira, Madhopur and other villages and that in that capacity Lalaram used to take forced labour from the villagers and also recover from them illegal exactions. As a result of these acts of Lalaram, the villagers were displeased with him and persuaded him to give up the service of the zamindar. The prosecution alleged that the conduct of Sukhpal Singh the Zamindar and of his servant Lalaram was stoutly opposed by the deceased Jalim who constituted himself as a leader of the villagers and who was a close relation of the appellant. When the appellant Lalaram refused to leave the service of the zamindar, the villagers did not permit Lalaram to share with them the benefit of a patta in respect of certain lands in the zamindari of Sukhpal Singh which the villagers had obtained from the Collectorate. The prosecution alleged that on account of these reasons the relations between Lalaram and Jalim became strained and that on the evening of 8-5-51 at about 8 p.m. when Jalim was returning from the village-well with some water, the appellant Lalaram and his brother Karansingh assaulted Jalim with a sword and a farasha and inflicted on him severe injuries. It was said that Lalaram had a sword with him and Karansingh carried a farasha. The prosecution stated that Mst. Ram Devi a daughter of Jalim was with him at the time of the alleged occurrence and that when she shouted the prosecution witnesses Man Singh son of Hargyansingh P. W. 1, Sardar Singh P. W. 2, Har Prasad P. W. 6 came to the scene and witnessed the occurrence and that thereafter the accused persons ran away from the scene. The first information report was lodged by Jalim himself the same night at 2-30 in the morning in the police Station Jaora. In this report Jalim stated that there was some litigation between him and the accused persons and that earlier in the night at about 8 p. m. when he had gone to the village-well to fetch water, the accused gave him sword-blows and caused him severe injuries; that he was picked up by his cousin Mansingh and his nephew Sardar Singh and that the occurrence was witnessed by all the men and women-folk of the village. In the body of the first information report the accused persons have not been named. But in the column above it, the names of Lalaram and Karan Singh were entered as the accused persons. Jalim was then removed to the hospital for treatment. He, however, died on the afternoon on 9-5-51. A post mortem examination of the body of Jalim was held by Dr. Londhe, the medical Officer of Jaura. The doctor found multiple wounds and fractures on the body of Jalim and came to the conclusion that his death was due to these injuries. A few hours before the death of Jalim, his dying declaration was recorded at about 4-30 a. m. in the morning of 9-5-51 by Mr. Apte, the Sub-Divisional Magistrate of Jaura. In this statement Jalim said that on the previous evening, when he was bringing water and was near a chabutra Karan

Singh and one Lalai met him on the way, and then Lalai struck him with a sword and Karan Singh also gave him a lathi blow; and that at that time, no one was present but later on Man Singh and Sardar Singh came to the scene. Jalim also added in the statement that his ring was removed.

(3) The appellant Lalaram was arrested on 24-5-51. He denied having given any sword blows to Jalim. He pleaded alibi:

(4) At the trial, the evidence against Lalaram and his brother Karan Singh consisted of (1) the depositions of Man Singh P. W. 1, Sardar Singh P. W. 2, Har Prasad P. W. 5 and Mst. Ram Devi P. W. 6 who claimed to have seen the appellant and Karan Singh give blows to Jalim with a sword and a farasha (2) the dying declaration Ex. P. 2 of Jalim recorded by Mr. Apte and the report of the incident lodged with the police by Jalim himself.

(5) The deposition of Mst. Ram Devi is that she had gone with her father to the well to bring some water and when they were returning, Lalaram and his brother Karan Singh met them on the way; Lalaram who carried a sword stood on one side of Jalim and Karan Singh who had a farasha with him was on the other side of Jalim and both of them dealt several blows to Jalim and that when she shouted, Man Singh, Har Prasad and Sardar Singh who were in their homes closeby arrived on the scene. The witnesses Man Singh, Har Prasad and Sardar Singh said in their evidence that on hearing the cries of Jalim and Mst. Ram Devi, they ran to the scene of the occurrence and found that Lalaram and Karansingh were striking Jalim with a sword and a farasha respectively. None of these witnesses deposed to the precise part of Jalim's body where the blows were struck by each of the accused persons. All that they say is that Lalaram gave three blows and Karan Singh likewise gave two or three blows. All these witnesses were confronted with the statements they had made to the police in which they had omitted to mention the facts that Karan Singh was also present; that he carried a farasha with him and that he also assaulted Jalim. The explanation they gave before the learned Sessions Judge, as regards these omissions was one of simple denial that what the police recorded was not what they had told to the police. The learned Sessions Judge disbelieved the statements of these witnesses against Karan Singh. He, however, came to the conclusion that there was no reason to reject the statements of these witnesses showing the complicity of the appellant Lala Ram in the crime. The learned Sessions Judge, therefore, relying on the evidence of Man Singh, Sardar Singh, Har Prasad and Ram Devi and on the dying declaration Ex. P. 2 of the deceased found the appellant guilty of the murder of Jalim.

(6) Mr. Dey learned counsel for the appellant contended that the learned Sessions Judge having found that the statements of the alleged eye-witnesses as regards Karan Singh were not true, was not justified in regarding them as trustworthy witnesses against the appellant Lalaram; that according to Ex. P. 2 the dying declaration of Jalim, these witnesses were not present at the time of the alleged occurrence. As regards the dying declaration itself, it was said that inasmuch as the learned Sessions Judge had found the statements therein as regards Karan Singh as not true it should be rejected in toto and that in any case there was nothing to indicate that the person Lalai named in the dying declaration as the person who gave sword blows was no other than the appellant Lalaram. Learned Counsel for the appellant also argued on the basis of — 'Har Chando v. Rex', A I R 1950 All 355 (A) that as the prosecution put forward a definite story that the appellant Lalaram and his brother Karan Singh both assaulted Jalim with a sword and a farasha, on the acquittal of Karan Singh the prosecution cannot urge for a conviction of the appellant Lalaram for the murder of Jalim on a supposition that all the injuries received by Jalim were inflicted by him i.e. by Lalaram and that as the prosecution evidence does not disclose at all which of the injuries received by Jalim were inflicted by Lalaram, he cannot be convicted even for causing hurt to Jalim.

(7) On a consideration of the evidence on record and the contentions of the learned counsel for the appellant and of the learned Govt. Advocate for the State, I am inclined to think that the contentions advanced on behalf of the appellant are well founded and must be accepted.

(8) Dealing first, with the testimony of the alleged eye-witnesses Man Singh, Har Prasad, Sardar Singh and Mst. Ram Debi, it is clear from the judgment of the learned Sessions Judge that he has found their statements implicating Karan Singh as definitely false on the ground that the witnesses had omitted to say anything about Karan Singh in their statements before the police and had not given any satisfactory explanation of the omission. At one place the learned Sessions Judge observes that the evidence of these witnesses is altogether suspicious. Later on he has said that the statement of Sardar Singh and Har Prasad that Karan Singh attacked Jalim with a farasha is clearly false and added as an afterthought. The learned Sessions Judge says "Karan Singh ne Jalim ko farase se marane ka waka sarasar galat bataur after thought badhya hua hai." In regard to Mst. Ram Debi and Har Prasad, the learned Sessions Judge has also said that these witnesses are 'tutored' witnesses. From these remarks of the learned Sessions Judge, it is plain that he was in no doubt as to the fact that all these witnesses had made false statements as regards Karan Singh. It is no doubt true that while acquitting Karan Singh the learned Sessions Judge has said that Karan Singh should be given the benefit of doubt. But I fail to understand how when the learned Sessions Judge rejected the evidence of eye-witnesses against Karan Singh as demonstrably false and acquitted Karan Singh on the ground that there was no evidence against him, the acquittal of Karan Singh could be described as one resting on the principle of giving benefit of doubt to the accused. To my mind, the principle of giving benefit of doubt to the accused person operates only in those cases where there is prima facie satisfactory and extremely evenly balanced evidence on either side and the conduct of the accused is consistent with his guilt as well as innocence. Where the evidence led against the accused persons is rejected as utterly untrustworthy, there is no question of giving the accused persons any benefit of doubt. In such circumstances, the accused is acquitted not because there is any doubt about his guilt, but because there is no evidence even prima facie to indicate his guilt.

The learned Sessions Judge was, therefore, not accurate when he described the case of Karan Singh as one of giving benefit of doubt to the accused.

(9) In accepting the evidence of the eye-witnesses against the appellant Lalaram, the learned Sessions Judge has been guided by the consideration that the maxim 'falsus in uno falsus in omnibus' is not applicable and that the evidence of a witness who has made an untrue statement in some respect can be accepted as regards rest of what he states and that there is no valid ground for discarding the statement of the eye-witnesses that Lalaram gave sword blows to Jalim. In my opinion, the learned Sessions Judge was not right in accepting the evidence of Man Singh, Harprasad, Sardar Singh and Mst. Ram Devi as the basis of the appellant's conviction. It is true that the maxim quoted above is not applicable to India where codified rules of evidence exist and it is open to a Court to accept a part of the evidence of a witness while rejecting the rest of it. But the principle on which the Court so acts is not that though a witness has deliberately made some false statement, he may yet be considered to be a truthful witness as regards some other statements. The Court, however, acts on the principle that certain statements of such a witness being corroborated by the probabilities of the case and other reliable evidence appear to be true and should, therefore, be accepted. A Court may again consider a part of the evidence of a witness to be not free from doubt and may think it unsafe to rely on it. But the rejection of such a statement of a witness does not necessarily destroy the value of his other statements. Where, however, a witness is shown to have made deliberately false statements, there can be no doubt that he is prima facie utterly unreliable and there can be no guarantee of the truth of any statements made by such a witness. The circumstances, in which a Court accepts one part of the evidence of a witness while rejecting the other have been indicated in a decision of the Allahabad High Court in — 'Ashiq Ali v. Emperor', AIR 1936 All 747 (B). It has been pointed out in that case that evidence which is merely unconvincing or doubtful does not stand on the same footing as regards perjured evidence and that here the Court considers one part of the evidence of a witness to be not free from doubt, it may well refuse to act upon it without destroying the value of the rest of it, as in doing so all that the Court implies is that it is not safe to accept it.

(10) In the present case the learned Sessions Judge has found the evidence of Man Singh, Har Prasad, Sardar Singh and Mst. Ram Devi implicating Karan Singh as tutored and false. These witnesses have not deposed to the details of the blows, inflicted by the accused persons. They have only stated in a general way that Lalaram gave two or three blows and Karan Singh gave two or three blows. Again, according to the dying declaration Ex. P. 2 it would appear that these witnesses did not actually see the assault, but came on the scene afterwards. In Ex. P. 2 Jalim stated that when he was assaulted, nobody was present and that Man Singh and Sardar Singh came afterwards. It is also remarkable that Jalim makes no mention in Ex. P. 2 of the presence of Ram Debi who deposed that she had accompanied Jalim to the well and also returned with him. I find it difficult to believe that if Mst. Ram Debi had really accompanied her father to the well and was with him at the time of the assault, Jalim would have omitted to state specifically that she was present at the time of the assault. The prosecution also admit that there was considerable illfeeling between the villagers and the appellant Lalaram. Having regard to all these circumstances, there can be no guarantee of the truth of the statements of these witnesses implicating even the appellant, Lalaram. For all we know the witnesses might have falsely implicated the appellant Lalaram, like his brother Karan Singh. In my view, it would be very unsafe to found the conviction of the appellant Lala Ram on the evidence of such witnesses.

(11) Coming now to the evidence of the dying declaration of Jalim, it must first be stated that in this case there are two dying declarations of Jalim. The first information report which Jalim himself made in the case is admissible as substantive evidence under S. 32(1) of the Evidence Act as Jalim died before the matter came before the Court. See — 'Azimaddy v. Emperor', AIR 1927 Cal 17 (C); — 'Emperor v. Mohammad Sheik', AIR 1943 Cal 74 (D); — 'Kapur Singh v. Emperor', AIR 1930 Lah 450 (E). The other dying declaration is Ex. P. 2 which was recorded on the morning of 9-5-51. There are serious discrepancies between the first information report and the dying declaration Ex. P. 2. In the first information report, it was mentioned by Jalim that both the accused persons attacked him with swords and that the incident was witnessed by all the villagers. Before the Magistrate, Jalim said that one person named Lalai gave him sword blows and Karan Singh hit him with a Lathi and that at that time no body was present. The learned Sessions Judge has not accepted the dying declaration in so far as it implicates Karan Singh. Now, it is no doubt true that if a portion of a dying declaration is untrue, the rest of it cannot necessarily be rejected. As pointed out in — 'Naimuddin Biswas v. Emperor', AIR 1936 Cal 793 (F) as also in — 'Provincial Govt., C.P. and Berar v. Jagan Bhat Sitaram', AIR 1946 Nag 301 (G) dying declaration cannot be discarded as a whole merely because some portions of it are untrue and it is always a question of fact as to whether a dying declaration should be relied upon or not, and if a part of such statement is shown to have been concocted deliberately, the Court would decline to believe the rest of it without corroboration. I am of opinion that the dying declaration of Jalim ought not to be acted upon for finding the appellant Lalaram guilty of the murder of Jalim, when there is no corroborative evidence and when there are signs of attempt to improve and develop the prosecution evidence at successive stages. In fact the statement of Jalim in Ex. P. 2 that one 'Lalai' struck him with a sword is hardly of any value against the appellant Lalaram. This statement does not necessarily indicate that this Lalai was no other than the appellant Lalaram. The learned Magistrate who recorded the dying declaration Ex. P. 2 did not ask Jalim as to who this 'Lalai' was. The Magistrate should have questioned Jalim so as to elicit from him a clear and unambiguous statement as to the identity of his assailant. As it is the dying declaration Ex. P. 2 does not directly indicate the appellant. It cannot be regarded as one referring to the appellant Lalaram as there is no evidence to show that the appellant is known by the name of Lalai also and as the learned Sessions Judge has not questioned the appellant about his aliases. The report made by Jalim to the police in which he accused the appellant of striking him with a sword has also very little evidential value in the present case. From the deposition of Kamta Prasad P. W. 4 the Head Constable who took down the report, it is clear that the report is not the 'ipsissima verba' of Jalim but only a substance of the answers which Jalim gave to the various questions put to him by the Head Constable. Kamta Prasad said that some fifteen persons brought Jalim on a cot to the police station and that when he questioned Jalim for taking down the report, some of his answers were not intelligible to him. There is thus considerable room for doubting whether the report made by Jalim him by the persons who brought him to the police station, answers hinted by leading questions put to him by the Head Constable and inferences drawn by the Head Constable. These circumstances cannot be ignored in determining the value to be attached to the report of Jalim to the Police. In order to enable the Court to understand what the person making the declaration meant, it is essential that the declaration should be taken down in the exact words of the person making it. Where as in the present case it is impossible to discover how much of the report made to the police by the deceased was suggested by the persons who accompanied the deceased to the police station and by the questions put by the Constable taking down the report and how much was the production of the deceased himself, no weight can be attached to the dying declaration contained in the report. For all these reasons I do not feel that in this case the first information report by the deceased Jalim or his subsequent dying declaration Ex. P. 2 can be taken as one on which full and implicit reliance can safely be placed.

(12) In the view I take of the evidence on record, it becomes unnecessary to consider the contention of Mr. Dey that on the acquittal of Karan Singh, the appellant Lalaram cannot be found guilty of the offence of murder and even of causing any hurt. The argument is based on the decision of the Allahabad High Court in AIR 1950 All 355 (A). The point raised by the learned Counsel is no doubt very important. But the difficulty I feel in the consideration of the question in the present case is that the learned Sessions Judge while acquitting Karan Singh has not given any finding as to whether the assault on Jalim was the act of more than one person in furtherance of common intention or whether it was the appellant Lalaram alone who inflicted all the injuries found on the body of the deceased. Before proceeding to find the appellant guilty under S. 302, Penal Code the learned Sessions Judge should have given clear findings as to whether the appellant Lalaram was constructively or individually liable for the murder of Jalim. The learned Sessions Judge did not take the trouble of summoning before him Dr. Londhe who conducted the post mortem examination and ascertaining from him whether the injuries found on the body of Jalim were all sword injuries, and if not, which of the injuries were sword injuries and whether the sword injuries were fatal in themselves. The evidence as it is, does not, in my opinion, establish either the common intention required by S. 34, Penal Code or the injury or injuries actually inflicted by the appellant. In these circumstances, I do not think it would be proper for me to consider the correctness or the applicability to the present case of the decision of the Allahabad High Court cited by the learned Counsel for the appellant.

(13) In my opinion, the prosecution evidence is untrustworthy and it would not be safe to hold the appellant guilty of the offence of the murder of Jalim on such evidence. I would, therefore, accept this appeal and acquit the appellant Lalaram of the charge of murder.

(14) CHATURVEDI J.: I agree.

B/V.S.B.

Accused acquitted.

A. I. R. 1953 M. B. 253 (Vol. 40, C. N. 96)
(GWALIOR BENCH)

DIXIT J.

Gordhan Das Dwarkadas, Applicant v. Phool Chand Chandmal, Respondent.

Civil Revn. No. 34 of 1952, D/- 15-12-1952.

Houses and Rents — M. B. Sthan Niyantran Vidhan (15 of 1950), S. 7(2) — Notice under.

The object of the legislature in requiring a notice under S. 7(2) should be given to the other party, is to afford the opponent an opportunity to reconsider his position with regard to the claim made and to settle the claim if so advised without recourse to the trouble and costs of proceedings before the Rent Controller. Where the proceedings for the fixation of the rent have already been initiated by one party after giving notice to the other, there is no question of further notice being given by the opponent to the initiator of the proceedings, of his reply claiming a fixation of the rent after a reduction or enhancement, as the case may be, in the rent.

(Para 2)

Motilal Gupta, for Non-Applicant; Diwan, for Applicant.

ORDER: This revision petition arises out of proceedings for the fixation of rent under 'the Madhya Bharat Sthan Niyantran Vidhan, 1950.' The facts are that on 31-5-51 Gordhan Das presented an application under S. 7(4) of the Act before the Rent Controller for the fixation of rent payable by his tenant Phool Chand alleging that the agreed rent was inadequate. On 27-7-51, the tenant put in his objections to the enhancement of the rent and also prayed that the rent be reduced as it was excessive. The tenant described his objections as a cross-suit for the fixation of the proper rent. Thereafter, the applicant landlord raised an objection that the tenant's cross-suit was not maintainable as he had failed to give to the landlord a notice under S. 7(2) of the Act of his intention to commence proceedings before the Rent Controller for the fixation of the rent. The Rent Controller accepted the objection of the landlord and held that the tenant's claim for a reduction in the rent was not maintainable as the requisite notice of the claim had not been given to the landlord under S. 7(2). Phool Chand then appealed to the Court of the District Judge, Gwalior from the order of the Rent Controller. The learned District Judge set aside the order of the Rent Controller and directed him to entertain the tenant's claim as regards the reduction of the rent.

(2) After hearing Mr. Diwan, the learned counsel for the applicant, I think there is no force in this revision petition. Mr. Diwan's contention is that the tenant's cross-suit is not maintainable because under S. 7(2) of the Act, if a tenant desires that the rent should be reduced, he must move the Rent Controller for the fixation of the rent after giving a notice to the landlord. It is no doubt, true that if the landlord claims that the rent should be enhanced or the tenant claims that it should be reduced, the landlord or the tenant, as the case may be, has to move the Rent Controller for the fixation of rent after giving a notice in writing to the other party. But it is clear from the wording of cl. (2) of S. 7 that the notice referred to therein is for the purpose of the commencement of the proceedings before the Rent Controller for the fixation of the rent. Where the proceedings for the fixation of the rent have already been initiated by one party after giving notice to the other, there is no question of further notice being given by the opponent to the initiator of the proceedings, of his reply claiming a fixation of the rent after a reduction or enhancement, as the case may be, in the rent. It must be noticed that the object of the legislature in requiring a notice under sub-s. (2) of S. 7 should be given to the other party is to afford the opponent an opportunity to reconsider his position with regard to the claim made and to settle the claim if so advised without recourse to the trouble and costs of proceedings before the Rent Controller. If therefore, where a landlord has already commenced proceedings for the fixation of the rent after alleging that the rent being paid to him is inadequate there is hardly any point in requiring the tenant to give a notice to the landlord, of his claim in reply that the rent should be one lower than what is being actually paid by him.

(3) Likewise, it is meaningless to require a landlord to give a notice of his claim for enhancement of the rent where a tenant has already initiated proceedings for the fixation of the rent after alleging that the rent being paid by him is excessive. It must be noted that the proceedings before the Rent Controller under Ss. 7 and 9 of the Act are primarily for the fixation of the 'proper rent' and not for the enhancement or reduction of the rent payable by the tenant to the landlord. In determining what is a proper rent in proceedings initiated by the landlord, the Rent Controller is not debarred from reducing the rent being paid by the tenant. So also when the proceedings for the fixation of rent have been commenced by the tenant, the Rent Controller can come to the conclusion that the proper rent would be one higher than that actually being paid by the tenant. To accept the contention of the learned counsel for the applicant that in the present case the tenant's claim in reply for a reduction in the rent is not maintainable as he has failed to give a notice of the same to the landlord, would be to hold in effect that in a claim by the landlord for the fixation of the rent, the Rent Controller has no jurisdiction to reduce it and that similarly in a claim by the tenant the Rent Controller can only reduce the rent and not enhance it and that the proceedings for the enhancement or the reduction of it are independent proceedings and not integral parts of proceedings for the fixation of proper rent. These conclusions are not warranted by the language of section 7 of the Act.

(4) For these reasons and without expressing any opinion on the question whether the notice under S. 7(2) is the foundation of the jurisdiction of the Rent Controller, I would uphold the order of the District Judge, Gwalior and dismiss this revision petition with costs.

B/H.G.P.

Revision dismissed.

A. I. R. 1953 M. B. 254 (Vol. 40, C. N. 97)
(INDORE BENCH)

SHINDE C. J.

Purshottam Vijaya and others, Applicants v. Dilipsinghi and another, Opponents.

Criminal Ref. No. 143 of 1951, D/- 6-8-1952.

(a) Criminal P. C. (1898), Ss. 247, 259 — Appearance of complainant.

Appearance of the complainant contemplated both under Ss. 259 and 247 is personal appearance. The presence of the complainant's pleader is not enough to avoid the consequence specified under both these sections. AIR 1936 All 658 and AIR 1926 Mad 1009, Ref. (Para 2)

Anno: Cr. P. C., S. 247 N. 5 Pt. 1; S. 259 N. 4.

(b) Constitution of India, Art. 362 — Nature and enforceability of Art. 13, of the Covenants of Madhya Bharat Rulers — (Interpretation of Statutes — (Civil P. C. (1908) Pre.) — (Covenants of Madhya Bharat Rulers, Art. 13).

The covenant is an agreement between the rulers of Gwalior, Indore and certain other States in Central India. The Government of India gave its concurrence and guarantee to this Covenant. But this Covenant is only an agreement and not a statute. AIR 1952 Madh-B 57 (FB), Rel. on.

The function of the Judiciary is to interpret the law and to enforce the due observance of it. Unless and until, therefore, the agreement is elevated to the status of law by the legislature Courts cannot enforce the observance of it.

(Para 4)

Anno: C. P. C., Pre. N. 7.

†(c) Constitution of India, Art. 362 — Exemption from personal appearance as complainant of Ruler of Sailana State — (Covenants of Madhya Bharat Rulers, Art. 13) — Criminal P. C. (1898), Ss. 197-A, 259.

In pursuance of the power given by Art. 362, Parliament incorporated S. 197A in the Criminal Procedure Code by which the prosecution of rulers of former Indian States is inhibited except with the previous sanction of the Central Government. By the same section provisions of sub-s. (2) of S. 197 are also made applicable to the Rulers of former Indian States. But no other privilege has been provided for by legislation. It follows, therefore, that the privilege of exemption from personal attendance in Court as a complainant has not been provided for by the law. No such exemption, therefore, can be legally granted to the Ruler of Sailana State even assuming that he enjoyed the privilege of exemption from personal attendance in Courts outside Sailana State even as a complainant. (Para 4)

Anno: Cr. P. C., S. 259 N. 5.

Dubey, for Applicants Nos. 1, 2 and 3; D. P. Bhargava, for Potdar; Karanjkar, for Opponent No. 1; Govt. Advocate present.

CASES CITED :

- (A) ('36) AIR 1936 All 658: 37 Cri LJ 1028
- (B) ('26) AIR 1926 Mad 1009: 27 Cri LJ 988
- (C) ('52) AIR 1952 Madh-B 57: ILR (1952) Madh-B 178 (FB)

ORDER: This is a reference by the Sessions Judge, Indore under S. 438, Criminal P. C. The short facts which have given rise to this reference are as follows: His Highness the Raja of Sailana Shree Dilipsinghji filed a complaint under S. 500, Penal Code, against Shree Motilal Potdar, Shree Purshottam Vijaya, Shree Krishnakant Vyas and Shree C. M. Shah in the Court of the Additional District Magistrate, Indore. Along with the complaint Shree Dilipsinghji also filed an application stating that the complainant was the ruling chief of Sailana State before the merger of the State into Madhya Bharat, and as such his privileges have been guaranteed under Art. 13 of the Covenant; the complainant therefore should be exempted from personal attendance in Court. This application was granted by the Court 'ex parte'. On 14-7-1951 the accused as summoned presented themselves in Court. Purshottam Vijaya accused 2 submitted an application and contended that according to law the claim of the complainant for exemption from personal appearance cannot be accepted. The learned Additional District Magistrate heard the arguments of both the parties and held that the contention raised on behalf of Purshottam Vijaya could not be upheld. Against that order the accused filed a revision before the Sessions Judge, Indore who being of the opinion that the order of the learned Magistrate was illegal has made this reference.

(2) Before proceeding to determine the question whether the complainant is entitled to the privilege of exemption from personal attendance in Court it is necessary to examine the position of law in respect of attendance in general. Under S. 259, Criminal P. C. it is specifically laid down that when the proceedings have been instituted upon complaint and upon any day fixed for the hearing of the case the complainant is absent, the Magistrate may, in his discretion discharge the accused at any time before the charge has been framed provided the offence is compoundable or is non-cognizable. In summons cases S. 247, Criminal P. C. provides that when summons has been issued on complaint, and upon the day appointed for the appearance of the accused, the complainant does not appear the Magistrate shall acquit the accused, unless for some reason he thinks proper to adjourn the hearing. Appearance of the complainant contemplated both under Ss. 259 and 247 is personal appearance. The presence of the complainant's pleader is not enough to avoid the consequences specified under both these sections vide — 'Piraglal v. Rustamsingh', AIR 1926 All 658 (A) and — 'Tonkya v. Jagannatha', AIR 1926 Mad 1009 (B). Section 198, Criminal P. C. lays down that no Court shall take cognizance of an offence falling under Chap. 19 or Chap. 21, Penal Code or under Ss. 493 to 496 of the same Code except upon a complaint made by some person aggrieved by such offence. The said section makes exception only in the case of pardanashin women and persons under the age of 18 years and persons who are lunatic or idiots or who are from sickness or infirmity unable to make a complaint. The complaint filed in this case is under Chap. 21, Penal Code. Consequently the complaint must be filed by a person aggrieved by such offence, unless the person is covered by any of the exceptions given in section 198. All these sections point only to one conclusion and that is that the complainant must be present in Court in person.

(3) The complainant in his application dated 31-1-1951 states that under Art. 13 of the Covenant all his privileges as a ruler have been safeguarded and consequently he should be given an exemption from personal attendance in Court. Article 13 itself does not specify what privileges have been guaranteed under the said Article. Article 13 of the Covenant reads as follows:

"The Ruler of each covenanting State, as also the members of his family, shall be entitled to all the personal privileges, dignities and titles enjoyed by them, whether within or outside the territories of the State, immediately before the 15th day of August, 1947."

The Article only states in general that the rulers and the members of their family shall be entitled to all the personal privileges, dignities and titles enjoyed by them whether within or without the territories of their respective States immediately before the 15th day of August, 1947. There must be, therefore, some evidence to show what personal privileges the complainant enjoyed both within and without the territory of Sailana State. No evidence was produced by the complainant before the arguments of the parties were heard. It appears from the record that the arguments were heard on 23-7-1951. On 31-7-1951 one Madanlal filed an affidavit stating that he was a Shirstedar of the Diwan of Sailana and afterwards household officer and that in Sailana State His Highness was exempted from personal attendance in Court. It does not appear that an opportunity was given to the opposite party to produce any evidence, in rebuttal. Yet the learned Magistrate relied upon the affidavit in passing the order. This course followed by the learned Magistrate was improper. However, the affidavit only states that the complainant had a personal privilege of exemption from personal attendance in all the Courts in Sailana. Madanlal who was only a household officer is not likely to know the exact nature of the privileges enjoyed by the complainant. Even if it be conceded that he had this knowledge, he only states that the complainant had this privilege in the Courts of Sailana State. There is no evidence to show that even as a complainant the ruler of Sailana had the privilege of exemption from personal attendance in Court. In any case there is no evidence to support his claim for exemption outside Sailana State.

(4) Even if it be postulated that the Ruler of Sailana enjoyed the privilege of exemption from personal attendance in Courts outside

Sailana State even as a complainant, we have to see if such a privilege can be claimed now. Article 13 of the Covenant safeguards the privileges enjoyed by the rulers before 15-8-1947. The Covenant is an agreement between the rulers of Gwalior, Indore and certain other States in Central India. The Government of India gave its concurrence and guarantee to this Covenant. But this Covenant is only an agreement and not a statute. In — 'Shree Ram Dube v. the State', AIR 1952 Madh B 57 (FB) (C), Dixit J. at page 76 observed as follows:

"The Covenant is not a statute. It is as its name implies a compact between the signatories to the Covenant, the object of which is to secure the welfare of the people of the region by the establishment of a new State comprising the territories of the Covenantee States with a common Executive, Legislature and Judiciary."

Consequently unless this agreement is cloaked in the garb of law by the legislature it cannot be given effect to. The function of the Judiciary is to interpret the law and to enforce the due observance of it. Unless and until, therefore, the agreement is elevated to the status of law by the legislature Courts cannot enforce the observance of it. With a view to give effect to this agreement the framers of the constitution included Art. 362 in the Constitution. Article 362 lays down as follows:

"In the exercise of the power of Parliament or of the Legislature of a State to make laws or in the exercise of the executive power of the Union or of a State, due regard shall be had to the guarantee or assurance given under any such Covenant or agreement as is referred to in clause (1) of Art. 291 with respect to the personal rights, privileges and dignities of the Ruler of an Indian State."

In pursuance of the power given by Art. 362 Parliament incorporated S. 197(a) in the Criminal Procedure Code. By this section the prosecution of rulers of former Indian States is inhibited except with the previous sanction of the Central Government. By the same section provisions of sub-s. (2) of S. 197 are also made applicable to the Rulers of former Indian States. But no other privileges has been provided for by legislation. It follows, therefore, that the privilege of exemption from personal attendance in Court as a complainant, has not been provided for by the law. No such exemption, therefore, can be legally granted to the complainant. In my judgment, therefore, the order of the learned Additional District Magistrate was clearly wrong.

(5) I, therefore, accept the reference and set aside the order of exemption from personal attendance granted to the complainant by the trial Court.

A/D.R.R.

Reference accepted.

A. I. R. 1953 M. B. 256 (Vol. 40, C. N. 98)
(GWALIOR BENCH)

CHATURVEDI J.

Bhagirath Singh, Applicant v. Parmai and others, Opponents.

Criminal Reference No. 30 of 1952, D/- 8-1-53.

Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 250—Applicability.

Section does not apply to proceedings under S. 107 — Compensation cannot be ordered against person who petitions under that section because person against whom action is sought is not accused of any offence. Case law referred to. (Para 1)
Anno: Cr. P. C., S. 250 N. 1.

Dy. Govt Advocate and Kalare, for Applicant.

CASES CITED.

- (A) ('10) 7 Ind Cas 290: 7 All LJ 743
- (B) ('93) 1893 All WN 114: 15 All 365
- (C) ('01) 2 Bom LR 339: 25 Bom 48
- (D) ('23) AIR 1923 All 332 (1): 45 All 363: 24 Cri LJ 228
- (E) ('24) AIR 1924 All 269: 46 All 109: 25 Cri LJ 750
- (F) ('27) AIR 1927 All 531: 49 All 750: 28 Cri LJ 604
- (G) ('35) AIR 1935 Lah 29: 1935 Cr C 20

ORDER: This is a reference by the learned Sessions Judge of Bhind recommending the cancellation of an order passed under S. 250, Cr. P. C. by a Second Class Magistrate of Lahar. The order was passed in proceedings under S. 107, Cr. P. C. The complainant had made an application to the Magistrate asking him to order Parmai and three others to furnish security to keep peace. A date was fixed for taking evidence, but on that date the complainant adduced no evidence, and, the Magistrate dismissed the application & ordered the complainant to pay costs to the four persons regarding them as accused. The wording of S. 250 is clear that an order for compensation can be made only in cases instituted by a 'complaint' as defined in the Code or upon information by a Police Officer to a Magistrate, where a person is accused of an offence triable by a Magistrate. A 'complaint' means an allegation made to a Magistrate with a view to his taking action that some person has committed an offence, and an 'offence' means any act or omission punishable by any law for the time being in force. In view of the definition of the word "offence" in the Code, it is clear that a person in respect of whom information has been laid before a Magistrate to the effect that he is likely to commit a breach of the peace or is otherwise liable to the provisions of S. 107 of the Code is not a person accused of any offence. Therefore an order for payment of compensation cannot be made against a man, who has petitioned a Magistrate to take action under S. 107 of the Code. Section 250 therefore cannot be applied to the proceedings under S. 107 of the Code. I am fortified in this view by many rulings reported in — Ram Sukh Rai v. Mahadeo Rai, 7 All LJ 743 (A); — 'Queen Empress v. Lakhpat', 15 All 365 (B); — 'In re Govind Hanmant', 25 Bom 48 (C); — 'Ram Badan Singh v. Janaki', AIR 1923 All 332 (1) (D); — 'Ghariba v. Emperor', AIR 1924 All 269 (E); — 'Bajinath v. Kalicharan', AIR 1927 All 531 (F) and — 'Rohel v. Kaura', AIR 1935 Lah 29 (G). I therefore accept the reference on this point and set aside the order of compensation. The amount if paid will be refunded.

C/M.K.S.

Reference accepted.

A.I.R. 1953 MADH.-B. 257 (Vol. 40, C.N. 99)

(GWALIOR BENCH)

(FULL BENCH)

SHINDE C. J., DIXIT AND NEWASKAR JJ.

Madhaorao Ramrao and others, Applicants v. State of Madhya Bharat.

Civil Misc. Cases Nos. 11 to 21 of 1952, D/-1-9-1953.

(a) Constitution of India, Art. 295(1) — Obligation to maintain irregular forces i.e., Shiledars of erstwhile Scindia State, if it at all constitutes a statutory right of the shiledars, rests, in view of the correspondence between the Union and the State of Madhya Bharat, on the State of Madhya Bharat and not upon the Union. (Paras 15, 16)

(b) Constitution of India, Arts. 31, 19 and 226 — "Property" — Payments made to irregular forces (Shiledars, etc.) by Scindias, are not property — Nature of payment — Govt. of Madhya Bharat can stop these payments — No infringement of fundamental right — No writ can issue — (Interpretation of Statutes — Orders having force of law and merely administrative orders — Distinction) — (Civil P. C. (1908), Preamble).

Held after considering the scheme of the Shiledari Service (Irregular Forces of the Scindia State), and the Orders of the Maharaja of Scindia, namely "Kalambandi Intijam Mahaleme Irregular Behede Shiledari, Smt. 1969 (1912 A.D.) and the subsequent similar Kalambandi of Smt. 1991 (1934 A.D.) issued by the last ruler, and the Notification, dated 31-3-1929 issued by Army Headquarters, in pursuance of the resolution by the Council of Regency, that the payments made to the Shiledars were made for service only and they were no hereditary grants as such. The mere hereditary character exhibited in the enlistment of the new cadets could not mean that it was property belonging to the particular Shiledar or Ekkans. Provision for payment of the maintenance allowance to widow or minor children of the deceased Shiledar did not necessarily mean that there was any proprietary interest in the deceased Shiledar as regards the payments which he used to receive. This could only be regarded as compassionate allowance. Consequently, the payments made to these Shiledars did not constitute property belonging to them whether the same be, as Bachat holders, Headquarter Shiledars or Ekkans. The provisions in the two Kalambandis were in the nature of recognition schemes of administrative nature and did not involve conferment of or recognition of a statutory right. These payments could not also be classed as hereditary grants burdened with services. The stoppage of these payments or some of them by the executive order did not involve infringement of their fundamental right and the Headquarters Shiledars, the Shiledars, and Ekkans were not entitled to seek redress through any of the writs provided for by Art. 226 of the Constitution.

(Paras 36, 38, 39, 42)

Per Dixit J.: One test which may usefully be adopted to differentiate between orders and rules made by a Ruler of a State in his capacity as the supreme executive authority from those made in his capacity as the supreme legislative authority is to see whether the order or rule was enforceable in a Court of law by the person or persons affected thereby and whether the construction or interpretation of the rule or order was a matter for the Court or for the administrative or executive authorities. If the rule is not enforceable in a Court of law and if its construction is a matter for the administrative authority and not for the Court, then clearly the rule cannot be called a statute or a rule having the force of a statute.

(Para 45)

The Kalambandi of 1991 was not a statute according to the law-making machinery or custom of Gwalior State and according to the forms and solemnities required in that State for authentication of a statute. There is nothing in the Kalambandi to lend any colour to the suggestion that the Kalambandi conferred on Shiledars or their heirs a right enforceable in a Court of law, with regard to their appointment or their conditions of Shiledari service.

(Para 45)

Anno: Civil P. C., Pre. N. 7.

P. R. Das, P. W. Sahastrabudhe and N. K. Shejwalkar, for Applicants; K. A. Chitale, Advocate-General, for the State.

CASES REFERRED TO :

- (A) ('67-70) 13 Moo Ind App 438: 2 Sar 588 (PC) (Pr 39)
- (B) ('31) AIR 1931 PC 157: 132 Ind Cas 736 (PC) (Pr 39)
- (C) ('53) AIR 1953 Madh-B 97 (Pr 46)

NEWASKAR J.:

These are petitions under Article 226 of the Constitution submitted by Madhaorao Phalke and others in all 11 in number.

(2) Of these 11 petitions one is by 'Bachat-holder' — a term which will be explained hereafter, 5 are by what are known as 'Head-quarter Shiledars', 2 by 'Shiledars', 2 by 'Ekkans' and one by a 'Maintenance-holder'.

(3) The petitioners belong to the families of Shiledars and Ekkans of former Gwalior State.

(4) The case of the petitioners is that their ancestors accompanied the Scindias in their conquest towards the north nearly 200 years ago and in recognition of exemplary services rendered by them and their descendants in the past and in view of the fact that they might be required at any time to render further services they were 'entitled as of right' to receive 'a fixed sum of money' per month from the Government from generation after generation and that this right had been recognised in various statutes, orders, rules and regulations having the force of statutes. Petitioners particularly referred to and relied upon "The Regulation for Administration of the Department of Irregulars Samvat 1991 (1934 A. D.), the orders dated 31-3-1929 issued from the Army Headquarters under the authority of Council of Regency and Gazette Notification of the year 1942 A. D."

(5) The petitioners complain that the cash payments aforesaid to which they were entitled as of right as indicated above were stopped by the Government of Madhya Bharat under an Executive Order dated 18-4-1952 issued in the name of Rajpramukh, that this action is beyond the powers of the Government or Rajpramukh and prejudicially affects their fundamental right to property.

The petitioner further alleged that they caused notices to be served on the Madhya Bharat Government, one by each petitioner, calling upon the said Government, to refrain from enforcing the said order but obtained no redress. The petitioners therefore prayed:

(a) that a writ in the nature of mandamus or alternatively directions or order or writ under Article 226 of the Constitution may be issued calling upon the respondents (viz., the State of Madhya Bharat and the Government of Madhya Bharat Revenue Department) to show cause why they should not forbear from giving effect to, or acting in any manner by virtue of, or under the said order dated 18-4-52 and

(b) that a peremptory order in terms of prayer (a) be made if no such cause is shown:

(6) In the return submitted on behalf of the respondents it was contended that the disputed payments could not be reckoned as 'property' within the meaning of Article 31 of the Constitution of India but were in the nature of emoluments for military service. It was further submitted as a matter of historical retrospect that the Scindia's Army among other ranks and military officers, comprised of Head-quarter Shiledars, Shiledars and Ekkans who had fought and were expected to fight under their Liege-Lord whenever occasion arose. This, according to the respondents, was an irregular force organised for Military aid and was maintained by former Gwalior Government and later by the State of Madhya Bharat to secure aid for maintenance of peace and military action. It was further submitted that originally aforesaid Shiledars and Ekkans were expected to maintain and provide troopers with their own equipments and received cash payments commensurate with their obligations and later were allowed to offer substitutes called 'Bargirs' whose expenses were deducted from these emoluments.

It is contended that after the commencement of the Constitution 'Defence' was taken over by the Union and in this changed Constitutional context there was no occasion to continue these irregular forces and the State of Madhya Bharat therefore by an executive order discontinued these payments thus disbanding the force which they were entitled to do. It is, therefore, urged that the alleged right to receive cash-payments under the circumstances mentioned in the petition is neither property nor was it conferred under a statute or under any rule, order or regulation having the force of a statute and that the State had every power to stop the payment by an executive order.

(7) On these respective submissions of both the parties the following questions arise for consideration:

Firstly, do the payments in question constitute property within the meaning of Article 31 of the Constitution?

Secondly, is it the statutory right of the petitioner to receive the payments in dispute?

Thirdly, is the right now available against the respondents?

(8) Mr. P. R. Das who appeared on behalf of the petitioners contended that this right to receive cash payments either as Bachat-Holders, as Head-quarter Shiledars or as maintenance-holders which vested in the petitioners and others in similar position was conferred in consideration of the services rendered and to be rendered by certain families to the Scindia Rulers and was recognised in various orders of the Rulers which amounted to statutes as they emanated from sovereign power. He therefore urged that the same amounted to property within the meaning of Article 31 of the Constitution of India and is the fundamental right of the petitioners.

He further urged that this fundamental right to receive cash payments being a statutory right could not be affected by an executive order and the action of the Madhya Bharat Government or Raj Pramukh in ordering stoppage to these payments is ultra vires as no right recognised by a statute can be affected merely by an executive order. In order to explain his contention that the right in question is a statutory right he referred to the History of various steps taken to organise these irregular forces on a sounder footing and the recognition given to the rights vested in the families of the petitioners in the orders on the subject by the Scindia Rulers. He particularly drew our attention to the two land-marks in the process of reorganisation of the forces of irregulars as these Shiledars and Ekkans constitute, viz., the reorganisation scheme set down in the 'Kalambandi' of Samvat 1969 and that contained in the 'Kavayad' of Samvat Year 1991. He also referred to the Notification dated 31-3-1929 issued from Army Headquarters under the authority of the Council of Regency in general and Paras 1 and 2 of the same in particular. In these Paras 1 and 2 it is expressed thus

'the Shiledari' force is an ancient one and the ancestors of the present holders had on several occasions from the date of the founding of Scindia dynasty rendered meritorious services and obtained 'Asamis' and having regard to their well established right and their present economic plight the Council has sanctioned the scheme (contained therein) to ameliorate their lot'.

(9) All this, counsel contended, makes two things clear. Firstly it indicates that the cash payments were not merely the remuneration for the services to be rendered but were payable in recognition of past services to the family of the Rulers and for the services to be rendered in future if occasion arises and secondly it recognises this payment as a right and as such property. These according to the counsel were grants recognised by statutes with obligation of service attached to them and are not salaries for future services pure and simple. The petitioners are, therefore, entitled according to the learned counsel, to a declaration that the action of the Madhya Bharat Government is ultra vires and trenches upon the fundamental right of the petitioners and an injunction to them, restraining them (from) putting their threat regarding stoppage of these payments into execution.

(10) On the other hand the learned Advocate-General drew our attention to the passages from the well known work on Maratha History such as (1) Administrative System of Marathas by Dr. Sen, (2) Military System of Marathas by the same author and (3) Sardesai's History of Marathas and contended that these Shiledars and Ekkans originally constituted an irregular military force. These Shiledars brought their own horses and men and were maintained at State expenses. These Shiledars were remunerated with cash payments at least in the case of Scindia Army and had to render military service when occasion arose either for internal security or meet the threat of aggression or War. He further urged that in their true nature and context they were not grants burdened with service but were services remunerated with cash payments. Their origin and continuance were administrative in nature and liable to be stopped by an administrative order & was neither vested right of the petitioner nor property within the meaning of Article 31 of the Constitution. Executive Government of Madhya Bharat had, therefore, a perfect right to stop these payments wholly or to such an extent as they pleased.

(11) At the outset I felt difficulty in following the propriety of this writ against the Executive Government of the State of Madhya Bharat because according to the contents of the petitions and the return submitted by the Government the obligation alleged had a reference to military forces and, in the absence of agreement between the State and the Union, the liability if any, would devolve upon the Union as according to Sch. VII List I this would be included in item No. 2 viz., Naval, Military and Air Force, and other armed forces of the Union.

(12) Article 295 (1) of the Constitution of India runs as follows:

"(1) As from the commencement of this Constitution — (a) all property and assets which immediately before such commencement were vested in any Indian State corresponding to a State specified in Part B of the First Schedule shall vest in the Union if the purposes for which such property and assets were held immediately before such commencement will thereafter be purpose of the Union relating to any of the matters enumerated in the Union List, and (b) all rights, liabilities and obligations of the Government of any Indian State corresponding to a State specified in Part B of First Schedule, whether arising out of any contract or otherwise, shall be the rights, liabilities and obligations of the Government of India, if the purpose for which such rights were acquired or liabilities or obligations were incurred before such commencement will thereafter be the purposes of the Government of India relating to any of the matters in the Union List, subject to any agreement entered into in that behalf by the Government of India with the Government of that State".

(13) We, therefore, called upon the State of Madhya Bharat to disclose whether there is any agreement between the State and the Union on the subject. Thereupon the learned Advocate General laid before us correspondence which took place between the Government of India and various Raj Pramukhs.

(14) In the correspondence thus admitted there is D. O. letter No. F3 D/50 dated 17-1-1950 from the Government of India addressed to Raj Pramukhs of Rajasthan, Madhya Bharat, Pepsu and Saurashtra, Para 9 of which reads as follows:

"The Central Government will not be financially concerned with (a) non-Indian States Forces units and personnel (b) hereditary military pensions, and (c) pensions of non-Indian States Forces military personnel retiring on or after 1st April 1950".

Further there is a copy of letter No. F 218/49/D. 1 (a) dated 9-3-50 issued from the Government of India to the Chief of Army Staff and Commander-in-Chief, Indian Army which contains the following communication:

"The President is pleased to sanction the following arrangements in connection with State Forces of Union States:

(1) With effect from 1st April 1950 Government of India will assume complete financial liability in respect of the I. S. units of these States existing at the time".

Madhya Bharat Force order regarding division of Madhya Bharat Force F. O. No. 106/50 dated 6th April 1950 indicates that:

- (1) 1st Regiment Shiledari
- (2) 2nd Regiment Shiledari and
- (3) Beda Risala Ekkans are included in the category of purely non-I. S. F. units.

(15) No specific agreement bearing on the point has been produced before us but it appears from the documents referred to above that the financial obligations pertaining to these non- I. S. F. units continue with the State Government and this may be assumed to be the agreement between the State and the Union. It is significant that in the return submitted on behalf of the State no challenge is based on the ground that obligation with respect to the claim of the petitioners, if it exists at all, rests with the Union Government. Further had this been the attitude taken by the State Government action for disbanding that force and for stoppage of these payments would not have been taken by the Executive Government of the State but by the Central Government. The executive order of the State moreover makes a provision for continuance of Nemnuks in the case of widow or minor children of deceased Shiledars and also Shiledars and Ekkans who are suffering from physical infirmity or disability.

(16) I am, therefore, clear that if the payments claimed by the petitioners constitute their statutory right and hence property the obligation with respect to them will rest upon the State and not upon the Union.

(17) The only point, therefore, that remains to be considered is whether the payments claimed by the petitioners constitute their statutory right and property. I shall consider this question, therefore, in somewhat details.

(18) As a matter of history Scindias were Military Governors of Peshwas who ruled from Poona and Scindias' Army was in its origin part of the Army of Peshawas and some light will be thrown on the origin and nature of these irregular forces which at the time of commencement of the Constitution assumed the character of (I) First Regiment Shiledari (II) Second Regiment Shiledari and (III) Beda Risala Ekkans from the historical account of the Peshawa's Army.

(19) Dr. Sen the well known historian in his work on Military System of Marathas at page 80 says: "The Cavalry of Peshwa consisted of four classes:

1. The Khasgi Paga
2. The Shiledars.
3. The Ekas or Ekkans and
4. The Pendharis."

(20) These Shiledars brought in their own horses and men and were remunerated by the State while the Ekkans or Ekkandas were volunteers who joined the Maratha Camps bringing their own horses and accountments. They too were paid in cash in proportion to the value of their horse. During the period of military action these payments were stopped and they were allowed to have a share in the spoils of war.

(21) Scindias after the northern conquest by them as the Military Generals of Peshwas were appointed Military Governors and retained their Army which included regular and irregular forces such as Shiledars and Ekkans.

(22) Hereditary character of service in the Government was a marked characteristic in some of the services during the Maratha Regime, and hereditary nature in these irregular forces was not an exception.

(23) After Scindias became independent of the Central control of Peshwas these forces became their forces but retained their essential characteristics.

(24) Army of Scindias no doubt consisted of these Shiledars and Ekkans besides regular State forces.

Some of these Shiledars were stationed at the Head Quarter (viz. Gwalior) and were termed Head Quarter Shiledars. Others were Shiledars and Ekkans and were posted in various Districts of Gwalior State both far and near. These latter Shiledars were required to render active service and were used for keeping peace and order. No materials were placed before us to indicate what was the nature of service which was expected of the Head-Quarter Shiledars in the early stages of Scindia but from the printed orders of His Highness Madhaorao Scindia of Samvat Year 1969 and known as 'Kalambandi' Intajam Mahakme Irregular Behede Shiledari Samvat 1969' and subsequent similar Kalambandi of 1991 issued at the time of the last Ruler it appears that these Head Quarter Shiledars were not required to render any active Military Service. All that was expected of them was to keep themselves fit militarily by subjecting themselves to drill and to receive cash payments mentioned against them in these Kalambandis. They represented a reserved force which might be required to do active service any time.

(25) In the Kalambandi of Samvat Year 1969 (1912 A. D.) which was intended to reorganise this irregular force and put it on a proper footing weeding out abuses that had crept therein, these Shiledars and Ekkans were divided into different groups:

1. Shiledars of 10 Paigas (Battalions)
2. Head-Quarter Shiledars.
3. Pandit Shiledars.

From the Shiledars of 10 Paigas consisting of 1250 horsemen active service was expected. They were stationed at different districts of Gwalior State and could be utilised for maintenance of peace and order. These horsemen were drawn mainly from hereditary Shiledars. Though provision was made for employing outsiders in case the particular family became extinct.

(26) If particular Shiledar in the Paigas became infirm or disabled his next heir answering the requisite qualifications could be given the job and if there be no such person the office would be given to an outsider. During the minority of an heir of a Shiledar other person called 'Aiwwaji' could be employed who would be given full pay of the post and maintenance would be given to the minor. Rule regarding succession was laid down.

(27) In case of Head Quarter Shiledars no duty apart from their performing the drill was expected. The succession to them was similar to that of other Shiledars.

(28) In Section 54 it is mentioned that 'as the Shiledars Asami is for service the same could not be attached in execution of a decree of a creditor'.

(29) As regards Pandit Shiledars i. e., those Shiledars who were found to be unsuitable for Military jobs they were employed as the Head Quarter in the clerical staff of the Head-quarter or were posted at various stations where these forces were placed.

(30) In the Kalambandi of 1934 A. D. all these provisions were practically reiterated with the only difference that in the case of infirm or disabled Shiledars system of offering substitutes known as Bargirs was recognised and they were given a portion of cash payments payable to Shiledars and the balance known as 'Bachat' was liable to be taken by the infirm or disabled Shiledars. In the case of minor Shiledar Bargirs would be employed who would be paid portion of the pay of Shiledar and the rest would be credited to the State and the minors would be paid maintenance at a scale fixed by the Government. Similar provision was made for Pandit Shiledars.

(31) Provision was also made for establishment of right to succeed to the office of the deceased Shiledar in case of disputed claims.

(32) In S. 36 of this 'Kalambandi' again emphasis is laid that Shiledari Asami being for service, is not liable to attachment for the debts of a creditor.

(33) In the Notification issued in pursuance of a resolution by the Council of Regency a reference is made in Cl. (1) that Made Shiledari service is ancient and the ancestors of the holders of (most of) the present holders of office had done meritorious service and obtained the Asamis. In Cl. (2) it is stated that having regard to their rights and their pitiable financial plight the council had decided to ameliorate their condition and made the following provision etc.

(34) Then follows the detailed provision for the purpose. In the year 1942 further measures were taken for increasing the pays of the pensions of Beda Risala Ekkans.

(35) Thus having regard to all these Kalambandis and orders the following things are clear:

- (I) There are no Sanads supporting the claim of the petitioners as hereditary grants.
- (II) The Shiledars are primarily intended as a part of the Military Service.
- (III) The enlistment to these is hereditary in the sense that so long as a person from the family of the holder of the office is available the office would go to him. The manner of succession being laid down by the order of the Ruler in accordance with the pre-existing practice. If there are several sons only one of them gets it and there is no rule of primogeniture strictly so called.
- (IV) Initially substitutes were allowed in case of those who cannot render service themselves for special reasons but later practice grew even amongst others and this gave rise to practice of paying 'Bachat' to the Shiledar and fixed proportion of pay to the substitute or Bargirs.
- (V) In the case of Head-quarter Shiledar no definite service was expected but Military fitness by resorting to drill was necessary.

(36) Having regard to all these circumstances as they appear from the reorganization schemes contained in the two Kalambandis and notification from Army Head Quarter it is clear that the payments were for service only and there were no hereditary grants as such. The mere hereditary character, exhibited in the enlistment of the new cadets cannot mean that it was property belonging to the particular Shiledar or Ekkans. Moreover new enlistment was permissible to maintain the strength of the force. No doubt Head-quarter Shiledars were not required to render any tangible service and cash payment to them was sumptuous and secure and certain consideration probably of past service might have been involved in their case but essential character of service never changed and throughout they were only treated as part of the Shiledar & Ekkans Bedas. The provision for drill was intended to ensure their military preparedness.

(37) It is also apparent that the payments varied as the standards of living conditions changed as also the value of money, although, it appears that in the case of head quarter Shiledars and Ekkans this remained uniform at least from Samvat Year 1959 upto the date of stoppage.

(38) Provision for payment of the maintenance allowance to widow or minor children of the deceased Shiledar does not necessarily mean that there was any proprietary interest in the deceased Shiledars as regards the payments which he used to receive. This can only be regarded as compassionate allowance.

(39) I am therefore of the opinion that the payments claimed by the petitioners do not constitute property belonging to them whether the same be, as Bachat holders, Head-quarter Shiledars or Ekkans. The provisions in the two Kalambandis are in the nature of recognition schemes of administrative nature and do not involve conferment of or recognition of a statutory right. I am also of the opinion that these payments claimed cannot be classed as hereditary grants burdened with services. During the course of argument our attention was drawn to two rulings of their Lordships of the Privy Council viz., — 'Alexander John Forbes v. Meer Mohamed Tuquee', 13 Moo Ind App 438 (PC) (A) and — 'Lakhamgouda Basavprabhu v. Baswantrao', AIR 1931 PC 157 (B).

(40) Both these cases pertain to grants of land evidenced by Sanad and the question involved therein was whether they were the cases of grant of land burdened with services or grants of office remunerated by the use of land.

(41) These cases are not of much assistance in arriving at the true nature of these payments. It is difficult to call them grants and place them on the footing of grants supported by Sanads and burdened with services. In the latter cases service was ancillary and grant was the principal thing. This is not so in the present case. Ancillary character of service in the case of Head-quarter Shiledars was not in its inception but appeared at a later stage.

(42) I am, therefore, inclined to the view that the petitioners have neither any statutory right nor property in the payments claimed by them as Bachats, maintenance amount or salaries as Head Quarter Shiledars, Shiledars and Ekkans. The stoppage of these all or some of them by the executive Order did not involve infringement of their fundamental right and are not entitled to seek redress through any of the writs provided for by Art. 226 of the Constitution from this Court.

The petitions are therefore dismissed.

(43) SHINDE, C. J.: I agree.

(44) DIXIT, J.: I agree that these petitions should be dismissed. I think it is of assistance in approaching the matters which arise in these petitions to state and emphasise the real nature of "Kalambandi Intzam Mahakame Irregulars" Samvat 1991 of the former Gwalior State, on which the petitioners substantially base — and I think exclusively — their claim to receive a fixed sum of money from the State of Madhya Bharat. On behalf of the applicants Mr. Das contended that the Kalambandi was a statute and gave to the petitioners a right to get a fixed sum of money every month from the opponent State and this statutory right could not be taken away by an executive order. Learned counsel for the petitioners conceded that if the Kalambandi is not a statute, then he must fail.

The first main question to be determined is, therefore, whether the Kalambandi is a statute or rules having the force of a statute, or whether it is merely a collection of executive directives. Mr. Das suggested that the Kalambandi was a statute because it was an act of the sovereign body of the former Gwalior State and contained a preamble repealing the Kalambandi of 1969.

In reply the learned Advocate-General submitted that the provisions of the Kalambandi themselves made it clear that the Kalambandi was no more than a set of administrative rules; that the enumeration in S. 2 of the Kalambandi of the names of particular persons entitled to salaries specified therein was inconsistent with the Kalambandi being a statute, and that the Kalambandi of Samvat 1969 which was superseded by the Kalambandi of Samvat 1991, was treated by His Highness Maharaja Madhavrao Scindia as administrative orders and as such was amended by him by a direction in Vol. III 'Darbar Policy' (English version) relating to the Police and Military departments at page 16.

(45) In my judgment, the petitioners have failed to establish the fact that the Kalambandi of 1991 is a statute according to the law making machinery or custom of Gwalior State and according to the forms and solemnities required in that State for authentication of Statute. The fact that the Kalambandi was issued by the sovereign is by means conclusive of the nature of the Kalambandi. I confess that while dealing with orders or rules issued by the Rulers of some of the Covenanted States, where there was no organized legislature and where the supreme legislature and executive functions were vested in one person. I have always found some difficulty in distinguishing between administrative orders or rules, and statutes or rules or orders having the force of a statute. A preamble is not a distinctive feature or an essential part of a statute. It is also found in policy proclamations, notices and deeds. It is merely a preliminary statement explaining the reasons by the writing. It makes no difference to the administrative, executive or statutory character of a rule whether there is a preamble to it any more than whether it affects the public at large or affects a particular person by name.

To my mind, one test which may usefully be adopted to differentiate between orders and rules made by a Ruler of a State of the type referred to above in his capacity as the supreme executive authority from those made in his capacity as the supreme legislative authority is to see whether the order or rule was enforceable in a Court of law by the person or persons affected thereby and whether the construction or interpretation of the rule or order was a matter for the Court or for the administrative or executive authorities. If the rule is not enforceable in a Court of law and if its construction is a matter for the administrative authority and not for the Court, then clearly the rule cannot be called a statute or a rule having the force of a statute.

Applying this test to the provisions of the Kalambandi of Samvat 1991, I think there is no other conclusion to which this Court could come, than that the Kalambandi is not a statute or a set of rules having the force of a statute. A study of the provisions of the Kalambandi shows that it primarily and in substance contains directions relating to the constitution, strength, enrolment and conditions of service of irregular Army. The title of Kalambandi suggests that the rules embodied therein are for the government and administration of "the Department of Irregulars". Section 1 of the Kalambandi deals with the strength and constitution of the force. Section 2 enumerates the names of certain Shiledars entitled to receive salaries mentioned in the section as members of the force. Section 3 declares the eligibility of Shiledars to "Officer-posts" in the force and says when appointed to such a post a Shiledar would get only the salary attached to the post. Sections 4 to 15 relate to the training of 'Pandit Shiledar', the loan of colours to processions, the size of horses in the force, uniform arms, equipment, drill, barrack-accommodation, accounts, duties of the Commanding Officer, leave, supervision and inspection of forces and the employment of the force for the keeping of peace and order.

I do not think, it can be disputed that the above provisions of the Kalambandi are merely administrative directives. Sections 13 to 32 lay stress on the maintenance of the strength of the force and provided for the filling up the vacancies in the force in the manner indicated therein on the death, infirmity or disability of a Shiledar. Under these provisions a person claiming to be an heir of the deceased Shiledar could not say that he was entitled as of right to fill a vacancy or to get some money grant instead. The recognition of an heir to fill a vacancy, the appointment of a substitute, the payment of 'Bachat' were all made subject to the approval of the Inspector General of Army and in some cases of the Darbar. The provision in the Kalambandi that a vacancy caused by the death, disability or infirmity of Shiledar would be filled by appointing his heir, did not alter the position that the appointment of a Shiledar was at the discretion and during the pleasure of the Darbar.

There is, in my view, nothing in the Kalambandi to lend any colour to the suggestion that the Kalambandi conferred on Shiledars or their heirs a right enforceable in a Court of law, with regard to their appointment or their conditions of Shiledari service. It laid emphasis on the performance of the service and not on the individual who was to perform the service. The mere inclusion in the Kalambandi of provisions (Ss. 36 and 37) exempting from attachment the 'Shiledari Asami' and certain payments and articles in execution of a decree cannot, in my opinion, give statutory force of the material provisions alluded to above.

(46) I think a complete answer to the question whether the Kalambandi of Samvat 1991 in a statute is furnished by the argument of the learned Advocate General that the Kalambandi of Samvat 1969 which it repealed, was itself amended by His Late Highness Madhavrao Scindia by giving an administrative directive in his publication known as Darbar Policy. In volume III of 'Darbar Policy' relating to "Police and Military departments" he observed at page 16 that S. 48 of that Kalambandi as it was worded did not "convey the real object in view" and directed that "it should, therefore, be read as given below & the Kalambandi should as well be corrected accordingly." Again in Appendix No. III of the volume it is stated at page 237 that "the wording of S. 48 in the Kalambandi of 1969 was not very lucid; the section has accordingly been redrafted (as above) in this Policy to remove any misunderstanding on the subject and to bring out clearly the object which the Darbar have in view and it should be read and complied with as now given". The 'Darbar Policy' as has now been held by this Court in — 'Malojirao v. State of M. B.', AIR 1953 Mad-B 97 (C), is not a statute but a statement of principles which were intended to be followed in executive action.

If, therefore, the Kalambandi of 1969 was regarded by the Ruler who issued it as administrative rules and as such capable of amendment by a administrative direction, it follows that the Kalambandi of 1991 which repealed the previous Kalambandi is no more than a set of administrative rule. The petitioners produced before us a copy of a decision given on 1-10-34 by the Council of Regency (Gwalior State) in a dispute about Shiledari succession. It was said that by that decision the Council held that the Kalambandi was a statute law. On a perusal of that decision, I find that the Resolution passed by the Council in that dispute nowhere says that the Kalambandi is a statute law. In that dispute the Army Member and the Law Member of the Council no doubt expressed the opinion that the Kalambandi was a statute. But there is nothing in the Resolution of the Council to show that the opinion of these members was adopted by the Council and ultimately became the decision of the Sovereign body functioning at that time in the quondam Gwalior State.

(47) On the question whether the payments were made to the petitioners because they were as of right entitled to it, I agree with my brother Newaskar J., who after a close analysis of the provisions of the Kalambandis of Samvat 1969 and 1991, and after reference to the history and origin of Shiledari system, has reached the conclusion, that the payments were for service only and not hereditary grants and that they did not constitute property belonging to the petitioners. The suppliants hold no sanads of any hereditary grant. The Kalambandis did not confer on them any hereditary right to cash payments or to any office.

Even if it is assumed that the applicants were grantees of an office to which certain payments were attached by way of remuneration, then on the principle laid down in the Privy Council decisions, 13 Indian Appeals and 1931 PC 157, prima facie the payments could be stopped on the maintenance of Irregular forces by the opponent State and the performance of service therein by the applicants under the provisions of the Kalambandi becoming impossible by reason of the orders issued by the Resident from time to time under Art. 259 (1) of the Constitution of India.

(48) For these reasons, these petitions, in my opinion, should be rejected.

A/R.G.D.

Petitions dismissed.

A. I. R. 1953 MADH.-B. 262 (Vol. 40, C. N. 100)
(GWALIOR BENCH)

CHATURVEDI J.

Kanhaiyalal Sewaram, Appellant v. State.
Criminal Appeal No. 59 of 1952, D/- 6-3-1953.

(a) Evidence Act (1872), S. 33 — Necessity to record finding.

Before the Sessions Judge can transfer a statement he must record a finding that any of the circumstances enumerated in S. 23 existed and unless he is so satisfied on evidence led before him, the power vested in him under S. 33 cannot be exercised.
(Para 4)

Anno: Evidence Act, S. 33 N. 1.

(b) Evidence Act (1872), S. 118 — Duty of Court.

Where a witness is declared incapable of giving evidence owing to insanity it is the duty of the Court to record its finding that the witness is prevented by his lunacy from understanding the questions put to him and giving rational answers to them. The fact that the witness had become incompetent to testify and so incapable of giving evidence must be proved strictly. (Para 4)

Anno: Evidence Act, S. 118 N. 1.

(c) Penal Code (1860), Ss. 304, 319 and 323 — Deceased receiving only two injuries which were not grievous — Injuries only remoter cause of death — Accused can be convicted under S. 323 and not under S. 304. (Para 5)

Anno: Penal Code, S. 304 N. 1; S. 319 N. 1.

Shahashrabudhe, for Appellant; Govt. Advocate, for the State.

CASES CITED:

(A) ('44) AIR 1944 Lah 377: 46 Pun LR 135

(B) ('46) AIR 1946 PC 1: 72 Ind App 270 (PC)

JUDGMENT : The appellant Kanhaiyalal and his son Ramlal (who is only 17 or 18 years old) have been convicted by the learned Additional Sessions Judge, Shajapur, under S. 304, Penal Code and have been sentenced to five year's rigorous imprisonment each.

(2) The prosecution story in brief is that on 10-7-1952 in the noon, in a field in village Patlaoda P. S. Shujalpur, District Shajapur, both the accused approached Siddu who was working there. Kanhaiyalal had an axe with him and gave a blow on the head of Siddu with the blunt side of the axe. Ramlal appellant had a 'pirani' (bamboo stick, sometimes with an iron blade) and gave a blow to the deceased with it. It is alleged that the deceased Siddu had beaten Kanhaiyalal's son Moti in the morning and so these two accused had gone to the field to take revenge from him. Siddu died then and there. A 'post-mortem' was performed next day i.e., on 11-7-1952 in Shujalpur by Dr. Lajpatrai P. W. 1 who deposed that Siddu had two external injuries only. The first injury was contused wound  $1\frac{1}{2}$ " x  $\frac{1}{4}$ " on frontal region of the scalp and 2 inches deep, but the injury did not reach the bone. The next injury was contusion 8" x  $\frac{3}{4}$ " vertical on back of lower part of chest. The doctor was of opinion that Siddu was very weak otherwise he would not have died as a result of these injuries. According to him the death was the result of shock and haemorrhage due to rupture of spleen and concussion of brain, which could have occurred due to his falling on the ground.

(3) At the time when the two appellants are alleged to have given blows on the body of the deceased, Siddu, only two persons were present in the field and these are cattle grazers, Rama P. W. 2 and Madhva P. W. 16. The first information report was lodged by the wife of the deceased, Nadan Bai P. W. 13, on 11-7-1952 at 8 P. M., though the distance of the scene of occurrence from Police Station Shujalpur is hardly 5 miles. In this report the names of the two accused had been mentioned.

(4) Out of the two witnesses, Madhva, P. W. 16 was not produced before the learned Sessions Court. His statement in the committing Court had been transferred to the Sessions file under S. 33, Evidence Act. It is well settled that before the Sessions Judge can transfer a statement he must record a finding that any of the circumstances enumerated in S. 33 existed and unless he is so satisfied on evidence led before him, the power vested in him under S. 33 cannot be exercised. — Saudagar Singh v. Emperor, AIR 1944 Lah 377 (A). When a witness is material (in this case the eye witness Madhva was a material witness) justice requires that the witness, if possible, be examined in the trial in the presence of the accused. The learned Sessions Judge has admitted the evidence of an absent witness on the application of the Public Prosecutor, and the application alleged that something had gone wrong with the mind of the witness Madhva and that he was not in a condition that he may answer the questions correctly in the Court. A report of the Assistant Medical Officer Shujalpur was also submitted to the Court along with the application. This report dated 7-10-1952 that after some days' observations in the Hospital, full report could be sent. During these days, the learned Sessions Judge was recording the evidence in the case and he could have easily seen the eye-witness himself, when he was at Shajapur, in order to satisfy himself whether he was competent to testify and could understand the questions put to him. The explanation appended to S. 118, Evidence Act is quite clear on the point that a lunatic when he is in lucid intervals is not incompetent to testify, if he can understand and rationally answer the questions put to him. The Doctor could have been, but was not examined in the Court. The Police constable Kanhaiyalal P. W. 15 and P. W. 3 Bhanwarji were procured in the Court and as lay men they said "his mind had gone wrong". This may mean nothing.

The learned Judge did not care to arrive at the finding whether it was a case of general or partial insanity, whether the delusions were multifarious and of the wildest and most irrational character, abundantly indicating that the mind was diseased throughout or, while the mind may have been overpowered by delusions, though may be the offspring of mental disease and so far constituted insanity, yet left the individual in all other respects rational and capable of transacting the ordinary affairs and fulfilling the duties and obligations incidental to the various relations of life, and, during lucid intervals, the witness was not prevented by partial unsoundness of the mind from understanding the questions put to him and giving rational answers to them. From a perusal of the judgment of the learned Sessions Judge, it appears, though not clearly, that the learned Judge was of opinion that the witness was incapable of giving evidence because of insanity.

In such cases the provisions of S. 118 could not have been ignored, and in my opinion, where a witness is declared incapable of giving evidence owing to insanity it is the duty of the Court to record its finding that the witness is prevented by his lunacy from understanding the questions put to him and giving rational answers to them. The fact that the witness had become incompetent to testify and so incapable of giving evidence must be proved strictly. As their Lordships observed in — Chainchal Singh v. Empress, AIR 1946 PC 1 (B) in a civil case a party, if he chooses, can waive the proof, but in a criminal case strict proof ought to be given that the witness is incapable of giving evidence. Their Lordships further observed that the fact that the counsel of the accused consented to the evidence of the witness being read under S. 33 in the Sessions Court does not do away with the necessity of the Court being satisfied by proof that the witness was incapable of giving evidence.

In my opinion the learned Sessions Judge was wrong in admitting the evidence of Madhya P.W. 16 under S. 33, Evidence Act, without himself seeing the witness or without examining the doctor who had sent the report to the Public Prosecutor. It is clear that sufficient foundation was not laid for the reception of the previous deposition of Madhya in this case and I have therefore to exclude it from consideration.

(5) Thus only one eye-witness Rama P. W. 2 remains. He deposed that he saw from a distance of 210 steps the two appellants beating the deceased and that appellant Kanhaiyalal gave a blow on the head of the deceased. The learned Sessions Judge has believed this witness and there is nothing in the arguments of Mr. Sahasrabudhe, learned counsel for the appellants, which may incline me to a view about the credibility of the witness different from that taken by the learned Sessions Judge. At noon time in July a person of normal eye-sight can see clearly from such a distance. There were however, only two injuries on the body of the deceased & these injuries were not grievous. The medical evidence was to the effect that these injuries could not have ordinarily produced death. If the injuries can be called only the remoter cause of death, and death of the deceased is not proximately connected with the act of violence, the appellants cannot be held responsible for causing death, and cannot be credited with the knowledge that such bodily injuries as the deceased sustained were likely to cause his death. It follows that the appellants cannot be convicted for an offence of culpable homicide not amounting to murder. I am, therefore, of opinion that the conviction of the appellants must be altered to one under S. 323, Penal Code from that under S. 304, Penal Code.

(6) I therefore allow the appeal to this extent that I alter their conviction from S. 304 to one under S. 323, Penal Code and reduce the sentence of appellant Kanhaiyalal from 5 years to one year's rigorous imprisonment. It appears that Ramlal appellant is only 17 or 18 years old and has undergone nearly four months rigorous imprisonment. In my opinion this is sufficient to meet the ends of justice and therefore I reduce his sentence from 5 years rigorous imprisonment to that already undergone. Ramlal is therefore to be released forthwith if not required to be detained under any other process of law.

B/V.R.B.

Appeal partly allowed.

A. I. R. 1953 MADH.-B. 264 (Vol. 40, C. N. 101)
(GWALIOR BENCH)

DIXIT J.

Shrichand Heeralal Vaishya, Applicant v. Santosh Kumar Devi Prasad, Non-applicant.

Civil Revn. No. 156 of 1952, D/- 5-3-1953.

Civil P. C. (1908), O. 21, R. 58 — Objection after sale.

An executing Court has no jurisdiction to entertain a claim under O. 21, R. 58 after the execution sale has taken place. AIR 1937 Cal 390; AIR 1942 Bom 263, Foll.; AIR

1942 Mad 41 (FB), Ref.; AIR 1931 Mad 782; AIR 1938 Nag 475, Not foll. (Para 3)

Anno: Civil P. C., O. 21, R. 58 N. 5.

Shivdayal, for Applicant; Motilal Gupta, for Non-applicant.

CASES CITED:

- (A) ('37) AIR 1937 Cal 390: 172 Ind Cas 503
- (B) ('42) AIR 1942 Bom 263: ILR (1942) Bom 636
- (C) ('31) AIR 1931 Mad 782: 55 Mad 251
- (D) ('38) AIR 1938 Nag 475: ILR (1940) Nag 306
- (E) ('42) AIR 1942 Mad 41: ILR (1942) Mad 336 (FB)

ORDER: This is an application to revise an order of the Civil Judge Second Class Kolar holding that an objection preferred by the non-applicant 'Santosh Kumar' under O. 21 R. 58 after the execution sale can be inquired into. The sale took place on 26-11-1951. The non-applicant filed this objection on 6-12-1951. The sale was confirmed on 19-7-1952.

(2) The short point for consideration in this revision petition is whether the lower Court has jurisdiction to entertain a claim under O. 21 R. 58 after the execution sale has taken place. Mr. Shivdayal learned counsel for the applicant relying on the authority of the decisions in — 'Sasthicharan v. Gopalchandra', AIR 1937 Cal 390 (A); and 'Ningauda v. Nabi Sahab Abalal', AIR 1942 Bom 263 (B) contended that it was incompetent to an executing Court to entertain an application under O. 21 R. 58 after the sale has actually taken place. He argued that on the sale of the property, it was ipso facto released from attachment and, therefore any investigation after the sale into the claim of the third party objecting to the attachment and sale was meaningless. In reply Mr. Motilal Gupta commended to me for acceptance the view of the Madras and Nagpur High Courts that an attachment subsists till the confirmation of the sale and that, therefore, the consideration or investigation of a claim under O. 21 R. 58 is not barred after the sale. Mr. Gupta referred me to the decisions reported in — 'Jagannatham v. Pydayya', AIR 1931 Mad 782 (C); 'Ramchandra v. Kayam Hussain', AIR 1938 Nag 475 (D).

(3) On a consideration of these decisions, I am inclined to accede to the contention put forward on behalf of the applicant that an executing Court has no jurisdiction to entertain a claim under O. 21 R. 58 after the execution sale has taken place. To my mind the question has been so exhaustively dealt with in — 'AIR 1937 Cal 390 (A)' and 'AIR 1942 Bom 263 (B)' that I feel there is hardly anything that I can usefully add to the reasoning given in those decisions to support the conclusion that such a claim cannot be entertained after the sale. In the Bombay case, the Madras and the Nagpur decisions have been discussed and it has been pointed out that the decision of the Madras High Court in 'AIR 1931 Mad 782 (C)' which formed the basis of the decision in — 'AIR 1938 Nag 475 (D)' is contrary to the observations of the Madras High Court in a later case namely, 'Cannanore Bank Ltd. v. Pattarkandy Aralan-veettil Madhavi', AIR 1942 Mad 41 (F B) (E). In that case it was observed that the dismissal of an objection under O. 21 R. 58 presented after the Court had sold the attached property on the ground that the Court had no jurisdiction to entertain it can scarcely be regarded as an adverse order which was required to be set aside under O. 21 R. 63. I would only add that when a party objects to an attachment under O. 21 R. 58, the objection is in effect that the attached property being his own, is not liable to be sold. It follows, therefore, that an investigation of a claim under O. 21 Rule 58 must precede the sale of the property & not follow it. If the legislature intended to permit after sale the investigation of a third party to the sale of the property attached, then O. 21 Rule 58 would not have been placed before the provisions regarding sale; one would have then found appropriate provisions for setting aside a sale on objections of a third party inserted in the Civil Procedure Code after the provisions regarding sale.

(4) Learned Counsel for the non-applicant laid some stress on the fact that O. 21 R. 58 empowered the Court to refuse to investigate a claim or objection if it was designedly or unnecessarily delayed, & said that this showed that an objection made after sale could be entertained. There is no force in this contention. The fact that the Court is empowered to refuse to investigate a claim or objection on the ground of delay and that the Court has also been given the power to postpone the sale is no way inconsistent with the conclusion that the investigation could not be made after the sale. The proviso in O. 21 R. 58 (1) and sub-rule (2) only mean that the Court can decline to investigate the claim if it is made just before the sale and that it can also postpone the sale, if the claim cannot be disposed of before the sale is actually held.

(5) In this case it is noteworthy that the sale has now been confirmed and it cannot now be argued even on the basis of the Madras and Nagpur decisions, that the attachment subsists. That being so, the executing Court has clearly no jurisdiction to investigate and determine the non-applicant's objection under O. 21 R. 58. Learned Counsel for the non-applicant was unable to show any authority to support the proposition that an objection under O. 21 R. 58 can be dealt with even after the confirmation of the sale.

(6) For the above reasons the order dated 25-8-1952 of the learned Civil Judge Second Class Kolaras is set aside and the objection of the non-applicant under O. 21 R. 58 is dismissed. Having regard to the question involved in this petition, I make no order as to costs of this petition.

B/V.S.B.

Ordered accordingly.

A. I. R. 1953 MADH.-B. 265 (Vol. 40, C. N. 192)
(GWALIOR BENCH)

DIXIT AND CHATURVEDI JJ.

State v. Deewaki Nandan, Respondent.

Criminal Appeal No. 90 of 1951, D/- 2-9-1952.

(a) Cotton Textile (Control of Movement) Order (1948), S. 3 — General permit Cl. 2 — 'Personal luggage' — Distinguished from business luggage and parcel. (1871) L. R. 6 Q. B. 612, Rel. on. (Para 7)

(b) Cotton Textile (Control of Movement) Order (1948), S. 3 — Notification under, No. 15

Tex. 1/49 (C. T.) dated 17-2-51, contravention — Magistrate not putting accused question in examination under S. 342, Cr. P. C. as regards weight of cloth exceeding 20 pounds in weight — No inference can be drawn against accused from statement of constable in evidence that weight was 66 pounds — Accused cannot be held guilty of contravention of S. 3 — (Cr. P. C. (1898), Ss. 342, 423). (Para 8)

Anno: Cr. P. C., S. 342 N. 35; S. 423 N. 23.

Shiv Dayal, for the State; Anand Bihari Mishra, for Respondent.

CASE CITED:

(A) (1871) LR 6 QB 612; 40 LJQB 300

DIXIT J.: This is an appeal under Section 417 Criminal P. C. from a decision of the Sessions Judge Gwalior in an appeal acquitting the respondent Devaki Nandan who had been convicted by the Railway Magistrate Lashkar of an offence under Section 7, Essential Supplies (Temporary Powers) Act, 1946.

(2) The charge against the respondent Devakinandan was that on 19-4-51, he travelled by a passenger train from Agra to Morena and carried with him 22 pairs of Dhories without obtaining a permit in that behalf from the competent authority, and thus contravened Clause 3 of the Cotton Textile (Control of Movement) Order 1948 made by the Central Government under Section 3, Essential Supplies (Temporary Powers) Act, 1946. The accused admitted having transported by rail from Agra to Morena 22 pairs of Dhories on 19-4-51. He also admitted that he had no permit. But he pleaded that he was taking these Dhories in connection with the marriage of his sister and that he was not aware that a permit was required for the transport of Dhories. On these facts, the learned Magistrate found him guilty under Section 7 (1) of the Act. The accused then preferred an appeal against the conviction and sentence to the Sessions Judge Gwalior. In appeal the learned Sessions Judge referred to the provisions of the Madhya Bharat Cotton Textile (Control of Movement) Order of 1948 and observed that under Section 3 of this Order the export of cloth from Madhya Bharat except under and in accordance with a general or special permit issued by the Textile Commissioner was prohibited and that there was no restriction on the import of the cloth into Madhya Bharat, and that as the act of the accused in bringing 22 pairs of Dhories from Agra to Morena was an importation of the cloth, he had committed no offence.

(3) After hearing Mr. Shiv Dayal learned Deputy Government Advocate for the State, I have formed the opinion that this appeal must be dismissed. The learned Sessions Judge was no doubt palpably wrong in determining the guilt or innocence of the accused with reference to the provisions of the Madhya Bharat Cotton Textile (Control of Movement) Order 1948 which was not in force on the date of the alleged occurrence and which had already been repealed in 1950 by the extension to the State of Madhya Bharat, of the Cotton Textile (Control of Movement) Order 1948 made by the Central Government under the Central Act, namely, the Essential Supplies (Temporary Powers) Act 1948 which Act was also extended to this State on 17-8-50. The learned Sessions Judge overlooked the fact that the charge framed by the Railway Magistrate against the accused distinctly mentioned that he was being charged for the contravention of the order made by the Central Government under the Essential Supplies (Temporary Powers) Act, 1946.

(4) The question for determination in this appeal is, whether the respondent has contravened Section 3, Cotton Textiles (Control of Movement) Order 1948. This section is as follows:

"No person shall transport or cause to be transported by rail, road, air, sea or inland navigation from any place in India to any place therein any cloth, yarn or apparel except under and in accordance with (1) a general permit notified in the Gazette of India by the Textile Commissioner;

or

(2) a special transport permit issued by the Textile Commissioner."

(5) A general permit in pursuance of this section was notified by the Textile Commissioner on 13-8-49. (Ministry of Industries and Supplies New Delhi) 15 (Tex, 149) dated 13-8-1949.

(6) Clause 1 of this permit divided India into various zones mentioning the State of Uttar Pradesh and the State of Madhya Bharat as two separate zones. Clause 2 of the general permit provided that.....

"Any person may transport or cause to be transported by rail, road, air, sea, or inland navigation cloth or yarn as part of his personal luggage from any place in any zone to any other place in that or any other zone."

(7) For the purposes of Cotton Textile (Control of Movement) Order 1948 "cloth" has the same meaning as it has in the Cotton Textile (Central) Order 1948 and it is clear from the definition of cloth given in the latter Order that Dhoties are included as given in the definition of Cloth. It will thus be seen from the above provisions that the transport by rail of one pair of Dhoti or of 22 pairs of Dhoties as a part of one's personal luggage did not constitute an offence under the general permit which was produced before the Railway Magistrate. It is not disputed that the appellant carried the Dhoties in a hold-all bedding and in a hand bag. The learned Deputy Government Advocate, however, says that as the accused was not carrying the dhoties for his own personal use and as he could not be supposed to carry 22 pairs of Dhoties for his use, it cannot be held that he was carrying these pairs of Dhoties as part of his personal luggage. I am unable to accede to this contention. The word 'luggage' as used in cl. 2 of the general permit must be contra-distinguished from the word "parcel" and so also the word "personal" must be distinguished from the word "business". The expression "personal luggage" would then include whatever a passenger takes with him for his personal use or convenience according to the habits of the particular class to which he belongs, either with reference to the immediate necessities or ultimate purpose of the journey. See — Macrow v. Great Warters Rly. Co., (1871) LR 6 Q. B. 612 (A).

It must be noted that cl. 2 of the General Permit does not provide that the cloth being transported must be for one's own personal use. It refers to the transport of the cloth as part of personal language. If, therefore, a person carries cloth, not for business but to make a gift of it to his relatives, along with other articles for his own personal use or convenience in a hand bag, portmanteau or a hold-all, it cannot be said that he is not carrying the cloth as part of his personal luggage. The fact that he does not propose to use the cloth himself is immaterial. In the present case there is nothing to indicate that the statement of the accused that he was taking the Dhoties in connection with his sister's marriage is not true and that in fact he was transporting them for business. In the absence, therefore, of any restriction in cl. 2 of the General Permit which was before the Magistrate as to the limit of cloth that can be carried as a part of one's personal luggage, the act of the accused in transporting 22 pairs of Dhoties from Agra to Morena does not constitute any offence.

(8) But the learned Deputy Government Advocate after the close of the arguments and while the case was pending for judgment drew my attention to a notification No. 15 Tex. 1/49 (C. T.) dated 17-2-51 issued by the Textile Commissioner under S. 3 of the Cotton Textile (Control of Movement) Order 1948, by which clause 2 of the General Permit issued on 13-8-49 was modified so as to permit a passenger to carry cloth or yarn as part of his personal luggage only up to the limit of 20 pounds in weight. Under this Notification, there can be no doubt that the transport of cloth or yarn as part of one's personal luggage from any place in any zone to any other place or any other zone constitutes a contravention of S. 3 of the Cotton Textile (Control of Movement) Order 1948, if the cloth or the yarn transported exceeds 20 pounds in weight. But I do not think that in the present case the State can take advantage of this notification to secure the conviction of the respondent, because the notification in question was never placed and proved before the Railway Magistrate with the result that though the constable who arrested the respondent deposed that the weight of Dhoties was 33 seers that is, 66 pounds, the learned Magistrate did not put to the accused any question in the examination under S. 342, Criminal P. C., as regards the weight of the Dhoties. No inference, therefore, can be drawn against the respondent from the statement of the Constable that the weight of the Dhoties was 66 pounds. In these circumstances, the respondent cannot be held guilty of the contravention of S. 3 of the Cotton Textile (Control of Movement) Order 1948 on the material on the record. Having regard to the fact that the omission on the part of the Railway Magistrate to question the accused as to the weight of the Dhoties he was carrying, was one solely on account of the default of the prosecution in failing to produce and prove before the Magistrate the Notification No. 15 of 17-2-51, I do not think this Court would be justified in ordering a retrial of the accused.

(9) For the foregoing reasons, this appeal must, in my opinion, be dismissed.

(10) CHATURVEDI, J.: I agree.

C/D.H.

Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1953 MADH.-B. 266 (Vol. 40, C. N. 103)
(GWALIOR BENCH)

SHINDE J.

Bhanwarlal Mansukhlal, Applicant v. The State.

Criminal Revn. No. 164 of 1950, D/- 7-2-51.

Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 426 (1)—Operation of bail.

The section does not restrict operation of bail only for the period the appeal is pending.
(Para 2)

Anno: Cr. P. C., S. 426 N. 6.

Patankar, for Applicant; Govt. Advocate, for the State.

ORDER: The Sessions Judge Shujalpur ordered the surety bond of the applicant to be forfeited. Against that order the surety has filed this application in revision.

(2) The learned counsel for the applicant has urged only one point before me. He argues that under S. 353, Gwalior Criminal P. C. bail can be taken only for the period the appeal is pending. As the judgment of the appellate Court has been delivered, the surety cannot be called upon to produce the accused. Section 353, Gwalior Criminal P. C. is equivalent to S. 426, Indian Criminal P. C. The section runs as follows:

"(1) Pending any appeal by a convicted person the appellate Court may, for reasons to be recorded in writing, order that the execution of the sentence or order appealed against, be suspended and also, if he is in confinement, that he be released on bail or on his bond."

The language of the section does not justify the inference that bail can be taken only for that period during which the appeal is pending. All that the section lays down is that the Court is authorised to release a convicted person, if in confinement, on bail during the pendency of the appeal. The order of releasing the accused on bail can be passed while the appeal is pending. But the section does not restrict operation of bail only for the period the appeal is pending. This argument, therefore, has no substance. It may also be mentioned here that the learned Judge, who decided the appeal, in his judgment directed the lower Court to take proper steps to make the accused undergo the remainder of the sentence. Hence it cannot be said that the surety is being called upon to produce the accused after the judgment was delivered. The argument of the learned counsel, therefore, cannot be accepted.

(3) The application in revision is, therefore, dismissed.

B/V.R.B.

Revision dismissed.

A. I. R. 1953 MADH.-B. 267 (Vol. 40, C. N. 104)
(INDORE BENCH)

SHINDE C. J. AND NEWASKAR J.

Shantilal Hastmal, Applicant v. Raghuraj-singh Dashrathsing and others, Opponents.

Civil Misc. Appln. No. 49 of 1952, D/- 17-7-53.

Constitution of India, Art. 227 — Interference under — (Representation of the People Act (1951), Ss. 83 (2), 85).

It is for the Election Tribunal to determine whether the forms of Schedules attached to the election petition fulfil the legal requirements of the Representation of the People Act under which the Tribunal acts. That is the very issue which the Tribunal has to determine before proceeding further to determine, the issues involved in the petition and the reply thereof on merits. The jurisdiction of the Tribunal does not depend upon the facts whether the Schedules are properly verified or not but is independent of it. The Legislature in giving the Tribunal power to dismiss the petition for failure of the petitioner to supply Schedules duly verified in the manner laid down in the Code of Civil Procedure has empowered the Tribunal to determine whether the Schedules are duly verified or not and while in so doing even if it arrived at an erroneous decision it could not be said to have acted in a manner calling for the interference by the High Court in exercise of its powers of superintendence as in that case it would be acting as a Court of appeal to correct errors of law. Case law discussed.

(Para 20)

D. C. Bharucha and S. R. Joshi, for Applicant; S. M. Samvatsar, for Opponents Nos. 1 and 5; K. A. Chitale, Advocate-General, for the State.

CASES CITED:

- (A) ('51) AIR 1951 Cal 193 (SB)
- (B) ('53) AIR 1953 SC 58: 1953 SCR 302 (SC)
- (C) ('53) AIR 1953 Madh B 197: Madh B L J 1953 HCR 187
- (D) (1888) 57 LJQB 513: 21 QBD 313
- (E) ('52) AIR 1952 SC 319: 1952 SCR 696 (SC)
- (F) ('52) AIR 1952 SC 179: 1952 SCR 519 (SC)

NEWASKAR J: Petitioner Shantilal Chaudhary, an Advocate of Rajgarh and opponents Nos. 1 to 6 were nominated as candidates in the last general elections for the general seat prescribed for constituency No. 49 for Madhya Bharat Legislative Assembly. Out of these 7 candidates opponents Nos. 4, 5 and 6 withdrew their candidature and opponent No. 1 Raghurajsingh Dashrathsingh was declared elected after contest.

(2) On 22-4-1952 petitioner submitted an election petition under S. 80, Representation of the People Act calling in question opponent No. 1's election on the ground that the same had been procured by the commission of 'major corrupt practices etc.' This was received in the office of Election Commissioner on 25-4-1952. The petition was accompanied by Schs. A to G containing the particulars of these corrupt and illegal practices.

(3) The Election Commission by their Secretary's letter dated 21-6-1952 called upon the petitioner to show cause why the petition should not be dismissed under S. 85 of the Act as Schs. A to G referred to above had not been duly verified as provided by S. 83 (2).

(4) The petitioner thereupon submitted verification to all the aforesaid Schedules by getting them typed on a single sheet of paper. The Election Commission then admitted the petition and forwarded the same to the Election Tribunal for trial on merits.

(5) The Election Tribunal thereupon fixed on 20-9-1952 as the date for hearing the petition which was later adjourned to 22-10-1952 and on this date opponent Raghurajsingh and opponent Kailashnarayan in their written statement raised a preliminary objection that the Schs. A to G were not verified as required by law and the petition was liable to be dismissed on that ground alone.

(6) After hearing arguments on this objection the Tribunal by its order dated 1-12-1952 held that the Schedules could be permitted to be verified even at that stage and accordingly granted permission to 'add to several Schedules necessary verifications i.e. to verify every single Schedule'. In compliance with this leave the petitioner filed several pieces of paper each containing verification in respect of each of the Schedules without actually appending verification underneath each of the Schedules. These several loose sheets were ordered to be filed by the order of the Chairman dated 7-11-1951.

(7) On 28-11-1952 respondent 1 repeated his objection that the Schedules were still not duly verified and hence the allegations of fact contained in them could not be adjudicated upon.

(8) This objection was upheld by the Tribunal after hearing arguments on the point by its order dated 28-11-52.

(9) The present petition under Art. 227 of the Constitution is directed against this order of the Tribunal.

(10) The main contention raised by the learned counsel Mr. S. R. Joshi for the petitioner is that the view of the Tribunal that it was essential to append the verification underneath each individual Schedule is manifestly erroneous and has resulted in obvious miscarriage of justice because the petitioner now, if the decision of the Tribunal stands, will be wholly prevented from proving the allegations of facts contained in the Schedules aforesaid.

(11) Before considering the correctness or otherwise of the view of the Tribunal on this question of verification, we shall have first to see whether the decision such as this can very well be assailed by resorting to power of this Court under Art. 227 of the Constitution.

(12) The question with regard to the meaning and scope of Art. 227 of the Constitution has been subject of consideration both before the Supreme Court and High Courts of States including this Court.

(13) In — 'Dalmia Jain Airways Ltd. v. Sukumar Mukherjee', AIR 1951 Cal 193 (A) it has been held that 'Superintendence' does not vest the High Court with unlimited power to correct all species of hardship. The word has gathered legal force and signification. It does not involve responsibility of the superintending tribunal for correctness of the decision of inferior Courts either in fact or in law.

(14) If the inferior Court, after hearing the parties, comes to an erroneous decision, on a matter within its jurisdiction the Court having power of superintendence never interferes.

(15) The only mode of questioning the propriety of such a decision is by way of an appeal where one is provided or not at all.

(16) The general superintendence conferred by this Constitutional provision over all jurisdictions subject to appeals, involves a duty to keep them within bounds of their authority, to see that they do, what their duty requires them to do and that they do it in a legal manner.

(17) In — 'D. N. Banerji v. P. R. Mukherjee', AIR 1953 SC 58 (B) Chandrasekhara Aiyar J. has remarked:

"Unless there is any grave miscarriage of justice or flagrant violation of law calling for an intervention, it is not for the High Court under Art. 226 or 227 of the Constitution to interfere."

(18) In — 'Jamuna Prasad v. Lachhiram', AIR 1953 Madh B 197 (C) a Division Bench of this Court has considered this question. The judgment in this case was given by Dixit J. with which the learned Chief Justice concurred. In this decision following words of Lord Esher M. R. in — 'R. v. Income-tax Special Purposes Commr.', (1888) 21 Q B D 313 (D) were quoted with approval:

"When an inferior Court or tribunal or body, which has to exercise the power of deciding facts, is first established by Act of Parliament, the Legislature has to consider what powers it will give that tribunal or body. It may in effect say that, if a certain state of facts exists and is shown to such tribunal or body before it proceeds to do certain thing, it shall have jurisdiction to do such thing, but not otherwise. There it is not for them conclusively to decide whether that state of facts exists, and, if they exercise the jurisdiction without its existence, what they do may be questioned, and it will be held that they have acted without jurisdiction. But there is another state of things which may exist. The Legislature may entrust the tribunal or body with a jurisdiction, which includes the jurisdiction to determine whether the preliminary state of facts exists as well as the jurisdiction, on finding that it does exist, to proceed further or do something more. When the Legislature are establishing such a tribunal or body with limited jurisdiction, they also have to consider, whatever jurisdiction they give them, whether there shall be any appeal from their decision for otherwise there will be none. In the second of the two cases I have mentioned it is an erroneous application of the formula to say that the tribunal cannot give themselves jurisdiction by wrongly deciding certain facts to exist, because the Legislature gave them jurisdiction to determine all the facts, including the existence of the preliminary facts on which the further exercise of their jurisdiction depends; and if they were so to decide without any appeal being given, there is no appeal from such exercise of their jurisdiction."

In Para. 14 of the judgment the learned Judge further on held:

"The law to be gathered from the Supreme Court decisions relied upon by the opponents — 'Ebrahim Aboobakar v. Custodian General of Evacuee Property, New Delhi', AIR 1952 SC 319 (E) and — 'Parry & Co. Ltd. Dara House, Madras v. Commercial Employees Association Madras', AIR 1952 SC 179 (F) and especially from the English cases referred to above, is that, if a certain state of facts has to exist before an inferior Tribunal has jurisdiction to do certain things, the Tribunal must, to enable itself to obtain jurisdiction, find that those facts exist. The Tribunal cannot give itself jurisdiction by a wrong decision on them and the Superior Court may by means of proceedings for certiorari, inquire into the correctness of the decision. The decision as to those facts is collateral because, though the existence of jurisdiction depends thereon, it is not the main question which the Tribunal has to decide. If on the other hand the Tribunal is given jurisdiction to determine certain facts and those facts form a part of the very issue which the Tribunal has to decide and the Act constituting the Tribunal gives it the power to come to a final decision on that matter then the decision of the Tribunal cannot be treated as one going to its jurisdiction and cannot, therefore, be questioned in any Court."

(19) The ratio decidendi of these cases is that where there is any grave miscarriage of justice and flagrant violation of law or where the Court or Tribunal failed to act within bounds of its authority or contrary to the provisions of law prescribing the mode of its acting and which has materially affected its decision the High Court might interfere to remedy obvious error or grave injustice. It may also interfere where machinery of law has been harnessed 'fraudulently' by a party to achieve his end or the Court or the Tribunal has acted contrary to the principles of natural justice. But it certainly cannot be exercised where the effect of such interference would be practically to exercise powers of an appellate Court when in fact no appeal is provided. Nor can it be exercised on the ground that the order or decision is erroneous on merits.

(20) Applying these tests to the present case it is clear that it is for the Election Tribunal to determine whether the forms of Schedules attached to the election petition fulfil the legal requirements of the Act under which the Tribunal acts. That is the very issue which the Tribunal has to determine before proceeding further to determine the issues involved in the petition and the reply thereof on merits. The jurisdiction of the Tribunal does not depend upon the facts whether the Schedules are properly verified or not but is independent of it. The Legislature in giving the Tribunal power to dismiss the petition for failure of the petitioner to supply Schedules duly verified in the manner laid down in the Code of Civil Procedure has empowered the Tribunal to determine whether the Schedules are duly verified or not and while in so doing even if it arrived at an erroneous decision it could not be said to have acted in a manner calling for the interference by the High Court in exercise of its powers of superintendence as in that (case?) it would be acting as a Court of appeal to correct errors of law.

(21) It is contended by Mr. Joshi that if it is assumed that the view of the Tribunal is incorrect then there is no remedy to avoid the harm and the injury is substantial and material. He further submitted that grave injustice in this case will result by reason of a technical view of the matter involved which is erroneous inasmuch as a party will be entirely shut out and prevented from proving the corrupt practices relied upon in the petition.

(22) I have anxiously considered these submissions but I feel having regard to the settled law bearing on the question as discussed above, our interfering will only be tantamount to one for correcting an error of law and nothing more. All erroneous decisions in a way affect adversely one or the other of the parties. The circumstances giving rise to the present state of things were brought about by the petitioner himself.

(23) The result is that the present petition for exercise of powers of this Court under Art. 227 of the Constitution cannot be entertained. It is accordingly dismissed with costs to opponents Nos. 1 and 5. Counsel's fee to be taxed at Rs. 50/-.

(24) SHINDE C. J.: I agree.

A/D.H.Z.

Petition dismissed.

A. I. R. 1953 MADH.-B. 269 (Vol. 40, C. N. 105)
(GWALIOR BENCH)

SHINDE C. J.

Bhagga and others, Appellants v. Jorawarsingh, Respondent.

Second Appeals Nos. 129 to 131 of 1950,
D/- 10-4-1953.

(a) Tort — Malicious prosecution — Burden of proof.

In an action for malicious prosecution, the plaintiff has to prove (a) that he was prosecuted by the defendant; (b) that the proceedings complained of terminated in favour of the plaintiff; (c) that the prosecution was instituted without any reasonable and probable cause; and (d) that it was due to a malicious intention. AIR 1926 PC 46, Foll. (Para 3)

(b) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 100 — Concurrent finding of fact.

A concurrent finding of fact that there was absence of reasonable and probable cause for the prosecution, based on evidence is binding in second appeal.

(Para 3)

Anno: C. P. C., Ss. 100 and 101 N. 39 and 54.

(c) Tort — Malicious prosecution — Proof of malice.

Malice can be inferred in certain circumstances from absence of reasonable and probable cause. If a prosecution is launched with the knowledge that the accused has committed no offence then whatever may be the motive which actuates the prosecutor, the prosecution would be considered to be due to malicious intention in law. (1892) 2 QBD 718 and AIR 1936 Mad 547, Rel. on.

(Para 3)

Mungre, for Appellants; Bhagwanswaroop, for respondent.

CASES CITED :

(A) ('26) AIR 1926 PC 46: 1 Luck 215 (PC)

(B) (1892) 61 LJ QB 151: 2 QB 718

(C) ('36) AIR 1936 Mad 547: 59 Mad 887

JUDGMENT: These three appeals arise out of the suits filed by Baldeosingh, Bhagga and Parshadi for damages on the ground of malicious prosecution. The facts briefly are that Jorawarsingh filed a complaint against Baldeosingh, Bhagga and Parshadi on the ground that they cut and stole a Babool tree which was in the possession of the complainant. That complaint was dismissed on the ground that it is not proved that the accused stole the Babool tree from the possession of the complainant. A revision was also filed before the Sessions Judge. But that was also disallowed. Consequently Baldeosingh, Bhagga and Parshadi filed suits for damages on the ground of malicious prosecution. The trial court decreed the suits and granted damages to Baldeosingh to the extent of Rs. 300/- and Parshadi and Bhagga to the extent of Rs. 50/- each. In appeal, the District Judge allowed the appeal and set aside the decree of the trial court. Consequently, all the three plaintiffs have filed these appeals.

(2) As the points involved in the cases were the same, both the lower courts disposed of the cases by one judgment. As similar points have been raised before me in all the three appeals, I propose to dispose of all the three appeals by one judgment.

(3) The lower appellate court has taken the view that the plaintiffs have not proved how Baldeosingh came to own the tree. The lower court has also stated in its judgment that the plaintiffs-appellants have not adduced any evidence to prove that the complainant was actuated by malice. It may be said at once that the question of ownership is absolutely immaterial for the decision of this case. What the plaintiff has to prove in such cases is (a) that he was prosecuted by the defendant; (b) that the proceedings complained of terminated in favour of the plaintiff; (c) that the prosecution was instituted without any reasonable and probable cause; and (d) that it was due to a malicious intention. (Vide — 'Balbhaddar Singh v. Budri Sah', AIR 1926 PC 46 (A)). That the plaintiffs were prosecuted and that they were acquitted is not disputed in this case. What we have to see is whether there was any reasonable and probable cause for launching the prosecution and whether the plaintiff was actuated in instituting the proceedings by malice.

The trial court has definitely found that the prosecution was launched without reasonable and probable cause. This finding of the trial court is based on the facts found on the evidence that the tree, at the time of cutting, was in the possession of Baldeosingh plaintiff, and consequently no theft could be committed of the tree. This finding has not been reversed by the lower appellate court. Consequently this finding is binding on me. All that has to be determined now, therefore, is whether the prosecution was due to a malicious intention. It must be admitted at once that there is no evidence on record to prove that Baldeosingh was actuated by malice in launching the criminal proceedings. But malice can be inferred under certain circumstances from absence of reasonable and probable cause.

In — 'Brown v. Hawkes', (1892) 2 QB 718 (B), Cave J. observed as follows:

"Now malice, in its widest and vaguest sense, has been said to mean any wrong or indirect motive; and malice can be proved, either by shewing what the motive was and that it was wrong, or by shewing that the circumstances were such that the prosecution can only be accounted for by imputing some wrong or indirect motive to the prosecutor."

The same learned Judge further observed:

"Of course, there may be such plain want of reasonable and probable cause that the jury may come to the conclusion that the prosecutor could not honestly have believed in the charge he made, and in that case want of reasonable and probable cause is evidence of malice."

The same proposition was affirmed in — 'Karuppanna Pillai v. F. W. Haughton', AIR 1936 Mad 547 (C). King J., who delivered the judgment of the court, observed as follows:

"The situation reduced to its simplest terms is this, that the Chairman knew that the appellant had committed no offence and that in spite of that knowledge he decided to prosecute him. His motive for doing so may have been not to gratify a personal spite but to promote what he thought the best interests of the Municipality. But the fact remains that he prosecuted a person who, he knew, was not guilty of any offence. That being the case, it seems to us clear that there cannot have been any reasonable or probable cause for the prosecution, and whatever his motive may have been, to have embarked upon a prosecution of this kind without reasonable or probable cause must amount to malice in law."

Both these cases have laid down a proposition that if a prosecution is launched with the knowledge that the accused has committed no offence then whatever may be the motive which actuates the prosecutor, the prosecution would be considered to be due to malicious intention in law. In the present case the possession of the tree was with plaintiff Baldeosingh. Bhagga and Parshadi were the servants of Baldeosingh. They cut the tree which was in the field of Baldeosingh. Jorawarsingh, therefore, could not honestly have believed in the charge of theft which he made against the present plaintiffs. Consequently, absence of reasonable and probable cause in this case is evidence of malice. In these circumstances, even the requirement of malicious intention is satisfied in this case. The suits must, therefore, be decreed.

(4) In the result the appeals are allowed and the decrees of the lower appellate courts are set aside. The decrees of the trial courts are restored. Appellants to get their costs throughout.

B/K.S.B.

Appeals allowed.

A. I. R. 1953 MADH-B. 270 (Vol. 40, C. N. 106)
(Gwalior Bench)

CHATURVEDI J.

Shankar Singh Ganpat Singh, Applicant v. Gajraj Singh Kishori Singh, Opponent.

Civil Revn. No. 122 of 1950, D/- 25-2-1953.

Tenancy Laws — Quanoon Mal, Gwalior, (Smt. 1983), Ss. 119, 130 and 377 — Decision by Revenue Court in partition proceeding — Jurisdiction of Civil Court — Res judicata — (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 11, Expl. IV).

Taking the provisions of Ss. 119, 130 and 377, Gwalior Quanoon Mal, into consideration along with the principle incorporated in Expl. 4 to S. 11, C. P. C., there is no escape from the conclusion that a Civil Court is not competent to decide the question of title after the termination of the partition proceedings in a Revenue Court. Case law referred. (Para 8)

Anno: C. P. C., S. 11 N. 33.

Patankar and Hargovind Mishra, for Applicant; Krishna Bahadur and Vidyasagar, for Opponent.

CASES REFERRED TO:

- (A) ('21) AIR 1921 Oudh 132(2): 63 Ind Cas 272
- (B) ('23) AIR 1923 All 369: 71 Ind Cas 292
- (C) ('24) AIR 1924 Oudh 317: 75 Ind Cas 868
- (D) ('27) AIR 1927 All 635: 103 Ind Cas 360
- (E) ('31) AIR 1931 All 462: 53 All 568

ORDER: This is plaintiff's revision against the decree dated 24-2-1950 passed by the learned District Judge, Shajapur, in second appeal affirming the decrees of the first Appellate Court and of the trial Court dismissing the plaintiff's suit for a declaration of title. The dispute relates to two annas share in a zamindari in village Berakhedi-ghat, parganna Basoda, District Bhilsa. It was alleged in the plaint that in 1912 a four annas share was purchased from one Krishna Singh jointly by the father of the plaintiff and that of the defendant for a sum of Rs. 231/-. The defendants' father Kishore Singh at that time had no money with him and so the plaintiff's father Ganpat Singh had to pay Rs. 115/8/- on behalf of Kishore Singh to Kishan Singh. The father of the defendant could not pay the said sum of Rs. 115/8 to the father of the plaintiff and therefore by a deed dated 24-12-1912 he relinquished his rights in the said zamindari and abandoned his possession over it. The said deed could not be registered and a formal sale deed could not be executed when Kishore Singh and Ganpat both died. Thereafter in the Khewat the defendant Gajraj Singh was recorded as owner of two annas share, the property remaining joint in the name of the co-sharers. The plaintiff filed a suit for declaration of title on the basis of adverse possession for more than 12 years and wanted that the defendant's name should be struck off from the Khewat and that the partition proceedings should be stayed. The suit was resisted by the defendant on the ground that the partition proceedings had come to an end and thereafter the plaintiff's suit for declaration of title could not be entertained. The substantial point in issue was does the decision in partition suit in the court of Assistant Collector (Naib Suba) operates as res judicata? This issue was decided in favour of the defendant and the suit was dismissed by the trial Court and both the appellate Courts have upheld this decision. The plaintiff has now come to this Court in revision.

(2) Mr. Patankar, on behalf of the plaintiff petitioner contends that the revenue Court has not made any inquiry in the plaintiff's title, nor has it given any decision as to the ownership of the property. He urges that the question of title was not directly and substantially in issue in the Revenue Court in partition proceedings.

(3) From the arguments of the learned counsel on both the sides it appears that the provisions of S. 377 Qanoon Mal, Gwalior, Samvat 1933, have been overlooked. For the decision of this suit S. 377 is important which rendered into English, runs as follows:

"(1) Those suits which are cognizable by the Revenue Courts under this Act will not be entertained in Civil Courts until there is clear direction to that effect in this Act.

(2) Once a question by a competent Court is decided between the parties to a suit, that decision will operate as res judicata in subsequent suits between the same parties or their representatives."

(4) In the Gwalior Act, (i. e., Qanoon Mal) partition proceedings are governed by chapter 9. Section 119 (1) mentions that an application for partition can be made only by a co-sharer whose name and share have been entered in the Khewat and who is not shown in the Khewat as "Gair Quabiz" (without possession). It appears from the proceedings that when the defendant made an application under S. 119 for partition of his share in the zamindari in dispute, the plaintiff petitioner had raised an objection that the defendant had never been in possession of the zamindari and so he could not file an application under S. 119. After inquiry, it was decided on 9-10-1937 that Gajraj Singh defendant had been in possession of the zamindari, and that the entry in Khewat to that effect is correct. The objection of the plaintiff was overruled and one Amin Sheopujan Singh was appointed for actual partitioning the shares. The question is; whether after the partition, a Civil Court is competent to decide the question of title. A perusal of S. 130 of Qanoon Mal Gwalior leads me to the conclusion that a Civil Court has only a limited jurisdiction for the purpose of deciding the question of proprietary title raised in the course of partition proceedings. When an objection regarding title is filed in a partition proceeding, three courses are open to the Revenue Court, (a) to decline to grant the application for partition until the question is determined by a competent Court, (b) to require any party to the case to institute a suit in a competent Court, or (c) to proceed to enquire into the merits of the objection and decide it as a Civil Court.

(5) The competence of a Civil Court to decide the question of title, therefore, depends upon the choice exercised by the Revenue Court. If the latter Court passes an order under cl. (a) or cl. (b), the Civil Court has authority to try and decide the question of title but it is a condition precedent that an order under either cl. (a) or cl. (b) should be made. On the other hand, if the Revenue Court takes an action under cl. (c) and proceeds to determine the question of title itself the jurisdiction of the Civil Court is wholly ousted. In case no order is passed under cl. (a) or cl. (b), it can be presumed that the Assistant Collector (Naib Suba) followed the third course under S. 130, Gwalior Qanoon Mal. From a perusal of the provisions of this section, read with the provisions embodied in S. 377, it will be manifest that a suit to decide a question of proprietary title in the course of the partition proceedings, cannot be entertained by a Civil Court unless and until it has authority from the Revenue Court to entertain it.

(6) Mr. Patankar draws my attention to the provisions of S. 112 and S. 233 (k), U. P. Land Revenue Act (No. 3 of 1901) and from the absence of such provisions in the Gwalior Qanoon Mal Samvat 1933, he thinks that the rulings of Allahabad High Court & Oudh Chief Court reported in—'Ram Lakhan Singh v. Rampal Singh', AIR 1921 Oudh 132 (2), (A) — 'Deoki Dube v. Umandat Dube', AIR 1923 All 369 (B) — 'Bhagwan Dutt v. Brij Bhakhan', AIR 1924 Oudh 317 (C) — 'Mukandlal v. Nawbatlal', AIR 1927 All 635 (D) & — 'Ram Rekha v. Lallu Missir', AIR 1931 All. 462 (E) and relied upon by the Courts below have no material bearing upon the question in this revision. I do not subscribe to this view. In my opinion, S. 130 of Qanoon Mal, Gwalior, corresponds to S. 111, U. P. Land Revenue Act, and there is no substantial difference between the two. Section 112, U. P. Land Revenue Act of 1901, of course, lays down that the decrees passed by the Collector shall be held to be the decrees of the Court of Civil jurisdiction of the first instance and shall be open to appeal to the District Judge or to the High Court. It is true that there is no provision for appeal to the District Judge or to the High Court in Gwalior Qanoon Mal, but this alone cannot be considered to be of such significance when it is clearly mentioned in cl. (c) of S. 130, Gwalior Qanoon Mal that the Officer in charge of partition can decide the question of title "as a Civil Court". It would follow that the decrees of the said Officer passed in partition suit would be considered to be decrees of a Court of Civil jurisdiction, irrespective of the fact whether appeals from them lie or do not lie to the District Judge or to the High Court.

(7) Then S. 233 (k), U. P. Land Revenue Act, 1901, only lays down that a Civil Court cannot take cognizance of a suit for partition except as provided in Ss. 111 & 112. The same result is achieved in Gwalior Qanoon Mal by S. 130 read with the provisions embodied in S. 377 adverted to above. As a general statement of law I am disposed to agree to the remarks of Mukherjee J. at p. 465 of — 'AIR 1931 All. 462 (E)' that the first question involved in partition proceedings is a question of title. The court has to declare the title of the respective parties before it, and after it has declared the title, it has to proceed to divide and distribute the property. A perusal of chapter 9 of the Gwalior Qanoon Mal will then show that as soon as an application is made for partition, notice is to be given to the co-sharers and a date is to be fixed for their appearance. They have to file an objection, if any, to the partition. If no question of title is raised by them at this stage, then the nature and extent of the interest of the several parties before the Court is to be declared. This order would amount to making of a preliminary decree for partition in a Civil Court. It is only after passing of this preliminary decree that the property is divided and shares are allotted. If any party fails to raise any question of title, having had an opportunity to do so, he would be barred from doing so at a later stage by reason of the principle incorporated in explanation 4 to S. 11, Civil P. C.

(8) Taking the provisions of Ss. 119, 130 and 377, Gwalior Quanoon Mal, into consideration along with the principle incorporated in Expl. 4 to S. 11, C. P. C., there is no escape from the conclusion that a Civil Court is not competent to decide the question of title after the termination of the partition proceedings in a Revenue Court. In this view of the matter I dismiss the revision with costs.

B/D.R.R.

Revision dismissed.

A. I. R. 1953 MADH.-B. 272 (Vol. 40, C. N. 107)
(INDORE BENCH)

ABDUL HAKIM KHAN J.

Chakrapani Laltpasad, Applicant v. Bihari-lal Mahabir and another, Opponents.

Small Cause Revn. No. 135 of 1950, D/- 9-4-1953.

(a) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 22, R. 9 and S. 141 — Applicability to revision proceeding — AIR 1949 Lah 186 (FB); AIR 1949 Mad 435, Dissented from.

Where any of the parties to a revision dies, the suit abates under O. 22. Steps, therefore, should be taken for setting aside the order of abatement under O. 22, R. 9, which applies to a revision proceeding by virtue of S. 141, before applying for substitution of legal representative. AIR 1949 Lah 186 (FB); AIR 1949 Mad 435, Dissented from. (Para 4)

Anno: C.P.C., O. 22, R. 9 N. 11; S. 141 N. 2 Pt. 28.

(b) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 141 — Applicability. AIR 1949 Lah 186 (FB), Dissented from.

The words "all proceedings" occurring in S. 141 embrace proceedings of all character, original as well as those that are not original. The word "all" is a comprehensive term. Thus, a revision is a proceeding to which S. 141 applies. AIR 1949 Lah 186 (FB), Dissented from. (Para 5)

Anno: C. P. C., S. 141 N. 2 Pts. 8 and 28.

Tambe, for Applicant; Goyal, for Opponents.

CASES CITED:

(A) ('49) AIR 1949 Lah 186: Pak LR (1948) Lah 225 (FB)

(B) ('49) AIR 1949 Mad 435: ILR (1949) Mad 566

ORDER: During the pendency of this revision, the opponent Biharilal died and within the period of limitation prescribed by law, no steps were taken to bring the legal representatives of the opponent on record. An application for bringing the legal representatives on record should be filed according to Article 176, Limitation Act, in three months. But the applicant filed it after about 16 months when the revision had abated.

(2) The counsel for the applicant without praying for setting aside the order of abatement, has filed an application for bringing the legal representatives of the deceased on record. It is being objected to by the other party and it is said that it is not possible to proceed with the case without the order of abatement being first set aside. But it is urged on behalf of applicant that Order 22 Rule 9 does not apply to revisions that have abated. In support of this, the learned counsel for the applicant has cited — 'Mahomed Sadaat Ali Khan v. Administrator Corporation of city of Lahore', AIR 1949 Lah. 186 (A) and — 'Manickam v. Ramanathan Chettiar', AIR 1949 Mad 435 (B). With very great respect, I beg to differ.

(3) In the first place we have to decide whether on the death of any of the parties a revision abates or not? It is conceded that a revision does abate. The very fact of abatement of a revision implies that Order 22, Civil P. C. has been applied. Furthermore, the very prayer of the applicant to bring the legal representatives of the deceased on record impliedly invokes Order 22 because the legal representatives are brought on record under Order 22, C. P. C.

(4) I am of opinion that if any of the parties to a revision dies, the suit abates under Order 22 Civil P. C., and that steps should be taken for setting aside the order of abatement under Order 22 Rule 9 Civil P. C. My reason for applying O. 22 Rule 9 in revisions is that Section 141, Civil P. C. has been enacted for precisely such a purpose. It read thus:

"The procedure provided in this Code in regard to suits shall be followed, as far as it can be made applicable, in all proceedings in any Court of Civil Jurisdiction."

There can be no two views that the proceedings in revision are of a civil nature and that they are proceedings in a court of civil jurisdiction.

(5) The Lahore High Court in its Full Bench decision reported in — 'AIR 1949 Lah. 186 (A)', has expressed the view that Section 141 is so drafted as to enable the court to apply the procedure in regard to suits to such proceedings as are in pari materia with suits and thus original in character. But with very great respect I beg to point out that the words "all proceedings" occurring in Section 141 embrace proceedings of all character, original as well as those that are not original. The word "all" is a comprehensive term and I see no reason why its meaning should be restricted. I have, therefore, no hesitation in saying that a revision is a proceeding to which Section 141, Civil P. C. applies and in this view of the matter Order 22 and the rules thereunder apply to it as well.

(6) I, therefore, hold that the revision having abated, the applicant should first file an application for setting aside the order of abatement.

A/V.S.B.

Ordered accordingly.

END

THE ALL INDIA REPORTER

1953

[ Vol. 40 ]

MADRAS SECTION

WITH COMPARATIVE TABLE FOR

- |                                       |                                     |
|---------------------------------------|-------------------------------------|
| (1) I. L. R. (1952) MADRAS            | (2) (1952) 1 & 2 MADRAS LAW JOURNAL |
| (3) 65 MADRAS LAW WEEKLY              | (4) 1952 MADRAS WEEKLY NOTES        |
| (5) (1952) 21 & 22 INCOME-TAX REPORTS |                                     |

CITATION : A. I. R. (40) 1953 MADRAS

PUBLISHERS
THE ALL INDIA REPORTER, LTD.,
NAGPUR, M. P.
1953

Printed by L. MELA RAM, at the All India Reporter Press, Nagpur, and Published by D. V. CHITALEY, B.A. LL.B., Advocate, for the All India Reporter Ltd., at Congress Nagar, Nagpur.

( All Rights Reserved. )

MADRAS HIGH COURT

1953

CHIEF JUSTICE :

The Hon'ble Shri P. V. Rajamannar, B.A., B.L.

PUISNE JUDGES :

The Hon'ble Shri P. Satyanarayana Rao, M.A., M.L.

" " P. Govinda Menon, B.A., B.L.

" " K. Subba Rao, B.A., B.L.

" " P. Rajagopalan, I.C.S.

" " Ch. Raghava, Rao, M.A., B.L.

" " E. E. Mack, I. C. S., Bar-at-law.

" " N. Somasundaram, B.A., B.L.

" " A. S. Panchapakesa Ayyar, M.A., I. C. S., Bar-at-law.

" " P. V. Balakrishna Ayyar, I. C. S.

" " W. S. Krishnaswami Nayudu, B.A., B.L.

" " Basheer Ahmed Sayeed, M.A., B.L.

" " P. Chandra Reddy, B.A., B.L.

" " T. L. Venkatarama Ayyar, B.A., B.L.

" " P. N. Ramaswami, M.A., I.C.S.

" " K. Ramaswami Gounder, B.A., B.L.

" " N. Rajagopala Aiyangar, M.A., M.L.

" " K. Umamaheswaram, B.A., B.L.

ADVOCATE-GENERAL, MADRAS.

Shri V. K. Thiruvengkatachari, M.A., B.L.

ADVOCATE-GENERAL, ANDHRA.

Shri D. Narasaraaju, B.A., M.L.

GOVERNMENT PLEADERS :

Shri P. Satyanarayana Raju, B.A., B.L.

" C. A. Vaidyalingam.

PUBLIC PROSECUTOR, MADRAS :

Shri V. T. Rangaswami Ayyangar, B.A., B.L.

PUBLIC PROSECUTOR, ANDHRA :

Shri D. Munikanniah.

STATE PROSECUTOR :

Shri S. Govind Swaminathan, B.A., B.L.

—: 0 :—

REPORTER :

Shri C. R. Krishna Rao, B.A., B.L., Advocate, Madras.

—: 0 :—

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE :

DR. SIR M. V. JOSHI, KT., K. O. I. E., LL.D., Ex-Law Member, C. P. Government, Nagpur.
SHRI V. V. CHITALEY, B.A., LL.B., Senior Advocate, Supreme Court of India, Bombay.

EDITORIAL STAFF :

SHRI S. APPU RAO, B.A., B.L., Advocate (Madras), Chief Editor.

" D. V. CHITALEY, B.A., LL.B., Advocate, Joint Editor.

" V. S. BALKUNDI, B.A., LL.B., Assistant Editor.

" V. B. BAKHALE, M.A., LL.B., Assistant Editor.

" R. K. MANOHAR, B.A., LL.B., Advocate, Supreme Court of India, Nagpur.

" M. D. RAO, Advocate, (Bombay).

" D. W. CHITALEY, B.A., LL.B., Pleader.

NOMINAL INDEX

Abdul Azeez S. M. and Sons v. Subrahmanyam	711	Chenchanna Naidu v. Praja Seva Transport Ltd.
Abdul Kadir v. Mahlarathul Kadiria Sabha, Kayalpatnam	143	Cuddappah	39
Abdul Kayoom v. Commr. of Income-tax, Madras (FB)	900	Chengalroya Chetti v. Special Deputy Collector	348
Abdul Rahman v. Muhammad Siddiq (FB)	781	Chengama Naidu v. Velayudha Mudaliar	930
Abdul Wazid v. Viswanathan	261	Chidambaram Chettiar v. Subramanian Chettiar	492
Abdulla Kutty v. Janaki	837	Chinnathambi, In re	239
Ahmed Hussain Sahib v. Veeri Chettiar	628	Chockalingam Chettiar v. Alagammai Achi	927
Ahmed Sahib v. Commr. of Income-tax	340	Chockalingam Chettiar v. Sivakolandu Achi	234
Alagappa Chettiar v. Nachiappa Chettiar	810	Coimbatore Municipality v. Govindayyar	689
Alexander D. M. Mrs. v. The Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras	166	Commr. for Hindu Religious Endowments Board, Madras v. Vinayakar Arudra Tiruppani Sabha	407
Allaudin Maracair v. Commissioner of Income-tax, Excess Profits Tax	824	Commr. Hindu Religious and Charitable Endowments Board v. Gangamma	950
*Ammenumma v. Beeviamma	32	Commr. of Income-tax v. G. M. Dandekar	152
Anaithalayan v. Marudamuthu	528	Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras v. Ratanshi Bhavanji	358
Ananthalakshmi Ammal v. The Indian Trades and Investments Ltd.	467	Corporation of Madras v. A. D. Charles	357
Anganna Thevan v. Ayyasami Thevan	706	Corporation of Madras v. Balakrishna Mehta	605
Annamalai Ammal v. Sundarathammal	404	Council of the Institute of Chartered Accountants of India v. K. V. Narasimham	346
Annamalai Mudaliar, In re	362	Council of Institute of Chartered Accountants v. Rajamany	310
Annamalai Reddi v. Abdul Sathar Sahib	674	Crompton Engineering Co., (Madras) Ltd. v. Chief Controlling Revenue Authority Madras (FB)	764
Annapurnamma v. Collector of Vizagapatam	906	C. S. S. Motor Service, Tenkasi v. The State of Madras	279
Annasami Mudaliar v. Ekambari Ammal	696	Danapal Chetti v. Rajagopal Chetti	871
Aparanji Chetti v. Arunachalam Chettiar	28	Danda Reddi v. Ramireddi	908
Appanna v. Venkatappadu	611	Dasia Pillai v. Pattamuthu Mudaliar	624
Appa Rao V. S., In re	1004	Deenadayalu Reddy v. Lalithakumari	402
Appa Rao v. Veeranna	409	Delli Gramani v. Ramachandran	769
Aravamudha Chettiar v. Abdul Khader	268	Devaraja Bhatt v. V. S. Raja	356
Arumugham v. The State of Madras	664	Devaraja Shenoy v. State of Madras	149
Arumugham Pillai, In re	154	Devar and Co. v. Radhakrishna Naidu	16
Arunachala v. Arumugha	550	Dhanam v. Varadarajan	176
Arunachalam Iyer v. K. N. Lingiah and Brothers	71	Dindigal Skin Merchants' Association v. Industrial Tribunal, Madurai	102
Asher Textiles Ltd., Tiruppur v. Commr. of Income-tax and Excess Profits Tax, Madras	20	District Collector of Krishna v. Viswanadam	867
Associated Industrial Engineers v. Jabbar Sahib	197	Dominion of India v. Adam Haji Pir Muhamed Essac	217
Athimoolam Achari v. The Deputy Commercial Tax Officer, Kovilpatti, Tirunelveli Dt.	10	Dorayya v. Adinarayana	183
Avaran Kutti v. Cheriyakkan	480	Duraiswami Nadar v. Nataraja Nadar	619
Ayisumma v. Mayomoothy Umma	425	Dwaraka Bai Dr. v. Nainan Mathews	792
Ayya Nadar, In re	933	Dwarakabai v. Nainan Mathews	800
Baggiam, In re	507	Express Estates Ltd. v. Modern Furnishing House	414
Balakrishnan v. Balasundara Gramani	852	Fathima Bi v. The State of Madras	257
Balarama Reddi v. Subbarama Reddi	360	Fernandes v. Ranganayakulu Chetty	236
Balarami Reddy v. Shaik Masthan Saheb	968	Gaffar Khan, In re	875
Balasubramania v. Commr. of Income-tax, Excess Profits Tax Madras	438	Ganapathia Pillai, In re	936
Balaswamy, In re	827	Ganapathi Udayar v. Chinnayya Mudaliar	609
Bapayya v. Venkataratnam	884	Ganapathy, S. V. v. Tiffin's Barytes, Asbestos and Paints Ltd.	556
Bayamma, In re	745	Gobald Motor Service Ltd. v. Velusami	981
Behara Lachanna Patnaick, In re	332	Golla Narasimhalu v. Kodi Narosimham	932
Beyabani, In re	1002	Gomraj Poonamchand v. Venkatrathnam	857
Bhagat Estates Ltd. v. Accommodation Controller, Madras	390	Gopal, S. In re	413
Bhupathiraju Venkatapathiraju v. Venkataratnam	831	Gopalakrishna Menon v. Vellakutty	399
Bondalapati Thatayya v. Gollapudi Basavayya	956	Gopalan v. Eram Veettil Kanaran	925
Brahmayya v. Rajeswaraswami Temple	580	Gopalan, A. K. In re	41
Bramaramba v. Jagannadha Rao	548	Gopalan v. State of Madras	260
British India Steam Navigation Co. Ltd. v. Sokkalal Ram Sait	3	Gopal Rao v. Seetharamiah	582
Butchi Ramayya v. Gundu Ramanna	562	Gopalu Mudali v. Venkatesu Mudali	513
C'Connor R. P. v. P. G. Sampath Kumar	897	Governor-General in Council v. Sankarappa	838
Chakkarai Chettiar, In re	96	Govindarajulu Chettiar v. Sivarama Krishnan	822
Chakravarthi Iyengar v. Gangadara Mudaliar	692	*Govindarajulu Naidu & Co. v. State of Madras	116
Chalamiah v. Rubiah	464	Govindaswami, In re	372
Chandammull & Co. H. v. Mohambal M. Mehta	561	Gundachar v. The State of Madras	537
Chandanmull & Co. v. Mohanlal M. Mehta	727	Hanumanthappa and Son v. Commissioner of Income Tax, Madras	209
Chandra Bhogi v. Guddappa Bhandary	846	Harihararayulu v. Bangarayya	569
Chandramouleswaran v. Krishnaswami Naidu	993
Chellammal v. Abdul Rahiman	856
Chellappa Chettiar v. Official Assignee of Madras	928

Hussain & Co., N. M., In re	602	Margaret Jean Massy, Mrs. v. Colonel Granville
Indian Metal and Metallurgical Corporation		Alric Richard Spain	313
v. Industrial Tribunal, Madras	98	Masulipatam Municipal Council v. Brundavan
India Sugars and Refineries Ltd. v. Estate of		Talkies Ltd.	864
the late V. Ramalingam	694	Masulipatnam Municipal Council v. Maha-
Indira Bai v. Venkata Sivaprasada Rao	461	lakshmamamma	647
Indira Gonsalves v. Joseph	858	Mathayya, In re	26
Innasia Pillai v. Perumal Chettiar	1008	Mathuraman Chettiar, In re	395
Intoor John, In re	774	Medikenduri v. Venkatayya	210
Irani, J. H. v. Chidambaran Chettiar	650	Meera Sahib, K. A., Tharaganar and Brothers,
Jagannadham v. A. S. Krishna and Co., Ltd.	208	In re	716
Jagannatham Chetty v. Parthasarathy Iyengar	777	Menon C. G., In re	729
Jakka Devayya and Sons, Tenali v. Commis-		Moidin Kunhi v. Gopalakrishna	849
sioner of Income-tax, Madras	315	Molagan, In re	179
Jamal Mohideen Saheb and Co. v. State of		Moosa Kutty, In re	717
Madras	131	Munusami v. Swaminatha	25
James Manickam v. Jaya Narayan Daga	767	Muthalammal v. Veeraraghavalu Nayudu	202
Janaki v. Srirangammal	38	Muthukrishna Reddiar v. Messrs, Madhavji
Janakiramayya v. Ranganayakamma	174	Devichand and Co., Ltd.	817
Janardhana Krishna Ranga Rao v. The State		Muthu Naicken v. Mariappa Pillai	754 of Madras	185	Nadar Transports, Tiruchirapalli v. The State of
Jaya Bharat Tile Works, Samalkot v. The		Madras	1
State of Madras	30	Nagappa Chettiar v. Veeyares and Co.	296
Joseph, P. R., In re	574	Nagi Reddy v. Venkatappa	436
Jumma Masjid v. Kodimani Andra Devaiah - (FB)	637	Nagu Thevar v. Periakaruppa Thevan	184
Kadar Moideen, In re	406	*Nalla Baligadu, In re	(FB) 801
Kalyani Achi v. Ramantham Chettiar	860	Nallamothe Chimpireyya, In re	219
Kalam v. Saradambal	576	Nallaperumal Nattarayar v. Singaravelu Seen-
Kama Umi Isa Ammal v. Rama Kudumban	129	nandar	375
Kanakammal v. Muhammad Kathija Beevi	188	Nallathambi v. Perumal Chetty	813
Kandasamy Nadar v. Province of Madras	391	Nambiar, K. C. Dr. v. State of Madras	351
Kannan, In re	579	Narasayya, In re	516
Kasi Raja, In re	156	Narasimhacharulu v. Kotayya	615
Kasi Viswanadhan v. Rudra Viranna	220	Narasimha Reddy v. District Magistrate, Cud-
Kathan Maistry v. Muthuveera	998	dapah	476
Katheesa v. Assema	836	Narasu v. P. S. V. Iyer	300
Kothandaraman v. Collector of Chingleput	415	Narayana Chettiar v. Annamalai Chettiar	914
Kothari and Sons v. V. Krishna Rao	726	Narayanan Chettiar v. Rathinasami Padayachi	421
Koyan v. Rajammal	853	Narayanaswami Gounder v. Perumal	720
Krishnamurthi, In re	259	Narayanaswami Kone v. Narayanaswami Muda-
Krishnamurthy v. Ceded District Auto Transport		liar	682
Co. Ltd.	321	Narayanaswami Naidu v. Balasundaram Naidu	750
Krishnamurthy, M. D. v. Deputy Registrar of		Narayanaswamy v. State of Madras	228
Co-operative Societies, Chepauk, Madras	542	Nataraja Mudaliar v. The Madras State	252
Krishnan Naidu, In re	400	Natarajan, In re	371
Krishnappa Chettiar v. Sivagami Achi	549	Natesa Sastri v. Sundaram Chettiar	622
Krishnaswami v. The Council of the Institute of		Padmanabha Bhatta v. Ramchandra Rao	842
Chartered Accountants of India	79	Panchayat Board v. Inspector of Municipal Coun-
Krishnaswami Mudaliar v. Rahman Baig	173	cils	175
Kumaraswami v. Govindaswami	1001	Pandian, N. H. M., In re	787
Kumaraswami v. Karuppuswami	380	Pandurangan, In re	418
Kumarasami Chetti v. Subramania Iyer	671	Pappikutty v. Sankunni Nayar	910
Kunda Papanna, In re	877	Paramasivam Pillai v. Adilakshmi Ammal	618
Kunhambu Nair v. Vadakka Veetil Ambu	214	Peddarangaswami V. v. The State of Madras	583
Kunni Moideen, In re	519	Penchalamma v. Subbaramiah	559
Lakshama Naidu v. Kannayya Naidu	557	Periasami Gounder v. Vellama Naicker	490
Lakshmi Ammal v. Pichayya Naidu	740	Pethayya Pillai v. Karuppiyah Nadar	708
Lakshmi Ammal v. Thangavel Asari	977	*Ponnalagu Ammal v. The State of Madras	485
Lobo, J. D. v. Marajal Doggu	424	Ponnuswami Gounder v. Rengaswamy	766
Loomchand Sait v. Official Liquidators, Peerdan		Pomalai Ammal v. Subbammal (Minor)	566
Joharmall Bank Ltd.	595	Poongavana Naicker v. Muthurama Naidu	762
Madavi Amma v. Nallammal	924	Poppatlal Shah v. State of Madras	91
Madras Handloom Weavers Provincial Co-opera-		Proprietor, St. Joseph's Automobile and Mechani-
tive Society Ltd., Madras v. Dominion of India	514	cal Works, Tuticorin v. Maria Soosai Pillai	206
Mahalakshmamamma v. Hanumayya	916	Public Prosecutor v. A. K. Gopalan	66
Mahomed Abdul Rahman v. Tajunnissa Begum	420	— v. Annamalai Chettiar	862
Mahomed Hussain Sahib v. Mohammad Rowther	620	— v. Audinarayana Chetty	481
Mahomed Ibrahim and Co. v. Commissioner of		— v. Ayyappan Pillai	887
Excess Profits Tax	221	— v. Dada Haji Ebrahim Helari	241
Mallikharjuna Rao v. Tripura Sundari	975	— v. Kandaswami Mudali	855
Management of Rajamani Transport Ltd. v.		— v. Paramasivam	917
Workers employed in the Rajamani Trans-		— v. Pattu Narasimhulu	697
ports Ltd.	342	— v. Sadagopan	785
Mannarghat Union Motor Services Ltd. v.		— v. Ustepalle Swami Chetty	196
Regional Transport Authority	59	— v. Veerabhadrapa	204
		— v. Venkatasubbiah	703
		— v. Venkateswarulu	178

Punithavalli Ammal v. Chidambara Mudaliar	165	Sri Gajalakshmi Ginning Factory Ltd., Palladam v. Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras	343
Punnamma v. Venkata Subba Rao	456	Sri Hari Rao v. Venkaiah	661
Pushpam v. State of Madras	392	Srinivas, V. v. Director of Controlled Commodities, Madras	775
Puthanpurayil Ussain v. Kunhiraman	419	Srinivasa Ayyangar v. The State of Madras	190
Puttayya v. Varanashi Subraya	988	Srinivasan v. Bhakthavatsulu	909
Radhakrishna Ayyar v. Subramania Iyer	370	Sriramulu v. Jambulingam	603
Raghavalu, In re	243	S. R. No. 8238 of 1953, In the matter of	974
Raghavendra Rao v. Venkammal	855	State v. P. K. Swamy	451
Raghaviah, In re	780	State of Madras v. A. M. N. A. Abdul Kadar Tharaganar Firm	905
Rahimansa Rowther v. Madras Islamia Educational Institution, Vallam	366	— v. North Madras Firewood Trading Co.	591
Rajahmundry Electric Supply Corporation Ltd. v. The State of Madras	475	— v. V. Srinivasa Aiyangar	743
Rajanmannar, In re (FB)	746	— v. Subbaraju	235
Raja of Vizianagaram, In re	416	Subbaiah Maistry v. Corporation of Madras	532
Ramachandra Gupta v. Pandurangam Chetty	955	Subbiah Nadar v. The Commissioner of Income-tax and Excess Profits Tax	632
Ramakkammal v. Subbarathnam Iyer	13	Subba Rao v. Satyanarayanamurthy	948
Ramakrishna Raju v. Someswara Rao	560	Subba Rao v. Venkata Satyanarayana	755
Ramakrishnayya v. Atchutha Ramayya	146	Subbarayulu Setti v. Venkataramanamma	540
Ramalingamma v. Venkatasubbayya	912	Subrahmanya Ayyar v. Govindasami Moopnar	826
Ramamma v. Lakshminarasimham	676	Subramania Chettiar v. State of Madras	943
Ramamoorthi, In re	94	Subramaniam, In re	422
Raman, A. C. v. Kunhi Bara Haji	996	Subramania Mudaliar, In the matter of	939
Raman and Co. v. State of Madras	84	Subramanian v. Kalyanarama Iyer	22
Ramana Reddy, In re	74	Subramanyam Chettiar v. Isaki Ammal	12
Ramanath, In re	953	Sundara Nadar, In re	142
Ramswami Reddiar, In re	138	Suryanarayana v. Venkataramana Rao (FB)	458
Ramaswami Udayar v. Raju Udayar	333	Suryanarayana murthi v. Rama Rao	701
Ramaswamy Chettiar v. Vallabha Anandar	833	Suryaprakasa Rao v. Venkatraju	830
Ramayya v. Venkatachellamma	834	Surya Rao Bahadur Varu v. The Board of Revenue (Settlement of Estates) Madras	472
Ramiah Pillai v. Adikesavalu	869	Syed Mohamed and Co. v. The State of Madras	105
Ranganayakalu Chetty v. Gopala Chetty	439	Syed Sulaiman Sahib v. Kader Ibrahim Meeral Bivi	161
Rangaraju Naidu v. D. S. Kamesan	698	*Syed Unnisa v. Rahimuthunissa	445
Rangaswami v. Industrial Tribunal, Fort St. George, Madras	447	Thirugnanasambandham Pillai v. Ramachandram Pillai	744
Rangaswami v. Janakiammal	876	*Thirumaleshwara Bhatta v. Kashmutt Ganapayya	132
Rangaswami Gounder v. Marappa Gounder	230	Thirunageswaram Janopakara Saswatha Nidhi, Ltd. v. P. K. Doraiswami	610
Ratnam Pillai v. Ganapathi Subramaniya	238	Thomas, In re	21
Ratna Mudaliar, In re	926	Tirupathi Mudali v. Lakshmana Mudali	545
Ratna Sabhapathi Rao v. The State of Madras	510	Umanatha Rao, In re	226
Royal Calcutta Turf Club v. Raman Menon	841	Vadakkethill Vikraman v. Krishnan Nair	396
Sadasivayya v. Venkata Narayana	845	Vadugunatha Pillai v. Srinivasa Raghava Aiyangar	592
Sahaba Reddy v. Venkata Reddy	832	Vakkan, V. O. v. Government of the Province of Madras	86
Sainambu, In re	564	Varada Pillai v. Sriramalu Reddiar	894
Sambandam v. General Manager, South Indian Railway, Tiruchirapalli	54	Varadarajan v. Venkatapathi Reddy	587
Sampoornam v. Sundaresan	78	Vasudeva v. Mani Naicka	683
Sanjeevi Naidu v. Chittibabu Mudaliar	473	Veerabhadrudu, In re	1006
Sankaranarayana, In re	376	Veeraju v. Narayanamma (FB)	159
Sankaran Nair v. Doraiswamy Chettiar	478	*Veeranna v. Venkanna (FB)	878
Sanyasappa v. Appalaswami	704	Veerappa Goundan, In re	1003
*Sarma K. V. V., In re	269	Veer Chettiar v. Karion Chettiar	240
Sathiraju v. Venkata Rao	873	Veerni Soorayya v. Veerni Mallayya	164
Satyanarayana, In re	534	Vellayappa Chettiar v. Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras	374
Satyanarayana v. Butchayya	604	Velu Pillai v. Sundararajulu Naidu	205
Satyanarayanamurthy, In re	137	Venkatachalam v. Saramma	508
Seenai Naicker v. State	999	Venkatachala Naicken v. The Panchayat Board, Ethapur	388
Seethamma v. Annapurnamma	544	Venkatachallam v. Palayam	594
Selva v. C. L. Aravamudha Iyengar	969	Venkata Challa v. Cheekati	571
Selvam Mudaliar v. Raju Mudaliar	816	Venkata Gopala Rao v. Kantamma	369
Seshagiri Sarma v. State of Madras	1005	Venkatakrishna v. Govindaraja	854
Seshamma v. Mandana Rattayya	454	Venkatanarasayya v. The State of Madras	60
Seshireddi v. Venkata Subbayya	840	Venkatanarayana Iyer v. State of Madras	888
Sethuraja Gounder v. Board of Revenue	972	Venkataperumal v. Rathnasabhapathi	821
Shaik Masthan Sahib v. Balarami Reddi	958	Venkatappa Reddi v. Gopavarapu Brahmayya	1000
Shanmugasundaram Mudaliar v. Chidambaram Pillai	433	Venkatara v. Hussain Shah	320
Sidda Setty v. Muniamma	712	Vekataraju v. The State of Madras	593
Siddi Subba Rao v. Pukhraj Kocher Ginning and Pressing Factory Firm carrying on business at Chanda, Central Provinces	389	Venkataramaiah v. Audinarayanaiah	929
Singareni Collieries Co., Ltd. v. Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras	408
Sitaramayya, In re	61
Somasundaram v. The State of Madras	246
South India Bank Ltd. v. Pichuthayappan	326
Sreenivasan v. Rangachari	815

Venkataramanayya v. J. M. Lobo	506	Venkateswarlu v. Challaiya	551
Venkataramayya v. Venkataramappa	723	Venkatramanna v. Gopala Rao Garu	976
Venkata Reddayya v. Kondala Rao	1007	Vinayaka Mudaliar v. Pottiamma	432
Venkata Reddi v. Ramabrahmam	417	Vincent v. Commissioner of Income-tax Madras	336
Venkata Reddy v. The State	242	Visakapatnam Co-operative Motor Transport, Ltd. v. Bangaruraju	709
Venkatasubbayya v. Mallappa	636	Viswanadha Sastri v. Venkatakrishna Rao	189
Venkata Subbayya v. Venkanna	213	Viswananathan B. N. v. Assistant Registrar of Joint Stock Companies, Madras	558
Venkataswami v. Venkayya	529	Viswanathan v. Tiffin's Baryt Asbestos and Paints, Ltd.	520
Venkataswami Aiya, In re	941	Woodman, B. A. v. Mrs. Regina Rajan	378
Venkataswamy Chetty v. V. Ganapathia Pillai	465	Zackariah Sahib v. Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras	85
Venkataswamy Naidu v. Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras	223
Venkateswara v. Perumal Reddi	892
Venkateswara Rao v. Mohammad Mohibulla	705

SUBJECT INDEX

Abolition of Privy Council Jurisdiction Act
(5 of 1949), S. 5—See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 109
(FB) 878a

Arbitration Act (10 of 1940), Ss. 17 and 25
—Binding effect of award—Award against father and sons, in dispute relating to partition of joint family properties—Interest of sons not adverse to that of father who consented to award — Held that the sons were also bound by award 492k
—S. 21—See also International Law (Private) 492c

—Ss. 21 and 23—Jurisdiction of Court to refer — Suit including prayer for reliefs in respect of properties in foreign country does not lie nor reference to arbitration can be made — Question of title and prayer for division not pending adjudication on date of reference — Legality of reference—(Civil P. C. (1908), S. 16) 492a

—S. 21—"Matters outside suit" — Reference of "all matters in dispute and all matters and proceedings connected therewith" is not beyond scope of suit — Connected "matters and proceedings" referred is in nature of final prayer for general relief in plaint 492d —Ss. 21 and 23—Stay of final decree granted in appeal against preliminary decree — Court can refer dispute to arbitration during stay—Waiver of benefit of stay by party entitled occurs by agreement to refer — (Civil P. C. (1908), O. 41, R. 5) 492e —Ss. 21 and 23 — Power of Court — Express conferment of power by statute is essential for Court to refer dispute to arbitration 492f —Ss. 21 and 23 — "At any time before judgment is pronounced"—"Judgment" means final, not interlocutory, judgment—Power to refer after preliminary decree exists—Pending appeal has no effect on power to refer — (Civil P. C. (1908), O. 20, R. 18) 492g

—S. 23

See (1) ibid, S. 21 492a, e, f, g

(2) International Law (Private) 492c

—S. 25—See ibid, S. 17 492k

Arbitration Act (contd.)

—S. 30—Invalid portion severable from valid part 492b

—S. 30—"Is otherwise invalid"—Preliminary decree in partition suit — Defendant not made liable for general accounting but only for money traced into his hands — Reference to arbitration made subsequent to decree — Final award directing defendant to pay on account of mismanagement — Interim award signed by defendant — Final award could not be challenged 492h

—Ss. 30 and 31—Questions relating to award — Finding of arbitrator not controverted by evidence on behalf of party challenging — Finding must be taken to be correct 492i

—S. 30 — Misconduct — Dispute relating to partition of joint family property — Incidental direction—No misconduct 492j

—Ss. 30 and 37 (1)—Application to set aside award is not proceedings before arbitrator within meaning of S. 37 (1)—S. 5, Limitation Act does not apply — (Limitation Act (1908), S. 5 and Art. 158) 561

—S. 31—See also ibid, S. 30 492i

—Ss. 31, 32 and 33 — Questions relating to award—(Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9) 544

—S. 32—See ibid, S. 31 544

—S. 33—See ibid, S. 31 544

—S. 37 (1)—See ibid, S. 30 561

—S. 39 (1) — See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 115 395

—S. 47 — Arbitration in pending suit without knowledge of Court 834

†—S. 47, Proviso—"Consent" to record award as compromise must be after the award — (Civil P. C. (1908), O. 23, R. 3) : ILR (1946) Mad 39: A I R 1945 Mad 294 : 1945-1 Mad L J 463, OVERRULED (FB) 781

Arms Act (11 of 1878), S. 17—See also Constitution of India, Art. 19 (5) 476c

—S. 17 — Power to issue license for arms carries with it power to refuse to issue license — R. 43 under Act is not ultra vires 476a

Auditor's Certificate Rules (1932), R. 44—See
Chartered Accountants Act (1949), Sch., Cl. (c) 346

Banking Companies Act (10 of 1949), Ss. 45A, 45C—Summary trial 595e
 —S. 45C—See also ibid, S. 45A 595e
 —S. 45C—Summary trial 595f
 —S. 45G—Absence of rules 595d

Bar Council's Act (38 of 1926), S. 9 (1)—See
Industrial Disputes Act (1947), S. 36 (4) 447a
 —S. 14 (1) — See Industrial Disputes Act (1947), S. 36 (4) 447a

Carriage of Goods by Sea Act (26 of 1925) —
 Carriage of goods by sea — Law applicable in India before Act was common law of England as applicable to common carriers and not the provisions of Contract Act relating to bailment—(Contract Act (1872), Ss. 151 and 152) 3b
 —Sch., Art. 1 (c) and Art. VI—Deck Cargo at owner's risk—Art. VI does not apply—Carriage of such cargo is not governed by Contract Act — Such cargo not being "goods" within meaning of Art. 1 (c), carriage of such goods is not governed by Carriage of Goods by Sea Act, 1925, but by English common law, i. e. by the terms of the contract embodied in the bill of lading—Liability of the common carrier in such case is not affected by Ss. 151 and 152, Contract Act—(Contract Act (1872), Ss. 151 and 152) 3c
 —Art. VI—See ibid, Sch., Art. 1 (c) 3c

Carriers' Act (3 of 1865), S. 2 — Carriage of goods in high seas — Act has no application in view of definition of common carrier in S. 2 3a

Cattle Trespass Act (1 of 1871), S. 24 — See
Madras Preservation of Private Forests Act (27 of 1949), S. 5 999

Central Excise Rules (1944), R. 60—See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 60 478
 —R. 174—See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 60 478

Chartered Accountants Act (38 of 1949), Ss. 20 (2) and 21 (3) — Scope—Proper punishment 310d
 —S. 21 — See also Chartered Accountants Regulations, Regn. 11 310a
 †—S. 21 and Sch. Cl. (q) — Chartered Accountant—Duty to Income-tax Department: 152
 —S. 21 (2) — See Constitution of India, Art. 133 (1) (c) 79
 —S. 21 (3)—See ibid, S. 20 (2) 310d
 —S. 22 and Sch. Cl. (V)—Misconduct 310b
 —Sch. Cl. (c) — Contravention — (Auditor's Certificate Rules (1932), R. 44) — (Chartered Accountants Act (1949) — Regulations under — Regn. 38) 346
 —Sch. Cl. (q)—See ibid, S. 21 152
 —Sch. Cl. (V)—See ibid, S. 22 310b

Chartered Accountants Regulation (1949)
 —Regns. 11, 11-A — Proceedings on information — Procedure — (Chartered Accountants Act (1949), S. 21) 310a
 —Regn. 11-A—See ibid, Regn. 11 310a

Chartered Accountants Regulation (contd.)
 —Regns. 38 and 39 — Accountant taking as articled clerk, person engaged in business 310c
 —Regn. 39—See ibid, Regn. 38 310c

Cinematograph Act (37 of 1952), Ss. 2 (c) and 10 — Production of films for exhibition —
 Movies—Nature of 269a
 —S. 10—See ibid, S. 2 (c) 269a

Civil Procedure Code (5 of 1908), Preamble,
 See (1) Debt Laws—Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act (4 of 1938), S. 19 810
 (2) Interpretation of Statutes (FB) 637b, 712b; 729a
 (3) Municipalities—Madras Town Planning Act (17 of 1920), S. 24 605
 —S. 2 (9)—See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 13 261a
 —Ss. 2 (11) and 50 and O. 22, R. 3—Legatees unauthorisedly taking possession—Execution against—(Succession Act (1925), S. 303) 622b
 —S. 9
 See also (1) Arbitration Act (1940), S. 31 544
 (2) Madras Hereditary Village Offices Act (3 of 1895), S. 13 912b
 (3) Municipalities — Madras District Municipalities Act (5 of 1920), S. 354 689a
 —S. 9 — No suit lies where there is no such right as that claimed 583b
 —S. 9, Explanation—Suit for office 701
 †—Ss. 9 and 92—Private trust 750d
 —S. 11
 See also (1) ibid, S. 13 261b
 (2) ibid, O. 21, R. 85 (Mad.) 929
 (3) ibid, O. 41, R. 2 261d
 (4) Debt Laws — Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act (4 of 1938), S. 14 548
 (5) Debt Laws — Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act (4 of 1938), S. 19 188
 (6) Debt Laws — Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act (4 of 1938), S. 19 (2) 914
 (7) Debt Laws — Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act (4 of 1938), S. 28 183
 (8) Divorce Act (1869), S. 10 792b
 (9) Evidence Act (1872), S. 42 750b
 (10) Houses and Rents — Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (25 of 1949), S. 10 208

Civil P. C. (contd.)

- †*—S. 11 — Decree for sale to enforce charge passed in prior suit — Second suit for sale to enforce charge—Bar of—(Transfer of Property Act (1882), Ss. 67 and 100) 32
- S. 11—Decree against limited owner 624c
- S. 11—Suit against Hindu widow 676c
- S. 11—Principle of constructive 'res judicata' —Application to execution proceedings 948b
- S. 11, Expln. IV—"Ought" 933
- S. 13 — See also Civil P. C. (1908), O. 41, R. 2 261d
- S. 13—"Foreign judgment"—Meaning of—(Civil P. C. (1908), S. 2 (9) and O. 20, R. 1) 261a
- Ss. 13 and 11—Matter directly adjudicated —Some of the items left unadjudicated — No res judicata with regard to them 261b
- S. 13, Exceptions—Foreign judgment, when not conclusive—Scope of enquiry—Proof—Necessity of 261c
- S. 16
- See (1) Arbitration Act (1940), S. 21 492a
- (2) International Law (Private) 492c
- S. 20 (c) — Specific articles shown to purchaser at place of contract — Suit for damages—Jurisdiction 389
- S. 24 (4) — See Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (1887), S. 25 582a
- S. 34 (2)—See ibid, O. 34, R. 11 948a
- S. 35—See also ibid, S. 115 12
- S. 35—Defendant succeeding and plaintiff's suit dismissed — However defendant's attitude towards plaintiff not commendable — Held that costs should not follow events 313c
- S. 35—Interference by appellate Court 833a
- S. 35—By whom costs are to be paid 833b
- S. 35-A—Scope and object 583a
- S. 38—Power to go behind decree 62c
- S. 38 — Executing Court's power to go behind decree 1007
- S. 39 (1) and O. 21, Rr. 6 and 10—Execution application presented to transferee Court before transfer—Validity of presentation 71b
- Ss. 39 (1) and 48 (1) and O. 21, Rr. 6 and 10 — Decree passed by c Court — According to terms of decree decree-holder to be paid certain money on 13.7.1934—Application filed on 22.6.1946 for transmission of decree to N Court for execution—Order for transmission passed on 13.7.1946 — On 12.7.1946 decree-holder presenting application for execution to N Court — On same day N Court returning application for production of copy of decree — Execution application represented on 19.7.1946—Order of transmission and order for return held must be presumed to have been made at first moment of day — Application held must have been taken back after order for return was passed — Presentation of application,

Civil P. C. (contd.)

- on 12.6.1946 held was void and application being in time decree was not barred under S. 48 71c
- S. 47
- See also (1) ibid, S. 144 930
- (2) ibid, O. 21, R. 72 822a
- (3) Debt Laws — Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act (4 of 1938), S. 19 188
- S. 47 and O. 21, R. 58 — "Plaintiff whose suit is dismissed and. . . is dismissed"—Explanation 916a
- S. 47—Unnecessary party 916b
- S. 48—Execution application—Returned for amendment of decree — Application for amendment of decree made in time — Amendment of decree made after 12 years — Execution not barred 205
- S. 48 (1)—See ibid, S. 39 (1) 71c
- S. 50—See also ibid, S. 2 (11) 622b
- S. 50—Execution against property in hands of legatees 622a
- S. 60—Central Excise Rules (1944), Rr. 60 and 174 478
- S. 64—See T. P. Act (1882), S. 111 (f): 399
- S. 80—Essentials of notice — Notice against Railway administration 838a
- S. 92—See also ibid, S. 9 750d
- S. 92—Village fund—Suit for accounts: 220
- S. 92—Advocate-General's sanction 744
- S. 92—Further sanction of Advocate-General 816b
- S. 92—Parties to a suit under S. 92 906
- S. 96
- See (1) Letters Patent (Madras) Cl. 15 485
- (2) Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (1887), S. 25 582a
- Ss. 100 and 101—Negligence — Question of fact 726a
- S. 100—Concurrent finding of fact 854b
- S. 100 — Concurrent findings of fact — (Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 53A) 925a
- S. 104—See Letters Patent (Madras) Cl. 15 485
- S. 109 — See also Constitution of India, Art. 133 (1) (FB) 878b
- *—Ss. 109, 110 — Constitution of India, Arts. 133 (1), 135 — Doctrine of vested right of appeal—Extent of—Federal Court (Enlargement of Jurisdiction) Act (1947), S. 3 — (Abolition of Privy Council Jurisdiction Act (1949), S. 5) (FB) 878a
- S. 109 (c)
- See (1) Constitution of India, Art. 133 (1) (c) 79
- (2) Constitution of India, Art. 134 (1) (c) 66b
- S. 110
- See (1) ibid, S. 109 (FB) 878a
- (2) Constitution of India, Art. 133 (1) (FB) 878b

Civil P. C. (contd.)

—S. 115 — See also Houses and Rents — Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (25 of 1949, as amended by Act 8 of 1951), S. 12 (b) 924a

—Ss. 115 and 35 and O. 6, R. 17 — Conditional order for amendment on payment of costs to opposite party — Order of amendment itself susceptible to revision—High Court can interfere with the order for payment of costs and increase the amount 12

† —S. 115—Appeal—(Arbitration Act (1940), S. 39 (1))—(Madras Letters Patent, Cl. 15): 395

—S. 115—Case decided — Order impounding document under S. 33, Stamp Act — (Stamp Act (1899), S. 33) 698a

—S. 115— Question relating to court-fee and jurisdiction 754a

—S. 115, O. 21, R. 84 — Acceptance or rejection of highest bid by Court is a case decided: 762

—S. 141 and O. 47, R. 1—Case under Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act — Order in revision by High Court—Review under O. 47, R. 1 — (Houses and Rents — Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (25 of 1949), S. 12B) 236b

—S. 141, O. 43, R. 1 (a) — Original petitions 417a

—Ss. 144, 151, 47, O. 21, R. 93—Application for mesne profits by way of restitution against auction purchaser — (Debt Laws—Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act (4 of 1938), Ss. 23, 24): 930

—S. 151

See also (1) ibid, S. 144 930

(2) ibid, O. 7, R. 10 897

(3) Provincial Insolvency Act (1920), S. 16 993c

—S. 151 and O. 47, R. 1—Power to review is not inherent power — Case under Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act — Order in revision by High Court—No review under inherent powers—(Houses and Rents — Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (25 of 1949), S. 12 (B) ) 236a

—S. 151—No power overriding express provisions of law 420

—S. 151, O. 41, R. 27—Invoking of S. 151 955a

—S. 151 and O. 23 R. 3—Order setting aside compromise decree under S. 151 696

—O. 1, R. 8 — See also Hindu Law — Joint family 822b

—O. 1, R. 8 and O. 21, R. 63 — Suit to set aside fraudulent transfers — (T. P. Act (1882), S. 53) 619

—O. 1, R. 10—Suit for rent 854a

—O. 1, R. 10 (2)—Proper party—Rule should be construed liberally 618

—O. 3, R. 4 — Power of advocate to make admission—(Oaths Act (1873), S. 8) 708c

—O. 5, R. 17 — See ibid, O. 9, R. 13, Proviso (Mad) 528

Civil P. C. (contd.)

—O. 6, R. 7 and O. 8, R. 9—Additional written statement — Plea put forward unsubstantial and belated—Dismissal of application for filing statement held rightly ordered 492l

—O. 6, R. 17—See also ibid, S. 115 12

—O. 6, R. 17— Wife's suit for separate maintenance — Court can take into account events happening during pendency of suit and even at stage of first and second appeal 402a

—O. 6, R. 17—Scope 958c

—O. 7, R. 5—See Hindu Law — Joint family 822b

—O. 7, R. 10 — See also Suits Valuation Act (1877), S. 11, Proviso (b) 871b

—O. 7, R. 10, O. 49, R. 3 (1) and S. 151 — Letters Patent (Madras), Cl. 1 — Constitution of India, Art. 215— Plaintiff filed on Original Side— Power to return for representation — Practice of High Court—(Practice— High Court (Madras) ) : 28 Mad 216, AIR 1927 Mad 846 and C. S. No. 420 of 1921 (Mad), Dissented from 897

—O. 8, R. 9—See ibid, O. 6, R. 7 492l

—O. 8A (Mad.)—Applicability 927b

—O. 8A, R. 8 (Mad) — Party already on record 927a

—O. 9, R. 13

See also (1) Limitation Act (1908), Art. 152 360

(2) Madras Hindu Bigamy Prevention and Divorce Act (6 of 1949), S. 5 1003

—O. 9, R. 13—"Upon such terms as to costs" 464

—O. 9, R. 13, Proviso (Mad) and O. 5, R. 17 —Applicability 528

—O. 11, R. 12 — See Evidence Act (1872), S. 123 228

—O. 11, R. 13 — See Evidence Act (1872), S. 123 228

—O. 19, R. 1—See Houses and Rents—Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (25 of 1949, as amended by Act 8 of 1951), S. 9 924b

—O. 20, R. 1—See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 13 261a

—O. 20, R. 12 — See also Houses and Rents Madras Buildings Lease and Rent Control Act (15 of 1946), S. 2 (4) 473

—O. 20, R. 12 and 18 — Scope and applicability 723b

—O. 20, R. 13 — See Court-fees Act (1870), Sch. 2, Art. 17B 576

—O. 20, R. 18

See (1) ibid, O. 20, R. 12 723b

(2) Arbitration Act (1940), S. 21 492g

—O. 21, R. 6—See ibid, S. 39 (1) 71 b; c

—O. 21, R. 10—See ibid, S. 39 (1) 71 b; c

—O. 21, R. 26 — Stay of execution after application to appellate Court is dismissed— (Practice) 876b

Civil P. C. (contd.)

- O. 21, R. 58—See ibid, S. 47 916a
- O. 21, R. 63—See ibid, O. 1, R. 8 619
- O. 21, R. 69—Sale from day to day beyond date specified in sale warrant—Validity—Ratification—(Evidence Act (1872), S. 114)—(Contract Act (1872), S. 196) 860
- O. 21, Rr. 72 and 73, O. 40, R. 1 and S. 47—Purchase of property by decree-holder—Receiver without sanction of Court—Purchase is not nullity but voidable at instance of judgment-debtors in execution proceedings and not by suit—(Trusts Act (1882), S. 62) 822a
- O. 21, R. 73
- See (1) ibid, O. 21, R. 72 822a
- (2) Tenancy Laws—Madras Estates Land Act (1 of 1908), S. 107 490c
- O. 21, R. 84—See ibid, S. 115 762
- O. 21, R. 85 (Mad.) and S. 11—Non-deposit of stamp within time—Sale confirmed on compromise—Effect 929
- O. 21, Rr. 89, 90—Judgment-debtor obtaining benefit of half rent and depositing amount in Court—Amount withdrawn by decree-holder—Execution for entire amount in spite of order of Court—Decree-holder knowing what was due—Property sold in execution and purchased by decree-holder himself—Sale set aside 189
- O. 21, R. 90—See also ibid, O. 21, R. 89 189
- O. 21, Rr. 90 and 92—Restoration of petition under R. 90 dismissed for default 587
- O. 21, Rr. 90, 92—Scope—Maintainability of suit questioning validity of sale 683
- O. 21, Rr. 90, 92 and O. 22, R. 2—Omission to implead legal representative of deceased judgment-debtor and non-representation of minor 988a
- O. 21, R. 91—Sale under Madras Estates Land Act—(Tenancy Laws—Madras Estates Land Act (1 of 1908), Ss. 131 and 192 (1)) 671b
- O. 21, R. 92—See also ibid, O. 21, R. 90 587; 683; 988a
- O. 21, R. 92—Necessary parties and notice to them 988b
- O. 21, R. 93—See ibid, S. 144 930
- O. 21, R. 94—What passes at a court sale 815b
- O. 22, Rr. 1 and 10—Right to sue in personal actions—Widow's claim to maintenance—Death of widow pending suit—Survival of claim to legal representative—(T. P. Act (1882), S. 6 (dd))—(Hindu law—Widow—Maintenance) 202
- O. 22, R. 2—See ibid, O. 21, R. 90 988a
- O. 22, R. 3—See also ibid, S. 2 (11) 622b
- O. 22, R. 3—Legal representative—Representative suit 869
- O. 22, R. 10—See ibid, O. 22, R. 1 202
- O. 23, R. 1—Suit dismissed with permission to bring fresh suit on request of defendant—Fresh suit—Defendant is estopped from contend-

Civil P. C. (contd.)

- ing that previous order was illegal—Evidence Act (1872), S. 115 391b
- O. 23, R. 3
- See also (1) ibid, S. 151 696
- (2) Arbitration Act (1940), S. 47—Proviso (FB) 781
- O. 23, R. 3—Agreement to take oath—Agreement is not adjustment or compromise—(Oaths Act (1873), S. 11) 396b
- O. 23, R. 3 and O. 32, R. 7—Submission to award—Suit against father, major son and minor sons—Reference to arbitration ordered by Court—Award pronounced consented to by major son and father each on his own behalf and by latter on behalf of minor sons as guardian—Sanction under O. 32, R. 7 not obtained—Award can be treated as compromise and decree passed against major son and father only, but not against minors 492p
- O. 26, R. 9—Object of local investigation 717a
- O. 26, Rr. 9 and 18—Presence of parties 717b
- O. 26, R. 10—Objections to commissioner's report 717c
- O. 26, R. 18—See ibid, O. 26, R. 9 717b
- O. 32, R. 3—Negligence of guardian 369a
- O. 32, R. 7—See ibid, O. 23, R. 3 492p
- O. 33, R. 10—Priority of charge 692a
- O. 33, R. 10 (before introduction of R. 14 in 1942)—Sale subject to encumbrances 692b
- O. 34, R. 1—Mortgagor, non-joinder of 821a
- O. 34, R. 4—See T. P. Act (1882 as amended in 1929), S. 58 (g) 13
- O. 34, R. 11, S. 34 (2)—Awarding subsequent interest in mortgage decrees—(Deed—Construction—Decree) 948a
- O. 34, R. 15—Maintenance decree charging certain properties—Execution—Effect of 'mala fide' collusion—(Decree—Execution—Maintenance—Decree)—(Hindu Law—Maintenance—Decree) 876a
- †—O. 37, R. 2—Power to condone delay—(Limitation Act (1908), Art. 159)—A. I. R. 1949 Mad. 742, Dissented from 767
- O. 37, R. 3—See Limitation Act (1908), Art. 159 909
- O. 40, R. 1—See ibid, O. 21, R. 72 822a
- O. 41, R. 2—New plea—Plea of fraud—(Civil P. C. (1908), Ss. 11 and 13) 261d
- O. 41, R. 5—See Arbitration Act (1940), S. 21 492a
- O. 41, R. 23—Suit dismissed on one of issues—Dismissal set aside by second appellate Court and suit remanded to lower appellate court for disposal according to law on other questions involved in appeal—Lower appellate Court held could not in its turn remand case to trial Court 958b

Civil P. C. (contd.)

- O. 41, R. 25—See also ibid, S. 151 955a
 —O. 41, R. 27 — Remand for fresh disposal
 —Remand with direction to admit fresh evidence 955b
 —O. 41, R. 27 — Remand for fresh disposal after admitting further evidence in appeal 955c
 —O. 41, R. 33 — Duty of appellate Court to apply law as it stands on date of hearing appeal —Applicability to pending case of Muslim Personal Law (Shariat) Application Act (26 of 1937), S. 2 (as amended by Mad. Act 18 of 1949) 445
 —O. 41, R. 33—Applicability and scope: 566d
 —O. 43, R. 1 — See Madras Hindu Bigamy Prevention and Divorce Act (6 of 1949), S. 5 1003
 —O. 43, R. 1 (a)—See S. 141 417a
 —O. 45, R. 13 — Stay of execution pending appeal — Order passed by Government under S. 4 (1), Madras Electricity Supply Undertakings (Acquisition) Act (43 of 1949), directing electric company to vest company in Government—Dismissal of application for writ of Certiorari—Leave to appeal granted—Government seeking to acquire company in enforcement of its own order cannot be restrained by an injunction 475b
 —O. 45, R. 13 (2) (d)—Powers of High Court pending appeal to Supreme Court 475a
 —O. 47, R. 1
     See also (1) ibid, S. 141 236b
               (2) ibid, S. 151 236a
 † —O. 47, R. 1—Application under Art. 226 of the Constitution—Review—Constitution of India, Art. 226 39a
 —O. 47, R. 1—"Error apparent on the face of the record" 39b
 —O. 47, R. 1 — Error apparent on face of record 419
 —O. 47, R. 8—Scope of enquiry not restricted by order granting review — Court can reopen entire case 826
 —O. 49, R. 3 (1)—See ibid, O. 7, R. 10 897
Certiorari — See under Constitution of India, Art. 226
Common Carriers—Carriage by sea — Carriage of deck cargo at owner's risk—Contract embodied in Bill of Lading exonerating carrier, or its agents and servants from liability for loss due to negligence or otherwise—Short delivery—Carrier held not liable for loss 3d
Companies Act (7 of 1913), S. 2, Cl. 9 (a)—See Income-tax Act, S. 16 209
 —S. 30—Tort — Wrong done, confined to one share-holder of company—Only such share-holder can complain — Other share-holders on behalf of himself and others, not being the individuals to whom wrong is done, cannot maintain an action for that wrong 520h —Ss. 76 and 83B — No validly appointed directors at time of annual meeting — Members can elect one at such meeting 520b

Companies Act (contd.)

- Ss. 76 and 131 — Failure to hold general meeting if good defence for offence under S. 131 558a
 —Ss. 76 and 133—Distinct offences — (Penal Code (1860), S. 71) 558b
 —S. 76 (3)—Powers of Court 467e
 —S. 79—Proxy—Relationship between proxy and share-holder is that of agent and principal—Contract Act (1872), S. 182 520f
 —S. 79—Adjournment—Meeting is to be conducted in accordance with Articles of Association —Articles giving authority to adjourn — Chairman can adjourn meeting with consent—Shareholder pressing for adjournment — He cannot afterwards complain about the adjournment—(Evidence Act (1872), S. 115) 520i
 —S. 79 (1)—According to an Article of Association member whose name had not been in the register for continuous period of two months immediately preceding the date of meeting, not entitled to vote or to be reckoned in a quorum — Article held illegal being contrary to S. 79 (1) (e) 520d
 —S. 79 (2) (g), Sch. I, Table A, Regns. 65, 66 — Right to vote by proxy — It is not common law right—It is determined by Articles of Association which is a contract between shareholder and company 520e
 —S. 79 (2) (g), Sch. I, Table A, Regn. 65 — Proxy can be validly given only to person who is a member of company, in the absence of a provision to the contrary in the Articles 520g
 —S. 83B—See also ibid, S. 76 520b
 —S. 83B — Power to co-opt directors — Extinguishment of 467a
 —S. 83B—Power to co-opt directors — Exercise of 467c
 —S. 83B—Mala fide co-option 467d
 —S. 83B—Company can delegate to Board of Directors its power to appoint directors 520a
 —S. 86 I—Retirement of directors 467b
 —S. 87B—See also ibid, S. 87C 197b
 —S. 87C — Office allowance is distinct from remuneration 197a —Ss. 87C and 87B (f)—Contract for specified period — Winding up before expiry of contract period—Claim for office allowance and damages 197b
 —S. 131—See ibid, S. 76 558a
 —S. 133—See ibid, S. 76 558b
 —Ss. 177, 282A—Form of complaint 595b
 —S. 179—Sanction of Court 595a
 —S. 229—Set off—(Provincial Insolvency Act (1920), S. 46) 610
 —S. 248 (2)—Regulations under—Regulation 14 (a) and (b)—Offence under Act — Complaint —Who can make 196
 —S. 282A
     See also (1) ibid, S. 177 595b
               (2) Constitution of India, Art. 20 (2) 595c

Companies Act (contd.)

- S. 282A—Fraudulent intention 595g
- Sch. I, Table A, Regns. 65, 66—See ibid, S. 79 (2) (g) 520e, g
- Sch. I, Table A, Regn. 78—Article of Company in words of Regn. 78—Held on facts that one of the two directors should have retired at the general meeting 520c

Constitution of India (1950), Art. 13

- See (1) ibid, Art. 372 729b
- (2) Divorce Act (1869), S. 10 792f
- (3) Interpretation of Statutes 729a
- Art. 13 (1) — See Fugitive Offenders Act (1881), S. 14 729d
- Art. 14
  - See also (1) ibid, Art. 372 729b
  - (2) Divorce Act (1869), S. 10 792f
  - (3) Fugitive Offenders Act (1881), S. 14 729d
  - (4) Houses and Rents — Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control Act (25 of 1949), S. 13 351c
  - (5) Income-tax Act (1922), S. 5 (8) 716a
  - (6) Income-tax Act (1922), S. 23 716b
  - (7) Industrial Disputes Act (1947), S. 7 447b
  - (8) Industrial Disputes Act (1947), S. 36 (4) 447c
  - (9) Madras Restriction of Habitual Offenders Act (6 of 1948), S. 2 (4) 664b
  - (10) Madras Shops and Establishments Act (36 of 1947), S. 41 326
  - (11) Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 47 279i
  - (12) Sales Tax — Madras General Sales Tax Act (9 of 1939), Preamble 105e
  - (13) Sales Tax — Madras Turnover and Assessment Rules (1939), R. 16 (2) 105i
- Arts. 14, 15 (1) and 16 — Concession in school fees to converts can be restricted to converts from one generation only—(Madras Education Rules, Rule 92, Appendix 17 (A)) 21a
- Art. 14—Article is not limited to citizens of India—(Obiter) 729c
- Art. 15 — See Divorce Act (1869), S. 10 792f
- Art. 15 (1)—See ibid, Art. 14 21a
- Art. 16—See ibid, Art. 14 21a
- Art. 19 — See also Houses and Rents — Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent) Control Act (25 of 1949), S. 13 351c
- Art. 19 — Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 47
- Validity—Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 47 279j

Constitution of India (contd.)

- Art. 19 — Motor Vehicles Act (1939), Ss. 48 (a), (b) are valid — Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 48 279k
- Art. 19—Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 64A is valid — Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 64A 279l
- Art. 19 (1) (d)—See Madras Restriction of Habitual Offenders Act (6 of 1948), S. 5 664c
- Art. 19 (1) (f)—See also Houses and Rents — Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (25 of 1949), S. 3 (8) 257b
- Art. 19 (1) (f) (g) and (6)—Explosives Act (1884) is not ultra vires 142
- †—Arts. 19 (1) (f) and 31 (2) and Sch. 7, List II, Item 36 — Public purpose—Requisition for housing Government servant — Possession taken under S. 3 (3) of Madras Act 25 of 1949—Exclusion of Art. 19 by Art. 31 — (Houses and Rents — Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent) Control Act (25 of 1949) (as amended by Mad. Act 8 of 1951), S. 3 (3)) 252b
- Art. 19 (1) (f)—“Property” includes “gun” —What constitutes “property” explained 476b
- Art. 19 (1) (g).
  - See also (1) Industrial Disputes — Industrial Disputes Act (1947) 102a
  - (2) Industrial Disputes Act (1947), S. 36 (4) 447a
- †—Art. 19 (1) (g) — Award under Industrial Disputes Act compelling continuance of business — Validity — Industrial Disputes Act (1947), S. 10 98a
- Art. 19 (1) (g), (6) — Motor Vehicles Act (1936) — Validity 279a
- Art. 19 (1) (g), (6) — Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 42 is valid — Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 42 279b
- Art. 19 (1) (g), (6) — Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 43A is valid — Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 43A 279c
- Art. 19 (5) — See also Madras Restriction of Habitual Offenders Act (6 of 1948), S. 5: 664c
- Art. 19 (5) — Restrictions created by R. 43, Arms Act Rules, on fundamental right to hold a gun are reasonable and in interest of public — Refusal to grant license should not be arbitrary — Discretion should be judicial — Order refusing license held arbitrary—(Arms Act (1878), S. 17 — Rules under, R. 43) 476c
- Art. 19 (5)—‘Reasonable’ meaning of: 664d
- Art. 19 (6)
  - See also (1) Industrial Disputes—Industrial Disputes Act (1947), Preamble 102a
  - (2) Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 47 279d; e; f; g; h
- Art. 19 (6) — Power of Court to decide reasonableness of legislation 279m
- Art. 20 — See also Houses and Rents — Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent) Control Act (25 of 1949), S. 3 (8) 257d

Constitution of India (contd.)

- Arts. 20 and 265 — Conviction under S. 15 (b), Madras General Sales Tax Act—(Sales Tax—Madras General Sales Tax Act (9 of 1939), S. 15 (b)) 337b
- Art. 20 (2) — See also Madras Restriction of Habitual Offenders Act (6 of 1948) 664e
- Art. 20 (2) — Double punishment — (Companies Act (1913), S. 282A) — (Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 403) 595c
- Art. 26 — Religious denomination — Gowd Saraswath Brahmin community—Inclusion of Shri Venkataramana Temple Mulki in list under S. 38, Madras Act 19 of 1951 — Petition under Art. 26 — (Madras Hindu Religious and Charitable Endowments Act (19 of 1951), S. 38) 149
- Art. 31 — See Tenancy Laws — Madras Estates Land (Reduction of Rent) Second Amendment Act (35 of 1951), S. 4 260b
- Art. 31 (2)
     See (1) ibid, Art. 19 (1) (f) 252b
     (2) Houses and Rents — Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent) Control Act (25 of 1949), S. 3 (8) 257b;c
- Art. 37 — See ibid, Art. 46 21b
- Arts. 46, 37 — Directive principles are not enforceable by Courts of law 21b
- Arts. 53, 73, 154 and 162 — Executive and judiciary — Conflict — Duty of executive 41b
- Art. 73 — See ibid, Art. 53 41b
- Art. 132 — See ibid, Art. 226 66f
- Art. 133 — Suit under Madras High Court Original Side Rules, O. 45 Rule 4 dismissed — Appeal dismissed for default of appearance — Application to restore also dismissed—Dismissal order is neither judgment, decree nor final order 38
- Art. 133 (1) — “Final order” — Order refusing to excuse delay under S. 5, Limitation Act 727a
- Art. 133 (1) — “Judgment” means final judgment 727b
- Art. 133 (1) — Leave subject to condition 743
- * — Arts. 133 (1), 135 — Suit instituted before Constitution — Judgment after commencement of Constitution — Second appeal — Applicability of Arts. 133 (1) and 135 — (Civil P. C. (1908), Ss. 109, 110) (FB) 878b
- Art. 133 (1) (a) — Civil P. C. (1908), S. 110 (1) — Value of subject-matter of dispute 968
- Art. 133 (1) (c) — Orders under S. 21 (2), Chartered Accountants Act, are not open to appeal to Supreme Court—“Civil Proceedings”—Applicability of S. 109 (c), Civil P. C. — (Chartered Accountants Act (1949), S. 21 (2))—(Civil P. C. (1908), S. 109 (c)) 79
- Art. 134 (1) (c) — See also ibid, Art. 226 66f

Constitution of India (contd.)

- Arts. 134 (1) (c), 136—Grant of Certificate by High Court — Considerations involved not same as those under Art. 136 66a
- Art. 134 (1) (c)—Certificate of fitness under — Considerations involved are same as those under S. 109 (c), Civil P. C.—(Civil P. C. (1908), S. 109 (c)) 66b
- Art. 134 (1) (c) — Certificate of fitness under — Propriety of grant or refusal of an adjournment — Not a question of sufficient importance for granting certificate under the Article 66d
- Art. 134 (1) (c)—Certificate of fitness under — Order of release on application for writ of habeas corpus — Detenu rearrested within five minutes of release—Second application for same writ also allowed — Government applying for leave to appeal against both orders — Held, no leave could be granted 66e
- Art. 134 (1) (c)—Jurisdiction under—Nature of 66g
- Art. 135 — See also ibid, Art. 133 (1) (FB) 878b
- Art. 135 — “Matters in relation to which jurisdiction and power were exercisable by Federal Court” — Meaning (FB) 878c
- Art. 136 — See ibid, Art. 134 (1) (c) 66a
- Art. 154 — See ibid, Art. 53 41b
- Art. 162 — See ibid, Art. 53 41b
- Art. 164—Quaere—Act of Governor calling a person to form ministry — It is extremely doubtful whether action can be subject matter of any petition in a Court of law 94b
- Arts. 164 and 171 — Rights of Legislator 94c
- Art. 171—See ibid, Art. 164 94c
- Art. 226
     See also (1) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 47, R. 1 39a
     (2) Houses and Rents — Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent) Control Act (35 of 1949), S. 13 351b
     (3) Industrial Disputes 30
     (4) Industrial Disputes—Industrial Disputes Act (1947) 102b
     (5) Municipalities — Madras District Municipalities Act (5 of 1920), S. 43 392b; 510b
     (6) Municipalities — Madras District Municipalities Act (5 of 1920), R. 10 969b
     (7) Public Safety—Preventive Detention Act (1950), S. 3 41a
     (8) Specific Relief Act (1877), S. 45 556
     (9) Tenancy Laws—Madras Estates (Abolition and Conversion into Ryotwari) Act (26 of 1948), S. 67 129

Constitution of India (contd.)

- Art. 226*—Certiorari—Exercise of discretion by Central Road Traffic Board — Reduction of number of permits issued to person—No apparent error on face of order—Interference with discretion exercised — (Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 64) 1a
- Art. 226* — Other effective remedy open — Jurisdiction under Art. 226 cannot be invoked as against Sales-tax authority—(Sales tax—Madras General Sales Tax Act (9 of 1939), Ss. 9, 11, 12, 12A, 12B, 12C and 12D) 10
- Art. 226*—Habeas Corpus — Nature of proceedings — Jurisdiction of Court to consider validity of orders passed subsequent to institution of proceedings — (Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 491) 41c
- Art. 226* — Habeas corpus — Order of court declaring detention invalid—Effect on valid order of detention passed before pronouncement of judgment but not brought to notice of court—(Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 491) 41d
- Art. 226*—Other remedy open 54b
- Art. 226*—Submission to jurisdiction—Effect 59a
- Art. 226* — Other remedy open—Petitioner's contentions that grant in their favour being of less than a village, Mad. Act 26 of 1948 did not apply and that the proceedings under colour of Act are not legal — Proper and adequate remedy of the petitioner held was by way of a suit and not by a petition under Art. 226 — (Madras Estates Land Act (26 of 1948), S. 9) 60
- Arts. 226, 132, 134 (1) (c)*—Order of release on application for writ of habeas corpus — Appealability under Constitution — Principles — (Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 491) 66f
- Art. 226*—Certiorari — Writ of — Grounds — Refusal to issue yarn and cloth dealer's license 84
- Art. 226* — Writ of Certiorari — Powers of High Court — Infringement of mere political rights no ground for issue of writ 94a
- †*—Art. 226—Writ of 'quo warranto' — Petitioner not interested in the subject-matter 96a
- Art. 226* — 'And for any other purpose' — Meaning—Does not allow petitions for agitating public questions 96b
- Arts. 226 and 286* — Petitioner assessed to tax under Madras General Sales Tax Act — Petition under Art. 226 — Maintainability — (Sales Tax—Madras General Sales Tax Act (9 of 1939), S. 12-A) 131
- Art. 226* — Parties — Party affected by government order is entitled to be heard — High Court Rules (Madras), R. 3 351a
- Art. 226* — Scope — Enactment affecting power of High Court — (Municipalities—Madras District Municipalities Act (5 of 1920), S. 351B) 392c
- Art. 226*—Petitioner submitting to jurisdiction of Revenue Board — Petitioner is precluded

Constitution of India (contd.)

- from questioning jurisdiction in writ of 'Certiorari'—(Tenancy Laws — Madras Estates (Abolition and Conversion into Ryotwari) Act (26 of 1948), S. 18) 472a
- †—Art. 226—Persons entitled to apply—Municipalities — Madras District Municipalities Act (5 of 1920), Ss. 7 and 43) 510c
- Art. 226*—Issue of writ 'ex debito justitiae' — Municipalities—Madras District Municipalities Act (5 of 1920), Ss. 7 and 43) 510d
- †—Art. 226—Certiorari' — Interference with electoral process — (Municipalities—Madras District Municipalities Act (5 of 1920), Ss. 7 and 43) 510e
- Art. 226* — Application against Regional Transport Authority — (Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 44) 709c
- Art. 226* — Writ of Certiorari — Error apparent on face of record — (Madras Hereditary Village Offices Act (3 of 1895), S. 14) 972b
- Art. 226*—Who can apply—Personal interest 972c
- Art. 226* — Order under Madras Hereditary Village Offices Act — High Court has jurisdiction to issue writ of Certiorari in respect of such order 972d
- Art. 226*—Suit under S. 14, Madras Hereditary Village Offices Act — Order — Appeal to Revenue Board — Order of Revenue Board is judicial act liable to be quashed in appropriate cases—Madras Hereditary Village Offices Act (3 of 1895), S. 14 972e
- Art. 226 (1)* — Prosecution under S. 15 (b), Madras General Sales Tax Act — Accused taking out writ of 'certiorari' for quashing proceedings—Contentions which can be raised — (Sales Tax—Madras General Sales Tax Act (9 of 1939), S. 12A) 105a
- Art. 227* — See also Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 344 439a,b
- Art. 227*—Scope 362b
- Art. 227* — Administrative and judicial control over tribunal 362c
- Art. 227*—Superintendence — Scope of 362d
- Art. 227*—Enabling power of High Court 362e
- Art. 227 (1)*—Power of superintendence — Extent of 832
- **—Arts. 245 (1), 246, 286 (1) and Explanation and Sch. 7, List II Entries 92 and 54 — Power of State to tax, intra-state and inter-state sales — Sales Tax—Madras General Sales Tax Act (9 of 1939), Ss. 3 and 22) 116c
- Art. 246*—See ibid, Art. 245 (1) 116c
- Art. 265* 337b
- See (1) ibid, Art. 20 337b
- (2) Sales Tax — Madras General Sales Tax Act (9 of 1939), Preamble 105d

Constitution of India (contd.)

- Art. 286*
     See (1) ibid, Art. 226 131
     (2) Sales Tax — Madras General Sales Tax Act (9 of 1939), S. 2 (b) 86b
 —Art. 286 (1) — See also ibid, Art. 245 (1) Explanation 116c —Art. 286 (1), Explanation—"Consumption"
 —Meaning of 116d
 ** —Art. 286 (1) (b) and (2)—"In the course of export" — Meaning of — Sales or purchases having no direct connection with goods exported
 —Power of States to impose tax thereon 116a —Art. 286 (1) (b) — Purchase of goods in Pakistan—Transport of goods in Madras—Liability of purchaser to be taxed under Madras General Sales Tax Act — (Sales Tax — Madras General Sales Tax Act (9 of 1939) S. 3) 116b —Arts. 301, 305 — Restrictions under Motor Vehicles Act (1939) 279n —Art. 305—See ibid, Art. 301 279n
 —Art. 310—See Railway Services 54a
 —Art. 311—See Railway Services 54a
 —Arts. 372, 13 and 14—Continuance in force of an Act, provided for by Art. 372 is subject to Arts. 13 and 14 729b
 —Art. 372 (1)—See Tenancy Laws — Madras Estates Land (Reduction of Rent) Second Amendment Act (35 of 1951), S. 1 (2) 260a
 —Sch. 7, List II, Item 36—See ibid, Art. 19 (1) (f) 252b
 —Sch. 7, List II, Entry 54 — See ibid, Art. 245 (1) 116c
 —Sch. 7, List II, Entry 92 — See ibid, Art. 245 (1) 116c
Contract Act (9 of 1872), S. 19 — See Limitation Act (1908), Art. 91 611
 —S. 23—Budla Contract — Defence of India Rules, Rule 94C—Public Policy 296
 —S. 23 — Object opposed to public policy — Kaikagada under which certain amount is paid as consideration with object that 'shanbhogue' should not revert to his post is void 506
 —S. 23—Contract with illegal object — Vegetable Oil and Oil-cakes (Forward Contracts Prohibition) Order, 1944, Cl. 1 845
 —S. 25
     See also (1) Hindu Law—Alienation 706
     (2) Limitation Act (1908), S. 19 433b
 —S. 25—Agreement to pay—Credit entries in debtor's account books alleged — Non-production raises adverse presumption 433a
 —S. 38—Performance of executory contract—Exercise of option 380d
 —S. 39 — See also ibid, S. 56 300
 —S. 39—Section 39 applies to executory contract only 380b —Ss. 56 and 39—Becomes impossible — Suit for damages for breach of contract — Contract in writing but not containing condition excusing

Contract Act (contd.)

- non-performance — Applicability of doctrine of frustration—Self-induced frustration—Burden of proof—(Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101-103) 300
 —S. 60—See Debt laws — Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act (4 of 1938), S. 8, Expl. I (FB) 458b
 —S. 73—See T. P. Act (1882), S. 55 529b
 —S. 151
     See (1) Carriage of Goods by Sea Act (1925) 3b
     (2) Carriage of Goods by Sea Act (1925), Sch. Art. 1 (c) 3c
 —S. 152
     See (1) Carriage of Goods by Sea Act (1925) 3b
     (2) Carriage of Goods by Sea Act (1925), Sch. Art. 1 (c) 3c
 —S. 160—See Railways Act (1890), S. 56 (2) 217b
 —S. 182 — See Companies Act (1913), S. 79 520f
 —S. 196—See Civil P. C. (1908), O. 21, R. 69 860
Cotton Textile (Control) Order (1948), Cl. 30
 —Clause does not contemplate irrevocable fixing of any "quota" 775
Court-fees Act (7 of 1870), S. 7 — Determination of court-fee — Court-fee is to be determined in the first instance on the plaint averments 513a
 —S. 7 (iv) (b), Sch. II, Art. 17 (vi), Art. 17-B (Mad)—Appeal in partition suit 846
 —S. 7 (v) (d)—See ibid, S. 7 (xi) (cc) 513b
 —S. 7 (ix) — Suit for redemption of part of property with prayer for partition and separate possession 754b
 —S. 7 (xi) (cc) and (v) (d) — Usufructuary mortgage—Lease back to mortgagor—Mortgagor tenant holding over—Sale by mortgagor to third person subject to usufructuary mortgage—Suit by mortgagee for rent and possession against mortgagor and third person (in his capacity as sub-tenant)—Suit held was governed by S. 7 (xi) (cc) and not by S. 7 (v) (d) 513b
 —S. 7 (xi) (cc) — Question of title cannot be gone into in a suit for rent brought under S. 7 (xi) (cc) 513c
 —S. 17 — Alienations in favour of different persons at various times and places 592
 —S. 17—Distinct subjects 888
 —Sch. I, Art. 1 — See also ibid, Sch. 2 Art. 17B (Madras) 576
 —Sch. I, Art. 1 — Two separate appeals from mortgage decree — One from preliminary decree, the other from final decree — Full 'ad valorem' court-fee is payable in each appeal—Hardship to subject no consideration 415
 —Sch. I, Art. 1—"Not otherwise provided for in this Act"—Interpretation of (FB) 746b
 —Sch. I, Art. 1—Written statement claiming set-off 853

Court-fees Act (contd.)

- Sch. II, Art. 17 (vi) — See also ibid, S. 7 (iv) (b) 846
- Sch. II, Art. 17 (VI)—Suit for declaration of joint right in impartible property 856b
- Sch. II, Art. 17-B (Mad) — See also ibid, S. 7 (iv) (b) 846
- Sch. 2, Art. 17B (Madras) and Sch. 1, Art. 1—Applicability—Administration suits and appeals therefrom — (Civil P. C. (1908), O. 20, R. 13) 576

Criminal Law Amendment Act (46 of 1952), Ss. 7 and 10 — S. 7, retrospective effect—(General Clauses Act (1897), S. 6) 451

— S. 10—See ibid, S. 7 451

- Criminal Procedure Code (5 of 1898), S. 4 (1) (m)—See ibid, S. 144 956a
- S. 6 — 'Court' — Meaning — (Words and Phrases—Court) 953a
- S. 10—See ibid, S. 144 956b
- S. 17—See ibid, S. 144 956b
- S. 18 — Commissioner of Police, Madras — (Madras City Police Act (3 of 1888), S. 7) 953b
- S. 32—See also Madras Prohibition Act (10 of 1937), S. 4A 877f
- S. 32 — Sentence in case of doubt regarding commission of offence 877b
- S. 93A — Application to Commissioner of Police, Madras — Warrant of arrest from Jammu and Kashmir addressed to Police Commissioner—Executability 953c
- S. 93A—Warrant of arrest for detention in Jammu and Kashmir—Execution in Madras: 953d
- S. 103 — See Public Gambling Act (1867), S. 5 243e
- S. 133—Petitions under Chaps. 11 and 12—Magistrate can proceed under S. 133 674a
- Ss. 133 to 137 — Order under, when can be passed, indicated 674b
- S. 133 — Public nuisance — Shops walled from outside 674c
- S. 134—See ibid, S. 133 674b
- S. 135—See ibid, S. 133 674b
- S. 136—See ibid, S. 133 674b
- S. 137—See ibid, S. 133 674b
- Ss. 144 and 4 (1) (m) — Nature of order 956a
- Ss. 144, 195, 10, 17, 528 and 476 — Withdrawal of complaint for disobedience of order under S. 144—Competency of Additional District Magistrate: AIR 1951 All 828, Dissent. 956b
- S. 145—Continuation of proceedings—Considerations for 436a
- S. 145 — Magistrate dropping proceedings does not become 'functus officio' — He can pass further orders for winding up 436c
- S. 145 (5) — Effect of order — When order is passed, the Magistrate ceases to have jurisdiction, notwithstanding that by mistake he omitted to withdraw the order of attachment previously passed by him 436b

Criminal P. C. (contd.)

- S. 162 — See also Evidence Act (1872), S. 25 917
- Ss. 162 and 164—Practice — Murder case — Desirability of having statement of accused on first questioning recorded under S. 164 61a
- S. 162 — Question to police what accused told during investigation — Duty of Court, under S. 165, Evidence Act — (Evidence Act (1872), S. 165) 179b
- S. 164
- See also (1) ibid, S. 162 61a
- (2) Evidence Act (1872), S. 21: 138c
- (3) Evidence Act (1872), S. 24: 74a
- (4) High Court Rules and Orders—Madras Criminal Rules of Practice, R. 85 564a
- S. 164—Retracted confession — Conviction on retracted and uncorroborated confession 61b
- S. 164 — 'Upon questioning the person' — Record of confession after adequate warnings — Magistrate is not bound to repeat warnings on second day on which recording is continued — (High Court Rules and Orders—Madras Criminal Rules of Practice, R. 85) 74b
- † — Ss. 164, 176 (1), 364 and 533 (1) — Magistrate holding inquest under S. 176 — Non-compliance with S. 364 138a
- S. 164—Scope of section 138b
- S. 164 (3) — Certificate as to voluntariness of confession—Record of reasons before recording confession is not necessary—Certificate appended after recording is sufficient — (High Court Rules and Orders—Madras Criminal Rules of Practice, R. 85) 74c
- S. 172 (2)—Defending counsel is not entitled as of right to see case diary of police—But Court can permit — (Case held fit one when the committing Court should have shown portions to the defence counsel) 179a
- S. 176 — See Evidence Act (1872), S. 21 138e
- S. 176 (1)—See ibid, S. 164 138a
- S. 195—See ibid, S. 144 956b
- S. 195 (1) (a) (b) and (c) — See ibid, S. 476B 569
- S. 195 (5)—See ibid, S. 476B 569
- S. 203—'Sufficient ground for proceeding'—Complaint prima facie disclosing offence of cheating—Dismissal not proper 184
- S. 209—See ibid, S. 437 (FB) 801a
- Ss. 209 (1) and 437—Implied discharge — Committal under S. 437 26
- S. 209 (1)—"Discharge"—Meaning of (FB) 801c
- S. 209 (1)—"Unless it appears . . ."—Meaning of (FB) 801d
- S. 215—"By the High Court only"—Quashing of commitment by presiding Judge of High Court Session—(Cr. P. C. (1898), S. 561A) 875
- S. 234 (1)—Accused murdering A and B in the night one after the other—Houses of A and B

Criminal P. C. (contd.)

divided by a street which formed boundary between two districts — Accused confessing both murders in one statement — Separate charge-sheets laid in two different Sessions Courts—Held, there was no impediment in trying both murders together under S. 234 (1) and one Court should have dealt with both murders 372b

—S. 236

See (1) ibid, S. 239 (d) 400b

        (2) Penal Code (1860), S. 300 1006a

—S. 238 — Three complete minor offences of bribe-taking committed within space of 12 months included — Only one offence proved — Acquittal under S. 5 (2)—Accused can be convicted under S. 161, I. P. C. — (Prevention of Corruption Act (1947), S. 5)—(Penal Code (1860), S. 161): 785c

—S. 239—See Criminal Trial 400a

—Ss. 239 (d), 236—Son charged under S. 302, I. P. C., and father under S. 201/511 — Case should not be split up into two — Charge against father should be altered with notice to father — S. 236 also should be applied 400b

—S. 256—Anticipating of defence 1008

—S. 343 — See Madras Village Courts Act 1888 (1 of 1889), S. 76 388

—Ss. 344, 561A—Stay of criminal proceedings — Jurisdiction of High Court — (Constitution of India, Art. 227) 439a —Ss. 344, 561A—Stay of criminal proceedings — Question of discretion — Interference with — (Constitution of India, Art. 227) 439b

—S. 347—Applicability 998

—S. 349—Scope 574a

—S. 349—Punishment "different in kind" 574b

—Ss. 349 and 380—Scope 574d

—Ss. 349 (1-A) and 562 — Several accused. 1936 Mad W N Cr 235, Dissent. 574c

—S. 364—See ibid, S. 164 138a

—S. 378—See ibid, S. 429 61c

—S. 380—See ibid, S. 349 574d

—S. 403 — See Constitution of India, Art. 20 (2) 595c

—S. 417—See also ibid, S. 438 259

—S. 417—Appeal under—Review of evidence at large 481d

—S. 417—Accused charged under S. 161, I.P.C. and also under Prevention of Corruption Act (2 of 1947) — Conviction under former and acquittal under latter charge—In appeal, Sessions Judge acquitting accused of the charge under S. 161, Penal Code — Appeal against acquittal by Government—Evidence in regard to both charges standing apart — In appeal, the whole evidence can be looked into—(Cr. P. C. (1898), S. 423) 481e

—S. 423—See Cr. P. C. (1898), S. 417 481e

—Ss. 429 and 378 — Difference of opinion among Judges—Reference to third Judge—Duty of such Judge—Method of approach 61c

—S. 437—See also ibid, S. 209 (1) 26

Criminal P. C. (contd.)

*—Ss. 437 and 209 (1)—Power of revision on order of discharge under S. 209 (1) — AIR 1952 All 231 (FB), Dissented from (FB) 801a

—S. 437—"Upon the matter"—Interpretation (FB) 801b

—Ss. 438, 417 — Reference by Sessions Judge in case of acquittal—Competency 259

—S. 439 — See also Madras Hindu Religious and Charitable Endowments Act (19 of 1951), S. 62 219

—S. 439—Anticipation of defence by petitions — Order passed on such petition — Procedure deprecated — Revision — Duty of High Court 226

—S. 471 — Correct procedure to be followed 355

—S. 476—

See also (1) Ibid, S. 144 956b

        (2) Ibid, S. 476-B 569

—S. 476 — Complaint when not proper for offence under Penal Code (1860), S. 193 745

—Ss. 476-B, 195 (1) (a), (b) and (c), 195 (5) and 476—Appeal—(Madras High Court Criminal Rules of Practice, Rule 37) 569

—S. 488 (4)—Compromise between parties — Application of wife for enhancement of maintenance does not lie 549

—S. 488 (8) — "Resided" — Temporary residence of parties — Jurisdiction to entertain application 78

—S. 491

See (1) Constitution of India, (1950), Art. 226 41c,d;66f,

        (2) Public Safety—Preventive Detention Act (1950), S. 3 41a

—S. 528—See ibid, S. 144 956b

—S. 533 (1)—See ibid, S. 164 138a

—S. 556 — "Personally interested"— Issuing a search warrant under S. 5, not sufficient to disqualify magistrate to try the case himself 243c

—S. 561—

See (1) Ibid, S. 215 875

        (2) Ibid, S. 344 439a,b

—S. 562—See ibid, S. 349 (1-A) 574c

—S. 562 (1) — Difference between doctors' opinions as to whether accused were really intoxicated — Court entertaining reasonable doubt regarding their guilt — S. 562 (1) cannot be applied — (Madras Prohibition Act (10 of 1937), S. 4A) 877a

—S. 562 (1)—Applicability — First offence of drunkenness (Madras Prohibition Act (10 of 1937), S. 4A) 877c

—S. 562 (1) — First offenders—Presumption of 877e

—Sch. V Form No. 42 — See ibid, S. 499 481

Criminal Trial — Splitting up cases — Both father and son charge-sheeted — Sessions Judge splitting up cases — He should in judgment make reference to the manner in which cases were split up and the fact that father also was charge-sheeted—(Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 239) 400a

Criminal Trial (contd.)

DEBT LAWS

Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act (4 of 1938), S. 4 (d)—"House Property" 540

—S. 4 (d)—"House property" does not include vacant site suitable for building 636

—S. 4 (h)—Object of—Tests for applicability —Due and own—Meaning—(Words and Phrases

—'Due and own'—Meaning) 174a

—S. 7 — See also Negotiable Instruments Act (1881), S. 44 975

—S. 7—"Decree" refers to decree passed prior to Act 777d

—S. 8, Expl. I—See also ibid, S. 19 777c

†—S. 8, Expl. I—Applicability to settlement of debt—(Contract Act (1872), S. 60) (FB) 458b

—S. 8, Expl. I—Does not give any new right 777e

—S. 8 (2)—Payment—Nature of—Mortgagee purchasing part of equity of redemption—Discharge under S. 82, T. P. Act does not amount to payment—(Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 82) 873

—S. 9A—Applicability 1001

—S. 9A (7) (ii)—Applicability 557

—S. 9A (7) (ii) (a)—Construction 704

—S. 9A (7) (ii) (c)—Applicability 720c

—Ss. 14 and 19 — Mortgage decree for sale—Scaling down—Relief can be claimed for first time in execution—(Civil P. C. (1908), S. 11) 548

—S. 19
See also (1) ibid, S. 14 548
(2) Limitation Act (1908), Art. 182 213

—S. 19 — Question of scaling down debts — Failure to raise in earlier execution application—Effect—Nature of application under S. 19—(Civil P. C. (1908), Ss. 11, 47) 188

—Ss. 19 and 20 (as amended by Act 23 of 1948)—Successive applications under 421

—Ss. 19, 8, Expl. I—Application under S. 19 decided finally—No similar application lies—(Debt Laws — Madras Agriculturists' Relief (Amendment) Act (23 of 1948), S. 16) 777c —Ss. 19, 20 — Retrospective effect—(Madras Merged States (Laws) Act (35 of 1949), S. 6)—(Madras General Clauses Act (1 of 1897), S. 8)—(General Clauses Act (1897), S. 6) — Civil P. C. (1908), Pre.) 810

—Ss. 19 and 25A—Order scaling down decree passed by Small Cause Court—Appeal—(Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (1887), S. 27) 908

—S. 19 (2)—Retrospective effect 165b

—S. 19 (2)—Retrospective operation — (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 11) — (Debt Laws — Madras Agriculturists' Relief (Amendment) Act (23 of 1948), S. 16) 914

—S. 19A (1) — Admittedly nothing was due from debtor on date of application — No application lies under S. 19A 831

Debt Laws — Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act (contd.)

—S. 20

See (1) ibid, S. 19 421, 810

(2) Limitation Act (1908), Art. 182

213

—S. 23—See also Civil P. C. (1908), S. 144

930

—Ss. 23 and 24 — Decree-holder depositing balance due on auction—Setting aside of auction sale on application of debtor — Another creditor withdrawing it—Debtor getting benefit of deposit in execution of decree of the other creditor, cannot resist decree-holder's suit for refund 454

—S. 24

See (1) ibid, S. 23 454

(2) Civil P. C. (1903), S. 144 930

—S. 25A—See also ibid, S. 19 908

—S. 25A—Order returning petition 417b

—S. 28 — Rules under—Rr. 2, 4, 7, 9 and 10

—Proceedings under R. 2 — Nature of — Order operates as res judicata — (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 11) 183

Madras Agriculturists' Relief Amendment Act (23 of 1948)

—S. 16

See also (1) Debt Laws — Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act (4 of 1938), S. 19 777c

(2) Debt Laws — Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act (4 of 1938), S. 19 (2) 914

—S. 16, Cl. (ii)'—"Proceeding"—Execution proceedings not contemplated 777a

—S. 16, Cl. (iii) — Retrospective operation 777b

Provincial Debts Laws (Temporary Validation) Ordinance (11 of 1945), S. 2 — Decree passed before issue of Ordinance—Re-opening 165a

— —

Decree—Execution—Maintenance decree — See Civil P. C. (1908), O. 34, R. 15 876a

Deed—Construction—Settlement deed in favour of Hindu female — Intention — (Family settlement)—(T. P. Act (1882), S. 8) 566a

—Construction — (T. P. Act (1882), S. 8) 566b

—Settlement deed — Intention of settlor how to ascertain—(T. P. Act (1882), S. 8) 566c

—Construction — Decree — See Civil P. C. (1908), O. 34, R. 11 948a

—Construction — See Hindu Widows Remarriage Act (1856), S. 5 977b

Defence of India Act (35 of 1939), S. 19 — Powers of arbitrator under — Land Acquisition Act (1894), S. 23 (1) and (2) 867a

—S. 19—Acquisition under— Awarding of interest 867b

Defence of India Rules (1939), R. 61 (2) (a), (b) and (f) — See Vegetable oils and oilcakes — (Forward Contracts Prohibition) Order (1944), Cl. 4 711a

— R. 81 (2) (f) — "With a view to secure compliance with the order." — AIR 1951 Nag 320, Dissented from 711b

Divorce Act (4 of 1869), S. 10 — Adultery — Proof of 792a

— S. 10 — Res judicata — (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 11) 792b

— S. 10 — Cruelty — Statements of jealousy 792c

— S. 10 — Cruelty — Mere incompatibility of temperament 792d

— S. 10 — Duty of Court 792e

† — S. 10 — Validity — (Constitution of India, Arts. 13, 14 and 15) (Obiter) 792f

— S. 16 — Compromise petition for vacating 'decree nisi' — Wife reserving right to file petition on ground of old adultery — Maintainability : 800

— Ss. 16 & 19 — Parties, Christians — Husband's complete impotency — Suit for declaration of nullity of marriage — No collusion — Petitioner wife is entitled to absolute decree of nullity and dissolution — Decree nisi to be made absolute, need not be passed — (Specific Relief Act (1877) S. 42) 858c

— S. 19 — See ibid, S. 16 858c

— S. 19 (1) — Nullity of marriage on ground of complete impotency of respondent 858b

Drugs Act (23 of 1940), S. 12 — Drugs Rules (1945), R. 29 — Order of Drugs Controller cancelling import license — Appeal to High Court — (General Clauses Act (1897), S. 3 (15)) 974

Drugs Rules (1945), R. 29 — See Drugs Act (1940), S. 12 974

Easements Act (5 of 1882), Ss. 7 (b), 12, 15, 28, 33, 35 — Right to light and air — Natural right and easementary right — Acquisition — Disturbance — Remedy 849

— S. 12 — See ibid, S. 7 (b) 849

— S. 15 — See ibid, S. 7 (b) 849

— S. 28 — See ibid, S. 7 (b) 849

— S. 33 — See ibid, S. 7 (b) 849

— S. 35 — See ibid, S. 7 (b) 849

— S. 60 — See also Evidence Act (1872), S. 116 456b

— S. 60 — Distinction between licence and lease — (T. P. Act (1882), S. 105) 456a

(English) Factories Act (1937), S. 151 (1) — See Factories Act (1948), S. 2 (m) 269b

Essential Supplies (Temporary Powers) Act (24 of 1946) S. 3 (2) — Restrictions on movement of cholam — Effect of Madras G. O. No. 550 (Food), D/- 18.6.1948 371a

— S. 3 (2) — Madras G. O. No. 550 (Food), D/- 18.6.1948 restricting movement of foodgrains — Validity of 371b

— S. 7 (1) — Govt. Order, 432, Food Department, D/- 12.4.47 — Owner held liable for act of

Essential Supplies (Temporary Powers) Act (contd.)

his servant done without his knowledge — mens rea — (Penal Code (1860) S. 40) — (Master and servant — Vicarious liability) 156

Evidence Act (1 of 1872), S. 1 — Appreciation of evidence — Immaterial discrepancies do not affect conclusions 481b

— S. 14 — See Penal Code (1860), S. 85 827

— S. 16 — See T. P. Act (1882), S. 106 884b

— S. 21 — Confession — Magistrate holding inquest under S. 176, Cr. P. C. recording confession — Admissibility — (Criminal P. C. (1898), Ss. 164 and 176) 138c

— S. 24 — Voluntariness of confession — Criterion to determine — (Criminal P. C. (1898) S. 164 — Madras Police Standing Order No. 583) 74a

— S. 25 — Excise Officer — (Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 162) — Opium Act (1878), S. 20A (inserted by Mad. Act 32 of 1951) — A I R 1932 Pat 293 (SB), Dissented from 917

— Ss. 25, 114 — Police officer — Prohibition Sub-Inspector is not — Statement to him need not be corroborated 1004a

— S. 27 — See Penal Code (1860), S. 300 564c

— S. 33 — See ibid, S. 145 1000c

— S. 35 — Absence of original grant — Entries in Inam Register — (Grant — Inam) 580a

— Ss. 35, 65 (c) and 74 — Official register containing copies of communication 785a

— S. 42 — Judgment not inter partes — Evidentiary value — Civil P. C. (1908), S. 11 750b

— S. 45 — Doctor's medical certificate filed — It does not prove itself — Doctor must be called and cross-examined on it 858a

— S. 57 — Propaganda by State Govt. calling upon people to help it in finding out corruption and promising them protection against prosecution for being accomplices — Courts can take judicial notice of this propaganda 481a

— S. 60 — A and B tried separately — In trial of A witness telling that B told him that A had stabbed the deceased — Evidence is hearsay and therefore inadmissible — B not being tried along with A, should be produced as witness — Evidence would be admissible only if A and B were tried in one case 400c

— S. 64 — See Public Safety — Madras Maintenance of Public Order Act (1 of 1947) S. 2A 780

— S. 65 — See Public Safety — Madras Maintenance of Public Order Act (1 of 1947), S. 2A 780

— S. 65 (c) — See ibid, S. 35 785a

— S. 74 — See ibid, S. 35 785a

— S. 78 (4) — Amending Act — Notice of — Court cannot take notice in absence of authentic copy as required by S. 78 66c

— S. 91 — See Registration Act (1908), S. 17 (1) (b) 366a

Evidence Act (contd.)

- S. 92
  - See (1) Specific Relief Act (1877), S. 42 545b
  - (2) T. P. Act (1882), S. 55 769b
- Ss. 101 to 103
  - See also (1) Contract Act (1872), S. 56 : 300
  - (2) Excess Profits Tax Act (1940), S. 10A 221a
  - (3) Penal Code (1860), S. 497 : 422
  - (4) Succession Act (1925), S. 283
  - (1) (b) 461a
- S. 101 — Existence of prior mortgage not disputed but genuineness attacked by subsequent mortgagee—Burden to show that prior mortgage is a sham and bogus one is on subsequent mortgagee—(T. P. Act (1882), S. 78 1000b
- S. 114
  - See also (1) ibid, S. 25 1004a
  - (2) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 21, R. 69 860
- S. 114—Non-examination of witness 981b
- S. 114 — Corroboration — (Madras Prohibition Act (10 of 1937), S. 4 (e)) 1004b
- S. 114, Illus. (a) — See Madras Prohibition Act (10 of 1937), S. 4 (i) (a) 534
- S. 114 (f) — See Hindu Law — Partition 461
- S. 115
  - See also (1) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 23 R. 1 391b
  - (2) Companies Act (1913), S. 79 520i
  - (3) Muhammadan Law — Succession 161b
- S. 115—Estoppel by election—Void deed of gift by mother—Attestation by minor 230d
- S. 115 — Section creates estoppel by inconsistent position taken 671a
- S. 116 — Licensee cannot deny licensor's title — S. 116 does not sanction forfeiture of licence—(Easements Act (1882), S. 60) 456b
- Ss. 123 and 124—Scope — Official communications and unpublished official records—Production of—Claim of privilege—Procedure — (Civil P. C. (1908), O. 11, Rr. 12 and 13) 228
- S. 124—See ibid, S. 123 228
- Ss. 145 and 33 — Deposition of plaintiff in prior criminal case between same parties — Deposition is not admissible under S. 33 but under S. 145 attention of plaintiff should be drawn to the deposition made by him as required by S. 145 1000c
- S. 165 — See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 162 179b
- Excess Profits Tax Act (15 of 1940), S. 10A
  - Burden of proof — (Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101 to 103) 221a
  - S. 10A—Purpose of transaction being avoidance of reduction of liability to excess profits 221b

*Factories Act (63 of 1948), S. 2 (k)—Exhibition of films by means of cinematograph — Conversion of raw film into finished product 269c —S. 2 (l)—See also Payment of Wages Act (1936), S. 2 (vi) 269f

—S. 2 (l) — “Whether for wages or not” — Construction 269e

*—S. 2 (l) and (m) — Studio producing films to be exhibited by means of cinematograph—Workers employed in Studio — Studio whether factory 269h

—S. 2 (l)—Watchman, when can be a worker 406

—Ss. 2 (m) and 85—Madras G. O. No. 2210 (Development Department), D/- 22-4-1948 — Order is ultra vires of S. 85 154

—S. 2 (m)—Difference between definitions of “factory” contained in Indian and English Act — English Factories Act (1937), S. 151 (1) 269b

—S. 2 (m)—Comparison between Indian and English Act 269d

—S. 2 (m)—“Precincts”—Meaning of 269i

—Ss. 14, 92 and 106 — Failure to construct dust-proof husk chamber—Complaint—Limitation 204

—S. 85—See ibid, S. 2 (m) 154

—S. 92—See ibid, S. 14 204

—S. 106—See ibid, S. 14 204

Family arrangement—Binding on son of party 22b

Family settlement — Essentials — Competing titles in respect of the properties in dispute — Invalid gift deed — (Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 5) 161a

Fatal Accidents Act (13 of 1855), Ss. 1 and 2, Proviso 2—Scope 981f

—S. 1—Damages, calculation of 981g

—S. 1—Damages 981h

—Ss. 1 and 2 — Damages under both sections — Overlapping 981i

—S. 2—See ibid, S. 1 981f; 981i

Federal Court (Enlargement of Jurisdiction) Act (1947), (1 of 1948), S. 3 — See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 109 (FB) 878a

†Fugitive Offenders Act (1881), (44 & 45 Vict., c. 69), S. 14 — Validity—(Constitution of India, Arts. 14 and 13 (1)) 729d

General Clauses Act (10 of 1897), S. 3 (15) — See Drugs Act (1940), S. 12 974

—S. 3 (22)—See Penal Code (1860), S. 52 936b

—S. 3 (64) — See Registration Act (1908), S. 17 (3) 740

—S. 6
See (1) Criminal Law Amendment Act (1952), S. 7 451

(2) Debt Laws—Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act (4 of 1938), S. 19 810

Goods Tariff General Rules, R. 15—See Railways Act (1890), S. 72 514

Government of India Act (1935), (26 Geo. V & 1 Edw. VIII, c. 2), S. 5 — See Madras Enlargement of Area and Alteration of Boundaries Order (1948), Para 1 647b

—S. 290 — See Madras Enlargement of Area and Alteration of Boundaries Order (1948), Para 1 647b

—Sch. 7, List 2, Entry 48 — Sales Tax — Madras General Sales Tax Act (9 of 1939), Preamble 105c

Grant—Inam—See Evidence Act (1872), S. 35 580a

—Government through its revenue officers granting darkhast — Order becoming final — Government has no power to revise the order validly and duly made by the Revenue Officer— (Madras Revenue Boards Standing Order No. 15) 235

—Construction — Grant styled as Bhoothana Dharma Sasana Patram, held passed both Kudiwaram and Melwaram to the grantee 884a

HIGH COURT RULES AND ORDERS

High Court Rules (Mad.)—Appellate Side Rules, Part II, Chap. I, R. (1)—Standing orders, R. 183 — Posting of appeal of value of over Rs. 10,000 before Bench of two Judges 958a

—R. 3—See Constitution of India, Art. 226 351a

Madras High Court Criminal Rules of Practice, R. 37—See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 476B 569

—R. 85

See also (1) Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 164 74b

(2) Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 164 74c

—R. 85—Rule has not force of statute but is promulgated for regulating procedure in criminal Courts—(Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 164) 564a

—R. 85—Duty of Magistrate 564b

High Court Rules (Mad.) — See under HIGH COURT RULES AND ORDERS

Hindu Law—Adoption — See also Registration Act (1908), S. 17 (3) 740 ; 755c

*—Adoption — Adoptive father having wife living at time of adoption—Nomination or designation of deceased wife as adoptive mother: 132a
†—Adoption — Adoptor's wife dying before adoption — Right of adopted son to inherit property belonging to her 132b

—Adoption—Dancing girl 571a

—Adoption—Dancing girl 571b

—Adoption—Dancing girl—Succession 571d

—Adoption—Authority—Construction 661

—Adoption—Motive of widow making adoption 676b

—Adoption—Adoption by widow — Consent of sapindas—Validity 755a

Hindu Law (contd.)

—Adoption—Adoption by widow — Consent of sapindas—Competency of sapindas in the order of degree of relationship to husband 755b

—Alienation — Alienation by manager and by shebait—Distinction 210b

†—Alienation — Benefit to estate — Sale of ancestral land in order to purchase lands elsewhere 210c

—Alienation — Alienation of minor's property — Validity 230c

†—Alienation — Father — Gift of reasonable portion of family property in favour of unmarried daughter as a marriage provision—Validity 404

—Alienation—Time-barred debt — (AIR 1937 Pat 40, Dissented — (Contract Act (1872), S. 25) 706

—Alienation — Mortgage by father — Right of after-born son to question 894

—Custom—Remuneration to manager amongst Nattukottai Chettis 492m

—Custom—Nattukottai Chettis — Family custom of making presents to sisters is not a legal obligation 492n

—Custom—Nattukottai Chettis—Drawings of members of joint family, living separate after marriage, debited to individual accounts — Plea that debits have to be adjusted against shares of each at time of partition according to custom: 492o

—Custom—Scope 571e

—Dancing girl—Law applicable 571c

—Debts—Antecedent debt 210a

—Gift—Property inherited by minor—Gift by mother to relation—Validity 230a

—Impartible Estates — See Tenancy Laws — Madras Estates (Abolition and Conversion into Ryotwari) Act (26 of 1948), S. 3 185

—Joint family—Partition

See also (1) Income-tax Act (1922), S. 25A 315b

(2) Limitation Act (1908), Article 144 25

—Joint family — Sale of undivided share of member in execution of decree against him — Repurchase of share by joint family—Acquisition — Alienating member can share in subsequent partition 240

—Joint family—Partition—Minor co-parcener not represented by lawful guardian — Partition when can be challenged 315c

—Joint family—Trade 723a

—Joint family—Manager — (Civil P. C., O. 1, R. 8 and O. 7, R. 5) 822b

—Joint Hindu family — Alienation — Setting aside 852

—Maintenance — Decree — See Civil P. C. (1908), O. 34, R. 15 876a

—Partition—Mode of — Partition of bad debts 146a —Partition—Minor—Notice and suit on behalf of minor by person other than lawful guardian 146b

Hindu Law (contd.)

- Partition — A, member of joint family, despatching telegram to his brother on 4th August— In telegram A declaring his intention to separate from latter—A dying on 6th August—In ordinary course, telegram held must have been delivered on 5th and A having died on 6th he must be deemed to have become divided from time of despatching telegram—(Evidence Act (1872), S. 114(f)): 461
- Religious endowment 580b
- Religious Endowment—Debts—Legal necessity—Onus 624a
- Religious Endowment — Debts — Trustee incurring debt on promissory note without indicating that he did not intend to incur personal liability — Decree against trust property cannot be passed—Trust is not bound by such decree — (Trusts Act (1882), S. 36) 624b
- Religious endowment 750a
- Sons—Pious obligation 815a
- Will
- See also (1) Registration Act (1908), S. 17 676a
- (2) Succession Act (1925), S. 59 461b
- Will—Validity 461c
- Widow—Maintenance — See also Civil P. C. (1908), O. 22, R. 1 202
- Widow—Maintenance — Fixing quantum— Income of family as on which date relevant (FB) 159
- Widow—Nature of estate — (Madras Local Boards Act (14 of 1920), Rules 10 and 5 of Provident Funds Rules framed under Act) — (Provident Funds Act (1925), S. 2 (e) ) 508
- Widow—Alienation—Gift by widow of part of estate — Subsequent surrender of entire estate in favour of reversioner — Reversioner has right to recover possession from donee 550
- Widow — Surrender — Provision for maintenance and gift to her relations 551
- Widow's estate — Alienation — Excess of authority 238
- Hindu Married Women's Right to Separate Residence and Maintenance Act (19 of 1946), Preamble—Interpretation of the Act 712f
- S. 2—Proviso—Burden is on husband defendant to show that there is decree for restitution of conjugal rights and that the plaintiff wife failed to comply with it without sufficient cause 402b
- S. 2—Quantum of maintenance 402c
- S. 2 (2) — Habitual cruelty of first wife towards second wife 712e
- S. 2 (4)—'Marries again'—Effect 712c
- † — S. 2 (4)—Applicability to marriages prior to Act — A. I. R. 1950 Mad 321, Dissented (Obiter) 712d
- S. 2 (7)—Justifiable cause—Meaning 712a
- Hindu Widow's Remarriage Act (15 of 1856), Ss. 2, 5—Scope of 977a

Hindu Widow's Remarriage Act (contd.)

- S. 5—See also ibid, S. 2 977a
- S. 5—Compromise decree settling claims of widow and husband's heir—Effect of remarriage — Rules of construing compromise decree—(Deed — Construction—Compromise decree) 977b
- Hindu Women's Right to Property Act (18 of 1937), S. 3 — See also Madras Hindu Women's Rights to Property (Extension to Agricultural Land) Act (26 of 1947) 176a
- S. 3—Separate property—Property acquired by father at partition between him and his sons is his separate property and on his death it passes to his widow 22a
- S. 3 (before its amendment by Madras Act (26 of 1947) — Agricultural land — Leases and mortgages of—Widow cannot claim share in it— 1951.1 M L J 364, OVERRULED 176b

HOUSES AND RENTS*Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (15 of 1946), S. 2 (1)—"Building", what is 650b

- Ss. 2 (4) and 7—Ejectment suit brought by Landlord against tenant decreed — Sub-tenant, party to suit, cannot plead protection of his status under Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act — (T. P. Act (1882), Ss. 111 and 115) 356
- Ss. 2 (4) and 7 — 'Tenant'—Tenant holding over—Liability to eviction under decree for possession—Liability for mesne profits—(T. P. Act, S. 116)—(Civil P. C., O. 20, R. 12) 473
- Ss. 5 and 6 — Agreement to pay enhanced rent 705
- S. 6—See ibid, S. 5 705
- S. 7—See also ibid, S. 2 (4) 356; 473
- S. 7 — Jurisdiction of Civil Court to entertain suit for eviction 650a
- S. 7 (2) (i) — Rent due, meaning of — Arrangement between landlord and tenant — Effect 173
- Ss. 7 (3A), 9 and 12B (as amended by Madras Act, 8 of 1951) — Power of executing Court to consider whether order of eviction is executable in view of S. 7 (3A) — Powers of High Court in revision under S. 12B 378a
- Ss. 7 (3A) and 20 (as amended by Madras Act (8 of 1951)—Tenant engaged in employment notified by State Government—Order for eviction passed by Rent Controller against tenant—Execution application filed—Pending execution Act 8 of 1951 coming into force — Tenant held was entitled to benefit of S. 7 (3A) 378b
- S. 9—See ibid, S. 7 (3A) 378a
- S. 12B — See ibid, S. 7 (3A) 378a
- S. 20—See ibid, S. 7 (3A) 378b
- Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (25 of 1949), S. 3 — "Within a week"— (Words and phrases—'Within a week') 602
- Ss. 3 (1) (a), (3) and (4) and 7 (3) (a) and (c) (as amended by Madras Act 8 of 1951)

Houses and Rents — Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (contd.)

—Power of authorised officer to requisition building against landlord's will 252a

—S. 3 (1) (a) and (8) (as amended by Madras Act 8 of 1951) — Tenant in possession in contravention of S. 3 (1) (a)—Eviction under S. 3 (8) 257a

—S. 3 (3) (as amended by Mad. Act 8 of 1951)—See Constitution of India Art. 19 (1) (f) 252b

—S. 3 (8) (as amended by Madras Act, 8 of 1951)—Section does not infringe Art. 19 (1) (f) of Constitution—(Constitution of India, Arts. 19 (1) (f) and 31 (2) ) 257b

—S. 3 (8) (as amended by Madras Act, 8 of 1951) — Tenant's possession under void lease—Right to compensate — (Constitution of India, Art. 31 (2) ) 257c

—S. 3 (8) (as amended by Madras Act, 8 of 1951)—Section does not offend Art. 20 of Constitution—(Constitution of India, Art. 20) 257d

—S. 3 (8) (a) (as amended by Madras Act, 8 of 1951), and Explanation — Retrospective operation 257e

—Ss. 7 and 2 (4)—Decree in ejectment suit—Execution — Sub-tenant in occupation cannot obstruct possession — "Tenant" does not mean 'sub-tenant'—Amendment to S. 2 (3) by Act 8 of 1951 does not affect landlord 414

—S. 7 (2), Proviso and S. 20 — Controller advising eviction for non-payment of rent — Appellate Court can condone the default 268

—S. 7 (2) (a) Proviso (as amended by Act 8 of 1951) — Decree for eviction — Competency of objection taken in executing Court 857

—S. 7 (3) (a)—See ibid, S. 3 (1) (a) 252a

—S. 9 (as amended by Act 8 of 1951)—Suits under — Procedure to be followed—(Civil P. C. (1908), O. 19, R. 1) 924b

—S. 10 — Grounds taken but not pressed—Application dismissed — Final adjudication — (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 11) 208

—S. 12 (b) (as amended by Act 8 of 1951) — Another remedy by way of suit — (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 115) 924a

—S. 12B

See (1) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 141 236b

(2) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 151 236a

—S. 13 — Order under is not a judicial act—(Constitution of India, Art. 226) 351b

—S. 13 — House in occupation of tenant—Government exempting house from operation of Act under S. 13—No fundamental right of lessee is violated — It cannot be said that S. 13 of the Act imposes unreasonable restrictions on the right of the lessee to use the premises as a lessee—(Constitution of India, Arts. 14 and 19) 351c

Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Amendment Act (8 of 1951), S. 3 — Objection

Houses and Rents—Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Amendment Act (contd.)

to jurisdiction — Duty of Accommodation Controller 390

—

Income-tax Act (11 of 1922), S. 2 (1)—Agricultural income—Income from sale of milk of cows fed on agricultural lands 223

—S. 2 (4)—Adventure or concern in the nature of trade—Test—Isolated transaction—Intention to resell with profit—Proof 166a

—Ss. 2 (4) and 10—Business — Purchase of land and sale after long interval 343b

—S. 2 (6B) — See ibid, S. 25A 315a

—Ss. 4 (1) (a) and 42 (1) and (3) — Non-resident company doing business through Agent in British India — Cheques drawn on banks in British India and received in British India—Though sent for encashment outside British India, amount ultimately coming into British India—Profits held received, accrued and arose in British India—S. 42 (3) held applied 408

—S. 4A (a) (ii) — "Maintains or has maintained for him a dwelling place" — Expression explained 85

—S. 5 (8) — No inconsistency with Art. 14—(Constitution of India, Art. 14) 716a

—S. 10—See also ibid, S. 2 (4) 343b

—S. 10—Accretion—Capital asset—Utilisation of stock-in-trade 374

—S. 10 (2) (i) and (XV)—Lessee of salt pans undertaking to spend money for constructing railway siding—No obligation cast on him to effect that improvement—Expenditure held, was neither rent nor premium nor debitable to revenue, but was capital expenditure — (Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 105) 632a

—S. 10 (2) (i) and (XV)—Lessee of salt pans expending money in bringing into existence new pans for getting more income — Expenditure is neither rent nor revenue expenditure—(Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 105) 632b

—S. 10 (2) (XV) — Sum paid held was not admissible expenditure under S. 10 (2) (XV) 632c

—S. 10 (2) (XV) — Capital and Revenue expenditure (FB) 900

—S. 13—Commercial accountancy—Valuation of opening stock and closing stock in a year—Method of 20

—S. 13 — Scope — Method of accounting—Determination of 166c

—S. 16—Hindu undivided family—Father and son entering into Managing Agency agreement with a stranger company — Subsequent partnership between father and son with effect from date of Managing Agency agreement — Their income from Managing Agency cannot be included in total income of joint family assessee—(Companies Act, S. 2, Cl. 9 (a) ) 209

—S. 23 — Income-tax Officer is not bound to disclose materials on which he finally makes

Income-tax Act (contd.)

- assessment—Assessee aggrieved by assessment has his remedy by way of appeal to several tribunals —(Constitution of India, Art. 14) 716b
- Ss. 24, 34—Scope of 340a
- S. 24 (1) and (2) — “Set off against his income, profits or gains” — Meaning of — Share income from unregistered firm cannot be set off against loss sustained in speculation business 358
- S. 24 (2), (3)—Scope of 340b
- Ss. 25A, 26A and 2 (6-B)—Hindu undivided family—Partition—Three brothers one of whom minor — Unequivocal intention to separate and actual division of movable property — Parties entering into partnership deed under which joint family cloth business was agreed to be continued as joint—Minor represented by guardian — Joint family business ceases to be family property—Partnership valid for purposes of registration under S. 26A—Partnership Act (1932), Ss. 4, 30 315a
- S. 25A — Hindu undivided family — Joint family business—Partition of—What constitutes —Partition under Hindu Law and one recognised under S. 25A—Distinction—(Hindu Law—Joint family—Partition) 315b
- S. 26A—See also ibid, S. 25A 315a
- S. 26A—Deed of family arrangement—Deed proceeding on assumption that all parties became co-owners—Appointment of common manager for fixed period—Choice to co-owners to divide at the end of period in accordance with shares fixed—Deed held was not partnership deed 336a
- S. 26A—Deed of partnership signed by minor as major—Minor may be treated as having been admitted to benefits of partnership—Partnership can be registered 336b
- S. 31 (3) — Powers of Appellate Assistant Commissioner 343a
- S. 33 (4)—Power to remand 343c
- S. 34 — See ibid, S. 24 340a
- S. 42 (1) and (3) — See ibid, S. 4 (1) (a) 408
- S. 66 (1)—Reference under—Jurisdiction of High Court—Nature of 166b
- S. 66 (1)—Evidence of partnership 438a
- S. 66 (1)—Jurisdiction of High Court 438b
- Industrial Disputes—Illegal lock-out or unfair labour practice — Jurisdiction of Tribunal to determine — Decision that closure of industry amounted to unfair labour practice—Writ of certiorari cannot be issued — (Constitution of India, Art. 226) 30
- Wages—Basic wages—Fixation of—Matters to be taken into account—Capacity of particular industry to pay, relevancy of 342
- Industrial Disputes Act (14 of 1947)—Preamble —Act is not unconstitutional — (Constitution of India, Art. 19 (1) (g) and Art. 19 (6) ) 102a
- Preamble — Writ of certiorari against Tri-

Industrial Disputes Act (contd.)

- bunal—Maintainability — (Constitution of India, Art. 226) 102b
- †—Ss. 2 (k) and 10 — Closing down business —Not an industrial dispute 98b
- Ss. 7 and 36 (4) (as amended by Industrial Disputes (Appellate Tribunal) Act (1950)) — Classification in S. 36 (4)—(Constitution of India, Art. 14) 447b
- S. 10
- See (1) ibid, S. 2 (k) 98b
- (2) Constitution of India, Art. 19 (1) (g) 98a
- S. 36 (4) — See also ibid, S. 7 447b
- S. 36 (4) (as amended by Industrial Disputes (Appellate Tribunal) Act (1950)) — Lawyer's right to practise before Tribunal—(Bar Council's Act (1926), Ss. 9 (1) and 14 (1) )— (Constitution of India, Art. 19 (1) (g) 447a
- †—S. 36 (4) (as amended by Industrial Disputes (Appellate Tribunal) Act (1950)) — Constitutional validity — (Constitution of India, Art. 14) 447c
- Industrial Disputes (Appellate Tribunal) Act (48 of 1950)
- See (1) Industrial Disputes Act (1947), S. 7 447b
- (2) Industrial Disputes Act (1947), S. 36 (4) 447c
- International Law (Private) — Statute of one country imposing tax on non-resident foreigner in respect of profits earned in transactions taking place within its territorial limits — Statute cannot be held to be inconsistent with rule of international law 86a
- Arbitrator or Court can record admission of title and incorporate it in award or decree but cannot decide title to foreign property — (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 16) — (Arbitration Act (1940), Ss. 21 and 23) 492c
- Interpretation of Statutes — See also Municipalities — Madras Town Planning Act (17 of 1920), S. 24 605
- Duty of Court 174b
- Court will not fill in lacuna when language is clear 214b
- Illustrations to section — Illustrations to a section are valuable guides in ascertaining the meaning of a section 380c
- Principle in arriving at real meaning of statute stated in (1584) 76 ER 637, reiterated (FB) 458a
- Penal Laws—Over-subtling of law for protection of corrupt officials and not in furtherance of justice deprecated 481c
- Illustrations—(Civil P. C. (1908), Preamble) (FB) 637b
- Preamble—Key to statute 650c
- Words having more than one meaning 650d
- Intention of legislature—(Civil P. C. 1908), Pre) 712b

Interpretation of Statutes (contd.)

—Invalidity of Statute as being repugnant to the Constitution—Extent of invalidity—(Constitution of India, Art. 13) — Civil P. C. (1908), Preamble) 729a

Land Acquisition Act (1 of 1894), Ss. 4, 6 —

Public purpose—Acquisition for irrigation 537

—Ss. 9, 25 (2) — Failure to make claim — Effect 943a

—S. 23—Market value — Potential value for building purposes 943b

—S. 23 (1)—See Defence of India Act (1939), S. 19 867a

—S. 23 (2)—See Defence of India Act (1939), S. 19 867a

—S. 25 (2)—See ibid, S. 9 943a

—Ss. 30, 31 and 32 — Dispute as to right to payment of compensation — Necessity to refer parties to suit—Power of Court to decide dispute 28a

—S. 31—See ibid, S. 30 28a

—S. 32

See also (1) ibid, S. 30 28a

(2) Succession Act (1925), S. 214(1) 28c

—S. 32—Applicability—Case of Hindu widow 28b

Laws Local Extent Act (15 of 1874), S. 4 —

See Madras District Police Act (24 of 1859), S. 47 507a

Letters Patent (Madras), Cls. 13 and 15 —

Judgment 926

—Cl. 15

See also (1) ibid, Cl. 13 926

(2) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 115 : 395

†* — Cl. 15 — Appeal by person not party to suit—(Civil P. C. (1908), Ss. 96 and 104) : 485

—Cl. 15 — Order adding party to suit—Judgment 816a

—Cl. 15 — Orders which are not judgments 841

Limitation Act (9 of 1908), S. 5 — See also

Arbitration Act (1940), S. 30 561

—S. 5 — Provincial Insolvency Act (1920), Ss. 75 and 78 — Third party aggrieved by order of adjudication — Court should consider whether case had been made out for application of S. 5, Limitation Act 465b

—S. 5 — Applicability — Suit under S. 14 of Madras Hereditary Village Offices Act—S. 5 has no application for excusing delay in filing suit — (Madras Hereditary Village Offices Act (3 of 1895), S. 14) 972a

—S. 6—See ibid, S. 4 537

—S. 10 and Art. 144—Limitation for suit for recovery of trust property claimed by adverse possession 842b

—S. 10 and Art. 144 — Adverse possession of temple property by archakas 842c

—S. 12—Appeal under S. 75 of Provincial Insolvency Act—Provincial Insolvency Act (1920),

Limitation Act (contd.)

Ss. 75 and 78—S. 12, Limitation Act applies

465a

—Ss. 19, 20—Insolvency petition filed against person—His right to acknowledge debt 369b

—S. 19—Balance sheet—(Contract Act, S. 20) 433b

—S. 20—See ibid, S. 19 369b

—S. 22—Misdescription 838b

—S. 24, Art. 90 — Suit for damages against brokers due to negligence — Starting point — (9 Ind Cas 54 (Mad.), Dissented) 726b

—Arts. 12, 95, 142 and 144—Suit by trustee for possession of trust property sold in execution of decree improperly obtained against trust property by fraud of the then trustee for a debt incurred for purposes found to be not for legal necessity, can be brought within 12 years of sale without asking for setting aside the sale — Arts. 12 and 95 have no application 624d

—Art. 12 (b) — See Tenancy Laws — Madras Estates Land Act (1 of 1908), S. 107 490c

—Arts. 16, 62—Applicability 905b

—Arts. 36 and 116—Independent of contract 480

—Art. 36 — Scope 694a

—Art. 44—Unauthorised alienation by lawful guardian—Setting aside of, within time prescribed by Article 230b

—Art. 62—See ibid, Art. 16 905b

—Arts. 64 and 85 — Scope — Mere credit entries in account books of debtor are not sufficient to constitute contract to pay barred debts 433c —Art. 83 — Suit by transferor against transferee of immovable property— (T. P. Act (1882), S. 58) 603

—Art. 85—See ibid, Art. 64 433c

—Art. 90

See also (1) ibid, S. 24 726b

(2) Trusts Act (1882), S. 88 694c

—Art. 90—Neglect and misconduct 694b

—Arts. 91, 142, 144— Scope and applicability to void documents—(Contract Act (1872), S. 19) 611

—Art. 95—See ibid, Art. 12 624d

—Art. 116—See also ibid, Art. 36 480

—Art. 116 — Suit for damages for breach of covenant of title and quiet possession — Limitation 529a

—Art. 102—Meaning of wages 433d

—Art. 120—See Trusts Act (1882), S. 88 694c

—Arts. 142 and 144

See also (1) ibid, Art. 12 624d

(2) ibid, Art. 91 611

—Arts. 142 and 144 — Trustee cannot be in adverse possession of trust property 750c

—Art. 144—See also ibid, S. 10 842 b; c

† — Art. 144— Adverse possession— Possession of illegitimate son of Sudra — (Hindu Law — Joint family) 25

—Art. 144— Adverse possession of property of temple 842a

- Limitation Act (contd.)
 — Art. 148 — See Transfer of Property Act (1832), S. 60 366b — Art. 152 — Application to set aside ex parte decree — Conditional order made — Appeal from order — Limitation — (Civil P. C. (1908), O. 9, R. 13 360
 — Art. 158 — See Arbitration Act (1940), S. 30 561
 — Art. 159 — See also Civil P. C. (1908), O. 37, R. 2 767
 — Art. 159 — Extension of period fixed — Civil P. C. (1908), O. 37, R. 3 909 — Art. 181 — See ibid, S. 182 213
 — Arts. 182 and 181 — Decree scaled down — Execution application — Limitation — (Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act (4 of 1938), Ss. 19 and 20) 213
 † — Art. 185 (5) — Application not accompanied by succession certificate 855
- Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act (4 of 1938)
 See under DEBT LAWS
- Madras Agriculturists' Relief (Amendment) Act (23 of 1948)
 See under DEBT LAWS
- Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (15 of 1946)
 See under HOUSES AND RENTS
- Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (25 of 1949)
 See under HOUSES AND RENTS
- Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Amendment Act (8 of 1951)
 See under HOUSES AND RENTS
- Madras City Municipal Act (4 of 1919)
 See under MUNICIPALITIES
- Madras City Police Act (3 of 1888), S. 7 — See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 18 953b
- Madras Co-operative Societies Act (6 of 1932), S. 51 (6) (a) — "Final" — Meaning of — High Court's power to interfere 362a — Rules under Act, R. 27 (a) — By-laws of Triplicane Urban Co-operative Society — Validity 542a — Rules under — Rule 27 (c) — Rule does not confer arbitrary power on Registrar 542b — Rules under — Rule 27 (c) — Near relations — Persons marrying sisters 542c
- Madras District Municipalities Act (5 of 1920)
 See under MUNICIPALITIES
- Madras District Police Act (24 of 1859), S. 44
 — See also ibid, S. 53 1002a
 — S. 44 — Offence under — Prosecution for — Sanction of District Superintendent of Police is not necessary 1002c
 — S. 47 — Applicability to City of Madras — (Laws Local Extent Act (15 of 1874), S. 4) 507a
- Madras District Police Act (contd.)
 — S. 47 — Charge — Meaning — (Penal Code (1860), S. 211) — (Words and Phrases — Charge) 507b
 — S. 50 — Section applies only to a case of departmental enquiry and not to an offence before a Court 1002d
 — S. 51 — Section does not apply to cases of dismissals made departmentally by the police — Dismissed person can be tried and convicted for an offence under the Act 1002b
 — Ss. 53 and 44 — Complaint in respect of offence under S. 44 — Bar of limitation under S. 53 does not apply 1002a
- Madras Education Rules, R. 92 — Appendix 17 (A) — See Constitution of India, Art. 14 21a
- Madras (Enlargement of Area and Alteration of Boundaries) Order (1948), Para. 1 — Validity of the Order — (Government of India Act (1935), Ss. 290, 5) 647b — Para. 4 — See Municipalities — Madras District Municipalities Act (5 of 1920), S. 4 (1) 647 a; c
- Madras Estates (Abolition and Conversion into Ryotwari) Act (26 of 1948)
 See under TENANCY LAWS
- Madras Estates Land Act (1 of 1908), See under Tenancy Laws
- Madras Estates Land (Reduction of Rent) Act (30 of 1947), See under Tenancy Laws
- Madras Estates Land (Reduction of Rent) Second Amendment Act (39 of 1951), See under Tenancy Laws
- Madras Gaming Act (3 of 1930), S. 3 — See Public Gambling Act (1867), S. 4 243a
 — S. 5 — See Public Gambling Act (1867), S. 5 243b
 — S. 9 — See Public Gambling Act (1867), S. 4 243a
- Madras General Clauses Act (1 of 1891), S. 8
 — See Debt Laws — Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act (4 of 1938), S. 19 810
- Madras General Sales Tax Act (9 of 1939), See under Sales Tax
- Madras Hereditary Village Offices Act (3 of 1895), S. 7 (1) — See Madras Subordinate Collectors and Revenue Malversation Amendment Regulation (7 of 1828), Cl. 3 (3) 1005
 — S. 13 — "Emoluments" include also lands 912a
 — Ss. 13 and 21 — Suit for possession of service 'inam' land — Maintainability in Civil Court — (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9) 912b — Ss. 13 and 21 — Suits not cognizable by civil Courts 912c
 — S. 14
 See (1) Constitution of India Art. 227 972b,c (2) Limitation Act (1908), S. 5 972a
 — S. 21 — See ibid, S. 13 912b,c

(Madras) High Court (Appellate Side) Rules

See under High Court Rules and Orders

Madras High Court Criminal Rules of Practice

See under HIGH COURT RULES AND ORDERS

Madras Hindu (Bigamy Prevention and Divorce) Act (6 of 1949), S. 5—Appeal—“Any such petition” in sub-s. (5)—Interpretation of— (Civil P. C., O. 43 R. 1; O. 9 R. 13) 1003

Madras Hindu Religious and Charitable Endowments Act (19 of 1951), S. 6 (6) (i)—See ibid, S. 103 (j) 214c

—S. 38—See Constitution of India, Art. 26 149

—Ss. 62 and 87 — Civil suit under S. 62 — Power of Civil Court to restrain by injunction proceedings under S. 87 — Jurisdiction of magistrate to pass order under S. 87 during pendency of suit — Interference in revision — (Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 439) 219

—S. 87—See Madras Hindu Religious Endowments Act (2 of 1927 as amended by Act 10 of 1946), S. 78 615a

—S. 103 (j)—Does not deal with forum 214a

—S. 103 (j), Explanation and S. 6 (6) (i)—Proceedings under old Act, 2 of 1927 pending in mofussil in District Court — Coming into force of the new Act of 1951—Proceedings are automatically transferred to sub-Court 214c

—S. 103 (k)—Does not refer to forum 214f

—S. 106—Scope 214d

—S. 106 — Whether offends against rule of delegated legislature—(Quaere) 214e

Madras Hindu Religious Endowments Act (2 of 1927), S. 9 (11A) — Specific endowment —There must be divesting of ownership 407

—S. 9 (12)—Temple—Evidence of dedication 950

—S. 78—Lands in possession of archakas : 604

—S. 78 (as amended by Act 10 of 1946) — Application under — Only summary inquiry is intended and no elaborate inquiry into question of title—(Madras Hindu Religious and Charitable Endowments Act (19 of 1951), S. 87) 615a

—S. 78, (as amended by Act 10 of 1946) — Petition under — Valid certificate issued in prescribed manner should be produced along with petition 615b

Madras Hindu Women's Rights to Property (Extension to Agricultural Land) Act (26 of 1947) —Widow not entitled to share in agricultural land when the Act had not come into force at the time of her husband's death — (Hindu Women's Right to Property Act (1937), S. 3): 176a

Madras Impartible Estates Act (2 of 1904), S. 9—See Tenancy Laws—Madras Estates (Abolition and Conversion into Ryotwari) Act (26 of 1948), S. 3 185

Madras Local Boards Act (14 of 1920), S. 45A (1)—Order under—Reasons for—Necessity 175

—S. 57 — See Madras Village Panchayat Act (10 of 1950), S. 19 (1) 560

Madras Local Boards Act (contd.)

—R. 5—See Hindu Law—Widow 508

—R. 10—See Hindu Law—Widow 508

Madras Maintenance of Public Order Act (1 of 1947), See under Public Safety

Madras Merged States (Laws) Act (35 of 1949), S. 6 —See Debt Laws — Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act (4 of 1938), S. 19 810

Madras Police Standing Order No. 583 —See Evidence Act (1872), S. 24 74a

Madras Prevention of Adulteration Act (3 of 1918), S. 5—Sale—Sanitary Inspector purchasing some butter for purpose of analysis — It is sale 862a

—S. 5 (b) and (d) — Accused working in shop on behalf of his father 697

—S. 5 (1) (a) and (b) read with Rr. 29 and 28D — Sanitary Inspector purchasing small quantity of flour for analysis — Price paid and acknowledged by regular receipts—There is sale 241

—S. 5 (1) (d)—See ibid, S. 6 (3) 862b

—Ss. 6 (3) and 5 (1) (d)—Employer's liability 862b

Madras Preservation of Private Forests Act (27 of 1949), S. 5—Scope—Offences not falling within Chap. XVII of Penal Code require no stay of proceedings — (Cattle Trespass Act (1871), S. 24) 999

Madras Prohibition Act (10 of 1937), S. 4 (e) —See also Evidence Act (1872), S. 114 1004b

—S. 4 (e)—Sentence 1004c

—S. 4 (i) (a) — “Possession” — Its meaning and implication — (Evidence Act (1872), S. 114, ill. (a) )—(Words and Phrases) 534

—S. 4A — See also Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 562 (1) 877a, c

—S. 4A—Sentence—Considerations for 877d

—S. 4A—Sentence—Consideration of — (Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 32) 877f

Madras Restriction of Habitual Offenders Act (6 of 1948) —Validity — (Constitution of India, Art. 20 (2) ) 664e

—Ss. 2 (4) and 16—Validity — (Constitution of India, Art. 14) 664b

—Ss. 5, 6 and 16 (1)—Validity — (Constitution of India, Art. 19 (1) (d), (5)) 664c

—S. 6—See ibid, S. 5 664c

—S. 16—See also ibid, S. 2 (4) 664b

—S. 16—Scope 664a

—S. 16 (1)—See ibid, S. 5 664c

Madras Revenue Boards Standing Order, No. 15—See Grant 235

Madras Shops and Establishments Act (36 of 1947), S. 2 (6)—Out-agency is establishment 376a

—S. 41—Section is not ultra vires the Constitution of India, Art. 14—Equality before law — Discrimination—(Constitution of India, Art. 14) 326

Madras Shops and Establishments Act (contd.)

—S. 51—Scope of S. 51—Decision of Labour Commissioner 376b

Madras Subordinate Collectors and Revenue Malversation (Amendment) Regulation (7 of 1828), Cl. 3 (3)

—Order dismissing village Officer —Revision — (Madras Hereditary Village offices Act (3 of 1895), S. 7 (1) 1005

Madras Survey and Boundaries Act (8 of 1923), Ss. 9 (ii), 13 and 14

—Absence of notice under S. 9 (ii)—Effect 391a

—S. 13—See ibid, S. 9 (ii) 391a

—S. 14—See ibid, S. 9 (ii) 391a

Madras Town Planning Act (7 of 1920)

—See under MUNICIPALITIES

Madras Turnover and Assessment Rules (1939)

—See under SALES TAX

Madras Village Courts Act, 1888 (1 of 1889), S. 76

—Jurisdiction to compel one accused to produce another—(Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 343) 388

Madras Village Panchayats Act (10 of 1950), Ss. 19 (1), 131; Sch. 3, R. 4 (1)

—Jurisdiction to entertain petition under S. 19 (1) — (Madras Local Boards Act (14 of 1920), S. 57) 560

—Ss. 47 (1) and 131 — Removal of President —Legality 593

—S. 131

See (1) ibid, S. 19 (1) 560

(2) ibid, S. 47 (1) 593

—Sch. 3, R. 4 (1)—See ibid, S. 19 (1) 560

Malabar Law—Pre-emption—Price

—Karnavan—Duties of—Delegation of duty to perform Pooja and Sradhas 910

Mapilla Marumakathayam Act (17 of 1939)

—See Marumakathayam Law 425

Marumakathayam Law — Muslim Personal Law (Shariat) Application Act (1937) — Mapilla Marumakathayam Act (17 of 1939) — Effects of,

on rights and interests of members of Muslim tarwad and his heirs 425

Master and Servant—See Tort—Negligence

981d

—Vicarious liability—See Essential Supplies

(Temporary Powers) Act (1946), S. 7 (1) 156

Motor Vehicles Act (4 of 1939)—Validity—See

Constitution of India, Art. 19 (1) (g) (6) 279a

—S. 42 — See Constitution of India, Art. 19

(1) (g), (6) 279b

—S. 43A—See Constitution of India, Art. 19

(1) (g), (6) 279c

—S. 44 — See also Constitution of India, Art.

226 709c

—Ss. 44 and 57 — Grant of permit—Considerations for 709d

†—S. 44 (2)—Person having financial interest

709a

—S. 47—See also Constitution of India, Art. 19

279j

—Ss. 47 and 48—Power to take into account condition of road — Constitution of India, Art.

19 (6) 279d

Motor Vehicles Act (contd.)

—Ss. 47 and 48 — Consideration of nature of locality—Constitution of India, Art. 19 (6): 279e

—Ss. 47 and 48 — Consideration of adequacy of existing services — Constitution of India, Art. 19 (6) 279f

—Ss. 47 and 48—Consideration of running of unremunerative services by existing operators —

Constitution of India, Art. 19 (6) 279g

—Ss. 47 and 48 — Refusal to grant permit at all—Constitution of India, Art. 19 (6) 279h

—Ss. 47 and 48 — Principles to be applied in granting or refusing permits — Uniformity —

Constitution of India, Art. 14 279i

—S. 48

See (1) ibid, S. 47 279d, e, f, g, h, i

(2) Constitution of India, Art. 19 279k

—S. 57—See ibid, S. 44 709d

—S. 57 (7)—Reasons—Nature of 59b

—S. 64 — See also Constitution of India,

Art. 226 1a

—S. 64 — Scope — Right of appeal under

Cls. (a) and (f) 1b

—S. 64—Grounds that can be urged and considered by appellate authority 1c

—Ss. 64 and 68—Rules under—R. 208—Rule does not confer power of appeal by implication

321c

—Ss. 64 and 68—Rules under—R. 208 (b)—

Whether right of appeal exists has to be determined by provisions of S. 64—Rule 208 (b) does not confer right of appeal 321d

—S. 64 (a)—Applicability — Grievance accru-ing or arising subsequent to grant of permit—

Appeal 321a

†—S. 64 (b) — Refusal to vary conditions—

Appeal 321b

—S. 64A—See Constitution of India, Art. 19

279l

—S. 68

See ibid, S. 64 321c, d

Muhammadan Law—Gift — Gift by father to his sons—Eldest son alienating properties donated to him—Death of father—Suit by eldest son for partition of father's estate—Maintainability: 161d —Succession — Relinquishment of future inheritance — Estoppel — (Evidence Act (1872),

S. 115: I. L. R. 1936 All. 834, Diss. 161b

—Wakf — Alienation — Sanction of Kazi or

Court can be given retrospectively 143a

—Wakf — Mutawalli — Change in wakf property i. e. alter investment—Sanction by Court

143b

—Wakf — Mutawalli when can appoint his successor 958d

—Wakf—Mutawalli—Removal of 958e

—Wakf—Mutawalli—Non-Muslim and women

958f

—Wakf—Title to wakf properties 958g

MUNICIPALITIES

- Madras City Municipal Act (4 of 1919), S. 138
 —See Municipalities — Madras Town Planning Act (17 of 1920), S. 24 605
 —S. 279 — Club providing food to members and guests—No strangers allowed—Club held did not require license 357
 —Ss. 287, 349 (13), 357—Licence fee or tax —Essential difference 532
 —S. 349 (13)—See ibid, S. 287 532
 —S. 357—See ibid, S. 287 532
 —S. 387—See Municipalities — Madras Town Planning Act (17 of 1920), S. 24 605
 —Sch. IV, Part VI, R. 20 — See Municipalities—Madras Town Planning Act (17 of 1920), S. 24 605
 —Sch. IV, Part VI, R. 21 — See Municipalities—Madras Town Planning Act (17 of 1920), S. 24 605
Madras District Municipalities Act (5 of 1920)—Election — Election Rules framed under Act, R. 27A (1) (a) 932a —Election—Election Rules framed under Act, R. 27A (1) (a) 932b
 —R. 10 of Election Rules framed under Act—(Constitution of India (1950), Art. 226) 969b
 —Ss. 4 (1), 78 (3) and 80—Levy of property tax in Frenchpet of Masulipatam—(Madras (Enlargement of Area and Alteration of Boundaries) Order (1948), Para. 4) 647a
 —S. 4 (1)—Application to Frenchpet in Masulipatam — (Madras (Enlargement of Area and Alteration of Boundaries) Order (1948), Para. 4) 647c
 —S. 7 — See Constitution of India (1950), Art. 226 510c, d, e
 —S. 7 (3)—See ibid, S. 43 392b
 —Ss. 12 (7) and 303 (2) (b) — Election of Vice-Chairman 969a
 —S. 43—See also Constitution of India (1950), Art. 226 510c, d, e —Ss. 43 and 7 (3)—Allotment of seats reserved under S. 7 (3)—Duty of Government to consult municipality — Certiorari against order of allotment—(Constitution of India (1950), Art. 226) 392b
 —S. 43 — Division into wards — Duty of Government 510a
 —S. 43—Division into wards — Mala fides—(Constitution of India (1950), Art. 226) 510b
 —S. 78 (3)—See ibid, S. 4 (1) 647a
 —S. 80—See ibid, S. 4 (1) 647a
 —S. 131, Explanation — Domestic consumption and use—Test 864a
 —S. 131, Explanation — Domestic consumption and use—Water held was utilised for domestic use and not as part of stock-in-trade of the business 864b
 —S. 303 (2) (b)—See ibid, S. 12 (7) 969a
 —S. 351B—See Constitution of India (1950), Art. 226 392c

Municipalities—Madras District Municipalities Act (contd.)

- S. 354 and Sch. 4 — Right of suit — (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9) 689a
 —S. 354—Compliance with 689b
 —Sch. 4—See ibid, S. 354 689a
Madras Town Planning Act (7 of 1920), S. 14—Notification under S. 14 (5) is conclusive of fact that proper notices were given and published 348
 —Ss. 17 and 20—Scope of 628a
 —S. 20—See ibid, S. 17 628a
 —Ss. 24, 25 (2)—Madras City Municipal Act (4 of 1919), Ss. 138, 387, Sch. IV, Part VI, Rr. 20, 21 — Recovery of betterment tax for 8 years by distress—Validity — (Interpretation of Statutes)—(Civil P. C. (1908), Pre.) 605
 —S. 25 (2)—See ibid, S. 24 605

Muslim Personal Law (Shariat) Application Act (26 of 1937) — See also Marumakathayam Law

- S. 2 (as amended by Mad. Act 18 of 1949) —See Civil P. C. (1908), O. 41, R. 33 445

Negotiable Instruments Act (26 of 1881), S. 13 — See Public Debts (Central Government) Act (18 of 1944), S. 19

- S. 44 — Promissory note—Failure of consideration — (Debt Laws — Madras Agriculturists Relief Act (4 of 1938), S. 7) 975
 —S. 48—Endorsement and delivery 840b
 —S. 51—Endorsement by payees on different dates 840a

Oaths Act (10 of 1873) — See also Civil P. C. (1908), O. 3, R. 4

- S. 8—Oath affecting third person 708a
 —S. 8—Binding nature of oath 708b
 —S. 11 — See also Civil P. C. (1908), O. 23, R. 3 396b
 —S. 11—Agreement to take oath — Failure to take oath for no fault of either party — Fresh opportunity 396a

Opium Act (1 of 1878), S. 20A (inserted by Mad. Act 32 of 1951)—See Evidence Act (1872), S. 25

- Partition Act (4 of 1893), S. 2 — Applicability —Section applies even after preliminary decree is passed 320

Partnership Act (9 of 1932), S. 4 — See also Income-tax Act (1922), S. 25A

- S. 4 — Agreement may be either express or implied 516a
 —S. 6—Partnership whether rent or not 824
 —S. 30 — See Income-tax Act (1922), S. 25A 315a

Payment of Wages Act (4 of 1936), S. 2 (vi)

- “Wages”—Meaning of—Wages is compensation paid for work done for period less than a month —Factories Act (1948), S. 2 (1) 269f

Penal Code (45 of 1860), S. 5—See Prevention of Corruption Act (1947), S. 5 (1) (c)

Penal Code (contd.)

- S. 40 — See Essential Supplies (Temporary Powers) Act (1946), S. 7 (1) 156
- S. 41 — See Prevention of Corruption Act (1947), S. 5 (1) (c) 137
- S. 52 — No reference to moral element of honesty—(General Clauses Act (1897), S. 3 (22)) 936b
- S. 71 — See Companies Act (1913), S. 76 558b
- Ss. 85, 86 and 300 — Intoxicated person killing another by repeated stab wounds—Requisite knowledge and intention can be presumed — Offence cannot be reduced to one under S. 304—(Evidence Act (1872), S. 14) 827
- S. 86—See ibid, S. 85 827
- S. 99—See also ibid, S. 353 936f
- S. 99—Principle of section 936a
- S. 99—"Colour of office" 936c
- S. 99—"Not strictly justifiable in law": 936d
- S. 161 — See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 238 785c
- S. 193 — See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 476 745
- S. 201
See (1) ibid, S. 300 1006a
(2) ibid, S. 302 1006b
- S. 211—See Madras District Police Act (24 of 1859), S. 47 507b
- S. 268 — Public nuisance — Stagnation of water 242
- S. 292 — "Obscene", meaning of — Determination of obscenity — Non-prosecution of publishers of similar books—Effect 418a
- S. 292—Scope—(Press Objectionable Matter Act (1951), S. 11) 418b
- S. 292—Proof of offence 418c
- S. 300
See also (1) ibid, S. 85 827
(2) ibid, S. 304 579
- Ss. 300, 325 — B rendered unconscious by blow from A—Taking B to be dead A hanging B by rope—Death caused by hanging—Offence not murder 239
- S. 300 — Statement under S. 27, Evidence Act — Production of ornaments if sufficient to charge accused with crime of murder—(Evidence Act (1872), S. 27) 564c
- Ss. 300, 379, 411 and 201—Murder for gain — Separate charge under each section is not necessary—(Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 236) 1006a
- S. 302 — Sentence — Murder — Ordinary penalty is death sentence — Lesser sentence imposed held improper 372a
- Ss. 302, 379, 411 and 201—Murder for gain — Convictions under Ss. 302, 379 or 411 in alternative—Acquittal of charge under S. 201—Appeal — Conviction under S. 302 set aside and under S. 379 maintained 1006b
- Ss. 304, 300 — Attempt to beat man with shoe in street 579
- S. 304A—Rash and negligent driving 774

Penal Code (contd.)

- S. 325—See ibid, S. 300 239
- S. 353—"Prevent or deter" 936e
- Ss. 353 and 99 — Assault on public servant acting in good faith and colour of office 936f
- S. 378 — Removal by accused must be with intent to cause wrongful gain to accused or wrongful loss to another—Burden is on prosecution to show that accused was acting dishonestly — Accused shown to be acting in assertion of a bona fide claim of right—No dishonest intention can be attributed—Test of adequacy of bona fides of claim indicated 516b
- S. 379
See (1) ibid, S. 300 1006a
(2) ibid, S. 302 1006b
- S. 405 — See Public Debts (Central Government) Act (18 of 1944), S. 19 787b
- S. 409 — See Prevention of Corruption Act (1947), S. 5 (1) (c) 137
- S. 411
See (1) ibid, S. 300 1006a
(2) ibid, S. 302 1006b
- S. 497 — "Without the consent or connivance"—(Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101 to 103) 422
- S. 498—Woman leaving her husband of her own accord and living with accused as husband and wife—Accused willing to take her — This is "taking" within meaning of S. 498 333
- S. 504—Insult and provocation 413
- S. 511—Attempt—Preparation and attempt — Distinction 609
- Practice—See Civil P. C. (1908), O. 21, R. 26 876b
- High Court (Madras)—See Civil P. C. (1908), O. 7, R. 10 897
- Precedents — Single Judge is bound to follow ruling of Division Bench 351d
- Presidency Towns Insolvency Act (3 of 1909), S. 11 (b)—Temporary residence of debtor 928
- (as amended by Act 3 of 1950), S. 53 — Attachment 939
- Press Objectionable Matter Act (56 of 1951), S. 11—See Penal Code (1860), S. 292 418b
- Prevention of Corruption Act (2 of 1947), S. 5—See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 238 785c
- S. 5 (1) (c) — Section does not pro tanto repeal S. 409, Penal Code — (Penal Code (1860), Ss. 5, 41 and 409) 137
- S. 6—Sanction—Requirements 785b
- Preventive Detention Act (4 of 1950)
See under PUBLIC SAFETY
- (Private) International Law—See under International Law (Private)
- Provident Funds Act (19 of 1925), S. 2 (e) — See Hindu Law—Widow 508
- Provincial Debts Laws (Temporary Validation) Ordinance (11 of 1945)—See under Debt Laws

Provincial Insolvency Act (5 of 1920), Ss. 9, 40—Petition for re-adjudication — Requirements 375
 —S. 16 — Dismissal of application held was not due to any want of due diligence on A's part but was on merits 993a —Ss. 16 and 19—Application for adjudicating debtor as insolvent — Application dismissed on basis of compromise — Proper procedure is to re-store application under inherent power on petition of another creditor—(Civil P. C. (1908), S. 151) 993c
 —S. 19—See also ibid, S. 16 993c
 —S. 19 (2)—Compliance with 993b
 —S. 37—Alienations before insolvency declared not binding on Official Receiver — Subsequent annulment of adjudication does not improve the position of insolvent or his heirs 620
 —S. 40—See ibid, S. 9 375
 —S. 46—See Companies Act (1913), S. 229 610
 —S. 54 — Date of transfer in compulsorily registered deeds — (Registration Act (1908), Ss. 75 (3), 47) 682a
 —S. 75
     See (1) Limitation Act (1908), S. 5 465b
     (2) Limitation Act (1908), S. 12 : 465c
 —S. 75 (4) — Period of 30 days — Starting point — (Words and Phrases — Date of order) 465a
 —S. 78
     See (1) Limitation Act (1908), S. 5 465b
     (2) Limitation Act (1908), S. 12 465c

Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (9 of 1887), S. 25—Other remedies available — (Civil P. C. (1908), Ss. 24 (4) and 96) 582a
 —S. 25—New pleas 582b
 —S. 27 — See Debt Laws — Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act (4 of 1938), S. 19 908
 —Sch. II, Art. 15—Suit by vendor to recover balance of purchase money 559
 —Sch. II, Art. 41 — Joint and several decree for costs against several judgment-debtors — One of them paying entire decretal amount—Suit for contribution—Suit is cognizable by a Small Cause Court 164

Public Debts (Central Government) Act (18 of 1944), S. 19 — Criminal breach of trust by holder of Govt. security — (Negotiable Instruments Act (1881), S. 13) (Securities Act (1920), S. 5)—(Penal Code (1860), S. 405) 787b

Public Gambling Act (3 of 1867), S. 4 — Madras Gaming Act (3 of 1930), Ss. 3 and 9 — Essentials of S. 9 — Gaming on Sankranti day — Absence of evidence that house was common gaming house—No offence 243a
 —S. 5—Search warrant—Form of — (Madras Gaming Act (3 of 1930), S. 5) 243b
 —S. 5 — Search warrant — Misdescription is immaterial and does not vitiate the warrant 243d

Public Gambling Act (contd.)

—S. 5 — Search under Act is not covered by S. 103, Criminal P. C. — Witnesses not from vicinity and one of them not examined — (Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 103) 243c

PUBLIC SAFETY

Madras Maintenance of Public Order Act (1 of 1947), S. 2A — Proof of knowledge to accused — Newspaper evidence not sufficient — Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 64, 65 780
Preventive Detention Act (4 of 1950), Ss. 3 and 12 — Right of detenu to challenge order on ground of mala fide—Burden of proof — Duty of Government—Malice and 'mala fide' explained—Validity of prior order in question—Fresh order for detention passed before pronouncement of judgment—Omission by Government to inform Court of order reflects on their bona fides — (Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 491) — (Constitution of India (1950), Art. 226) 41a
 —S. 3 — Successive orders passed on same grounds—Legality 41f
 —S. 3 — Judgment declaring detention order invalid—Government's failure to appeal — Bona fides of fresh order of detention 41g
 —S. 3A — Arrest and service of order not simultaneous—Effect 41e
 —S. 12—See ibid, S. 3 41a

Railway Establishment Code, R. 148 — See Railway Services 54a

Railways Act (9 of 1890), S. 56 (2)—Auction sale of unclaimed goods—Obligation of consignor —(Contract Act, S. 160) 217b
 —S. 72—Execution of Risk Notes A and Z—Shortage in transit — Burden of proving misconduct—(Goods Tariff General Rules, R. 15) 514

—S. 80—Forum of suit—Goods consigned on G. I. P. Rly. for South Indian Railway — Suit for compensation 217a

Railway Services — (Safeguarding of National Security) Rules (1949), Rr. 3 and 4 — Non-compliance — (Constitution of India, Arts. 310, 311) — (Railway Establishment Code R. 148) 54a

Registration Act (16 of 1908), S. 17—Will or adoption deed—(Hindu Law—Will) 676a

—Ss. 17 (1) (b) and 49—Instrument creating title — Non-registration — Effect of — Use for collateral purposes—(Evidence Act (1872), S. 91) 366a

—S. 17 (2) (vi)—Compromise decree 836

—S. 17 (3)—Authority to adopt given by will — (General Clauses Act (1897), S. 3 (64) ) — (Succession Act (1925), S. 2 (h) )—(Hindu Law Adoption) 740

†—S. 17 (3) — Authority to adopt — (Hindu Law—Adoption) 755c

—S. 47 — See also Provincial Insolvency Act (1920), S. 54 682a

Registration Act (contd.)

—Ss. 47, 75 (3) — No logical connection between these provisions — Considerations relevant under S. 47 do not apply to S. 75 (3) 682b

—S. 49—See ibid, S. 17 (1) (b) 366a

—S. 75 (3) 682b

See also (1) ibid, S. 47 682b

(2) Provincial Insolvency Act

(1920), S. 54 682a

Sale of Goods Act (3 of 1930), Ss. 4 and 12—

Construction of contract for sale of goods—"Despatch August 1943"—Meaning of 380a

—S. 12—See ibid, S. 4 380a

—S. 16 (2), Proviso — Applicability — Goods not examined at time of sale 817b

—Ss. 42 and 59—Rights of buyer and seller 817a

—S. 59—See also ibid, S. 42 817a

—S. 59—Measure of damages 817c

SALES TAX*Madras General Sales Tax Act (9 of 1939),

Preamble—Object of Act 91b

—Preamble and S. 3 (5) — Validity of Act—

Act is not invalid — (Government of India Act (1935), Sch. VII, List 2, Entry 48) 105c

—Preamble and S. 5 (vi) — Validity of Act and Rules framed thereunder — (Sales Tax —

Madras Turnover and Assessment Rules (1939),

Rr. 4 and 16) — Constitution of India, Art. 265) 105d

—Preamble—Act and Rules framed thereunder do not offend Art. 14 of Constitution—(Constitution of India, Art. 14) — (Sales Tax — Madras

Turnover and Assessment Rules (1939) ) 105e

—S. 2 (b)—"Dealer" — Non-resident assessee

—Assessee held was dealer and liable to sales tax in respect of sales — (Constitution of India, Art.

286) 86b

—Ss. 2 (g-1), 8A, 9, 13 and 15 (h) — Prosecution under S. 13—Burden of proof—No proof that accused is registered dealer—Accused cannot be prosecuted 178

—S. 2 (h)—Extra-territorial operation of Act

—Validity of Act 91a

—S. 2 (h), Explanation 2 (introduced by

Madras General Sales Tax (Amendment) Act,

25 of 1947—Explanation—Construction of 91c

—S. 3

See (1) Constitution of India, Art. 245 (1)

116c

(2) Constitution of India, Art. 286 (1) (b)

116b

—S. 5 (vi)

See (1) ibid, Preamble 105d

(2) Sales Tax — Madras Turnover and Assessment Rules (1939), R. 15

105g

(3) Sales Tax — Madras Turnover and

Assessment Rules (1939), R. 16 (5)

105f

—S. 8—Commission agent 591

Sales Tax — Madras General Sales Tax Act

(contd.)

—S. 8A—See ibid, S. 2 (g-1) 178

—S. 9 178

See (1) ibid, S. 2 (g-1) 178

(2) Constitution of India, Art. 226 10

—S. 11—See Constitution of India, Art. 226 10

—S. 12—See Constitution of India, Art. 226 10

—S. 12A 10, 131

See (1) Constitution of India, Art. 226 105a

(2) Constitution of India, Art. 226 (1) 105a

—S. 12-B—See Constitution of India, Art. 226 10

—S. 12-C—See Constitution of India, Art. 226 10

—S. 12-D—See Constitution of India, Art. 226 10

—S. 13—See ibid, S. 2 (G-1) 178

—S. 15 (b) — See also Constitution of India, 337b

Art. 20 337b

—S. 15 (b) — Tax levied on firm—Non-payment—Firm which is liable to be prosecuted and not partners in their individual capacity 332

—S. 15 (b)—Specification of defaulted tax in the order of conviction 337a

—S. 15 (h)—See ibid, S. 2 (g-1) 178

—S. 16-A — Section is not opposed to natural justice 105b

—S. 16-A — Dealer — Includes Commission

agent also 703

—S. 18—Object and scope 905a

—S. 22—See Constitution of India, Art. 245 (1) 116c

Madras Turnover and Assessment Rules

(1939)—See Sales Tax — Madras General Sales

Tax Act (9 of 1939), Preamble 105e

—R. 4—See Sales Tax—Madras General Sales

Tax Act (9 of 1939), Preamble 105d

—R. 15—Forms prescribed under—Form A.4

—Form does not infringe S. 5 (vi) of Madras

Act 9 of 1939 — (Sales Tax — Madras General Sales Tax Act (9 of 1939), S. 5 (vi) ) 105g

—R. 15 (2) — Rule is not unconstitutional—

'Obiter' 105h

—R. 16 — See Sales Tax—Madras General

Sales Tax Act (9 of 1939), Preamble 105d

—R. 16 (2)—Classification — Repugnancy to Art. 14 of Constitution — (Constitution of India, Art. 14) 105i

—R. 16 (5)—Validity—(Sales Tax — Madras

General Sales Tax Act (9 of 1939), S. 5 (vi) ) 105f

—

Securities Act (10 of 1920), S. 5—See Public

Debts (Central Government) Act (18 of 1944),

S. 19 787b

Specific Relief Act (1 of 1877), S. 14—See

T. P. Act (1882), S. 55 769a

Specific Relief Act (contd.)

- S. 27 (b)—See T. P. Act (1882), S. 54 409
- S. 39—See ibid, S. 42 545b
- S. 42—See also Divorce Act (1869), S. 16 858c

—Ss. 42 and 39—Setting aside transactions—(T. P. Act (1882), Ss. 54 and 53)—(Evidence Act (1872), S. 92) 545b

—S. 45—Other specific remedy open—(Constitution of India, Art. 226) 556

—S. 55—Refusal of injunction 456c

Stamp Act (2 of 1899), S. 2 (17) — Specified property—(T. P. Act, (1882), S. 58) (FB) 764a

—S. 2 (17) — Mortgage deed neither attested nor registered—(T. P. Act (1882), S. 59) (FB) 764b

—S. 19—Foreign promissory note—Properly stamped according to Indian Law — It must be stamped over again under S. 19 424

—Ss. 27, 64 and Art. 58—Scope 941b

—S. 33—See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 115 698a

—S. 33 (1) — 'Is produced or comes in the performance of his functions' 698b

—S. 64—See ibid, S. 27 941b

—S. 64 (b)—Applicability—Scribe and vendor 941c

—S. 70—Revenue Board authorizing District Registrar and District Magistrate to sanction prosecution under Stamp Act — Prosecution held validly initiated 941a

—Art. 58—See ibid, S. 27 941b

Succession Act (39 of 1925), S. 2 (h) — See Registration Act (1908), S. 17 (3) 740

—S. 59 — Capacity to execute will — (Hindu Law—Will) 461b

†—S. 214 (1)—Reversioner claiming compensation money — Necessity to produce succession certificate—Land Acquisition Act (1894), S. 32 28c

—S. 283 (1) (b)—"Due execution" — Burden of proof—Suit for grant of letters of administration with will attached—Burden is on plaintiff to prove sound disposing state of testator's mind—Onus of establishing coercion and undue influence lies heavily on defendant—(Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101 to 103) 461a

—S. 303—See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 2 (11) 622b

Suits Valuation Act (7 of 1887), Preamble—Object of Act (FB) 746d

—S. 8—Suit for partition 856a

—S. 9 — Rules under — R. 2 (framed by the Madras High Court in 1943) — Suit to obtain declaratory decree where no consequential relief is prayed—Court-fee payable (FB) 746a

—S. 9—Scope (FB) 746c

—S. 11—"Over-valuation or under-valuation" includes valuation which rests on some erroneous basis 871a

—S. 11, Proviso (b)—Objection to jurisdiction—(Civil P. C. (1908), O. 7, R. 10) 871b

TENANCY LAWS

Madras Estates (Abolition and Conversion into Ryotwari) Act (26 of 1948), Ss. 3, 41, 50

—Impartible estates—Compensation — Right of co-parceners to share—(Hindu Law—Impartible Estates) — (Madras Impartible Estates Act (2 of 1904), S. 9) 185

—S. 3 (b)—Vacant sites 416

—S. 9 — See Constitution of India, Art. 226 60

—S. 18 — See Constitution of India, Art. 226 472a

—S. 18 (5)— Building — Portion used for purpose other than office purpose — Portion would not vest in Government 472b

—S. 18 (5) — Building — Building may be called outhouse but may be used as a separate building 472c

—S. 20 — Notification notifying minor inam as under tenure 190b

—S. 41—See ibid, S. 3 185

—S. 50—See ibid, S. 3 185

—S. 67—Rules relating to procedure for being followed by Tribunals appointed under S. 8 of Act — Validity — (Constitution of India, (1950) Art. 226) 129

Madras Estates Land Act (1 of 1908), S. 3 —

"Landholder"—Lands situated in zeroyati village forming part of permanently settled estate obtained in exchange for lands in pre-settlement minor inam—Lands form part of post settlement inam — Suit for ejectment does not lie in Civil Court 562

—S. 3 (2) (d) — Confirmation by British Government of part of inam village 190a

—S. 3 (2) (d)—Quaere — Whether if a grant was of an entire village and though the entire village was confirmed either in one proceeding or in different proceedings and separate title deeds were issued, the village covered by the separate deeds ceases to be an estate 190c

—S. 3 (2) (d)—Madras Estates (Abolition and Conversion into Ryotwari) Act (26 of 1948), S. 2 (7)—'Inam Estate'—Confirmation of original grant—Proceedings under Act 26 of 1948 in respect of estate which is not inam estate — Jurisdiction 246

—S. 3 (2) (d)—Estate—Scattered bits of land in Ryotwari village 813

—S. 3 (15), Expln. and S. 4 — Person in adverse possession of land for more than 12 years without payment of rent— Liability to pay rent 976

—S. 12—Scope of 892

—S. 107—"Subordinate to such officer" 490a

—S. 107—Purchase by manager 490b

—S. 107— Nature of sale — (Limitation Act (1908), Art. 12 (b))—(Civil P. C. (1908), O. 21, R. 73) 490c

—S. 125 — Applicability — Sale of holding in execution of rent decree for costs 234

—S. 131—See Civil P. C. (1908), O. 21, R. 91 671b

Tenancy Laws—Madras Estates Land Act
(contd.)

—S. 192 (1) — See Civil P. C. (1908), O. 21, R. 91 671b

Madras Estates Land (Reduction of Rent) Act (30 of 1947) — (Quaere) — Fixing of rents in respect of the minor inam 190d

† Madras Estates Land (Reduction of Rent) Second Amendment Act (35 of 1951), S. 1 (2)

— Act is not invalid as being inconsistent with Art. 372 (1) of the Constitution — (Constitution of India, Art. 372 (1)) 260a

† — S. 4 — Provision is not confiscatory and unconstitutional — (Constitution of India, Art. 31) 260b

Tort — Negligence — Accident — Driving at high speed 981a — Negligence — Motor accident 981c

— Negligence — Master and Servant 981d — Negligence — Motor accident prima facie presumption of negligence — (Presumption held not rebutted) 981e

Transfer of Property Act (4 of 1882), S. 5 — See Family settlement 161a

— S. 6 — See ibid, S. 43 (FB) 637a

— S. 6 (dd) — See Civil P. C. (1908), O. 22, R. 1 202

— S. 8

See also (1) Deed — Construction 566a and b

(2) Deed — Settlement deed 566c

— S. 8 — Discrepancy between boundaries and area 769c

— S. 35 — Courses to be elected must be legal 161c

— S. 40 — See ibid, S. 54 409

† — Ss. 43 and 6 — Applicability of S. 43 — Transfer of spes successionis: 65 Mad L J 588; AIR 1933 Mad 795; 145 Ind Cas 965. OVER- RULED (FB) 637a

— Ss. 52 and 100, Proviso — Charge created by compromise decree — Decree not satisfied — Purchase of property charged is hit by rule of 'lis pendens' 71a

— S. 52 — Sales in pursuance of same decree 692c

— S. 53

See also (1) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 1, R. 8 619

(2) Specific Relief Act (1877), S. 42 545b

— S. 53 — Avoidance by fraudulent grantor — (Trusts Act (1882), S. 84) 545a

— S. 53A — See also Civil P. C. (1908), S. 100 925a

— S. 53-A — Proviso to the section 925b

— S. 53-A — Act of part performance under the section 925c

— S. 54 — See also Specific Relief Act (1877), S. 42 545b

— Ss. 54 and 40 — Agreement to sell immovable property — Subsequent sale in favour of third person with notice of prior agreement — Sale is subject to obligation under prior agreement — (Trusts Act (1882), S. 91) — (Specific Relief Act (1877), S. 27 (b)) 409

T. P. Act (contd.)

— S. 55 — Sale — Part of consideration left with vendee for discharging prior mortgage — Vendee not discharging mortgage for a long time — Interest accumulating — Vendee paying interest — Mortgage debt reduced under Madras Act 4 of 1938 — Vendor cannot demand refund of balance of amount that would remain after paying off mortgage amount as reduced, when vendee had actually paid more than amount deposited, towards the principal and also interest 370

— S. 55 — Breach of covenant for title and quiet possession — Suit by buyer for damages — Relevant date for assessment of damages — (Contract Act (1872), S. 73) 529b

— S. 55 (1) (a) — Disclosure of defects 628b

— S. 55 — Error in statement of extent of property sold — Compensation — Specific Relief Act (1877), S. 14 769a

— S. 55 — Implied warranty — Proof — (Evidence Act (1872), S. 92) 769b

— S. 58

See also (1) Limitation Act (1903), Art. 83 603

(2) Stamp Act (1899), S. 2 (17)

(FB) 764a

— S. 58 (c), Proviso — Sale or mortgage — Tests of distinction 830

— (as amended in 1929), Ss. 58 (g), 67, 68 and 98 — Mortgagee to enjoy property in lieu of interest — Personal covenant to pay — Possession not given to mortgagee — Mortgage held anomalous — Mortgagee held entitled to decree for sale and profits from date of mortgage to date of suit — (Civil P. C. (1908), O. 34, R. 4) 13

— S. 59 — See Stamp Act (1899), S. 2 (17)

(FB) 764b

— S. 60 — One co-mortgagor acquiring mortgagee right — Redemption by other — Suit for — Limitation — (Limitation Act (1908), Art. 148) 366b

— S. 60 — Mortgagee acquiring share in property 720a

— S. 67

See (1) ibid, S. 58 (g) 13

(2) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 11 32

— S. 68 (as amended in 1929) — See ibid, S. 58 (g) 13

— S. 72, Proviso — Retrospective operation 720b

— S. 78 — See also Evidence Act (1872), S. 101 1000b

— S. 78 — Suit by subsequent mortgagee for declaration that prior mortgage on same property was sham and not supported by consideration — Question can be gone into 1000a

— S. 82 — See Debt Laws — Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act (4 of 1938), S. 8 (2) 873

T. P. Act (contd.)

- S. 83 — Tender — Refusal by mortgagee—
Liability for mesne profits 821b
- S. 98 (as amended in 1929) — See ibid,
S. 58 (g) 13
- S. 100
See (1) ibid, S. 52 71a
(2) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 11 32
- S. 105
See (1) Easements Act (1882), S. 60 456a
(2) Income-tax Act (1922), S. 10 (2) (i) 632a and b
- S. 106 — Notice by registered post and returned with postal endorsement "refused" — Letter correctly addressed — Postal endorsement is admissible in evidence — (Evidence Act (1872),
S. 16). AIR 1935 Bom 247, Dissented from 884b
- Ss. 106, 116 — Terms as to notice cannot be imported under S. 116 when tenant holds over 884c
- Ss. 106 and 117 — Agricultural lease — Provisions as to notice are applicable on grounds of justice, equity and good conscience — But it is enough if the notice is in fact reasonable 884d
- S. 108 (m) — Scope — Defendant terminating tenancy and offering possession — Premises not in state of proper repairs 996b
- Ss. 108 (m) and 111 (h) — Loss caused to landlord — Landlord cannot challenge notice or termination of agency but must sue for damages for wilful negligence of tenant 996c
- S. 111 — See also Houses and Rents — Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (15 of 1946), S. 2 (4) 356
- Ss. 111 (g) and 114A — Two separate notices
— Necessity 313a
- † —S. 111 (f) — New lease during continuance of original lease but after attachment of lease-hold — New lease is void under S. 64, Civil P. C., and does not operate as implied surrender —
Subsequent sale in execution — Possession of lessee continues under original lease and cannot be disturbed — (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 64) 399
- S. 111 (h) — See also ibid, S. 108 (m) 996c
- S. 111 (h) — Lease terminated by notice —
Landlord refusing to take possession — Lease does not continue 996a
- S. 114A — See also ibid, S. 111 (g) 313a
- S. 114A — Technical defects 313b
- S. 115 — See Houses and Rents — Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (15 of 1946), S. 2 (4) 356
- S. 116
See (1) ibid, S. 106 884c
(2) Houses and Rents — Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act
(15 of 1946), S. 2 (4) 473
- S. 117 — See ibid, S. 106 884d

Tribunal—Constitution

709b

Trusts Act (2 of 1882), Ss. 5 to 8, 88 and 94

- Employer crediting bonus and dearness allowance in favour of employee — Employer taking benefit in income-tax — Employer is trustee for the amount 16
- S. 6 — See also ibid, S. 5 16
- S. 6 — Creation of — Admission and mere entries 787a
- S. 7 — See ibid, S. 5 16
- S. 8 — See ibid, S. 5 16
- S. 36 — See Hindu Law—Religious Endowment 624b
- S. 62 — See Civil P. C. (1908), O. 21, R. 72 822a
- S. 84 — See T. P. Act (1882), S. 53 545a
- S. 88 — See also ibid, S. 5 16
- S. 88 — Claim by principal against agent for advantage gained by latter — Limitation — (Limitation Act (1908), Arts. 90, 120) 694c
- S. 91 — See T. P. Act (1882), S. 54 409
- S. 94 — See ibid, S. 5 16

Vegetable Oil and Oil-cakes (Forward Contracts Prohibition) Order (1944), Cl. 1 — See Contract Act (1872), S. 23

845

Cl. 4 — Validity — (Defence of India Rules (1939), R. 61 (2) (a), (b) and (f))

711a

Words and Phrases — See Madras Prohibition Act (10 of 1937), S. 4 (i) (a)

534

Charge — See Madras District Police Act (24 of 1859), S. 47

507b

"Consult"

392a

Court — See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 6

953a

Date of Order — See Provincial Insolvency Act (1920), S. 75 (4)

465a

'Due and own' — Meaning — See Debt Laws
— Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act (4 of 1938),
S. 4 (h)

174a

Within a week — See Houses and Rents — Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act
(25 of 1949), S. 3

602

Workmen's Compensation Act (8 of 1923),
S. 2 (1) (d) (ii) — Father of deceased

206b

S. 2 (1) (d) — "Wholly or in part dependent"
— Question is of fact

766a

S. 2 (1) (d) — "Wholly or in part dependent" — Meaning of. A I R 1953 Mad 206, Dissented from

766b

S. 2 (1) (m) — "Wages" — Provision whether analogous to that contained in Factories Act
(1948), S. 2 (1)

269g

Ss. 2 (1) (n) and 3 — Employment for purposes of business

432

S. 3 — See also ibid, S. 2 (1) (n)

432

S. 3 and Sch. 1 — Contributory negligence

837b

S. 30 — Questions of fact — Interference

206a

S. 30 — Finding of fact — No interference

837a

COMPARATIVE TABLE

Other Journals = All India Reporter

ILR (1952) Madras=A. I. R.

ILR	AIR	ILR	AIR	ILR	AIR	ILR	AIR	ILR	AIR
1	1952 M 81	173	1951 M 938	414	1951 M 1042	535	1952 M 106	698	1952 M 300
22	1951 " 910(2)	187	" " 954	421	1952 " 186	540	" " 273	715	" " 871
43	" " 141	211	1952 " 92	446	" " 783	547	" " 160	719	" " 45
60	" " 783	218	" " 515	451	1951 " 897	553	" " 95	728	" " 267
73	" " 886(1)	257	1951 " 900	459	" " 1007	562	1954 " 15	741	" " 323
77	1952 " 86	264	" " 959	468	1952 " 98	571	1952 " 718	835	" " 419
82	1951 " 935	277	" " 962	479	" " 174	595	" " 545	933	" " 395
92	" " 187	306	1952 " 49	483	1953 " 259	604	" " 11	957	" " 565
104	" " 813	308	1951 " 1044	485	" " 355	622	" " 51	980	1953 " 475
108	" " 890	312	" " 1045	489	1952 " 826	632	" " 853	982	1952 " 756
120	1952 " 271	318	1952 " 706	492	" " 591	638	1951 " 1060	993	1953 " 13
130	1951 " 865	348	" " 149	502	1951 " 980	651	1952 " 413	1000	" " 39
150	" " 910(1)	351	" " 605	508	1952 " 389	668	1951 " 1047	1005	1952 " 837
153	" " 777	353	1951 " 895	524	" " 257	680	1953 " 60	1010	" " 671
170	" " 864(1)	361	1952 " 736	531	" " 582	682	" " 769	1019	" " 540

(1952) 1 Madras Law Journal=A. I. R.

MLJ	AIR	MLJ	AIR	MLJ	AIR	MLJ	AIR	MLJ	AIR
1	1952 M 117	171	1953 M 594	401	1952 M 814	547	1952 M 859	683	1952 M 782
7	" " 54	174	" " 203	408	" " 576	548	1953 " 389	684	1953 " 454
8	1954 " 188	206	" " 589	411	" SC 105	550	1952 " 725	689	" " 235
9	1952 " 296	208	" " 395	414	" " 60	552	1954 " 179	690	" " 61
11	" " 539	227	1953 " 884	420	" " 45	557	1952 " 613	700	1954 " 129
12	" " 604	235	1952 " 783	423	" " 59	607	1953 " 355	703	1952 " 808
14	" " 72	239	" " 474	426	" " 52	607	1953 " 355	705	" " 779
18	" " 515	244	1954 " 15	431	" " 47	608	1952 " 800	709	" " 736
35	" " 853	248	1952 " 553	440	" " 54	611	" " 671	733	" SC 108
38	" " 253	251	" " 245	448	1953 M 39	619	1953 " 1001	736	" " 149
41	" " 252	264	" " 591	452	" " 396	620	1954 " 116	741	" " 119
42	" " 229	268	" " 479	456	1952 " 835	623	1953 " 400	746	" " 109
44	" " 389	270	" " 833	459	1953 " 996	628	" " 378	754	" " 159
51	" " 232	272	" " 860	463	1952 " 754	632	1954 " 168	763	" M 798
59	1953 " 175	274	1954 " 134	468	" " 578	634	1952 " 786	765	1953 " 465
61	" " 173	276	1952 " 812	470	1953 " 413	638	" " 831	768	1954 " 18
62	1952 " 535	278	1954 " 271	471	1952 " 830	641	" " 811	770	1953 " 234
68	" " 529	278	" " 528	473	" " 855	643	" " 843	772	" " 827
69	" " 299	279	1952 " 528	473	1953 " 618	645	1953 " 189	775	1952 SC 64
71	" " 323	282	1953 " 407	475	1952 " 837	646	1952 " 687	775	1952 SC 64
152	" " 545	284	1952 " 840	481	1953 " 98	649	1954 " 131	801	1951 M 1042
153	1953 " 208	286	" " 839	487	" " 750	652	" " 182	803	1954 " 245
158	1954 " 165	287	" " 863	494	1952 " 718	655	1952 " 778	804	1953 " 391
160	1952 " 789	291	" " 827	504	" " 656	656	" " 658	806	1952 SC 192
161	" " 531	292	" " 807	507	1953 " 28	658	1953 " 1004	813	" " 179
164	1954 " 247	308	" SC 29	510	" " 402	660	1952 " 841	816	" " 214
166	" " 143	390	" M 419	514	1952 " 565	662	1951 " 1045	823	" " 207
168	" " 199	398	" " 413	532	" " 715	665	1952 " 706	831	" M 788
169	1952 " 734	400	" " 826	536	1954 " 62	678	" " 767	834	" " 768
			" " 871	540	1953 " 54	681	" " 776	836	1954 " 149

(1952) 2 Madras Law Journal=A. I. R.

MLJ	AIR	MLJ	AIR	MLJ	AIR	MLJ	AIR	MLJ	AIR
1	1952 M 825	29	1952 M 864	60	1952 M 872	113	1953 M 775	172	1953 M 754
3	" " 799	30	" " 793	66	" " 288	115	1952 " 164	174	" " 332
4	" " 794	31	" " 850	67	" " 819	117	1953 " 184	176	" " 176
7	" " 821	34	1953 " 399	71	1953 " 165	118	1952 " 50	179	" " 356
11	" " 561	36	" " 174	73	1954 " 74	119	" SC 181	180	" " 826
17	" " 828	38	1952 " 548	77	1952 " 844	135	" " 196	183	1954 " 90
20	1954 " 189	43	" " 852	83	" SC 170	141	" M 790	184	1953 " 196
22	1953 " 408	45	" " 670	94	" " 143	145	" " 810	185	1954 " 86
24	1952 " 795	50	1953 " 762	97	" " 165	148	1953 " 993	186	1953 " 179
27	" " 830	53	1952 " 861	100	" " 167	152	1952 " 865	186	" " 178
28	" " 834	55	1953 " 188	104	1953 M 161	163	1953 " 436	192	" " 60
			1952 " 856	108	1952 " 41	168	" " 409	194	" " 60

MLJ	AIR	MLJ	AIR	MLJ	AIR	MLJ	AIR	MLJ	AIR
195	1953 M 406	347	1953 M 71	481	1953 M 149	646	1953 M 79	761	1953 M 252
196	" " 12	353	" " 86	484	" " 210	653	" " 816	767	" " 257
197	" " 38	359	" " 183	489	" " 221	655	" " 548	771	" " 609
198	" " 370	361	" " 1	492	" " 268	657	" " 143	774	" " 432
200	" " 342	365	1952 " 771	493	" " 152	662	1954 " 71	776	" " 388
202	" " 246	375	1953 " 228	497	1954 " 169	665	1953 " 1007	777	" " 137
212	" " 333	378	" " 197	498	1953 " 213	667	" " 129	779	" " 96
217	" " 615	385	" " 817	500	" " 320	671	" " 94	782	" " 404
221	" " 650	392	" " 661	501	" " 74	673	" " 371	785	" " 380
237	1952 " 734	398	" " 1002	506	" " 230	675	1952 " 877	797	" " 296
239	1953 " 25	400	" " 226	512	" " 102	679	1953 " 238	805	1952 " 659
241	" " 821	403	" " 390	515	" " 146	681	" " 375	814	1953 " 138
243	" " 185	404	" " 366	520	" " 223	683	1954 " 66	823	" " 620
247	" " 357	408	" " 562	524	" " 492	684	1953 " 602	827	" " 671
249	1952 " 769	410	1952 " 764	544	" " 84	685	1954 " 99	832	" " 300
251	" SC 225	416	1953 " 13	545	" " 336	686	1953 " 243	846	" " 420
255	" " 245	421	" " 32	547	" " 30	680	" " 41	843	" " 156
265	" " 227	430	" " 777	549	" " 998	706	" " 1008	852	" " 415
270	1953 M 3	436	" " 206	550	" " 239	708	" " 892	855	" " 358
279	1954 " 72	439	1952 " 806	552	" " 374	713	" " 217	857	" " 376
280	1953 " 550	441	1953 " 219	554	" " 242	716	" " 132	859	" " 421
282	" " 340	443	" " 220	555	" " 315	725	" " 66	861	" " 346
285	" " 10	445	" " 236	560	" " 310	730	" " 154	863	" " 348
288	" " 1006	448	" " 1000	565	" " 241	732	" " 547	868	" " 542
290	1954 " 80	450	" " 21	567	" " 628	734	" " 159	871	" " 624
291	1953 " 20	452	" " 164	573	" " 78	739	" " 438	877	" " 85
294	" " 822	453	" " 204	575	" " 22	742	" " 209	880	" " 540
298	1952 " 756	455	1954 " 132	579	1954 " 376	744	" " 544	883	1954 " 92
307	1953 " 999	458	" " 193	580	1953 " 28	745	1954 " 196	884	1953 " 566
308	" " 16	462	1953 " 1005	584	" " 240	747	1953 " 424	890	" " 433
314	" " 190	464	1952 " 802	586	" SC 446	748	" " 142	894	" " 279
323	1952 SC 329	471	1953 " 636	593	" M 91	749	" " 1003	917	" " 269
332	" " 335	473	" " 456	598	" " 105	751	" " 372	931	1954 " 102
338	" " 317	476	" " 214	614	" " 116	752	1954 " 158	932	" " 100
342	1953 " 433	479	" " 369	631	1952 SC 343	758	1953 " 313	933	1953 " 425
344	" M 202			641	" " 350			944	" " 464

(1952) 65 Madras Law Weekly=A. I. R.

MLW	AIR	MLW	AIR	MLW	AIR	MLW	AIR	MLW	AIR
1	1953 SC 433	162	1952 M 863	336(2)	1952 M 859	455	1953 M 454	671	1953 M 176
2	1951 " 467	164	1953 " 39	337	" " 830	460	1952 " 808	674	" " 409
5	" " 477	168	1952 " 591	338	1954 " 179	462	1954 " 182	679	" " 196
11	1952 M 186	172	1953 " 884	342	1953 " 402	464	1952 " 843	680	" " 615
24	" " 149	179	1952 SC 47	346	" " 188	467	" " 778	684	" " 60
25	" " 389	186	1953 M 175	348	1952 " 861	468	" " 850	685	1952 " 819
32	" " 292	187	" " 407	351	" SC 54	470	" " 667	689	1953 " 332
33	1953 " 165	189	1952 " 840	357	" " 59	474	" " 810	690	1954 " 74
35	1952 " 394	191	1954 " 185	359	" " 60	476	" " 232	694	1953 " 370
37	" " 203	196	1952 " 245	364	" M 852	484	" " 844	697	1952 " 24
71	" " 528	203	" SC 14	366	" " 871	491	" SC 179	700	1953 " 826
73	" " 853	212	" " 16	368	1953 " 750	496	1953 M 161	702	" " 246
75	" " 589	219	" " 23	374	1952 " 794	501	1952 " 872	713	" " 650
77	" " 548	226	" M 835	377	1953 " 54	510	1953 " 775	729	" " 71
82	1953 " 769	229	" " 377	377	1952 " 736	514	1952 " 856	735	" " 190
89	1952 " 553	238	" " 821	384	1953 " 798	519	" SC 149	744	1952 " 734
92	1953 " 208	242	" " 413	408	" " 811	527	" " 109	746	1953 " 357
94	1952 " 783	250	" " 718	411	" " 539	620	" " 252	747	1952 " 756
98	1953 SC 446	260	" " 826	413	" " 605	626	" " 192	756	1953 " 185
104	1952 M 545	261	" " 837	414	" " 789	628	1954 M 18	760	1952 SC 64
108	" " 474	265	" " 576	415	" " 229	632	1952 SC 227	770	" " 119
114	" " 395	267	" " 578	416	1953 " 129	634	1953 M 174	775	1953 M 61
133	" " 795	269	1953 " 98	417	1952 SC 196	636	1952 " 776	781	" " 618
136(1)	" " 252	275	1952 " 855	420	" " 165	640	" " 779	783	" " 396
136(2)	" " 41	276	" " 831	426	" " 167	642	1951 " 1045	787	" " 391
140	" " 253	279	" " 565	429	" M 590	646	1952 SC 225	789	" " 189
143	" " 656	297	" " 715	433	" " 51	652	" " 231	790	" " 202
146	1954 " 15	301	" " 706	434	" " 529	653	1953 M 406	793	" " 86
150	1952 " 115	314	1954 " 149	439	" " 841	654	" SC 435	799	" " 822
153	1954 " 188	318	1952 " 754	441	" " 247	655	" M 356	803	" " 228
154	1952 " 784	327	" " 671	443	1954 " 465	657	" " 358	806	" " 3
156	" " 594	329	" " 788	446	1953 " 767	658	" " 821	815	" " 183
158	1953 " 173	332	" " 725	448	1952 " 782	659	" " 38	818	" " 197
159	1952 " 827	333	1953 " 389	450	" " 235	669	1952 " 865	825	1952 " 771
160	" " 860	336(1)	1952 " 825	453			1953 " 178	834	1953 " 661
			" " 834	454				839	" " 1

1952 Madras Weekly Notes=A. I. R.

MWN	AIR	MWN	AIR	MWN	AIR	MWN	AIR	MWN	AIR	MWN	AIR	MWN	AIR
1	1952 M	186	168	1952 M	43	369	1952 M	821	583	1953 M	370	743	1953 M	241
13	" SC	12	169	" "	591	373	1954 "	116	585	" "	342	750	1954 "	169
16	" M	253	172	" "	594	375	1952 "	763	587	" "	615	751	1953 "	999
19(1)	" "	79	174	" "	656	376	" "	769	591	1952 "	808	752	1952 SC	235
19(2)	" "	126	176	" "	565	378	1954 "	129	592	" "	776	762	" "	123
20	" "	92	191	" "	863	381	1952 "	790	594	" "	779	777	1953 M	219
23	1951 "	1012	183	" "	860	384	1953 "	827	598	" "	670	779	" "	289
25	1952 "	203	194	" "	827	387	" "	436	599	1953 "	10	780	1954 "	86
53	" "	531	196(1)	" "	807	389	1952 SC	167	602	" "	550	781	1953 "	268
55	" "	529	196(2)	1953 "	396	393	" "	149		" "		782	" "	84
56	" "	149	200	1952 "	814	397	" "	196	604(1)	1954 "	80	783	" "	1007
57	" "	299	206	1953 "	39	402	" "	159	604(2)	1953 "	333	784	" "	146
59	1954 "	135	209	1952 SC	64	409	" "	165	608	" "	179	787	" "	240
60	1951 SC	484	217	1953 M	399	411	" M	727	813	" "	1006	789	" "	28
62	" "	316	219	1952 "	855	420	1953 "	174	615	" "	832	792	" "	210
64	1952 M	229	219	1952 "	561	421	1954 "	182	616	1954 "	72	796	" "	102
66	" "	180	220	" "	26	424	1952 "	872	617	1953 "	357	799	" "	366
67	1951 SC	467	225	1953 "	812	429	" "	192	618	" "	25	802	" "	152
69	1954 M	15	227	1952 "	62	431	" SC	179	619	1952 "	734	805	" "	238
72	1952 "	395	231	1954 "	833	437	" "	143	621	1953 "	13	806	" "	369
88	1953 "	184	234	1952 "	89	439	" M	856	626	" "	183	808	" "	816
89	1952 "	605	235	" "	413	442	" SC	170	628	" "	203	809	1954 "	71
90	1954 "	188	236	1953 "	837	451	" "	153	631	" "	822	811	1953 "	223
91	1953 "	175	237	1952 "	835	455	" "	119	634	" "	32	814	" "	22
92(1)	" "	173	241	" "	831	460	" "	75	642	" "	190	817	" "	71
92(2)	1954 "	165	244	" "	413	492	" "	115	650	" "	246	822	" "	164
94	1952 "	545	247	1953 "	54	496	1953 M	234	658	" "	86	823	" "	475
97	" "	555	253	1952 "	871	497	1952 "	786	664	1952 "	771	824	" "	217
99	1953 "	208	259	" "	578	500	" "	778	670	1953 "	661	826	" "	79
100	1952 "	784	261	1954 "	181	501	" "	18	675	" "	636	833	" "	129
102	" SC	59	262	1952 "	576	502	1954 "		677	1952 "	766	836	" "	620
104	" "	47	264	" "	800	507	1952 SC	319	684	1953 "	185	839	" "	375
110	" M	474	266	" "	880	511	" "	225	688	1952 "	806	840	" "	320
114	" "	553	268	" "	718	514	" "	227	689	1953 "	236	841(1)	1954 "	192
117	" "	783	269	" "	826	519	" M	844	691	" "	390	841(2)	1953 "	196
120	" SC	23	277	" "	754	528	" "	659	692	" "	1000	842	1952 "	667
126	" "	29	278	" "	750	533	" SC	145	694(1)	" "	205	845	1953 "	1008
137	" M	789	282	1953 "	671	538	" "	214	694(2)	" "	562	846	" "	242
138	" "	795	287	1952 "	98	539	1953 M	178	696	" "	21	847	" "	105
140	" "	849	293	1953 "	859	540	" "	406	697	" "	1005	861	" "	91
142	" "	288	298	1952 "	613	545	1952 SC	335	699	" "	228	865	" "	159
143	" "	479	299	" "	168	552	" "	329	701	" "	817	868	" "	548
145(1)	1954 "	199	342	1954 "	852	557	1953 M	409	707	" "	628	870	" "	544
145(2)	1952 SC	45	344	" "	799	559	" "	176	712	1952 "	764	871	" "	313
147	" "	14	345	" "	179	560	" "	38	717	1953 "	16	877	" "	116
150	" "	54	346	1954 "	188	561	" "	356	721	" "	197	878	" "	182
155	" "	27	349	1953 "	993	562	" "	821	727	" "	213	891	" "	138
156	" "	52	351	1952 "	825	564	" "	826	728	" "	214	897	" "	151
160	" "	105	354	1953 "	400	566	" "	358	731	" "	80	902	" "	609
162	1954 M	184	357	" "	725	575	1952 "	865	733	" "	230	906	" "	142
163	" "	247	358	1952 "	1004	577	" "	798	738	" "	1	907	" "	1002
165	" "	271	362	" "	61	580	1954 "	819	741	" "	74	908	" "	451
166	" "	143	364	" "			" "	74	745	" "	204	912	" "	888
167	" "	221	365	" "						" "	78		" "

MWN	AIR	MWN	AIR	MWN	AIR	MWN	AIR	MWN	AIR
913	1953 M 279	945	1953 M 252	959	1953 M 569	965(2)	1953 M 156	979	1953 M 998
933	" " 420	950	" " 257	962	1954 " 196	969	" " 602	980	" " 260
935	" " 540	953	" " 360	963	1953 " 549	970	" " 371	981	" " 421
937	" " 415	956	" " 1003	964	1954 " 90	971	" " 337	982	" " 537
939	" " 404	957	" " 137	964	1954 " 376	974	1952 " 535	986	" " 478
941	" " 143	958	" " 372	965(1)		978	1953 " 579	988	" " 424

(1952) 21 Income-tax Reports=A. I. R.

ITR	AIR	ITR	AIR	ITR	AIR	ITR	AIR	ITR	AIR
1	1952 M 232	96	1952 M 534	231	1952 B 346	333	1952 B 287	449	1952 A 531
18	" B 242	105	" Punj 40	241	1953 C 329	344	" M 861	454	" M 841
22	" " 241	121	" B 290	258	" C 344	349	" " 784	458	" B 261
28	" " 282	129	" A 488	278	1952 B 151	353	" A 928	490	1953 C 314
33	1951 Raj 150(2)	149	" Punj 80	293	" " 330	369	" M 658	497	" " 299
38	1953 C 368	184	" M 793	311	" M 828	375	1953 " 408	523	1952 Punj 299
70	1952 M 480	188	" " 864	319	1954 " 189	382	1952 P 417	533	" " 270
72	1953 B 43	191	" " 689	330	1953 A 81	395	" N 97	567	" A 812
79	1952 N 24						1953 C 59	573	" P 453
82	" B 306

(1952) 22 Income-tax Reports=A. I. R.

ITR	AIR	ITR	AIR	ITR	AIR	ITR	AIR	ITR	AIR
1	1952 A 845	101	1952 A 514	234	1953 Punj 71	324	1953 M 221	464	1953 A 141
13	" B 457	104	" " 857	235	" M 152	331	" A 31	470	" " 198
18	" " 459	108	" " 706	241	" B 9	339	1952 N 388	474	" " 150
33	1953 " 42	125	1953 M 20	259	" A 43	344	1953 TC 17	484	" SC 4
39	1952 " 447	150	1952 B 479	264	" M 315	359	" M 85	490	" N 187
44	1953 C 127	158	1953 " 1	276	" " 223	364	" " 209	493	" " 77
58	1952 B 483	195	" A 170	285	" " 336	370	" " 438	502	" M 343
71	1953 B 88	205	1952 " 842	292	" " 374	377	" " 84	514	" Punj 215
79	" " 32	208	1953 N 21	296	" Punj 16	379	" " 166	520	" A 165
82	" M 358	220	1952 Orissa 281	305	" B 41	410	" Punj 113	528	" " 208
87	" " 340			311	" A 88	418	" " 55	539	" " 227
94	1952 B 494			316	" " 88	448	" N 173	545	" M 824

NOTE

For Comparative Table of 1953 Other Journals=All India Reporter, See next year's Index.

MADRAS CASES OVERRULED, REVERSED AND DISSENTED FROM IN A. I. R. 1953

- (83) 6 Mad. 60 = 1 Weir 657 (F.B.), Queen v. Sidappa Held dissented by 21 Mad. 360 (F. B.) in A. I. R. 1953 All. 353.
- (05) 28 Mad. 197, Pyligantam v. Rama Doss Overruled in A. I. R. 1953 S. C. 125.
- (05) 28 Mad. 216, Abdul Karim v. Badrudeen Dissented from in A. I. R. 1953 Mad. 897.
- (11) 9 Ind. Cas. 54 = 21 Mad. L. J. 453 = 9 Mad. L. T. 263, Rangaswami Iyengar v. Srinivasa Iyengar Dissented from in A. I. R. 1953 Mad. 726.
- (12) 14 I. C. 277 = 11 Mad. L. J. 383, Kamalathammal v. C. V. Shrinivasa Chariar Dissented from in A. I. R. 1953 Raj. 121.
- (15) A. I. R. 1915 Mad. 1159 = 16 Cri. L. J. 263 = 1915 Mad. W. N. 269 = 17 Mad. L. T. 191 = 2 Mad. L. W. 233 = 28 Ind. Cas. 156, Mahomed Kasim v. Emperor Dissented from in A. I. R. 1953 Assam 35 (F. B.).
- (18) A. I. R. 1918 Mad. 120 = 41 Mad. 622 = 45 Ind. Cas. 98 = 34 Mad. L. J. 396; Srinivasa Upadhya v. Ranganna Bhatta Dissented from in A. I. R. 1953 Bom. 318.
- (18) A. I. R. 1918 Mad. 212 = 40-Mad. 977 = 45 Ind. Cas. 257 = 19 Cri. L. J. 497, Kottayya v. Venkayya Dissented from in A. I. R. 1953 Orissa 257.
- (18) A. I. R. 1918 Mad. 258 = 44 Ind. Cas. 428 = 34 Mad. L. J. 32, Vellayappa v. Krishna Dissented from in A. I. R. 1953 Bom. 403.
- (18) A. I. R. 1918 Mad. 391 = 41 Mad. 151 = 22 M. L. T. 330 = 33 M. L. J. 575 = 6 M. L. W. 517 = 1917 M. W. N. 785 (F. B.), Venkatachalapati Rao v. Kameshwaramma Dissented from in A. I. R. 1953 Nag. 176.
- (21) C. S. No. 420 of 1921 (Mad.) Dissented from in A. I. R. 1953 Mad. 897.
- (24) A. I. R. 1924 Mad. 90 = 47 Mad. 136 = 73 Ind. Cas. 1054 = 45 Mad. L. J. 153 = 1923 Mad. W. N. 681, Krishna Reddy v. Thanikachala Overruled in A. I. R. 1953 S. C. 198.
- (24) A. I. R. 1924 Mad. 223 = 76 Ind. Cas. 805 = 45 Mad. L. J. 827 = 18 Mad. L. W. 863 = 33 Mad. L. T. 205, Ramanadha Iyer v. Nagendra Iyer Dissented from in A. I. R. 1953 Nag. 227.
- (24) A. I. R. 1924 Mad. 494 = 47 Mad. 483 (F. B.), Meyappa Chettiar v. Chidambaram Chettiar Dissented from in A. I. R. 1953 All. 173 (F. B.).
- (25) A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1210 = 49 Mad. 18 = 49 M. L. J. 590 = 23 M. L. W. 418 (F. B.), Gopala Krishnayya v. Lakshmana Rao Dissented from in A. I. R. 1953 Bom. 356.
- (26) A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 258 = 92 Ind. Cas. 615 = 23 M. L. W. 85 = 1925 M. W. N. 886, Varadacharlu v. Narasimha Charlu Dissented from in A. I. R. 1953 Cal. 377.
- (27) A. I. R. 1927 Mad. 846 = 50 Mad. 770 = 53 Mad. L. J. 329 = 26 Mad. L. W. 227 = 39 Mad. L. T. 339 = 165 Ind. Cas. 159, Raja Surya Rao v. Raja Ramarao Dissented from in A. I. R. 1953 Mad. 897.
- (33) A. I. R. 1933 Mad. 795 = 145 Ind. Cas. 965 = 65 Mad. L. J. 588 = 38 Mad. L. W. 610 = 1933 Mad. W. N. 1377, Official Assignee, Madras v. Sampath Naidu Overruled in A. I. R. 1953 Mad. 637 (F. B.).
- (36) 1936 Mad. W. N. Cr. 235 = 1936 Mad. W. N. 1351, Emperor v. Narayanaswami Naidu Dissented from in A. I. R. 1953 Mad. 574.
- (38) A. I. R. 1938 Mad. 130 = 39 Cri. L. J. 266 = (1937) 2 Mad. L. J. 862 = 46 Mad. L. W. 709 = 173 Ind. Cas. 26, In re Venkataramia Dissented from in A. I. R. 1953 Kutch 54.
- (42) Appeal No. 213 of 1942 (Mad.), Dist. Board of Commerce for The Hindu Religious Endowments, Madras v. Parasaram Veeraraghavacharyulu Overruled in A. I. R. 1953 S. C. 195.
- (43) A. I. R. 1943 Mad. 246 = 206 I. C. 356 = 1942 M. W. N. 703 = (1942) 2 M. L. J. 668 = 55 M. L. W. 823, Natarajan Chettiar v. Perumal Ammal Dissented from in A. I. R. 1953 Pat. 129.
- (43) A. I. R. 1943 Mad. 390 = 44 Cri. L. J. 568 = 206 Ind. Cas. 577 = 1943 Mad. W. N. 60 = 56 Mad. L. W. 69 = (1943) 1 Mad. L. J. 126, In re Piramanayaga Pandaram Dissented from in A. I. R. 1953 Orissa 227.
- (43) A. I. R. 1943 Mad. 708 = 211 I. C. 206 = 1943 M. W. N. 478 = 1943-2 M. L. J. 282 = 56 Mad. L. W. 487, Satyanarayana v. Narasamma Dissented from in A. I. R. 1953 Pat. 129.
- (45) A. I. R. 1945 Mad. 294 = I. L. R. (1946) Mad. 39 = 1945-1 M. L. J. 463 = 58 M. L. W. 204 = 1945 M. W. N. 220, Arumuga Mudaliar v. Balasubramania Mudaliar Overruled in A. I. R. 1953 Mad. 781 (F. B.).

MADRAS CASES OVERRULED, REVERSED AND DISSENTED FROM IN A. I. R. 1953 (concl'd.)

- (46) A. I. R. 1946 Mad. 337=I. L. R. (1946) Mad. 795 = 1946-1 Mad. L. J. 17 = 1946 Mad. W. N. 195, Chellamma v. Ramkrishnarao
Reversed in A. I. R. 1953 S. C. 425.
- (46) A. I. R. 1946 Mad. 434=227 Ind. Cas. 496=1946-2 Mad. L. J. 72 = 1946 Mad. W. N. 422 = 59 Mad. L. W. 319, Viswa Sundara Row v. Kusala Ramayya
Reversed in A. I. R. 1953 S. C. 370.
- (47) A. I. R. 1947 Mad. 68=1946-2 Mad. L. J. 229=231 Ind. Cas. 276=59 Mad. L. W. 520 = 1946 M. W. N. 609, Umar Pulawar v. Dawood Rowther Overruled in A. I. R. 1953 S. C. 228.
- (48) A. I. R. 1948 Mad. 16=48 Cri. L. J. 963 = I. L. R. 1948 Mad. 434=1947 Mad. W. N. 523=1947-2 Mad. L. J. 117=60 Mad. L. W. 421, In re Abdul Karim Dissented from in A. I. R. 1953 Orissa 227.
- (48) A. I. R. 1948 Mad. 452=61 Mad. L. W. 359=1949 M. W. N. 336, Vellayan Chettiar v. Receivers, O. A. Narayanaswami Iyer Dissented from in A. I. R. 1953 Raj. 121.
- (48) A. I. R. 1948 Mad. 496=1948-1 Mad. L. J. 241, In the matter of Viswanathan Chettiar
Dissented from in A. I. R. 1953 Bom. 19.
- (49) A. I. R. 1949 Mad. 435=I. L. R. (1949) Mad. 566 = 1948-2 Mad. L. J. 521, Manickam v. Ramanathan Chettiar Dissented from in A. I. R. 1953 M. B. 272.
- (49) A. I. R. 1949 Mad. 742 = 1949-1 Mad. L. J. 514 = 62 Mad. L. W. 316, Murahari Rao v. Bapayya
Dissented from in A. I. R. 1953 Mad. 767.
- (50) O. S. A. No. 34 of 1947, D/- 17-3-1950 (Mad.)
Reversed in A. I. R. 1953 S. C. 235.
- (50) A. I. R. 1950 Mad. 16=1949-1 Mad. L. J. 395 = 62 Mad. L. W. 276=1949 Mad. W. N. 224, Kesanna v. Venkamma
Reversed in A. I. R. 1953 S. C. 21.
- (50) A. I. R. 1950 Mad. 151 = 1949-2 Mad. L. J. 517, Salma Bi v. Mohammad Ebrahim Sahib Dissented from in A. I. R. 1953 Nag. 37.
- (50) A. I. R. 1950 Mad. 321 = 1950-1 Mad. L. J. 63 = 1950 M. W. N. 7=63 M. L. W. 21, Lakshmi Ammal v. Narayana Swami
(1) Dissented from in A. I. R. 1953 Bom. 342.
(2) Dissented from in A. I. R. 1953 Mad. 712.
- (51) A. I. R. 1951 Mad. 191 = 1951-1 Mad. L. J. 527 = 1951 Mad. W. N. 445 = 1951 Mad. W. N. Cr. 125 = 64 Mad. L. W. 620=52 Cri. L. J. 744, C. P. Sarathy v. State of Madras
Reversed in A. I. R. 1953 S. C. 53.
- (51) A. I. R. 1951 Mad. 572 = I. L. R. 1950 Mad. 339 = 62 Mad. L. W. 635 = 1949-2 Mad. L. J. 88 = 1949 Mad. W. N. 424 = 1949-19 Com. Cas. 138, Jawahar Mills Ltd. Salem v. Sha Mulchand and Co. Ltd.
Reversed in A. I. R. 1953 S. C. 98.
- (51) A. I. R. 1951 Mad. 809 = 1951-1 Mad. L. J. 364 = 64 Mad. L. W. 321 = 1951 Mad. W. N. 316, Veerayamma v. Venkanna Overruled in A. I. R. 1953 Mad. 176.
- (52) Writ Petn. No. 599 of 1952, D/- 16-9-1952 (Mad.)
Reversed in A. I. R. 1953 S. C. 210.
- (52) A. I. R. 1952 Mad. 305 = (1951) 19 I. T. R. 261, Commr. of Income-tax v. Thiagaraja Chetty & Co.
Reversed in A. I. R. 1953 S. C. 527.
- (53) A. I. R. 1953 Mad. 54=1952-1 Mad. L. J. 540=65 Mad. L. W. 377=1952 Mad. W. N. 253, Sambandam v. General Manager, South Indian Railway Dissented from in A. I. R. 1953 Pat. 92.
- (53) A. I. R. 1953 Mad. 66=1953 Cri. L. J. 256=1952-2 M. L. J. 725=65 M. L. W. 892, Public Prosecutor v. A. K. Gopalan Dissented from in A. I. R. 1953 Sau. 170.
- (53) A. I. R. 1953 Mad. 91 = 65 Mad. L. W. 1024 = 3 S. T. C. 396 = 1952-2 Mad. L. J. 593 = 1952 Mad. W. N. 861 = 1952 Mad. W. N. (Cr.) 249 = 1953 Cri. L. J. 290, Poppatlal Shah v. State of Madras
Reversed in A. I. R. 1953 S. C. 274.
- (53) A. I. R. 1953 Mad. 206=1952-2 Mad. L. J. 436=65 Mad. L. W. 897, St. Joseph's A. and M. Works v. Maria Soosai Pillai
Dissented from in A. I. R. 1953 Mad. 766.

THE JAMMU & KASHMIR UNIVERSITY LIBRARY.

DATE LOANED

Class No. [REDACTED] Book No. [REDACTED]
Vol. [REDACTED]

Vol. _____ Copy _____

Accession No.

THE ALL INDIA REPORTER 1953 Madras High Court

A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 1

SATYANARAYANA RAO AND RAJAGOPALAN JJ.

Nadar Transports Tiruchirapalli by its Managing Partner, Appellant v. The State of Madras, represented by the Secretary to Government, Home Department, Madras and others, Respondents.

Letters Patent Appeal No. 72 of 1952, D/-8-4-1952.

(a) Constitution of India Art. 226 — Certiorari — Exercise of discretion by Central Road Traffic Board — Reduction of number of permits issued to person — No apparent error on face of order — Interference with discretion exercised — (Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 64).

Where the Central Road Traffic Board in the exercise of its discretion reduces the number of bus permits issued to a person the High Court, in the absence of error apparent on the face of the order, cannot interfere with the discretion exercised even if the grounds given in support of the order are such as would not have appealed to it, if it were considering the matter for the first time.

(Para 5)

Anno: Civ. P. C. App. III, Constn. of India, Art. 226 N. 13; Mot. Veh. Act, S. 64 N. 1.

(b) Motor Vehicles Act (1939) S. 64 — Scope — Right of appeal under Cls. (a) and (f).

Clauses (a) and (f) of S. 64 are intended to apply to different situations. Cl. (a) is confined only to cases where a person is aggrieved by the refusal of the Regional Transport Authority to grant a permit to him or is aggrieved by any condition attached to a permit granted to him. There may be a person who while applying for the grant of a permit for himself has also objected to the grant of a permit to the other. In such a case if the permit is refused to him he would fulfil the conditions of both Cls. (a) and (f). There may be a person who though he had not applied for a permit to himself, was a person who provided transport facilities and opposed the grant of a permit to another, & if the permit is granted to the other, notwithstanding that he did not apply for a permit he would be entitled to prefer an appeal against the order under Cl. (f), though he would not answer the description in Cl. (a) as a person aggrieved by the refusal of the Regional Transport Authority to grant a permit and though he opposed the grant of the permit only formally and not by a representation in writing as required by S. 57 sub-ss. (3) and (4).

(Para 6)

Anno: Mot. Veh. Act S. 64 N. 1.

(c) Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 64 — grounds that can be urged and considered by Appellate authority.

The restriction in S. 57 (4) that no representations should be considered by the Regional Transport Authority is confined to the hearing before the Regional Transport Authority, and it does not extend to the appellate authority. In urging the grounds in the appeal against the grant of a permit the opposer is not confined to the representations, if any, made by him before the Regional Transport Authority and the power of the appellate authority namely, the Central Road Traffic Board in considering the grounds urged against the order is not confined only to the representations, if any, made before the Regional Transport Authority. The appellate authority has unrestricted powers to deal with the appeal and consider the grounds available in the records which require reconsideration. No doubt the appellate authority cannot consider grounds or objections not urged by anybody before Regional Transport Authority, but even if one person urged objections to the grant of the permit, it would be open to another person who had not urged those objections to take advantage of them and urge them as grounds of appeal before the appellate authority, and the appellate authority would be free to consider not only the representations, if any, made by the appellant but also by other parties who were parties to the proceedings before the Regional Transport Authority.

(Para 7)

Anno: Mot. Veh. Act, S. 64 N. 1.

K. Bhashyam, C. A. Vaidhyalingam, T. Venkatadri and K. Ramachandra Rao, for Appellant; Govt. Pleader and M. N. Nambiar, for Respondents.

SATYANARAYANA RAO J.: This is an appeal against the judgment of our learned brother, Subba Rao J., dismissing an application for the issue of a writ of certiorari to quash the orders of the State of Madras and the Cen-

2 Madras

1 Traffic Board dated 14-5-51 and 10-2-51 respectively. Our learned brother, in the 51 respondent under appeal, has set out the facts judiciously and it will be sufficient to more of ourselves in this judgment to such of facts as are essential for the disposal of this Letters Patent Appeal.

(2) The appellant, Nadar Transports, Tiruchirapalli, and the third respondent, Shanmugham Pillai, were competitors for permits to run buses on two routes, route 1-A and route 8. In the first instance, the Regional Transport Authority issued two permits to the appellant for route 1-A and one to the respondent for the same route and granted one permit in route 8 to the appellant. This order was subsequently cancelled and there was a fresh notification on the 1st October 1950, in which the number of the buses to run in route No. 8 was increased from one to two.

The Regional Transport Authority granted five permits to the appellant for routes 1-A and 8, i.e., three permits to ply three buses in route 1-A and two permits to ply two buses in route 8. Before the Regional Transport Authority, the third respondent did not make any representations against the grant of the permits to the appellant.

The order granting five permits to the appellant was the subject matter of an appeal by the third respondent to the Central Road Traffic Board, which modified the order of the Regional Transport Authority by granting two permits for route 8 to the respondent and restricting the appellant's right to three permits in route 1-A. There was an application to revise this order to the State of Madras under S. 64-A and that application was unsuccessful. Thereafter the appellant approached this court with an application to issue a writ of certiorari quashing the proceedings of the Government.

The matter was heard by Subba Rao J. and before him three questions were raised on behalf of the appellant: (1) Shanmugham Pillai, the third respondent did not apply for permits, and therefore, the Central Road Traffic Board had no power to issue two permits to him; (2) As Shanmugham Pillai did not file any written representation before the Regional Transport Authority under S. 57 (4) of the Motor Vehicles Act he had no right of appeal against that order under S. 64 of the said Act; (3) the order of the Regional Transport Authority is vitiated by an error apparent on the face of the record. On all the points the learned Judge decided against the appellant. He found on the first point that in fact the two applications filed by the respondent were treated as applications for two permits and the enquiry proceeded on that basis. This point however is not now pressed before us.

(3) On the second point he found that the appellant had an undoubted right of appeal as he was an aggrieved party under S. 64-A of the Act. On the third point he was not satisfied that there was any error apparent on the face of the record to attract the jurisdiction of this court to quash the order of the Government by a Writ of Certiorari.

(4) Before us Mr. K. Bhashyam, the learned advocate for the appellant, argued only two points. In the first place he urged that there was an error apparent on the face of the record; and secondly that the respondent had no right of appeal against the order of the Regional Transport Authority to the Central Road Traffic Board, and in any event as he made no representations before the Regional Transport Authority objecting to the grant of a permit to the appellant, he was precluded from raising any ground attacking the order of the Regional Transport Authority as being invalid and unjust.

(5) As regards the first point, it was claimed that the statement in the order of the Central Road Traffic Board, that the appellant was a new entrant and that therefore he should not be given permits for five buses at one and the same time, was an obvious error, as he was running buses on temporary permits even by that time, and what is more, the respondent also was in a similar position, and they ought not to have made any invidious distinction between the respondent and the appellant on that ground. In a sense the appellant undoubtedly was a new entrant, for, it was admitted that before 25-4-1949 the date of the first order of the Regional Transport Authority under which two permits for route 1-A and one permit for route 8 were granted to the appellant, he did not run any bus and had no experience of bus service. The reason that he was a new entrant was given by the appellate authority for reducing the number of permits from 5 to 3 and not for excluding him altogether from the grant of permits. They also gave as an additional reason that the respondent was an efficient operator. For these reasons, they granted two permits for route 8 in favour of the respondent. There is no error apparent on the face of that order, and the discretion exercised by the Central Road Traffic Board cannot be interfered with by this court in a writ of certiorari even if the grounds that have been given in support of the order are such as would not appeal to us if we are considering the matter for the first time. The objection, therefore, that the order was vitiated by an error apparent on the face of the record, must be overruled, and we agree with the learned Judge that there is no substance in this contention.

(6) The second objection resolves itself into two parts. In the first place the question is raised whether the respondent had a right of appeal at all to the Central Road Traffic Board. The second aspect raises the question of the scope and limit of the power of the appellate authority in disposing of the matter. Two subsections of S. 64 of the Motor Vehicles Act are relevant in this connection. Under sub-sec. (a) "any person aggrieved by the refusal of the Provincial or a Regional Transport Authority to grant a permit, or by any condition attached to a permit granted to him," and under sub-sec. (f) "any person.....who, having opposed the grant of a permit, is aggrieved by the grant thereof....." "may, within the prescribed time and in the prescribed manner, appeal to the prescribed authority who shall give such person and the original authority an opportunity of being heard."

The respondent was undoubtedly an aggrieved person as the regional transport authority refused to grant him a permit for route 8, and he would therefore be entitled to prefer an appeal against the order granting a permit in favour of the appellant.

Under sub-sec. (f) the respondent was a person providing transport facilities; but the question is whether he can be treated as a person who opposed the grant of a permit. The argument urged is that under S. 57, sub-ss. (3) and (4) a person objecting to the grant of a permit to another is required to make his representations in connection therewith within thirty days from the date of publication of the application or the substance thereof in the prescribed manner, and if he fails to make a representation within the time permitted by law, he is precluded from making any further representations to the Regional Transport Authority objecting to the grant of the permit to the other. Of course, the representation must be made in writing before the appointed date, furnishing also simultaneously a copy to the applicant. The argument is that, as the third respondent made no representation before the Regional Transport Authority objecting to the grant of a permit in favour of the appellant, he cannot be described as a person who opposed the grant of a permit, and therefore the respondent could not have claimed a right of appeal to the Central Road Traffic Board.

Sec. 64, sub-secs. (a) and (f) are intended in our opinion to apply to different situations. Sub-sec. (a) is confined only to cases where a person is aggrieved by the refusal of the Regional Transport Authority to grant a permit to him or is aggrieved by any condition attached to a permit granted to him. There may be a person who while applying for the grant of a permit for himself has also objected to the grant of a permit to the other. In such a case, if the permit is refused to him he would fulfil the conditions of both sub-secs. (a) and (f). There may be a person who though he had not applied for a permit to himself, was a person who provided transport facilities and opposed the grant of a permit to another, and if the permit is granted to the other, notwithstanding that he did not apply for a permit he would be entitled to prefer an appeal against the order under sub-sec. (f), though he would not answer the description in sub-sec. (a) as a person aggrieved by the refusal of the Regional Transport Authority to grant a permit. The language used in sub-sec. (f) is restricted only to opposition to the grant of a permit, for it says "having opposed the grant of permit". It does not say that he should be a person who made also a representation in writing opposing the grant of a permit to the other as required by S. 57, sub-secs. (3) and (4). A person, without filing any written representation objecting to the grant of a permit to another, might formally object to the grant of a permit, and even such a person, if he satisfies the other requirements that he is a person providing transport facilities, might possibly have a right of appeal. The view taken therefore by Subba Rao J. that the third respondent had a right of appeal under sub-sec. (a) in the present case is undoubtedly correct.

(7) There remains the further question, whether, in urging the grounds in the appeal, the respondent was confined to the representations, if any, made by him and whether the power of the appellate authority in considering the grounds urged against the order is to be confined only to the representations, if any, made by the respondent before the Regional Transport Authority, or whether the appellate authority has unrestricted powers to deal with the appeal and consider the grounds available in the records which require reconsideration. The right of appeal is conferred upon an appellant, and the power of the appellate authority is not restricted in any manner either by the provisions of S. 64 or by any of the rules made under the power conferred by the Act. The last clause of S. 64 says that the appeal should be preferred within the prescribed time and in the prescribed manner to the prescribed authority, and the prescribed authority, in this case, the Central Road Traffic Board, should give such person, i.e., the person who is aggrieved by the order, i.e., the appellant before it, and the original authority, i.e., the Regional Transport Authority, an opportunity of being heard.

"Prescribed" means of course prescribed by the rules made under the Act and there are no rules made under the Act so far as we are able to see (and our attention was not drawn to any rule) which restricts the powers of the appellate authority in dealing with the matter and confines it only to the grounds, if any, urged by the aggrieved person before the Regional Transport Authority. The opportunity to be given no doubt, is restricted to the person who is aggrieved by the order i.e., the appellant and the original authority; but if a permit was already granted to a person, it will be opposed to all principles of natural justice to cancel that permit without giving the grantee an opportunity of being heard. It is perhaps for this reason we are told that the uniform practice adopted by the Central Road Traffic Board is to issue notice to the person to whom the Regional Transport Authority has granted a permit and that procedure we think is the proper procedure.

The restriction in S. 57(4) that no representations should be considered by the Regional Transport Authority is confined in our opinion to the hearing before the Regional Transport Authority, and it does not extend to the appellate authority. We do not thereby mean that it is open to the appellate authority to consider grounds or objections not urged by anybody before the Regional Transport Authority, but even if one person urged objections to the grant of the permit, it would be open to another person who had not urged those objections to take advantage of them and urge them as grounds of appeal before the appellate authority, and the appellate authority would be free to consider not only the representations if any made by the appellant but also by other parties who were parties to the proceedings before the Regional Transport Authority. In other words, their discretion is unfettered in the sense that it is open to them to consider all the grounds which were on record when the matter received consideration before the Regional Transport Authority. We think, therefore, that the contention that the respondent was not entitled to raise the objections which he raised before the Central Road Traffic Board, as he did not raise them before the Regional Transport Authority cannot be upheld. In the result the Letters Patent Appeal is dismissed with costs Rs. 250.

A/M.K.S.

Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 3

GOVINDA MENON AND KRISHNASWAMI NAYUDU JJ.

British India Steam Navigation Co. Ltd., by agents Messrs. Binny and Co. (Madras) Ltd., Appellants v. T. P. Sokkalal Ram Sait by agent K. A. Hariganga Ram, Respondent.

C. C. C. Appeal No. 27 of 1950, D/- 1-4-1952.

(a) Carriers' Act (1865) S. 2 — Carriage of goods in high seas — Act has no application in view of definition of common carrier in S. 2. (Para 7)

Anno: Carriers' Act S. 2 N. 1.

(b) Carriage of Goods by Sea Act (1925) — Carriage of goods by sea — Law applicable in India before Act, was common law of England as applicable to common carriers and not the provisions of Contract Act relating to bailment. 18 Cal. 620 (PC); 32 Mad. 95; AIR 1915 Mad. 833; AIR 1928 Bom. 5; AIR 1931 Sind 124. Relied on. — (Contract Act (1872) Ss. 151 and 152). (Paras 9, 11 and 13)

Anno: Contract Act, Ss. 151 and 152 N. 2.

(c) Carriage of Goods by Sea Act (1925) Sch. Art. 1(c) and Art. VI — Deck Cargo at owner's risk — Art. VI does not apply — Carriage of such cargo is not governed by Contract Act — Such cargo not being "goods" within meaning Art. 1(c), carriage of such goods is not governed by Carriage of Goods by Sea Act, 1925, but by English common law, i.e. by the terms of the contract embodied in the bill of lading — Liability of the common carrier in such case is not affected by Ss. 151 and 152, Contract Act — (Contract Act (1872) Ss. 151 and 152). (Paras 14, 15)

Anno: Contract Act, Ss. 151 and 152 N. 2.

(d) Common carriers — Carriage by sea — Carriage of deck cargo at owner's risk — Contract embodied in Bill of Lading exonerating carrier, or its agents and servants from liability for loss due to negligence or otherwise — Short delivery — Carrier held not liable for loss.

Where the goods were sent by ship on high seas as deck cargo on the contract embodied in the Bill of Lading which contained a Clause that the contract was not governed by the Carriage of Goods by Sea Act but by the terms of the Bill of Lading and that the carriers and their agents or servants or any of them would not be liable whatever, in case of carriage of live animals and/or deck cargo, for any loss or expense connected therewith, however caused, and whether due to negligence, unseaworthiness or otherwise, if some of the goods are found missing at the destination, the non-delivery amounts to "loss" within the meaning of the contract and by virtue of the exemption clause in the contract, the carriers are not liable for the loss even if it is due to negligence on their part or on the part of their servants. (The contract was not governed by the Contract Act, Ss. 151, 152 or by Carriage of Goods by Sea Act 1925). (1917) AC 148 Relied. Case law reviewed. (Paras 4, 26)

King and Partridge, for Appellants; T. R. Arunachalam and R. Mathurbhutham, for Respondent.

REFERENCES: Courtwar/Chronological/ Paras

- (91) 18 Cal 620: (18 Ind App 121 PC) 9, 11, 13
 (27) 49 All 236: (AIR 1926 All 698) 5
 (78-79) 3 Bom 109 13
 (28) AIR 1928 Bom 5: (52 Bom 37) 12
 (84) 10 Cal 166: (13 Cal LR 342 FB) 13, 14
 (84) 10 Cal 489 20
 (11) 38 Cal 28: (9 Ind Cas 364) 14
 (24) 51 Cal 615: (AIR 1924 Cal 725) 5
 (05) 28 Mad 400 21
 (09) 32 Mad 95: (1 Ind Cas 977) 12, 14, 22
 (15) 38 Mad 941: (AIR 1915 Mad 833) 13, 22

- (20) 43 Mad 617: (AIR 1920 Mad 512) 5
 (21) 62 Ind Cas 378: (AIR 1920 Low Bur 139 FB) 18
 (31) AIR 1931 Sind 124: (25 Sind LR 222) 12
 (50) 5 DLR (Trav-C) 346: (AIR 1951 Trav-C 1) 13
 (1878) 3 QBD 195: (47 LJQB 131) 19
 (1895) 2 QB 301: (64 LJ QB 707) 23
 (1904) 1 KB 412: (73 LJ KB 222) 19
 (1905) AC 93: (74 LJ KB 338) 16
 (1908) AC 16: (77 LJ KB 82) 16
 (1909) AC 369: (78 LJ PC 111) 17
 (1914) 1 KB 263: (83 LJ KB 418) 4
 (1915) 1 KB 199: (84 LJ KB 449) 4
 (1917) AC 148: (46 LJ KB 641) 4
 (1932) 1 KB 490: (101 LJ KB 521) 24
 (1937) P 130: (106 LJ P 81) 24, 26

GOVINDA MENON J.: The defendants in O. S. No. 711 of 1948 on the file of the City Civil Court, Madras, appeal against the decree of the learned Additional City Civil Judge awarding a sum of Rs. 1804 being the price of 44 bags of beedi leaves short delivered to the plaintiff at the Madras harbour from S. S. "Howra" in which 1532 bags of beedi leaves had been shipped for transit from Vizagapatam to Madras.

(2) The plaintiffs were the consignees of 1,532 bags of beedi leaves shipped at Vizagapatam for being carried to Madras by S. S. "Howra". The defendants are the British India Steam Navigation Co. Ltd. by agents Messrs. Binny and Co (Madras) Ltd who are the owners of the ship in which these bags were carried. Out of the 1532 bags shipped at Vizag the evidence is to the effect that only 1488 bags were delivered at the Madras harbour, 44 bags being not traceable and hence short delivered. The suit was laid for recovering the price of these 44 bags and as stated above, the lower court granted a decree for a sum of Rs. 1804. Against that decree, the defendants have appealed. The only contest between the parties is with regard to the liability of the defendants for the price of the 44 bags short delivered.

(3) Ex. A. 30 is the Mate's receipt which shows that the 1532 bags of beedi leaves, the contents of some of the bags being exposed at the mouths, were stowed on deck at shippers' risk. The correspondence shows that on the complaint made on behalf of the plaintiffs, the defendants tried their utmost to find out how and where the 44 bags were lost and they were not able to find out the cause of the loss. In Ex. A. 7 dated 3rd December 1947, the defendants wrote to the plaintiffs' agent that they have made enquiries at all the ports at which the vessel called but could not trace the bags at all. There are similar letters, Ex. A. 15 regarding the search made for the goods, Ex. A. 16 where reference was made to the Calcutta principals and by Ex. A. 17 the defendants complained to the Traffic Manager, Madras Port Trust, that these and other missing bags of beedi leaves must have been delivered in error to others after they were landed and the Traffic manager was requested to investigate this shortage thoroughly. Ex. A. 18 is a further reminder to the Traffic Manager. After some correspondence between the plaintiffs and the defendants as well as between the defendants and the Port Trust and other authorities, finally by their letter dated 14-5-1948 the defendants disclaimed their liability for the amount and stated that they were unable to entertain the claim and accept any responsibility on the ground that the bill of lading was subject to the shippers' risk and contained a clause that the common carrier is not liable for the loss. The clause on which the defendants rely is typewritten and is pasted at the end of the printed bill of lading. It reads as follows.

"Notwithstanding anything to the contrary herein contained live animals and/or deck cargo are received, kept and carried at the sole risk of the owner thereof, and neither the carrier, (which expression includes both the owner of the ship and the operating ship owner for the time being) nor any stevedors, wharfinger nor any agent or servant of any of them nor any other person whomsoever for whom the carrier may be responsible shall be under any liability whatever for the goods, nor for any loss or expense connected therewith however caused and whether due to negligence, unseaworthiness or otherwise. Shippers and all concerned are, therefore, advised to see that their insurance policies cover all and every risk whatsoever whether ashore or afloat and are made without recourse to the carrier or any of the parties aforementioned".

On account of this special clause in the bill of lading, the defendants contended that the plaintiffs had notice and knowledge to the effect that neither the carrier, nor the agent or servant, or any persons for whom the carrier may be responsible, shall be under any liability whatever for the cargo, nor for any loss or expense connected therewith, however caused, and whether due to negligence, unseaworthiness or otherwise. The defendants further pleaded that the loss has not arisen by reason of their negligence or any of their agents or servants and that in any event any claim founded on such negligence is not maintainable by reason of the special contract between the parties.

(4) The lower court has held, relying upon —Wills v. Great Western Rly. Co., (1914) 1 K. B. 263 that when consignment which was booked at owner's risk arrived at its destination and some of the goods were found missing, and the plaintiff made a claim upon the defendant for the non-delivery of a part of the goods, such non-delivery would not amount to "loss" within the meaning of the contract and that the plaintiff was entitled to damages. Apparently the attention of the learned Judge was not invited to the fact that this decision is no longer good law in England, because though this decision was confirmed by the Court of Appeal in —Wills v. Great Western Rly., (1915) 1 K. B. 199, when the matter was taken up to the House of Lords, in their decision reported in —Great Western Rly. v. Wills, (1917) A. C. 148, the House of Lords reversed the judgment under appeal before them and held that non-delivery of part of the consigned goods was loss within the meaning of the contract. We have therefore to take it that the non-delivery in this case would amount to loss.

(5) Our attention has been invited to a few cases under the Indian Railways Act, viz, —East Indian Rly. Co. v. Jogpat Singh, 51 Cal 615 —M. and S. M. Rly. Co. Ltd. v. Subbarao, 43 Mad 617 and —Sheo Dayal Niranjana Lal v. G. I. P. Rly. Co., 49 All 236, for the interpretation of the term "loss" in risk notes, and the opinion expressed therein is that the railway company is liable if the goods are lost in transit involuntarily or through inadvertences and that the word "loss" does not mean pecuniary or other loss suffered by the owner of the goods through being wrongfully deprived of the possession, use, or enjoyment thereof, but means loss of the goods while in transit, and such loss occurs whenever the railway company to which the goods have been consigned for conveyance involuntarily or through inadvertence loses possession of the goods. This argument was intended to show that the non-delivery was loss. There is no reason why the same interpretation should not be used when the carriage of goods is by sea.

(6) The argument advanced on behalf of the plaintiff is that since the defendants have not shown that the common carrier, or their agents, or servants were not guilty of any negligence, it should be presumed that the non-delivery of part of the goods must make them liable for damages.

(7) What we have to decide is whether the dispute in the present case is governed by the statutory law in India or by the English Common Law, and if it is the English Common Law, what exactly is the nature of that law in regard to contracts of kind. The defendants have disclaimed their liability on account of the special contract as alleged by them in paragraphs 4 and 4 (a) of their written statement. The Carriers' Act, 1865, (Act III of 1865) was the first statutory enactment in India by which common carriers are enabled to limit their liability for loss, or of damage to, property delivered to them to be carried. But in this Act "common carrier" is defined as a person other than the Government, engaged in the business of transporting for hire property from place to place, by land or in land navigation for all persons indiscriminately. Therefore, in view of the fact that carriage in the present case was on the high seas, Act III of 1865 will not apply. The other statute relating to common carriers is the Indian Carriage of Goods by Sea Act, 1925 (Act XXVI of 1925) enacted on the lines of the English Act of 1924, 14 and 15 George V, Ch. 22 a comparison of the two statutes shows that they are practically identical. The English Act contains six sections whereas the Indian Act contains one more, viz, S. 7 which speaks of saving and operation. With regard to the schedules and rules, the two enactments are in pari materia. Article 1, sub-clause (c) of the schedule of both the Acts defines "Goods" as follows:

"Goods include goods, wares, merchandises, and articles of every kind whatsoever, except live animals and cargo which by the contract of the carriage is stated as being carried on deck and is so carried."

The appellants contend that the bags of beedi leaves in question being carried on deck at shippers' risk, are exempt from the carriage of goods by Sea Act on account of the definition of "goods" contained in Art. 1, sub-clause (c) and that on account of the special exemption clause in the bill of lading they are exempt from the liability for the loss or damages arising out of any cause whatsoever. It is further contended that this provision has been held to limit the liability for loss arising out of their own, or their servants' negligence as well. In short, the argument on behalf of the appellants is that since the Carriage of Goods by Sea Act does not apply the only law governing the parties in a matter like this is the English Common law and under the English Common law, according to precedents and decided cases as well as text book writers it is open to the carrier to contract himself out of the liability by special provisions as has been done in the bill of lading, Ex. A. 29. He further contends that the parties have agreed with regard to the law applicable as found in clause 16 of the Bill of lading, which is to the following effect:

"Law applicable. The contract evidenced by the Bill of lading shall be governed by the Laws of England and in accepting this bill of lading the shippers and consignees expressly accept and agree to all its stipulations, exceptions and conditions whether written, stamped or printed as fully as if signed by him or them."

We have to find out how far this contention is justified.

(8) But the respondent's learned counsel maintains that even in the case of deck cargo the rule relating to Carriage of Goods by Sea Act applies. He invites our attention to the fact that the word "goods" has not been defined among the sections of the Act but only in the rules under the schedule and that Article VI of the rules should apply. If that is so, any contract like the one in question, totally exempting the common carrier from liability is opposed to the special conditions postulated in Art. VI and in any event Sec. 23 of the Contract Act applies to this case as the contract in question is opposed to public policy. Total extinguishment of liability due to any cause whatsoever should not be condoned as it is a matter which is opposed to public policy. It is argued that the meaning of the word "goods" though it is narrower in the schedule and rules, is much wider so far as the Act is concerned.

(9) That prior to the passing of the Carriage of Goods by Sea Act in 1925, the common law of England was applicable to common carriers and not the provisions of the Indian Contract Act relating to bailments is clear from previous decisions of this court as well as other High courts. In the — 'Irawaddy Flotilla Co. v. Bugwandas', 18 Cal 620 (P. C.) at p. 628 their Lordships of the Privy Council observe as follows:

"Notwithstanding the able arguments of the learned counsel for the appellants, it seems to their Lordships that there are several considerations, not all of equal weight, but all pointing in the same direction, which lead irresistibly to the conclusion that the Act of 1872 was not intended to alter the law applicable to common carriers."

(10) Again at page 631 their Lordships observed: "These considerations lead their Lordships to the conclusion that the Act of 1872 was not intended to deal with the law relating to common carriers and notwithstanding the generality of some expressions in the chapter on bailments, they think that common carriers are not within the Act."

(11) The provisions of the Indian Contract Act referred to above are Ss. 151 and 152, the former of which makes it obligatory that the bailee is bound to take as much care of the goods bailed to him as a man of ordinary prudence would, under similar circumstances, take of his own goods of the same bulk, quality and value as the goods bailed, and S. 152 absolves the bailee, in the absence of any special contract, from any responsibility for the loss, destruction or deterioration of the thing bailed, if he has taken the amount of care of it described in S. 151. The effect of these two sections is that if the bailee takes reasonable care of the goods, then he will be absolved from liability for the loss or destruction of the goods but he is bound to take reasonable care of the goods bailed as his own goods. According to their Lordships' decision in — 'The Irawaddy Flotilla Co. v. Bugwandas', 18 Cal 620 (P. C.) these sections would not apply to common carriers so far as India is concerned. There are passages in this judgment which makes it applicable to carriages on the high seas also.

(12) In — 'Sheik Mahamad Ravuther v. The British India Steam Navigation Co Ltd.', 32 Mad 95, two of the learned Judges who constituted the Bench of three, were of opinion that it is the English Common Law that applied and not the Indian Contract Act. But the third Judge, Sankaran Nair J. took a different view, though on the facts of the case he agreed with White C. J. Both White C. J. and Sankaran Nair J. held on the construction of the Bill of Lading, that the liability of the common carrier at that stage was specially provided for by a clause and they could not invoke in aid the general negligence clause in the body of the document and that they were not exempted from liability for negligence. But Wallis J. took a different view. Sankaran Nair J. held that the rule of English law, which allows ship owners to exempt themselves, by express contract, from liability for negligence cannot be applied in India, as it is inconsistent with the provisions of the Indian Contract Act and the manifest intention of the Legislature in enacting such provisions. Then the learned Judge referred to Ss. 148 and 151 of the Contract Act. He was further of opinion that a contract limiting such liability will be opposed to the public policy and void under S. 23 of the Contract Act, as it will be against the interests of the mercantile community and not necessary in the interests of the ship-owners. Though there may be something to be said in favour of the view taken by Sankaran Nair J. still we feel that we are bound by the consensus of authority in this court as well as other High Courts. In — 'Bombay Steam Navigation Co, Ltd. v. Vasudev Baburao', AIR 1928 Bom 5 and — 'Haji Shakoor Gany Firm v. Firm of Volkart Bros', A. I. R. 1931 Sind 124 the view taken is that the English Common law is applicable. It has to be remembered that both these decisions are after the passing of the Carriage of Goods by Sea Act.

(13) In 'Kariandan Kumber v. The British India Steam Navigation Co', 38 Mad 941, Sadasiva Aiyar and Tyabji JJ. considered this aspect of the case at great length and came to the conclusion that the English law is applicable. At page 945, Sadasiva Aiyar J. observes thus:

"As I am myself always inclined not to travel beyond Indian cases and Indian Statutes unless I am convinced that they are clearly not applicable, I would have gladly referred the questions of the applicability of the Contract Act, where it differs from the English Common law to a Full Bench, if I did not feel that I am concluded by the pronouncement of the Privy Council on this question. In the — 'Irawaddy Flotilla Co v. Bugwandas', 18 Cal 620 (P. C.), their Lordships have clearly approved of the decision of the Full Bench in — 'Moothorakant Shaw v. The Indian General Steam Navigation Co', 10 Cal 166 (F. B.) and disapproved of the contrary decision in — 'Kuverji Tulsidas v. The G. I. P. Rly. Co', 3 Bom 109. The effect of their Lordships' decision in the — 'Irawaddy Flotilla Co v. Bugwandas', 18 Cal 620 (P. C.) seems to me to be 'that the duties and liabilities of a common carrier are governed in India by the principles of the English common law on that subject' (except where they have been departed from in the case of some classes of common carriers by the Carriers Act of 1865 or by the Railway Acts of 1878 and 1890) and 'that notwithstanding some general expressions in the chapter on Bailments, a common carrier's responsibility is not within the Indian Contract Act of 1872'".

Tyabji J. also says the same thing at page 953: ".... It is not open to this court to say that the liability of such carriers as we have to deal with in this case is governed by S. 151 of the Indian Contract Act, after the decision of the Privy Council in the case of the — 'Irawaddy Flotilla Co v. Bugwandas', 18 Cal 620 (P. C.). In that case, the Privy Council had to decide whether the view of the Bombay High Court as expressed in — 'Kuverji Tulsidas v. Great Indian Peninsular Railway Co', 3 Bom 109 was correct or the view of the Calcutta High Court in — 'Moo- thara Kant Shaw v. The Indian General Steam Navigation Co', 10 Cal 166 and they said that they were compelled to decide in favour of the view of the Calcutta High Court and against that of the High Court of Bombay. In deciding against the view of the High Court of Bombay, they decided against the argument on which the appellant relied. They decided that the liability of carriers such as we have to deal with is not governed by the sections of the Indian Contract Act, relating to bailees".

We may also refer in this connection to a recent decision of the Travancore Cochin High Court in — 'Orient Ship Supply Co Ltd. v. Kalamarsand Co', 5 D. L. R. (Trav. C.) 346 where the learned Judges discussed the various cases on the topic. Therefore it can be taken as settled that prior to the enactment of the Carriage of Goods by Sea Act in 1925, the Common law of England was the law applicable so far as India was concerned. Does it make any difference to the law applicable after the passing of that Act? This Act was passed as a result of the International Conference on Maritime Law held at Brussels in October 1922, by which certain unanimous recommendations were made to the various Governments that took part in the conference to adopt as the basis of a convention a draft convention for the unification of certain rules relating to bills of lading and in pursuance to that, as we stated, in England the Carriage of Goods by Sea Act of 1924, 14 and 15 George V, Chapter 22 was passed which is practically 'ad idem' to the Indian Act.

(14) We have rejected the argument of the learned Counsel for the respondents that Art. VI in the schedule to Act XXVI of 1925 will be applicable to deck cargo. But still he argues relying upon certain observations of Sankaran Nair J. at page 126 of — 'Sheik Mahamad Ravuther v. The British India Steam Navigation Co, Ltd, 32 Mad. 95 that the principles of the Contract Act should be applied to a case like this. This argument has not found favour even at a time when the Carriage of Goods by Sea Act was not in existence. See — 'Moothura Kant Shaw v. The Indian General Steam Navigation Co', 10 Cal 166 (F. B.) and — 'British and Foreign Marine Insurance Co Ltd. v. Indian General Navigation and Rly. Co, Ltd', 38 Cal 28. If until the passing of the Carriage of Goods by Sea Act, the law relating to the carriage of goods by sea was governed by the Indian Contract Act, then there would have been some mention made of it at the time of the passing of the Carriage of Goods by Sea Act. The absence of any reference is an indication that there was no such thing.

(15) At page 475 of Carver's Carriage of Goods by Sea, 8th Edn. (1938) specific reference has been made to the fact that the English Carriage of Goods by Sea Act of 1924 does not apply to cargo which by contract of carriage is stated as being carried on deck and is so carried. (Schedule of rules, Art. I (c) such being the case, if in England the Act would not apply to carriage of goods by sea, we fail to see why in India also, after the passing of an identical statute its provisions should apply to carriage of goods by sea. We therefore have no doubt in holding that so far as the goods in question are concerned, the Act of 1925 would not apply. We are also of opinion that if the English Common Law applied then Ss. 151 and 152 of the Indian Contract Act cannot affect the liability of the common carrier.

(16) Now the important question arises as to whether the exemption clause which makes the carrier immune from all liability whatever for the goods or for any loss can be pleaded by the defendants in the present case where there is nothing to show how the bags of beedi leaves came to be short delivered. In other words the question is whether such a clause is valid or not. Before we discuss that question we may advert to the fact that the bill of lading, though expressly mentioned to be under the Indian Carriage of Goods by Sea Act and the schedule thereto, has this fact that the paramount clause relating to the application of that Act has been cancelled before the same was issued. That the liability for (of?) a common carrier for the loss, injury or delay in respect of the goods carried may be varied by contract is evident from the statement of the law in Halsbury's Laws of England, volume IV, page 27, Art. 37. Carver, even at the very outset at page 2 of his book states the following passage in dealing with such liabilities:

"Therefore it should be borne in mind that the decree of the responsibility which a ship owner impliedly undertakes, as described in this chapter, while remaining the fundamental basis which an express contract may modify is not in most cases the fundamental basis when the express contract is evidenced by a bill of lading".

At page 118 in Art. 77, of the same book it is stated that exceptions in the bill of lading should be construed against the ship owner when they are ambiguous and a passage from the judgment of Lord Loreburn L. C. in — 'Nelson Line v. James Nelson & Sons Ltd', (1908) A. C. 16 at p. 19 is quoted. If there is a general clause in a bill of lading by which the ship owner is exempted from liability for damage to goods whether arising from a defect existing at the time of the shipment or not, or from neglect of the master or crew, or from any other cause whatsoever, and that general clause is qualified by a second clause which exempted the ship owner from liability for damages from defects if reasonable means have been taken to provide against such defects and unseaworthiness, it was held by the House of Lords in — 'Elderslie Steamship Co. v. Borthwick, No. 1' (1905) A. C. 93 at p. 96 that the subsequent clause must prevail over the earlier clause. That is, their Lordships are of opinion that though it is open to a shipowner to exempt himself from liability by contracting that he would not be liable for any loss whatever even arising out of negligence, if another clause restricts exemption from liability only if reasonable means have been taken to provide against defects and unseaworthiness, the subsequent clause would prevail. At page 96, Earl of Halsbury L. C. lays down the law thus:

"It seems to me that if what has been called the large print had stood alone I should not have had the smallest doubt that it would have carried the shipowner the whole way; I can give no other construction to it than that which the words express; but the difficulty in his way is that he has thought proper to execute an instrument which has two different sets of phrases in it, and one rule of construction which must prevail is that you must give effect to every part of a document if you can — you must read as a whole. Mr. Carver has ingeniously spoken of independent contracts and independent paragraphs and so on, but we must remember that this one contract, and each of the parts of this contract must be read so as to give effect to the whole if it can.

My Lords, the only mode of so reading it is to read the first part of it thus: 'I am not to be liable for this', and then what comes after it by way of exception, 'I shall not be liable unless I have failed to take all reasonable means against the injury' that has happened. In that way you can read the two together, and this seems to me to be the only way in which you can make a reasonable and intelligible contract, and give effect to the words which the parties have agreed to."

Their Lordships are quite positive that if the large print clause, as they call it, which exempts the carriers from liability for all losses including non-delivery had stood alone, such a contract would be valid and binding.

(17) In the case reported in Chartered Bank of India, Australia and China v. British India Steam Navigation Co. Ltd., (1909) A.C. 369, there was a clause in the bill of lading that "the liability of the company shall absolutely cease when the goods are free of the ship's tackle, and thereupon the goods shall be at the risk for all purposes and in every respect of the shipper or consignee". What happened was that the goods were delivered to landing agents appointed by the company itself, but by the fraud of the landing agents, the goods never reached the consignees. Even in such a case it was held by their Lordships that although there had been no delivery under the bills of lading, yet the provision as to cesser of company's (defendants) liability directly the goods were free of the ship's tackle was perfectly clear, and that that was sufficient and effective to protect them.

(18) The rule of exception has been adopted in India almost uniformly as is seen from decisions of other High Courts, such as the one reported in 'B. I. S. No. Co. Ltd. v. Alibhai Mahomed', 62 Ind Cas 378 (Low. Bur) (F.B.)

(19) Learned counsel for the appellants referred us to two other cases, viz., — 'Lewis v. Great Western Rly. Co.', (1878) 3 Q.B.D. 195 and — 'Price and Co. v. Union Lighterage Co.', (1904) 1-K.B.412. On a perusal of these cases it seems to us that the principles enunciated therein cannot with any advantage be applied to the facts of the present case.

(20) In discussing as to the law applicable we had to refer to the decision in — 'Jellicoe v. The British Steam Navigation Co.', 10 Cal 489. But that judgment is further instructive in the application of the doctrine of the exemption of liability. That case arose out of a reference by a Judge of the Small Cause Court and the learned Judges of the Calcutta High Court, on the reference held that since the plaintiffs had accepted the terms of the bill of lading which contained a clause,

"carried and delivered subject to the conditions after mentioned ..... loss or damage for any act, neglect or default whatsoever of the pilot, master or mariners or other servants of the company, excepted"

they cannot make the common carrier liable for the loss of the goods. In that case, the goods were destroyed owing to the carelessness of the common carrier's servants and when the plaintiffs sued the company for damages it was held by the Calcutta High Court that the company were protected by their bill of lading the terms of which had been accepted by the plaintiffs. The terms were similar to the one which we have to consider now.

(21) In — 'Hajee Ismail Sait v. The Co. of the Messageries Maritimes of France', 28 Mad 400 this court has held that since carriers by sea for hire prior to the passing of the Carriage of Goods by Sea Act, are common law of England, under the English Common law, a common carrier may protect himself from liability for deliberate acts of misfeasance on the part of himself or his servants for losses arising even by acts of negligence. It is worthwhile to quote a passage from the judgment at page 403.

"By the English law applicable to common carriers, the common carrier may enter into any contract so as to protect himself, but he can only do so by clear, definite, and unambiguous words; If therefore the words used in the exemption clause of the bill of lading are clear, definite and unambiguous, they may suffice to protect the shipowner even from deliberate acts of misfeasance on the part of himself or his servants. On arrival at Madras the defendants delivered the plaintiff's goods, which were oats, in heavy rain and allowed them to get wet in the process. They might, if they had chosen to do so have taken the goods on and not delivered them until later when it was fine; and the plaintiff contends that their act in delivering the goods in rain instead of delaying the delivery until it was fine, was an act of deliberate misfeasance and not mere negligence as the learned Chief Judge has found in the case stated. We think the acts of the defendant's servants amounted only to negligence and that the learned Chief Judge is right in so holding. We further think that the words of the clause above quoted are sufficiently clear and definite to protect the defendants and we answer the question referred to us in the negative."

(22) In — 'Sheik Mahmad Ravuther v. British India Steam Navigation Co. Ltd.', 32 Mad 95 & — Kariandan Kumber v. The British India Steam Navigation Co. 38 Mad 941 there were similar clauses in the bills of lading and in the latter case this court was of opinion that such a clause relieved the common carrier of any responsibility. Such a clause, according to English law is not opposed to public policy and is valid and S. 23 of the Indian Contract Act has no application. We may say in this connection that the decision in — 'Kariandan Kumber v. The British India Steam Navigation Co.', 38 Mad 941 is applicable directly to the facts of the present case.

(23) A further argument was put forward based on the words in the exemption clause in the bill of lading, viz., "however caused and whether due to negligence, unseaworthiness, or otherwise," in this clause should be read as ejusdem generis but that argument has been repelled in — 'Baerselman v. Bailey', (1895) 2 Q. B. 301 where it has been laid down that these words should have full import and cannot be construed as ejusdem generis.

(24) In order to establish that the extinguishment of liability for any reason whatever cannot be had by means of a contract like the one in question, learned advocate for the respondents brought to our notice a decision in the Stranna, (1937) P. 130'. In that case Langton J. considered the effect of the expression "at charterer's risk" in the bill of lading and was of opinion that the words did not put on the owner of the goods the risk of loss in every case in which the cause of the loss was unknown and since the defendants the shipowners in that case, had failed to provide an explanation in any sense comparable in probability with the probability of their own negligence, in the loading, the defence failed. A perusal of this case leaves one with the impression that according to the learned Judge it is necessary that the carrier must show that there was no negligence in the case of deck cargo. At page 148, he observes as follows:

"Applying this line of thought to the present case I am at once confronted by the difficulty that the explanation given by the shipowners is exceedingly meagre. Their theory of cross currents is quite untenable, and their evidence at the best leaves the cause of the heeling completely unexplained. Mr. Willink urges that, although the words deck cargo "At charterer's risk" do not excuse the shipowners for negligence proved and determined, they will avail to put upon the goods owner the risk of loss through unascertained causes. As to this I feel that the statement is too wide. I can quite easily read the words "at charterer's risk" to mean that the goods owner takes the chance of some imperfectly ascertained cause of action. But to say that it confers on the shipowners a right to claim exemption from liability in every case in which the cause of the loss is unknown seems to me to be altogether too benevolent a construction in favour of the party who has inserted the exception. Pushed to its logical conclusion this argument would appear to go to the length of saying that these words excuse a bailee from giving any explanation of the loss of goods entrusted to him. Indeed he might well deem it wiser not to attempt an explanation since without one he must succeed".

He also referred to an earlier decision in — Svenssons Travaruktiebolag v. Cliffe Steamship Co., (1932) 1-K.B. 490 where Wright J. as he then was in considering the question of the carrier's liability in carrying goods under a contract of affreightment which contained a similar exception clause held that although the words in the charterparty "at charterer's risk" standing alone did not excuse the defendants in the case of a loss due to negligence on their part or on the part of their servants, those words must be read with the exception clause, and the effect of reading the two together was to enable the carriers to rely on the exception clause, which protected them against the consequences of such negligence. The exception clause was to effect that the carrier will not be liable even when the loss is occasioned by the negligence, default or error in judgment of the master mariners, or other persons employed by the shipowner or for whose acts he is responsible. All that is required in such cases for the shipowner to prove is that the ship was seaworthy and nothing more. It is argued by the learned counsel that the present case resembles the case in the Stranna, (1937) P. 130 where the shipowners did not let in any evidence as to how the loss occurred. It has to be noticed that the observations of Langton J. are somewhat wide and were, as the learned Judge says unnecessary for the decision of the case, because he premises the discussion by stating that since the case might go higher and that he may be proved to be wrong in this determination of the first point, he thought, it desirable to express his view as to this point. It seems to us that if the shipowner on this contract of affreightment is not liable even if the acts of negligence are on the part of the master mariner and other persons employed by the shipowner, it is not obligatory for him to show that there was negligence when a loss has occurred. It might be that the loss was due not because of any negligence at all but due to some unforeseen acts. In such a case, he is no doubt protected. Therefore the reasoning of Langton J. that if the bailee deemed it wiser not to attempt an explanation he is in a better position than if he had attempted an explanation is in our opinion somewhat overstrained. One can conceive of circumstances where a party can rely on strict legal technicality without attempting to put forward any definite case. What prevents a party from saying that if the words of a contract are to be construed in his favour he can keep silent and need not try to put forward any explanation? In our opinion the bill of lading in this case relieves the shipowner from any liability with regard to showing how the loss had occurred.

(25) Reference was also made to passages in Story on the Law of Bailments, 7th Edn. page 432 as well as Carver's Carriage of Goods by Sea, 8th Edn. pages 167 and 168, Sec. 103 onwards. S. 490 in Story on the Law of Bailments is as follows:

"The reason assigned by Lord Holt for this doctrine is as follows: 'The law', says he 'charges this person (the carrier) thus intrusted to carry goods against all events but acts of God and of the enemies of the king. For, though the forces be never so great, as if an irresistible multitude of people should rob him, nevertheless he is chargeable. And this is a political establishment contrived by the policy of the law for the safety of all persons, the necessity of persons, that they may be safe in their dealings. For else these carriers might have an opportunity of undoing all persons, that had any dealings with them, by combining with thieves &c. and yet doing it in such a clandestine manner, as would not be possible to be discovered. And this is the reason the law is founded upon in that point.' The ground of the resolution is (As Sir William Jones has justly observed) not the reward of the carrier (upon which Sir Edward Coke lays much stress) but the public employment exercised by the carrier, and the danger of his combining with robbers to the infinite injury of commerce and extreme inconvenience to society. He is treated as an insurer against all but the excepted perils, upon that distrust, which an ancient writer has called the sinew of wisdom. In truth, the reason or policy of the rule is borrowed from the Roman law, where (as we have already seen), the rule is applied equally to carriers by water to innkeepers, and to stable keepers; but it is applied with a stricter severity in the common law, that it was in that law."

It has to be remembered that the American law with respect to the liability of the carrier is different from the English law though subsequently even in America the law has been changed as is seen in note (11) at page 170 of Carver's Carriage of Goods by Sea. The note is to the effect that the Carriage of Goods by Sea Act took effect in the United States on July 15, 1936, its provisions corresponding to those of the English Act of the same name. We may also in this connection refer to Outline of the Law relating to Bills of Lading by C. H. Main Thompson, M. A. at pages 170 and 171 to the following effect;

"The shipowner may escape liability or such loss by an express exception such as 'goods carried on deck are solely at merchant's risk'. He may avail himself of this exception (1) in a contract of carriage to which the rules are not in any case applicable; and (2) in a contract of carriage to which, but for the provisions in the rules as to deck cargoes the rules would be applicable, by complying with those provisions, that is, by stating in the contract of carriage that the cargo is being carried on deck, and so carrying it. The shipowner apparently, cannot escape liability for loss of or damage, to a deck cargo which is being carried under a contract of carriage to which, but for the provisions in the rules as to deck cargoes, the rules would be applicable if he fails to comply with those provisions. He cannot under the rules lessen his liability otherwise than is provided in the rules and any agreement designed to have that effect is null and void and of no effect."

For substantiating the idea underlying the last sentence, the footnote gives reference to the Carriage of Goods by Sea Act, 1924, Art III, rule 8 and therefore we are of opinion that it cannot apply to deck cargoes as was sought to be contended by Mr. T. R. Arunachalam for the respondents.

(26) Learned Counsel for the respondents strenuously urged before us that in none of the cases cited except probably the Stranna (1937)P. 130 in which observations are in his favour, is the total extinguishment of liability provided even where no explanation is given as to how the loss occurred. As we have already remarked if after proving negligence, the carrier can escape liability under the agreement, there is no reason why he should be mulcted with liability when the loss may be due to negligence or for other reasons. The carrier's silence and failing to prove negligence might be construed in favour of the consignor as an implicit admission of negligence. Viewed in that way also the exception clause can be called in aid in support of the carrier's extinguishment of liability. In the case before us the exemption clause is clear that if the loss or non-delivery has occurred as a result of negligence, unseaworthiness or otherwise, they will not be liable and we are of opinion that the case comes within the principles enunciated in the various decisions to which we have already referred. In this view, it seems to us the appellants are not liable for the non-delivery of the 44 bags of beedi leaves. The appeal therefore is allowed, the suit dismissed with costs throughout.

B. R.G.D.

Appeal allowed.

A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 10

SUBBA RAO J.

S. Athimoolam Achari, Petitioner v. The Deputy Commercial Tax Officer, Kovilpatti, Tirunelveli Dt., Respondent.

W. P. No. 127 of 1952, D/- 22-4-1952.

Constitution of India, Art. 226 — Other effective remedy open — Jurisdiction under Art. 226 cannot be invoked as against Sales-tax authority — (Sales tax — Madras General Sales Tax Act (9 of 1939), Ss. 9, 11, 12, 12A, 12B, 12C and 12D).

From the provisions of Ss. 9, 11, 12, 12A, 12B, 12C and 12D of the Madras General Sales Tax Act, 1939, it is clear that the Act is a self-contained one and provides for a hierarchy of tribunals to enable the aggrieved person or authority to get a final and authoritative adjudication on the validity or the correctness of the assessments made by the Sales-tax Authorities. Hence, the petitioner cannot seek the aid of the High Court under Art. 226 which, if given, would circumvent the entire statutory procedure prescribed. The fact that the remedy provided by the Act may involve delay or expenditure, or that the decision of the Sales-tax Authority will affect other persons cannot be a ground for invoking the extraordinary jurisdiction of the High Court under Art. 226. (Paras 4, 5)

M. K. Nambiar, for Petitioner, V. P. Sarathi, for the Govt. Pleader, for Respondent.

ORDER: This is an application for issuing a writ of prohibition directing the respondent to forbear from assessing the petitioner for sales-tax for 1950-51. The petitioner is a merchant trading in bullion and specie at Ettayapuram Naduveerapatti in Tirunelveli district. When the Madras General Sales-tax Act was passed in 1939, bullion and specie were exempt from taxation. In 1947, S. 5 of the old Act was substituted by the Madras General Sales-tax Amendment Act, 1947 (Madras Act XXV of 1947). Under that section the sale of bullion and specie shall be liable to tax only at a single point in the series of sales by successive dealers as may be prescribed and only at the rate of one fourth of one per cent of the turnover at that point. In exercise of the powers conferred on the Provincial Government by S. 19 of the Act, rules were made for licensing the persons engaged in the sale of goods and the imposing of conditions in respect of the same for purpose of enforcing the provisions of the Act and the fee for licenses. Rule 5(1) (d) and (f) of the Madras General Sales-tax Rules, 1939, requires that every person who deals in bullion and specie should submit an application in form 1 for a licence in respect of each of his places of businesses, and rule 6(1) says that every licence shall cover one place of business only and rule 6(1-A) provides that in addition to the licensee's place of business, the shandies where he prosecuted his business may also be entered in the same licence. Under rule 7 the benefit of Ss. 5 and 8 can be claimed only for the transactions carried on during the period covered by the licence. The petitioner took out a licence for the place of his business, namely, Ettayapuram Naduveerapatti. In his return for 1949-50 he had shown not only the sales in the town in respect of which he has taken a licence, but also the sales effected by him in other places. The Deputy Commercial Tax Officer at Kovilpatti raised the objection that the sales outside the place of business specified in the licence were liable to be assessed at 3 pies rate on every rupee and accordingly assessed the petitioner for the year 1949-50. The petitioner preferred an appeal to the Commercial Tax Officer, Tirunelveli, but that appeal was dismissed. Against that he preferred an appeal to the Sales-tax Appellate Tribunal. But it is represented to me that the appeal is still pending. Meanwhile the Deputy Commercial Tax Officer issued a notice dated 16th February 1951 proposing to assess the sale turnover of Rs. 29093-1-9 for 1950-51 in Madura, Tirunelveli and Kovilpatti at the enhanced rate of 3 pies on every rupee. The petitioner apprehends that his objections would be overruled. He therefore filed the aforesaid application to prohibit the Deputy Commercial Tax Officer from assessing the petitioner for sales-tax for 1950-51.

(2) The learned counsel for the petitioner raised before me two points:

1. The villages or towns where the petitioner casually sold the bullion are not places of business within the meaning of rules 5(d) and (f) of the Madras General Sales-tax Rules, 1939.
2. The amended rule defining the place of business is not retrospective in operation.

(3) Learned Government Pleader, apart from supporting the view of the sales-tax authorities, contended that the petitioner has an adequate remedy under the Act itself and therefore this writ will not issue. As I am accepting the preliminary objection raised by the respondent, it is not necessary to express my view on the questions raised by the petitioner. The relevant provisions of the Madras General Sales-tax Act (IX of 1939) as amended by later amending

Acts in so far as they are relevant to the preliminary objection raised run as follows:

'S. 9(1).' Every dealer whose turnover is ten thousand rupees or more in a year shall submit such return or returns of his turnover, in such manner, and within such periods as may be specified in the rules made under sub-sec. (2) of S. 3.

'S. 9(2) (a).' If the assessing authority is satisfied that any return submitted under sub-sec. (1) is correct and complete, he shall assess the dealer on the basis thereof.

(b) If no return is submitted by the dealer under sub-sec. (1) before the date prescribed or specified in that behalf or if the return submitted by him appears to the assessing authority to be incorrect or incomplete, the assessing authority shall proceed to determine the turnover in accordance with the rules made under sub-sec. (2) of S. 3:

Provided that before taking action under this clause, the dealer shall be given a reasonable opportunity of proving the correctness and completeness of any return submitted by him.

'S. 11(i).' Any assessee objecting to an assessment made on him may, within thirty days from the date on which he was served with notice of the assessment, appeal to such authority as may be prescribed;

Provided that no appeal shall be entertained under this sub-section unless it is accompanied by satisfactory proof of the payment of the tax admitted by the appellant to be due or of such instalments thereof as might have become payable as the case may be.

(2) * * *

(3) The appellate authority may, after giving the appellant an opportunity of being heard pass such order on the appeal as such authority may think fit.

(4) Every order passed in appeal under this section shall, subject to the provisions of Ss. 12 to 12-C, be final.

S. 12(1): The Commercial Tax Officer may—

(i) 'suo motu', or

(ii) in cases in which an appeal does not lie to him under S. 11, on application, call for and examine the record of any order passed or proceeding recorded under the provisions of this Act by any officer subordinate to him for the purpose of satisfying himself as to the legality or propriety of such order, or as to the regularity of such proceeding, and may pass such order with respect thereto as he thinks fit.

(2) The Deputy Commissioner may—

(i) 'suo motu', or

(ii) in respect of any order passed or proceeding recorded by the Commercial Tax Officer under sub-sec. (1) or any other provision of this Act and against which no appeal has been preferred to the Appellate Tribunal under S. 12-A on application, call for and examine the record of any order passed or proceeding recorded under the provisions of this Act by any officer subordinate to him, for the purpose of satisfying himself as to the legality or propriety of such order, or as to the regularity of such proceeding, and may pass such order with respect thereto as he thinks fit.

(3) The Board of Revenue may—

(i) 'suo motu', or

(ii) in respect of any order passed or proceeding recorded by the Deputy Commissioner under sub-section (2) or any other provision of this Act and against which no appeal has been preferred to the Appellate Tribunal under Sec. 12-A, on application, call for and examine the record of any order passed or proceeding recorded under the provisions of this Act by any officer subordinate to it, for the purpose of satisfying as to the legality or propriety of such order, or as to the legality of such proceeding, and may pass such order with respect thereto as it thinks fit.

'Sec. 12A (1)':

Any assessee objecting to an order relating to assessment passed—

(i) by the Commercial Tax Officer whether on appeal under Sec. 11 or 'suo motu' under S. 12, sub-sec. (1) or,

(ii) by the Deputy Commissioner 'suo motu' under S. 12, sub-sec. (2), may, if the assessee has not preferred an application for revision of the order under S. 12, sub-sec. (2), or under sub-sec. (3) of that section, as the case may be, appeal to the appellate Tribunal within thirty days from the date on which the order was communicated to the assessee.

(2) The Appellate Tribunal may admit an appeal preferred after the period of sixty days referred to in sub-sec. (1) if it is satisfied that the assessee had sufficient cause for not preferring the appeal within that period.

(3) * * *

(4) The appellate tribunal shall, after giving both parties to the appeal a reasonable opportunity of being heard, pass such order thereon as it thinks fit.

(5) Notwithstanding that an appeal has been preferred under sub-sec. (1), tax shall be paid in accordance with the assessment made in the case;

Provided that the Appellate Tribunal may, in its discretion, permit the appellant to pay the tax in such number of instalments, or give such other directions in regard to the payment of the tax, as it thinks fit.

(6) (a) The Appellate Tribunal may, on the application either of the assessee or of the Deputy Commissioner, review any order passed by it under sub-sec. (4) on the basis of facts which were not before it when it passed the order;

.....
'S. 12-B(1)': Within sixty days from the date on which an order under S. 12-A, sub-sec. (4) or (6) was communicated to him, the assessee or the Deputy Commissioner may prefer a petition to the High Court against the order on the ground that the appellate Tribunal has either decided erroneously, or failed to decide, any question of law;

Provided that the High Court may admit a petition preferred after the period of sixty days aforesaid, if it is satisfied that the petitioner had sufficient cause for not preferring the petition within that period.

'S. 12-C(1)': Any assessee objecting to an order relating to assessment passed by the Board of Revenue 'suo motu' under S. 12, sub-sec. (3), may appeal to the High Court within sixty days from the date on which the order was communicated to him;

'S. 12.D': Every petition, application or appeal preferred to the High Court under Ss.

12 B and 12 C shall be heard by a Bench of not less than two Judges; and in respect of such petition, application or appeal, the provisions of S. 98 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, shall, so far as may be, apply.

(4) It will be seen from the aforesaid provisions that the Madras General Sales-tax Act is a self-contained one and provides for a hierarchy of tribunals to enable the aggrieved person or authority to get a final and authoritative adjudication on the validity or the correctness of the assessments made by the sales-tax authorities. The petitioner ignores the entire machinery and seeks the aid of this court which, if given, will circumvent the entire statutory procedure prescribed. The petitioner gives the following reasons in his affidavit for filing this writ under S. 226 of the Constitution of India:

"I submit that the Tirunelveli Jilla Jewellers and Bullion Merchants' Association in my district comprises about 100 members. The question is common to all of us and also to other bullion merchants in the State of Madras. In view of the decisions taken by the Sales-tax original and appellate authorities I have every reason to apprehend that the objections before the respondent will be overruled and that the remedy prescribed by the Sales-tax Act, if pursued would be long-delayed, ineffective and of no practical purpose since once a tax is assessed, its non-payment renders the assessee to prosecution and its payment is a condition precedent for the preferring of an appeal. I am not in a position to pay such a large tax and it is virtually impossible therefore for me to resort to the remedies prescribed by the Act."

(5) In my view, the fact that an assessee has got to pay the tax or that the remedy provided by the Act may involve delay or expenditure, is no ground for invoking this court's extraordinary jurisdiction. The question in this case depends upon the construction of the provisions of the Sales-tax Act and the Rules made thereunder. On their correct interpretation depends the rate of the tax. That question is essentially within the jurisdiction of the Tribunals created by the Act. It is also not accurate to say that the Tribunals created under the Act have already expressed an opinion against the petitioner for the appeal against the assessment of the year 1949-50 is still pending before the Appellate Tribunal, and even if the decision of the Appellate Tribunal goes against him, he can file a revision to the High Court. Nor there are merits in the contention that he cannot have an interim relief till the Tribunal or the High Court finally disposes of this matter, though that fact in itself, even if true, cannot be a ground for entertaining a writ of prohibition. Under S. 11 of the Act he can prefer an appeal against the order of the assessing authority and under the proviso to the section the payment of the tax admitted only is the condition precedent for preferring the appeal. Further the Tribunal under S. 12 A can give directions in regard to the payment of the tax. Nor the circumstance that the decision may affect other persons is a ground for ignoring the statutory procedure and remedies. Even assuming there are some difficulties in the way of the petitioner, I do not think I am justified in issuing this extraordinary writ as the petitioner has an effective and satisfactory remedy under the Act itself. I should not be understood to have expressed any opinion on the merits of the contentions raised. The petition fails & is dismissed with costs. Advocates' fee Rs. 100.

B/G.M.J.

Petition dismissed.

A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 12

RAGHAVA RAO J.

Subramanyam Chettiar and others, Petitioners v. Isaki Ammal, Respondent.

Civil Revn. Petns. Nos. 2027 and 2028 of 1951, D/- 24-3-1952.

Civil P. C. (1908) Ss. 115 and 35 and O. 6, R. 17 — Conditional order for amendment on payment of costs to opposite party — Order of amendment itself susceptible to revision — High Court can interfere with the order for payment of costs and increase the amount.

(Para 1)

Anno: Civil P. C., S. 35, N. 31; S. 115 N. 20; O. 6 R. 17 N. 15, 21.

G. R. Jagadeesa Iyer, for Petitioners; S. Ramachandra Iyer, for Respondent.

ORDER: I am inclined after hearing both sides fully to uphold the order of the court below except to the extent of that part of it which relates to the award of Rs. 5 as costs, payable by the first defendant to the plaintiffs as a condition of the amendment of the written statement. The suit was one which certainly involved a fairly high stake, and having regard to the considerations, which might well operate against the granting of the amendment, the least that the court below ought to have done was to make the provision of costs more decent than the paltry figure of Rs. 5 taxed by it in the exercise of its discretion. The amendment was either one which should have been permitted conditionally or unconditionally. If it is to be treated as a case in which the amendment can only be ordered conditionally, and if the condition as to payment of costs is to be regarded as within the ambit of the conditional character of such an order, and, if the order itself is susceptible of interference by me in revision here, it is difficult for me to understand why I should not interfere with the discretion of the court below in regard to the Rs. 5 of costs which it made conditional in the exercise of its discretion. I do not think that the powers of revision of this court are so far circumscribed by the provisions of the statute or by any considerations laid down by the case law under S. 115, C. P. C. in regard to a matter like this that I should feel that the Rs. 5 of costs must be allowed to remain sacrosanct. It is enough for me to say that, in this case having regard to the nature of the stake and the other considerations that may bear upon the matter, at least a sum of Rs. 100 might have been directed to be paid by the first defendant to the plaintiffs as condition of the amendment.

(2) Mr. Ramchandra Aiyar has rightly insisted that I should not ordinarily interfere with orders which are discretionary, that are made by the court below. But anyhow as I have already said, having listened to counsel of both sides fully and having considered all the aspects of the case, I do feel that not only is my discretion in this case permissible, but it is called for on all the considerations which may legitimately enter into a matter of this description. This sum of Rs. 100 will be paid by the respondent before me to the petitioner's advocate within two months from this date, failing which the revision petition will stand allowed with costs, even then the pleader's fee payable in the court below being liable to be treated as not less than a sum of Rs. 100 which I have fixed in the foregoing part of my order. The petitioners will pay the respondent her costs in C. R. P. No. 2027 of 1951.

B/R.G.D.

Order accordingly.

A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 13

SATYANARAYANA RAO AND BASHEER
AHMED SAYEED JJ.

Ramakammal, Appellant v. C. G. Subbarathnam Iyer and others, Respondents.

Appeal No. 316 of 1946, D/- 11-11-1949.

T. P. Act (1882 as amended in 1929) Ss. 58 (g), 67, 68 and 98 — Mortgagee to enjoy property in lieu of interest — Personal covenant to pay — Possession not given to mortgagee — Mortgage held anomalous — Mortgagee held entitled to decree for sale and profits from date of mortgage to date of suit — (Civil P.C. (1908) O. 34 R. 4).

Under a mortgage deed it was stipulated that the mortgagee should enjoy the property in lieu of interest. There was also a stipulation that the mortgage amount would be paid by the mortgagor. Mortgagor failed to give possession to the mortgagee and made considerable profits from and out of the rents:

Held (i) that under S. 58(g) (as amended in 1929), the mortgage was an anomalous mortgage and the mortgagee was entitled to sue for sale under Ss. 67 and 68. AIR 1919 Mad. 1164 (F.B.) Held no more good law. (Para 7)

(ii) That even otherwise, there being a personal covenant to pay the mortgagee could sue for sale. AIR 1945 All. 202 (FB) Not followed. (Para 8)

(iii) that the mortgagee was also entitled to the profits from the date of the mortgage to the date of the suit. AIR 1938 All. 418 (FB) Not followed. AIR 1932 Mad. 175 Followed. (Para 10)

Anno: T. P. Act, S. 58 N. 40, S. 67 N. 18; S. 68 N. 12; S. 98 N. 2a, 4; Civil P. C., O. 34 R. 4 N. 9.

K. S. Champakesa Aiyangar and K. C. Srinivasan, for Appellant; P. S. Balakrishna Iyer, P. S. Ramachandran, C. A. Vaidyalingam, T. Venkatadri and K. Ramachandra Rao, for Respondents.

REFERENCES: Courtwar/Chronological/ Paras

- |  |      |
|--|------|
| ('20) 56 Ind Cas 717: (AIR 1919 PC 121)                        | 8    |
| ('29) 56 Ind App 299: 58 Mad LJ 401: (AIR 1929 PC 139)         | 7    |
| ('38) ILR (1938) All 714: (AIR 1938 All 418 FB)                | 8    |
| ('45) ILR (1945) All 676: (AIR 1945 All 202: 46 Cri LJ 743 FB) | 10   |
| ('10) 6 Ind Cas 153 (Cal)                                      | 8    |
| ('19) 46 Cal 448: (AIR 1919 Cal 46(2))                         | 10   |
| ('46) ILR (1946) Lah 805: (AIR 1947 Lah 40)                    | 8    |
| ('91) 14 Mad 232   | 8    |
| ('94) 17 Mad 131: (4 Mad LJ 50)                                | 8    |
| ('94) 17 Mad 469: (4 Mad LJ 143)                               | 10   |
| ('18) 41 Mad 259: (AIR 1919 Mad 1164 FB)                       | 3, 4 |

('32) AIR 1932 Mad 173: (136 Ind Cas 783) 3, 10

('32) AIR 1932 Mad 175: (136 Ind Cas 785) 3, 10

('22) 1 Pat 350: (AIR 1922 Pat 167) 8

SATYANARAYANA RAO J.: This is an appeal by the first defendant against the decree of the Subordinate Judge of Coimbatore granting to the plaintiff a preliminary mortgage decree.

(2) On the 20th February 1939, the first defendant executed a deed which is described as a usufructuary mortgage deed for a sum of Rs. 4,000. The property comprised in the mortgage is a terraced building in Coimbatore. Under this document, it was stipulated that the mortgagee should in lieu of interest on the amount advanced enjoy the property mentioned, that is, the house as under a usufructuary mortgage. It further provided that: "Within a period of four years from this date, I shall pay you the above usufructuary amount and get return of the deed with endorsement of discharge thereon and along with the title deeds pertaining thereto. I shall also take possession of the undermentioned properties from you. If before the above period of four years I pay the principal sum you shall receive it. If I fail to pay the principal sum on the due date of the above four years you shall continue to be in enjoyment as under a usufructuary mortgage for the very aforesaid mortgage amount till it is paid. Besides, I shall pay the above amount on demand with interest thereon at the rate of four annas per hundred rupees per mensem from the date of default to the date of payment."

The deed also recites that the mortgagee was put in possession of the property immediately, that is, on the date of the execution of the deed. On that very day, the plaintiff leased the property under a rental agreement to one Ramaswami Mudaliar who is examined in the case as P. W. 1 and the lessee agreed to pay a rent of Rs. 30 per mensem for the terraced building and he also stated in the rental agreement Ex. P-2, that he was put in possession of the property. The plaintiff alleged in the plaint that notwithstanding the recitals in the documents above referred to, the first defendant failed to deliver possession of the property to the plaintiff or to his nominee and that she had continued in possession without even paying any sum by way of rent or damages for use and occupation.

On the 3rd April 1943, the first defendant sold the property to defendants 2 to 4 under Ex. D-7 and they are impleaded as parties to the action. The plaintiff, therefore, seeks to recover from the defendants and the property, a sum of Rs. 5949, Rs. 4000 being the principal amount due under the mortgage and Rs. 1949, as compensation for loss of possession from the date of the mortgage to the date of the suit at Rs. 30 per mensem or Rs. 360 per annum. The suit was instituted on the 19th July 1944, and in the plaint, the plaintiff claimed that he was entitled to realise the amount of Rs. 5949 by sale of the hypotheca and he also claimed a personal decree for the balance in case the proceeds of the hypotheca are not sufficient to satisfy the decree. The consideration for the mortgage was not disputed by the defendants in their written statement but they denied the assertion of the plaintiff in the plaint that he had not been given possession of the property immediately after the deed was executed. They disputed the right of the plaintiff to claim compensation for loss of possession and also denied the right of the plaintiff to a decree for sale of the mortgaged property as claimed in the plaint. It was also alleged in the written statement that by his acquiescence, non-delivery, the plaintiff lost his right to sue by sale of the mortgaged property and that in any event the plaintiff is not entitled to claim more than Rs. 4000 as per the agreement which, it is claimed, was reached between the parties on the 10th September 1942, evidenced by a varthamanam of that date, whereby the claim under the mortgage and also under two other promissory notes was settled at a sum of Rs. 4500 to be paid by the first defendant to the plaintiff.

Immediately after the purchase of the property by defendants 2 to 4 under Ex. D-7 they deposited a sum of Rs. 4050 in Court under S. 83 of the Transfer of Property Act and filed O. P. No. 95 of 1943. The plaintiff, however, refused to receive the amount and give a discharge to the first defendant and therefore the further plea was taken by the defendants that their tender was valid and therefore the plaintiff is not entitled to interest or compensation or to any costs.

(3) The learned Subordinate Judge framed as many as 8 issues in the case covering the contentions of the parties, but on the chief points on which the parties were at variance he found that the mortgage, notwithstanding the covenants (above set forth) contained in Ex. P-1, was a usufructuary mortgage and not an anomalous mortgage. On the question of delivery of possession, he upheld the contention of the plaintiff that the house, in fact, continued to be in the possession of the first defendant. He followed the decision of the Full Bench in — ‘Subbamma v. Narayya’, 41 Mad 259 (FB), which held that if under a usufructuary mortgage possession was not delivered, the mortgage is not a usufructuary mortgage within the meaning of S. 58(d) of the Transfer of Property Act and that the mortgagee is entitled to bring a suit for sale of the mortgaged property. In view of this decision he held that the plaintiff is entitled to a decree for sale. He was also of the opinion that the plaintiff was entitled to claim damages in lieu of interest, in view of two decisions in — ‘Subramania Aiyar v. Panchanada Odayar’, AIR 1932 Mad 175 and — ‘Gurusami Thevan v. Ganapathi Chetti’, AIR 1932 Mad 173. He found also that the varthamanam was not enforceable as it was intended merely to enable the first defendant to effect a private sale of the property and that the concession granted by the plaintiff was subsequently withdrawn by him as it was not accepted immediately and acted upon. In the result the learned Judge passed a preliminary decree for sale of the property.

(4) In this appeal by the first defendant, the claim under the varthamanam was not seriously pressed as it is not an enforceable contract, as the agreement was not supported by consideration and a mere agreement to remit could not under law be enforced. There is also the further objection that it is not admissible in evidence for want of registration and as it purports to modify the essential terms of the mortgage deed. It is, however, unnecessary to pursue this matter as the appellant has not before us relied upon the varthamanam letter as affording a defence to the action. The decision of the Full Bench in — ‘Subbamma v. Narayya’, 41 Mad 259 (FB) is no longer good law in view of the amended definition of a “usufructuary mortgage” in S. 58 of the Transfer of Property Act. The amendment was introduced to nullify the effect of the Full Bench decision. No attempt was made before us to support the decision.

(5) The other questions that were seriously pressed were: firstly, that the finding of the learned Judge that the plaintiff did not obtain possession of the property at any time and that the first defendant continued to be in possession of the property is wrong; secondly, that the plaintiff is not entitled to a decree for sale; and lastly that he is not entitled to claim profits in lieu of interest.

(6) On the first question we have no doubt on the evidence that the finding of the learned Subordinate Judge is correct. (His Lordship reviewed the evidence and continued.) In view of those circumstances we are clearly of opinion that the plaintiff did not obtain possession of the property and that the first defendant alone continued in possession and made considerable profit from and out of the rents of the house.

(7) The learned Subordinate Judge construed the document as containing no personal covenant to pay and that it is a usufructuary mortgage. The relevant covenants extracted above show that the mortgagor undertook to pay the amount within a period of four years and that if he failed to pay the principal sum within that date, the mortgagee should continue to be in enjoyment until the amount is paid and under the last clause the mortgagor promises to pay the above amount on demand with interest thereon at the rate of four annas for hundred rupees per month from the date of default, that is after the expiry of the four years, to the date of payment. This further rate of four annas for hundred rupees per month is in addition to the profits which the mortgagee is entitled to enjoy until the amount is paid in lieu of interest. There is, therefore, a clear covenant to pay the mortgage amount. The document, therefore, is a simple usufructuary mortgage, and is not a usufructuary mortgage, pure and simple. Under the law as it stood before the amendment of the Transfer of Property Act in 1929, the mortgage would not be an anomalous one. The old S. 98 was as follows:

“In the case of a mortgage, not being a simple mortgage, a mortgage by conditional sale, an usufructuary mortgage, or an English mortgage, or a combination of the first and third, or the second and third, of such forms, the rights and liabilities of the parties shall be determined by their contract as evidenced in the mortgage deed, and, so far as such contract does not extend by local usage.”

When in such a case the mortgagor failed to deliver possession of the property the mortgagee was entitled under S. 68(1) (c), which corresponds to the present clause (d) of that section, to sue for the mortgage money and under S. 67 when there is no contract to the contrary, he would be entitled also to a decree for sale. Clause (a) of old S. 67 did not confer upon a usufructuary mortgagee power to institute a suit for foreclosure or sale but this was confined to cases where he claimed to sue as a usufructuary mortgagee as such. If he was a simple cum usufructuary mortgagee or a person entitled to enforce the statutory right under the old S. 68(c) to sue for the mortgage money when there was a default in delivering possession by the mortgagor, it could not be said he was then suing or seeking to enforce the rights as a usufructuary mortgagee and would not therefore come within the description of usufructuary mortgage "as such". A suit to enforce payment of the mortgage money under S. 58 and for the sale of property under S. 67 is therefore maintainable, as such a mortgage is not an anomalous mortgage within the meaning of old S. 98. Under the old law, an anomalous mortgage was not included within the definition of "mortgage" under S. 58. A simple cum usufructuary mortgage, not being an anomalous mortgagee was entitled to the benefit of Ss. 67 and 68 of the Transfer of Property Act.

The question was finally decided by the Privy Council in — 'Narasing Partab Bahadur Singh v. Mohammed Yaqub Khan', 56 Ind. App. 299: 58 Mad L J 401 (PC). In that case the mortgage was dated 8th April 1923 and was given to secure an advance of Rs. 30000, which carried interest at the rate of 5 annas and 1 pie per cent per month. The mortgage money was promised to be repaid within a period of 35 years and the mortgagee was to enjoy the rents and profits of an 8 annas share in certain villages in lieu of interest on the mortgage money and the possession of the property was delivered to the mortgagee. If the mortgagor failed to redeem the mortgaged property within the time fixed, power was conferred upon the mortgagee to realise the money due to him by sale of the mortgaged property. There was also a provision for a personal decree if the mortgaged property was found to be insufficient to satisfy the full amount. The mortgagor received the advance but failed to deliver possession of the mortgaged property. An assignee of the mortgagee's interest instituted an action on the 14th May 1924, nearly a year from the date of the deed, claiming to recover the principal and interest by sale of the mortgaged property and in the alternative for a simple money decree for the amount. The subordinate Judge who tried the action held that the plaintiff was entitled to a decree for sale under S. 68 of the Transfer of Property Act and passed a decree in his favour. On appeal the Chief Court held that the mortgage in question was an anomalous mortgage and not a combination of a simple mortgage and a usufructuary mortgage and therefore S. 68 of the Act was inapplicable, as it was excluded by S. 98 and passed a decree for possession only in accordance with the terms of the mortgage deed in substitution of the decree for sale granted by the learned Subordinate Judge. The plaintiff appealed to His Majesty in Council.

The Judicial Committee construed the deed as constituting a combination of a simple mortgage and a usufructuary mortgage. Though under the terms of the deed there was no power of sale, if there is a default in putting the mortgagee in possession of the property and if the suit was instituted within the period of 35 years, the Judicial Committee held that as the plaintiff was deprived of part of his security, he was entitled under S. 68 of the Act to recover the mortgage money as it became payable under S. 68 in consequence of the failure to deliver possession. They further held that as the money became payable under S. 68 a decree for sale could be made under S. 67. Their Lordships observed:

"It would indeed be a startling result of the legislation if in such a case as this where a default has been made by the mortgagors of a kind which materially affects the mortgagee's security there existed no remedy for the immediate enforcement of the mortgage."

There is however in this decision no express reference to S. 67 (a) which deprived a usufructuary mortgagee, as such, from claiming a right of foreclosure or sale. Their Lordships must have treated the case as an 'a fortiori' one as the mortgage was not a mere usufructuary mortgage but was a combination of simple mortgage and a usufructuary mortgage; and, further, the right that was sought to be enforced was not a right under the usufructuary mortgage, as such, but the statutory right under S. 68 (c) (old) of compelling the mortgagor to pay the mortgage money when he had committed default in putting the mortgagee in possession of the mortgaged property. This statutory right carried with it a right of sale under S. 67 of the Act. But for the fact that there is the complication by an amendment of S. 98 in 1929 by the legislature, this decision of the Judicial Committee would have concluded the case now before us. As the definition of "anomalous mortgage" is now transferred with modifications to S. 58 and is added as clause (g) to that section, which does not expressly exclude the combination of simple mortgage and usufructuary mortgage, it would seem to follow that such a mortgage would be an anomalous mortgage under the present law. Clause (g) to that section says:

"A mortgage which is not a simple mortgage, a mortgage by conditional sale, a usufructuary mortgage, an English mortgage, or a mortgage by deposit of title deeds within the meaning of this section is called an anomalous mortgage."

So that, the mortgages enumerated and defined in the previous clauses were alone excluded from the definition of anomalous mortgage and not their combinations. This omission, it is claimed, is indicative of the view that the legislature intended to treat the combinations as anomalous mortgages. That is also the opinion of Mulla in his commentary. This may be so.

But this alteration in our opinion does not affect the result in the case. As anomalous mortgages are now included in S. 58 of the Act the application of Ss. 68 and 67 of the Act is not excluded as under the old law. This is really the effect of the amendments introduced in 1929. Even under the old law, some courts have taken the view that even in the case of an anomalous mortgage if there is failure to deliver possession, the mortgagee was entitled to take advantage of the provisions in S. 68 (c) (old) now corresponding to clause (d) and also entitled to sue for a decree for sale.

(8) There is also another point of view from which it would follow that the mortgagee in the present case is entitled to a decree for sale. A personal covenant to pay, according to the decisions of this court and of some of the other High Courts implies and carries with it a right of sale. There is the judgment of the Full Bench of this court in — 'Sivakami Ammal v. Gopala Savundaram', 17 Mad. 131. The judgment however is very short and does not give any reasons. But the earlier decision of a Bench in — 'Ramaya v. Guruva', 14 Mad. 232 which considers the relevant provisions of the Transfer of Property Act holds that a covenant to pay confers a right to sue for sale of the mortgaged property under S. 67 of the Act. This principle was recognised by the Patna High Court in — 'Jag Sahu v. Mt. Ram Sakhi Kuar', 1 Pat. 350 which quotes with approval the decision in — 'Pitambar Purkait v. Madhu Sudan', 6 Ind. Cas. 153 (Cal) in which it is said:

"It is well settled that when an instrument of mortgage gives a right to possession and also contains a covenant to pay, thus presenting a combination of a usufructuary and a simple mortgage, the two rights are independent and the mortgagee may sue for sale although he may have given up possession, and the right accrues immediately after the due date is passed."

Even though the Transfer of Property Act is not applicable to Punjab, the Lahore High Court also applied the same principle in—'Mahomed Saeed v. Abdul Alim', I. L. R. (1946) Lah. 805 and the decisions in — 'Ramaya v. Guruva', 14 Mad. 232 and — 'Sivakami Ammal v. Gopala Savundaram', 17 Mad. 131 were referred to. The Allahabad High Court in — 'Kanhaiya Prasad v. Mt. Hamidan', I. L. R. (1938) All. 714 (F.B.) no doubt takes a contrary view. Mahajan J. in the Lahore case dissents from that view and follows the view taken by the Madras High Court as sound. Even in the case of an anomalous mortgage, if there are indications in the deed negating a right of sale and showing that the parties never contemplated any such right, the right of sale cannot be given effect to as the parties are bound by the terms of the contract. See — 'Madho Rao v. Ghulam Mohiuddin', 56 Ind. Cas. 717 (P. C.).

(9) It follows from the foregoing discussion that viewed from any aspect the plaintiff is entitled to a decree for sale.

(10) Lastly, in view of the decisions of this court, no doubt of single Judges in — 'Subramania Aiyar v. Panchanada Odayar', AIR 1932 Mad. 175 and—'Gurusami Thevan v. Ganapathi Chetti', AIR 1932 Mad. 173 and the reasons given by Ramesam J. in the judgment in — 'Subramania Aiyar v. Panchanada Odayar', AIR 1932 Mad. 175 we think that the plaintiff is entitled to the profits claimed by him. The view of the learned Judges in the two cases also receives support from the decision of a Bench in the earlier case in — 'Linga Reddi v. Sama Rau', 17 Mad. 469. The decision in — 'Sitanath Ghose v. Thakurdas Chakravarti', 46 Cal. 448 also takes the same view. The Allahabad High Court differs from the Madras and Calcutta decisions: Vide — 'Nurul Hassan v. Mahabub Bux', I. L. R. (1945) All. 676 (F. B.). In view of the decisions of our court, we respectfully dissent from the view of the Allahabad Court. The mortgage deed itself in the present case recites that the mortgagee should enjoy the property in lieu of interest on the said amount. If the mortgagor commits a breach of the covenant to deliver possession he should not be allowed to take advantage of it or retain the proceeds of the property and at the same time paying no interest on the mortgage amount, the benefit of which he admittedly enjoyed. We respectfully adopt the reasoning of Ramesam J. in the decision in—'Subramania Iyer v. Panchanada Odayar', AIR 1932 Mad. 175 and hold that the view of the learned Subordinate Judge on this point also is correct.

(11) In the result the appeal fails and is dismissed with costs of the first respondent.

B/R G.D.

Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 16

BASHEER AHMED SAYEED J.

Devar and Co. Represented by K. Muthuswami Devar, Appellant v. C. Radhakrishna Naidu, Respondent.

City Civil Court Appeal No. 104 of 1949, D/-11-12-1951.

Trusts Act (1882), Ss. 5 to 8, 88 and 94 — Employer crediting bonus and dearness allowance in favour of employee — Employer taking benefit in income tax — Employer is trustee for the amount.

Where the employer had credited to the account of the employee several sums of money as and towards bonus and dearness allowance during the period the employee had served under him, and the employee had during the income tax assessment made statements to the effect that these amounts represented by the credit entries have been amounts not merely set apart for the benefit of the employee but also have been actually paid over to him and on the basis of such setting apart and payment the employee had claimed reduction in the assessment and did actually derive benefit in the matter of reduction of the income tax, but it was established that the amounts were not paid over to the employee:

Held that the credit entries could not but be treated as a declaration by the employer in favour of the employee that the monies were held for and on behalf of the employee by the employer. The action of the employer in having made not merely the entries in the account books but also in having represented to the Income tax Department that these amounts have been set apart for the employee and that they have been paid over to the employee from year to year, would certainly constitute a trust in favour of the employee. Therefore, far from the provisions contained in Ss. 5 to 8 of the Trusts Act not being applicable to the facts of the case, the principles embodied in those sections would certainly come into operation on the facts of the case and they would apply.

Held also that the employee, could be treated as a depositor, as if he had received the money at the end of the year at the time when it was paid and that he redeposited the money with the employer. Even from that view, the relationship of depositor and depositee would certainly entitle the employee to claim the moneys that stood credited in the account books of the employer. (Paras 7, 8, 9)

Anno: Trusts Act, S. 5 N. 2; S. 88 N. 10; S. 94 N. 2.

A. K. Balakrishnan, for Appellant; Subramaniam and Rajagopal, for Respondent.

REFERENCES: Courtwar/Chronological/ Paras
(11) 35 Bom 403; (11 Ind Cas 564) 9
(24) 47 Mad LJ 791; (AIR 1925 Mad 192) 9
(44) 1944-2 Mad LJ 29; (AIR 1944 PC 78) 5, 7, 9
(45) 1945-2 Mad LJ 164; (AIR 1945 Mad 473) 5, 7, 9

JUDGMENT: This appeal is against the judgment and decree of the learned Principal City Civil Judge, partially decreeing the suit brought about by the plaintiff claiming arrears of salary, bonus and dearness allowance.

(2) The plaintiff was employed as a driver under the defendants. The defendants are a firm of merchants carrying extensive business in timber in several places in the State of Madras. The allegations of the plaintiff are that, while he was serving the defendants from February 1943 to June 1947 he was discharged from service without cause and without notice on the 10th June 1947. He, therefore, filed the suit claiming arrears of salary from 1st June 1947 to 10th June 1947 and three months' salary for wrongful dismissal. He also claimed dearness allowance and bonus for the period during which he served under the defendants. He alleged that in the accounts maintained by the defendants, the plaintiff was credited with certain sums on account of dearness allowance, and bonus for the years 1943-44, 1944-45 and 1945-46, and though these sums were credited to the account of the plaintiff they were not paid, notwithstanding the fact that there were entries to the effect that those sums were paid to the plaintiffs.

(3) The defendants filed an elaborate written statement. In that written statement they denied that there was any agreement between the defendants and the plaintiff for payment of dearness allowance, but all the same, the defendants admitted that, as a matter of fact, ex gratia, they gave the staff, including the plaintiff, dearness allowance calculated at the rate of one third of the month's salary from April 1943 onwards in addition to the monthly salary to which alone they were entitled in law. They also denied that there was any agreement that the dearness allowance formed part of the salary and was a term under the agreement of service, but they, nevertheless, averred that in fact dearness allowance was paid to the plaintiff though not month by month, but in lump sums as per particulars given in the statement of accounts appended to the written statement. With regard to the claim for dearness allowance in respect of the year 1946-47 by the plaintiff, the statement of the defendants was that no dearness allowance was allotted or intended to be paid to the plaintiff for the year 1946-47, and that consequently nothing had been paid to him in that respect, nor was he entitled to the payment. The defendants did not admit the legal position that by reason of the credit entries in the account books of the defendants in regard to the dearness allowance, the said entries had in law the effect of transferring to the plaintiff the right to such amounts, for the reason that they did not form part of the contract of service and that, therefore, such payments were intended to be made only on gratuitous basis.

The defendants further denied the allegations of the plaintiff in regard to the payment of bonuses to the plaintiff or other employees. They nevertheless admit that, as they thought it fit that some bonus should be given, they had voluntarily and gratuitously declared bonuses and paid the same to the staff including the plaintiff, as per particulars mentioned in the statement of accounts appended to the written statement, and that no bonus was allowed to the plaintiff for the year 1946-47 as claimed by him. They also make the further allegation that the plaintiff did not discharge his duties to the satisfaction of the defendants, but nevertheless the payment of bonus was made in favour of the plaintiff also because it was not thought desirable to make any exception in the case of the plaintiff when other members of the staff were being paid, and so out of pity and consideration, to the plaintiff, he was also paid bonus, and that the dismissal was not wrongful and that the plaintiff was dismissed for the reason that he did not discharge his duties satisfactorily.

(4) On these pleadings, the learned City Civil Judge framed about six issues. On the first issue as to the amount of salary payable to the plaintiff, it was agreed between the parties that the claim of the plaintiff might be confined to one month's salary alone, as he had secured an employment within a short period after his cessation of service from the defendants. The question of wrongful termination of service was not, therefore, considered. On the question as to whether there was any agreement for payment of dearness allowance for the years 1943 to 1946 the learned City Civil Judge held that there was no agreement between the parties, but on the question as to whether the dearness allowance and bonus had been actually paid to the plaintiff, the learned City Civil Judge held that neither dearness allowance nor bonus was paid actually to the plaintiff. On the claim for bonus and dearness allowance for the year 1946-47, the learned City Civil Judge held that, that claim could not be maintained. An issue was also framed as to whether the claim of the plaintiff was barred by limitation. On that issue, the learned City Civil Judge held that, in as much as there was a trust created in favour of the plaintiff in respect of the dearness allowance and bonuses claimed by the plaintiff, there was no bar of limitation and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover them from the defendants and he gave a decree in a sum of Rs. 1,333-5-4, being the amount that was credited to the account of the plaintiff in the accounts of the defendant's firm for the years 1943-44, 1944-45 and 1945-46. He did not award costs to the plaintiff and directed that each party should bear his or their own costs. Against this decree and judgment, the defendants have now preferred this appeal.

(5) Mr. O. T. G. Nambiar, appearing for the defendants-appellants, has contended that under the Trusts Act, Ss. 5 to 8, on the facts of the present case, no trust created in respect of the movable property is valid, unless declared by a non-testamentary instrument in writing signed by the author of the trust or the trustee and registered, or by the will of the author of the trust or of the trustee. S. 6 of the Trusts Act provides that subject to the provisions of S. 5, a trust is created when the author of the trust indicates with reasonable certainty by any words or acts (a) an intention on his part to create thereby a trust, (b) the purpose of the trust, (c) the beneficiary, and (d) the trust property, and (unless the trust is declared by will or the author of the trust is himself to be the trustee) transfers the trust property to the trustee. S. 8 of the said Act provides that the subject matter of the trust must be property transferable to the beneficiary and it must not be merely beneficial interest under a subsisting trust. Construing these sections, the learned counsel for the appellants contends that if there was no separation of the trust property from the general property of the person who is supposed to be creating the trust, there cannot be a trust created. In this case, on the facts as have emerged from the plaint and written statement and the evidence that is on record, it is urged by the learned counsel for the appellants, that there has been no separation of the trust property from the general property of the defendants, and, therefore, there has been no setting apart or transfer of the property to the beneficiary that there has been no ownership created in the property that could be said to have been transferred in favour of the beneficiary and, therefore, the conclusions of the City Civil Judge are not warranted.

Learned counsel for the appellants has also invited my attention to a decision in — 'Chambers v. Chambers', 1944-2-Mad. L. J. 29 (P. C.). In that case, the Judicial Committee held that the subject matter was not clearly ascertained, that there was no setting aside the appropriation of the amounts as a fund transferable by the husband to the wife, that there was nothing in the case tantamount to a declaration of trust at all and that there was never any absolute parting by the husband with the alleged subject matter of the trust and it, therefore, finally held that there was no valid trust constituted.

Mr. O. T. G. Nambiar also referred to a decision in — 'Ramanathan Chettiar v. Palaniappa Chettiar', 1945-2-Mad. L. J. 164 which has followed the decision in — 'Chambers v. Chambers', 1944-2-Mad. L. J. 29 (P. C.) and has held that an allocation of specific property or fund to charity is essential both for effecting an endowment under the Hindu law and for creating a valid trust. The mere credit entry in the donor's account books without setting aside and appropriating the sum credited is not sufficient to create a valid trust. The modes in which a voluntary transfer of property in favour of a temple can be validly and effectually made have also been discussed in the course of the judgment delivered by Patanjali Sastri J. in that case. The principles laid down in these decisions relied upon by the learned counsel for the appellants cannot be taken exception to. But the fact remains as to whether the facts disclosed in this case come within the purview of the rulings of these two decisions. Whether the subject matter was not clearly ascertained, whether there was any setting aside and apportionment of the amounts said to have been due to the plaintiff, whether there was an absolute parting with the alleged subject matter of the trust and whether the credit entries, without satisfying the conditions required for creating a valid trust in favour of the plaintiff, are the questions that arise for consideration in this appeal, on the facts as disclosed in the plaint, the written statement and the documentary and oral evidence that has been recorded.

(6) The learned counsel for the respondents has taken me through the relevant paragraphs of the plaint as well as the written statement and he has read out the evidence on behalf of the defendants. The claim of the plaintiff has been, in the alternative, on the basis of a contract, a completed gift, relationship of depositor and deposit, creditor and debtor and beneficiary and trustee. The defendants no doubt deny all these relationships as between the plaintiff and themselves, but notwithstanding all these denials, the solid fact remains that the plaintiff served under the defendants as an employee on a particular salary, that his services were dispensed with and that before the services were dispensed with in June 1947, the defendants had credited to the account of the plaintiff several sums of money as and towards bonus and dearness allowance during the period of three years during which the plaintiff served under the defendants. The defendants admit that they not merely made these credit entries in favour of the plaintiff, but they go also to the extent of saying that all the amounts that have been shown as credit entries in favour of the plaintiff have actually been paid and the dates for the payment are also given in the course of the evidence let in on behalf of the defendants. The first payment is said to have been made on the 31st July 1944, the second payment on the 31st

July 1945 and the third payment on the 18th February 1947, so that the stand taken by the defendants is that bonus and dearness allowance were not merely declared to be paid in favour of the plaintiff, but that they were also actually paid to the plaintiff on the respective dates mentioned above.

On the question as to whether actually payments had been or had not been made, of these various sums that were shown as due to the plaintiff, the learned City Civil Judge has come to the conclusion that the payments of bonus and dearness allowance were never made by the defendants to the plaintiff. There is also no cogent or convincing proof that the payments of dearness allowance and bonuses had actually been made to the plaintiff. No receipts appear to have been taken from the plaintiff for vouching the payments of these sums of dearness allowance and bonuses. The defendants' witnesses would say that no muster roll was kept, that there was no salary acquittance register at all kept by the defendants and that the signatures of the employees were not taken when salaries were disbursed. These things reveal a very strange state of business efficiency in the defendants' firm, which is said to be transacting a very large business in timber throughout the state; so that, I do not think that there is any justification for me to differ from the finding of the learned City Civil Judge that the amounts shown in the account books of the defendants firm have not been paid to the plaintiff. That this was so is also corroborated by the fact that the second witness for the plaintiff, who was another employee and whose services were dispensed with by the defendants and against whom also similar entries for payment of bonus and dearness allowance were shown, was paid off a sum of Rs. 400 or thereabouts, in settlement of his claim of bonus and dearness allowance, when he filed a suit against the defendants.

(7) The question then is, what is the effect of the credit entries that have been found in the account books of the defendants in favour of the plaintiff. The contention of the appellants is that those are mere credit entries and they cannot have the effect of creating a trust in favour of the plaintiff. One has to consider whether these credit entries are merely as credit entries not sufficient to create a valid trust or, taking the circumstances which obtain in relation to the fund, the credit entries have to be considered as being part and parcel of a trust created by the employer in favour of the employee. The important background that has been furnished in the evidence is that the defendants, who are income-tax assesseees, when they filed their accounts in the course of the assessment to income-tax have made statements to the effect that these amounts represented by the credit entries, have been amounts not merely set apart for the benefit of the employees, but also have been actually paid over to them, and on the basis of such setting apart and payment to the plaintiff and other employees, the defendants have claimed benefit, namely, reduction in the assessment of income-tax & other taxes to that extent. In view of this fact, viz., that the Income-tax Department were made to believe & act upon the representation of the defendants that these amounts, standing to the credit of the plaintiff in the account books of the defendants have been set apart as funds belonging to the plaintiff and as funds paid over to the plaintiff and that thereby the defendants derived benefit in the matter of reduction of income-tax, the question arises as to whether, in such circumstances, it will not be just and proper that the defendants should be fixed up to their representation to the Income-tax Department to the above effect and whether such a state of things could not be taken advantage of by the plaintiff. I should think that the defendants have not conducted themselves properly judging from the manner in which they have done in relation to the plaintiff and the Income-tax Department. They could not be allowed to blow hot and cold in the same breath. They cannot approbate and reprobate at the same time. But for the fact that they represented to the Income-tax department that these amounts standing to the credit of the plaintiff in their accounts had actually been paid and that they had become the property of the plaintiff, they would not have been entitled to the benefit and consideration in the matter of reduction of the Income-tax from the Income-tax Department. What is the effect of such a representation is the question. Undoubtedly, the effect of such a representation, in my opinion, would be that the amounts, which have been credited to the account of the plaintiff in the account books of the defendants have not only been separated from the general funds belonging to the defendants, but have also been set apart for the benefit of the plaintiff, as an employee entitled to bonus and dearness allowance.

I think, applying the principles laid down in the Privy Council decision in — Chambers v. Chambers, 1944-2-Mad.L.J. 29(P.C.) and also the ruling in — Ramanathan Chettiar v. Palaniappa Chettiar, 1945-2-Mad. L. J. 164, I am inclined to hold that the action of the defendants in having made not merely the entries in the account books but also in having represented to the Income-tax Department that these amounts have been set apart for the plaintiff and other employees and that they have been paid over to the employees from year to year, would certainly constitute a trust in favour of the plaintiff.

(8) Apart from this, there is the further fact which has to be taken into account, viz, the credit entries do not stand by themselves as mere credit entries in favour of the plaintiff. A reading of the exhibits containing the credit entries would show that this is something like a running account wherein there are also debit entries against the plaintiff. Loans that the plaintiff had borrowed on more than one occasion have been debited to this account of the plaintiff and the balance has been struck, after deducting these loans made to the plaintiff. The payments also made by the plaintiff on occasions have been credited towards this account. Not merely this. On occasions, even the salary has been credited towards this account of the plaintiff. This would mean that these amounts which have been found in the accounts to the credit of the plaintiff have been treated as amounts set apart for his benefit and as belonging to him and that they were separated from the general funds belonging to the defendants and that these amounts had been transferred for the benefit of the plaintiff having been separated from the general funds, as will be clear from the state of accounts and the way in which those accounts have been adjusted from time to time by the defendants themselves. Therefore, it cannot be denied, on one hand, that there is admission by the defendants that these amounts have been allocated and set apart, though they say that this was done ex gratia and not under any contract or agreement between the plaintiff and themselves; and, on the other hand, there is the conduct of the defendants which goes to show that they had treated these amounts as amounts belonging to the plaintiff and payable to him, so that if these amounts, which belong to the plaintiff and which are payable to him have been retained by the defendants in their hands, the result would be nothing other than that they were holding those amounts on behalf of the plaintiff as trustees, in order that they may be paid over to him whenever there was a demand by the plaintiff for the same. Therefore, far from the provisions contained in Ss. 5 to 8 of the Trusts Act not being applicable to the facts of the present case, I think the principles embodied in those sections would certainly come into operation on the facts of the present case and they will apply.

(9) It is not necessary for me to characterise the evidence of the first witness of the defendants. Nevertheless, it furnishes a clear proof that the defendants intended and agreed not merely to declare dearness allowance and bonuses to the plaintiff and other employees of theirs, but that they also set apart deliberately those amounts calculated on the basis on which the defendants wanted to pay dearness allowance and bonuses to the plaintiff and other employees. I do not think that the learned City Civil Judge has appreciated the evidence of D. W. 1 in the correct perspective. Apart from what is to be gathered from the general tenor of the written statement, it must be considered that there has been an intention and agreement to pay dearness allowance and bonus to the plaintiff, as revealed by the averments in the plaint, and also in the written statement, as also the deposition of the first witness for the defence. The credit entries in favour of the plaintiff cannot but be treated as a declaration by the defendants in favour of the plaintiff that the monies are held for and on behalf of the plaintiff by the defendants. The decision in — Kanakasabhapathi Mudaliar v. Hajee Oosman Sahib, 47 Mad L. J. 791 furnishes the nearest approach to the facts of the present case. That decision is based on an earlier decision in — Bai Mahakore v. Bai Mangla, 35 Bom 403, where, one of the judges constituting the Bench held, relying upon a declaration by the donor, that there was a trust created, whereas Heaton J. held that the relationship between the employer and the employee was that of a depositor and depositee and that the relationship of depositor and depositee was established in the circumstances of the case. I do not think that any violence will be done, if a similar inference is drawn from the facts of the present case. The plaintiff having been the employee and who had been allocated and awarded dearness allowance and bonuses, can be treated as a depositor, as if he had received the money at the end of the year at the time when it was paid and that he redeposited the money with the defendants. Even from that view, the relationship of depositor and depositee will certainly entitle the plaintiff to claim the money that stand credited in the account books of the defendants. If it were certain immovable properties which were actually not separated from the general properties belonging to the owner, as it was the case in — Chambers v. Chambers, 1944-2-Mad L. J. 29(P. C.) certainly there would have been some difficulty in coming to the conclusion that there was no declaration of the trust in favour of the plaintiff by the defendants in having made the credit entries and having adjusted the accounts of the plaintiff from time to time in the manner in which they have done. But in this case, the subject matter was involved in cash and that cash has been allocated and separated from the general funds and shown to have been so separated and allocated to the plaintiff when the defendants dealt with the Income-tax Department in connection with their assessment. Therefore, the difficulty that arose in — Chambers v. Chambers, 1944-2-Mad L. J. 29(P. C.) is not to be seen in the present case. Similarly, the difficulties that have been pointed out in the credit entries that were the subject matter of discussion in — 'Ramanathan Chettiar v. Palaniappa Chettiar', 1945-2-Mad L. J. 164 do not obtain in this case, for in this case, the credit entries, far from remaining as mere credit entries, have the effect and character of having been amounts separately allotted and allocated for the benefit of the plaintiff and have been treated as such, as revealed from the course of conduct adopted by the defendants in relation to those credit entries in their books of accounts.

(10) In these circumstances, I should think the decree of the learned City Civil Judge will have to be upheld and this appeal will have to be dismissed with costs.

B/R.G.D.

Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 20

SATYANARAYANA RAO AND
RAJAGOPALAN JJ.

Asher Textiles Ltd., Tiruppur, Applicant v.
Commr. of Incometax and Excess Profits Tax,
Madras, Respondent.

Case Referred No. 53 of 1950, D/- 14-4-1952.

Income-tax Act (1922), S. 13 — Commercial accountancy — Valuation of opening stock and closing stock in a year — Method of.

It is a long established principle of commercial accountancy that in order to arrive at true profits of a business the closing stock during that period should be valued either at the market value or at cost price whichever is lower, at the option of the trader. The cost is always taken and understood to be the original cost and not the notional cost. (Para 1)

The value of the closing stock is adopted as the value of the opening stock for the succeeding year. (Para 1)

Where at the end of the accounting year, the assessee, who had purchased goods at Rs. 500 cost price, adopts the market value, say Rs. 300, of the goods on that date as it is lower of the two values and adopts that value of Rs. 300 as the value of the opening stock for the succeeding year but at the end of the succeeding year instead of applying the same principle (namely, valuing the closing stock either at the market value or the cost price whichever is lower) adopts the same value of Rs. 300 as the value of the closing stock when the market value is say Rs. 400, the method adopted is improper. AIR 1949 Mad 580; (1949) 2 All ER 889 and AIR 1925 Mad. 1242 Ref. (Para 1)

Anno: Income-tax Act, S. 13 N. 2.

S. Swaminathan, for Applicant; C. S. Rama Rao Sahib, for Respondent.

REFERENCES: Courtwar/Chronological/ Paras

(25) 2 ITC 14: 48 Mad 836: (AIR 1925 Mad 1242)

(49) 1949-17 ITR 1: (AIR 1949 Mad 580)

(1949) 2 All ER 889: (65 TLR 725)

SATYANARAYANA RAO J.: The question referred to this court for decision is a simple one, namely,

"whether the valuation of the closing stock is to be made on the basis adopted by the assessee company."

To bring out the method adopted by the assessee for valuating the closing stock a simple illustration may be given. Suppose he had purchased goods at Rs. 500 cost price and if such goods remained unsold at the end of the accounting year, applying the well known principle of commercial accountancy, the assessee adopted the market value (say for example Rs. 300) of the goods on that date as it was lower of the two values, namely, the market value and the cost price. Having done that in valuing of the closing stock he correctly adopted that value of Rs. 300 as the value of the opening stock for the succeeding year. But at the end of the succeeding accounting year instead of again applying the principle, that he should have valued the closing stock either at the market value or the cost price whichever is lower, adopted the same value of Rs. 300 at which the opening stock was valued, when the market price was say Rs. 400. Here it must be mentioned that the market value means "market value at the commencement of the year when the opening stock has to be valued and at the close of the year when the closing stock has to be valued and not any intermediate valuation."

The method of valuation of the closing stock adopted by the assessee was objected to by the Incometax authorities and their decision was upheld by the Appellate tribunal. The assessee adopted the mercantile system in maintaining his accounts, and the only question is whether he followed correctly the well-established principles of accountancy in making up his accounts. It is a long established principle of accountancy that in order to arrive at true profits of a business the closing stock during that period should be valued either at the market value or at cost price whichever is lower, at the option of the trader. The principle underlying this, is to provide a reserve for the loss which he is likely to incur during the period. By giving the option to adopt the lower of the two valuations the trader is protected from being taxed in respect of profits which he did not actually earn. Profits always represent the surplus of the receipts over the cost price including expenditure. The cost is always taken and understood to be the original cost. Applying this principle in different years at each stage the market value or the cost of the stock must be considered and the trader has to choose between the two valuations to make out and adopt whichever is to his advantage.

What is now urged in support of the contention that the opening stock and the closing stock in the accounting year could be valued at the same figure, is that the value of the opening stock represents really the replacement value of the goods at that time and therefore, it represents the cost price of the stock. In valuing the closing stock as under the rule already stated he has got the option to adopt either the cost price or the market rate whichever is lower; it is claimed that he is entitled to adopt this notional cost price because it is lower than the market rate. In the illustration given, the sum of Rs. 300 the value of the opening stock during the accounting year is undoubtedly lower than the market value which was Rs. 400. In support of this contention no authority has been cited except the opinion of a text book writer, Mr. Montgomery, whose opinion was based upon certain trading regulations having statutory force and obtaining in America. There are no such rules in India and in Great Britain. The learned advocate is not able to cite any opinion of any text book writer of England on the subject in support of his contention. When the assessee was allowed to set off in the previous accounting year the loss of Rs. 200 incurred against the profits earned he was allowed to create a reserve from the profits to cover the loss of Rs. 200. In the succeeding year when the market price was Rs. 400 and the cost of the goods was Rs. 500 the reserve of Rs. 200 already allowed was not justified as the loss in the succeeding year was reduced to Rs. 100. In reality in respect of this Rs. 100, he was not being called upon to pay tax as profits arising by the sale of the goods but is called upon to bring back from out of the reserve a sum of Rs. 100 in respect of which he did not pay tax in the previous year. At no stage when this principle is applied would he be called upon to pay tax on profits which he did not actually earn for if the value of the goods appreciated to Rs. 600 the difference of Rs. 100 cannot be treated as profits and would not be treated because the assessee has the option of choosing between the cost price and the market price whichever is lower. In the illustration if the market price goes to Rs. 600 he could value the closing stock at Rs. 500 the cost price, and no question of profits being taxed before they are earned would arise.

The rule of accountancy adopted all over England and as also adopted in India is to construe the cost price as "original cost price" and not a notional cost price and liberty should be given to the assessee to adopt either the original cost price or the market value. There is no authority in support of the position that the cost price means notional cost price. On the contrary decisions in which the application of the rule was considered are against this contention. In the decision in — 'Commr. of Income-tax and Excess Profits tax, Madras v. Messrs. Chari and Ram, Madura, 1949-17 I. T. R. 1, the question that arose for consideration was whether the assessee was bound to value different kinds of goods at the average cost and also value them at the average market price and then adopt the lower of the two or whether he was entitled when the prices of the goods varied to adopt in respect of such of the goods whose cost price was higher than the average market value and in respect of others the average of the cost price where the cost price was lower than the average market value. The answer given by this court was that the latter view is correct and that the department was not entitled to insist that the assessee should adopt the former method. This court examined the decisions in England in which the scope of this principle of accountancy was fully considered. The same view was taken in England in the case — 'Inland Revenue Commissioners v. Cock Russell & Co. Ltd.', 1949-2-All E. R. 889 and in — 'Commr. of Income-tax v. Chengalvaraya Chetti', 2 I. T. C. 14: 48 Mad 836, the assessee adopted some novel method of valuing the opening stock. With a view to set off loss against profits in the first year, the assessee adopted the cost price as the price of the opening stock and the market value as the price of the closing stock of that year. In the succeeding year, however, instead of taking the value of the closing stock as the value of the opening stock he again adopted the cost price as the value of the opening stock for the succeeding year. This, it was pointed out, was not warranted and was opposed to principles of commercial accountancy and the rule that in arriving at trading profits the trader has the option of choosing either the market value or the cost price whichever is lower cannot be applied in the manner in which it was done by the assessee in that case. These decisions, in our opinion, clearly point to the conclusion that the method which the assessee has adopted in valuing the closing stock in the present case is not supported either on principle or authority. In these circumstances the question referred to us must be answered in the negative and against the assessee. As the assessee has failed he must pay the costs of the respondent which we fix at Rs. 250.

B/G.M.J.

Answer in the negative.

A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 21

RAJAMANNAR C. J. AND VENKATARAMA AYYAR J.

In re M. Thomas by father and natural guardian S. Masilamani, Petitioner.

Writ Petn. No. 149 of 1952, D/- 21-4-1952.

(a) Constitution of India, Arts. 14, 15(1) and 16 — Concession in school fees to converts can be restricted to converts from one generation only — (Madras Education Rules, Rule 92, Appendix 17 (A) ).

A person is not entitled as of right to any concession in school fees. In making the exception the State is certainly entitled to fix limits to its operation. After all, when the State is granting an indulgence it is for the State entirely to decide how far the indulgence would go. Where policy of the State evidently was to allow the concession to pupils or students who themselves had been converted to christianity or whose parent or guardian had been converted but the State apparently was not willing to extend the concession where the conversion was more than one generation old, it cannot be said that the State has made any discrimination in making this provision. (Para 5)

(b) Constitution of India, Arts. 46, 37 — Directive principles are not enforceable by Courts of law. (Para 3)

A. R. C. Albuquerque, for Petitioner.

RAJAMANNAR C. J.: The petitioner in this application is a minor aged about 13 years and the affidavit filed in support of the petition has been filed on his behalf by his father and natural guardian. The petitioner is an Indian Christian, but claims to be a Harijan. The petitioner is studying in Form I in the Hindu High School, Madurantakam which is a State-aided school. His father applied on his behalf to the Manager of the school for a grant of a full school-fee concession; but his request was not complied with and the manager of the school drew the attention of the petitioner's father to a note under appendix 17 (A) of rule 92 of the Madras Educational rules. The effect of this note can be understood only by a reference to the substantive provision in the Madras Educational Rules, in particular rule 73 and rule 92. Under rule 73 of these rules, it is inter alia provided that boys belonging to the classes and castes specified in Appendix 17 (A) may be admitted without the payment of fees. Rule 92 also makes a similar provision. Appendix 17 gives a list of backward classes under 2 categories (1) Harijans and (2) Castes other than

Harijans. Note (1) to this appendix runs as follows:

"Converts to Christianity or to any other religion from the castes included in Group I above shall be eligible for all fee concessions including fee concessions in colleges, for which the scheduled castes are eligible under the Madras Educational Rules provided however, that the conversion was of either the pupil or the student or of his parent or guardian".

The petitioner will not under this rule be entitled to the fee concession because it was his grand-father who was converted to Christianity.

(2) The ground on which interference by this court is sought under Art. 226 of the Constitution is that the above said note is repugnant to Arts. 14, 15 (1), 15 and 46 of the Constitution because it makes a discrimination between persons on the ground of their religion.

(3) The contention of the petitioner appears to us to be entirely untenable. The basis of the argument appears to be that the petitioner has some sort of right and he has been deprived of it by the discriminatory treatment of the State. In the first place, it must be remarked that the petitioner is not entitled as of right to any concession. It is true that Art. 46 of the Constitution enunciates one of the directive principles of State policy, viz., that the State shall promote with special care the educational and economic interest of the weaker sections of the people, and, in particular, of the scheduled castes and scheduled tribes. But this provision is not enforceable by any court — Vide Art. 37.

(4) The petitioner's claim is entirely based on the fact that he belongs to the Harijan community. That assumption itself is wrong. It may be that his grand-father before his conversion, belonged to one of the Harijan castes, enumerated in appendix 17 A. But the moment he was converted to Christianity, he ceased to belong to any caste because the Christian religion does not recognise the system of castes. It follows therefore that the petitioner cannot claim today to be a member of the Harijan community, since he is a Christian.

(5) Though in law any member of the castes enumerated in Appendix 17-A would cease to belong to that caste on his conversion to Christianity or to any other religion, and therefore, will not be entitled to any of the concessions given to members of that caste, nevertheless the State made an exception in the case of recent converts from the castes enumerated therein. It is not for us to speculate on the reasons for the policy underlying this exception. Note 1 which embodies the exception confers the concession on persons who would ordinarily be otherwise not entitled to the concession because they had ceased to be members of the enumerated castes. In making the exception the State is certainly entitled to fix limits to its operation. After all, the State was granting an indulgence and it was for the State entirely to decide how far the indulgence would go. The policy of the State evidently was to allow the concession to pupils or students who themselves had been converted or whose parent or guardian had been converted. But the State apparently was not willing to extend the concession where the conversion was more than one generation old. We fail to see how the State has made any discrimination in making this provision. It is not as if the petitioner's religion has been the reason for not coming within the scope of the note. But for the note the petitioner would not have had any right at all and would not have any reason to complain. In our opinion, the petitioner has entirely misconceived his remedy. It is certainly open to him to impress upon the State the desirability of extending the concession even to persons in his position. But as a court of law we are unable to see how we can give any relief to the petitioner under Art. 226.

(6) The petition is therefore dismissed.

A/R.G.D.

Petition dismissed.

A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 22

KRISHNASWAMI NAYUDU J.

A. N. Subramanian, late a minor by G. S. Lakshmi Ammal, as next friend but now having attained majority, Appellant v. A. S. Kalyanarama Iyer and others, Respondents.

Appeal No. 484 of 1949, D/- 30-7-1952.

(a) Hindu Women's Right to Property Act (1937) S. 3 — Separate property — Property acquired by father at partition between him and his sons is his separate property and on his death it passes to his widow. AIR 1945 FC 25 Distinguished; AIR 1949 Nag. 108 dissented from; AIR 1945 Pat. 87 held not impliedly overruled by AIR 1945 FC 25. (Paras 3 and 4)

Anno: Hindu Women's Right to Property Act S. 3 N. 1.

(b) Family arrangement — Binding on son of party.

A bona fide family arrangement entered into between the parties as to the disposal of a particular item belonging to the family whereby a coparcener gave up the property even when he had a right to it is binding on his son. (Para 8)

N. Sundara Iyer, for Appellant; C. S. Swaminathan, for Respondents.

REFERENCES: Courtwar/Chronological/ Paras
(45) 1945-1 Mad LJ 108: (AIR 1945
FC 25: ILR 1945 Kar F C 39) 3, 4 (48) ILR (1948) Nag 465: (AIR 1949
Nag 108) 3
(44) 23 Pat 508: (AIR 1945 Pat 87) 3

JUDGMENT: The appellant is the plaintiff in a suit for partition and separate possession in respect of the properties of his grand father one Subramania Iyer. Subramania Iyer had two sons, the first defendant and Narayana Iyer, father of the plaintiff. Subramania Iyer died in 1945 leaving his widow the 2nd defendant. The plaintiff's claim is in respect of the properties left by Subramania Iyer which consists of properties which were allotted to the share of Subramania Iyer in a partition between Subramania Iyer, Kalyanarama Iyer and Narayana Iyer entered into under Ex. B-1 dated 4-2-1935. The second defendant is the widow of Subramania Iyer and the lower court conceded to her a share under the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act. The present appeal is confined to the finding as to the widow being entitled to a share in the partition under the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act and as to the rejection of the plaintiff's claim to items 29 and 30 of the A schedule to the plaint. The preliminary decree was passed on 17-9-1948. The second defendant died on 28-11-1948. The question as to her being entitled to a right to a share need not really be decided in appeal. But it is pointed out by Mr. Sundara Iyer appearing for the appellant that even though by reason of her death no share need be set apart for her and the property may be divided as between the surviving parties, in any event as a question of mesne profits arises, it should be necessary to consider whether she would be entitled to any share after the lifetime of her husband until her death on 28-11-1948.

(2) The properties in respect of which the 2nd defendant was allotted share comprised of properties allotted to her husband Subramania Iyer at the family partition evidenced by Ex. B-1. That was a partition between the father and his two sons and each had separate possession of their respective shares. But in respect of one of the items, i.e., item 29 which is one of the properties referred to in the schedule D to the partition deed it was provided that the exact half of the properties in D schedule had been separately allotted to Subramania Iyer and similarly the remaining half of the properties mentioned in the said D schedule are allotted separately to the first defendant. Paragraph 11 of that document proceeds as follows:

"It has been settled and agreed that even though executants Nos. 1 and 2 have equal rights in respect of the Madam Kudiyruppu (item 29) mentioned in the D schedule, as described in paragraph 6 supra, executant No. 1 and his wife Lakshmiammal, the mother of executants Nos. 2 and 3 shall have full authority and liberty to reside therein, that subsequent to the death of the aforesaid two persons the said Madam Kudiyruppu shall devolve upon executant No. 2 exclusively and that executant No. 3 shall have no right in respect of the same."

This item of property continued to be in the possession of Subramania Iyer and the first defendant and during the period it was in their possession improvements were made by putting up a building which is described as item 30 in schedule A to the plaint. The contention of the learned counsel for the appellant is that this item 29 is also the property of Subramania Iyer in which the plaintiff would be entitled to a share and that in any event item 30, being a building put up by Subramania Iyer on the house site in item 29, whatever rights the first defendant may have to item 29 by virtue of the recitals in clause (11) of Ex. B-1, item 30 should be treated as a property in which the plaintiff would be entitled to a share.

(3) As regards the first of these contentions, viz., the widow's right to a share, reliance is placed on the decision of the Federal Court reported in — 'Umayal Achi v. Lakshmi Achi', 1945-1-Mad L J 108 (FC) and it is urged that property obtained by a coparcener at a partition would not be "separate property" as contemplated in S. 3(1) of the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act of 1937. The contention is that the decision has laid down this proposition. The question before the Federal Court was as to whether the property of a sole surviving coparcener who left his widow could be treated as separate property within the meaning of the Act and the learned Judges of the Federal Court were not considering a case of the present nature, viz., of property obtained by coparcener at a family partition where there were no sons, in the sense undivided sons, as by the partition the sons had become divided. The decision of the Federal Court is binding on this High Court, but it is binding only to the extent it purports to decide and nothing more.

I consider that decision is a statement of the proposition of law applicable to the facts arising in that case, viz., that the property of a sole surviving coparcener who leaves a widow cannot be treated as "separate property" for the purpose of Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act. But there are certain observations in the judgment which are relied upon to support the contentions of the appellant. The learned Judge refers to Mulla's Hindu Law, 9th Edn., paragraph 230 and to the classification of what "separate property" is and observes that the expression "separate property" has been used in a limited sense and sometimes in a general sense. Mulla in paragraph 230 classifies the various properties which he considers to be separate properties and among them, 6 and 7 relate to properties obtained as a share at a partition, and property held by sole surviving coparcener. With reference to 6 and 7, it is not merely the share at a partition of property held by sole surviving coparcener that is treated as "separate property", but property subject to certain qualifications, the qualifications being that in the case of property obtained as a share at a partition the property so obtained must be by a coparcener who has no male issue, whereas in the other case of property held by sole surviving coparcener, where there is no widow in existence. The obvious reason for this qualification is that in the case of a person who obtains a share at a partition and who has a son or a grandson, the son or the grandson acquires right by birth and once the son or grandson comes into existence, it could not be treated as separate property, since it becomes coparcenary property on such birth. As regards the other category of the property held by sole surviving coparcener, the widow's existence who has a power to adopt a boy so long as she lives which power she may exercise at any time, would be a bar to treating it as "separate property", since such power could be exercised by her and the adopted son may come into existence when on such adoption the property could not be considered to be a separate property but the coparcenary property of the adopted son.

Mulla in his Treatise, carefully prescribed the qualifications and it is only when such qualifications are present, a property could be said "separate property" and these qualifications are prescribed in respect of only classes 6 and 7 out of the 7 classes enumerated by the author in the categories of separate property.

The reasoning in the judgment of the Federal Court is based on the qualifications referred to by Mulla in his Treatise and if in a case where a property is obtained at a partition by a coparcener, who thereafter becomes divided and that coparcener had no son, there is no question of any one acquiring a right by birth in the property so divided and allotted to the dividing coparcener and there is nothing to prevent to call it "separate property" as undoubtedly the dividing coparcener who acquires title to it under the partition would be entitled to deal with it absolutely, since there is no other to question his actions regarding the property. In the present case it may be pointed out that Subramania Iyer, at the time of the partition had sons. But that is immaterial because the sons had become divided and ceased to have any interest in the property and it was always open to Subramania Iyer to have disposed of the property in the manner he liked subject however to whatever rights the widow or the wife had in the property which however does not arise in the present case. This decision of the Federal Court is referred to in Mayne's Hindu Law and Usage, 11th Edn. at p. 705 as follows:

"The Federal Court has held in — 'Umayal Achi v. Lakshmi Achi', 1945-1-Mad L J 108 (FC) that the expression 'separate property' may be the antithesis of three other expressions, viz., 'ancestral property', 'coparcenary property' and 'joint family property' that having regard to the contingency requiring legislative interference, the property held by a person as the last surviving coparcener of a joint family cannot be regarded as 'separate property' within the meaning of S. 3(1), wherein the term refers to property in respect of which the son of the surviving coparcener would not be entitled to coparcenary rights but only to a right of inheritance on the father's death if he survived him."

What was really laid down by the Federal Court in the decision is expressed in the passage extracted above and that does not cover a case where the property is not the property held by a sole surviving coparcener, but property allotted in a family partition.

In — 'Bhaorao v. Chandra Bhagabai', ILR (1948) Nag 465 the question arose as to whether the share received by the father at a partition between him and his son is "separate property" and on his death it passes to his son in preference to his widow and it was held, following the decision of the Federal Court in — 'Umayal Achi v. Lakshmi Achi', 1945-1-Mad L J 108 (FC) that it is not "separate property" since "separate property" means only self-acquired property in the narrow sense. The learned Judges of the Nagpur High Court considered that they were bound by the decision of the Federal Court and followed it and held that the widows are entitled to a share under the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act in the self-acquired property in the narrow sense.

With reference to a contention that the decision of the Patna High Court in — 'Nandhkumari Devi v. Bulkan Devi', 23 Pat 508, which came to a different conclusion, the learned Judges of the Nagpur High Court observed that that decision must now be taken to be impliedly overruled by their Lordships of the Federal Court and that the view expressed in the Patna case is no longer good law. The Patna case was decided earlier to the Federal Court decision and it does not appear that that decision came in for consideration at the hands of the learned Judges of the Federal Court.

(4) In the view I have taken that the decision of the Federal Court was with reference to a case which arose before them, viz., the case of the nature of the property held by a sole surviving coparcener, it does not prevent me from holding the opinion which I have expressed that in the case of a property obtained as a share at a partition, it is separate property and I would prefer to follow the classification made by Mulla in his valuable Treatise and find that the 2nd defendant will be entitled to a share. It must be observed that if the contention of the learned counsel for the appellant has to be given full effect to, the Act which obviously was intended to give better rights to women in respect of property, as the preamble makes it clear, would not place the Hindu women in any better position excepting to ask for a partition in respect of property acquired out of the self-acquisitions of her husband, and that in regard to any property which is in any way tainted in the sense that it comprises ancestral or coparcenary property the Hindu widow would be in the same position as she was prior to the enactment of Act XI of 1938. I do not consider that was the object or intention of the framers of the Act nor was it understood like that at any rate until the decision of the Federal Court in — 'Umayal Achi v. Lakshmi Achi', 1945-1-Mad L J 108 (FC) though with respect to one kind of property I agree with the lower court's view as to the widow's rights to a share in the property.

(5) The other question as to whether the plaintiff would be entitled to a share in item 29 would depend upon the construction of Ex. B-1. The learned counsel argued that the recitals in clause 11 of Ex. B-1 would show that in so far as the half share of Subramania Iyer in item 29 was concerned after Subramania Iyer's death, the first defendant did not become entitled to it until after the lifetime of this Subramania Iyer's wife and mother of the first defendant who was second defendant in the suit. In short, his contention is that after Subramania Iyer's death the estate was kept in abeyance and the direction is, to vest it in the first defendant after the lifetime of the second defendant. Such a devise is invalid and soon after the death of Subramania Iyer, the heirs of Subramania Iyer including the plaintiff had become entitled to a share.

(6) In considering this argument, it must be stated that one is not examining the recitals in either a will or a deed of settlement or gift but the terms of a partition deed to which the plaintiff's father was a party. In paragraph 6 of the partition there is an allotment of an exact half of the properties in the D schedule which comprises item 29 to each of the first defendant and father Subramania Iyer. Though there is an allotment there is no division. There are other properties separately allotted to each and the valuations of the properties are fixed. Properties are also separately allotted to the father of the plaintiff. There is no division of item 29, paragraph 6 declaring the rights of the first defendant and his father to a moiety in that item of property. In respect of this item the parties to the document, viz., Subramania Iyer, the first defendant and the plaintiff's father agreed that the rights of the respective parties to it should be governed by what is contained in paragraph 11 and that is the reason why it is stated that even though Subramania Iyer and the first defendant have equal rights in respect of the Madham Kudiyruppu i.e., item 29 still the property is to be enjoyed in a certain manner and it provided that Subramania Iyer and his wife, the second defendant, will have full authority and liberty to reside therein and that subsequent to their death the property would go to or devolve upon the first defendant exclusively and that the plaintiff's father shall have no right in respect of the same.

(7) Taking the language of the document and intent of the parties, it appears to me that item 29 being a family residential house and site, it was intended that neither the father's nor the mother's occupation of the property should in any way be disturbed. But the property having been declared to belong equally to Subramania Iyer, and the first defendant and to the extent first defendant's rights to it are subject to the right of residence of the second defendant even after the lifetime of Subramania Iyer, it was provided that the first defendant would be solely entitled to it to the exclusion of the plaintiff's father. The plaintiff's father was a party to it and must have agreed to that arrangement for the simple reason that he wanted to provide, out of regard and affection, for his mother right to reside in the family house and not to be disturbed in any manner by the second defendant even after the lifetime of Subramania Iyer. There is no question of any estate being kept in abeyance, but what was intended to be held separately in the earlier part of the document was conveyed in the latter part to the first defendant subject to the right of residence of Subramania Iyer and his wife the second defendant. Whatever rights were provided for in paragraph 6 as to their respective shares that must be deemed to have been varied and modified by the subsequent clause in paragraph 11 whereby the property became vested in the first defendant subject to the rights of residence referred to. It is, therefore, a case where it could not be said that after the death of Subramania Iyer the estate was in abeyance.

(8) Further fact that the plaintiff's father agreed not to claim any rights to it shows that in so far as this item is concerned, the members of the family entered into a kind of arrangement as to the best manner of disposing of this item. Nothing could be said against the bona fide nature of this arrangement and the plaintiff's father must have been imbued with feelings of affection and love to the mother and also the fact that in case Subramania Iyer died, to the extent that her residence is provided for, the third defendant is absolved from liability, moral or legal, from making any provision for the residence of his mother. I also consider that this portion of the document which is far from being a partition as such, is a bona fide family arrangement entered into between the parties as to the disposal of a particular item belonging to the family. In that view also giving up of the property even if he had any right by the plaintiff's father was certainly binding on the plaintiff.

(9) The only other contention is as to whether the building put up in item 29 could be separated and be treated as the property of Subramania Iyer in which the plaintiff would be entitled to a share. Though a contention was raised on behalf of the first respondent that the building was constructed at the cost of both himself and his father, it is pointed out by the lower court that no evidence has been let in on the point and for the purpose of this case it may be assumed that the property has been improved by putting up a house item 30 solely at the expense of Subramania Iyer. It was never intended by Subramania Iyer that he should have any separate rights to that property, he himself having reserved a right of residence there for himself as well as his wife. He only improved the property to afford suitable accommodation for himself and his wife. The building naturally will go with the property. It is not separable nor is it intended to be severed from that item and it will acquire the character of the property to which it was attached, i.e., item 29. In this item as well, the plaintiff will not be entitled to a share.

(10) In the result, the appeal is dismissed with costs.

A/R.G.D.

Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 25

SUBBA RAO J.

Munusami Naidu, Appellant v. Swaminatha Naidu and others, Respondents.

Second Appeal No. 1958 of 1948, D/- 2-4-1952.

†Limitation Act (1908), Art. 144 — Adverse Possession — Possession of illegitimate son of Sudra — (Hindu Law — Joint family).

The illegitimate son of Sudra is a member of his family but he is not a member of the coparcenary. He does not also acquire a right by birth. He is not in joint possession with the father. He cannot claim partition. It follows that the possession of an illegitimate son cannot be deemed to be possession on behalf of the family consisting of himself and his father, and is adverse to the coparcenary of which his father is a member.

(Para 2)

Anno. Limitation Act, Arts. 142 and 144 N. 35.

M. S. Venkatarama Iyer, for Appellant; T. R. Srinivasan and S. Gopalaratnam, for Respondents.

REFERENCE ..... Para ('32) 55 Mad 1: (AIR 1931 PC 294) 2

JUDGMENT: This second appeal arises out of O. S. No. 285 of 1944, a suit filed by the appellant for partition of the joint family properties. The plaintiff, first, third and sixth defendants are brothers. The third defendant's sons are defendants 4 and 5. The sixth defendant's sons are defendants 7 and 8. The 2nd defendant Soundararajulu Naidu is the son of the first defendant's concubine one Dhanammal. Defendants 7 and 8 filed O. S. No. 318 of 1935 against the other members of the family for partition of the family properties and obtained a decree. To that suit defendants 1, 3 and 6 and the plaintiff were made parties. The plaintiff schedule properties in the present suit were the properties covered by Exs. II, XI and B in the earlier suit. Defendants 7 and 8 filed an application for appointment of a commissioner for dividing the properties. The plaintiff filed a counter claiming to be in possession of his share. But the court refused to accede to his request at that stage.

The present suit is therefore filed for partition and separate possession of the plaintiff's share. Though the plaintiff schedule consisted of 5 items, in this appeal we are concerned only with items 1 to 4 of the plaintiff schedule. Items 1 and 2 have been in the possession of the 2nd defendant for over the statutory period. Item 3 likewise has been in the possession of the 2nd defendant's mother Dhanammal for over the statutory period. The learned District Munsif found that Dhanammal and Soundararajulu Naidu acquired rights to the said items by adverse possession. But in regard to item 4 the learned District Munsif gave a decree to the plaintiff for an 4th share in the said item. But in the appeal the learned Subordinate Judge held that the plaintiff would not be entitled to a share even in respect of that item as his claim for a share was negated by the court in the final decree proceedings in the former suit. The plaintiff has therefore preferred the above second appeal.

(2) The learned counsel for the appellant fairly conceded that he has no case in respect of item 3 and so too the learned counsel for respondents in respect of item 4. The dispute therefore centres round items 1 and 2 of the plaintiff schedule. As aforesaid, Soundararajulu Naidu is the illegitimate son of the first defendant by his concubine Dhanammal. There is no finding in this case whether Soundararajulu Naidu is the illegitimate son by a continuously kept concubine, though the indications are that Dhanammal was the continuously kept concubine of the first defendant. The learned counsel for the appellant argued that among Sudras an illegitimate son is a member of his father's family and therefore his possession must be deemed to be the possession of his father and if that is the legal position no question of adverse possession would arise.

To put in other words his contention is that Soundararajulu Naidu being a member of the first defendant's family, if the first defendant's possession cannot be adverse, the 2nd defendant's possession also cannot be adverse to the coparcenary of which the 1st defendant is a member. I have already pointed out that the foundation for this argument has not been laid in the courts below. Even on the assumption that the 2nd defendant is the illegitimate son of the 1st defendant by his continuously kept concubine, I find it very difficult to equate his possession with that of his putative father. Learned counsel relied upon the decision of the Judicial Committee in — 'Vellaiappa Chetti v. Nataraja', 55 Mad 1 (P. C.) where their Lordships of the Judicial Committee held that the illegitimate son of a Sudra by a continuous concubine has the status of a son, and, if his father had died leaving no legitimate son and no separate property, the illegitimate son, though not entitled to a partition, is entitled as a member of the family to maintenance out of joint family property in the hands of the collaterals with whom the father was joint.

It is true that the illegitimate son of Sudra is a member of his family but it is equally settled law that he is not a member of the coparcenary. He does not also acquire a right by birth. He is not in joint possession with the father. He cannot claim partition. From the aforesaid principles it follows that the possession of an illegitimate son cannot be deemed to be possession on behalf of the family consisting of himself and his father. The learned Subordinate Judge on a consideration of the entire evidence held that the illegitimate son was in actual possession of the suit items 1 and 2 for over the statutory period in his own right and had thereby acquired a right by adverse possession. The finding is really one of fact.

(3) In the result, the second appeal is allowed in respect of item 4. The parties will bear their own costs in this appeal. In other respects the second appeal is dismissed. No leave.

A/V.R.B.

Appeal partly allowed.

A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 26

RAMASWAMI J.

In re Gangiredla Mathayya, Petitioner.

Criminal Revn. Case No. 688 and Cri. Revn. Petn. No. 633 of 1950, D/- 22-11-1951.

Criminal P.C. (1898), Ss. 209(1) and 437 — Implied discharge — Committal under S. 437.

Where after a particular stage in committal proceedings the Magistrate comes to the conclusion that the graver charge has not been made out, that he should proceed with the case on the less serious charge and that he is competent to dispose of the matter himself and thereupon he proceeds to frame charges, there is a discharge of the graver charge and the District Magistrate is competent to set aside the discharge and direct that the accused be committed to the Sessions. ILR (1951) All. 604, Dissent. from. AIR 1920 Mad. 94; AIR 1945 Mad. 459 and AIR 1949 Mad. 430 Foll.

(Paras 3, 5 and 9)

Anno: Cr. P. C., S. 437 N. 4 Pt. 3.

S. Suryaprakasam and A. S. Prakasam, for Petitioner; Public Prosecutor, for the State.

REFERENCES: Courtwar/Chronological/ Paras ('50) 1950 All LJ 647: (ILR (1951)

All 604)

3

('01) 24 Mad 136: (2 Weir 544)

8

('20) 43 Mad 330: (AIR 1920 Mad 94: 21 Cri LJ 91)

8

('45) 1945 Mad WN Cr 85: (AIR 1945 Mad 459)

8

('49) 1949 Mad WN Cr 5: (AIR 1949 Mad 430: 50 Cri LJ 558)

8

ORDER: This is a criminal revision case filed against the order made by the Additional District Magistrate of Visakhapatnam in C. R. P. No. 2 of 1950 which raises an interesting point.

(2) The facts are: Gangiredla Mathayya and six others were charge-sheeted by the police for offences under Ss. 147 and 302 read with S. 149, I. P. C. This case was enquired into in the Court of the Taluk Magistrate of Bimlipatam as preliminary register case No. 3 of 1949. The Magistrate after hearing witnesses came to the conclusion that only offences under Ss. 325 and 323, I. P. C. were made out and framed charges and wanted to proceed with the trial. Thereupon the Additional District Magistrate has been moved on the ground that the Taluk Magistrate Bimlipatam had improperly discharged these accused for offences triable exclusively by the Sessions Court and the Additional District Magistrate in what can legitimately be described as an elaborate and considered order has directed the committal.

(3) The only interesting point that has been taken by Mr. Suryaprakasam is that in this case there was no discharge of the accused persons and that in fact charges have been framed that there has been no termination of these proceedings and that, in these circumstances there can be no interference by way of revision by the Additional District Magistrate of Visakhapatnam. In this contention he is fortified by a Bench decision of the Allahabad High Court by Dayal and Bhargava JJ. in — 'Abdul Waheed v. Rex', 1950 All L J 647. The substance of that decision is that it was not necessary for a Magistrate who decides to try a case himself and does not commit the accused to the Court of Session, to record reasons for his not charging the accused with the offence exclusively triable by the Court of Session; and when the Magistrate decides that the accused be tried by him or any other Magistrate, the accused is not discharged, and, therefore, no question of recording of reasons arises; and that the mere non-framing of a charge cannot amount to an order of discharge so long as the accused is on trial with respect to the offences which are charged against him; that the Magistrate is free to frame a charge which he did not consider necessary to frame, at an earlier stage of the proceedings at a later stage, and that so long as the Magistrate retains the option of framing a charge against the accused, with respect to the allegations made against him it cannot be said that the Magistrate had by his non-framing of the charge discharged the accused of the offence which might have been made out against him on the basis of those allegations and that therefore there can be no interference in revision.

(4) The arguments in this Bench decision, if I may venture to say so are interesting, but with very great respect, it seems to me that they overlook the scheme of the Criminal P. C., wherein cases are classified into four categories.

viz., preliminary register cases, summons cases, warrant cases and summary trials. The Criminal Procedure Code then proceeds to prescribe the mode of procedure in regard to each of these four categories. In the case of offences which are 'prima facie' wholly triable by a Sessions Court at their inception, the procedure is to try the case as a preliminary register case. If it is found by the Magistrate after enquiry, that the graver charge making it exclusively triable by the Sessions Court, has not been made out (sic) to drop that accusation or discharge or not proceed with the accused on that graver charge, whatever phrase we might use, and then proceed to frame a charge himself if he considers that he is competent to dispose of the matter himself or adopt other modes of procedure in the Criminal Procedure Code.

(5) Then this is precisely what has happened in this case, namely, after a particular stage, the Magistrate has come to the conclusion that the graver charge has not been made out and that he should proceed with the case on the less serious charge, that he was competent to dispose of the matter himself and that thereupon he has proceeded to frame charges. If this is not a discharge of the graver charge what else can be a discharge? The argument that it will be still open to the Magistrate to commit at a later stage and therefore there is no termination of the proceedings on the graver charge is a mere talking point because after practically the entire prosecution is before Court and the accused has to enter upon his defence what aggravating factor would come before Court to make the Magistrate convert the C. C. case into P. R. case? Such a likelihood is not beyond the bounds of possibility but hardly ever likely to arise in practice.

The conclusion of the Bench decision, with very great respect, that the non-framing of charge will not amount to a discharge does not commend itself to me. In this conclusion we are fortified by two considerations, namely, first of all, if really we adopt the reasoning in this decision, then S. 437, Cri. P. C. would be rendered practically nugatory. Suppose an accusation against a person is for an offence under S. 302, I. P. C. and it is started as a preliminary register case and enquired into by the second class Magistrate as happens in this province, and the second class Magistrate after enquiring into the matter comes to the improper conclusion that the offence of murder has not been made out and frames a charge for the offence of hurt under S. 324, I. P. C.; and then he proceeds to dispose of the matter as in a warrant case and acquits the accused. Wherein in this picture does the Sessions Judge and the Additional District Magistrate come by way of revision? How can the order of this Magistrate clutching at jurisdiction, assuming that it is such a case, be corrected?

(6) It is unnecessary to proceed further to discuss this matter elaborately, because really if this interpretation is placed, then S. 437, Cri. P. C. would become a mere dead letter so far as the Sessions Judge and the Additional District Magistrate are concerned because they can only interfere in cases of discharge and only the High Court can interfere in cases of acquittal.

(7) In expressing this opinion which I do so with great diffidence having regard to the fact that the learned advocate is relying upon a Bench decision of the Allahabad High Court, I am fortified by the fact that the Bench decision itself says that its views are opposed to that of the Madras High Court and that it has held the contrary opinion.

(8) I shall now briefly set out the decisions of the Madras High Court in regard to this matter. The earliest decision we have is a Bench decision of this High Court in — 'Gondi Appa Razu v. King Emperor', 43 Mad 330. In this case, it was held that though the complaint alleged facts against the accused constituting an offence under S. 302, I. P. C., the Sub-Magistrate disbelieving the evidence on this point did not frame any charge under S. 302 or S. 304, I. P. C. his action amounted in law to an order of discharge on those counts, even though no express order of discharge was recorded by him, and that being so, it was open to the Sessions Judge under S. 436, Cri. P. C. to act 'suo motu' & set aside the implied discharge & direct the committal of the accused to the Sessions on being satisfied that he had been improperly discharged as the offence under S. 304, I. P. C. is one exclusively triable by the Sessions Court.

This decision relies upon and refers to an earlier decision of this Court — 'Krishnareddi v. Subbamma', 24 Mad 136. Subsequently on the same lines, this Court has been interpreting this matter as it can be seen from the two following decisions, viz., — 'Lakshmayya v. Emperor', 1945 Mad W N Cr. 85. There Happell J. held that in a case where the Sub-Magistrate after hearing the prosecution evidence and the arguments (sic) that no case had been made out against the accused for an offence under S. 307, I. P. C. and framed charges under Ss. 147, 323 and 325 of the I. P. C., it must be deemed to have been decided, in effect, that the accused had been discharged by the Sub-Magistrate in respect of the offence under S. 307, I. P. C. and that the Additional District Magistrate was therefore competent to set aside this order of discharge and direct that the accused be committed to the Sessions.

In — 'King v. Parameswarayya', 1949 Mad W N Cr. 5, it has been held by Govinda Menon J. that when a charge-sheet was filed against the accused for an offence under S. 307, I. P. C. and the Magistrate was of opinion that the offence on the evidence placed before him was one under S. 337 converted the preliminary register case into a calendar case and convicted the accused under S. 337, I. P. C. the action of the Magistrate amounted to a discharge of the accused of an offence under S. 307, I. P. C. and that it was open to the District Magistrate either to order a further inquiry under S. 436, Cri. P. C. or to order commitment to the Court of Session and that S. 403, Cri. P. C. was bar to the trial of the offence under S. 307, I. P. C.

(9) Therefore the point of law taken fails and in regard to the Additional District Magistrate himself, it is an exhaustive one and he has set out elaborately the reasons for coming to the conclusion that a case had been made out to commit the accused to Sessions. It would be improper to discuss the pros and cons of these arguments at this stage, because this is a matter which ought to be gone into in the trial Court itself untrammelled by the observations of the Additional District Magistrate.

(10) Therefore subject to these remarks, I decline to interfere, and dismiss the petition.

(11) The petitioners will continue to remain on bail until the disposal of the Sessions case and on the same terms as before.

A/V.R.B.

Petition dismissed.

A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 28
KRISHNASWAMI NAYUDU J.

Aparanji Chetti, Appellant v. Arunachalam Chettiar and others, Respondents.

Appeal No. 481 of 1948, D/- 29-7-1952.

(a) Land Acquisition Act (1894), Ss. 30, 31 and 32 — Dispute as to right to payment of compensation — Necessity to refer parties to suit — Power of Court to decide dispute.

Where there is any dispute as to the right to the payment of compensation and if the matter is before the Land Acquisition Court, which is the principal Court of civil jurisdiction, there is nothing in either S. 30 or S. 31 which requires the court to refer the parties to a suit even though the compensation money is in the custody of the court. On the contrary, S. 32 enjoins the court by implication to entertain an application for payment out and enquire into the merits of the application and decide as to the respective claims of the parties who will become entitled to the money. (Para 4)

Anno: Land Acquisition Act S. 30 N. 4, S. 31, N. 1, S. 32 N. 1.

(b) Land Acquisition Act (1894) S. 32 — Applicability — Case of Hindu widow.

S. 32 directly applies to a case where there is a limited estate-holder as a Hindu widow, and the amount of compensation is directed to be kept invested until the same was applied in the purchase of such other lands or payment to any person or persons becoming absolutely entitled thereto. (Para 4)

Anno: Land Acquisition Act, S. 32 N. 1.

† (c) Succession Act (1925) S. 214 (1) — Reversioner claiming compensation money — Necessity to produce succession certificate — Land Acquisition Act (1894) S. 32.

It is not necessary for a reversioner who claims that he is entitled to compensation moneys in respect of lands acquired after the death of the last male holder to produce a succession certificate to enable him to receive the amount. 15 C. W. N. 1018 dissent. from. (Para 7)

Anno: Succession Act S. 214 N. 1, Land Acquisition Act S. 32 N. 1.

V. C. Veeraraghavan, for Appellant; N. R. Raghavachariar and Govt. Pleader, for Respondents.

REFERENCES: Courtwar/Chronological/ Paras
(10) 11 Cal LJ 533: (6 Ind Cas 508) 4
(11) 15 Cal WN 1018: (10 Ind Cas 357) 6, 7
(11) 13 Cal LJ 597: (39 Cal 33) 4
(17) 26 Cal LJ 123: (AIR 1918 Cal 868) 4
(29) 33 Cal WN 1177: (AIR 1929 Cal 661 FB) 6, 7

JUDGMENT: This appeal arises out of an application for payment of monies remaining in court-deposit under the Land Acquisition Act (1894). The lands acquired belonged to one Kanniya Chetti and the acquisition was after his demise. Kanniya Chetti had no issue but left a widow, Bangaru Ammal, and during her lifetime, the properties were acquired and the monies deposited into Court under the provisions of S. 31 of the Land Acquisition Act as she was a limited owner. During her lifetime she was paid the interest accruing from the deposit. She died on the 17th February 1945, and one Arunachalam Chettiar, claiming to be the sister's grandson of Kanniya Chetti filed a petition, M. P. No. 307 of 1946 in O. P. No. 236 of 1925 for payment of the monies. The next of kin of Kanniya Chetti were made party respondents to the petition. The petitioner claimed this amount by virtue of being the son of Kanniya Chetti's sister, Ammayi Ammal's son, Veeraraghava Chetti, and relied on a surrender deed executed by Bangaru in favour of Veeraraghava who was then the nearest reversioner to the estate of Kanniya Chetti.

Apart from being the son of Veeraraghava in whose favour the surrender was executed, the petitioner also claimed as entitled to Veeraraghava's rights under a transfer executed by Veeraraghava in favour of the petitioner on the 27th December 1944. This application for payment was opposed by the respondents on the ground that the petitioner was not the nearest reversioner that his father was not the nearest heir and that the alleged surrender deed, if true, was invalid, and if at all it was a mere fraudulent and collusive transaction and was not 'bona fide'. The learned District Judge held in favour of the petitioner and the fourth respondent has now filed this appeal.

(2) The other contentions that were found against which were also raised and argued besides the right of the petitioner to the properties, were that the Land Acquisition Court had no power to decide disputes 'inter se' between the parties as to who is entitled to the compensation money and that it could only in such circumstances refer the disputes to court, and further that a succession certificate was necessary before the amount can be paid.

(3) Evidence was adduced as to the relationship and it is observed by the learned Judge that at the hearing of the petition none of the contentions was strenuously pressed, the contentions obviously relating to that of the petitioner not being the nearest heir and also about another question that was raised, namely, that even Kanniya Chetti was not adopted to Narayana Chetti. It is urged on behalf of the appellant that the lower court has not given any finding as to the validity and binding nature of the surrender in favour of the petitioner's father and the settlement deed in his favour and that this is a case which should be remanded to the lower court for a finding on that issue. Issues were not settled on the pleadings, but there does not appear to have been any request on either side for framing issues.

I have no reason to disregard the statement made by the learned Judge that none of the contentions was strenuously pressed. It is not open, therefore, to the appellant to contend that there is no finding on the question of the surrender and the settlement deed. By virtue of the attitude taken by the respondents, it must be deemed to have been given up as a contention not worthwhile agitating before the lower court. It is further pointed out that the learned Judge has not properly approached the question that arises for determination as by his finding in paragraph 9 of his judgment that the petitioner is the nearest reversioner entitled to the money in court deposit, the learned Judge has not applied his mind to the question of the surrender and the settlement deed.

'Prima facie' the language of the finding of the lower court lends support to the argument, but I consider that in view of the statement of the case given in the earlier part of the judgment, it is not as if the learned Judge was unaware of the real point that arose for decision and in view of the failure on the part of the respondents to pursue the contentions and being quiet except raising them in the counter affidavit, the learned Judge held that the petitioner was the person entitled to the amount, though it is not correct to say that he is the nearest reversioner. He was certainly not the nearest reversioner but for the surrender and settlement deed, he is the nearest heir of the surrenderer Veeraraghava Chetti. What the learned Judge meant was that he was the nearest heir entitled to the amount.

(4) The other question related to the jurisdiction of the court in whose charge the moneys were. It is contended, relying on the provisions of Ss. 30 and 31 of the Land Acquisition Act that in cases where there is any dispute as to the right to the payment of compensation, the Act intended that the court should refer the parties to a suit. This argument is sought to be supported by referring to Ss. 30 and 31 which have no bearing whatsoever on the question at issue. It is provided under S. 30 that with reference to compensation which was settled under S. 11 if any dispute arises as to the apportionment of the same and as to the persons who may be entitled to it, the Collector may refer such dispute to the decision of the court, and under S. 31, on the making of an award under S. 11, the Collector shall tender payment of the compensation awarded by him to the persons interested entitled thereto, and if there be any dispute as to title to receive the compensation, the Collector has to deposit the amount of the compensation in the court to which a reference under S. 18 would be submitted.

Court here is the principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction — in this case, the court of the District Judge. There is nothing either in S. 30 or 31 to support the contention referred to by the learned counsel that even when the matter is before the court, as in the present case, the parties should be referred to a court, and even though the compensation money is in the custody of the court. By virtue of Bangaru Ammal being a limited owner and there being no person then absolutely entitled to receive it under S. 31(2) the duty of the Collector was to deposit the monies and the monies having been deposited the court had to give certain directions for investment of this money and payment of the income therefrom to the limited estate-holder.

What all S. 30 contemplates is that the Collector is not competent to decide these disputes but should refer them to the court and, in my view, the court referred to is the court defined under the Act, which is the principal Court of civil jurisdiction—in this case the District Court of South Arcot. Far from supporting this argument, it appears to me that these sections only lay down that no authority other than a court could deal with matters where disputes arise as to the right to the compensation money, the manner in which it has to be shared and the persons who would be held entitled to claim the amount. The court, therefore, has ample jurisdiction to deal with any application, just as the present one, for payment out.

The monies having come into court, under S. 32 of the Act, the court shall order the money to be invested suitably as per the provisions of S. 32(i) (a) and (b) and direct the payment of interest to the person who would be entitled to it as the need for such investment arises where the person who will be entitled to interest or income had no power to alienate the principal. Section 32 directly applies to the present case where there is a limited estateholder as a Hindu widow, and these amounts were directed to be kept invested until the same were applied in the purchase of such other lands or payment to any person or persons becoming absolutely entitled thereto. The petitioner in this case has come to court as being a person absolutely entitled to the amount and it is therefore for the court to consider whether it could continue to hold the amount in deposit or continue to have it invested under S. 32 (b) (ii).

It, therefore, becomes necessary for the court when such an application is made to find out whether the person who comes to court asking for payment out is a person who is absolutely entitled to the money, and such an application would put upon the court the duty to enquire into the respective claims of the petitioner and any other persons who claim the amount—in this case the respective claims of the petitioner and the respondents—and adjudicate as to who is the person or persons that are absolutely entitled to the same. Far from the Act not contemplating this kind of enquiry in a court, in my view, S. 32 enjoins the court by implication to entertain such an application for payment out and enquire into the merits of the application and decide as to the respective claims of the parties who will become entitled to the money. This view has found support in the decisions in — 'Kamini Debi v. Promothonath Mookherjee', 13 Cal L J 597 at p. 609; — 'Mrinalini Dasi v. Abinash Chander Dutt', 11 Cal L J 533 and — 'Debendranath De v. Tulsimoni Dasi', 26 Cal L J 123 at p. 125. Passages from the judgments of these cases are extracted at p. 399 of Aggarwal's Commentary on Compulsory Acquisition of Land in India and Pakistan, 3rd edition.

"As the fund is placed in the custody of the court, jurisdiction is by implication conferred upon the court to deal with all questions that may arise as to the application of the fund in its custody. When, therefore, there is an application for such payment, the court will have to investigate and satisfy itself that the applicant has become so entitled to the money. 'The Land Acquisition Judge has obviously jurisdiction to make an enquiry when a claim to the fund is put forward by a person who asserts that he has become absolutely entitled thereto, or when it is suggested that suitable land is available for the purchase of which the fund may be applied'. This view is also followed in — 'Debendranath De v. Tulsimoni Dasi', 26 Cal L J 123 at p. 125, where it is observed "As the fund is in the custody of the Special Judge, he is competent to deal with the question of its application. There is no controversy that the Special Judge is competent to apply the fund in purchase of other lands or in payment to a person who has become absolutely entitled thereto. Such authority, however, implies a power to make enquiry."

(5) Therefore the point as to want of jurisdiction in the court cannot stand.

(6) The other contention which appears to be of some importance is whether the amount could be paid without the production of a succession certificate. The answer to this question would depend upon in what cases succession certificate is necessary to enable a person to recover monies due to a deceased person. Section 214 of the Indian Succession Act provides that no court shall pass a decree against a debtor of a deceased person for payment of his debt to a person claiming on succession to be entitled to the effects of the deceased person or to any part thereof except on production, by the person so claiming, of a succession certificate granted under Part X and having the debt specified therein. The word "debt" is defined in clause (2) as including any debt except rent, revenue or profits payable in respect of land used for agricultural purposes.

Whether the compensation money that was paid into court after the death of Kanniya and during the lifetime of his widow Bangaru Ammal is a debt due to the deceased Kanniya within the meaning of S. 214 is what is required to be considered now. Mr. Viraraghavan, learned counsel for the appellant, referred me to a decision in — 'Abinash Chandra v. Probodh Chandra', 15 Cal WN 1018, where Mookerjee and Caspersz JJ. held that right of the reversionary heirs of a deceased Hindu to take out succession certificate in respect of debts due to the estate of the deceased is not affected by the interposition of the estate of the widow and the court cannot reject an application for succession certificate by such heirs merely on the ground of the deceased having died long ago.

In that case there was a sum of money awarded under the Land Acquisition Act after the death of the owner and kept in deposit under S. 32 of the Act along with other amounts. It was found necessary that a succession certificate should be taken for all debts including the sum of money awarded under the Land Acquisition Act. The correctness of the decision was doubted by Suhrawardy and Jack JJ. and the question whether the Land Acquisition Judge was entitled to refuse payment unless a succession certificate was produced by the applicant was referred to a Full Bench. The Full Bench consisting of five Judges in — 'Brojendra Sundar Banerjee v. Niladrinath Mookerjee', 33 Cal W N 1177 did not however decide this question as in their view it did not arise for decision on the facts of that case. In that case succession certificate was granted and the learned Judges restricted their opinion to the question whether the learned Judge had jurisdiction to grant the certificate but did not propose to answer the other question.

If, as has been found the court under S. 32 has a duty to entertain an application for payment of the deposit moneys and for the discharge of that duty it was necessary on the court's part to enquire into the claims of the contending parties, it goes without saying that the court is competent to give a finding as to who are the persons entitled to the money irrespective of the fact whether a succession certificate is necessary or not, and even if one is produced it does not preclude the court from going into the question whether the person in whose favour the succession certificate is issued is the only person that is entitled to the moneys. The production of succession certificate, therefore, is not conclusive as to the right of the parties claiming the amount who might not have been parties to the proceedings where the succession certificate had been obtained. It is, therefore, unnecessary for the court to consider whether the person in whose favour the court might ultimately decide should in any event produce a succession certificate.

(7) It may however be examined whether a succession certificate is necessary for a claim of the nature as in the present case. The compensation money is in respect of an acquisition made by Government after the lifetime of the owner of the land, Kanniya Chetti, and during the lifetime of his widow, the limited owner. The petitioner who claims through a reversioner would be entitled to it as he would be entitled to the other properties of Kanniya Chetti after the lifetime of Bangaru. If he could inherit the other properties of Kanniya without the necessity of the production of any succession certificate, is it any reason that he should be asked to produce a succession certificate only in respect of this money since it happened to be converted into money, not during the lifetime of Kanniya but after his lifetime, and kept in court deposit by reason of a person who is the next heir having had only a limited interest.

It is not justifiable to insist on the reversioners to produce succession certificates in respect of amounts which have come into the hands of the limited owner after the lifetime of the last maleholder. Further, from a reading of S. 214 of the Succession Act, a succession certificate is necessary only in respect of the debt due to a deceased person. It cannot be said that this debt was due and owing to Kanniya Chetti whose properties only the petitioner is claiming, not the properties of Bangaru. It is obviously a case where it could not be said to be the recovery of a debt to the deceased person, Kanniya. That is sufficient to dispose of the contention that S. 214 would not be applicable to this case.

I am therefore unable to agree with the conclusions arrived at by the learned Judges in — 'Abinash Chandra v. Probodh Chandra', 15 Cal W N 1018, the correctness of which has been doubted and also to a great extent shaken by the judgment of Rankin C. J. in the Full Bench decision in — 'Brojendra Sunder Banerjee v. Niladrinath Mookerji', 33 Cal W N 1177. I am therefore of the view that it is not necessary for a reversioner who claims he is entitled to compensation moneys in respect of lands acquired after the death of the last male holder to produce a succession certificate to entitle him to receive the amount.

(8) The appeal is dismissed. The appellant will pay the costs of the Government. Advocate's fee Rs. 50. No order for costs in favour of the other respondents.

A/V.R.B.

Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 30
SUBBA RAO J.

Jaya Bharat Tile Works, Samalkot, Madras State, represented by its Partner and Manager Madanpati Satti Reddi, Petitioner v. The State of Madras, represented by the Secretary, Development Department, Government of Madras and others, Respondents.

Writ Petn. No. 630 of 1951, D/- 7-8-1952.

Industrial Disputes — Illegal lock-out or unfair labour practice — Jurisdiction of Tribunal to determine — Decision that closure of industry amounted to unfair labour practice — Writ of certiorari cannot be issued — (Constitution of India, Art. 226).

Whenever, a question arises whether a closure is in fact illegal lockout or a subterfuge adopted by employers to bring the employees to their knees the Industrial Tribunal has to decide that question. For, if it is a lockout or an illegal labour practice the Tribunal certainly will have jurisdiction to go into the question. (Para 3)

Where the Industrial Tribunal on the particular facts of a case holds that the closure of an industry is not bona fide and amounted to an unfair labour practice and the decision is affirmed by the Appellate Tribunal, the High Court would not issue a writ of certiorari to quash the order when there is no error apparent on the face of the record. (Para 4)

D. Narasaraju and K. B. Krishnamurthi, for Petitioner; Vepa P. Sarathi for Govt. Pleader and P. Venkataraman, for Respondents.

REFERENCES: Courtwar/Chronological/ Paras
(49) C S No 448 of 1949 (Mad) 3

(52) 1952-1 Mad LJ 481: (65 Mad LW 269) 3

ORDER:— This is an application for issuing a writ of certiorari to quash the order of the Labour Appellate Tribunal of India made in App. No. 176 of 1951.

(2) The petitioner is the Jaya Bharat Tile Works, Samalkot. It is a partnership business of which Madapati Satti Reddi is a partner. The business was started in the year 1949. On 6th December 1948, the Government of Madras referred the disputes between the workers and the management of four other factories to the Industrial Tribunal. The Tribunal gave its award on 13th August 1949 and it was accepted by the Government. The award was to be in force for one year. The term expired on 23rd Aug. 1950. On 24th Aug. 1950, that is the next year after the expiry of the period of one year from the date of the award the petitioner closed the business. The other four factories also closed their business on 25th September 1950. The petitioner reopened the factory on 13th December 1950. The Government in their order dated 27th October 1950 referred the dispute between the petitioner and other tile factories and their workers to the Industrial Tribunal, Vijayawada. It may be mentioned that the other four factories did not reopen their factories. The Industrial Tribunal by its award dated 31st March 1951 held that the closure of the tile factory was not bona fide and amounted to unfair labour practice. It gave the findings on the following terms:

"I hold that the closure of the five mills was not bona fide, and that it was with a view to victimise the labour and find the issue against the Mills."

The petitioner along with the others preferred appeals to the Labour Appellate Tribunal of India being App. No. 176 of 1951. The Labour Appellate Tribunal set aside the order of the Industrial Tribunal so far as the other four factories are concerned but in regard to the petitioner's factory they confirmed the order of the Industrial Tribunal. The Appellate Tribunal found,

"They closed on the 24th August 1950 and reopened on the 13th December 1950. We are doubtful if the closure from 24th August which was effected in order to avoid the payment of wages at a higher rate was a closure at all, when subsequently under the same circumstances the Mill has been reopened. We are of opinion that it amounted to an unfair labour practice and effected in order to bring pressure to bear on the worker to accept lower rates."

They further directed that the labourers should be reinstated and they would be paid compensation during the period of closure at the rates indicated therein until the mills reopened in respect of workmen who came back within 15 days of the award.

(3) Mr. Narasaraju, the learned counsel for the petitioner, contended that the Industrial Tribunal had no jurisdiction to decide the disputes in respect of closure of the factory. In support of that contention he strongly relied upon a judgment of a Division Bench of this court in the —'Indian Metal & Metallurgical Corporation v. Industrial Tribunal', Madras, 1952 Mad. L. J. 481. There the petitioner was a firm carrying on business of manufacture of brass, copper and aluminium sheets at Mettur. It had also a factory at Tondiarpet, Madras, where brass and stainless steel utensils were manufactured. On 3rd February 1951 the management issued a notice to the employees to the effect that they would suspend the work for an indefinite period till they are able to complete the erection and try to get the sheets from their own plant. The work was suspended from Saturday, the 17th inst. The dispute was referred by the Government to the Industrial Tribunal. One of the questions raised was whether the closure of the factory from 17th February was justified. The learned Judges after considering the provisions of the Act and the case law on the subject came to the following conclusion:

"We hold therefore that the award in so far as it directs the petitioner to continue to carry on the business is void as it is inconsistent with the Constitution."

They proceeded to observe:

"There cannot be dispute strictly so called between an employer and an employee, as regards the continuance of the business itself. This question was completely outside the Industrial Disputes Act, and we hold that the reference by the Government was without jurisdiction and consequently the award was bad."

The learned Judges in that case were not called upon to consider or decide the question namely that if a closure was in fact an illegal lock out or unfair labour practice whether the Tribunal had jurisdiction to consider that question. That question was specifically raised and considered by Balakrishna Aiyar J. in C. S. No. 448 of 1949 (Mad) though on the facts the learned Judge held that in that case there was not a lock out. The pertinent observations of the learned Judge are rather instructive and may usefully be extracted. The learned Judge says:

"The lock out is the corresponding weapon in the armoury of the employer. If an employer shuts down his place of business as a means of reprisal or as an instrument of coercion or as a mode of exercising pressure on the employees or generally speaking when his act is what may be called an act of belligerency than would be a lock-out. If on the other hand, he shuts down his work because he cannot for instance get the new materials or the fuel or the power necessary to carry out his undertaking or because he is unable to sell the goods he has made or because his credit is exhausted or because he is losing money, that would not be a lock out ..... A factory or an industry can be "sick" though not of course in the same manner as a labourer, if it is unable to pave its way ..... Where an employer suspends work and the question is whether that suspension is a lockout or not, we will have to enquire, why did he shut down."

I respectfully agree with the observations. Whenever, therefore, a question arises whether a closure is in fact illegal lock-out or a subterfuge adopted by employers to bring the employees to their knees, the Industrial Tribunal has to decide that question. For, if it is a lock-out or an illegal labour practice the Tribunal certainly will have jurisdiction to go into the question.

(4) The Labour Tribunal and the Appellate Tribunal in the appeal in the instant case held that the closure was not bona fide & that amounted to an unfair labour practice. If the matter had come up before me as an appeal whether I would have agreed with that conclusion I do not know. But the Tribunals, entrusted with the jurisdiction, came to the conclusion that the petitioner was guilty of illegal and unfair labour practice and closure was not bona fide. Nor can I say that the judgment is vitiated by an error apparent on the face of the record.

(5) The petition therefore fails and is dismissed with costs.

A./K. S.

Petition dismissed.

*A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 32

RAJAMANNAR, C. J. AND
VENKATARAMA AIYAR J.

Ammenumma, Appellant v. Chelampiriyarath Beeviamma and others, Respondents.

Appeal No. 491 of 1948 D/-18-1-1952.

†*Civil P. C. (1908) S. 11 — Decree for sale to enforce charge passed in prior suit — Second suit for sale to enforce charge — Bar of — (Transfer of Property Act (1882) Ss. 67 and 100)

A mortgagee has a right under S. 67 of the T. P. Act to file a suit for sale subject only to the conditions prescribed therein and of course subject to the law of limitation and such a suit is not barred under S. 11 C. P. C. by reason of a decree for sale passed on the same mortgage in a prior suit, and under S. 100 of the T. P. Act the same principle applies to a second suit for sale to enforce a charge. Case law discussed. (Para 22)

Anno: C. P. C., S. 11 N. 40; T. P. Act, S. 67 N. 9, S. 100 N. 25.

K. Kuttikrishna Menon and T. C. Raghavan, for Appellant, N. Sivaramakrishna Aiyar Amicus Curiae for Respondents.

REFERENCES: Courtwar/Chronological/ Paras

('96) 19 Mad 249: (23 Ind App 32 PC) 9

('34) 56 All 561: (AIR 1934 PC 205) 4, 6, 9, 12, 20, 21

('50) 1950-1 Mad LJ 752: (AIR 1950 FC 1) 4, 9, 12

('89) 13 Bom 567 17

('20) 44 Bom 939: (AIR 1920 Bom 29) 9

('28) 52 Bom 111: (AIR 1928 Bom 67) 9

('48) AIR 1948 Bom 226: (ILR (1948) Bom 139 (FB) ) 9

('83) 6 Mad 119 5

('84) 7 Mad 423 5

('85) 8 Mad 478 5

('92) 15 Mad 366

('02) 25 Mad 300: (12 Mad LJ 128 FB) 5

5, 15, 16, 17, 18

('08) 31 Mad 354: (18 Mad LJ 259) 17

('16) 39 Mad 896: (AIR 1916 Mad 887 (3)) 17, 18

('26) 49 Mad 691: (AIR 1926 Mad 816) 18

('45) ILR (1945) Mad 803: (AIR 1945 Mad 225) 9

('46) ILR (1946) Kar 110: AIR 1947 Sind 12 21

VENKATARAMA AIYAR J.: This is an appeal by the plaintiff against the judgment and decree of the Subordinate Judge of Palghat dismissing O. S. No. 49 of 1945 which was an action by her to enforce a charge. The facts are not in dispute. One Bava Kutti died leaving behind a son Koyathan and two daughters, Bee Pathumma and Sayeed Mal Umma. After the death of Koyathan on 18-10-1929 his sister Bee Pathumma filed O. S. No. 36 of 1930 on the file of the Sub Court, Ottapalam for partition of her share in the estate. This suit was transferred to the Sub Court, Palghat and was there numbered as O. S. No. 75 of 1932. The appellant Ammenumma is one of the daughters of Koyathan and was the 3rd defendant in that suit. On 23-8-1933 all the parties entered into a 'razinama', Ex. P. 1, and a compromise decree was passed in terms thereof on 4-9-1933, Ex. P. 6.

This decree provides that Bee Pathumma was to take over the share of Ammenumma & pay her in lieu thereof a sum of Rs. 7333-5-4 within one month and the payment of this amount was charged on the suit properties. The amount not having been paid, Ammenumma filed O. S. No. 45 of 1938 on the file of the Sub Court, Palghat for the recovery of a sum of Rs. 10100 as due to her for principal and interest under the decree by enforcement of the charge. The suit was decreed after contest and a preliminary decree was passed on 12-12-1939, Ex. P. 2(a). Under this decree the amount due to the plaintiff as on 12-12-1939 was declared to be Rs. 11804-4-0. Clause 2 provided that the 1st defendant Bee Pathumma was to pay this amount with subsequent interest into Court on or before 12-2-1940 and clause 3 directed that in default of payment the plaintiff was to apply for a final decree for sale of the property.

Clause 4 provided that the sale proceeds should be applied in payment of expenses, cost and amounts due to the plaintiff; the balance if any, being payable to the 1st defendant. The other clauses are not material for the purpose of this case. It may be mentioned that the decree does not contain the usual clause for redemption that on payment of the mortgage amount the mortgagee shall deliver the title deeds and if necessary retransfer the property to the mortgagor and put him in possession of the same. No amount was paid by the 1st defendant and the plaintiff filed I. A. No. 100 of 1941 for the passing of a final decree. That application was dismissed as fresh notice to the defendants was not taken.

I. A. No. 843 of 1943 was filed for reviewing the order in I. A. No. 100 of 1941. That was also dismissed on 25-8-1945; vide Ex. P. 5. It is after this that the plaintiff has instituted the present suit on 3-10-1945 for recovery of the balance amount due under the 'razinama' decree in O. S. No. 75 of 1932, by enforcing the charge created under that decree by sale of the suit property. The plaintiff has given credit for a sum of Rs. 2516-6-0 received by her under the decree, Ex. P. 2(a) and also for certain other amounts and the balance claimed as due on the date of the suit is Rs. 10733-2-8. Giving up Rs. 233-2-8 out of this, the claim is made for Rs. 10500 with subsequent interest and costs.

(2) The 1st defendant Bee Pathumma contested the suit on the ground that it was barred by the rule of 'res judicata' by reason of the proceedings in O. S. No. 45 of 1938 and that it was barred by limitation. Sayeed Mal Umma, the sister of the 1st defendant having died prior to the suit, defendants 4 to 7 were impleaded as her legal representatives. They contended that items 36 to 46 in the plaint schedule were allotted to Sayeed Mal Umma free of charge and that the plaintiff had no right to proceed against them. They also put forward various other claims. The 1st defendant having died pending the suit, defendants 8 to 13 were brought on record as her legal representatives. The suit was heard by the Subordinate Judge of Palghat who held that the present suit was barred by reason of the decree in O. S. No. 45 of 1938 which was for enforcement of the same charge and between the same parties, that the only right of the plaintiff was to pursue her remedies under that decree and that a second suit was not maintainable under S. 11 C. P. C.

He also held that as the amount was payable under the compromise decree, Ex. P. 6, on 4-10-1933, the suit which was instituted on 3-10-1945 was within time and that there was no bar of limitation. With reference to the pleas put forward by defendants 4 to 7 he held that items 36 to 46 were not liable for the suit claim and that the defendants were not entitled to any other relief. In the result in view of his finding that the suit was barred by the rule of res judicata, he dismissed it with costs. It is against this decree that the plaintiff has preferred this appeal.

(3) On behalf of the appellant it was argued by Mr. K. Kuttikrishna Menon that as the law is now well settled that a second suit for redemption by a mortgagor is maintainable subject only to the conditions mentioned in S. 60 of the Transfer of Property Act, it should likewise be held that a second suit for sale by a mortgagee is maintainable subject only to the conditions mentioned in S. 67 of the Transfer of Property Act and that as there has been neither a decree for redemption nor any payment or deposit of the mortgage amount as provided in that section, the mortgagee has a right to bring the present action for sale. No authority directly dealing with this question has been cited to us, and as the respondents were not represented by counsel, in view of the importance of the question, we requested Mr. N. Sivaramakrishna Iyer a senior advocate of this court to assist as 'amicus curiae' and we are indebted to him for his learned arguments.

(4) The starting point for the argument on behalf of the appellant is the rule now well established that successive suits for redemption are maintainable so long as there is no decree of Court foreclosing that right and that the bar of 'res judicata' is inapplicable to such suits. Vide — 'Raghunath Singh v. Mt. Hansraj Kunwar', 56 All 561 (PC) and — 'Subba Rao v. Matapalli Raju', 1950-1 Mad L J 752 (FC). Before discussing how far these decisions could be used as authority for the maintainability of successive suits for sale by a mortgagee, it is necessary to examine the principles underlying those decisions. It will be convenient to set out the relevant statutory provisions relating to the right of redemption and then refer to the authorities bearing on them.

Section 60 of the Transfer of Property Act in so far as it is material for the present purpose provides that at any time after the principal money has become due, the mortgagor has a right on payment or tender of the mortgage amount to redeem the mortgage; "provided that the right conferred by this section has not been extinguished by the act of the parties or decree of a Court." Section 92 of the Transfer of Property Act dealing with this right enacted that in a suit for redemption a decree be passed for taking of accounts or declaring the amounts due as on the date of the decree, that on the plaintiff paying the amount on or before a date to be fixed he should have redemption and that if no such payment was made he should be debarred from redeeming the property when the mortgage was by conditional sale or usufructuary mortgage or the property be sold, when it was a simple mortgage.

Section 93 provided for the defendant applying for an order for foreclosure or sale as the case might be in case the mortgagor did not pay the amount and it was further enacted that the Court should in the former case pass an order that the plaintiff shall be foreclosed of his right to redeem the property and in the latter case pass an order for sale and that on the passing of such an order the plaintiff's right to redeem and the security should both be extinguished.

(5) On these provisions the question frequently arose for decision whether a second suit for redemption would lie when a previous suit for the same relief had been decreed but the decree was allowed to become barred by limitation. There was considerable authority in this Court for holding that a second suit was maintainable so long as the relationship of mortgagor and mortgagee subsisted. Vide — 'Sami Achari v. Somasundaram', 6 Mad 119, — 'Periandi v. Angappa', 7 Mad 423, — 'Karuthasami v. Jaganatha', 8 Mad 478 and — 'Ramunni v. Brahma Dattan', 15 Mad 366. The question came up for consideration before a Full Bench of this Court in — 'Vedapuratti v. Vallabha Valiyaraja', 25 Mad 300. It will be useful to examine the reasoning on which the decision in this case rests. Sir Arnold White C. J. stated the point for consideration in the following terms:

"The answer to the question appears to me to depend not upon whether or not at the time of the bringing of the second suit the relation of mortgagor and mortgagee subsists between the parties but upon whether the mortgagor is precluded, by the operation of the doctrine of 'res judicata' by reason of the adjudication which he has already obtained, from bringing a second suit."

After holding that the right to redeem had not been extinguished by the prior suit, the learned Chief Justice goes to observe that:

"Though the right subsists, the remedy is barred by operation of the rule of law which is embodied in S. 13 (corresponding to S. 11 of the present Code) of the Civil Procedure Code..... and that it is immaterial whether or not the decree in the first suit directs that if the mortgagor does not pay as ordered by the Court the equity of redemption should be foreclosed or the property should be sold."

Bhashyam Aiyangar J. dealing with the argument that a suit for redemption was maintainable so long as the relationship of mortgagor and mortgagee subsisted, observed as follows:

"With all deference to the learned Judge I find it impossible to adopt the reasoning on which the decisions of this Court in — 'Sami Achari v. Somasundaram', 6 Mad 119, — 'Periandi v. Angappa', 7 Mad 423, — 'Karuthasami v. Jaganatha', 8 Mad 478 and — 'Ramunni v. Brahmaddattan', 15 Mad 366 proceed and the conclusions arrived at therein. If those decisions are sound, there can be no limit to the number of successive suits for redemption of the same mortgage and the fundamental principle on which the doctrine of 'res judicata' is founded will have to be wholly ignored. If the principle of these decisions be — as it must — that so long as the relation of mortgagor and mortgagee is not extinguished by act of parties or by order of Court under Ss. 87, 89 or 93 of the Transfer of Property Act or by S. 28 of the Limitation Act, the right of redemption is inseparable from such relation and that, therefore, there can be no impediment to the mortgagor's bringing a suit for redemption although he had already obtained a decree for redemption, it will necessarily follow that he can institute in succession as many suits as he chooses for foreclosure or sale; for the right of redemption and the mortgage security are not extinguished until the passing of an order for foreclosure absolute or for sale," and again,

"In considering whether the plea of 'res judicata' operates as a bar to the suit, the question is not whether the alleged relation of mortgagor and mortgagee or any other legal relation between the parties to the suit subsists, but whether assuming the same to subsist, the plaintiff is not precluded from seeking to enforce his right by reason of his having already sued upon the same cause of action and obtained an adjudication which it was competent for him to enforce and execute."

Dealing with the language of S. 60 of the Transfer of Property Act the learned Judge held that by virtue of Sec. 2 (a) of the Transfer of Property Act the provisions of other enactments remained unaffected and that therefore the rights conferred by S. 60 were controlled by the rule of 'res judicata' enacted in the Civil Procedure Code: Vide page 319, and he referred to the well-established principle that a remedy might be barred even though the right might not be extinguished and expressed the view that for the same reason a second suit for redemption might be barred if a prior suit had been dismissed under S. 102 now Order IX, Rule 8 C. P. C. or withdrawn without leave of the Court under S. 373 now Order XXIII, R. 1 C. P. C. The other learned Judges concurred in this view. The ratio of this decision is that though the relationship of mortgagor and mortgagee might subsist by reason of the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act the rights conferred by that Act are subject to other provisions of law and that, therefore, the right to redeem conferred by S. 60 of the Act is controlled by such provisions as S. 11, Order IX, Rule 9 and Order XXIII rule 1 C. P. C.

(6) Then we come to the decision of the Privy Council in — 'Raghunath Singh v. Hansraj Kunwar', 56 All 561 (PC). In that case a decree for redemption had been made in 1896 declaring the amount payable by the mortgagor as on 15-11-1896, providing for redemption on payment of the amount and further providing that "in case of default his case will stand dismissed." The amount was not paid. On 5-3-1924 a second suit for redemption was filed by the legal representatives of the mortgagor and the plea put forward was that it was not maintainable. The Courts in India overruled this plea and granted a decree for redemption. The mortgagee appealed to the Privy Council and on his behalf three contentions were put forward: (1) that the remedy of the mortgagor was in execution of the decree of 1896; (2) that the second action was barred under S. 11, C. P. C.; and (3) that in substance the decree in the prior suit was one of foreclosure. Dealing with the second contention that the action was barred by the doctrine of 'res judicata' the Privy Council observed as follows:

"In regard to the second point their Lordships are of opinion that no relevant question of 'res judicata' here arises. The issues decided in the former suit were (1) whether the mortgagors were then entitled to redeem; (2) the amount then to be paid if redemption then took place. The issues in the present suit are (1) whether the right to redeem now exists, and (2) the amount now to be paid if redemption now takes place."

and

"It is sufficient to say in regard to the second point, that if the appellants fail to establish under their third point that the old decree extinguished the right to redeem, there is in their Lordships' opinion no ground for saying that the old decree operated by way of 'res judicata' so as to prevent the Courts, under S. 11 C. P. C. from trying the present suit."

Dealing with the third point the Judicial Committee examined Sections 60, 92 and 93 of the Transfer of Property Act and held that the decree passed in 1896 was not one which foreclosed the right of redemption and in the result the second suit for redemption was held maintainable.

(7) According to the decision of the Judicial Committee, therefore, S. 60 of the Transfer of Property Act is the paramount provision; under that section the question is whether the right to redeem has been extinguished by act of parties or decree of Court and where there has been no such extinguishment, an action for redemption will be available to the mortgagor notwithstanding that there was a prior action.

(8) Dealing particularly with the question of 'res judicata' the Privy Council observed that the issues involved in the two suits were different because the right of redemption and the amount to be paid for redemption would be different at the two dates. That is to say the cause of action is not the same and the principle of 'res judicata' would be inapplicable.

(9) We may now consider the decision of this Court reported in — 'Mattapalli Raju v. Venkata Raghavayya', ILR (1945) Mad 803. The facts of that case were that the mortgagor executed a simple mortgage on 2-1-1914 and a usufructuary mortgage on 27-11-1915. The mortgagor filed a suit for redemption, O.S. No. 53 of 1929, but withdrew it without obtaining the permission of the Court for instituting a fresh suit. The question arose whether he was precluded by the terms of Order XXIII Rule 1 C. P. C. from filing a fresh suit for redemption. Dealing with the contention that the suit was maintainable under S. 60 of the Transfer of Property Act notwithstanding the bar under Order XXIII, Rule 1 C. P. C. the Court observed as follows:

"It is however urged for the mortgagor that redemption actions stand on a special footing as mortgagors have a statutory right to redeem under S. 60 of the Transfer of Property Act at any time after the mortgage money has become due and they can be deprived of such right only in the manner contemplated in that section, and that, therefore, Or. XXIII rule 1 cannot bar the exercise of such right until it is extinguished 'by act of the parties or by a decree of a Court'. Reliance is placed in support of this argument on the decisions of the Judicial Committee in — 'Raghunath Singh v. Hansraj Kunwar', 56 All 561 (PC) and — 'Papamma Rao v. Virapratapa H. V. Ramachandra Raju', 19 Mad 249 (PC). It is true that S. 60 confers upon a mortgagor a right to redeem on certain conditions 'provided that the right conferred by this section has not been extinguished by act of the parties or by decree of a Court'. But this enactment cannot have the effect of overriding other statutory provisions which may limit or bar the exercise of such right in certain circumstances. Order XXIII rule 1 contains no saving provision in favour of suits for redemption and there is nothing in S. 60 of the Transfer of Property Act to qualify the operation of that rule in such suits."

In the result it was held that the second suit was not maintainable. In — 'Rajaram v. Ramchandra', AIR 1948 Bom 226: ILR (1948) Bom 189 (FB) the facts were that while a suit for redemption was pending the plaintiff died; no legal representatives were brought on record and the suit was dismissed under Order XXII, rule 9 C. P. C. as having abated. The question arose whether a later suit for redemption by the legal representatives was barred under that provision. In holding that it was not, Chagla J. delivering the judgment of the Full Bench observed:

"Now the Civil Procedure Code deals with procedure relating to all suits. There is a special law, which deals with rights of mortgagors and mortgagees, and that law is to be found in the Transfer of Property Act."

After setting out the provisions of S. 60 of the Transfer of Property Act, the learned Judge went on to observe:

"Therefore in our opinion, the general provisions of the Civil Procedure Code as contained in Order XXII, Rule 9 are to that extent overridden by the specific provisions of S. 60 of the Transfer of Property Act. So long as the relationship of mortgagor and mortgagee continues, and so long as the right to redeem has not been extinguished by a decree of the Court, or by the act of the parties, the mortgagor is entitled to go to a Court of law to enforce his right. Of course, the position with regard to limitation is different, because the Limitation Act expressly provides that the period of limitation for redemption suits is sixty years."

Reference was then made to — 'Sridhar Sadba v. Ganu Mahadu', 52 Bom 111, where it was held that the dismissal of a redemption suit for default did not bar the second suit for redemption under Order IX, Rule 9; and to — 'Ramchandra Kolaji v. Hanmanta Laxman', 44 Bom 939 where the withdrawal of a redemption suit without permission was held not to bar the second suit for redemption under Order XXIII, Rule 1. It was held that the causes of action for the two suits were different. The decision in — 'Mattapalli Raju v. Venkata Raghavayya', ILR (1945) Mad 803 was taken in appeal and the same was heard by the Federal Court. Vide — 'Subbarao v. Mattapalli Raju', 1950-1 Mad L J 752 (FC). Kania C. J. delivering the judgment of the Court referred to the divergent views held by this Court and the Bombay High Court and observed:

"In our opinion the view of the Madras High Court is incorrect. We prefer the view taken by the Bombay High Court on this point. The right of redemption is an incident of a subsisting mortgage and it subsists so long as the mortgage itself subsists. As held by the Privy Council in — 'Raghunath Singh v. Hansraj Kunwar', 56 All 561 (PC) the right of redemption can be extinguished as provided in S. 60 of the Transfer of Property Act and when it is alleged to have been extinguished by a decree, the decree should run strictly in accordance with the form prescribed for the purpose. Unless the equity of redemption is so extinguished, a second suit for redemption by the mortgagor, if filed within the period of limitation, is not therefore barred. The Board expressly held that if the appellants failed to establish that the old decree extinguished the right to redeem, there was no ground for saying that the old decree operated as 'res judicata' and the Courts were prevented from trying the second suit under S. 11 C. P. C. They, therefore, held that the right to redeem was not extinguished by the procedural provisions contained in the Civil Procedure Code."

Dealing with the objection based on Or. XXIII, rule 1 C. P. C. the Court referred to the observations in — 'Raghunath Singh v. Hansraj Kunwar', 56 All 561 (P.C.) that the causes of action in the two suits were different and observed as follows:

"The Board held in that case that the trial of these issues was not barred under Section 11 C. P. C. It follows therefore that if the right of redemption is not extinguished, provisions like Order IX rule 9, Order XXIII rule 1 will not debar the mortgagor from filing a second suit, because, as in a partition suit, the cause of action in a redemption suit is a recurring one. The cause of action in each successive action, until the right of redemption is extinguished or a suit for redemption is time barred, is a different one."

(10) In this view it was held that the second suit was maintainable.

(11) The result of the above authorities may thus be summed up: (1) The provisions of the Transfer of Property Act relating to mortgages form a special law and the rights and liabilities of mortgagors and mortgagees have to be worked out in accordance with those provisions; (2) the right to redeem is an incident of the relationship of mortgagor and mortgagee. It subsists so long as the relationship subsists and it is enforceable under S. 60 of the Transfer of Property Act so long as it subsists; (3) a second suit for redemption which is not barred by S. 60 of the Transfer of Property Act will not be barred under S. 11 C. P. C., because the special provisions of S. 60 of the Transfer of Property Act will override the general provisions of the C. P. C.; Generalia specialibus non derogant; and because the cause of action for the later suit is not the same as in the earlier suit inasmuch as the right to redeem is a continuing and recurring right. For the same reasons a second suit for redemption will not be barred by the provisions of Order IX rule 9, O. XXII, rule 9 and Order XXIII, rule 1 C. P. C.

(12) Applying these principles to a second suit for sale by a mortgagee, it has first to be seen whether such a suit could be maintained under the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act. The right to obtain a decree for sale of the mortgaged property is conferred by S. 67 of the Transfer of Property Act. That section, so far as it is material for the present purpose, runs as follows:

"The mortgagee has at any time after the mortgage money has become due to him and before a decree has been made for the redemption of the mortgaged property, or the mortgage money has been paid or deposited, a right to obtain from the Court a decree that the mortgagor shall be absolutely debarred of his right to redeem the property, or a decree that the property be sold."

The section deals with suits both for foreclosure and for sale and the provisions contained therein must be read distributively in relation to the two subjects. So read, the section enacts that (1) a suit for foreclosure can be filed after the mortgage amount has become due and before a decree for redemption has been made and (2) a suit for sale can be filed after the amount has become due and before it has been paid or deposited in the manner provided. It has been suggested that there is nothing in S. 67 corresponding to the proviso in S. 60 on which the decisions in — Raghunath Singh v. Hansraj Kunwar, 56 All 561 (PC) and — Subba Rao v. Mattapali Raju, 1950-1 Mad L J 752 (FC) were based and that, therefore, the considerations applicable to a second suit for redemption would not be applicable to a second suit for sale.

But what is enacted in the form of a proviso to S. 60 is enacted as part of the section itself in S. 67 and in substance the position is not different. Even the differences in the form in the draftsmanship of the two sections might be due to the fact that while S. 60 deals only with the right to redeem, S. 67 deals with both the right to foreclosure and the right to sale and the language had to be adopted to cover both the rights. Thus on the language of S. 67 this action is clearly maintainable as the mortgage money had not been paid. As already mentioned there is not even the usual clause for redemption in the decree, Ex. P. 2 (a).

(13) We may now turn to the provisions of Order XXXIV, C. P. C. and see what light they throw on the point now under consideration. Rules 2 and 3 deal with suits for foreclosure; rules 4 and 5 with suits for sale and rules 7 and 8 with suits for redemption. Rule 2 enacts that the preliminary decree in a suit for foreclosure shall order an account of the amount due or declare it as on the date of the decree; direct that on payment of such amount by defendants there shall be redemption; that in default of such payment the mortgagee shall be entitled to apply for foreclosure. The Court has the power to extend the time for payment. Rule 3 provides for a final decree being passed in terms of rule 2. Dealing with suits for sale rule 4 enacts that a preliminary decree has to be passed in the same terms as the decree in rule 2; that is to say the amount payable should be ascertained as on the date of the decree; time for payment should be fixed and provision should be made for redemption on payment within time.

The only difference in the form of the decree is that in case of default in payment by the mortgagor, the mortgagee is to apply for a decree for sale and not for foreclosure. The preliminary decree in a suit for redemption under rule 7 is to contain the same directions as a preliminary decree for foreclosure suit under rule 2 and is to provide for the taking of accounts, declare the amount payable fixing a date for payment and provide for redemption on payment. In default of payment by the plaintiff, the defendant, mortgagee, is entitled to apply for a final decree for sale or for foreclosure according to the character of the mortgage which is the subject-matter of the suit. Rule 8 provides for the passing of an appropriate final decree.

(14) It will thus be seen that whatsoever be the nature of the suits the preliminary decrees to be passed therein are in substance the same; the amount due to the mortgagee is to be ascertained, a time is to be fixed for payment of the amount, with a power in the court to extend the same and redemption is to be decreed on payment by the mortgagor. Thus all the three decrees run on the same lines. It is only in the case of default in payment that there is a difference in the form of the final decree to be passed; it will be a foreclosure decree in some cases and a decree for sale in others. This difference in the character of the final decree arises out of the difference in the nature of the mortgages and has no relation to the difference in the nature of suits filed thereon, whether it is for foreclosure, for sale or for redemption.

(15) From the foregoing review of the statutory provisions it will be abundantly clear that whatever the nature of the suit that is filed on a mortgage, the rights and liabilities of the mortgagor and the mortgagee are the same. On principle it cannot be otherwise. In law the right to redeem and the right to foreclose are co-extensive; and the right to sell is, under the Indian law, a substitute for the right to foreclose, in the case of certain mortgages. In view of the fact that a mortgage transaction creates one jural relationship involving reciprocal rights and obligations between mortgagor and mortgagee, it will be illogical to hold that principles applicable to one of them are not applicable to the other.

Differentiation in the mutual rights and obligations of the mortgagor and mortgagee must inevitably result in anomalies in the administration of the law of mortgages. By way of illustration we can take the case of a usufructuary mortgage with a personal covenant. The mortgagee files a suit for sale on the basis of the covenant to pay; the suit is decreed but the execution of the decree becomes time barred. The law as now settled is that this decree does not preclude the mortgagor from filing a suit for redemption. In that suit it is open to the defendant mortgagee, to apply for a decree for sale under Or. XXXIV rules 7 and 8. How is this to be reconciled with the view that a suit for sale by him is barred under S. 11 C. P. C.?

If the decree in the prior suit operates to extinguish the right of the mortgagee to sell the hypotheca which right thereafter becomes merged in the decree and could be exercised only thereunder, on what principle can a fresh decree for sale be passed in his favour in the mortgagor's suit for redemption? The theory that the original cause of action is gone — 'transit in rem judicatum' — which is the foundation of the doctrine of 'res judicata' will be a bar to the grant of that relief in the mortgagor's action as well. It will be contrary to the provisions of the statute to hold in such a case that the mortgagor can get a decree for redemption under rules 7 and 8 but that no decree for sale could be passed in favour of the mortgagee under those provisions.

(16) The view that, on principle, suits for sale stand on the same footing as suits for redemption derives considerable support from the judgment of Bhashyam Aiyangar J. in — 'Vedapuratti v. Vallabha Valia Raja', 25 Mad. 300. He no doubt held that a second suit for redemption was barred, a view which has now been rejected but in discussing the legal position he examined both Ss. 60 and 67 of the Transfer of Property Act and proceeds on the view that the rights under both the sections are correlative. Vide pages 310 and 320. He also examines the provisions of the Act relating to the form of decree to be passed in suits for redemption, sale and foreclosure and observes.

"that whether the decree be in a suit for foreclosure or in a suit for sale or in a suit for redemption there is in each a conditional decree for redemption in favour of the mortgagor, the condition being the payment by the mortgagor of the amount decreed on or before the day fixed."

(17) Dealing particularly with the plea of 'res judicata' the learned Judge referred to the decision in — 'Maloji v. Sagaji', 13 Bom 567 where a prior suit for redemption by a mortgagor was held to bar a subsequent suit for sale by a mortgagee, notwithstanding that the prior decree did not provide for sale in default of payment and observed as follows:

"Whether or not the decision that the subsequent suit for sale which was brought by the defendants in the former suit was barred by the decree in the first suit is strictly warranted by S. 13 (Explan. II) C. P. C., it is certainly in conformity with S. 67 of the Transfer of Property Act which provides that a mortgagee can bring a suit for foreclosure or sale only before a decree has been made for redemption of the mortgaged property. It is, therefore, of the highest importance that decrees in mortgage suits should be complete not only so far as the rights of the plaintiff are concerned, but also in so far as the rights of the defendant are concerned; and the fact that the decree is imperfect will not enable the defendant to enforce his rights under the mortgage as plaintiff in a suit, subsequently to be brought by him, if such rights could have been enforced by him in the former suit and provided for in the decree passed therein."

A converse case to that decided in — 'Maloji v. Sagaji', 13 Bom 567 came up for consideration in — 'Ranga Aiyangar v. Narayana Charar', 39 Mad 896. There a usufructuary mortgagee obtained a decree for sale but it was not executed. He, however, continued in possession of the properties. The mortgagor then filed a suit for redemption. It was held following the observations of Bhashyam Aiyangar J. in — 'Vedapuratti v. Vallabha Valiaya Raja', 25 Mad 300 (FB) that the second suit was barred. The following observations of Sadasiva Aiyar J. may be quoted:

"A decree for redemption is almost invariably a conditional decree whether it is passed in a mortgagee's suit for sale or a mortgagor's suit for redemption. No doubt where it is passed in a mortgagee's suit for sale it is not usually passed on the invitation of the mortgagor (defendant) and in the language used in — 'Adipuram Pillai v. Gopalaswami Mudali', 31 Mad 354 'the defendant is a decreeholder in spite of himself, an involuntary decreeholder'. But I do not see how this could on principle make any difference in the decision of the question whether the mortgagor defendant who has been given such a decree is entitled only to execute that decree or whether he is entitled to bring a fresh suit for redemption despite the doctrine of res judicata".

(18) The facts in — 'Ellaravan v. Nagaswami Aiyar', 49 Mad 691 were similar to those in — 'Ranga Iyengar v. Narayana Charar', 39 Mad 896. There was a prior decree for sale in a usufructuary mortgagee's suit based on the personal covenant; it remained unexecuted and became barred and a suit for redemption was instituted by the mortgagor. In holding that this suit was not maintainable, Wallace J. observed:

"It follows then, that, after a decree in a mortgage suit, whatever the form of that decree, whether for foreclosure, sale or redemption, the parties to the mortgage and to the suit and their legal representatives or assignees cannot maintain in future any separate suit or any claim arising out of the mortgage."

Madhavan Nair J. observed at p. 711:

"It is no doubt true that in the present case the decree in the prior suit was one for the sale of the properties and not for redemption; but if we have regard to the real nature of the decree for sale passed under Ss. 88 and 89 of the Transfer of Property Act, it will be found that this difference does not really make the decision inapplicable."

All these authorities proceed on the view that on the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act and Order XXXIV C. P. C., the nature of the suit that is laid on the mortgage makes no difference in the rights of the mortgagor and the mortgagee and that, therefore, a second suit for redemption would be barred under S. 11 whether the prior suit was one for redemption as in — 'Vedapuratti v. Vallabha Valiaraja', 25 Mad 300 (F.B) or was for sale as in — 'Ranga Aiyangar v. Narayana Chariar', 39 Mad 896 and — 'Ellarayan v. Nagaswami Iyer', 49 Mad 691.

(19) When once it is held, as now it has been, that a second suit for redemption is maintainable so long as it is not barred under S. 60 of the Transfer of Property Act, it should logically follow that a second suit for sale should likewise be maintainable so long as it is not barred by S. 67 of the Transfer of Property Act. If S. 11 C. P. C. cannot operate to curtail or abridge the rights conferred by Sec. 60 of the Transfer of Property Act, on principle, it cannot operate to cut down the rights under S. 67 of the Transfer of Property Act either and the second suit for sale must accordingly be held to be not barred as 'res judicata'.

(20) In — 'Raghunath Singh v. Hansraj Kunwar', 56 All 561 (PC) the Privy Council observed that a second suit for redemption was not barred on the ground of res judicata because in the first suit the issue was what amount had to be paid then by the mortgagor for redemption whereas in the second suit the issue was what amount had to be paid at the time of that suit for redemption. This reasoning is obviously based on the form of the decree to be passed in redemption suits, which has to declare the amount due as on the date of the decree in that suit, and provide for redemption on payment of that amount. The issue in 1896 suit was what amount was payable on the date of the decree in that suit whereas the amount payable in 1924 suit was the amount payable on the date of the decree in that suit. According to the Privy Council as the ascertainment of the amount payable by the mortgagor was an essential issue in a suit for redemption and as that issue must be necessarily different in the two suits there could be no bar of 'res judicata'.

The same reasoning must apply to suits for sale and foreclosure as well, as the amount payable by the mortgagor has to be ascertained and declared in the preliminary decree which is to be passed under rules 2 and 4 in suits for foreclosure and sale. Dealing particularly with the facts of this case, the decree in the prior suit Ex. P-2 (a) declared that Rs. 11804-4-0 was due to the appellant on 12-12-1939. In the present suit the plaintiff claims that a sum of Rs. 10500 was due to her. The defendants dispute it. Issue No. 3 in the suit runs as follows: "What, if any, is the correct amount due to the plaintiff?" The finding on that issue is that the amount claimed is correct. This issue could obviously not have been the subject-matter of decision in the prior suit and on the principle laid down in — 'Raghunath Singh v. Hansraj Kunwar', 56 All 561 (PC), it must be held that the decree Ex. P-2(a) cannot operate as res judicata in this suit.

(21) Mr. N. Sivaramakrishna Aiyar brought to our notice the decision in — 'Bhajanmal Tapondas v. Tikamdas', ILR (1946) Kar 110: AIR 1947 Sind 12, as authority for the position that a second suit for sale by a mortgagee is not maintainable. The facts of that case were, that one Tapondas executed a simple mortgage on 7-2-1920. In 1924, a suit O. S. No. 147 of 1924 was filed to enforce this mortgage and a preliminary decree for sale was passed. An application for final decree was filed on 29-2-1934 and was dismissed as barred by limitation. Then a second suit was filed in 1939 basing itself on the preliminary decree in O. S. No. 147 of 1924 and the question was whether such a suit was maintainable.

It was held that both under English and Indian law the right of a party is only to execute a decree and not to file a further action on it. The suit in that case was not one to enforce the mortgage dated 7-2-1920 and it would seem that such a suit would have been barred by limitation. The question whether a second suit on the mortgage itself was maintainable did not arise for determination and it is for this reason that the decision in — 'Raghunath Singh v. Hansraj Kunwar', 56 All 561 (PC) is not even referred to in the judgment. This decision, therefore, is no authority for the position contended for on behalf of the respondents.

(22) In conclusion we are of opinion that a mortgagee has a right under S. 67 of the Transfer of Property Act to file a suit for sale subject only to the conditions prescribed therein and of course subject to the law of limitation and that such a suit is not barred under S. 11, C. P. C. by reason of a decree for sale passed on the same mortgage in a prior suit and that under S. 100 of the Transfer of Property Act the same principle applies to a second suit for sale to enforce a charge.

(23) In the result the suit will be decreed as prayed for with costs, both here and in the Court below as against defendants 8 to 13, who are the legal representatives of the 1st defendant. Time for payment, three months. In view of the finding on Issue No. 5 Items 36 to 46 of plaint schedule will be excluded from the decree.

A/V.R.B.

Suit decreed.

A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 38

RAJAMANNAR C. J. AND

SOMASUNDARAM J.

M. A. Janaki, Petitioner v. M. A. Srirangammal, Respondent.

Civil Misc. Petn. No. 14691 of 1951, D/- 15-2-1952.

Constitution of India, Art. 133 — Suit under Madras High Court Original Side Rules, Or. 45 Rule 4 dismissed — Appeal dismissed for default of appearance — Application to restore also dismissed — Dismissal order is neither judgment, decree nor final order.

Where an appeal from an order dismissing a suit by an originating summons under O. 45 Rule 4 of the Original Side Rules of the High Court is dismissed for default of appearance in person or by advocate and an application filed under O. 41, Rule 19, Civil P.C., for restoration of the appeal and for re-hearing is also dismissed, the order dismissing the application is neither a judgment nor a decree nor a final order within the meaning of Art. 133. It is not a judgment or decree because it was not passed in a suit or appeal. It is not a final order as it does not deal with the rights of parties. It is a matter of procedure and not an order passed on the merits. (Paras 1, 2)

Anno: C.P.C., S. 109 N. 4.

Petitioner in person; K. Sankara Sastri, for Respondent.

REFERENCE .....

/Para

(37) AIR 1937 All 566: (171 Ind Cas 29) 2

RAJAMANNAR, C. J.: The petitioner filed a suit by an originating summons under Or. XLV, Rule 4 of the Original Side Rules of this Court for the determination of certain questions relating to deeds of settlement executed by her father. The suit came on before Krishnaswami Nayudu J. who dismissed it on the ground that the matters in controversy could not be gone into on an originating summons in a summary manner. The learned Judge therefore referred the plaintiff to a suit, if she was so advised. The petitioner filed an appeal against this order of the learned Judge (O. S. A. No. 112 of 1950). That appeal was dismissed on 24-1-1951 for default of appearance in person or by advocate. The petitioner then filed an application (C. M. P. No. 2733 of 1951) under Or. XLI, Rule 19, Civil P. C., for restoration of the appeal and for re-hearing. This application was dismissed by this Court on 23-4-1951. The petitioner now seeks leave to appeal to the Supreme Court against this last order of this Court in C. M. P. No. 2733 of 1951. The application is opposed.

(2) The relevant provision of law is Art. 133 of the Constitution under which an appeal lies to the Supreme Court from any judgment, decree or final order in a civil proceeding of a High Court in the territory of India if the High Court certifies that one or other of the conditions mentioned in clauses (a), (b) and (c) is satisfied and where the decision of this Court affirms the decision of the Court below the appeal involves some substantial question of law. We are of opinion that the order in question is neither a judgment nor a decree nor a final order. It is not a judgment or decree because it was not passed in a suit or appeal. Is it then a final order? In our opinion it is not. It does not deal with the rights of parties. It is a matter of procedure and not an order passed on the merits. The result of the order in question was only to leave undisturbed our decree and judgment dismissing the petitioner's appeal. Vide — 'Krishnakant v. Lala Amarnath', AIR 1937 All 566. It is clear that we could not have certified that the petitioner was entitled to appeal to the Supreme Court against the judgment and decree in the main appeal, because that was an affirming judgment and obviously the appeal did not involve any substantial question of law. The grounds which are now sought to be urged against our later order are all grounds which could have been urged in the appeal against the judgment in the main appeal. If the petitioner, as we have just held, was not entitled to leave to appeal to the Supreme Court against the judgment in the appeal, we fail to see how she can be allowed to get the same relief by this indirect method. The application is, therefore, dismissed with costs.

A/V.S.B.

Application dismissed.

A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 39

GOVINDA MENON AND CHANDRA REDDI JJ.

C. Chenchanna Naidu, Petitioner v. Praja Seva Transports Ltd., Cuddappah and another, Respondents.

Civil Misc. Petns. Nos. 1097 and 1098 of 1951, D/- 26-10-1951.

† (a) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 47 R. 1 — Application under Art. 226 of the Constitution — Review — Constitution of India, Art. 226.

If the application for the issue of a writ under Art. 226 is made on the civil side, in dealing with such an application the High Court is governed by the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code, and the High Court has jurisdiction to review its order under Art. 226. AIR 1938 Mad 722, Rel. on. (Para 11)

Anno: C.P.C. O. 47 R. 1 N. 2.

(b) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 47 R. 1 — "Error apparent on the face of the record."

The order 'ex facie' should show that the Government applied its mind to a consideration of the question whether the order under revision was under one or the other of the three categories mentioned in S. 64-A of the Motor Vehicles Act. Where at the time when the High Court passed its order on a petition under Art. 226, the question whether the Government acted without jurisdiction in exercising its powers under S. 64-A or whether the order of the Central Road Traffic Board, was one which could be called either illegal or irregular or improper, to enable the State Government to interfere with that order was not considered by it, such an omission would constitute "an error apparent on the face of the record." Case law discussed. (Para 19)

Anno: C.P.C., O. 47 R. 1 N. 15.

K. Rajah Aiyar and A. Bhujanga Rao, for Petitioner; Vepa P. Sarathi, for the State Counsel; and C. A. Vaidhalingam and C. Kondiah, for Respondents.

REFERENCES: Courtwar/Chronological/ Paras
(22) 26 Cal WN 697: (AIR 1922 PC 112) 18
(51) AIR 1951 Bom 25: (52 Cri LJ 305 FB) 9
(25) 29 Cal WN 148: (AIR 1925 Cal 304) 14
(27) AIR 1927 Cal 534: (54 Cal 405) 16
(29) AIR 1929 Cal 17: (115 Ind Cas 357) 15
(23) 46 Mad 955: (AIR 1924 Mad 98) 17, 18
(25) 49 Mad LJ 671: (AIR 1925 Mad 1031) 16
(38) ILR (1938) Mad 816: (AIR 1938 Mad 722) 11

(39) 1939-2 Mad LJ 809: (AIR 1940 Mad 17) 16
(41) 1941-2 Mad LJ 390: (AIR 1941 Mad 918) 17
(25) 3 Rang 261: (AIR 1925 Rang 314) 16

CHANDRA REDDI, J.: This is a petition for review of our order in C. M. P. No. 605 of 1951 dated 9th January 1951 declining to issue a writ of certiorari calling for records in G. O. Ms. 5424 M. Home department, Government of Madras, dated 27th December 1950 and to quash the said Government Order. The circumstances that necessitated the filing of that petition are the following:

(2) The petitioner along with the first respondent herein and some others applied to the Regional Transport Authority, Cuddappah for pucca permits for running three stage carriages on Cuddappah Madanapalle route via Kurubola Kota. The Regional Transport Authority rejected the application of the petitioner while that of first respondent was allowed.

(3) Against this order an appeal was filed to the Central Road Traffic Board, Madras, by the petitioner. The Appellate Tribunal cancelled the permit granted to the first respondent and directed the issue of one to the petitioner herein.

(4) Thereupon the first respondent preferred a revision to the Government of Madras against the order of the Central Road Traffic Board. The Government in its G. O. Ms. 5424 M. Home department referred to above allowed the revision petition filed by the first respondent and set aside the order of the Central Road Traffic Board in so far as it related to the granting of a permit to the petitioner.

(5) This led the petitioner to invoke the jurisdiction of this Court under Art. 226 of the Constitution of India in the manner and for the relief mentioned above. The main ground upon which that petition was based was that the order of the Government disclosed no reason for interfering with that of the Appellate authority and therefore was one passed arbitrarily.

(6) When this petition came before us on 9th January we rejected it observing that we saw no reason to hold that the State Government has exercised jurisdiction vested in it under S. 64-A of the Madras Motor Vehicles Act illegally or with material irregularity and that there were no grounds for interference.

(6a) A day or two after the disposal of that petition the jurisdiction of the State Government to exercise its revisional powers under S. 64-A. of the Motor Vehicles Act without finding whether the order sought to be revised was illegal, irregular or improper as required by the provisions of the section was questioned in another application for the issue of writ of certiorari to quash the order of the State Government in similar circumstances filed by an aggrieved party. We issued notice on that petition which ultimately resulted in pronouncement inter alia that the order, ex-facie should show that the Government applied its mind to a consideration of the question whether the order under revision was one under one or the other of the three categories mentioned in S. 64-A.

(7) As a result of the issue of notice in that application the petitioner has come forward with C. M. P. No. 1098 of 1951 for a review of our order dated 9th January 1951.

(8) The first point that arises for consideration in this petition is whether we have jurisdiction to review the order in C. M. P. No. 605 of 1951 and whether this petition is competent.

(9) This petition is resisted on behalf of the first respondent that we have no inherent powers to review the order passed upon Art. 226 of the Constitution. In support of this contention Mr. Vaidhalingam, the learned counsel for the first respondent relied on a ruling of a Full Bench of the Bombay High Court in—'In re Prahlada Krishna' AIR 1951 Bom 25. But we do not think that that case carries the contention of the respondents very far. What was observed by the Chief Justice Chagla with whom the other two learned Judges agreed was that the Court has no inherent power of review and that the power of review like that of an appeal should be conferred by a statute and that the Criminal Procedure Code did not vest any powers of review in the High Court. It was also remarked that Art. 226 of the Constitution did not confer upon the High Court a power of review. It must be remembered that in that case the first application that was rejected by the Division Bench of that Court was under S. 491 Criminal Procedure Code. The applications were filed subsequently one for a review of that order and the order for a Writ of Habeas Corpus under Art. 226 of the Constitution. Both the applications were rejected when they were ultimately heard by the Full Bench.

(10) It is while dealing with these applications that the statement of law referred to above was made by the learned Judges.

(11) Here we have to deal with a case not under the Criminal Procedure Code. The petitioner invoked the civil jurisdiction of this court to issue a writ under Art. 226 of the Constitution. If the application for the issue of a writ, is made on the civil side, in dealing with such an application we are governed by the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code. It is indisputable that the procedure applicable to all courts of civil judicature is that contained in the Civil Procedure Code. In — 'Ryots of Garabandho and etc. Villages v. Zamindar of Parlakimedi', I. L. R. (1938) Mad 816, the view taken by a Bench of this court consisting of Sir Lionel Leach C. J. and Madhavan Nair J. was that an order refusing the issue of a writ of certiorari to quash the orders of the Board of Revenue was one passed in the exercise of its original civil jurisdiction within the meaning of S. 109 (b) Civil Procedure Code and was subject to the right of appeal to the Privy Council from the same. Once it is conceded that the procedure applicable to cases of this kind is that enacted in the Civil Procedure Code, the question of jurisdiction of this court to review its orders under Art. 226 does not present much difficulty. Order 47, R. 1 Civil Procedure Code has invested civil courts with power to review their own decrees or orders under certain conditions, namely, discovery of new and important matter, or evidence which after the exercise of due diligence, was not within his knowledge or could not be produced by him seeking review at the time when the decree was passed or order made, or on account of some mistake or error apparent on the face of the record or for any other sufficient reason. The first two conditions are not relevant for the purpose of the present enquiry. Here we are only concerned with the latter conditions.

(12) The question for consideration in this case is whether the grounds alleged are sufficient to bring them within the expressions "error apparent on the face of the record, or for any other sufficient reason".

(13) In support of his contention that the present case falls under the category of error apparent on the face of the record or for any other sufficient reason within the meaning of O. 47, R. 1 C. P. C., Mr. Rajah Aiyar, the learned counsel for the petitioner placed before us some decided cases of this court and other courts.

(14) In — Brindhaban Chandra v. Damodar Prasad, 29 Cal. W. N. 148, a Bench of the Calcutta court allowed an appeal relying on a decision of the Judicial Committee. An application for review of a judgment was presented by the aggrieved party within time allowed by the statute and before it could be disposed of there was a pronouncement by the Privy Council construing the earlier judgment in a manner which rendered the judgment of the High Court wrong. A Bench of that court held that the circumstances of that case attracted the provisions of Order 47, Rule 1 Civil Procedure Code and that the expression "error apparent on the face of the record" was wide enough to cover a case like that.

(15) — Sourendranath v. Jatindranath, A. I. R. 1929 Cal 17 is also a case where the applicability of the expression "error apparent on the face of the record" in O. 47 R. 1 Civil Procedure Code was considered. The learned Judges Mukherji and Jack JJ. before whom the matter came up for consideration took the view that the failure of the lower court to deal with the merits of an application to restore a petition dismissed for default which was in itself an application for the restoration of the suit dismissed for default on an erroneous view of S. 151, Civil Procedure Code amounted to an error apparent on the face of the record.

(16) What was decided in — Sarat Krishna Bose v. Bisweshwar Mitra, A. I. R. 1927 Cal 534 was where an application under O. 9 R. 9 Civil Procedure Code was dismissed for default, the second application for restoring that application is not competent under O. 9 R. 9, but that the second application could be treated as an application for the restoration of the suit itself dismissed for default if the second application was made within time to restore the suit and if such an application was not within time the inherent jurisdiction of the Court under S. 151 Civil Procedure Code could be invoked in proper cases to restore the suit. The reason of the rule is stated by the learned Judges thus,

"To meet cases such as this, S. 151 of the Code was enacted and where there is no provision in the Code expressly providing for a remedy and none which prohibits a remedy being administered and such remedy is called for in order to do that real and substantial justice for the administration of which it exists, the provision of S. 151 may and should be restored to."

Coming to our own High Court in — 'Govinda Chettiar v. Varadappa Chettiar 1939-2-Mad. L. J. 809', Patanjali Sastri J. laid down that the misapprehension owing to which respondent's counsel did not urge all his argument in support of the finding recorded in favour of his clients by the first court and the consequent erroneous decision on the part of the Subordinate Judge that the Counsel had no arguments to urge to meet the points raised by the appellant's counsel are analogous to errors apparent on the face of the record so as to be sufficient reason for review under Or. 47 rule 1 Civil Procedure Code. Reference was made to two decisions in support of the learned Judge's finding reported in — 'Kyone Hoe v. Kyon Soon Sun', 3 Rang 261 at p. 267 and — 'Nagabhushanam v. Jagannaikalu', 49 Mad. L. J. 671.

(17) In — 'Natesa Naicker v. Sambanda Chettiar', 1941-2-Mad. L. J. 390 another Judge of this Court took the view that where the legal position is clearly established by a well-known authority and by some unfortunate oversight the Judge has gone wrong by the omission of those concerned to draw his attention to the authority, it may in a proper case be a ground for review in the light of the decision in — 'Murari Rao v. Balavant', 46 Mad 955 as coming within the category of an error apparent on the face of the record.

(18) It was the opinion of the learned Judge that — 'Murari Rao v. Balvant', 46 Mad 955 which recognised the power of the court to review its order when it overlooked the leading authority on a clear matter of law was still good law evidently meaning that its authority has not in any way been shaken by the pronouncement of the Judicial Committee in — 'Chhajjaram v. Neki', 26 Cal. W. N. 697 (P. C.).

(19) In the light of the observations contained in the decided cases cited to us we are inclined to hold that the instant case is governed by the clause "an error apparent on the face of the record" contained in O. 47, r. 1 Civil Procedure Code. At the time when, we passed the order, the question whether the Government acted without jurisdiction in exercising its powers under Sec. 64-A or whether the order of the Central Road Traffic Board, was one which could be called either illegal or irregular or improper, to enable the State Government to interfere with that order was not considered by us. A plain reading of S. 64-A shows that it is only when the Government reaches a conclusion that the order sought to be revised was one falling under either of the three categories mentioned in Sec. 64-A that it can exercise its revisional powers under that section.

We have held in C. M. P. No. 625 of 1951 that the Government order should 'ex facie' show that it applied its mind to the question of the legality, irregularity or propriety of the order of the Appellate Tribunal and that in the absence thereof the Government's order was liable to be quashed. No doubt our omission to consider that point was due to the Counsel not putting forward before us that aspect of the case, (that application have not (sic) been grounded on the arbitrary exercise by the Government of the power conferred on it under S. 64-A of the Act). But whoever might be responsible for it, if the most important point arising in the petition was not considered by us we think such an omission would constitute "an error apparent on the face of the record", within the meaning of the expression occurring in Or. 47 rule 1 Civil Procedure Code so as to warrant a review of our order dated 9th January 1951.

(20) It follows that our order dismissing the application for the issue of a writ of certiorari is discharged. A writ Nisi will issue in this case and the records in G. O. Ms. 5424 M. Home Department dated 27th December 1950 will be called for within two weeks. The petitioner will pay the respondent's costs (first respondent), Advocate's fee of Rs. 100 (one hundred only).

A/D.H.

Order accordingly.

A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 41 SATYANARAYANA RAO AND RAGHAVA RAO JJ.

In re A. K. Gopalan, Petitioner.

Criminal Misc. Petn. No. 354 of 1951, D/- 19-3-1951.

(a) Public Safety — Preventive Detention Act (1950), Ss. 3 and 12 — Right of detenu to challenge order on ground of mala fide — Burden of proof — Duty of government — Malice and 'mala fide' explained — Validity of prior order in question — Fresh order for detention passed before pronouncement of judgment — Omission by Government to inform court of order reflects on their bona fide — (Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 491) — (Constitution of India (1950), Art. 226).

Satyanarayana Rao J.: An order of detention passed under the law of preventive detention can be challenged on the ground that there is lack of bona fide on the part of the authority exercising the power: AIR 1949 Mad 307 (SB), Rel. on. (Para 7)

A statutory authority must always be exercised honestly and without malice. There should be no fraudulent exercise of the power conferred or colourable exercise of it to gain an ulterior object. The question when that power has been exercised mala fide will depend upon the circumstances of the case. (1942) AC 284, (1917) AC 260; AIR 1945 PC 156 and AIR 1950 Mad 162, Ref. to. (Para 7)

When the question of the validity of an order of detention is being decided by the Court in an application for a writ of Habeas Corpus, the Government passes a fresh order to arrest the detenu if he is set at liberty, and alleges as its reason for passing the order, the difficulty of arresting the detenu, a dangerous communist whose subversive activities would be a threat to the security of the state, as he would go underground immediately, the reason is unconvincing. Further the government which apprehending an adverse judgment acts with alacrity and passes the fresh order after full consultations with all its legal advisers and even communicates it, before the judgment is delivered, to the police officer present in court for execution if the detenu is set at liberty but fails to inform the court of the fresh order and the reasons for passing it, the omission to do so is a serious circumstance reflecting upon the bona fide of the government in passing the order. (Para 9)

Raghava Rao J.: It is open to a detenu to show that the order of detention was a fraudulent exercise of the power vested in the Government. The burden of showing that is on him and he can sustain the burden only if he successfully rebuts the presumption of bona fide on the part of Government: AIR 1945 FC 18, Rel. on. (Para 14)

'Malice' and 'mala fide' in connection with an order of detention are cognate terms expressive of the same legal idea. 'Malice' in law can mean nothing more than intention to injure another by doing an act in disregard of the latter's right, wilfully and wrongfully, without reasonable and probable cause. It does not mean personal ill-feeling or spite. These terms in relation to an order of detention express the legal idea of an intention on the part of the Government to misuse or abuse the power vested in it and are not necessarily connotative of moral turpitude on the part of the Government or anybody connected with it. (Para 14)

A detention order issued for the purpose of flouting the decision of Court, holding the previous order of detention invalid on merits, would be a mala fide order. But if the decision had proceeded on the ground that the law under which the prior order was made was invalid or that the order itself was in an irregular form a fresh order passed under a fresh legislation or in a valid form would not be necessarily mala fide. Where however the Government, passes an order even before the judgment is delivered and allege that they passed the order because they anticipated the judgment to declare the prior order invalid on the technical ground that it did not mention the period of detention, when they had no justification for such belief, and even the fresh order omits to rectify the defect the circumstances leave no doubt that the intention of the government was to flout the decision of the court. AIR 1949 Mad 307 (SB), Ref. to. (Para 17)

Further when having passed such an order they refrain from mentioning it to the court, so as to enable the court to take the reasons therefor into consideration before it pronounces judgment, it again is a circumstance which goes to show the indirect motive and improper conduct of the Government. (Para 18)

Anno: Cr. P. C., S. 491 N. 7; Civil P. C., App. III; Constitution of India, Art. 226 N. 7.

(b) Constitution of India (1950), Arts. 53, 73, 154 and 162 — Executive and judiciary — Conflict — Duty of executive.

Satyanarayana Rao J.: The Court is not concerned with person or personalities and has to administer justice according to law without consideration of the character of the person who invokes its jurisdiction. The executive is as much bound to obey the law as an ordinary citizen and show respect to the law. The judiciary being only another limb of the Government it is as much the duty of the executive as that of anybody else to maintain the dignity of the court and see that its prestige is not lowered in the eyes of the public by flouting the judgment of the Courts: AIR 1948 Bom 417; AIR 1949 Pat 247 and AIR 1915 PC 106 (2), Rel. on. (Paras 9, 10)

Raghava Rao J.: While this constitution does not in so many words provide for a separation of powers in the strict sense of the term between the legislature, the judiciary and the executive, there are specific provisions in regard to the three heads of powers embodied in different portions of the Constitution which have to be read together. Whatever the relative degrees of importance enjoyed by the three organs of State the powers of each one of them have to be exercised as fundamentally subject to the provisions of the Constitution relating to the organ individually as well as to the provisions relating to the other organs. (Para 22)

Whatever the limits within which the judiciary in this land can function in relation to the Union Parliament and State Legislatures and whatever the residual powers of the executive under the Constitution over and above what is defined in the specific articles thereof there is no doubt that the executive must needs respect the decisions of the judiciary & can only avoid as in England, their due operation by appropriate legislation. In India as in England it is the business of the Courts to apply the Constitution and the laws and in cases properly brought before them the judiciary exercises control over the executive action in so far as to refuse to uphold as valid any act of government which is not supported by the Constitution or by some law. The authority of the Courts as regards the executive action arises when the executive exceeds its authority in which case the agents and instruments through which the action is carried out are personally responsible to law and the Courts. AIR 1915 PC 106 (2), applied. (Para 23)

While on the one hand it is not the business of the courts to pass judgments on the policy of executive action, the executive on the other hand has no authority to pass verdict upon the validity of a judgment but must assist in enforcing the judgment even though the executive may believe it to be erroneous. (1916) 1 KB

595; AIR 1931 PC 248 and 22 Mad 270 (PC),
Ref. to. (Para 23)

It is the respect that is accorded by one organ of the State to the others that ensures that healthy working of the Constitution which is the acid test of its merits whatever the paper value of its provisions. (Para 22a)

(c) Constitution of India (1950), Art. 226 — Habeas Corpus — Nature of proceedings — Jurisdiction of Court to consider validity of orders passed subsequent to institution of proceedings — (Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 491).

The analogy of civil proceedings in which the rights of parties have ordinarily to be ascertained as on the date of the proceedings cannot be invoked in habeas corpus proceedings. It is open to the court in such proceeding to consider if there was a valid order which came into existence later directing the detention and decline to release the person even if the earlier order was invalid: AIR 1949 Pat 247 and AIR 1945 FC 18, Rel. on.

(Paras 11 and 19)

Anno: Civil P. C., App. III, Constitution of India, Art. 226 N. 10; Cr. P. C., S. 491 N. 7, Pt. 29.

(d) Constitution of India (1950), Art. 226 — Habeas corpus — Order of court declaring detention invalid — Effect on valid order of detention passed before pronouncement of judgment but not brought to notice of court — (Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 491).

Satyanarayana Rao J. (Raghava Rao J. dubitante): A writ of habeas corpus is concerned with the justification for detention. The justification may be based upon an order originally passed or an order which was subsequently made and brought to the notice of the Court. But the essence of the matter is that if an order came into existence before the judgment is pronounced, it is the duty of the Government to bring it to the notice of the Court. The effect of the omission to do so would be that the order of the court directing the release of the detenu would automatically discharge the fresh order passed before the pronouncement of the judgment and the Government thereafter would be precluded from putting forward the fresh order of detention in justification of the arrest and detention of the detenu. AIR 1949 Pat 247, Rel. on.

(Paras 11 and 26)

(e) Public Safety — Preventive Detention Act (1950), S. 3 A — Arrest and service of order not simultaneous — Effect.

Raghava Rao J.—Non-service of detention order simultaneously with the arrest does not necessarily render the arrest illegal. It is all a question of substance whether subsequent service is or is not a sufficient compliance with law. (Para 14)

(f) Public Safety — Preventive Detention Act (1950) S. 3 — Successive orders passed on same grounds — Legality.

Raghava Rao J.—An order of detention can be passed against a person who is already under detention and there is nothing inherently illegal about successive orders passed on the same grounds where the sufficiency of the grounds is not examinable by Courts: AIR 1945 FC 18 Rel. on.

(Para 17)

(g) Public Safety — Preventive Detention Act (1950), S. 3 — Judgment declaring deten- tion order invalid — Government's failure to appeal — Bona fide of fresh order of detention.

Raghava Rao J.—The failure of the Government to take steps to appeal against the order of the High Court declaring the detention order under which the detenu is detained invalid is not proof of the mala fides of the fresh order passed by it. If the Government felt satisfied about the emergency of the situation so far as to resort to the speedier course of a fresh order instead of the normal remedy of an appeal which might involve delay in making sure of the detenu if he once gets off, they may do so provided their action is well founded otherwise. Their failure to appeal cannot render the order invalid or illegal. (Para 20)

M. K. Nambiar, for Messrs. Row and Reddy, for Petitioner; the Advocate General with Public Prosecutor, for the State.

REFERENCES: Courtwar/Chronological/, Paras

('99) 22 Mad 270: (26 Ind App 16 PC)	23
('15) 1915 AC 750: (AIR 1915 PC 106(2) )	9, 23
('31) 1931 AC 662: (AIR 1931 PC 248)	23
('45) 1945-2 Mad LJ 325: (AIR 1945 PC 156)	7
('45) AIR 1945 FC 18: (46 Cri LJ 559)	11, 14, 17, 19
('48) AIR 1948 Bom 417: (49 Cri LJ 579)	10
('49) AIR 1949 Cal 633: (51 Cri LJ 169 FB)	17
('48) Appeal No 13 of 1948 (Mad)	15
('49) ILR (1949) Mad 377: (AIR 1949 Mad 307: 50 Cri LJ 405 SB)	7, 17
('49) 1949-2 Mad LJ 310: (AIR 1950 Mad 162: 51 Cri LJ 525)	7
('51) Cri MP No 153 of 1951, D/- 22-2-1951 (Mad)	1, 3, 9, 14, 17, 24
('50) AIR 1950 Orissa 107: (51 Cri LJ 891 FB)	17
('49) AIR 1949 Pat 247: (50 Cri LJ 518)	10, 11, 19, 26
(1917) AC 260: (86 LJ KB 1119)	7
(1942) AC 284: (111 LJ KB 24)	7
(1942) AC 206: (110 LJ KB 724)	7
(1912) 1 Ch 173: (81 LJ Ch 105)	9
(1911) 1 KB 410: (80 LJ KB 531)	9
(1916) 1 KB 595: (85 LJ KB 630)	23
(1674) 3 Keb 279: (84 ER 720)	21
(1627) 3 State Tr 1	21

SATYANARAYANA RAO J.: On the 22nd February 1951, this Court directed that the petitioner should be set at liberty forthwith and at that time the petitioner was present in court. We reserved judgment in Crl. M. P. No. 153 of 1951 in which that order was made on 19th February 1951. According to a note made by the Bench Clerk, the delivery of our judgment was completed on the 22nd February 1951 at 11-40 a.m. The petitioner then asked us whether he was free to go as the police officers were present in court. We then told him that he was at liberty to go wherever he pleased as he became a free citizen. The petitioner has filed an affidavit in support of this petition, which is also supported to some extent by the affidavit filed by Mr. V. G. Row, an advocate of this court, who was advising the petitioner in several proceedings before this court and was present in court when Crl. M. P. No. 153 of 1951 was argued and when we pronounced judgment on the 22nd February 1951. The events that transpired subsequently have been narrated in these two affidavits and the facts are not seriously controverted by the respondents.

Immediately after our order was pronounced, the petitioner, along with his advocate, Mr. Row, went out of the court hall with the intention of proceeding to the office of the advocate in the Andhra Insurance Buildings in Thambu Chetti Street, Madras. After they proceeded about ten yards from the gate of the High Court two C. I. D. officers who followed them from the High Court told the petitioner that he was under arrest as there was an order of detention against him. This happened within five minutes after our judgment was pronounced. At the time of the arrest, the petitioner was not shown the order of detention but was taken in a car to the office of the Commissioner of Police, Egmore, Madras. In the car the order was shown to the petitioner. He was taken to the office of the Commissioner of Police and the order of detention was served on him at the office of the Commissioner at about 12-30 p.m. He was thereafter taken to the Penitentiary where on the same day he swore to an affidavit before an Honorary Presidency Magistrate, Madras, setting out these facts and contending that his arrest and detention were clearly intended to flout the order of this court and that it was illegal. He filed this petition on 22-2-1951 under Art. 226 of the Constitution of India and Section 491 Crl. P. C. to order his production before this Honourable Court and to set him at liberty by issuing a writ of habeas corpus. He was taken to the Cuddalore Jail on the morning of 23-2-1951, in a Police Van.

(2) The petition and affidavit were placed before us on the 23rd for orders by the direction of the Honourable the Chief Justice. The matter was posted to 26th February 1951 as the petitioner wanted permission to argue the petition for the purpose of issuing a rule nisi and it was taken up for consideration on that day. We admitted the petition after hearing arguments and issued a rule nisi. As the learned Advocate General was present in court at that time, in consultation with him, the petition was posted for final disposal on 5th March 1951.

(3) Two counter affidavits were filed on behalf of the respondents one by the Deputy Secretary to Government, Public Department and the other by the Assistant Commissioner of Police, Intelligence Section, Madras City Police. The Assistant Commissioner in his affidavit states that he was present in the High Court when the order releasing the petitioner was pronounced by this Court and under instructions of the Superintendent of Police, Special Branch, C. I. D. he arrested the petitioner in pursuance of an order of detention, a copy of which, intended to be served on the petitioner was presumably in his possession and custody at that time for he admits in the affidavit that after he got into the car along with the petitioner after arresting him, he showed the order to the petitioner. From this affidavit, it is a legitimate inference to draw that the order of detention which is now questioned in these proceedings, bearing date 22-2-1951 was made before we pronounced our judgment on that date. This fact is admitted in the further affidavit filed on 14-3-1951 by the Deputy Secretary. This fact was not disputed and indeed, it could not be disputed. The Deputy Secretary, in his long counter affidavit, states the circumstances under which the order of detention was passed on 22-2-1951. It would be convenient to quote his own language relating to this matter. He says in paragraph 2:

"The petitioner had moved the High Court in Crl. M. P. No. 153 of 1951 for a writ of Habeas Corpus challenging the legality of his detention, his main contention being that the order passed by the Government under S. 12 (2) of the Preventive Detention Act, 1950, continuing his detention under the said Act did not specify the period of his detention. After the arguments in the case were over, the Government were informed by their legal advisers that the petitioner would, in all probability, be released by the High Court on that technical contention. In view of the petitioner's antecedents & his violent nature as manifested by him in his activities both when he was at large and when he was inside the Jail, the Government were satisfied that in the event of his being released by the High Court, the petitioner would go underground at once and carry on subversive activities prejudicial to the security of the State and the maintenance of public order. Immediate action was therefore called for; and after full consultation with their legal advisers the Government issued a fresh order of detention under the Preventive Detention Act, 1950, on 22nd February 1951."

(4) After we reserved judgment in this case, in view of certain events which happened in court, it became necessary to direct the Deputy Secretary to give particulars in an affidavit on two questions:

- "1. Who the legal advisers were that were consulted and were referred to in paragraph (2) of the counter affidavit;
2. the reason why the fact that an order of detention which was made before we pronounced the judgment was not communicated to the legal adviser, i.e., the learned Advocate General who was present in court when we pronounced our judgment."

These particulars have been given by the Deputy Secretary and he states in the affidavit now filed as follows:

- "1. In connection with the reference to "Consultation with the Legal Advisers of the Government" in paragraph 2 of my original affidavit, the legal Advisers referred to, and, who were consulted, were the learned Advocate General, the learned Public Prosecutor, and the Secretary to the Government of Madras in the Legal Department."
2. On 22nd February 1951, the order of detention was passed at 10-30 a.m. and it did not at all occur to Government then that it was necessary to communicate the fact of making the order to the learned Advocate General or the Public Prosecutor."

(5) In the counter affidavit, the Deputy Secretary denies also the allegation made by the petitioner that the detention order was passed by the Government mala fide in order to flout the orders of the High Court and asserts that it was passed solely with a view to prevent the petitioner from acting in a manner prejudicial to the security of the State and the maintenance of public order. After setting out fully the state of affairs existing on 22-2-1951 before the Government passed the order, the rest of the affidavit sets out the long history of the petitioner's detention in custody for one reason or another from 1947. The grounds of detention communicated to the petitioner on 24-2-1951 are substantially the same grounds on which the previous order of detention was made. As the learned counsel for the petitioner finally confined his arguments to the question whether the order of detention was bona fide or not, it is unnecessary to advert to the other allegations in the counter affidavit or to the grounds of detention.

(6) At the outset, no doubt, learned counsel for the petitioner attacked some of the provisions of the Amending Act of 1951 as being ultra vires on the ground that they infringed the provisions of sub-clause (7) of Art. 22 of the Constitution; but he later abandoned that contention. The learned Advocate General also stated that he is not going to rely upon the first order of detention read with Act IV of 1951 in this proceeding (to?) justify the legality of the order of detention which is now challenged. The point for consideration in these proceedings, therefore, is whether the order of detention made by the Government on the 22nd February was a bona fide one and whether the order of release passed by this court on 22-2-1951 does not affect the legality of the fresh order of detention made on the same day before our judgment was pronounced and it does not in our judgment automatically terminate the fresh order of detention as well.

(7) That an order of detention passed under the law relating to preventive detention can be challenged on the ground that there is lack of bona fides on the part of the authority exercising the statutory power is established by the Full Bench decision in — 'Narayanaswami v. Inspector of Police', ILR (1949) Mad 377 and is stated as proposition (c) at page 427 by the learned Chief Justice and at page 454 by Govindarajachari J. A statutory authority, it is established law, must always be exercised honestly and without fraud or malice. This view is based upon the observations in — 'Liversidge v. Anderson', (1942) A.C. 206, — 'Greene v. Secy. of State for Home Affairs', (1942) A.C. 284 and — 'Emperor v. Sibnath Banerji', 1945 2 Mad L J 325 (PC) and — 'Rex v. Haliday', (1917) A.C. 260. See also the observations of Viswanatha Sastri J. in — 'Mani v. District Magistrate, Mathurai', 1949-2 Mad L J 310, at page 326 where the point was considered by the learned Judge. The power, therefore, should be exercised bona fide and it should not be a fraudulent or colourable exercise of the power and the power conferred under the Act should not be abused with a view to gain an ulterior object; in other words, it should not be a mala fide exercise of the power. It may not be possible to state when and under what circumstances, it can be inferred that the power was exercised mala fide. In my opinion, it is a question to be decided according to the circumstances of each case & no hard & fast rule can be laid down.

(8) The practice in England in matters relating to habeas corpus seems to be that when a rule nisi is issued, a return is made containing a copy of all the causes of the prisoner's detention. It should also state the facts relied on as constituting a valid ground for detention of the person alleged to have been illegally detained. It is open if sufficient ground is shown, to amend or substitute another return by leave of the court or Judge. The following passage at page 737, paragraph 1258 of Hals-bury's Laws of England, Hailsham Edn. Vol. 9 may be quoted:

"A prisoner who has been discharged from illegal custody on habeas corpus cannot be again imprisoned or committed for or in respect of the same offence; but is not privileged from being immediately rearrested on criminal process in relation to some matter other than that in respect of which he has been discharged, though he is privileged from rearrest on civil process whilst returning to his place of abode from the court discharging him."

All this applies to a warrant issued to arrest the person after an order of discharge was made by the court. An order of detention passed when the judgment in an application for habeas corpus was pending, stands on a different footing. I shall presently consider the effect of the order of release on the fresh order of detention made on the same day.

(9) Is the contention of the petitioner that the order lacks bona fides and was made with the intention of flouting the order of this court and disobeying it well founded? The situation at the time the order was made by the Government, was, they were uncertain about our decision and even if they gathered that our decision was going to be against them, they could not be certain about the ground or grounds on which our judgment was going to be rested. A perusal of the judgment in Crl. M. P. No. 153 of 1951 would indicate that arguments before us in that petition covered a wider ground. The validity of the grounds to sustain the order of detention, the power of this court to consider the matter afresh in view of the order of the Supreme Court, were all matters, which were debated before us and on which we took time to consider our judgment. There was also the additional argument that since the decision of the Supreme Court dismissing his petition in September last, fresh circumstances had arisen and that we were not precluded from considering the legality of the order of detention. It was therefore impossible for any person to have made up his mind regarding the basis of our judgment.

According to the counter affidavit of the Deputy Secretary, even the legal advisers of the Government did not definitely assure them that the order of this court is going to be rested on a technical ground that the detention was illegal as the period of detention was not specified in the order. All that the legal advisers stated to the Government, according to this counter affidavit, was that in all probability the petitioner would be released on the technical contention. That does not exclude the possibility of the order of detention being set aside by us on all or any of the grounds that have been urged before us.

Was there then any basis for the Government to make up its mind that our judgment was going to be rested on technical grounds and that therefore they would be entitled to pass a fresh order of detention as there was going to be no pronouncement by this court on the legality of the grounds or on the question whether there was fresh material or change in situation which warranted the release of the detenu? Without actually seeing the judgment or hearing it, it was impossible, in my opinion, for any person much less the legal advisers of the Government or even the Government, to have made up its mind regarding the grounds on which we were going to set aside the order of detention even if it was evident that we were going to set it aside. It does not stop there. Having made the order, they have communicated it to the Superintendent of Police, Special Branch, C. I. D. who in his turn issued instructions, even, before our judgment was pronounced to the Assistant Commissioner, to arrest the petitioner, in pursuance of the order of detention which can only mean that if we should release the petitioner, he should immediately be rearrested. This circumstance is beyond doubt as is clear from the affidavit of the Assistant Commissioner of Police itself. He stated in clear unambiguous terms that he had received instructions from the Superintendent of Police, which must only mean before he came to the High Court as he admits he was present in the High Court when the order was pronounced by this court and what is more, he had in his pocket at the time a fresh order of detention. The stage therefore was set for the arrest of the petitioner immediately after our order of release was pronounced and he was set at liberty. What is the justification for these preparations and for this order of detention after taking legal advice? It can only be to flout the order of this court, if it should go against them and to disobey it by arresting the petitioner before he enjoyed freedom for a few minutes.

The reason urged for making the order is that in the event of the petitioner being released by the High Court, he would go underground at once and carry on subversive activities prejudicial to the security of the State and maintenance of public order. It, therefore, according to the affidavit, called for immediate action by passing an order of detention. The affidavit also says that the detenu would go underground thereby suggesting that the moment he steps out of the compound of the High Court, he is a danger to the public order and to the security of the State and that it would be almost impossible to rearrest him & that the Government were certain that he would carry on subversive activities prejudicial to the security of the State and the maintenance of public order. It is rather difficult to accept this as a reason justifying the conduct of the Government in making an order of detention with such haste on that day and making arrangements to rearrest him immediately after the judgment was pronounced. Suppose the petitioner goes to his own district or to some other part of the State, was it impossible for the Government with its police, regular and special, and its C. I. D. establishment to have traced and arrested a single individual if he is going to be a danger to the State? Does it mean that as against this one man, the entire establishment of the police would be impotent and incapable of tracing him out and arresting him? Did the situation really demand that he should not be allowed to enjoy freedom even for a few minutes? Even if it is assumed that the situation was so precarious and dangerous were there not other methods of catching him and depriving him of his freedom? And was it necessary to make an order of detention, almost suggesting that whatever the order of the High Court may be "they were going to circumvent it by their order of detention passed and kept ready".

If, as was strenuously contended on behalf of the Government by the learned Advocate General, the Government acted in a perfectly legal and constitutional manner and really felt that there was a serious danger to the State of Madras by the release of this man by the High Court, why was not the fact, that a fresh order of detention was made, brought to our notice at least on the day on which we pronounced our judgment. The affidavit of the Deputy Secretary dated the 14th March 1951 states that the order of detention was passed at 10-30 a.m. on the 22nd February 1951. This order was issued, as stated in the counter affidavit, after full consultation with their legal advisers, viz., the learned Advocate General, the learned Public Prosecutor and the Secretary to the Government of Madras in the Legal Department. At the time we pronounced our judgment on that day, the Assistant Commissioner of Police was present in court with instructions from the Superintendent of Police, Special Branch, C.I.D. Madras to arrest the petitioner in pursuance of the order of detention after his release. We proceeded to deliver the judgment at about 10-50 a.m. The Assistant Commissioner of Police was in court by that time, if not earlier. Between the time of the passing of the order at 10-30 a.m. and his presence in court, he had received instructions from the Superintendent of Police, Special Branch, C. I. D. to arrest the petitioner in pursuance of an order of detention which he must have come into possession by then as he showed it to the petitioner when he was in the car. The order actually served on the petitioner, which was produced in court, shows that it was communicated among others to the Superintendent of Police, Special Branch, C. I. D. Madras. So within fifteen minutes time, the order was communicated to the Superintendent of Police with a copy and he issued instructions after sending a copy of the order of detention to the Assistant Commissioner to arrest the petitioner after release. The quick movement of these events within a very short interval of fifteen minutes indicates that the Government moved in the matter with surprising alacrity to give effect to the order of detention.

Be that as it may, the order was undoubtedly within the knowledge of the Deputy Secretary and the Assistant Commissioner of Police, the latter of whom was actually present in court and yet no steps were taken to bring the order to the notice of this court and according to the affidavit of the Deputy Secretary dated 14th March 1951, it did not occur to the Government then that it was necessary to communicate the fact of making the order to the learned Advocate General or the Public Prosecutor. This is really an unconvincing explanation. In view of the affidavit now filed by the Deputy Secretary it may be taken that the order of detention actually passed i.e., the fresh order, was not communicated to the Advocate General on that day. The counter affidavit originally filed and now amplified establishes that the fresh order of detention was issued by the Government "after full consultation with their legal advisers", viz., the learned Advocate General, the learned Public Prosecutor, and the Secretary to the Government of Madras in the Legal Department. The consultation could only have been whether it was proper for the Government to make a fresh order, particularly in view of the fact that our judgment was pending. The propriety to be considered could only be with reference to the situation going to be created if we were to direct the release of the petitioner by our judgment. They had no definite knowledge that our judgment was going to be based upon any particular view. Whatever other questions may be that would have received attention at that consultation the Government and its legal advisers must have weighed and considered the propriety of passing a fresh order so as in effect to prevent the operation of our judgment. Whether the arrest could be made within or outside the premises of the High Court must also have received attention. It was a "full consultation" in the sense that all aspects of the various questions were discussed and considered and it was then determined that a fresh order of detention should issue. It must have been a conference of the officials of the Government and the legal advisers. All of them must have put their heads together to decide the difficult question of the propriety of issuing a fresh order and its terms and the manner and mode of giving effect to it. Though the fair copy of the order and its issue to the Police was not within the knowledge of the Advocate General, in view of the categorical statement of the Deputy Secretary in the affidavit, it is obvious that the legal advisers were aware of the fact that the Government had made up their minds to issue a fresh order of detention. What remained to be done was merely the formal act of issuing a fair order.

The distinction between knowledge of the decision reached by the Government in consultation with the legal advisers and the knowledge of the existence of a fair order is not very much. It should have at least put the legal advisers on enquiry to ascertain whether the decision reached sometime that day to issue a fresh order of detention so as to prevent practically giving effect to our order of release took the shape of a fair order or not. The omission by the Government to bring to our notice the fresh order passed after due deliberation on that day prior to the delivery of our judgment which was communicated even to the police to put it into effect is a serious circumstance reflecting upon the bona fides of the Government in making the order.

It was contended that the Government had discretion under the statute to make a fresh order of detention and this power could be exercised validly by them. To a situation where there is a conflict between the exercise of the power by the Government and by the Judiciary, the law stated by Sir George Farwell in the judgment of the Privy Council in the — 'Eastern Trust Co. v. Makenzie, Mann & Co. Ltd.', (1915) A. C. 750 applies. It was a case in which when a person was restrained by court from receiving certain monies from the Government, received the money from the Government notwithstanding the order of the court and the Government claimed that they were entitled to pay the amount as they were given such a power over the subject-matter by the legislature and that the court had no ground for interfering at all directly or indirectly with the exercise of such a discretion by the executive. At page 759, Sir George Farwell observes:

"If it was the case of a private individual, he would be clearly liable to make good the wrongful payment and to purge his contempt. In the case of the Crown there is no ground for Idington J's proposition that the Government may fairly say that they were given such power by the Legislature over the subject-matter and that the courts have no ground for interfering at all, directly or indirectly, with the exercise of such a discretion. There is nothing on which to found the existence of the alleged discretion or to support a decision which pronounced the Executive Government free to dispose of money the right to which is sub judice inter partes and held in medio by the order of the court.

The second point taken by Idington J. is equally untenable and even more important. The non-existence of any right to bring the Crown into court, such as exists in England by petition of right, and in many of the colonies by the appointment of an officer to sue and be sued on behalf of the Crown does not give the Crown immunity from all law, or authorise the interference by the Crown with private right at its own mere will. There is a well-established practice in England in certain cases where no petition of right will lie, under which the Crown can be sued by the Attorney General and a declaratory order obtained, as has been recently explained by the Court of Appeal in England, in — 'Dyson v. Attorney General', (1911)-1-K. B. 410 and in — 'Burghes v. Attorney General', (1912)-1 Ch. 173. 'It is the duty of the Crown and of every branch of the executive to abide by and obey the law. If there is any difficulty in ascertaining it the courts are open to the Crown to sue, and it is the duty of the Executive in cases of doubt to ascertain the law, in order to obey it, not to disregard it'. (The underlining (here in " ") is mine).

If, as is now contended, the situation was such that the detenu, the petitioner, was a dangerous communist and should not be allowed to be set at liberty, if we were to reach the conclusion in our judgment that the prior order of detention was defective only on a technical ground, it was open to the Government, as pointed out by Farwell J. in the passage underlined (here in " ") above, to state frankly to this court, immediately after the judgment was pronounced that in view of the imperative necessity and immediate danger to the State its security and peace and in view of our judgment not based on merits, but only on a technical point, that they propose to pass a fresh order of detention and that to meet such a contingency they had prepared one and wished to proceed to arrest the petitioner in pursuance of that order. The Government is as much bound to obey the law as an ordinary citizen and show respect to the law. In view of the circumstances considered above which speak for themselves, it is my opinion clear that the fresh order of detention lacks bona fides. I regret the conclusion but the facts leave no option.

(10) I adopt in this connection the language of Desai J. in — 'Hirji Shivram v. Commissioner of Police, Bombay', AIR 1948 Bom 417, where the learned Judge observed in a similar situation:

"Where then a situation arises which lends itself to the construction that the action of the police commissioner is an attempt to supersede the order of the Magistrate, courts of justice must be vigilant to see that justice is not brought into ridicule and rendered impotent and that a tendency towards autocracy does not prevail in the minds of the representatives of democracy."

To similar effect are the observations of Das J. in — 'Subodh Singh v. Province of Bihar', AIR 1949 Pat 247, where under somewhat analogous circumstances, the learned Judge observed:

"Even if there were any practical difficulties, they cannot override the law; nor can they override the basic principle of the liberty of the subject on which the ordered progress of society and the state depends. I consider it necessary that it should be made clear at once for all that no officer can flout or disobey the order of this court for the release of a prisoner. If any officer, however highly placed he may be, does so intentionally, he does so at his peril."

With great respect to the learned Judges of the Bombay and Patna High Courts, I have no hesitation in accepting these pronouncements. It must be observed, as I observed during the course of the arguments, that this court is not concerned with persons or personalities and has to administer justice according to law without consideration of the character of the person who invokes our jurisdiction and if he is entitled to his liberty under the law, it should not be denied to him on a consideration of expediency. The Judiciary is after all another limb of the same Government and it is as much the duty of the executive as that of anybody else, to maintain the dignity of this court and to see that its prestige is not lowered in the eyes of the public. The situation on the facts of this case, is certainly regrettable, but it cannot be helped.

(11) The Patna High Court in — 'Subodh Singh v. Province of Bihar', AIR 1949 Pat 247 has taken the view that when the court is called upon to exercise its jurisdiction under S. 491, Cr. P. C. it is not restricted to a consideration of the validity of the order of detention which was the subject-matter of the petition but if subsequently before the judgment was pronounced, another order of detention was made, the validity of that also can be considered. This view is based on the decision of the Federal Court in — 'Basanta Chandra v. Emperor', AIR 1945 F. C. 18, where it was pointed out that the analogy of civil proceedings in which the rights of parties have ordinarily to be ascertained as on the date of the institution of the proceedings cannot be invoked in habeas corpus proceedings. It is open to the court in such a proceeding to consider if there was a valid order which came into existence later directing the detention and decline to release the person even if the earlier order was invalid. If, however, the Government did not disclose the existence of such an order and allow the judgment of the court directing the release of the detenu to be pronounced, the second or the fresh order of detention would also automatically cease to have operation. As pointed out, if 'once a return to the writ is made it is a recognised practice of the courts in England to permit an amendment of the return or a substitution of the return by leave of the court. It was perfectly open to the Provincial Government to have pleaded even before we pronounced the judgment that there was a subsequent order of detention passed by the Government which is not vitiated by the defect of not stating the period of detention. But it has not done so.

We are concerned in a writ of habeas corpus with the justification for the detention. The justification may be based upon an order originally passed or an order which was subsequently made and brought to the notice of the court. But the essence of the matter is that if an order came into existence before the judgment is pronounced, it is the duty of the Government to bring it to the notice of the court. If the Government does not produce it and does not seek to justify the detention on that ground, the fault is that of the Government and they must thank themselves for their default. It is not open to the Government thereafter to put forward the fresh order of detention for arresting and detaining the person if the judgment is pronounced. As observed by the learned Judge, Das J. in — 'Subodh Singh v. Province of Bihar', AIR 1949 Pat 247:

"I am clearly of the view that it was the duty of the Provincial Government to bring to the notice of this court all orders of detention which might justify the detention of the person whose application for release was being considered by this court on 7th October 1948."

In an earlier part of the judgment, the learned Judge stated:

"If the Provincial Government have a second order of detention, which would justify the detention of the prisoner, it is clearly the duty of the Provincial Government to bring forward that order to the notice of the court."

Of course, these observations are confined to antecedent orders of detention passed before an order of discharge made by the court but not to orders of detention passed on a later date. I do not see any reason nor is any sufficient ground urged for not accepting the principle of that decision and apply it to the present case. In view of this decision it follows that apart from the question of the mala fide nature of the order, our order directing the release of the petitioner on the 22nd February 1951, automatically discharged the fresh order of detention passed earlier on that day. For these reasons, I am of opinion that the rule nisi must be made absolute and the petitioner should be set at liberty forthwith.

(12) RAGHAVA RAO J.: This case has raised rather embarrassing questions for argument of the learned Advocate General and rather far-reaching issues for determination of the court. The material facts have been stated in full and, with respect, correct detail by my learned brother and need not be repeated by me. They are by no means complicated and are more or less even beyond the pale of controversy. The difficulty involved in the case which I have rather keenly and anxiously felt is as to the inferences from them so far as such inferences are pertinent to the decision of some of the questions debated. The difficulty has only stood aggravated and not lightened because of the psychological considerations on which the inferences are in 'rerum naturae' dependent. An analysis and ascertainment of the motives at the basis of individual conduct is a task hard enough, for not even the devil can dive into the mind of man. Harder still must of course be an analysis and ascertainment of the motive springs of action of that theoretically abstract but practically concrete, corporate body known as the Government which is the supreme executive of any State functioning through its many officers in its many departments of activity.

(13) Before I proceed to deal with the questions arising for decision, I must express my genuine appreciation of the commendable restraint and sobriety with which the learned Advocate General, who was called upon, on the very second day of his assumption of office, to deal with a case of this complex kind, has conducted himself throughout the argument, with due regard to his dual position as the accredited head of a Bar responsible in the matter of its conduct to this court, as the highest Court of the Province, who is required generally to accept with respect any remark emanating from this Bench, right or wrong, and as the accredited champion of the highest official rank of the powers and privileges of the Government who is sometimes called upon to press and stress such powers and privileges if somewhat unduly. I must also declare, to all whom it may concern, that the judgment of this Court even on such delicate questions as arise here shall never issue except in accordance with the oath of our high office, that is, except in a true spirit of faith and allegiance to the Constitution and its laws which we have to uphold and in performance of our duties to the best of our ability, knowledge and judgment, without fear or favour, ill-will or affection.

(14) Mr. Nambiar for the petitioner has raised as many as five points for our consideration which, according to his formulation are as follows:

1. That the order of detention now challenged must be treated as void 'ab initio' because it was intended to flout our decision in Cri. M. P. No. 153 of 1951.
2. That the order is invalid because it contravenes the provisions of the Constitution which ensure for the High Court its power to issue the writ of habeas corpus.
3. That the Government in issuing the order acted mala fide, that is, without the proper kind of satisfaction under the relevant statute (Central Act IV of 1951) and that, therefore, the order is liable to be quashed by us.
4. That there was no service of the order on the petitioner simultaneously with his arrest and that the arrest is, therefore, illegal.
5. That Sec. 12(1) of the Amending Act (Central Act IV of 1951) is ultra vires and that, therefore, the order of detention based upon it is lacking in validity.

This last contention although persisted in for the better part of a whole day was eventually abandoned by the learned Counsel for the petitioner. We are not, therefore, called upon to pronounce upon the validity of the contention. Nor are we called upon seriously to notice the fourth point raised before us. Non-service of the detention order simultaneously with the arrest does not necessarily render the arrest illegal. It is all a question of substance, whether subsequent service is or is not sufficient compliance with law. In the present case there was no such long or even seriously noticeable interval between the actual arrest and the exhibition of the order to the petitioner in the van as may nullify the process of the Government. It thus remains for me to deal only with the three other points.

It may be mentioned at the outset that the first and third points are allied to each other in the sense that if we hold in favour of the first, we must necessarily hold in favour of the third. The contention of the learned counsel on these points comes to this: that the conduct of the Government and its officers in promulgating this order of detention was inspired by malice and stands thereby vitiated. Malice in law, generally can mean nothing more than an intention to injure another by doing an act in disregard of the latter's right wrongfully, & wilfully, without reasonable & probable cause. It does not necessarily mean personal illfeeling or spite. Further "mala fides" & "malice" in relation to the contention before me are cognate terms expressive of the legal idea of an intention on the part of the Government to misuse or abuse the power vested in it and not necessarily connotative of moral turpitude on the part of the Government or of anybody connected with it. Mr. Nambiar could not and did not, seriously suggest any kind of personal ill-feeling or spite between any officer of the Government and his client. He did not and could not, therefore, frame his contention as on the basis of anything more than an ulterior intention on the part of the Government to somehow flout our order in Cri. M. P. No. 153 of 1951. That if such circumvention were made out the order of detention must be held to be lacking in the satisfaction on the part of the Government requisite under the Statute cannot be seriously disputed. It is open to the detenu as held in — 'Basant Chandra v. Emperor', AIR 1945 F. C. 18 to show that the order was a fraudulent exercise of the power vested in the Government. The burden of showing that is on him and he can only sustain the burden by successfully rebutting the presumption of bona fides on the part of the Government.

(15) This Bench had occasion recently in — 'App. No. 13 of 1948' to consider want of bona fides alleged in relation to a power vested in the Government to acquire property under the Land Acquisition Act. I had occasion then to observe as follows referring to the relevant passages in Lord Halsbury's Laws of England, 2nd Edn:

"As to the law on the matter, I wish to make it clear that, as I apprehend it, in the case of fraudulent execution of a statutory power as in the case of fraudulent execution of a power to appoint under a deed or will or of any common law power, the fraud does not necessarily imply any moral turpitude, but consists in the exercise of the power for purposes foreign to those for which it is in law intended. Persons exercising such a power cannot be held responsible and the exercise of such power by them cannot be held invalid except on proof of mala fides or indirect motive or of some improper conduct materially affecting such exercise."

Applying these tests of irrelevant purpose, indirect motive and improper conduct to the situation with which we are concerned, what we are called upon to decide is firstly, whether the purpose for which the power has been exercised by the Government is such irrelevant purpose and secondly, whether the motives which actuated the Government in making the order are such indirect motives, and thirdly whether there is improper conduct of the Government proved materially affecting the exercise of the power.

(16) The purpose of the arrest is said to be the prevention of activities prejudicial to the security of the State on the part of the petitioner. Since the soundness of the grounds of detention was not pronounced upon by us in our judgment in Crl. M. P. No. 153 of 1951, and has not been canvassed before us now, I am prepared to assume that the purpose behind the order is not foreign to the power exercised through it. But then what of the indirect motive and improper conduct alleged against it by the petitioner which still remain for consideration?

(17) As to motive, what is contended by the learned counsel for the petitioner, to use his own language, is that the order of detention was intended to flout our order on Crl. M. P. No. 153 of 1951. Although the use of the word "flout" in this context was not accepted by the learned Advocate General it could not be disputed by him that the order was intended to render our judgment in Crl. M. P. No. 153 of 1951 of no force and effect whatsoever in relation to the release of the petitioner which would automatically follow on it. The learned Advocate General has given us reiterated assurances that the Government never intended to disrespect our order but only desired to devise some further method of ensuring the continuance of the detention of the petitioner in the interests of public safety, which would be a legitimate means of getting over the difficulty created by our judgment. If the mode of circumvention of our judgment resorted to by the Government is something substantially justified by the law I do not think we can pronounce the order as void at the inception as contended by Mr. Nambiar. The law on the point is perfectly clear. That an order of detention can be passed against a person who is already under detention and that there is nothing inherently illegal about successive orders passed against him on the same grounds, where the sufficiency of the grounds is not examinable by the court has been ruled by the Federal Court in — 'Basanta Chandra v. Emperor', AIR 1945 F. C. 18. Again, that where the court has declared the detention of a person to be without justification upon the merits, a fresh order of detention made in order to circumvent the decision would be mala fide has been decided by the Full Court of Orissa in — 'Prahalad Panda v. Province of Orissa', AIR 1950 Orissa 107 (FB). Further, a Full Bench of five Judges of the High Court of Calcutta have ruled in — 'Bupendra v. Chief Secretary, Govt. of West Bengal', AIR 1949 Cal 633 (FB) that if however the decision proceeded simply on the ground that the law under which the order had been made was invalid or the order was irregular in form, a fresh order of detention in a valid form or under fresh legislation would not be necessarily mala fide. Justification for the order in the present case is sought by Government not in any fresh legislation like Act IV of 1951 (Central) as conceded by the learned Advocate General but in the circumstances that our judgment in Crl. M. P. No. 153 of 1951 did not proceed on a consideration of the grounds of the petitioner's detention but only on the technical ground that there was a time limit required by the law to be fixed in the original as well as the confirmatory order of detention under S. 3 and S. 12 respectively of the Preventive Detention Act, IV of 1950. It is contended that the order under challenge was thought of in order to set right the technical defect of the previous order of detention as it was competent to Government so to do, after it had been informed of the expectation of the learned Advocate General at the conclusion of the argument before us that we were in all likelihood going to base our decision upon the technical ground. It is also contended that in drawing up an order even before our delivery of judgment the Government acted only 'ex majore cautela'; and only desired to lose no time over service of the order on the petitioner for the purpose of his re-arrest. The order was not, it is said, intended to take effect in any other contingency than that of our judgment proceeding on the narrow basis of the technicality referred to above.

In order to assess and ascertain the validity of these contentions it is necessary to advert to certain circumstances which the contentions overlook. If it was really the intention of the Government to make the order in view of the possibility that we might rest our decision on the technical ground, one should find some mention in the order of the time limit which we held it necessary for the Government to specify in any order under S. 3 of the Act IV of 1950. If the Government had sought to abide by such decision which they aver they anticipated bona fide we should have expected them to issue the order in a manner consonant to our decision as to the time limit. That, however, is not the position which we find Government took up in issuing the order as it did. The order was prepared on the same grounds of detention as before and without the slightest attempt at rectification of the defect which we actually pointed out in our judgment. If indeed the Government is to justify the omission of any time limit in the order by any suggestion that there was a decision of the Supreme Court or an unreported decision of this court (Govinda Menon and Basheer Ahmed Sayeed JJ.) to the contrary of our judgment—decisions adverted to before this court on the 12th inst. in a statement by Mr. Kuttikrishna Menon, the predecessor in office of the Advocate General who has argued this case before us—it was for the Government to have brought these decisions to our notice before our delivery of judgment on the 22nd February 1951.

The then Advocate General, Mr. Kuttikrishna Menon, did endeavour to avert our judgment till after the production by him of an authenticated copy of the amending Act (IV of 1951) Central, but did not mention to us the decisions above referred to. The fact of the non-mention of the decisions to us—for which there is no explanation at all forthcoming—can only lead to the inference that these decisions were not responsible for the admission in the order of the time limit required by our judgment. The Government was in all honesty and fairness bound to respect our judgment and introduce the time limit into the order in accordance with our decision. Our decision might be right or wrong; but the Government had no business to disregard it even if there were decisions to the contrary, of which they do not seem to have been aware, of which they did not inform us and on which they could not have and do not seem in truth and in fact, to have acted.

It turns out too on information supplied to us by the learned Advocate General himself during the delivery of this judgment that the decision of the Supreme Court to the contrary of our judgment was in fact pronounced on 23-2-50, a day after ours and published in the Hindustan Times only on 24-2-50 two days later than ours. The decision was not and could not be within the knowledge of the Government on the date of our judgment on which date it was that the Government framed the order now under challenge in anticipation of our judgment. It was scant respect therefore which Government showed to us in framing the order as they did even on the assumption that they expected our judgment to rest upon the technical ground on which it eventually rested. It is difficult to resist the conclusion in the circumstances that the intention of the Government in promulgating the order was not so much to devise legitimate means for surmounting the difficulty created by our judgment but to somehow evade its operation.

That, in my opinion, is sufficient proof of the lack of bona fides vitiating the order under the Full Bench decision reported in — 'Narayana-swami v. Inspector of Police', ILR (1949) Mad 377. The motives operating on the human mind are not always easy to ascertain and often mixed in character and even if one could not, on the basis of non-mention of any time limit in their order of 22-2-51, which certainly assert the intention of the Government to be to flout our prior judgments, such non-mention in disregard of our judgment is, in my opinion, certainly "improper conduct materially affecting the exercise of the power" according to the third of the tests of mala fides indicated supra in this judgment.

(18) Whether the non-production of the order before us on the day of our judgment is not another circumstance strengthening the inference of mala fides on the part of the Government whether from the stand point of "indirect motive" or from the standpoint of "improper conduct" is the further aspect of the matter which we have to consider. It was bad enough of the Government to have done all that they had done before our delivery of judgment on assumptions and premonitions with reference to our judgment which was still pending. Even if they felt themselves justified in doing so in shrewd anticipation of what our judgment was to be, the least that the Government ought to have done—it is indeed surprising that they did not do that much at least—in all fairness to the petitioner as well as to this Court and in their own interest, after reaching their decision in consultation with their legal advisers to re-arrest the petitioner immediately after our order, if it should turn out to be in his favour on the technical ground, was to inform their legal advisers who were to appear on that day in court to take judgment, of the order which they had already made. The production of the order would undoubtedly have a material bearing upon the order to be passed by us on the earlier habeas corpus petition which was then pending judgment.

(19) As I had occasion to point out in my judgment in CrI. M. P. No. 153 of 1951 the writ of habeas corpus is in England a prerogative writ but at the same time it is also a writ of right remedial in nature and grantable 'ex debito justitiae', which is inapplicable if the illegal detention has ceased before the application for the writ. So I said in my judgment in that case having regard to this basic nature of the writ that I did not feel quite so clear as my learned brother did that the disappearance of two of the grounds of detention which were relied upon by the petitioner, did not affect the merits of the habeas corpus petition which was to be decided and disposed of in accordance with the circumstances in existence at the time of issue of such order without regard to the events which may have happened subsequently to the issue of the order. I feel perfectly clear that in the present case the order under challenge ought to have been brought to our notice at the time of our judgment as a material factor which would have a bearing on the termination or continuance of the illegal detention which was the substance of the complaint on the application for the writ. I am in perfect agreement with the view to this effect enjoined on us by the ruling in — 'Basanta Chandra v. Emperor', AIR 1945 F. C. 18, where it is pointed out that the analogy of civil proceedings in which the rights of parties have ordinarily to be ascertained as from the date of the institution of the proceedings cannot be invoked in habeas corpus proceedings. This view has been accepted and acted upon by the ruling in — 'Subodh Singh v. Province of Bihar', AIR 1949 Pat 247, wherein it is held that the court in exercising its jurisdiction under S. 491, Cr. P. C. is not restricted to a consideration of the validity of the order of detention with reference to circumstances in existence at the time of the application for the writ. So if the order was brought to our notice it was possible for us to have held either in favour of the Government itself or in favour of the petitioner according as our view of the merits of the order may have induced us to hold. This, therefore, shows the unfairness to the petitioner as well as the inexpediency in the interests of the Government itself involved in the withholding of the order from our notice at the time of delivery of judgment. So far as we are ourselves concerned, the regret of the situation which we cannot but feel is that we were prevented from possibly making the right decision by the Government withholding the order from us at the time. Here again, there was improper conduct on the part of the Government materially affecting the exercise of the power, whether or not there was indirect motive operating on their minds in the sense of an intention to flout our order.

(20) As proof of mala fides on the part of the Government Mr. Nambiar has further contended that the Government instead of availing themselves of the right of appeal against our judgment open to them under Arts. 132 and 136 of the Constitution hastened mala fide to make a fresh order of detention against his client. It is pointed out by learned counsel mentioning — 'O'Brien's case' before the House of Lords that in England there is no right of appeal, against an order of release. The position in India is under the Constitution, argues learned counsel, different. I am not satisfied that the failure of the Government to take steps for an appeal to the Supreme Court would vitiate the order, if the Government felt satisfied about the emergency of the situation, as they say they were, so far as to resort to the speedier course of a fresh order instead of to the normal remedy of an appeal which might involve delay in making sure of the detenu, if once he gets off as he might well do. If the course adopted by the Government is otherwise well founded, I am not prepared to say that the failure to pursue the alternative remedy of appeal to the Supreme Court renders the order invalid or illegal.

(21) The writ of habeas corpus more elaborately designated by some such form as habeas corpus, 'ad facisudum sub judicadum et resi-piandum' (i.e., to do, submit to & receive whatever the Judge or the court awarding such writ shall consider in this behalf) is unlike other writs of habeas corpus such as habeas corpus, 'ad respondendum' (writ used to remove a prisoner from the jurisdiction of an inferior court in order to charge him with action in a higher court) habeas corpus 'ad satisfaciendum' (writ used to remove a prisoner to a superior court in order to charge him with process of execution), habeas corpus ad testificandum (a writ used to bring a witness into court to give testimony in a cause), as pointed out in Bacon's Abridgement and an early English case — 'Rex v. Pell and Offly', (1674) 3 Keb. 279 a writ of right against which no privilege of person or place can avail. The writ is one of the highest constitutional importance, as it is a remedy available to the meanest subject against the most powerful (vide Halsbury's Laws of England, 2nd Edn vol. 9. Sec. 1202 at p. 703). The source of the writ in England is part of the King's jurisdiction in judicial matters. In England the King in Parliament is the supreme legislative organ and the King in Cabinet is the supreme executive organ of the State. The common law regards the King as the source or fountain of justice and certain ancient remedial processes of an extraordinary nature which are known as prerogative writs have from the earliest times issued from the court of King's bench in which the sovereign was always present in contemplation of law. The court of the King's Bench retained all the jurisdiction of the curia regis in so far as it was not distributed among the courts; and this jurisdiction including the grant of the prerogative remedies is now under the Supreme Court of Judicature vested in the High Court of Justice.

As Hyde C. J. points out as early as 1627 in — Darnel's case', (1627) 3 State Tr. 1.

"Where the commitment is by the King or others this court is a place where the King doth sit in presence and we have power to examine it; and if it appears that any man hath injury or wrong by his imprisonment we have power to deliver and discharge him; if otherwise, he is to be remanded by us to prison again."

(22) In India the jurisdiction is embodied so far as the Supreme Court is concerned in Art. 32, and so far as the High Courts are concerned in Art. 226 of the Constitution. The jurisdiction is not traceable to the King for here there is none but to the people of India who having solemnly resolved to constitute India into a sovereign democratic republic have through their constituent assembly, adopted, enacted and given to themselves the Constitution. While this Constitution does not in so many terms provide for a separation of powers in the strict sense of the term between the legislature, the judiciary and the executive, there are specific provisions in regard to the three heads of powers embodied in different portion of the Constitution which have to be read together. Whatever the relative degrees of importance enjoyed by the three organs of the state under the Constitution there is no doubt but that the powers of each one of the three organs have to be exercised as fundamentally subject to the provisions of the Constitution relating to that organ individually as well as to the provisions relating to the other organs.

(22a) It was contended by Mr. Nambiar that the power to issue a writ of habeas corpus conferred upon the High Court as well as upon the Supreme Court is something so absolutely sacrosanct under the Constitution that no legislation can prejudicially affect it, and no executive can under the shelter of a piece of legislation prejudicially affecting it act in disregard of the writ if issued. It may also be that although our attention was not specifically drawn to Arts. 358 and 359 of the Constitution counsel meant to maintain that except in the cases dealt with by these two articles the Constitution makes the judicial power to issue the writ so far absolute that no legislative power provided for by the Constitution could possibly override or encroach upon this judicial power. It was contended too by the learned counsel that the powers of the executive under the Constitution are so far defined as to be liable to be treated as limited by Arts. 53, 154 and 162 of the Constitution. On the other hand, it was contended by the learned Advocate General, that the power to issue the writ is not to be treated as immune from Legislative interference and that the powers of the executive ought not to be treated as confined to what is defined in Arts. 53, 73, 154 and 162.

In support of the latter limb of the contention our attention was drawn by the learned Advocate General to the passages contained in S. 431 of Vol. VI of Halsbury's Laws of England (Constitution law) at pages 431 et seq; and in particular to the statement at page 385 that executive functions are incapable of comprehensive definition for they are merely the residue of the functions of Government after legislative and judicial functions have been taken away. It is unnecessary for me to pronounce upon the rival contentions of counsel on these intricate points as one thing is clear to my mind—viz; that no one of the three organs of the State ought to function in disharmony with the other two organs. It may be that judicial supremacy as under the Constitution of the United States does not exist here. It may be that the theory of legislative omnipotency obtaining in England does not hold the field under our Constitution subject to whose provisions it is that the Union Parliament and the State Legislatures have to function. It is the respect that is accorded by one organ of the State in relation to the others that ensures that healthy working of the Constitution which is the acid test of its merits whatever the paper value of its provisions.

(23) There is no reason why from this standpoint the principle of the ruling in the — 'Eastern Trust Co. v. Makenzie Mann & Co. Ltd.', (1915) A. C. 750 (PC) should not apply to cases under our Constitution although there is here, as I have already pointed out, no King to act as a connecting link between the three organs of the State. The Crown in its executive side is in England bound to observe the law both by the Statute and by the terms of the Coronation oath which embodies the contract between the Crown and people upon which the title to the Crown originally depended and still in a large measure depends. Upon any doubtful point of Prerogative in England the Crown and its ministers must therefore bow to the decision of the legal tribunals (vide Halsbury's Laws of England II Edn. Vol. VI, S. 535 page 455). It is the duty of the Crown and of every branch of the executive to abide by and obey the law. If there is any difficulty in ascertaining it courts are open to the Crown to sue and it is the duty of the executive in cases of doubt to ascertain the law, in order to obey it, not to disregard it.

Whatever the limits within which the judiciary in this land can function in relation to Union Parliament and State Legislatures and whatever the residual powers of the executive under the Constitution over and above what is defined by the specific articles thereof, I have no doubt at all that the executive must needs respect the decisions of the judiciary and can only avoid, as in England, their due operation by appropriate legislation. In India as well as in England since it is the business of the courts to apply the Constitution and the laws in cases properly brought before them the judiciary exercises control over executive action in so far as it would refuse to uphold as valid any act of the Government which is not supported by the Constitution or by some law. The authority of the Courts as regards the executive action arises when the executive exceeds its authority in which case the agents and instruments through which the action is carried out are personally responsible to law and the courts (Vide D. D. Basu's Commentary on the Constitution of India p. 207). While on the one hand it may readily be conceded that it is not the business of the courts to pass judgment on the policy of executive action, it cannot on the other hand be denied that the Executive has no authority to pass verdict upon the validity of a judgment and it is bound to assist in enforcing it, even though the Executive may believe it to be erroneous. (vide Cooley's Constitutional law page 203).

Thus, in — 'the King v. Speyer', (1916) 1 K. B. 595 at page 610, Lord C. J. Reading observed:

"This is the King's court; we sit here to administer justice and to interpret the laws of the Realm in the King's name. It is respectful and proper to assume that once the law is declared by a competent judicial authority, it will be followed by the Crown."

On the same principle it is that it has been held by the Privy Council in — 'Fischer v. Secretary of State', 22 Mad 270 that Government may in proper cases be bound by an injunction issued in a proceeding to which it is not a party. So quote the Judicial Committee:

"But then it was asked what would happen, if the Collector ignored the order of the Court? What remedy would the appellant have if it had omitted to ask for specific relief against the Collector? It is highly improbable that any officer of the Government would set the court at defiance. It is impossible to suppose that Government would countenance such conduct as that."

Where the powers of the Governor of Nigeria under the Deposed Chief's Removal Ordinance were purely executive the Privy Council have held in — 'Eshugbayi Eleko v. Nigerian Government', (1931) A. C. 662 that it was the duty of the court to investigate the propriety and legality of Executive action, in ordering the deposed chief to leave a specified area and in default in ordering his deportation to another specified place in the colony. Lord Atkin, in delivering the judgment of their Lordships, observes at page 670 of the report thus:

"The Governor acting under the Ordinance acts solely under executive powers and in no sense as a court. As the Executive he can only act in pursuance of the powers given to him by law. In accordance with British jurisprudence no member of the Executive can interfere with the liberty or property of a British subject, except on the condition that he can support the legality of his action before a court of justice. And it is the tradition of British justice that Judges cannot shrink from deciding such issues in the face of the Executive."

(24) Judging the matter from this standpoint, the conclusion seems to me to be reasonably enough irresistible that if the order under challenge in the present proceedings is vitiated either by an intention on the part of the Government to evade the effect of our judgment in the prior petition, Crl. M. P. No. 153 of 1951, somehow or other or by improper conduction on the part of the Government materially affecting the exercise of the power, as already discussed, the order cannot possibly be upheld notwithstanding any belief on the part of the Government that our judgment was erroneous.

(25) The foregoing entails too my answer to the point raised by Mr. Nambiar that the order now under challenge is in contravention of the power conferred upon the High Court by Art. 226 of the Constitution.

(26) There is only one other ground raised on behalf of the petitioner which remains to be dealt with. That is that the non-mention of the order to us at the time of the delivery of our judgment in Crl. M. P. No. 153 of 1951 operates 'proprio vigore' to nullify the order altogether. The ground is sought to be supported and must indeed be taken to be established by what the Patna High Court has held in — 'Subodh Singh v. Province of Bihar', AIR 1949 Pat 247. I am not, I must say, however fully satisfied that the non-mention has this effect, whatever may be its bearing, on the question of mala fides on the part of the Government which I have already dealt with. Assuming that it was the duty of the Government at the time of our judgment to bring to our notice all orders of detention which might justify the detention of the person whose application for release was under consideration then, I am unable to discover as at present advised any intelligible legal principle on which the Government's dereliction of duty in this respect has the legal effect contended for. It is not a question of constructive 'res judicata' applicable to civil proceedings whether by way of statutory provision (i.e., S. 11 explanation IV C. P. Code) or by way of juristic principle 'de hors' the statute; nor is it a matter by necessary implication of our judgment that all prior orders of detention should cease to operate thereafter. What was never actually before our minds cannot by implication be treated as something which we did pronounce against. No intention can be imputed to us to decide matters not brought to our notice and the judgment which we delivered can only relate to the matters in fact brought to our notice.

(27) In conclusion, I cannot help recalling to my mind Lord Mansfield's famous judgment reversing the outlawry of Wilkes in 1768. As that noble and learned Lord there did, so may we not here, from the responsible seats which we have been called upon to fill, and what is more, to fulfil, by virtue of our appointments, proclaim in solemn tones from this sacred shrine of justice. The Constitution does not allow reasons of State to influence our judgment, 'Fiat Justitiae ruat cælum.'

(28) In the result the petition succeeds; and I agree with my learned brother that the rule nisi must be made absolute and the petitioner set at liberty forthwith.

A/M.K.S.

Petition allowed.

A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 54

RAJAMANNAR C. J. AND VENKATARAMA AYYAR J.

C. Sambandam, Petitioner v. The General Manager, South Indian Railway, Tiruchirapalli, Respondent.

Civil Misc. Petn. No. 14078 of 1950, D/- 13-11-1951.

(a) Railway Services — (Safeguarding of National Security) Rules (1949) Rr. 3 and 4 — Non-compliance — (Constitution of India, Arts 310, 311) — (Railway Establishment Code R. 148).

The rule that civil posts under the Government are held at pleasure is part of the law of this country and it involves the consequence that there can be termination of service at will. The Railway authorities have a right to terminate the services of the employee under rule 148 of the Railway Establishment Code and there is nothing in the Constitution which restricts such a right. R. 4 does not differ from S. 240(3) of the Government of India Act (1935) or Art. 311(2) of the Constitution of India.

The petitioner was employed as a wireman in the Marine Department of the South Indian Railway. He was served with a notice, the contents of which were as follows: "Whereas in the opinion of the 'competent authority' as defined in rule 2 of the Railway Services (Safeguarding of National Security) Rules 1949, there are reasonable grounds (which are given below) for believing that you are engaged in subversive activities and that consequently you are liable to have your services terminated under rule 3 of the said rules; You are hereby required to state within 14 days of the receipt of this notice whether you accept or deny the accuracy of the above allegation. If you do not reply within that period, it would be assumed that you admit the allegation. In either case, you may, within the same period, submit any representation you wish to make as to why your services should not be terminated under the said rules. (Copy attached). If after considering your representation the competent authority decides that no further action should be taken against you, you will be informed accordingly. If after considering your representation the competent authority considers that there are sufficient grounds for taking further action, the materials on record together with your representation will be referred to the Committee of Advisers set up by the Government of India for this purpose. You are further asked to state whether you wish to be heard in person by me or by the Committee of Advisers before orders are passed on your case."

Held that when the services of an employee are terminated he cannot be held to have been dismissed. But whether in fact it is a case of termination of services or dismissal is a question of fact.

This was a case not of termination of service but of compulsory retirement falling within R. 3. The notice did not satisfy the requirements of R. 4. The statement that the petitioner was liable to have services terminated under R. 3 was not any intimation of a decision by the authorities that his services would be terminated. The notice calling upon the petitioner to give his explanation for the charges could in no manner be regarded as falling under R. 4(b). As the proper procedure prescribed in R. 4 had not been followed, the subsequent order of compulsory retirement under R. 3 was illegal and inoperative. AIR 1948 PC 121 Foll. Case law discussed. (Paras 7, 11, 12, 14 & 15)

(b) Constitution of India, Art. 226 — Other remedy open.

It is true that the High Court will not ordinarily interfere with an order where there is another adequate remedy available to the party. This, however, is a rule of discretion for the guidance of the Court and not a limitation on its powers.

Held that as the question involved was one of right procedure to be followed in exercise of the powers conferred under the Railway Services (Safeguarding of National Security) Rules and as the rights of the petitioner had been clearly infringed, this was a fit case in which the writ must issue. AIR 1950 SC 163 Foll. (1928) 1 KB 291 Rel. on. (Paras 16 & 18)

K. V. Venkatasubramania Aiyar, for Row and Reddy, for Petitioner; O. T. G. Nambiar for King and Partridge, for Respondent.

REFERENCES: Courtwar/Chronological/ Paras

('48) 1948 FCR 44: (AIR 1948
PC 121)	4, 5, 7, 11
('45) 1945-2 Mad LJ 270: (AIR 1945
FC 47)	4
('50) 1950 SCR 566: AIR 1950 SC 163	16
('44) AIR 1944 Lah 240: (ILR (1944)
Lah 325)	4
('37) ILR (1937) Mad 517: (AIR 1937
PC 27)	11
('37) ILR (1937) Mad 532: (AIR 1937
PC 31)	11
('44) AIR 1944 Nag 66: (ILR (1944)
Nag 21)	14
(1895) AC 229: (64 LJ PC 119)	10, 11
(1896) AC 575: (65 LJ PC 82)	10
(1928) 1 KB 291: (96 LJ KB 347)	16
(1870) 5 QB 466: (39 LJ MC 145)	16
(1896) 1 QB 116: (65 LJ QB 279)	10
(1896) De Doshe v. Reg, see foot note in 1896-1 QB 116	10
(1918) 34 TLR 314	10
(1918) 34 TLR 589: (145 LT 236)	10
(1920) 37 TLR 138	10

VENKATARAMA AYYAR J.: The petitioner was employed as a wireman in the Marine Department of the South Indian Railway Co. On 11-3-1950 he was served with a notice dated 27-2-1950 issued by the respondent under the Railways Services (Safeguarding of National Security) Rules, 1949. The contents of that notice so far as they are material for purposes of this petition are as follows:

"Whereas in the opinion of the 'competent authority' as defined in rule 2 of the Railway Services (Safeguarding of National Security) Rules, 1949 (who in your case is the Chief Mechanical Engineer, S. I. Railway, Golden Rock) there are reasonable grounds (which are given below) for believing that you are engaged in subversive activities and that consequently you are liable to have your services terminated under rule 3 of the said rules;

You are hereby required to state within 14 days of the receipt of this notice whether you accept or deny the accuracy of the above allegation. If you do not reply within that period, it would be assumed that you admit the allegation. In either case, you may, within the same period, submit any representation you wish to make as to why your services should not be terminated under the said rules. (copy attached.)

If after considering your representation the competent authority decides that no further action should be taken against you, you will be informed accordingly.

If after considering your representation the competent authority considers that there are sufficient grounds for taking further action, the materials on record together with your representation will be referred to the Committee of Advisers set up by the Government of India for this purpose.

You are further asked to state whether you wish to be heard in person by me or by the Committee of Advisers before orders are passed on your case."

Four charges were set out in this notice. On 16-3-1950 the petitioner sent a written explanation to the several charges. On 6-9-1950 the respondent passed the following order:

"I have considered your representation in reply to my letter No. S. 37/3 dated the 27th February 1950 and am of the opinion that you are engaged in subversive activities in such a manner as to raise doubts about your reliability and am satisfied that your retention in public service is prejudicial to national security. I have decided with the prior approval of the President that your services should be terminated under rule 3 of the Railway Services (Safeguarding of National Security) Rules, 1949.

You are, therefore, given a month's pay in lieu of notice in accordance with para 6 of your service agreement dated 6-2-1942 and your service will terminate on the 16th September 1950."

(2) It is the validity of this order that is the subject-matter of this application. The contention of the petitioner is that on a proper construction of the Safeguarding of National Security Rules and of Art. 311 of the Constitution he was entitled to a further notice of the action proposed to be taken against him and as none such was given the order of dismissal dated 6-9-1950 is illegal. He accordingly prays that a writ might be issued under Art. 226 quashing the order dated 6-9-1950. The contention of the respondent is that the notice dated 27-2-1950 given to the petitioner was a sufficient compliance of the requirements of the law and that further the services of the petitioner were terminated by payment of a month's wages in accordance with the terms of the services and that consequently the order dated 6-9-1950 was not open to question under Art. 311 of the Constitution. It was also urged that the petitioner had a remedy by way of a suit and that, therefore, the application for the issue of a writ of certiorari was not maintainable.

(3) The first question that arises for determination is whether the order dated 6-9-1950 is in accordance with the provisions of the Safeguarding of National Security Rules. Rules 3 and 4 which alone are relevant for the present purpose are as follows:

"A member of the Railway service, who, in the opinion of the competent authority is engaged in or is reasonably suspected to be engaged in subversive activities or is associated with others in subversive activities in such a manner as to raise doubts about his reliability may be compulsorily retired from service;

Provided that a member of the railway service shall not be so retired, unless the competent authority is satisfied that his retention in the public service is prejudicial to national security, and unless where the competent authority is a head of a department, the prior approval of the Governor General has been obtained.

4. Where in the opinion of the competent authority, there are reasonable grounds for believing that a member of the railway service is liable to compulsory retirement under rule 3 it shall—

(a) by order, in writing, require the Government servant to proceed on such leave as may be admissible to him and from such date as may be specified in the order;

(b) by notice in writing inform him of the action proposed to be taken in regard to him under rule 3;

(c) give him a reasonable opportunity of showing cause against that action; and

(d) before passing a final order under R. 3 take into consideration any representation made by him in this behalf."

(4) The contention of Mr. K. V. Venkatasubramania Aiyar the learned advocate for the petitioner is that before a final order could be passed under rule 3 there must be a notice in terms of rule 4, clause (b) informing him of the action proposed to be taken against him and giving him an opportunity under rule 4(c) for showing cause against the proposed action and as that had not been done, the order of dismissal dated 6-9-1950 was in contravention of the rules and, therefore, illegal and he relies on a decision of the Privy Council reported in — 'High Commissioner for India v. I. M. Lall', 1948 F. C. R. 44 (PC) in support of this proposition. That was a case in which the validity of an order of the Punjab Government dismissing an officer of the Indian Civil Service came up for consideration. On 2-9-1937 the Punjab Government framed a number of charges against one Mr. Lall, a District Judge belonging to the Indian Civil Service and gave intimation to him that a departmental enquiry would be held in respect of those charges. He was asked to furnish a written statement of defence which he did on 9-1-1938. Then there was an enquiry and acting on the report of the enquiry, the Government removed Mr. Lall from service by an order dated 31-8-1939.

He then filed a suit challenging the validity of the order of dismissal on the ground 'inter alia' that no notice had been given to him of the proposed action and no opportunity afforded to show against the same as required by S. 240 (3) of the Government of India Act, 1935, and that the procedure was illegal and the order was vitiated thereby. Section 240(3) is in these terms:

"No such person as aforesaid shall be dismissed or reduced in rank until he has been given a reasonable opportunity of showing cause against the action proposed to be taken in regard to him."

The suit was decreed by the Punjab High Court on the ground that there was no proper inquiry. Vide — 'I. M. Lall v. Secretary of State', AIR 1944 Lah 240. The matter was taken on appeal to the Federal Court. The learned Judges disagreed with the finding of the High Court that there was no proper enquiry but held by a majority that on a proper construction of S. 240(3) of the Government of India Act, 1935, there must have been a further notice to the civil servant informing him of the order proposed to be passed, that an opportunity should have been given to him to make representation against the proposed action and that final order could be passed only thereafter and as that was not done the order was illegal.

The learned Judges observed as follows:

"But the real point of the sub-section is in our judgment that the person who is to be dismissed or reduced must know that that punishment is proposed as the punishment for certain acts or omissions on his part and must be told the grounds on which it is proposed to take such action and must be given a reasonable opportunity of showing cause why such punishment should not be imposed. That in our judgment involves in all cases where there is an enquiry and as a result thereof some authority definitely proposes dismissal or reduction in rank, that the person concerned shall be told in full, or in adequately summarised form, the results of that enquiry, and the findings of the enquiring officer, and be given an opportunity of showing cause with that information why he should not suffer the proposed dismissal or reduction in rank." Vide — 'Secy. of State v. I. M. Lall', 1945-2-Mad L J 270 (FC).

(5) Against this decision there was a further appeal to the Privy Council. In affirming the judgment of the Federal Court, Lord Thankerton observed that there was a distinction between giving information to the civil servant about the "grounds on which it is proposed to take action" and giving an opportunity of "showing cause against the action proposed to be taken in regard to him"; that the former would be appropriate in a stage anterior to the enquiry, the object being to afford adequate opportunity of defending oneself while the latter would arise only after the enquiry was held and punishment decided on; and further observed "In the opinion of their Lordships no action is proposed within the meaning of sub-section until a definite conclusion has been come to on the charges and actual punishment to follow is provisionally determined on. Prior to that stage the charges are unproved and the suggested punishments are merely hypothetical. It is on that stage being reached that the statute gives the civil servant the opportunity for which sub-sec. (3) makes provision. Their Lordships would only add that they see no difficulty in the statutory opportunity being reasonably afforded at more than one stage. If the civil servant has been through an enquiry under rule 55 of the Civil Services (Classification Control and Appeal) Rules, it would not be reasonable that he should ask for a repetition of that stage, if duly carried out, but that would not exhaust his statutory right and he would still be entitled to represent against the punishment proposed as the result of the findings of the inquiry." Vide — 'High Commissioner for India v. I. M. Lall', 1948 F. C. R. 44 (PC).

(6) In other words, in a case governed by S. 240(3) there will be two stages; firstly an inquiry after notice into the charges against the civil servant and this is the rule of natural justice that no person should be condemned without a hearing and secondly after the enquiry is over and a punishment decided on a further notice in terms of sub-sec. (3) informing the civil servant of the action proposed to be taken and giving him an opportunity to show cause against that action and this is a statutory requirement.

(7) It is argued for the petitioner that this decision will govern the present case because rule 4(b) of the Safeguarding of National Security Rules provides that the servant should be informed in writing "of the action proposed to be taken in regard to him under rule 3", that "reasonable opportunity of showing cause against that action" ought to be given under 4(c) and that under rule (4) any representation made by him in that behalf should be taken into consideration before final order is passed under rule 3. Mr. Nambiar the learned advocate for the respondent could not convincingly assail the soundness of this contention but he argued that the notice dated 27-2-1950 satisfies the requirements of rule (4), because it stated that the petitioner was liable to have the services terminated under rule (3) but this is merely a statement of the effect of rule (3) and not any intimation of a decision by the authorities that the petitioner's services would be terminated. Reliance was also placed on paragraph 3 of the notice but this must be read along with paragraphs 4 and 5 and they clearly show that no action had been decided on.

Indeed when it is remembered that a proper notice under rule 4(b) can only be after an inquiry is held and a punishment tentatively proposed, the notice dated 27-2-1950 calling upon the petitioner to give his explanation for the charges can in no manner be regarded as falling under rule 4(b). In our opinion the present case falls directly within the principles laid down by the Privy Council in — 'High Commissioners for India v. I. M. Lall', 1948 F. C. R. 44 (PC) and the order dated 6-9-1950 must be held to be illegal.

(8) Mr. K. V. Venkatasubramania Aiyar also argued that in case his construction of rule 4 of Safeguarding of National Security Rules was not accepted he would rely on Art. 311(2) which re-enacts the provisions of S. 240(3) of the Government of India Act, 1935 and contend that the Safeguarding of National Security Rules would be void as against Art. 311(2). As we have held that rule 4 of the Safeguarding of National Security Rules does not differ from S. 240(3) or Art. 311(2) on this point it is unnecessary to discuss this aspect any further.

(9) A further point was taken by Mr. Nambiar that questions relating to the propriety of the notice and the legality of dismissal did not arise in this case because under the rules applicable to railway establishment the services of the petitioner could be terminated on a month's notice; that under the notice dated 6-9-1950 a month's pay in lieu of notice was given to him, that in substance it was a case of termination of services and not of dismissal or removal and that accordingly Art. 311 did not apply. He referred to rule 148(3) and (4) of the Indian Railway Establishment Code which run as follows:

"(3) Other ((non-pensionable) railway servants. The service of other (non-pensionable) railway servants shall be liable to termination on notice on either side for the periods shown below. Such notice is not however required in cases of summary dismissal or discharge under the provisions of service agreements, retirement on attaining the age of superannuation and termination of service due to mental or physical incapacity:

(a) Probationary officers and officers on probation other than those in the medical department—3 months' notice;

(b) Officers on probation in the Medical department—one month's notice;

(c) Permanent Gazetted officers—6 months' notice;

(d) Permanent Non-Gazetted employees—1 month's notice;

(4) In lieu of the notice prescribed in this rule, it shall be permissible on the part of the Railway Administration to terminate the services of a railway servant by paying him the pay for the period of notice."

It is common ground that the petitioner is a permanent non-gazetted employee falling within clause (d) of rule 3 and it is accordingly contended that his services could be validly terminated under that rule and must be taken to have been in fact so terminated. Reliance was also placed on Art. 310 of the Constitution which generally enacts that civil posts under the Union or State are held on pleasure and it is argued that rule 148 is in accordance with Art. 310 & is, therefore, valid. Mr. K. V. Venkatasubramania Aiyar contends in reply that Art. 310 and rule 148 must both be read subject to the statutory rights declared in Art. 311; that the respondent took action avowedly only under the Safeguarding of National Security Rules, that the order is one of compulsory retirement under those rules and not a termination of service under rule 148; and that its validity must be judged by the provisions of rule 4 and of Art. 311.

(10) Article 310 has a long history behind it. It has its origin in the rule well established in British Jurisprudence that all public offices are held at the pleasure of the Crown. Two consequences result from this rule. The services of the civil servant can be terminated without assigning any reason and even in the case of wrongful dismissal no action could be maintained at law for damages, the theory being that the King can do no wrong. In — Shenton v. Smith, 1895 A. C. 229, this rule was applied to an appointment made by the Government of Western Australia and it was held that the office was held at pleasure and could be terminated at will and no action for damages would lie for wrongful dismissal. Lord Hobhouse in delivering the judgment of the Judicial Committee observed that:

"Neither principle nor authority has been adduced to show that in the employment and dismissal of public servants the colonial Government stands on any different footing than the Home Government."

In — Dunn v. Reg, (1896)-1-Q. B. 116, it was held that even if there was a contract of employment for a period and it was terminated before the period without cause, no action for damages will lie. The following observations of Lord Watson in — De Doshe v. Reg, see footnote in 1896-1-Q. B. 116 at p. 118 were quoted and followed:

"In the second place I am of opinion that such a concluded contract if it had been made, must have been held to have imported into it the condition that the Crown has the power to dismiss. Further I am of opinion that, if any authority representing the Crown were to exclude such a power by express stipulation, that would be a violation of the public policy of the country and could not derogate from the power of the Crown."

This decision was followed in — In the matter of the petitions of Right of Charles Lawrence Hales, (1918) 34 T.L.R. 314, where there was again a special agreement and this decision was affirmed on appeal in — Hales v. Reg, (1918) 34 T. L. R. 589.

In — Denning v. Secretary of State for India in Council, (1920) 37 T. L. R. 138, the plaintiff was employed by the Secretary of State for India on a contract for a period of five years. There was a premature termination of the services and there was no misconduct. It was held that the plaintiff could not maintain an action for damages. In — Gould v. Stuart, (1896) A. C. 575, the Judicial Committee, while affirming the general rule that Crown servant could be dismissed at pleasure, held that where there was a statute prescribing terms of services and mode of dismissal that would govern the rights of the parties. The law is thus summed up in Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol. VI, page 608 para 782,

"Except where it is otherwise provided by statute, all public officers and servants of the Crown hold their appointments at the pleasure of the Crown and all in general, are subject to the dismissal at any time without cause assigned; nor will an action for wrongful dismissal be entertained even though a special contract be proved."

In India, these rules had been applied to offices held under the Government of India. Mr. Ilbert states the law in the following terms: (Vide Ilbert's Government of India, 1916 Edn.): "The tenure of persons serving under the Government of India or under a local Government is presumably tenure during the pleasure of the Crown."

This principle has been affirmed in all the statutes relating to the Government of India. Section 96-B(1) of the Act of 1919 runs as follows:

"Subject to the provisions of this Act and of Rules made thereunder, every person in the civil service of the Crown in India holds office during His Majesty's pleasure and may be employed in any manner required by a proper authority within the scope of his duty, but no person in that service may be dismissed by any authority subordinate to that by which he was appointed and the Secretary of State in Council may, (except so far as he may provide by rules to the contrary) reinstate any person in that service who has been dismissed."

Section 240(1) of the Government of India Act, 1935 is in these terms:

"Except as expressly provided by this Act, every person who is a member of civil service of the Crown in India, or holds any civil post under the Crown in India, holds office during His Majesty's pleasure."

(11) This provision is even more emphatic than S. 96-B(1) of the 1919 Act because the qualifying words "And of rules made thereunder" occurring in S. 96-B(1) on which it was possible to contend that the power of dismissal at pleasure could be controlled by the rules, have been omitted. Art. 310(1) of the Constitution re-enacts this principle with verbal alterations not affecting the substance of the matter. It is as follows:

"Except as expressly provided by this Constitution, every person who is a member of the defence service or of a civil service of the Union or of an all India service or holds any post connected with defence or any civil post under the Union holds office during the pleasure of the President, and every person who is a member of a civil service of a State or holds any civil post under a State holds office during the pleasure of the Governor or, as the case may be, the Rajpramukh of the State."

Thus the rule that civil posts under the Government are held at pleasure is part of the law of this country and it involves the consequence that there can be termination of service at will. Article 310 provides that this rule is subject to the exceptions "expressly provided by this Constitution". Such exceptions are provided in Art. 310(2) which provides for compensation being paid when a contract for a period is terminated for no misconduct of the civil servant, in Art. 311(1) which enacts that a person cannot be dismissed by an authority subordinate to that by which he is appointed, and in Art. 311(2) which prescribes that a particular procedure should be followed before a person is dismissed or removed from service.

Subject to these statutory restrictions the general rule embodied in Art. 310(1) that all offices under the Government are held at pleasure will govern the rights of the parties. In — 'Venkatarao v. Secretary of State', ILR (1937) Mad 532 the facts were that a civil servant was dismissed without there having been a proper enquiry in accordance with the rules framed under S. 96-B of the 1919 Act. He filed a suit for damages for wrongful dismissal. It was held by the Judicial Committee that as the office was held at pleasure the breach of the rules would not confer a right of action on the civil servant for damages for wrongful dismissal. The decision in — 'Shenton v. Smith', (1895) AC 229 was followed. In — 'Rangachari v. Secretary of State for India', ILR (1937) Mad 517 a police officer was dismissed by an authority subordinate to one which appointed him and it was held that the order of dismissal was illegal as being in contravention of the statutory provision enacted in proviso to S. 96-B.

In — 'High Commissioner for India v. I. M. Lall', 1948 F. C. R. 44 (PC) already referred to it was held that the dismissal was illegal and inoperative because it contravened the statutory prescription laid down in S. 240(3) of the Government of India Act, 1935.

(12) It will follow from the above that the Government has a right to terminate the services of a civil servant at will and the only restrictions on this power are those expressly enacted in the Constitution. There is accordingly considerable force in the argument of the respondent that he has a right to terminate the services of the employee under rule 148 of the Indian Railway Establishment Code and that there is nothing in the Constitution which restricts such a right.

(13) The question still remains whether this is a case of termination of service under rule 148 of the Indian Railway Establishment Code. The contention of the learned advocate for the petitioner is that the order dated 6-9-1950 is one passed only under the Safeguarding of National Security Rules and its validity must accordingly be determined with reference to those rules. We think that this contention is well founded. The notice dated 27-2-1950 is expressly issued under rule 2 of the Safeguarding of National Security Rules, 1949. It purports to follow the procedure prescribed in rule 4. Four charges are framed against the petitioner. He is asked to submit his explanation and he is told that his representations would be referred to a committee of advisers set up by the Government of India for this purpose. The order dated 6-9-1950 also expressly recites that the services are terminated under rule 3 of the Railway Services Safeguarding of National Security Rules. In the counter affidavit filed by the General Manager it is again expressly stated that action against the petitioner had been taken under the Railway Services Safeguarding of National Security Rules, that the procedure prescribed by the rules had been properly followed, and that the rules have not become void under the Constitution. It is not pleaded anywhere that any action was taken under rule 148 of the Indian Railway Establishment Code. If action was intended to be taken under that rule then there was no need to frame charges, call for explanation and send it for consideration by a special committee. Even the service agreement of the petitioner has not been produced before us.

(14) It appears to us to be amply clear from the record that the respondent did only what he purported to do under the notice and that was to take action against the petitioner under the Security Rules. Reliance was also placed by Mr. Nambiar on the fact that a month's salary was paid to the petitioner, but under rule 7 of the Safeguarding of National Security Rules, it is provided that compensation should be paid when final orders are passed under rule 3. The payment is, therefore, a solatium offered under the above rules under which the petitioner has been removed from service. Mr. Nambiar relied on the following observations occurring in — 'Nagpur Electric Co. v. Anand Vishnu', AIR 1944 Nag 66 at p. 70,

"The termination of the contract in due course, according to its terms is neither discharge, dismissal or release nor leaving employment."

We agree that when the services of an employee are terminated he cannot be held to have been dismissed. But whether in fact it was a case of termination of services or dismissal is a question of fact and that must be determined on a consideration of the circumstances of the case.

(15) We are of opinion that the order dated 6-9-1950 is not one terminating services but one of compulsory retirement falling within r. 3 of the Safeguarding of National Security Rules and as the procedure prescribed in rule 4 has not been followed, it is illegal and inoperative.

(16) Mr. Nambiar finally contended that this application is not maintainable as the petitioner can enforce his rights in a regular suit and that where there is another remedy open no relief should be granted in a writ of certiorari. It is true that this Court will not ordinarily interfere with an order where there is another adequate remedy available to the party. This, however, is a rule of discretion for the guidance of the Court and not a limitation on its powers. As observed by Das J. in — 'Rashid Ahmed v. Municipal Board, Kairana', 1950 SCR 566: AIR 1950 SC 163 at p. 165 the "existence of an adequate legal remedy is a thing to be taken into consideration in the matter of granting writs". In the — 'King v. Postmaster General; Ex parte Carmichael', (1928) 1 K. B. 291 Avory J. dealing with this very contention observed as follows:

"But even if that remedy is open to her, it is undoubtedly good law that if the application for a certiorari is made by a party aggrieved, then it ought to be granted 'ex debito justitiae' and the court has not the general discretion which it would have when the application is made by one of the public who is not personally concerned. That was decided long ago in the case of — 'Reg v. Surrey Justices', (1870) 5 Q B 466 and on that principle, even though she has a remedy by appeal in this case, I am prepared to agree that the certiorari should go, seeing that the application is being made by the applicant as the party aggrieved."

(17) The law is thus stated in Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol. 9, page 878 para 1481:

"Although the writ is not of course it will nevertheless be granted 'ex debito justitiae' to quash proceedings which the Court has power to quash, where it is shown that the Court below has acted without jurisdiction or in excess of jurisdiction, if the application is made by an aggrieved party and not merely by one of the public and if the conduct of the party applying has not been such as to disentitle him to relief, and this is the case even though certiorari is taken away by statute and although there is an alternative remedy."

(18) As the question involved is one of right procedure to be followed in exercise of the powers conferred under the Safeguarding of National Security Rules and as the rights of the petitioner have been clearly infringed, this is a fit case in which the writ must issue. The order dated 6-9-1950 is accordingly set aside. The petitioner will be entitled to his costs, advocate's fee Rs. 100.

A/D.H.

Petition allowed.

A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 59

SUEBA RAO J.

Mannarghat Union Motor Services Ltd., Mannarghat, South Malabar, Petitioner v. Regional Transport Authority, Malabar and others, Respondents.

Civil Misc. Petn. No. 4436 of 1951, D/- 4-9-1951.

(a) Constitution of India, Art. 226 — Submission to jurisdiction — Effect.

Where the petitioners submitted to the jurisdiction of the Regional Transport Authority, it is too late to question the jurisdiction of the Tribunal to which they have submitted on the ground that the proceedings of the Regional Transport Authority were illegal as the earlier proceedings legally instituted and pursued were not finally disposed of. Failure to object to jurisdiction before the lower court is a bar to obtaining a writ of certiorari, whether the objection to jurisdiction is based on a pure point of law or based on facts which were or should have been within the knowledge of the petitioners during the proceedings in the lower Court. AIR 1927 Mad. 130 FB Foll. (Para 1)

(b) Motor Vehicles Act (1939) S. 57(7) — Reasons — Nature of.

A Regional Transport Authority is a tribunal with a duty to exercise its jurisdiction judicially. The provisions of S. 57(7) indicate beyond any reasonable doubt that a Regional Transport Authority should give reasons to the issue of a permit clearly in such a manner that an Appellate Court may be in a position to canvass the correctness of the reasons given by it. Where the reason given by the Regional Transport Authority was that a certain person was the most suitable man, the reason is one not contemplated by the provisions of the Act. (Para 2)

Anno: M. V. Act, S. 57 N. 1.

K. Kutti Krishna Menon; V. Balakrishna Eradi and P. P. Menon, for Petitioner; The Govt. Pleader, P. R. Pakri Sankar and T. Changanvarayan, for Respondents.

REFERENCE .....

(27) 50 Mad 130: (AIR 1927 Mad 130 FB)

/Para

1

ORDER: This is an application for the issue of a Writ of Certiorari to quash the orders of the Regional Transport Authority, Malabar, The Central Road Traffic Board and the State of Madras. The petitioners are the Mannarghat Union Motor Services Ltd. They are plying buses with stage carriage permits in South Malabar since the year 1936. The Regional Transport Authority published a notification R. No. 23589 A. 2/49 on 24th February 1949 inviting application for the issue of a temporary permit for a bus on Calicut-Areakode via Feroke and Kundotty. Two persons applied for the permit but the proceedings were dropped as in April 1949 the Regional Transport Officer and Secretary stated that as the Central Road Traffic Board directed the Regional Transport Authority to issue pucca permits for stage carriages in the same route the notification was cancelled. The Regional Transport Authority, Malabar, issued a notice dated 16th May 1949 under Sec. 57(2) of the Madras Motor Vehicles Act inviting fresh applications for the grant of stage carriage permits for the said route. In response to this notification, the petitioners and two others applied for permits. It may be mentioned that the fourth respondent is not one of the applicants.

On 11th June 1949, the Regional Transport Authority, Malabar, issued another notification under Sec. 57(3) of the Madras Motor Vehicles Act calling for objections, if any, for the grant of permits to the applicants. Objections were filed. But curiously those proceedings were not pursued but it is represented to me that they were dropped as the Government issued directions to the Regional Transport Authority that no new routes should be opened without the previous permission of the Central Road Traffic Board. But the petitioners were not informed of this notification or the dropping off the proceedings pursuant to the directions. On 4th April 1950, the petitioners received another notice under Sec. 57(2) of the Madras Motor Vehicles Act stating that the Regional Transport Authority, Malabar will receive applications on or before 2nd May 1950 for the grant of stage carriage permits over the same route. The petitioners, the 4th respondent and others applied. Notice under S. 57(3) of the Act was duly issued and representations were called for. No representation was made either by the petitioners or by any other person that the proceedings were illegal as the previous proceedings duly instituted under the provisions of the Act were not finally disposed of. The Regional Transport Authority passed a laconic order.

"Nos. 4, 9 and 15 do not press. Granted to M/s C. C. Automobiles Ltd. as the most suitable. Time for production of vehicles two months."

Against that, an appeal was filed to the Central Road Traffic Board, and that was dismissed without any reasons. When a revision was filed, the Government of Madras declined to interfere with the Subordinate Tribunal's orders. Mr. Kuttikrishna Menon, the learned counsel for the petitioners, raised before me two points. The proceedings of the Regional Transport Authority initiated by its notification dated 4th April 1950 are illegal as the earlier proceedings legally instituted and pursued were not finally disposed of. The Regional Transport Authority gave a reason which on the face of it cannot be tested by a Court of appeal and therefore the said order did not comply with the provisions of Sec. 57(7) of the Act. I cannot say that there is no force in the first argument of the learned counsel for the petitioners but I do not propose to express my final opinion thereon as on the facts it is clear that the petitioners submitted to the jurisdiction of the Regional Transport Authority.

If the petitioners thought that the Regional Transport Authority had no jurisdiction, they should have raised that plea without taking a chance of getting a decision in their favour. Designedly or ignorantly they kept quiet or perhaps they did not want to displease the Regional Transport Authority, or they expected that it would decide in their favour. It is too late to question the jurisdiction of a Tribunal to which they have submitted. A Full Bench of this Court held in — 'Latchmanan Chettiar v. Corporation of Madras', 50 Mad. 130 (FB) that failure to object to jurisdiction before the lower Court is a bar to obtaining a writ of certiorari, whether the objection to jurisdiction is based on a pure point of law or based on facts which were or should have been within the knowledge of the applicants during the proceedings in the lower court. The said judgment is binding on me.

(2) But I cannot say that the second contention of the learned counsel is without substance. It is now settled law and it has not been disputed either by the Government Pleader or the counsel for the fourth respondent that a Regional Transport Authority is a tribunal with a duty to exercise its jurisdiction judicially. Sec. 64 of the Motor Vehicles Act confers a right of appeal to an aggrieved party against the order of a Regional Transport Authority to the Central Road Traffic Board. Sec. 57(7) of the Act specifically states that if a Regional Transport Authority refuses to issue a permit it must give in writing its reasons for its refusal. The provisions of the Act indicate beyond any reasonable doubt that a Regional Transport Authority should give reasons to the issue of a permit clearly in such a manner that an Appellate Court may be in a position to canvass the correctness of the reasons given by it. Otherwise the right of appeal conferred by the Act will become otiose.

The reason given by the Regional Transport Authority is a curious one. It says that the fourth respondent is the most suitable man. No Appellate Court can question the correctness of such a general statement. A person may be suitable for many reasons — reasons with which one court may agree and another may disagree. It is incumbent upon such a Tribunal whose order is subject to appeal to give reasons succinctly for its order to enable the Appellate Court to test the correctness of that finding. I cannot therefore hold that the reason given by the Regional Transport Authority is a reason contemplated by the provisions of the Act.

(3) The next question is what is the procedure to be adopted at this stage. Though the petitioners are precluded from raising the question of jurisdiction in view of the Full Bench decision, it is apparent that the entire procedure followed from the beginning to the end is vitiated by some confusion introduced in the proceedings by the direction given by the Government under Sec. 43(A) of the Act. In the circumstances, I think the proper and the only course is to quash the entire proceedings and to direct the Regional Transport Authority to issue permits afresh in accordance with law. In the circumstances each party will bear its costs.

A/D.H.

Order accordingly.

A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 60

RAJAMANNAR C. J. AND VENKATARAMA AYYAR J.

Gosukonda Venkatanarasayya and others, Petitioners v. The State of Madras, represented by the Collector of Nellore, Respondent.

Civil Misc. Petn. No. 5671 of 1951, D/- 20-3-1952.

Constitution of India, Art. 226 — Other remedy open — Petitioner's contentions that grant in their favour being of less than a village, Mad. Act 26 of 1948 did not apply and that the proceeding under colour of Act are not legal — Proper and adequate remedy of the petitioner held was by way of a suit and not by a petition under Art. 226 — (Madras Estates Land Act (26 of 1948), S. 9).

(Para 1)

V. Vedantachariar, for Petitioners; Advocate General, for Respondent.

RAJAMANNAR C. J.: The petitioners' case is that the grant in their favour comprised less than a village and therefore it is not an estate still less an under-tenure estate within the meaning of the Madras Estates Land Act. If the grant is less than a village then obviously Madras Act XXVI of 1948 can have no application whatever. S. 9 of that Act provides for the determination after inquiry of the question whether any inam village is an inam estate or not. Presumably, when the contention is that the grant does not comprise a village, the proceedings under S. 9 would not be strictly open to the aggrieved party. There is no other provision in the Act under which a special Tribunal has been set up to decide a dispute of the nature which arises in this case, viz, whether a particular grant comprises less than a village. In these circumstances, in our opinion, the aggrieved party will have a right of suit as he would have a good cause of action when proceedings are taken under colour of an Act which does not apply to the facts of the case. We have already held in petitions arising under Madras Act XXX of 1947 that in similar circumstances, the aggrieved party will have a right of suit. We accordingly hold that the proper and adequate remedy for the petitioners is by way of a suit. As they have such a remedy it is not necessary to invoke our jurisdiction under Art. 226 of the Constitution. The application is therefore dismissed.

(2) The learned Advocate General states that the Government will not take the objection under S. 80 Civil Procedure Code in case a suit is filed.

B/R.G.D.

Application dismissed.

A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 61

MACK AND SOMASUNDARAM JJ.

In re Ravipati Sitaramayya, Appellant.

Criminal Appeal No. 104 of 1951, D/- 5-12-1951.

(a) Criminal P.C. (1898) Ss. 162 and 164 — Practice — Murder case — Desirability of having statement of accused on first questioning recorded under S. 164.

Per Mack J.: The shutting out under S. 162 of what an accused person tells a police officer particularly in a case of murder when first questioned, opens the way for all kinds of statements being made in the committing Magistrate's Court and also at the trial in conformity with advised lines of defence, which are, of course, impossible to verify and places the prosecution at a great disadvantage. In cases of this kind, the police would do well to take an accused person before a Magistrate, whether he makes a confession or not, and have a statement recorded under S. 164, so that the accused person can be fixed to one explanation when placed in a position which becomes incriminating unless he can offer a satisfactory explanation for his behaviour.

(Para 3)

Anno: Cri. P. C., S. 162 N. 2; S. 164 N. 2.

(b) Criminal P.C. (1898) S. 164 — Retracted confession — Conviction on retracted and uncorroborated confession.

Per Mack J.: There is no authority to the effect that conviction on an uncorroborated but retracted confession before a Magistrate is illegal. Each case has to be dealt with on its own facts. Where a man, whose wife has been strangled to death at night in a house occupied solely by them has voluntarily confessed before a Magistrate to his guilt, he should not be acquitted.

(Para 4)

Per Somasundaram J.: The question whether a retracted confession can be acted upon without material corroboration will arise only when the confession is true and can safely be acted upon. Where, though the confession is a voluntary one, it contains allegations which contradict the main aspect of the prosecution case, it is unsafe to act upon it without further corroboration.

(Para 16)

Anno: Cri. P. C., S. 164 N. 18.

(c) Criminal P.C. (1898) Ss. 429 and 378 — Difference of opinion among Judges — Reference to third Judge — Duty of such Judge — Method of approach.

Obiter: The system of Referred trials from the moffussil tried by a Sessions Judge and assessors, with whose individual opinions the trial Judge is free to disagree, places an extremely heavy burden on criminal benches, who do not themselves hear the witnesses. It is inevitable that differences of opinion should arise in the discharge of this extremely heavy responsibility in which two Judges finding themselves unable to agree on a difficult case, require and welcome the opinion of a third Judge to alleviate their responsibilities. It is in this spirit that differences of opinion in criminal cases should be resolved and it is also the method of approach the statute requires.

(Para 8)

It is the duty of the Judge who is asked to resolve the difference of opinion to examine the whole evidence himself and come to a final judgment after giving due consideration and weight to the reasons given by the two Judges on whose difference of opinion the case comes before him for his opinion. Neither S. 378 nor S. 429 contemplates the dice being loaded heavily in favour of either view.

(Para 18)

The opinion expressed by some Judges, viz. that the normal disposal by a third Judge should be one of agreement with the opinion of acquittal, is not correct. It would be tantamount to a judgment of acquittal in practice prevailing over a judgment for conviction. (1887) All. W.N. 125 and ILR (1949) 1 Cal. 43, Approved; Observations of Rajagopalan J. in R. T. No. 31 of 1951 (Mad.) and Mahmood J. in (1886) All. W.N. 275, to the contrary, Disapproved.

(Para 5)

Per Mack J.: (Obiter; Somasundaram J. Contra) The third Judge cannot pass a death sentence in a case, where the Judge favouring conviction thinks a sentence of transportation is appropriate with the other Judge favouring acquittal, on the simple ground that it is only a Bench of two Judges, who should confirm a death sentence in agreement with each other. Although the law may not be specific on this point, this extreme can always be guarded against by the Bench referring the case expressing their opinion that in the event of the conviction being confirmed, the sentence of transportation is the appropriate one, in which case, the third Judge would be bound by such an opinion as regards which there would be no difference for him to resolve. 27 Mad. 271, Disapproved. (Para 8)

Per Somasundaram J. (Obiter). When on a difference of opinion a case is referred to a third Judge no fetter can be placed on the third Judge. He is at liberty to express and act upon the opinion which he himself arrives at. If he chooses he can pass a sentence of death, even though one Judge favours an acquittal and the other gives a sentence of transportation for life when convicting the accused. (Para 19)

(Note: See Note after Judgment of Somasundaram J.).

Anno: Cri. P. C., S. 378 N. 2; S. 429 N. 3.

V. Rajagopalachari, J. Krishnamurthy and A. Sambasiva Rao, for Appellant; Asst. Public Prosecutor, for the State.

REFERENCES: Courtwar/Chronological/ Paras
(86) 1886 All WN 275 6
(87) 1887 All WN 125 6, 18
(49) ILR (1949) 1 Cal 43 8, 18
(04) 27 Mad 271: (14 Mad LJ 226) 7, 8
(51) R T No. 31 of 1951 (Mad) 5

MACK J.: This is a case, which has given us anxious consideration. Appellant, a man aged 43, has been found guilty under S. 302 I. P. C. of the murder of his 17 year old wife, Balakotamma, by strangling her to death during the night of 29-5-1950 in his house in Vetapalam village in which there were admittedly no other inmates. The next morning appellant asked a washerman (P. W. 7) to take a message to his wife's uncles, P. Ws. 1 and 5 and her maternal uncle and foster father P. W. 6 who all lived at Vadlamudi, a village three miles away to the effect that she was found lying speechless and unconscious in his house. On receipt of this message at 7 A. M. P. Ws. 1, 5 and 6 hastened to Vetapalem and found Balakotamma lying dead on a cot.

According to P. W. 1, appellant when questioned first made no reply and then denied knowledge of anything. There were no visible injuries on the body. Suspecting that appellant and his concubine one Subbamma had poisoned her, they made a complaint to this effect Ex. P. 1 at the Vadlamudi Police station at midday. The only evidence that the village munsif of Vetapalam (P. W. 9) gives is that he was a Panchayatdar at the inquest held by the Circle Inspector (P. W. 11) who reached Vetapalam at 4 p.m. Near the corpse was lying a rice pounder M. O. 3. On the body was a blouse M. O. 1 put on, as is described, inside out and a sari M. O. 2. P. W. 1 says when he saw it was slightly wet. Postmortem held by Miss Annapoornama, Assistant Surgeon of Tenali the following morning at 8 a.m. showed that death was due to asphyxia as a result of strangulation. An echymosed patch was found on the neck extending upwards to the lower jaw and downwards to the upper part of both collar bones. The trachea and larynx were congested, oesophagus echymosed and the hyoid bone broken. There can be no doubt about the cause of death, which was strangulation by great pressure on the throat.

(2) The Circle Inspector returned the post mortem certificate to Vetapalam and arrested the accused on the 2nd June. He produced him before the Sub-Magistrate of Tenali (P. W. 4) on the evening of the 3rd of June with a requisition Ex. P. 3 to record his confession. As it was after lock up time, the Magistrate asked him to be produced the following morning and he was then kept in the sub-jail after being given the necessary warnings. He was produced again before the Magistrate on 5-6-1951 and after giving clear warnings to the appellant in full conformity not only with S. 164 Cr. P. C. but also with Rule 85 of the Criminal Rules of Practice, the Magistrate recorded a long detailed confession from the appellant in which he confessed that he squeezed his wife's throat, while she was asleep with his own hands. Appellant's statement was to the effect that he returned home at mid-night and found his wife asleep, that in view of domestic troubles she was giving him he strangled her, that he slept in the house till the morning, that he fetched his mother, that neighbours gathered and that he sent word to his brothers-in-law. He said that one of them, when he came to the house, kicked him on the head, which struck against the wall and poked him with a stick near the abdomen. The domestic troubles he detailed there related to complaints his wife made to her brothers who continually interfered in his domestic life and when he protested his wife scolded him and said she would get him killed by her brothers. The gist of his confession is that he killed her thinking that after doing so, he would also die at the hands of the Government, rather than be killed by her brothers. This confession was retracted in the committing court where the appellant pleaded that he was coerced by the Circle Inspector and the Deputy Superintendent of Police into making the confession, that the wording was not his and that he repeated what he was asked to say like a parrot. He adopted the same attitude at his trial. There is no other evidence against the appellant.

(3) A curious feature about the confession is that it mentions nothing about the concubine Subbamma, who the appellant continued to keep after he married Balakotamma as his second wife three years ago, after his first wife died. (After discussing the evidence, the Judgment proceeded).

The main contention of Mr. Rajagopalachari for the appellant is that no conviction is possible in the absence of any evidence to corroborate the confession which, he has asked us to reject as not being a true and voluntary one in view of its mentioning several facts, opposed to the evidence in the case. I am myself unable to see any reason for rejecting the finding of the learned Sessions Judge that this confession by the appellant despite its suppression of the existence of Subbamma, and the possibility of other inaccuracies of fact set out there, was voluntarily made by the appellant on being confronted with the results of the post mortem examination.

Mr. Rajagopalachari has suggested in his able argument the possibility of the concubine Subbamma, having entered the house in the absence of the appellant, and having strangled Balakotamma without the assistance or even the knowledge of the appellant who when he returned home and found her dead, in consternation at his discovery, with a moral conviction as to the guilty person, adopted the course he did of sending a message to his mother and his wife's relations only the next morning, and then making this confession, when the post-mortem showed the cause of death, in the manner he did, to shield the real culprit, who was his concubine Subbamma. The material does indeed show that Subbamma did have a strong grievance against Balakotamma whose resentment and protests at her continued association with the appellant had provoked mediation and led to solemn undertakings by her to have nothing to do with the appellant. I do not find any suggestion in the learned Sessions Judge's judgment of any such theory, which has been made for the first time in this court on the basis of the retracted confession and the statements made by the appellant in the committing court and at his trial.

A defect, in my view, in the material placed before the court arises from the unfortunate state of our law, under which the first statement made by the appellant to the police regarding the discovery of his wife's corpse, the time at which he found it and what he did immediately afterwards is completely shut out in evidence under S. 162 Cr. P. C. The shutting out of what an accused person tells a police officer particularly in a case of this kind, when first questioned, opens the way for all kinds of statements being made in the committing magistrate's court and also at the trial in conformity with advised lines of defence, which are, of course, impossible to verify and places the prosecution at a great disadvantage. The view that I have no hesitation in taking is that in cases of this kind, the police would do well to take an accused person before a Magistrate, whether he makes a confession or not, and have a statement recorded under S. 164 Cr. P. C. so that the accused person can be fixed to one explanation when placed in a position which becomes incriminating unless he can offer a satisfactory explanation for his behaviour. This is a case in which a man and his wife are the sole occupants of a house, in which the wife is found suddenly dead and post mortem has proved conclusively that it is the result of violent strangulation. A prima facie strong suspicion points to the husband. It is in this background that the confession made before the magistrate, without any appreciable delay in the circumstances has to be appreciated. Although this line of defence has not been raised in the trial court, I have carefully considered the possibility of the concubine Subbamma being the sole culprit. There are cases in which an innocent person may take upon himself full responsibility for a crime, even murder, to save someone whom he dearly loves from punishment. My own view is that this is not such a case and that the appellant's confession that he and no one else strangled his wife can be safely acted upon.

(4) Some decisions have been placed before us in which it has been held that a conviction on the uncorroborated confession of an accused is unsafe. There is no authority to the effect that conviction on an uncorroborated but retracted confession before a Magistrate is illegal and each case has to be dealt with on its own facts. I am unable to find any decision in which where a man, whose wife has been strangled to death at night in a house occupied solely by them, who has voluntarily confessed before a Magistrate to his guilt, being, acquitted.

(5) The learned Sessions Judge and all the four assessors who have heard the evidence were of the opinion that the appellant strangled his wife. My own view, which is in agreement with them, is that the case is free from reasonable doubt and that the appellant can safely be convicted of murder.

My learned brother, for whose opinion I have the greatest respect, has shared my anxiety in this case and has considered it unsafe to convict the appellant on the basis of this retracted confession. I have however agreed to enter a judgment of acquittal in this case and not to refer the matter to a third Judge in view of the approach made by a learned third Judge sometime ago on a difference of opinion between us in 'Karuppa Thevan' in 'R. T. No. 31 of 1951'. Rajagopalan J. to whom our difference of opinion was referred under S. 378 Cr. P. C. before going into the merits and delivering an opinion in favour of acquittal expressed the following view as the method of approach to such a reference:

"Where the main question at issue is identity of the assailants..... the very fact, that one of the two learned Judges, who had to decide that question was of the view, that the identity of the accused with those assailants had not been established beyond all reasonable doubt, should suffice to establish the basis for such a reasonable doubt, the benefit of which, of course, the accused have to get. In my opinion, a third Judge to whom the question is referred under S. 378 Cr. P. C. should normally accept that finding, unless the compelling necessity of conclusive evidence on record drives him to deny the existence of any basis for a reasonable doubt."

It would be a sheer waste of time if I were to ask for a reference of our difference of opinion to a third Judge in this case on the basis of this line of approach by a third Judge to a reference made to him. My learned brother and I are in complete agreement that this is not correct and legal method of approach by a third Judge and we say this with the greatest respect to Rajagopalan J. S. 429 Cr. P. C. which would apply in this case of an appeal from a sentence of transportation for life, is identical in terms with S. 378, which provides for a resolution of differences of opinion in what are known as Referred trials on the submission of sentences for confirmation. S. 429 reads as follows:

"When the Judges composing the Court of Appeal are equally divided in opinion, the case, with their opinion thereon, shall be laid before another Judge of the same court, and such Judge after such hearing (if any) as he thinks fit shall deliver his opinion, and the judgment or order shall follow such opinion."

The opinion, which Rajagopalan J. expressed, viz., that the normal disposal by a third Judge should be one of agreement with the opinion of acquittal is one which we are quite unable to share. It would be tantamount to a judgment of acquittal in practice prevailing over a judgment for conviction. Had the statute intended to lay this down it would have done so.

(6) There is a dearth of case law defining the scope of the third Judge's method of approach to such a reference. Both Ss. 429 and 378 make it mandatory for a judgment or order of the court to follow the opinion of the third judge. The only authority, which supports the view of Rajagopalan J. is the view taken by Mr. Justice Mahmood in — 'Empress v. Debi Singh', 1886 All W. N. 275, a decision of the year 1886. In that case, Mahmood J. expressed the view that when one Judge differs from his brother Judge on a pure question of the weight of evidence as to the propriety of a conviction, the opinion of the Judge for acquittal should, as a general rule, prevail. This view was considered by Edge C. J. in — 'Empress v. Bundu' 1887 All W. N. 125 and rather emphatically dissented from. We must express ourselves in complete agreement with the following view expressed by Edge C. J.

"When Judges unfortunately differ in opinion, I conceive it to be the duty of each Judge to express and act upon the opinion which he himself has definitely arrived at. Before so expressing himself he should of course carefully weigh the reasons adduced by his brother Judge for forming a different opinion; but if those reasons do not commend themselves to his mind, he must not, in the exercise of his duty, allow the fact that his brother Judge has arrived at a different conclusion, to influence his conduct whether his view to take a criminal case — be in favour of a conviction or of an acquittal. There would be no meaning in Ss. 378 and 429 if it was intended that the opinion of one Judge in favour of an acquittal should prevail."

We need scarcely say that a difference of opinion in Referred trials, and murder cases involving life and death, arises in exceptional cases and after much anxious deliberation. References are never lightly made and when we, as a criminal Bench, make them, we do expect the legal disposal of a reference in accordance with the sections of the statute under which we make the reference. Otherwise, if a Judge is to exercise his own independent view in accordance with his own conscience, the view taken by Mahmood J. with great respect, would mean that he has to subordinate his own independent conviction in favour of an acquittal and sign a judgment to which he is not really a party.

(7) There have been several instances in our own High Court where differences of opinion have been resolved by a third Judge in favour of a death sentence on a murder charge, though one Judge was in favour of acquittal. — 'Ramaswami Gounden v. Emperor', 27 Mad. 271 was one of the cases which went to the other extreme, in which the Sessions Judge sentenced an accused person on a charge of murder to death. Subramania Aiyar Off. C. J. was of the opinion that the accused was guilty but that the sentence should be one of transportation for life. Boddam J. disagreed and was in favour of acquittal. Bhashyam Aiyangar J. to whom the difference of opinion was referred not merely confirmed the conviction for murder but also the sentence of death passed by the Sessions Judge. When the opinion of Rajagopalan J. in the previous reference was placed before us, the matter came up for some discussion and Mr. Ethiraj who appeared for the five appellants in that referred trial expressed to us his anxiety as regards the possibility of the third Judge following the precedent of Bhashyam Aiyangar J. and restoring the sentences of death on two of the appellants passed by the Sessions Judge. The judgment of conviction, which I favoured found both young men guilty only under S. 326 I. P. C. and would have sentenced them to a Borstal School for three years.

(8) As a criminal Bench, we are, of course, vitally interested in the method of approach by a third Judge to these references. We would like to take the opportunity here as a Bench of expressing our views as to how we would like these references approached by a third Judge. The system of Referred trials from the mofussil tried by a Sessions Judge and assessors, with whose individual opinions the trial Judge is free to disagree, places an extremely heavy burden on criminal benches, who do not themselves hear the witnesses. It is inevitable that differences of opinion should arise in the discharge of this extremely heavy responsibility in which two Judges finding themselves unable to agree on a difficult case, require and welcome the opinion of a third Judge to alleviate their responsibilities. It is in this spirit that we hope future differences of opinion in criminal cases will be resolved and it is also the method of approach the statute requires. In — 'Md. Illias Mistri v. The King', I. L. R. (1949) 1 Cal 43 Biswas J. to whom a difference of opinion was referred, made the following approach to S. 429, to which we are unable to take the slightest exception.

"There can be no doubt upon the wording of the section that the whole case is now before me, which means not only that I am at liberty, but that it is also my duty to examine the whole of the evidence for myself and come to a final judgment. It is not a case of merely weighing the opinion of one learned Judge against that of the other deciding which of these opinions I should accept".

I however think though on this point my learned brother does not agree that the learned third Judge cannot with great respect to the decision in — 'Ramaswami Goundan v. Emperor', (27 Mad 271) pass a death sentence in a case, where the Judge favouring conviction thinks a sentence of transportation is appropriate with the other Judge favouring acquittal, on the simple ground that it is only a Bench of two Judges, who should confirm a death sentence in agreement with each other. Although the law may not be specific on this point, this extreme can always be guarded against by the Bench referring the case expressing their opinion that in the event of the conviction being confirmed, the sentence of transportation is the appropriate one, in which case, the third Judge would be bound by such an opinion as regards which there would be no difference for him to resolve. I have thought it necessary to give expression to these views in this judgment, in which I for my part, agree for the reasons I have given supra to my learned brother's judgment of acquittal.

(9) SOMASUNDARAM J: The Sessions Judge of Guntur has found the appellant guilty of murder and sentenced him to transportation for life, for causing the death of Balakotamma, the wife of the appellant.

(10) The occurrence is said to have taken place on the night of the 29th May 1950 and before dawn of the 30th of May in the house of the accused in a village called Vetapalem. The accused married the deceased about three years before the occurrence, he having lost his first wife about 5 or 6 years before the occurrence. The accused appears to have been keeping a concubine by name Subbamma for about 20 years prior to the occurrence. The accused is aged 43 and the concubine is alleged to be aged about 32 at the time of the occurrence. The accused and his wife (the deceased) appear to have got on well for about a year after the marriage. But soon presumably on account of the influence of Subbamma, trouble started between the accused and the deceased; and it is alleged that the accused started ill-treating the deceased.

About four months or so before the occurrence when P. Ws. 1 and 5, the brothers of the deceased went to Tirupathi, they wanted to take the accused and his wife also; but the accused refused to go and his wife alone was taken. When they returned from Thirupathi, P. W. 5 took his sister to leave her in her husband's house. It appears that the door was bolted against her and the accused remaining inside refused entrance to her. P. W. 5 therefore wanted to take her away but the wife preferred to stay on in spite of all the difficulties. Subsequently, after sometime on receipt of information that the accused had turned out his wife, P. Ws. 1 and 5 the brothers and P. W. 6, their maternal uncle who is said to have brought up this girl came to the village and finding that all was not well with the accused and the deceased, they wanted to take her away with them. They found that the articles that were presented to her at the time of the wedding were missing in the house; and when she was being questioned about it, it is stated that the concubine Subbammal threw them out in the street from her house which is said to adjoin the accused's house.

Thereupon P. Ws. 1 and 5 put the samans in a cart and wanted the deceased also to come with them. There is some discrepancy as to whether the deceased actually got into the cart or whether she still preferred to remain in the house; but the fact remains that ultimately on account of the deceased preferring to live with her husband, they left all the samans with the accused.

At this time, a neighbour by name Ravipati Venkatasubbayya is said to have interfered and brought about a settlement. The understanding arrived at was that the accused should stop his illicit intimacy with Subbamma and that neither of them should visit the other or even talk to each other. Subbamma also appears to have been a party to this arrangement and by way of securing the performance of the promise, two promissory notes were executed, one by Subbamma and another by the accused, each for Rs. 500 in favour of Ravipati Venkatasubbayya, the arrangement being that if either of the party commits a breach of the understanding then the party shall pay a penalty of Rs. 500 the sum for which the promissory note was taken. This appears to have produced a lull in the otherwise a bit of stormy life led by the accused and the deceased. The accused did not like the brothers of the deceased to visit her.

Suddenly on the morning of the 30th May P. W. 7 a washerman by profession carried a message from the accused to P. Ws. 1 and 5 that the deceased was found lying speechless and unconscious in the house. They immediately went to the village with P. W. 6 and found the deceased lying dead. They saw the accused sitting in the house and it is stated that when questioned he did not make any reply; but finally he stated that he knew nothing. They thereupon suspected that the deceased was killed by poisoning either by the accused or his concubine as they did not find injuries on the body and as they learnt from the neighbours that she was alive the previous night till about 9 p. m. P. W. 1 immediately went to the police station and gave the report, Ex. P. 1. This was at about 12 noon.

On express report being sent to the Circle Inspector which was received by him at 2-30 p. m. he came to the village at about 4 p. m. He held the inquest between 4 and 7 p. m. at which he examined P. Ws. 1, 5, 6 and 7 others who were not called as witnesses. The body was then sent for post mortem and the autopsy was held the next morning at 8 a. m. on 31st May. The post mortem certificate Ex. P. 2 was received by the Sub-Inspector on the 1st June. Till then no one knew the cause of death. Every one was under the impression that the deceased was poisoned to death.

(11) The postmortem revealed that the woman must have died of asphyxia as a result of strangulation. There was an echymosed patch round the neck extending upwards to lower jaw and downwards to upper part of both collar bones. The tissues underneath were red and congested. The trachea and larynx were red and congested. The oesophagus was cynosed and the hyoid bone was broken. There were thus clear indications of death being the result of strangulation. The doctor, P. W. 2, gave it as his opinion that the strangulation was by pressure on the throat and death must have been instantaneous; and that the echymosed patch round the neck must have been due to pressing with some force.

(12) The accused was suspected and he was arrested on the 2nd of June. At the time of the occurrence the only persons who were living in the house were the accused and the deceased, the evidence being that Subbamma was living at a distance of about 50 yards away. The Circle Inspector produced the accused on the 3rd June at 6 p. m. before the Sub-Magistrate P. W. 4, but the magistrate asked him to produce the accused the next morning. He was, therefore, produced the next morning and was remanded to the sub-jail, after giving the necessary warnings to the accused. He was again brought on the 5th. The Magistrate after putting the necessary questions and after satisfying himself that the accused making a confession voluntarily recorded Ex. P. 5 the confessional statement of the accused.

In Ex. P. 5. the accused set out the circumstances under which he committed the murder. According to the confession, his brothers-in-law wanted him to come and live with them but he would not go; and when they once took his wife to Thirupathi and came back he was away on work. She got into the house and closed the door against him when he returned from the fields. He was sleeping outside and next morning he gave her a blow in anger. She sent word to her brothers and maternal uncle who were living in a village called Vadlamudi which is about 3 miles from his village. They came and beat him and took away his samans and also his wife in a cart. He accompanied them till they reached the outskirts of the village asking for his cloth box to be given to him but, ultimately, for some reason not known to himself they brought back his wife and the samans to his house. Then he asked his wife not to allow her people to come. In spite of it, she allowed them stealthily; and this he came to know from her subsequent conduct towards him.

It appears she would not serve food for him on the day when they came and met her. Whenever he scolded her, she used to tell him that she would get him killed by her elder brothers. On the 29th when he returned home at 8 p. m. she was abusing him and served food with chilli powder. When questioned as to why she gave that she asked him to get away if he did not like it. He says he took his meal with butter milk and went to the field and returned at 12 midnight. He found his wife sleeping in a room keeping the door open. He thought that on account of the troubles she was giving and threatening him, it would be better to be killed by Government rather than be killed by her brothers and so he squeezed the throat of his wife who was sleeping and that she died without raising any cry. He says he did this because he became vexed in life and then he slept thereafter for sometime in the house and about dawn he fetched his mother who after coming and seeing the girl, pronounced that she was dead. Neighbours gathered and he sent word to his brothers-in-law and he says they came and kicked him on the head and hit him against a wall. According to his statement, the pain continued till the day before he gave the statement to the Magistrate. This in short is his confession and the case for the prosecution against the accused.

(13) In the committing Magistrate's court he entirely went back on this statement and said that the Circle Inspector and Deputy Superintendent of Police took him from his village to Tenali and from Tenali to Ponnur and coerced and threatened him and said that evil would happen to him if he did not give a statement in the manner wanted by them. He says that the wording of the statement is not his and he repeated their words like a parrot. In this statement before the committing magistrate he says that himself and his wife lived amicably and that on that day when he had gone out for work and returned he found his wife did not respond to his call. He tried to wake her up; she did not move. Thereafter he sent word to her mother and called near relations. In short, his statement in the magistrate's court is a direct contradiction of what he stated in the confession, and a protestation of innocence and he throws the entire blame for making the confessional statement on the Circle Inspector and the Deputy Superintendent of Police.

In the trial court he simply denied the offence and did not add anything to what he stated in the committing magistrate's court. He reiterated that the Deputy Superintendent of Police and the Circle Inspector compelled him to make the confessional statement which he made before the Magistrate.

(14) The learned Sessions judge believed the confession and found the accused guilty and sentenced him as aforesaid.

(15) In appeal it is contended that the confession was not a voluntary one and is also not true; and, as this is a case depending entirely upon the confessional statement only which has been retracted and as there is no corroboration, the accused cannot be convicted on this evidence. So far as the voluntary nature of the confession is concerned, it is difficult to believe the allegation that the Deputy Superintendent of Police and the Circle Inspector tutored him to say what was stated. It is true that after the arrest of the accused on the 2nd till about 6 p.m. on the 3rd he was not produced before the Magistrate. But, this does not, in my opinion, by itself, lead to the inference that the accused either was threatened or persuaded to make a confession by the Deputy Superintendent of Police or the Circle Inspector. The Circle Inspector says he was investigating into this case. He was camping in the village and he was expecting to examine P. W. 3 who speaks about the promissory note affair and he was examined on the 5th June. Now if the confession was going to be tutored by them, it is unlikely that the police would have dropped Subbamma as there was a strong suspicion that she might have poisoned her and as all the troubles between the husband and wife were due to her. I am not prepared to accept the contention that this accused did not make the statement voluntarily.

But as regards the truth of the averments contained therein, there is considerable force in the contention of Mr. Rajagopalachari. (After discussing the evidence the Judgment proceeded:)

(16) It is clear from the above circumstances that there is a great variation between the evidence given and the averments in the confessional statement. For the above reasons, I am not prepared to rely on the confessional statement. The question whether a retracted confession can be acted upon without material corroboration will arise only when the confession is true and can safely be acted upon. That question does not arise in this case, as in my opinion though the confession is a voluntary one, it contains allegations which contradict the main aspect of the prosecution case and so it is unsafe to act upon it without further corroboration. (After discussing the evidence the judgment proceeded:)

(17) In the circumstances, in my opinion, the prosecution has not proved its case beyond all doubt against the accused. The conviction and sentence are set aside and the accused is acquitted.

(18) I have since perused the judgment of my learned brother. The case has given us great anxiety. My learned brother is however of the opinion that the appellant can be safely convicted on the evidence in the case. I fully appreciate his observations and the reasons he has given for not making a reference to a third judge under S. 429 Cri. P. C. I entirely agree with him that it is the duty of the Judge who is asked to resolve the difference of opinion to examine the whole evidence himself and come to a final judgment after giving due consideration and weight to the reasons given by the two Judges on whose difference of opinion the case comes before him for his opinion. I do not think either, S. 378 or 429 Cri. P. C. contemplates the dice being loaded heavily in favour of either view. I am in agreement with the view expressed by Edge C. J. in — 'Empress v. Bundu', (1887) All W. N. 125, and Md. III as — 'Mistri v. The King', ILR (1949) 1 Cal 43. To that extent I agree with the view of my learned brother.

(19) As regards the other view expressed by my learned brother that the third Judge cannot pass a death sentence in a case where the Judge favouring conviction thinks a sentence of transportation for life is appropriate with the other judge favouring acquittal, with great respect to my learned brother I am unable to agree with him. It looks odd and strange that when one Judge favours acquittal and the other judge even if he convicts would sentence him only to transportation for life, a third Judge can hang. But that in my opinion is the correct interpretation of S. 378 Cri. P. C. When on a difference of opinion a case is referred to a third Judge no fetter can be placed on the third Judge. He is at liberty to express and act upon the opinion which he himself arrives at. If he chooses he can pass a sentence of death, even though one judge favours an acquittal and the other gives a sentence of transportation for life when convicting the accused.

(NOTE: The following passage from the judgment of Somasundaram J. in R. T. No. 84 of 1951 has been ordered by The Chief Justice as President of the Law Reporting Council, to be appended to the judgment of Somasundaram J. in the above case viz. Cri. App. No. 104 of 1951:)

As this case has to be laid before another Judge on account of difference of opinion, I would like to make it clear what I meant and intended when I expressed my opinion in the case of Sitaramayya Cri. Ap. No. 104 of 1951. It will be clear from that case that the opinions which I expressed about the powers of a Third Judge were purely obiter. I happened to express that opinion because my learned brother expressed his opinion. I did not intend to lay down any guiding principle for the third Judge nor did I intend to indicate the lines on which the third Judge should approach, as I have no jurisdiction to do so. In my opinion even a Bench cannot give any such directions to the third Judge. I only intended to say what I would do if I were the third Judge and not what others should do. It is to make this position clear that I am adding this note to this judgment.

A/V.B.B.

Appeal allowed.

A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 66
SATYANARAYANA RAO AND
RAGHAVA RAO JJ.

The Public Prosecutor, Petitioner v. A. K. Gopalan, Respondent.

Criminal Misc. Petn. Nos. 568 and 690 of 1951, D/- 9-8-1951.

(a) Constitution of India, Arts. 134 (1) (c), 136 — Grant of Certificate by High Court — Considerations involved not same as those under Art. 136.

The principles governing the grant of a certificate under Art. 134 (1) (c) and the granting of special leave by the Supreme Court under Article 136 are not always the same. Possibly the only common consideration which the High Court under Art. 134 (1) (c) and the Supreme Court under Article 136 may well take into account as a ground for granting leave is that "exceptional and special circumstances exist". The other considerations which can be taken into account only by the Supreme Court under Art. 136 are that substantial and grave injustice has been done and that the case in question presents features of sufficient gravity to warrant a review of the decision appealed against. AIR 1951 Mad 1060, Rel. on; AIR 1950 SC 169, Ref.

(Para 5)

(b) Constitution of India, Art. 134 (1) (c) — Certificate of fitness under — Considerations involved are same as those under S. 109 (c), Civil P. C. — (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 109 (c)).

Making allowance in any given case for a possible difference between considerations pertinent to civil cases and those pertinent to criminal in the matter of the application of the tests laid down by cases under Section 109 (c), Civil P. C., the application of the analogy of the latter cases to cases under Article 134 (1) (c) is, broadly speaking, correct. AIR 1951 Mad 1060, Rel. on.

(Para 6)

It is settled by cases under S. 109 (c), Civil P. C. that the grant of a certificate is in the discretion of the Court which must be judicially exercised and sparingly used, that a question will be one of public importance if it affects not merely the parties to the case but also large bodies of persons or communities, that the mere existence of a substantial question of law is not sufficient, that a question of private importance means of private importance to both parties to the litigation and not merely to one of them, and that the fact that the question affects third parties is no ground of fitness. Chitaley's Commentary on Civil P. C., Rel. on.

(Para 6)

(c) Evidence Act (1872), S. 78 (4) — Amending Act — Notice of — Court cannot take notice in absence of authentic copy as required by S. 78.

Anno: Evidence Act, S. 78 N. 4.

(d) Constitution of India, Art. 134 (1) (c) — Certificate of fitness under — Propriety of grant or refusal of an adjournment — Not a question of sufficient importance for granting certificate under the Article.

(Para 7)

(e) Constitution of India, Art. 134 (1) (c) — Certificate of fitness under — Order of release on application for writ of habeas corpus — Detenu rearrested within five minutes of release — Second application for same writ also allowed — Government applying for leave to appeal against both orders — Held, no leave could be granted.

On an application for a writ of habeas corpus by a detenu under the Preventive Detention Act, 1950, the High Court ordered his release. But within five minutes of the order, a fresh order of detention was served on the detenu who again applied for the same writ and was ordered to be released on the ground that the conduct of the Government was lacking in bona fides. The State Government applied for leave to appeal to Supreme Court under Art. 134 (1) (c) against both the orders:

Held that no leave could be granted in respect of the first order as in the events that followed it, such leave would be of no practical interest.

Further that as the question of bona fides or contra of the Government was essentially one of fact or at the most of mixed question of fact and law, no question of public importance was involved and hence leave to appeal against second order also could not be given. (Paras 7, 8)

(f) Constitution of India, Arts. 226, 132, 134 (1) (c) — Order of release on application for writ of habeas corpus — Appealability under Constitution — Principles — (Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 491).

Under the Constitution which contains fuller and wider provisions as to appeal than those of the Government of India Act, 1935, which contained only Section 205 corresponding to Article 132, there is no such immunity from appealability in the case of an order of release on an application for a writ of habeas corpus as obtains in England. The question of appealability of such an order must be judged with reference to the provisions of the Constitution and appealability must be recognised and given effect to within the limits defined by Article 134 thereof. The intention of the framers of the Constitution seems to be that if on the one hand the absolute immunity from appeal against an order of release obtaining in England is not to be imported into India, appealability in India ought not to be treated as a matter of course on the other hand. The Constitution accordingly provides for a certificate of fitness from the High Court or for special leave from the Supreme Court as a 'sine qua non' for imperilling the liberty of a released subject, which is a matter of vital moment. Even so the High Court ought to be extremely chary of exercising its power under clause (c) of the Article against the person released. (Paras 9, 10)

In all other criminal matters than those which fall under sub-clauses (a) and (b) of Article 134 (1), the Constitution of India undoubtedly intends that the High Courts in the respective States in the territory of India should ordinarily be the final Courts of Appeal. This is a fact which must not be lost sight of by the Court when considering the question as to whether a certificate of fitness should or should not issue in any given case. (Para 10)

If the matter of an application for the writ of habeas corpus is not criminal in nature the provision of the Constitution governing appealability will be Article 132 under which, except where a substantial question of law as to the interpretation of the Constitution arises, there can be no question of an appeal to the Supreme Court. (Para 11)

Anno: Cr. P. C., S. 491 N. 14.

(g) Constitution of India, Art. 134 (1) (c) — Jurisdiction under — Nature of.

The jurisdiction to certify a case as a fit one for further appeal is to a certain extent discretionary, and like the jurisdiction of the Judges of the Divisional Court in England to give or to refuse leave to appeal to the Court of Appeal from their own decisions, is a very delicate one. When the question involved is one of principle and the High Court has decided it for the first time, it is not sufficient reason for refusing the certificate of fitness for the High Court to say that they are satisfied that their own decision is right. (1886) 17 QBD 521, Ref. (Para 13)

Advocate General instructed by Public Prosecutor, for Petitioner; M. K. Nambiar, for Messrs. Row and Reddi, for Respondent.

REFERENCES: Courtwar/Chronological/ Paras

(45) 1945 FCR 195: (AIR 1945 PC 156)	9
(50) 1950 SCR 453: (AIR 1950 SC 169: 51 Cri LJ 1270)	4
(50) 1950-2 Mad LJ 569: (AIR 1951 Mad 329: 1952 Cri LJ 102)	4
(51) 1951-1 Mad LJ 296: (AIR 1951 Mad 721: 1952 Cri LJ 95)	4
(51) Cri. M. P. Nos. 1261 and 1263 of 1951: (AIR 1951 Mad 1060 :1952 Cri LJ 61)	5, 6
(51) AIR 1951 Pepsu 1: (52 Cri LJ 33)	2, 7
(1890) 15 AC 506: (60 LJQB 89)	9
(1886) 17 QBD 521: (55 LJQB 578)	13

ORDER: These are two petitions for leave to appeal to the Supreme Court under Article 134(1) (c) of the Constitution against two orders of release of A. K. Gopalan passed by us on two applications for a writ of 'habeas corpus' presented by the detenu. The second application for the writ became necessary on account of the fact that within just five minutes of our order of release on the earlier 'habeas corpus' application and just as the detenu and his legal adviser stepped out of the gates of the High Court, he was arrested again under a fresh order of detention. This fresh order was not brought to our notice at the time of the order of release that we made on the first application for the writ, although by that time it had been got ready to be served, the moment that our order on the first application for the writ should turn out to be favourable to the detenu.

(2) On the first application for the writ we are satisfied following a decision of the Pepsu Court in — 'Dr. Teja Singh v. The State', AIR 1951 Pepsu 1, that the non-mention of a time limit in the confirmatory order of detention passed after review under section 12(2) of the Preventive Detention Act 1950 (IV of 1950) vitiated the order. At the time of our pronouncement of judgments in that case it was represented to us by the then Advocate-General that Act IV of 1951 passed further to amend Act IV of 1950 had just received the assent of the President, and an adjournment was asked for that ground. No authenticated copy of the Act was produced to us of which we could take notice or on which we could act. We pronounced our order of release as we had come to the conclusion that the order of detention was illegal. The second petition for the writ which followed on the re-arrest that took place within about five minutes of the pronouncement of our earlier order was based on the ground that the Government had acted 'mala fide' and in contempt of this Court's order. We ordered the second petition on the finding that we reached in all the circumstances of the case including the non-production before us at the time of our judgments of the second order of detention which already had become ready, that the conduct of the Government was lacking in 'bona fides'.

(3) In these petitions for leave the Advocate-General has contended that the cases are fit ones for appeal to the Supreme Court and that we should so certify. He has taken us in the course of the argument through the several provisions of law which have regulated appeals against such orders from time to time. By Article 132 of the Constitution, the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court against any judgment, decree or final order of a High Court whether in a civil, criminal or other proceeding is provided for, if the High Court certifies that the case involves a substantial question of law as to the interpretation of the Constitution. Apart from this, Article 133 deals with the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court in appeals from High Courts in regard to civil matters, while Art. 134 provides generally for the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court in regard to Criminal Matters, if the High Court (a) has on appeal reversed an order of acquittal of an accused person and sentenced him to death; or (b) has withdrawn for trial before itself any case from any court subordinate to its authority and has in such trial convicted the accused person and sentenced him to death; or (c) certifies that the case is a fit one for appeal to the Supreme Court. The present petitions for leave to appeal have been argued solely with reference to clause (c) of Article 134(1) and it has not been suggested for the respondent that the jurisdiction involved is anything but criminal.

(4) Certain decisions of this Court — 'In re Paddayya', 1950-2 Mad L J 569; of Panchapakesa Iyer and Basheer Ahmed JJ. and — 'Chunchu Narayana v. Karrapati Kesappa', 1951-1 Mad L J 296 of Govinda Menon and Basheer Ahmed JJ. have been brought to our notice which have proceeded on the basis that the jurisdiction to certify under Article 134(1) (c) should be exercised by the High Court on the same principles as those on which the discretion vested in the Supreme Court under Article 136 of the Constitution for granting special leave to appeal has to be exercised. The learned Advocate-General has criticised these cases as not appreciating the inevitable difference that exists under the Constitution between the kinds of jurisdiction. The principles governing the power of the Supreme Court to grant special leave under Article 136 of the Constitution have been laid down in — 'Pritam Singh v. The State', 1950 S. C. R. 453 in these terms:

"Generally speaking this court will not grant special leave, unless it is shown that exceptional and special circumstances exist, that substantial and grave injustice has been done & that the case in question presents features of sufficient gravity to warrant a review of the decision appealed against."

(5) Of the three requirements for the grant of special leave indicated in the passage cited, the learned Advocate-General has rightly submitted that the second and the third can have no place in the matter of consideration by the High Court when invited to certify that a case decided by itself is a fit one for leave to appeal. He is, in our opinion, right in this submission. Possibly the only common consideration which the High Court under Article 134(1) (c) and the Supreme Court under Article 136 may well take into account as a ground for granting leave is that "exceptional and special circumstances exist" which is the first of the three requirements indicated in the passage cited. As pointed out in the judgment of this court (Satyanarayana Rao and Basheer Ahmed Sayed JJ.) in — 'M. S. Sheriff v. M. Govindan', Cri. M. P. Nos. 1261 and 1263 of 1951 (Mad) delivered after reservation of our judgment in these petitions, it will not be correct to assume that the principles governing the grant of a certificate under Article 134(1) (c) and the granting of special leave by the Supreme Court under Article 136 are always the same.

(6) While to the extent of this submission the learned Advocate-General is correct, he has still to make out the propriety of our granting the leave sought in terms of clause (c) of Art. 134(1). In section 109(c) of the Code of Civil Procedure similar words are found which have been construed by authoritative decisions of the Privy Council as authorising the High Court to certify where some question of law of public or private importance is involved. It is settled too by cases under the provision of the Code of Civil Procedure that the grant of a certificate is in the discretion of the Court which must be judicially exercised and sparingly used, that a question will be one of public importance if it affects not merely the parties to the case but also large bodies of persons or communities, that the mere existence of a substantial question of law is not sufficient, that a question of private importance means of private importance to both parties to the litigation and not merely to one of them, and that the fact that the question affects third parties is no ground of fitness. We do not consider it necessary to refer to the decisions supporting the proposition as stated by us since the matter is fully discussed and the law correctly stated at pages 1025 and 1027 of Volume I of Chitaley's Commentaries on the Code of Civil Procedure, 4th Edition*. The applicability of the analogy of decisions under Section 109(c), C. P. C. to cases under Article 134 (1) (c) of the Constitution has been considered in the judgment of this court in — 'M. C. Sheriff v. M. Govindan', Cri. M. P. Nos. 1261 and 1263 of 1951 (Mad) referred to above. Making allowance in any given case for a possible difference between considerations pertinent to civil cases and those pertinent to criminal in the matter of the application of the tests laid down by cases under Section 109(1), C. P. C., we are of opinion that the application of the analogy of the latter cases to cases under Article 134(1) (c) is, broadly speaking, correct.

(7) We shall now deal with the way in which the learned Advocate-General has endeavoured to satisfy us that certificates should be granted in these two cases. In the first case he says that there are two questions of public importance involved, namely,

- (1) Whether the time limit for the duration of the confirmatory order of detention should be mentioned in it; and
- (2) Whether the court should not have taken notice of Act IV of 1951 passed to amend Act IV of 1950 and granted the adjournment sought by the then Advocate-General for production of an authenticated copy of the amending Act.

So far as the second of the questions is concerned, we are of opinion that there is no substance in it. We had prepared our judgments in the case in favour of the detenu and taken our seats to deliver them. The then Advocate-

*(Now pages 1135, 1137 & 1138 of the 5th (1950) Edition—Ed.)

General did not have an authenticated copy of the amending Act. We could only take notice of proceedings of legislatures, if proved, as required by section 78 of the Indian Evidence Act, by journals of those bodies or by published Acts or extracts or by copies purporting to be printed by order of the Government concerned. The question was the very vital one of freedom for the detenu. We accordingly refused the adjournment, as we thought correctly. In any case, the propriety of the grant or refusal of an adjournment cannot, in our opinion, be a question of sufficient importance for the purpose of a certificate under Article 134(1) (c).

So far as the first question is concerned, it has been brought to our notice that the Pepsu decision in — 'Dr. Teja Singh v. The State', AIR 1951 Pepsu 1 on which we founded our decision has since been overruled by the Supreme Court. That would, no doubt 'prima facie' authorise the granting of the certificates sought if the matter remained at that. But then the point which we have to consider is of what practical consequence the reversal by the Supreme Court of our order of release is to be with reference to that order in the events that have since happened. The Government, anticipating our order, made a fresh order of detention, which, accepting our order as a hurdle in the way of further detention, they served upon the detenu in order to re-arrest him within barely five minutes of our order. Having thus accepted our first order of release and having without resort to the course of an appeal to the Supreme Court served a fresh order of detention upon the detenu which led to the second petition for the writ, the Government, in our opinion, must really make out grounds for a certificate of leave to appeal against our decision on the second petition for the writ, and cannot ask for leave against our decision on the first petition at this juncture. Assuming without deciding that normally in the event of a reversal by the Supreme Court of our order on the first petition, the Government could either in the exercise of its inherent power resulting from such reversal or under Section 3(a) of Act IV of 1950 providing for execution of detention orders claim to re-arrest the detenu, it would not be open to the Government in this case to do so in view of the second order of detention which led to the second petition for the writ. The granting of leave to appeal against our order on the first petition seems to us, therefore, to be a matter more of academic than of practical interest in the circumstances of this case.

(8) As regards the second case before us the learned Advocate-General has formulated two questions as questions of public importance involved in it;

- (1) Whether it was improper for the executive to consider even while a proceeding is pending in court as to what action it should take in the event of an adverse order and pass orders without disclosing the same to the Court; and
- (2) Whether the finding of the court against 'bona fides' of the executive action is good in law.

Though formulated in the shape of two questions the matter involved, it was conceded by the learned Advocate-General, was only a single one, as the failure on the part of the Government to disclose its fresh order to the Court would only be one element of fact which may enter into our decision on the question of 'bona fides' of the executive action. The question of 'bona fides' or contra seems to us to be essentially a question of fact which we were at pains to determine as best as we could in all the circumstances of the case. It cannot certainly be claimed to be a question on which any decision of the Supreme Court will necessarily be useful as a matter of general guidance to the executive in other case of preventive detention. The question of 'bona fides' on the part of the executive in any and every case of preventive detention must depend for its determination upon its peculiar facts and circumstances. We are not satisfied that in our conception of what constitutes 'mala fides' in the context of a case like the present we erred. Nor are we satisfied that our inference from all the facts is in root analysis anything but one of fact or at best of mixed fact and law.

(9) Mr. Nambiar for the respondent has raised the point that under the present Constitution the position as to the appealability of an order on an application for a writ of 'habeas corpus' in the exercise of our criminal jurisdiction is identical with the position as to the appealability of orders on proceedings under Section 491, Cr. P. C. which as laid down by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in — 'Emperor v. Sibnath Banerji', 1945 F. C. R. 195 at p. 210 "is in effect the same as the position stated in — 'Cox v. Hakes', (1890) 15 A. C. 506." The point is obviously fallacious. The very decision of the Judicial Committee cited makes it clear that "the condition of the law of 'habeas corpus' in India and the purpose and the express words of Section 205 of the Government of India Act afford a contrast to the condition of the English Law and the object and general terms of section 19 of the Judicature Act, 1873", under which — 'Cox v. Hakes' was decided. It is perfectly clear to us that under the Constitution which contains fuller and wider provisions as to appeal than those of the Government of India Act which contained only Section 205 corresponding to Article 132, there is no such immunity from appealability in the case of an order of release on an application for a writ of habeas corpus as obtains in England. The question of appealability of such an order must be judged with reference to the provisions of the Constitution and appealability must be recognised and given effect to within the limits defined by Article 134 thereof.

(10) Even so, we do not entertain any doubt but that the High Court ought to be extremely chary of exercising its power under clause (c) of the Article against the person released. The intention of the framers of the Constitution seems to us to have been that if on the one hand the absolute immunity from appeal against an order of release obtaining in England is not to be imported into India, appealability in India ought not to be treated as a matter of course on the other hand. The Constitution accordingly provides for a certificate of fitness from the High Court or for special leave from the Supreme Court as a 'sine qua non' for imperilling the liberty of a released subject, which is a matter of vital moment — within different degrees it may be — for all Countries cherishing or professing the basic principles of British Jurisprudence, and certainly of no small moment to the minds of a people "solemnly resolved to constitute India into a Sovereign Democratic Republic" and to secure to all its citizens amongst other things the boons and blessings of political justice and liberty of thought and expression. In all other criminal matters than those which fall under sub-clauses (a) and (b) of Article 134 (1) the Constitution of India undoubtedly intends that the High Courts in the respective States in the territory of India should ordinarily be the final Courts of Appeal. This is a fact which must not, in our opinion, be lost sight of by us when considering the question as to whether a certificate of fitness should or should not issue in any given case.

(11) We may add, however, that if the matter of an application for the writ of habeas corpus is not criminal in nature the provision of the Constitution governing appealability will be Article 132 under which, except where a substantial question of law as to the interpretation of the Constitution arises, there can be no question of an appeal to the Supreme Court. This aspect does not arise for any discussion in the present cases which have proceeded on the express basis that the jurisdiction invoked is of a criminal nature governed by Article 134 (1) (c) of the Constitution.

(12) We have carefully considered this matter with a view neither to clutching at jurisdiction which does not exist, so as thereby to put in jeopardy the liberty of the subject nor giving away jurisdiction which does exist, so as to deny the State its legitimate right if any of further appeal. We find no question of principle involved in these cases such as may govern other cases; nor can we say that we have experienced any reasonable doubt about the conclusions that we have reached on the applications for the writs.

(13) The jurisdiction to certify a case as a fit one for further appeal is to a certain extent discretionary, and like the jurisdiction of the Judges of the Divisional Court in England to give or to refuse leave to appeal to the Court of Appeal from their own decisions, is, to use the epithet employed by Lord Esher M. R. in — 'Ex Parte Gilchrist; In Re Armstrong', (1886) 17 QBD 521 at page 528 in relation to that jurisdiction, a very delicate one. In the language of the learned Master of the Rolls in that case, merely to say that we are satisfied that our decision is right is not certainly a sufficient reason for refusing the certificate sought, when the question involved is one of principle and we have decided it for the first time. But bearing in mind if only by way of analogy to the extent to which such analogy is applicable a consideration like that adverted to by the learned Master of the Rolls as well as the considerations laid down by authoritative decisions as those which must be borne in mind for granting or refusing a certificate under Section 109 C. P. C. and considering all the facts and circumstances of the cases before us in the light of the principles underlying such considerations, we have, on the whole, arrived at the conclusion that these petitions must be rejected as raising no substantial questions of law of paramount importance such as may be allowed to override the liberty earned by the respondent under orders of release and as being outside the limits of the restricted jurisdiction conferred on us by the Constitution.

(14) A certificate against this order is asked for by the learned Advocate General under

Art. 132 of the Constitution. We refuse it as in our opinion this order involves no substantial question of law as to the interpretation of the Constitution.

A/D.R.B.

Petitions rejected.

A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 71

GOVINDA MENON
AND CHANDRA REDDI JJ.

M. Arunachalam Iyer alias Vedachalam Iyer, Appellant v. K. N. Lingiah and Brothers, Respondents.

A. A. O. Nos. 581 to 583 of 1948, D/- 19-10-51.

(a) Transfer of Property Act (1882), Ss. 52 and 100, Proviso — Charge created by compromise decree — Decree not satisfied — Purchase of property charged is hit by rule of 'lis pendens'.

A purchaser of properties subject to a charge created by a compromise decree the satisfaction or discharge of which has not been obtained or has not become barred by limitation does not get any assistance from the proviso to S. 100 of the Act even though he is a purchaser for value without notice of the charge. So long as the decree is not satisfied and is kept alive the purchase is hit by the rule of 'lis pendens' irrespective of whether the purchase is a 'bona fide' transaction or not. (Para 8)

Anno: T. P. Act, S. 52 N. 6 a Pts. 1 and 2; S. 100 N. 28 Pt. 15.

(b) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 39 (1) and O. 21 Rr. 6 and 10 — Execution application presented to transferee Court before transfer — Validity of presentation.

The Court to which the decree is being transferred for execution can entertain the execution petition even before the order of transmission is made and the copy of the decree is received and if the execution petition remains in Court till after the passing of the order for transfer by the Court that passed the decree the presentation is a valid one and the executing Court would be vested with jurisdiction to execute the decree the moment the order for transmission is made and not only when the decree is actually received by that Court. AIR 1928 Mad 496 (2) and AIR 1949 Mad 218, Not foll. (Para 16)

Anno: C.P.C., S. 39 N. 13a Pt. 1; O. 21 R. 6 N. 1 Pt. 4; and O. 21 R. 10 N. 6 Pt. 4.

(c) Civil P. C. (1908), Ss. 39 (1) and 48 (1) and O. 21 Rr. 6 and 10 — Decree passed by C Court — According to terms of decree decree-holder to be paid certain money on 13-7-1934 — Application filed on 22-6-1946 for transmission of decree to N Court for execution — Order for transmission passed on 13-7-1946 — On 12-7-46 decree-holder presenting application for execution to N Court — On same day N Court returning application for production of copy of decree — Execution application represented on 19-7-1946 — Order of transmission and order for return held must be presumed to have been made at first moment of day — Application held must have been taken back after order for return was passed — Presentation of application, on 12-6-1946 held was valid and application being in time decree was not barred under S. 48. (Para 22)

Anno: C.P.C., S. 39 N. 13a; S. 48 N. 12; O. 21 R. 6 N. 1; O. 21 R. 10 N. 6.

M. Natesan, for Appellant; V. Rajagopalachari, R. V. Raghavan and N. Srinivasan, for Respondents.

REFERENCES: Courtwar/Chronological/ Paras

('06) 28 All 655: (3 All LJ 551)	8
(1900) 27 Cal 194	9
('35) 39 Cal WN 725	9
('12) 35 Mad 588: (8 Ind Cas 852)	14
('28) 55 Mad LJ 120: (AIR 1928 Mad 496(2))	13, 14, 15
('33) 56 Mad 692: (AIR 1933 Mad 627)	14
('34) 57 Mad 795: (AIR 1934 Mad 283)	14
('34) 66 Mad LJ 566: (AIR 1934 Mad 353)	9
('39) 50 Mad LW 764: (AIR 1940 Mad 214)	14
('45) ILR (1945) Mad 726: (AIR 1945 Mad 126)	8
('45) 1945-1 Mad LJ 261: (AIR 1945 Mad 350)	8
('45) 1945-2 Mad LJ 555: (AIR 1946 Mad 169)	14
('48) 1948-2 Mad LJ 461: (AIR 1949 Mad 218)	13, 15
('50) 1950-1 Mad LJ 83: (AIR 1950 Mad 396)	8
(1854) 9 Ex 628: (23 LJEx 42)	19
(1859) 28 LJEx 223: (4 H & N 488)	20

CHANDRA REDDI J.: The decree-holder in O. S. No. 15 of 1926 on the file of the Sub-Court, Chittoor is the appellant in all these appeals. In order to appreciate the points arising in these appeals it is necessary to state briefly the facts leading up to these appeals.

(2) The appellant filed a suit in the court of the Subordinate Judge, Chittoor, against his uncle the 1st defendant for partition and separate possession of his share in the family properties and for other incidental reliefs. The 2nd defendant who was the daughter of the 1st defendant was impleaded as she had a claim for maintenance against the family properties. This suit ended in a compromise decree on 8-10-1928 and under the terms of the compromise the plaintiff was to be paid a sum of Rs. 6000 in lieu of his claim, Rs. 4000 being payable on the 29th of Ani 1934 and the balance to be paid in two instalments subsequently. It was provided in the compromise decree that for the due performance of the decree a charge should be created over the suit properties including the three items of property in dispute which lie within the jurisdiction of the Sub-Court, Nilgiris.

(3) In order to proceed against the properties in question several petitions were filed for transmission of the decree to the Sub-Court, Nilgiris and for execution against these three items but all of them proved infructuous. Ultimately the execution petition No. 195 of 1946 giving rise to these appeals was filed on 22-6-1946. No orders were passed till the 13th of July 1946. Meanwhile the appellant presented an execution petition in the court of the Subordinate Judge, Nilgiris on the 12th of July 1946. As already stated the order transmitting the decree to the Sub Court, Nilgiris for execution of the decree was made only on the 13th.

On the same day there was an order by the learned Subordinate Judge, Nilgiris directing the return of the execution petition for the production of a copy of the decree. But we have no evidence as to the exact time at which either the order for transmission of the decree was made by the Subordinate Judge, Chittoor or the latter order by the Sub Court, Nilgiris or as to when the papers were taken back by the appellant in pursuance of the order for return. The importance of the exact time of these acts will become apparent when we deal with the question of the validity of the presentation of the execution petition in the Sub Court, Nilgiris.

(4) The execution petition was represented on the 19th of July 1946 with an endorsement that the decree will be filed later on. In the course of these execution proceedings the properties in question were being brought to sale. It may be necessary to state here that the 2nd defendant sold these properties in the years 1939-40 for debts binding upon the estate of the 1st defendant who died prior thereto. The persons who acquired interest in these properties by virtue of the sales came forward with claim petitions.

(5) In support of their claims two contentions were urged. One was that the present execution petition was barred under S. 48 of the Civil Procedure Code firstly for the reason that the execution petition now presented was beyond 12 years of the date of the decree, that as no time was fixed for the payment of these amounts in the original decree itself limitation began to run from 8-10-1928, the date of the decree and the date 13th July 1934 fixed for the payment of Rs. 4000 was inserted only by way of amendment asked for in I. A. No. 33 of 1942 long after the decree got barred and the judgment-debtors ceased to have any interest in the properties and would not therefore affect them. Secondly even assuming that the decree was not barred there was no valid presentation of the execution petition within 12 years as it was filed in the court of the Subordinate Judge, Nilgiris prior to the passing of the order for transmission and receipt of the decree by the Court to which the decree was transferred for execution. The alternative ground was that the claimants being purchasers for value without notice of the charge created on these properties, the charge could not be enforced.

(6) The trial court while holding that the execution petition was in time and not barred under S. 48 of the Civil Procedure Code found that the claimants were bona fide purchasers for value without notice of the charge and that consequently they were entitled to the benefits of proviso to S. 100 of the Transfer of Property Act which provides

"Save as otherwise expressly provided by any law for the time being in force no charge shall be enforced against any property in the hands of a person to whom such property has been transferred for consideration and without notice of the charge."

In the result he allowed the claim petitions and dismissed the execution petition.

(7) In these appeals filed by the decree-holder his counsel Mr. Natesan accepting the finding that the respondents are the bona fide purchasers for value without notice of the charge argued that S. 100 of the Transfer of Property Act does not afford any protection to the respondents and that the appellant is not precluded from enforcing the charge created by the consent decree. On the other hand, the decree of the Lower Court is sought to be sustained on behalf of the respondents not only on the basis of the proviso to S. 100 of the Transfer of Property Act but also on the ground of limitation.

(8) We shall first consider whether the proviso to S. 100 of the Transfer of Property Act is a bar to the enforceability of the charge created over these properties. In other words, is the view of the learned Subordinate Judge that the charge created by the compromise decree is not available against the bona fide purchasers for value without notice of the charge is correct. S. 100 of the Transfer of Property Act as it stood after the Amending Act of 1929 runs thus.

"Where immovable property of one person is by act of parties or operation of law made security for the payment of money to another, and the transaction does not amount to a mortgage, the latter person is said to have a charge on the property; and all the provisions hereinbefore contained (which apply to simple mortgage shall, so far as may be, apply to such charge). Nothing in this section applies to the charge of a trustee on the trust property for expenses properly incurred in the execution of his trust (and save as otherwise expressly provided by any law for the time being in force, no charge shall be enforced against any property in the hands of a person to whom such property has been transferred for consideration and without notice of the charge."

It is manifest that the bona fide purchaser for value without notice of the charge acquires the right by virtue of this proviso only in cases where there is no other provision of law governing such a charge. We have, therefore, to see whether there is any other provision of law in the Transfer of Property Act which governs such purchase of property. There can be no doubt that there is such a provision and that is S. 52 of the Transfer of Property Act which embodies the doctrine of lis pendens. S. 52 lays down:

"During the pendency in any court having authority within the limits of India excluding the States of Jammu and Kashmir or established beyond such limits by the Central Government of any suit or proceedings which is not collusive and in which any right to immovable property is directly and specifically in question, the property cannot be transferred or otherwise dealt with by any party to the suit, or proceedings so as to affect the rights of any other party thereto under any decree or order which may be made therein except under the authority of the court and on such terms as it may impose."

Reading S. 100 in conjunction with S. 52 of the Transfer of Property Act it will be seen that a purchaser of properties subject to a charge created by a compromise decree the satisfaction or discharge of which has not been obtained or has not become barred by limitation does not get any assistance from the proviso to S. 100 of the Act even though he is a purchaser for value without notice of the charge. So long as the decree is not satisfied and is kept alive the purchase is hit by the rule of lis pendens irrespective of whether the purchase is a bona fide transaction or not. We are fortified in this view by some of the decided cases of our court. In — 'Rajagopala v. Kesava', ILR (1945) Mad. 726 a Bench of this Court decided that S. 100 of the Transfer of Property Act does not override the provisions of S. 52 of the Act and that the Legislature by the Amendment of S. 100 could not have intended to qualify the doctrine of lis pendens, see also — 'Kulandaivelu v. Sowbagyammal', 1945-1 Mad LJ 261 and also — 'Rajagopala Chetti v. Abdul Shukoor Sahib', 1950-1 Mad LJ 83 and — 'Maina v. Bachchi', 28 All 655.

(9) That the incidents of a compromise decree are the same as those of other decrees is seen from — 'Hemlata Devi v. Bhowani Charan Roy' 39 Cal WN 725 and — 'Kuloda Prosad v. Jageshar Koer', 27 Cal 194. These cases along with — 'Aramudhu Iyengar v. Zamindari Srimathi Abhiramavalli Ayah', 66 Mad LJ 566 lay down that question of notice would not arise in a case of charge created by a decree of a court. Admittedly in this case the properties were purchased by the claimants while the decree remained unsatisfied which means during the pendency of litigation. It is incontrovertible that continues so long as the decree is alive

(10) We cannot, therefore, agree with the lower court that the appellant cannot avail himself of the charge over the properties in the hands of the respondents. It follows that the appellant is entitled to proceed against the properties in the hands of the respondents and that proviso to S. 100 of the Transfer of Property Act is not a bar hereto if the decree is otherwise alive.

(11) There remains the point urged by the learned counsel for the respondents, namely, that the decree is barred by limitation under S. 48 Civil Procedure Code. As in the lower court the contention on behalf of the respondents on this aspect of the case is two-fold. According to them the decree which was passed in 1928 got barred in 1946 when they filed the present execution petition. It is argued that the decree, as it stood originally, did not direct any payment of money on a certain date or at recurring periods and therefore, the limitation for the execution of the decree starts from the date of the decree, that the clause relating to the payment of Rs. 4000 on 13-7-1934 was inserted only by an amendment in 1942 and that this amendment could not in any way prejudice the rights of the respondents as the amendment itself was made after the decree got barred and after the judgment-debtors ceased to have any interest in the properties in question.

In support of this contention several decisions of this Court as well as of other courts were placed before us. It is unnecessary for us to refer to any of these rulings in view of the fact that the basic facts on which such a contention could be founded do not exist in this case. The learned counsel for the appellants submitted that the time for payment of Rs. 4,000 was provided for even in the original decree and not by way of any amendment in 1942. To satisfy ourselves whether the original decree directed payment of money on a specified date we sent for the original records. A reference to them has disclosed that the time for payment of Rs. 4000 was specifically stated to be 29th of Ani 1934 in the original decree itself. All that was sought by way of amendment was to give the corresponding English date to 29th Ani and nothing more. In the circumstances we feel that this contention is devoid of any substance and ought to be rejected.

(12) Next we have to consider whether the presentation of the execution petition on the 12th of July was a valid one and within time. What is urged by the learned counsel for the respondents is that since on the 12th July when the execution petition was filed in the court of the Subordinate Judge, Nilgiris, there was no order of transmission of the decree to that court and no copy of the decree was received by that court, it had no jurisdiction to entertain the execution petition and hence there was no valid filing of the execution petition.

(13) The basis of this contention is the ruling of Jackson J. in — 'Nanjunda Chettiar v. Nallakaruppan Chettiar', 55 Mad LJ 120 which lays down that until a court has received the decree it has no jurisdiction to entertain an application for execution, and the application for execution filed in such a court would not help the decree-holder to save the decree from the bar of limitation and that a mere order directing transmission of the decree would not vest the court to which the decree is to be transferred for execution with jurisdiction to receive execution application unless the decree is actually received by that court. This ruling was followed by one of us in — 'Rachapudi Rangarao v. Subbarao', 1948-2 Mad LJ 461.

(14) In — 'Modali Ademma v. Venkatasubbayya', 56 Mad 692 it was held that the decision in — 'Nanjunda Chettiar v. Nalla Karuppan Chettiar', 55 Mad LJ 120 was wrong and the contrary view taken in — 'Arimuthu Chetti v. Vyapuri Pandaram', 35 Mad 588 by Krishnaswami Aiyar J. is the correct one. In this case the following passage from — 'Arimuthu Chetti v. Vyapuri Pandaram', is quoted with approval:

"I am not at all sure, having regard to the provisions of rules 6, 7 and 8 of Or. XXI that the court to which a decree is sent for execution is authorised to execute it before a copy of the decree is received; but I think there is force in the contention that, when once an order is made sending a decree to another court for execution, that by itself is sufficient to entitle the decree-holder to apply to the court to which the decree is sent for execution."

The same view was taken by another Bench of this Court in — 'Venkataratnam v. Chennayya', 50 Mad LW 764 and by Yahya Ali J. in — 'Perumal Chettiar v. Avula Kotayya', 1945-2 Mad LJ 555. In — 'Thiagaraja Thevar v. Sambasiva Thevar', 57 Mad 795 a Bench of this court took the view that when an execution petition is filed in a court which had not the jurisdiction to receive it at that time it is not bound to dismiss the petition when it has jurisdiction to decide when the matter comes up for decision simply because it had no jurisdiction at the time of the presentation of the petition.

(15) These rulings which overrule the decision in — 'Nanjunda Chettiar v. Nalla Karuppan Chettiar', 55 Mad LJ 120 were not brought to the notice of the court when deciding — 'Rachapudi Rangarao v. Subbarao', 1948-2 Mad LJ 461.

(16) What emerges from these decisions is that the court to which the decree was being transferred for execution could entertain the execution petition even before the order of transmission is made and the copy of the decree is received and if the execution petition remains in court till after the passing of the order for transfer by the court that passed the decree the presentation is a valid one and also that the executing court would be vested with jurisdiction to execute the decree the moment the order for transmission is made and not only when the decree is actually received by that court.

(17) So there will be no difficulty in this case if it is found that the execution petition which was filed on the 12th of July was in court by the time the order of transmission was made by the Subordinate Judge, Chittoor on the 13th. But a complication is introduced into this by the fact that on the 13th an order was passed by the Sub Court, Nilgiris directing the return of the execution petition for production of a copy of the decree and it was represented only on the 19th of July 1946. As already observed we have no evidence as to when this order returning the execution petition was passed or as to when the papers were taken back on behalf of the appellants. In these circumstances, it is argued by the counsel for the respondents that as there is no evidence on record that the execution petition was on the file of the executing court when the transfer was directed to be made by the Sub Court of Chittoor and as by the time the execution petition was represented on the 19th the decree was already barred, the presentation of the petition on the 12th does not enure to the benefit of the decree-holder.

(18) The learned Subordinate Judge sought to get over the difficulty of the want of evidence in the case as regards the exact time when the order for return was made on the 13th by relying on the practice followed by him in passing such orders during the lunch interval at 2 p.m. He deduces that the same practice might have been followed by his predecessor, and assumes that the execution petition was on the file of that court when the order for transfer was made by the Sub Court, Chittoor on the 13th. But we do not think that any inference as to the time of the passing of the order for return by his predecessors could be drawn from the fact that the learned trial Judge was in the habit of passing such orders at about 2 p.m. However that does not present an insuperable difficulty. In the absence of any evidence we have to presume that all judicial acts date from the earliest moment of the day.

(19) Maxwell in his "the Interpretation of Statutes" at page 351 (9th Edn) says thus:

"It used to be laid down as a general rule that courts refused to take notice of 'all fractions and divisions of a day, for the uncertainty, which is always the mother of confusion and contention' and in civil cases a judicial act, such as a judgment is taken conclusively to have been done at the first moment of the day."

In — 'Edwards v. Reginam', (1854) 9 Ex. 628 it was observed at page 631:

"The doctrine that judicial acts are to be taken always to date from the earliest minute of the day in which they are done, stands upon ancient and clear authority."

(20) To the same effect is the decision in — 'Wright v. Mills', (1859) 28 LJ Ex 223.

(21) Applying this principle to the order of transmission it must be presumed that it was passed at the earliest moment of the day. The same presumption governs the order for return also. It follows that both the orders must be presumed to have been made at the first moment of the day.

(22) This would give rise to a further question as to whether the taking back of the return was at the same time as the passing of the order for return i.e., whether the execution petition was on the file of the Sub Court, Nilgiris, when the latter order was passed. Here again we can turn to the passage at page 352 of Maxwell on "The Interpretation of Statutes" 9th Edn. which states thus:

"But as regards the acts of parties, including in this expression acts, which, though in form judicial, are in reality the acts of parties, the courts do notice such fractions whenever it is necessary to decide which of two events first happened."

The learned author has relied upon a number of decisions in support of this statement of law. If as stated by the learned author there is no presumption in the case of acts of private parties as in the case of judicial acts then it must be taken that the return was taken only after the relevant orders of the court were passed in this case. It is common knowledge that the papers directed to be returned will not be taken back simultaneously with the passing of the order. Some time would intervene between the passing of the order and the taking back of the papers. Hence it must be inferred that the execution petition was on the file of the Sub Court, Nilgiris when the order directing transfer of the decree was passed in the Sub Court at Chittoor and therefore the presentation of the execution petition on the previous day was proper and valid. So the last execution petition out of which these appeals arise was filed by the appellant in time and the decree was not barred and it could be executed by him by proceedings against the properties in the hands of the respondents.

(23) In these circumstances we must hold that the respondents cannot have any claim on the properties which were subject to a charge and purchased by them as against the holder of the decree, that is, the appellant and that the order of the lower court that the appellant is not entitled to enforce the charge cannot be sustained. In the result we allow the appeals but in the circumstances without costs.

A/V.R.B.

Appeals allowed.

A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 74

GOVINDA MENON AND MACK JJ.

In re Kakana Ramana Reddy and others, Accused-Appellants.

Criminal Appeals Nos. 229, 232, 238 and 626 of 1951, D/- 23-4-1952.

(a) Evidence Act (1872), S. 24 — Voluntaryness of confession — Criterion to determine — (Criminal P.C. (1898) S. 164 — Madras Police Standing Order No. 583).

The criterion for the admissibility of a confession is not whether an accused person immediately he is questioned by the police, spontaneously comes out with a full confession of his guilt. If this were adopted as a criterion very few confessions would become admissible in evidence. It is perfectly open to the police to interrogate a person who is suspected before his arrest and confront him with the evidence they discovered and unable to explain it; an accused person may feel that the game is up and then come out with a full confession. It is true that under Madras Police Standing Order No. 583 the practice of resorting to persuasion, trickery or oppression to induce an accused person to confess is prohibited and when once an accused person has been arrested, while the police may and indeed should listen to any statement which he may voluntarily make the police are strictly forbidden to interrogate him or press him to make a statement. But the criterion as to whether a confession is voluntary or not is whether it was voluntarily made by an accused person before the Magistrate recording it under S. 164 Cr. P.C. i.e. after he has been removed from police influence and has been given clearly to understand by the Magistrate in compliance with S. 164 Cr. P.C. that anything he says may be used in evidence against him, that he was not bound to make any confession that if he does so, it would be used as evidence against him and that he would not be taken as an approver. (Para 6)

Anno: Evi. Act S. 24, N. 3, Cri. P.C., S. 164 N. 14.

(b) Criminal P. C. (1898) S. 164 — 'Upon questioning the person' — Record of confession after adequate warnings — Magistrate is not bound to repeat warnings on second day on which recording is continued — (High Court Rules and Orders — Madras Criminal Rules of Practice, R. 85).

Under S. 164(3), Criminal P.C. it is sufficient if before commencing to record a confession, a magistrate puts the necessary questions required by S. 164 Cri. P.C., to the accused and it is not mandatory that he should keep on repeating these questions to him after every break in the recording of a long confession. There is nothing in S. 164 Cr. P.C. or even in Rule 85 of the Criminal Rules of Practice which requires a Magistrate to put all these questions afresh after any break in the recording of a confession, say after a luncheon interval or the next day. (Paras 7, 8)

Consequently, an omission to repeat the warnings on the second day on which the recording of the confession is continued will not render the confession inadmissible in evidence as not having been voluntarily made. (Paras 4, 8)

It is extremely difficult to split up a confession made one day and continued the following day into something partly admissible and partly inadmissible and either the whole confession should be admitted or rejected. AIR 1946 Pat 169 and AIR 1925 Cal 587 diss. from. (Para 8)
Anno: Cr. P. C., S. 164, N. 15.

(c) Criminal P. C. (1898) S. 164 (3) — Certificate as to voluntariness of confession — Record of reasons before recording confession is not necessary — Certificate appended after recording is sufficient — (High Court Rules and Orders — Madras Criminal Rules of Practice, R. 85).

S. 164 Cr. P. C. does not require a Magistrate to give reasons before beginning to record a confession for his satisfaction that the accused was going to make a voluntary statement. R. 85 of the Criminal Rules of Practice requires some revision in view of technical and literal non-compliance with each of the suggested questions being sought to be made ground of attack to undermine the voluntary nature of the confession. While the questions required to be put by a Magistrate before the accused made a statement are no doubt absolutely necessary to ensure a confession being a voluntary one, it is only after the accused has made a statement that a Magistrate, after hearing him and observing his demeanour can be in the best position to append the highly responsible certificate required of him to validate a confession that he believes it to have been voluntarily made. (Para 9)

Anno: Cr. P. C., S. 164 N. 16.

M. K. Nambiar, C. K. Venkatanarasimham, V. Rajagopalachari and B. T. Sundararajan, for Appellants; Public Prosecutor for the State Prosecutor, for the State.

REFERENCES: Courtwar/Chronological/ Paras
(25) 52 Cal 67: (AIR 1925 Cal 587:
26 Cri LJ 782)

(50) 1950 Mad WN Cr 55: (AIR 1950
Mad 484: 51 Cri LJ 1137)

(51) 1951 Mad WN Cr 277: (AIR 1952
Mad 411: 1952 Cri LJ 853)

(45) 24 Pat 646: (AIR 1946 Pat 169:
48 Cri LJ 30)

MACK J.: Criminal Appeals Nos. 229 and 232 of 1951 are appeals by A. 3 and A. 5 who were found guilty on the unanimous verdict of Jury at the Madras Criminal Sessions under Ss. 120B, 489C and 489-D I.P.C. A. 3 was in addition found guilty under S. 489-A, I.P.C. They were each sentenced to five years rigorous imprisonment by Panchapakesa Aiyar J.

(2) Crl. Ap. No. 238 of 1951 is an appeal by the 6th accused, who was found guilty on a majority jury verdict of 8 : 1 only under S. 489-C IPC and sentenced to three years' rigorous imprisonment. The jury returned a unanimous verdict of not guilty as regards the 6th accused on the count under S. 120-B IPC. The State appeals against his acquittal on this count in Crl. Ap. 626 of 1951.

(3) It may be mentioned that there were six accused charged with conspiracy to counterfeit 100 rupee currency notes. A. 1 who was convicted on four counts on the unanimous verdict of the jury and sentenced to concurrent sentences of five years has not appealed. A. 2 and A. 4 were acquitted.

(4) The appeals by A. 3 and A. 5 which were first filed were admitted by a Bench of which one of us (Mack J.) was a member under S. 411-A 1(a) Crl. P.C. on a point of law. This related to the admissibility of confessions recorded by a Presidency Magistrate, Mr. Ernest from A. 1 and A. 3. The main objection was taken to the admissibility of A. 3's confession Ex. P. 66(b) recorded by Mr. Ernest on 3-2-1950 and continued on 4-2-1950. It was alleged that although Mr. Ernest gave A. 3 all the necessary warnings in question form on 3-2-1950 before he started recording the confession, he did not administer these same warnings again before he continued recording the latter portion of the confession on 4-2-1950. The short point of law is whether S. 164 Crl. P.C. requires a Magistrate to give such warnings again on the second day when the confession could not be completed the previous day, and whether this constitutes an omission, which would render the confession inadmissible in evidence as not having been voluntarily made.

(5) To appreciate the point taken it is necessary to set out some of the salient facts of this prosecution. Ramana Reddi (A. 3) is a graduate aged 33 and a mica miner of Gudur. It is in his house that according to the prosecution, these counterfeit notes were actually manufactured. 1929 counterfeit 100 rupee notes were actually recovered in the case, 976 from the possession of A. 1, 201 from the possession of A. 5, 750 from the possession of A. 6 and 2 from the possession of a servant of A. 5. The accused came from different districts in the State. A. 1 was an electrical engineer and machine commission agent, who lived in Triplicane, Madras. A. 2 came from Travancore. A. 4 was a compositor of Madurai and A. 5 is a Mudaliar landholder of Salem. A. 6 who was A. 5's son-in-law's brother, is a landholder residing at Erode. It was the prosecution case that after several of these counterfeit notes were manufactured and before any of them were actually passed to the public, the conspiracy was nipped in the bud by prompt Police action. The house of A. 3 in Gudur was searched on the evening of 23-1-1950 and the Police recovered some letters Exs. P. 15 to P. 17. The next day A. 3 is said to have produced a map roller, (M. O. 11) capable of being used in the process of counterfeiting currency notes, though also for innocent purposes. He is also said to have shown the police two wells from which a piece of a block (M. P. 10) used for counterfeiting notes was discovered. A. 3 is said to have been formally arrested on the 24th of January 1950 and to have been brought by car to Madras on 25-1-1950. He was produced before the Commissioner of Police, who passed orders as a Presidency Magistrate under S. 7 of the City Police Act for his detention in Police custody for further investigation.

On 31-1-1950, Mr. Ernest the 6th Presidency Magistrate, received a requisition Ex. P. 65 from the Chief Presidency Magistrate to record a statement under S. 164 CrI. P.C. from A. 3 who was then on remand in the Saidapet sub-jail, whereas A. 1 was on remand in the Penitentiary. A. 3 was produced before Mr. Ernest by the Jail warders on the 1st of February 1950 and he then administered the usual warnings that he was under no obligation to answer questions, that it was not intended to make him an approver and that anything he may say may be used against him. Mr. Ernest made a record Ex. P. 66 of the warnings he gave A. 3 and he gave him 2 days time to reflect till 11 a.m. on 3-2-1950. He was again produced before him and after putting all the necessary questions, which could have left no doubt in the mind of A. 3 that his statement would be used against him at his trial and that it was not intended to make him an approver, recorded from him a very long confession covering more than seven printed pages of matter. By far the greater part of this confession was recorded on 3-2-1950 and there being no time to continue in that day, approximately two pages more were recorded on 4-2-1950 without any further warnings or questions being recorded as having been put that day. At the conclusion of the confession, the Magistrate recorded his certificate of belief that the confession was voluntarily made and in addition appended an explanatory note that he had removed him from police influence for nearly 48 hours, which was given to him for reflection.

(6) Mr. Nambiar has strongly criticised A. 3 being kept in Police custody for nearly six days. That custody was however perfectly legal and under the specific orders of the Commissioner of Police acting within his powers as a Presidency Magistrate. It has to be remembered that the conspiracy was a very widespread one with ramifications in several districts and we can see nothing in this charge of police detention which can afford a basis for any interference, that A. 3 was coerced, ill-treated or as Mr. Nambiar puts it "conditioned by a variety of processes" into an approver on the promise also of being taken as one. The confession he has given is a very long and detailed one, which it was not possible for the magistrate to record in one day. It is true that it was retracted in the committing court. The criterion for the admissibility of a confession is not whether an accused person immediately he is questioned by the police, spontaneously comes out with a full confession of his guilt. If this were adopted as a criterion very few confessions would become admissible in evidence. It is perfectly open to the police to interrogate a person who is suspected before his arrest and confront him with the evidence they have discovered and unable to explain it; an accused person may feel that the game is up and then come out with a full confession. It is true that under Madras Police Standing Order No. 583 the practice of resorting to persuasion, trickery or oppression to induce an accused person to confess is prohibited and when once an accused person has been arrested, while the police may and indeed should listen to any statement which he may voluntarily make, the police are strictly forbidden to interrogate him or press him to make a statement.

There is every indication in this case that A. 3 before he was actually arrested on 24-1-1950 had made incriminating admissions to the Police and there is no ground for any suspicion that he was coerced, tricked or oppressed into making this long confession while he was in Police custody. The criterion as to whether a confession is voluntary or not is whether it was voluntarily made by an accused person before the Magistrate recording it under S. 164 CrI. P.C. i.e., after he has been removed from police influence and has been given clearly to understand by the Magistrate in compliance with S. 164 CrI. P.C. that anything he says may be used in evidence against him, that he was not bound to make any confession that if he does so, it would be used as evidence against him and that he would not be taken as an approver. Under S. 164(3) CrI. P.C.,

"No Magistrate shall record any such confession unless upon questioning the person making it, he has reason to believe that it was made voluntarily."

All the questions suggested in Rule 85 of the Criminal Rules of Practice as useful questions, which a Magistrate may put to an accused person before he proceeds to record a confession have a two-fold object (i) to make perfectly clear to the accused the consequences of making a confession and (ii) to assist a magistrate to satisfying himself that the confession was voluntarily made, these questions giving as they do every opportunity to the accused freed from Police custody to inform the Magistrate about any police torture or improper inducement to which he has been subjected by the police.

(7) We can find nothing in S. 164 CrI. P. C. or even in Rule 85 of the Criminal Rules of Practice which requires a Magistrate to put all these questions afresh after any break in the recording of a confession, say after a luncheon interval or the next day. Under Section 164(3) CrI. P.C. these questions have to be put before "recording any such confession".

(8) Our attention was drawn at the time these appeals were admitted to — 'Punia Mallah v. Emperor', 24 Pat. 646, a Bench decision of the Patna High Court in which Das J. took the view that where a confession was recorded from an accused person on the 27th of October 1943 and continued to the 28th of October 1943 without any further warnings being given on the second day, there was a failure to comply with S. 164(3). With great respect we are unable to follow that view, which followed the view taken by Mukherjee J. in — 'Emperor v. Panchkowri Dutt', 52 Cal. 67. Mukherjee J. sitting by himself took the view that where a confession made on one day was continued the next day and the Magistrate did not question the accused again and there was nothing to satisfy himself that the confession made on the second day was voluntary, that part of the confession so made was inadmissible. With respect we find it extremely difficult to split up a confession made one day and continued the following day into something partly admissible and partly inadmissible and think either the whole confession should be admitted or rejected. In the Patna decision, it was pointed out by Das J. that the confession as regards the particular dacoity with which that accused was concerned, was narrated on the second day on which no warnings were given. In this particular case by far the greater part of the confession was made on 3-1-1950 and all that would according to the view taken by Mukherjee J. be admissible and only the latter portion recorded on 4-2-1950 would be ruled out. We have no hesitation in taking the view that it is sufficient if before commencing to record a confession, a Magistrate puts the necessary questions required by S. 164 CrI. P.C. to the accused and that it is not mandatory that he should keep on repeating these questions to him after every break in the recording of a long confession.

(9) Mr. Nambiar has referred us to — 'Mannickappa Nagendra Bhagavathar v. The King', 1950 Mad. W.N. Cr. 55 in which one of us Govinda Menon J. and Basheer Ahmed Sayeed J. held that when a Magistrate recording a confession did not record the questions and answers from the accused in direct form but swore in the witness box that he had rule 55 (85?) of the Criminal Rules of Practice before him and put all the necessary questions suggested there, to satisfy himself that the statement was voluntarily made, it was a sufficient compliance with S. 164 CrI. P.C. In — 'Ramaswami v. The State', 1951 Mad. W.N. Cr. 277 a Bench of this Court consisting of one of us Mack J. and Krishnaswami Nayudu J. held that failure to warn an accused that it was not intended to make him an approver as required by Rule 85 did not render the confession inadmissible. In that case, the question had been put in another form as to whether the police had offered inducements that the accused would be released if he made a confession. Mr. Nambiar has also stressed the failure of the Magistrate to act in strict compliance with rule 85 of the Criminal Rules of Practice in not recording his reasons for believing the statement to be voluntary before beginning to record it. The Magistrate however appended the certificate required by S. 164 CrI. P.C. at the end of the confession. S. 164 CrI. P.C. does not require a Magistrate to give reasons before beginning to record a confession for his satisfaction that the accused was going to make a voluntary statement. We think that Rule 85 of the Criminal Rules of Practice requires some revision in view of technical and literal non-compliance with each of the suggested questions being sought to be made a ground of attack to undermine the voluntary nature of the confession. While the questions required to be put by a Magistrate before the accused made a statement are no doubt absolutely necessary to ensure a confession being a voluntary one, it is only we think after the accused has made a statement that a Magistrate, after hearing him and observing his demeanour can be in the best position to append the highly responsible certificate required of him to validate a confession that he believes it to have been voluntarily made.

(10) We see no substance in the legal objection taken to the admissibility of the confessions of either A. 3 or A. 1 as evidence in this trial. Mr. Nambiar has not referred us to any misdirections in the long, exhaustive and able summing up of the learned trial Judge, who has been very fair to all the accused.

(11) On behalf of A. 5 Mr. Rajagopalachari has referred us to some alleged misdirections. Though the appeals were admitted on the legal point of the admissibility of the confessions and not on any misdirections pointed out at the time of admission we would like to deal with them briefly. The evidence against A. 5 was that from his rice mill 201 counterfeit notes were recovered and also a paper cutting machine (M. O. 6) on 23-1-1950. A 6 who was A. 5's son-in-law's brother had been arrested in Erode on 22-1-1950 and from his possession 750 notes and a diary and some letters were recovered. In a telegram Ex. P. 3 was found the Triplicane address of A. 1. In addition to the 201 counterfeit notes recovered in a search of A. 5's house, a telegram Ex. P. 8 from A. 1 to A. 5 "to meet Ramaswami (A. 6) Cochin express and deliver 750 out of your stock" was also recovered. They recovered from A. 5's house a letter Ex. P. 7 and a diary Ex. P. 9. From A. 1's house a letter Ex. P. 39 was recovered purporting to be written by A. 5 on 22-1-1950. According to the Police, it arrived on 23-1-1950 by post when the police were in A. 1's house. A. 5 denied having written this letter, his general defence being that A. 6, who was a lorry owner, was staying in his rice mill and he sought to throw the responsibility for the counterfeit notes found there on A. 6.

The alleged misdirection is that the learned Judge asked the Jury to compare the signature on Ex. P. 39 with A. 5's admitted writing and signature. There was A. 5's writing on his diary Ex. P. 9. Mr. Rajagopalachari however said he was unable to find anything in the nature of an admitted signature by A. 5 on the record. He was not present at the trial nor unfortunately was he instructed by the advocate who was himself present. There must have been admitted signature of A. 5 on record such as his statement in the committing Court and it may well have been one of these signatures, which the learned Judge placed before the jury. We are wholly unable to make any inference of misdirection from the mere inability of the learned advocate to find amongst the actual exhibit an admitted signature of A. 5. It is also urged that the learned Judge did not refer to A. 5's line of defence. We find that he has done so on more than one occasion in his long and elaborate summing up. We are, in fact, quite unable to find any trace of misdirection in the elaborate summing up of the learned Judge, which has been scrupulously fair to each of the accused.

(12) The learned advocate for A. 6 in CrI. Ap. No. 238 of 1951 has conceded that the summing up has been fair to him and is free from any misdirection and that his appeal must fail if the confessions of A. 1 and A. 3 are held to be admissible. A. 6 admitted that he got 750 notes from A. 5 on the night of 22-1-1950. He pleaded that he had to pay about 3½ lakhs in income-tax and that he had approached several persons for loan and also asked A. 1 for a loan of a lakh. There can be no doubt that he received 750 counterfeit notes. The jury did not think that he was in the conspiracy to manufacture and pass off counterfeit notes and gave him the benefit of a reasonable doubt on the count under S. 120-B IPC. We can see no grounds, which would warrant our interference with the unanimous verdict of the jury. We have no hesitation in dismissing A. 6's appeal Crl. Ap. No. 238 of 1951 and also the state appeal Crl. Ap. No. 626 of 1951 against his acquittal on the conspiracy charge, but we reduce the sentence passed on him from 3 years' to 2 years' rigorous imprisonment. We see no reason for any reduction in the sentences the learned Judge has seen fit to impose on the other appellants whose appeals are dismissed.

A/K.S.

Order accordingly.

A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 78*RAMASWAMI J.

Sampoornam, Petitioner v. N. Sundaresan, Respondent.

Criminal Revn. Case No. 86 of 1952 and Criminal Revn. Petn. No. 77 of 1952, D/- 6-8-1952.

Criminal P.C. (1898), S. 488(8) — "Resided" — Temporary residence of parties — Jurisdiction to entertain application.

Sub-Section (8) of S. 488, Criminal Procedure Code, does not necessarily refer to a permanent residence. It refers also to temporary residence. The word "residence" implies something more than a brief visit but not such a continuity as to amount to domicile. Each case has to be dealt with on its merits. In those cases where the parties have no home of any sort and have been moving about from place to place, each place where they do live would be their home for the time being. And the Court within whose jurisdiction they resided last can entertain an application under S. 488. AIR 1918 Cal 785; AIR 1940 Lah 449 and AIR 1942 Mad 666 Rel. on.

(Para 6)

Anno: Cr. P. C., S. 488, N. 28.

A. Nagarajan, for Petitioner; T. S. Venkataraman, for Respondent; The Asst. Public Prosecutor, for the State Prosecutor, for the State.

REFERENCES: Courtwar/Chronological/ Paras

- |  |      |
|--|------|
| ('27) AIR 1927 All 291: (28 Cri LJ 494)                                      | 6    |
| ('46) ILR (1946) All 879: (AIR 1947 All 4: 48 Cri LJ 208)                    | 5    |
| ('29) AIR 1929 Bom 410: (31 Cri LJ 331)                                      | 6    |
| ('30) AIR 1930 Bom 348: (31 Cri LJ 1157)                                     | 6    |
| ('17) 21 Cal WN 872: 18 Cri LJ 706: (AIR 1918 Cal 785)                       | 6    |
| ('40) AIR 1940 Lah 449: (42 Cri LJ 105)                                      | 6    |
| ('35) 1935 Mad WN 475  | 6    |
| ('42) 1942 Mad WN 369: 1942 Mad WN Cri 73: (AIR 1942 Mad 666: 44 Cri LJ 741) | 5, 6 |
| ('21) 63 Ind Cas 870: (AIR 1921 Oudh 168(1): 22 Cri LJ 710)                  | 5    |
| ('26) AIR 1926 Oudh 268: (27 Cri LJ 820)                                     | 6    |
| ('38) AIR 1938 Sind 223: (40 Cri LJ 117)                                     | 6    |

ORDER: This is a criminal revision case which has been filed against an order made by the learned Chief Presidency Magistrate of Madras in M. P. No. 745 of 1951.

(2) The short facts are: The petitioner before us Sampoornam aged about 25 was married to the respondent Sundaresan in Madras in 1939. They lived for a year at No. 2 Hensman Road, T. Nagar, belonging to the father of the petitioner. Then this Sundaresan was employed as an Assistant in the Metallurgical Department at Tatanagar. The marriage was consummated only in June 1940 at Trichirapalli. Then the petitioner joined her husband at Tatanagar. They were visiting Madras as Madras was their first home to attend to business or ceremonies etc. In July 1950 the petitioner came to Madras along with her husband. They stayed for some time in Madras and the husband went back leaving the wife here for medical treatment. The husband has been then writing to her to come to Tatanagar after being restored to health and has been sending remittances to the wife at Madras, showing that the husband was keeping a second establishment at Madras where this petitioner was staying and receiving remittances. Then the husband and wife have fallen out and after protracted emotional correspondence the husband has now married a second wife and is living in Jamshedpur employed as the Chief Inspector, Metallurgical Department, Tata Iron and Steel Company. Hence this maintenance application in the Chief Presidency Magistrate's Court, Madras.

(3) The respondent raised two objections, viz, that first of all the Chief Presidency Magistrate was not entitled to entertain the application on the ground that he had not last resided with his wife at Madras, and secondly, that under clause (4) of S. 488 Criminal Procedure Code, the petitioner was not entitled to maintenance.

(4) The learned Chief Presidency Magistrate dismissed the maintenance application on the ground that he had no jurisdiction to try the case.

(5) The point for determination here is whether on the facts of this case this respondent can be described to come within clause (8) of S. 488 Criminal Procedure Code, viz, that proceedings under this section may be taken against any person in any District where he last resided with his wife. In other words, the controversy turns upon the word "resided". The word "resided" in S. 488 Criminal Procedure Code, has been the subject of several decisions. It implies something more than paying a casual visit as laid down in — 'Balakrishna Naidu v. Mrs. Sakuntala Bai', 1942 Mad W. N. 369, and — 'Ramakumar v. Mst. Rukmini 63 Ind Cas 870 (Oudh)', but is not equivalent to something in the nature of having a domicile in a particular place as laid down in — 'Rifaquat Ullah Khan v. Emperor I. L. R. (1946) All. 879'.

(6) In 'In re Sama Jetha, A. I. R. 1930 Bom. 348' it was held that the words "last resided" are not restricted to permanent residence but include also a temporary residence of two months with the wife at the house of parents-in-law so as to confer jurisdiction on the court of that place. — 'Mrs. F. H. Jolly v. St. John William Jolly, 21 Cal. W. N. 872-18 Cri. L. J. 706', — 'Sher Singh v. Mt. Amir Kunwar, AIR 1927 All. 291' followed; — 'Mt. Ramdel v. Jhunnilal, AIR 1926 Oudh 268' distinguished and 'In re Khairumissa AIR 1929 Bom. 410' considered. Similarly in — 'Krishnaswami Iyer v. Subbalakshmi Ammal, 1935 Mad. W. N. 475' Burn J. held that where it appeared that the last residence of the counter-petitioner with the petitioner was in the Trichinopoly district, though he was permanently employed in Nagpur (Central Provinces), the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Trichinopoly, had jurisdiction to entertain a petition under S. 488 Criminal Procedure Code, against the counter-petitioner. The Calcutta High Court in — 'Mrs. F. H. Jolly v. St. John William Jolly', '21 Cal. W. N. 872:18 Cri. L. J. 706', held that the temporary residence was sufficient to give a Calcutta Court jurisdiction under Sub-sec. (8) of S. 488 Criminal Procedure Code. This must be the case especially where the parties have no home, as in this case, of any sort and have been moving about from place to place and in which case, each place where they so live would be their home for the time being and the last known such place where this counter-petitioner resided with his wife was Madras: Vide — 'Charn Das v. Mt. Surasati Bai', 'AIR 1940 Lah. 449'. In — 'Balakrishna Naidu v. Sakuntala Bai', '1942 Mad. W. N. Cr. 73', Horwill J. pointed out that where a person who follows a profession and is naturally tossed about must necessarily have some place of residence in which he can keep his wife and family and store his furniture and goods and to which he could return and that place of residence would be his permanent residence for the purpose of conferring jurisdiction. In short sub-sec. (8) of S. 428, Criminal Procedure Code, does not necessarily refer to a permanent residence and it refers also to temporary residence and the word "residence" implies something more than a brief visit but not such a continuity as to amount to domicile. Each case has to be dealt with on its merits as has been pointed out in — 'Gangabai v. Pamanmal', 'AIR 1938 Sind 223', bearing in mind that the section should not be so strictly construed as to deprive the woman, who often in these cases is helpless, of assistance from the Court which is most easily accessible to her.

(7) In the present case I have pointed out how the husband was keeping a second establishment at Madras and was working at his profession in Tatanagar and that it was only subsequently that he has got married there and unilaterally terminated the second establishment.

(8) Therefore, the weight of evidence in the case and the principles deducible from the decisions referred to above support the contention of the petitioner that the Presidency Magistrate's Court has got jurisdiction to entertain this maintenance petition.

(9) The order of the learned Chief Presidency Magistrate is set aside and he is directed to restore the petition to file and dispose of it according to law on the merits.

B/V.S.B.

Revision allowed.

A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 79

RAJAMANNAR C. J. AND VENKATARAMA AIYAR J.

M. S. Krishnaswami, Petitioner v. The Council of the Institute of Chartered Accountants of India, Respondent.

Civil Misc. Petn. No. 5035 of 1952, D/- 18-7-1952.

Constitution of India, Art. 133(1)(c) — Orders under S. 21(2) Chartered Accountants Act, are not open to appeal to Supreme Court — "Civil Proceedings" — Applicability of S. 109(c) Civil P. C. — (Chartered Accountants Act (1949), S. 21 (2) ) — (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 109(c) ).

Orders passed under S. 21(2) Chartered Accountants Act are not open to appeal to the Supreme Court under Art. 133(1)(c). Such orders are not passed in civil proceedings.

(Para 2)

There may be proceedings which are neither civil nor criminal within the meaning of Art. 133 and Art. 134 and it cannot be affirmed that every order passed in proceedings other than criminal is open to appeal under Art. 133 as made in civil proceedings. Case law reviewed. (Para 5)

Disciplinary proceedings under S. 21, Chartered Accountants Act, are not civil proceedings. Case law reviewed.

(Para 11)

It cannot be said that whatever proceedings come before the High Court, must be civil proceedings. (1913) AC 546 and AIR 1916 PC 21 Distinguished. Case Law Ref. (Para 13)

S. 109(c) Civil P.C. after its amendment by the Adaptation of Laws Order (1950) is subject to the provisions of Art. 133. (Para 14)

Wide as is the language of S. 109(c) Civil P.C. and Art. 133(3) it cannot be construed as extending to a case in which the rights of no other person than those of the petitioner are involved and in which there is no other question excepting a question of fact in issue.

Consequently even if the petitioner has a right of appeal under S. 109(c) or under Art. 133(4), it was held that it was not a fit case for grant of leave to appeal to the Supreme Court. (Para 15)

Anno: Civil P.C., S. 109 N. 10.

N. Rajagopala Iyengar for S. Swaminathan, for Petitioner; R. Ramamurthy Iyer, for Respondent.

REFERENCES: Courtwar/Chronological/ Paras

('46-51) 4 Moo Ind App 220 (PC)	7
('01) 23 All 227: (28 Ind App 11 PC)	15
('13) 40 Cal 21: (39 Ind App 197 PC)	13
('16) 39 Mad 617: (AIR 1916 PC 21)	13
('21) 44 Mad 293: (AIR 1921 PC 25)	15
('23) 47 Bom 724: (AIR 1923 PC 148)	13
('28) 9 Lah 284: (AIR 1927 PC 242)	13
('50) 1950 SCR 459: (AIR 1950 SC 188)	4
('50) 1950 SCR 453: (AIR 1950 SC 169: 51 Cri LJ 1270 SC)	4
('51) 1951 SCJ 5: (AIR 1951 SC 14)	13
('33) AIR 1933 All 18: (143 Ind Cas 480)	6, 8
('33) 55 All 246: AIR 1933 All 225	6, 8
('34) 56 All 702: AIR 1934 All 898	6, 8, 11
('37) AIR 1937 All 167: (38 Cri LJ 410)	6, 10
('14) 41 Cal 734: (AIR 1914 Cal 557(2): 15 Cri LJ 52)	6
('29) 56 Cal 512: (AIR 1928 Cal 640 FB)	14
('16) 39 Mad 128: (AIR 1916 Mad 1225(1) FB)	6
('22) 43 Mad LJ 382: (AIR 1922 Mad 440 FB)	6, 7, 8, 10
('29) 52 Mad 361: 56 Mad LJ 369: (AIR 1929 Mad 381 SB)	14
('51) 1951-2 Mad LJ 479: (AIR 1951 Mad 1051)	14
('52) AIR 1952 Nag 130: (1952 Cri LJ 749)	4
('19) 4 Pat LJ 423: (AIR 1919 Pat 279: 20 Cri LJ 679)	6, 8, 11
('41) 20 Pat 561: AIR 1941 Pat 225 (SB)	13
('51) 30 Pat 174: (AIR 1951 Pat 29 FB)	4, 5, 13
('30) 8 Rang 40: (AIR 1930 Rang 150)	7
(1905) AC 369: (74 LJ PC 77)	14
(1913) AC 546: (82 LJ KB 1197)	13

VENKATARAMA AIYAR J.: This is an application for leave to appeal to the Supreme Court against the Order passed by this Court in Refd. Case No. 56 of 1951. Messrs. M. S. Krishnaswami and Jagannathan are a firm of Chartered Accountants and they were the auditors of a company called the Amalgamated Coffee Estates Ltd., during the years 1946, 1947 and 1948. On 5-7-1950 Messrs. Devar and Sons Ltd. preferred a complaint to the Council of the Institute of Chartered Accountants that the auditors had passed balance sheets which "did not exhibit a true and correct view of the state of affairs of the company and were calculated to mislead whomsoever it concerned, more especially the debenture holders of the company."

The complainants held considerable debentures in the company. On receipt of the complaint, the Council obtained the explanation of the petitioner who was the partner concerned with the balance sheets and sent the matter to the Disciplinary Committee for enquiry. The Committee took evidence and recorded a finding that the charges against the petitioner had been made out and that he was guilty of "acts and omissions", which rendered him "unfit to be a member of the Institute."

On this finding, the matter came up before this court for hearing under S. 21 (2) of the Chartered Accountants Act (XXXVIII of 1949). By our order dated 22-4-1952, we held that the balance sheets were defective and misleading and that the petitioner was grossly negligent in the discharge of his duties. We accordingly passed an order that he be removed from the rolls for a period of two years. The petitioner applies for leave to appeal to the Supreme Court against this order. The application is opposed by the respondent both on the ground that the order dated 22-4-1952 is not open to appeal and on the ground that even if an appeal was competent, this was not a fit case for granting of leave. The question whether orders passed under S. 21 of the Chartered Accountants Act are open to appeal to the Supreme Court comes up for determination for the first time and it has been fully argued before us by learned Counsel on either side. After considering the matter deeply we have come to the conclusion that the order in question is not open to appeal and that this petition must be dismissed.

(2) Mr. N. Rajagopalan, the learned advocate for the petitioner argues that there is a right of appeal against the order dated 22-4-1952 under Art. 133 (1) (c) of the Constitution, which is in these terms:

"An appeal shall lie to the Supreme Court from any judgment, decree or final order in a civil proceeding of a High Court in the territory of India if the High Court certifies that the case is a fit one for appeal to the Supreme Court."

(3) For this article to apply, the order must have been passed in a civil proceeding and the question that has been debated before us is whether the proceedings under S. 21 of the Chartered Accountants Act are civil proceedings within the meaning of this Article. The argument for the petitioner is that whatever is not a criminal proceeding must be a civil proceeding; that Art. 134 provides for appeal against orders passed in criminal proceedings and that all other orders must be held to have been passed in civil proceedings and that they will be open to appeal under Art. 133. A classification of proceedings into two categories mutually exclusive and together exhaustive such as civil and criminal proceedings would be quite intelligible. But the question that has to be decided is whether that is the scheme that has been adopted in the Constitution. An examination of the relevant provisions does not lend any support to that position. Art. 132 enacts that appeals shall lie from judgments, decrees or orders of a High Court "whether in a civil, criminal or other proceeding" if the cases involve a substantial question of law as to the interpretation of the Constitution. This is a clear indication that there may be proceedings which are neither civil nor criminal.

Article 133 provides for appeals against orders passed in civil proceedings and Art. 134 against orders passed in criminal proceedings. Art. 135 reserves the jurisdiction and powers of the Supreme Court in matters not falling within Art. 133 or 134, if the Federal Court had jurisdiction over such matters at the time of the Constitution. Article 136 (1) provides that, "Notwithstanding anything in this Chapter, the Supreme Court may, in its discretion, grant special leave to appeal from any judgment, decree, determination, sentence or order in any cause or matter passed or made by any court or tribunal in the territory of India."

(4) While Arts. 133 and 134 are limited to orders passed in civil or criminal proceedings, the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court to grant special leave extends to orders passed "in any cause or matter by any court or tribunal." The articles, therefore, clearly contemplate that there may be proceedings other than civil and criminal and that in respect of such other matters, the governing provisions are Arts. 135 and 136. It is also noteworthy that the words used in Art. 136 are "cause or matter" which are of very wide import, as observed by the Supreme Court in — 'Pritam Singh v. the State', 1950 S. C. R. 453 at page 458, and — 'Bharat Bank Ltd. Delhi v. Employees of Bharat Bank Ltd. Delhi', 1950 SCR 459.

In — 'Tobacco Manufacturers (India) Ltd. v. The State', 30 Pat 174 (FB), the point arose for decision as to whether a determination by the High Court on a reference under Sec. 21 (3) of the Bihar Sales-tax Act, 1944, was open to appeal to the Supreme Court under Art. 133. The case was heard in the first instance by Reuben and Das JJ. who held that the order was not one which was passed in a civil proceeding within the meaning of Art. 133. But, there being a difference of opinion as to whether the determination amounted to a judgment within the meaning of that article, the matter was referred to a Full Bench. On the question whether the order was one passed in a civil proceeding, the majority of the Judges, Sarjoo Prosad and Rai JJ. rejected the argument of the petitioner that a civil proceeding means and includes all proceedings except those that are criminal, referred to the decisions under the Income-tax Act in which it had been held that an order passed by the High Court on a reference under S. 66 was not open to appeal to the Privy Council and held that the contention that all proceedings which were not criminal were civil was not warranted by the terms of Arts. 132 to 136. Shearer J. took a contrary view. In — 'Zikar v. State', AIR 1952 Nag 130 at pages 131-132, the question arose for decision whether a conviction for contempt of court was appealable under Art. 134. A Bench of the Nagpur High Court held that proceedings for punishing for contempt were a special jurisdiction "of an anomalous nature" and "suis juris" (sic) and proceeded to observe, "Further it would appear that the Constitution has not made in Part V an exhaustive division of all proceedings before this court into two broad categories, civil and criminal. A glance at clause (1) of Art. 132 dispels any such suggestion. There the expression 'other proceeding' is mentioned in addition to the words 'civil' and 'criminal'."

(5) We are in agreement with the views expressed by the majority Judges in—'Tobacco

Manufacturers (India) Ltd. v. The State, 30 Pat 174 (FB) and — Zikar v. State, AIR 1952 Nag 130 that there may be proceedings which are neither civil nor criminal within the meaning of Art. 133 and Art. 134 and that, therefore, it cannot be affirmed that every order passed in proceedings other than criminal is open to appeal under Art. 133 as made in a civil proceeding.

(6) The larger ground failing, the learned Advocate for the petitioner argues that disciplinary proceedings are civil proceedings within the meaning of Art. 133 and relies on the decisions in — Bahadurlal v. Judges of the High Court, Allahabad, AIR 1933 All 18, — In re R, a pleader, 55 All 246: AIR 1933 All 225; in — S, an advocate v. Judges of the High Court of Allahabad, 56 All. 702: A. I. R. 1934 All 898 and in — P, a pleader, Bansi v. Judges of the High Court of Allahabad, AIR 1937 All 167. Before dealing with these decisions, it will be convenient to refer to the authorities of this court bearing on this question. In — K. R. Ramachandra Aiyar v. The President of the Vakils' Association, High Court, Madras, 39 Mad 128, the facts were that the High Court had passed an order suspending a vakil for a period of three months. The petitioner applied for leave to appeal to the Privy Council against that order. It was held that orders passed in disciplinary proceedings were not appealable under Clause 39 of the Letters Patent and the decisions in — re An Attorney, 41 Cal 734 and — G. S. D. v. Govt. Pleader, 32 Bom 106 were followed. In — In the matter of E. Raghava Reddi, High Court Vakil, practising at Nellore, 43 Mad L J 382 (FB), the question was again considered by a Full Bench of five Judges. They held that the order of suspension passed in exercise of a disciplinary jurisdiction was not open to appeal. The following observations in the judgment of the learned Chief Justice might be quoted:

"In my judgment this matter is so far concluded by authority that it would not be possible without a decision of the Privy Council to the contrary to say that there is power in the High Court of Madras to grant leave to appeal to Privy Council in a case where an order is made by the court suspending a vakil from practice."

Reliance was also placed on a decision of the Patna High Court reported in — Bir Kisore Roy v. Emperor, 4 Pat LJ 423. In that case a pleader had been suspended by the High Court in the exercise of its jurisdiction under the Legal Practitioners Act. In an application by the petitioner for leave to appeal to the Privy Council against the order of suspension, Dawson Miller C. J. after observing that there was no right of appeal provided by the Legal Practitioners Act, went on to discuss whether such a right was conferred by the Letters Patent. He observed:

"Clauses 9 to 27 of the Letters Patent deal with the different classes of jurisdiction which are conferred on the High Court. They are civil, criminal, Admiralty, Testamentary and Intestate and Matrimonial jurisdiction, Appellate and Original. The next three clauses deal with the procedure, and clauses 31 to 34 deal with appeals to the Privy Council. In my opinion, the clauses dealing with the right of appeal to His Majesty in Council were meant to be confined to the different classes of jurisdiction above enumerated and not to the administrative or disciplinary powers conferred on the court by earlier clauses in the Letters Patent or by a Statute. The use of the word 'jurisdiction' in clause 31 clearly seems to indicate that the appeals referred to are appeals from judgments, decrees, and orders passed in the exercise of one or other of the classes of jurisdiction conferred by clauses 9 to 27 where the word 'jurisdiction' is used."

(7) The learned Chief Justice then referred to the decision in — Re James Minchin, 4 Moo Ind App 220 (P. C.), where the question raised was whether the dismissal of the Master on the Original Side of the High Court under the powers conferred by the Charter on charges of misconduct was open to appeal to the Privy Council and it was held that it was not, notwithstanding that the terms of the Charter provided for an appeal against determinations "in any civil cause". The learned Chief Justice observed that the jurisdiction conferred by cl. 31 of the Letters Patent corresponding to cl. 39 of the Letters Patent of this Court was not wider than that conferred by the clauses in the Madras Charter. In the result, it was held that there was no right of appeal against orders passed in exercise of disciplinary powers whether under the Letters Patent or under a Statute. On this reasoning which was approved by the learned Chief Justice in — In the matter of Mr. E. Raghava Reddi, High Court Vakil, practising at Nellore, 43 Mad L J 382 it would follow that disciplinary jurisdiction is a special jurisdiction conferred on the court and an order passed therein would not be open to appeal as an order passed in a civil proceeding. The question was also considered by the Rangoon High Court in the case reported in — In the matter of an advocate, 8 Rang 40. The appealability of orders passed in exercise of disciplinary jurisdiction was considered both with reference to the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code and the Letters Patent. It was held that the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code would have no application to these proceedings which "were in the nature of a purely disciplinary enquiry" and that the appeal would be incompetent under the Letters Patent as well.

(8) We shall now consider the decisions of the Allahabad High Court relied on by Mr. N. Rajagopalan in support of the position that orders passed in the exercise of disciplinary jurisdiction would be appealable under S. 109 (c) of the Civil Procedure Code. In — Bahadurlal v. Judges of the High Court, Allahabad, AIR 1933 All 18, leave to appeal to the Privy Council against an order suspending a practitioner was granted under S. 109 (c), the Court observing,

"It appears that this High Court has on previous occasion treated such application as falling under S. 109 (c) C. P. C. and granted leave in fit cases. The words of that section are no doubt general and leave to appeal from any order is allowed when the case is certified to be a fit one for appeal to His Majesty in Council."

There was no discussion of the question and no reference to the authorities of the other courts where a different view had been taken. This decision was followed in — In re R. a pleader', 55 All 246: AIR 1933 All 225, wherein after stating that,

"The learned Government advocate has drawn our attention to several decisions of different High Courts, one from Patna, another from Madras and a third from Calcutta where it was held that in the case of an Advocate or Attorney being suspended from practice, the High Court was not authorised to grant leave to His Majesty in Council"

the learned Judges observed:

"In view of the fact that the practice of this court has been consistent, we do not propose to depart from that practice and we hold that leave may be granted under S. 109 (c) C. P. C. We may point out that if leave cannot be granted under that section of the Civil Procedure Code, it may be granted under S. 30, Letters Patent".

In — 'S, an advocate v. Judges of the Allahabad High Court', 56 All 702: AIR 1934 All 898, the question was discussed more fully. Referring to the decisions in — 'In the matter of E. Raghava Reddi', 43 Mad L J 382 and — 'Bir Kishore Roy v. Emperor', 4 Pat L J 423 the court observed:

"The view which seems to have prevailed in other High Courts is that when the High Court exercises its power to remove or suspend from practice on reasonable cause an Advocate or Pleader, it is not exercising any jurisdiction at all but is merely exercising its special power. It seems to have been assumed that the jurisdiction mentioned in Cl. 30, Letters Patent must mean only Civil, Criminal, Admiralty, Testamentary, Intestate & Matrimonial jurisdiction, whether original or appellate and could not include any other class of jurisdiction. If one were confined to the clauses of the Letters Patent alone, it may well be said that the word 'jurisdiction' was not used therein in connection with any other class of exercise of power."

(9) Having expressed the view that the appeal to the Privy Council might be incompetent under the terms of the Letters Patent, the court proceeded to hold that S. 109 (c) was wide enough to confer a right of appeal in such cases and support for this view was found in the provisions of the Bar Councils Act, 1926 and particularly in S. 13 (4) of that Act which runs as follows:

"Proceedings before a Tribunal or a District court in any such enquiry shall be deemed to be civil proceedings for the purposes of S. 132 of the Indian Evidence Act 1872, and the provisions of that section shall apply accordingly."

(10) This decision was followed in — 'P, a pleader, Bansi v. Judges of the High Court of Allahabad', AIR 1937 All 167. It will thus be seen that the authorities of the Allahabad High Court are largely based upon the practice of that court and if that is to be the guiding principle, we would be bound to follow the settled practice of this court and hold that no appeal lies against orders passed in the exercise of disciplinary jurisdiction. That was the position taken in the Full Bench decision in — 'In the matter of Mr. E. Raghavareddi', 43 Mad L J 382 and the case for following 'cursus curiae' is now, if anything, stronger.

(11) It was argued for the petitioner that whatever might have been the position where disciplinary action is taken in exercise of inherent jurisdiction, where such a jurisdiction is conferred by a Statute, the proceedings become impressed with the character of civil proceedings and Art. 133 will apply to them. We are unable to agree with this contention. We fail to see how the right of appeal can depend on whether the order was passed in exercise of a jurisdiction which is inherent in the court of a jurisdiction which is conferred by a Statute on the court. If there is a right of appeal only against orders passed in civil proceedings, the determination of this right must depend on the nature of the jurisdiction that is exercised and not on the source of authority which confers that jurisdiction. In fact the decision in — 'Bir Kishore Roy v. Emperor', 4 Pat L J 423, is with reference to an order passed under the special jurisdiction conferred by the Legal Practitioners Act and the court held that the appeal to the Privy Council was incompetent whether the disciplinary jurisdiction was exercised under the clauses of the Letters Patent or under a Statute.

Reliance is placed on the observations in — 'S, an advocate v. Judges of the Allahabad High Court', 56 All 702, where it was held that the disciplinary jurisdiction conferred on the High Court by the Bar Councils Act was a civil proceeding. For the reason already given, we are unable to agree that the conferment of disciplinary jurisdiction by a Statute has any bearing on the nature of the proceedings. Nor are we impressed by the argument that S. 13 (4) of the Bar Councils Act is a legislative declaration that it is a civil proceeding. It merely enacts that the proceedings under the Act shall be deemed to be civil proceedings for the purposes of S. 132 of the Evidence Act. A thing is deemed to be something only when it is not that and the true import of the provision in the Act is that proceedings under the Act are not civil proceedings, but that for the limited purpose of the applicability of S. 132 of the Evidence Act they should be treated as if they were civil proceedings. In the Chartered Accountants Act there is not even a similar provision. We are of opinion that the jurisdiction conferred on this court under S. 21 is only a disciplinary jurisdiction and that it is not a civil proceeding.

(12) Another contention of the petitioner similar to the one just disposed of was that the jurisdiction conferred by the Act is not a disciplinary jurisdiction because while Advocates and Practitioners are officers of court and it might properly be said that the jurisdiction which the Court has over them is a disciplinary jurisdiction, the same could not be said of Chartered Accountants, who are third parties and that any orders passed against them could not be said to be in the exercise of disciplinary jurisdiction. There is no substance in this objection. A disciplinary action consists in punishing a person for misconduct. While in the case of officers of court the jurisdiction may be inherent, in the case of strangers the jurisdiction can be exercised only if it is conferred by a Statute. But when once a Statute confers such a jurisdiction, it stands on the same footing as inherent jurisdiction and it does not lose its character as a disciplinary jurisdiction because it has its origin in a Statute. The jurisdiction over Legal Practitioners Act and Attorneys is also a statutory jurisdiction conferred either under the Letters Patent or the Legal Practitioners Act or the Bar Councils Act. It may be mentioned that the Chartered Accountants Act expressly provides that the Council should constitute a Disciplinary Committee for enquiry of complaints and that was done in the present case. We are accordingly of opinion that the fact that Chartered Accountants are not officers of Court does not alter the character of jurisdiction which the High Court exercises over them under the Act.

(13) It was next argued that the reference under S. 21 of the Chartered Accountants Act was to the High Court as a court, that a right of appeal against orders made by the High Court is conferred by S. 109 Civil Procedure Code and that on the principle that when matters are referred for the adjudication of a civil court, that will attract the normal procedure of that court including a right of appeal, an appeal would lie to the Supreme Court against the order dated 22-4-1952 and reference was made to the decisions in — 'National Telephone Co. Ltd. v. Postmaster General (2)', (1913) A. C. 546 at p. 552 and — 'Secretary of State for India v. Chellikani Ramarao', 39 Mad 617 (PC). But these authorities do not lay down that whatever proceedings come before a civil court must be held to be civil proceedings. That must depend on the nature of the proceedings. Thus, where the proceedings are in the nature of an arbitration and the order is in the nature of an award, no appeal will lie, notwithstanding that the decision is by a civil court. That was held in — 'Rangoon Botatoung Co. Ltd. v. Collector of Rangoon', 40 Cal 21 (PC) as regards a reference under the Land Acquisition Act.

It was likewise held that in dealing with references under S. 66 of the Indian Income-tax Act the High Court was acting in an advisory and consultative jurisdiction and that orders passed under that section were not open to appeal to the Privy Council. (Vide — 'Tata Iron and Steel Co. Ltd. v. Chief Revenue Authority, Bombay', 47 Bom 724 (PC), — 'Delhi Cloth and General Mills Co. Ltd. v. Commr. of Incometax, Delhi', 9 Lah 284 (PC) and — 'Harihar Gir v. Commr. of Incometax, Bihar and Orissa', 20 Pat 561: AIR 1941 Pat 225 (SB).

The Supreme Court has also held that that is the position as regards orders passed on references under the Bihar Sales-tax Act, 1944 in — 'Prem Chand v. State of Bihar', 1951 SCJ 5; Vide also — 'Tobacco Manufacturers v. State', 30 Pat 174. Therefore what has to be considered is not whether a matter has been determined by a Civil Court, but whether the determination is in a civil proceeding.

In — 'National Telephone Co. v. Postmaster General (2)', (1913) A.C. 546, the question was with reference to the value to be put on a plant sold by the National Telephone Company to the Postmaster General. It was provided in the Telegraph Arbitration Act, 1909, that any dispute regarding valuation should be referred to the decision of a commission which was functioning under the Railway and Canal Traffic Acts. Under those Acts the commission was a court of record and appeals were provided against its decisions. The point for decision was whether, a right of appeal against the decision of the commission not having been expressly conferred under the Act of 1909 the appeal was competent under the procedure applicable to the commission under the Railway and Canal Traffic Acts. It was held that as the Act of 1909 provided for a reference generally to an existing statutory commission without special provisions as to appeal, the procedure of that court was attracted in all respects. Viscount Haldane, Lord Chancellor, observed as follows:

"When a question is stated to be referred to an established court without more, it, in my opinion, imports that the ordinary incidents of the procedure of that court, are to attach, and also that any general right of appeal from its decisions likewise attaches."

It will be noticed that the dispute which had to be determined in that case was as to the price of a plant to be paid to the vendor by the purchaser and that was clearly a civil right. In — 'Secretary of State for India v. Chellikani Ramarao', 39 Mad 617 though the proceedings arose under the Forest Act, the dispute related to the ownership of islands in a tidal river. As to this, the Privy Council observed as follows:

"The claim was the assertion of a legal right to possession of and property in land; and if the ordinary courts of the country are seized of a dispute of that character, it would require, in the opinion of the Board, a specific limitation to exclude the ordinary incidents of litigation."

This passage clearly shows that it is not sufficient that the determination is by the ordinary courts. Regard must be had also to the character of the dispute. There is nothing in these two decisions to support the contention that all matters which are referred to the determination of civil courts must be held to be civil proceedings without reference to their nature.

(14) It was finally argued that the right of the petitioner to appeal against the order dated 22-4-1952 should be determined with reference to the law as it stood when the misconduct of the petitioner on which the order was based took place, that is in 1946, 1947 and 1948; that under S. 109(c) which was the provision of law then in force any order could be taken on appeal whether it was passed in a civil proceeding or not; that Art. 133 did not take away that right; that Art. 135 expressly reserved it; and that, therefore, the appeal was competent. Apart from the question whether S. 109(c) would apply to such orders, which has been already discussed it has to be noted that the section was amended by the Adaptation of Laws Order promulgated on 26-1-1950 and as amended the section runs as follows:

"Subject to the provisions in Chapter IV of Part V of the Constitution and such rules as may from time to time be made from the courts of India and to the provisions herein-after contained, an appeal shall lie to the Supreme Court from any decree or order when the case, as hereinafter provided is certified to be a fit one for appeal to the Supreme Court."

Article 133 finds a place in Chapter IV of Part V. After 26-1-1950 the right of appeal conferred by S. 109(c) is therefore, subject to the limitations of Art. 133 and that has also been held by this court in — 'Ramaswami Chettiar v. Official Receiver, Ramanathapuram', 1951-2-Mad L J 479 at pp. 483, 484. The petitioner seeks to get over this difficulty by referring to the principle well established that the right of appeal is a vested right and not a mere matter of procedure (Vide — 'the Colonial Sugar Refining Co. Ltd. v. Irwing', (1905) A. C. 369 (PC)). But in this case though the charge against the petitioner was that he was guilty of misconduct in 1946, 1947 and 1948, the complaint itself was filed on 5-7-1950 and the Order of this court thereon was passed on 22-4-1952 and the authorities clearly establish that the right of appeal is to be determined as on the date of the commencement of the proceedings and not on any earlier date when the cause of action on which the proceedings are founded arose. Vide — 'In re Vasudeva Samiar', 52 Mad 361 (SB) and — 'Sadar Ali v. Doliludin Otagar', 56 Cal 512 (FB). This argument must, therefore, be rejected. We are accordingly of opinion that Art. 133 of the Constitution governs this case; that the proceedings under the Chartered Accountants Act are not civil proceedings within the meaning of that article; and that no appeal lies against the order dated 22-4-1952.

(15) This is sufficient to dispose of this application. But we have also considered the matter on the footing that the order in question is open to appeal either under Art. 133(3) or S. 109(c). In either case, the point for determination is whether it is a fit case for appeal under these provisions. The principles governing the grant of leave under S. 109(c) are well settled. In — 'Banarsi Prasad v. Kashi Kishen Narain', 23 All 227 (PC), Lord Hobhouse in dealing with this provision observed as follows:

"That is clearly intended to meet special cases; such, for example, as those in which the point in dispute is not measurable by money, though it may be of great public or private importance."

In — 'Radhakrishna Aiyar v. Swaminatha Aiyar', 44 Mad 293 (PC) Lord Buckmaster explained the scope of this provision in the following terms:

"It is plain that there may be certain cases in which it is impossible to define in money value the exact character of the dispute; there are questions, as for example, those relating to religious rights and ceremonies, to caste and family rights, or such matters as the reduction of the capital of companies as well as questions of wide public importance in which the subject-matter in dispute cannot be reduced into actual terms of money. Subsec. (c) of S. 109, C. P. C. contemplates that such a state of things exists, and rule 3 of Or. XLV regulates the procedure."

The same considerations will also govern applications under Art. 133(3). Applying these tests, we have not been shown that this case involves any question of great public or private importance. The sole question for determination in these proceedings was whether the petitioner was grossly negligent in the discharge of his duties and whether the balance sheets were defective and misleading. The Disciplinary Committee which enquired into the matter was of the opinion that the charges had been made out and this court, on a consideration of all the facts and circumstances of the case, agreed with the conclusion. That is a pure question of fact and does not raise any question of public or private importance. It is contended that our finding must have a serious effect on the professional career of the petitioner. But no case has been cited to us in which leave had been granted under this section when the decision affected only an individual and no question of general importance was involved. Reliance was placed on the decisions of the Allahabad High Court where leave to appeal had been granted under this clause against orders suspending legal practitioners on the ground that the order would affect their professional career. This view has not been accepted in this court and would be contrary to the principles laid down by the Judicial Committee as to the true scope of S. 109(c). It was argued that the extent of the duties of an auditor comes up for consideration by the courts for the first time and that is a question of public importance. But those duties are clearly defined and set out in the text books cited on behalf of the petitioner and there has been no dispute before us as to the nature and extent of those duties. What was in controversy was a mere question of fact. Wide as is the language of S. 109(c) and Art. 133(3) it cannot be construed as extending to a case in which the rights of no other person than those of the petitioner are involved and in which there is no other question excepting a question of fact in issue. We are accordingly of opinion that even if the petitioner has a right of appeal under S. 109(c) or under Art. 133(3), that is not a fit case for grant of leave to appeal to the Supreme Court. This petition will, therefore, be dismissed.

A/R.G.D.

Petition dismissed.

A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 84

SUBBA RAO J.

K. Raman and Co., Tellicherry, by its Managing Proprietor, Kodirvo Kannan Chettiar, Petitioner v. The State of Madras and another, Respondents.

Writ Petn. No. 21 of 1951, D/- 29-7-1952.

Constitution of India, Art. 226 — Certiorari — Writ of — Grounds — Refusal to issue yarn and cloth dealer's license on sole ground that petitioner had not produced income-tax verification certificate and was in arrears.

The fact that a person is in arrears of income-tax is not germane to the issue of a licence under the Yarn Dealers Control Order. It is a circumstance extraneous to the right of the person concerned to carry on his business. The Incometax Act provides an adequate machinery for realising the arrears due from an assessee.

Hence, where the Collector refuses to renew a yarn and cloth dealer's license on the sole ground that the petitioner had not produced the income-tax and excess profits tax verification certificate and that the firm was in arrears, relying upon the Madras Government G. O. No. 867 (Finance, dated 16-8-1949), the order of the Collector is liable to be quashed by certiorari. The order discloses that the Collector was using his powers under the Yarn Dealers Control Order for the purpose of collecting the amounts due to the Government of India. The restriction imposed was unreasonable and was not in the interests of the general public.

(Para 4)

A. Achuthan Nambiar and P. Anandan Nair, for Petitioner; Govt. Pleader, for Respondent.

ORDER: This is an application for the issue of a Writ of Certiorari to quash the order of the Collector of Malabar refusing to renew the licence in favour of the petitioner. The petitioner is a firm carrying on business in Telli-cherry in North Malabar district under the style of K. Raman and Co. The firm was a holder of a Retail Yarn Dealer's licence No. 10 KTM, wholesale cloth licence No. 26/MBR and Retail cloth licence No. 221/KTM under the provisions of the Yarn Dealer's Order, the Textile Control Order and the Madras Cloth (Dealers) Control Order, 1948. These three licences were renewed upto 31-3-1950. The petitioner applied for further renewal of the licences but the Collector of Malabar refused to renew the licences on the sole ground that he had not produced the Income Tax and Excess Profits tax verification certificates and that the firm was in arrears to the extent of Rs. 37293-14-0.

(2) Learned counsel for the petitioner contended that the order of the Collector was arbitrary and the reason given was not germane to the issue of a licence.

(3) Learned Government Pleader relied upon the order, G. O. No. 867 Finance dated 16-8-1949. The relevant portion of the order reads as follows:

"They (the Madras Government) have decided that financial patronage at their disposal, e.g., in the matter of granting contracts, placing orders for supplies and services, grant of permits and licences etc. should be given only to those who produce a certificate of incometax verification from the incometax authorities on the analogy of the procedure adopted by the Government of India in respect of applications for export and import licences. The heads of departments are accordingly informed that applications for contracts, supplies, permits, licences, quotas and priorities etc., should not be considered unless the individual concerned produces the incometax verification certificates in the forms appended to these proceedings."

(4) The petitioner is a citizen of India and has the fundamental right to carry on the trade which he has been doing. The State can only put a reasonable restriction upon his right in the interests of general public. But, in this case, the order of the Collector discloses that he is using his powers under the Yarn Dealers' Control Order for the purpose of collecting the amounts due to the Government of India. The fact that a person is in arrears of incometax is not germane to the issue of a licence under the Yarn Dealers Control Order. It is a circumstance extraneous to the petitioner's right to carry on his business. The Incometax Act provides an adequate machinery for realising the arrears due from an assessee. I am of the view that the restriction imposed is unreasonable and is not in the interests of the general public.

(5) The impugned order is hereby quashed. The respondents will pay the costs of the petitioner.

A/V.B.B.

Order quashed.

A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 85

SATYANARAYANA RAO AND VISHWANATHA SASTRI JJ.

S. M. Zackariah Sahib, at Sathankulam, Applicant v. The Commissioner of Income Tax, Madras, Respondent.

Case Referred No. 59 of 1948, D/- 29-3-1951.

Income Tax Act (1922) S. 4 A (a) (ii) — "Maintains or has maintained for him a dwelling place" — Expression explained.

The expression "maintains a dwelling place" connotes the idea that the assessee owns or has taken on rent or on a mortgage with possession a dwelling house which he can legally and as of right occupy, if he is so minded, during his visit to British India and the expression "has maintained for him" would cover a case where the assessee has a right to occupy or live in a dwelling place during his stay in British India though the expenses of maintaining the dwelling place are not met by him in whole or in part.

(Paras 2 & 3)

The assessee, a Muhammadan merchant, carried on business in Ceylon and usually resided there. His parents lived at S in Madras Presidency in a house owned by his mother. The assessee's wife lived some times with his parents and some times with her parents. The assessee was remitting monies now and then to his parents for their maintenance. The assessee visited British India during years of account and during such visits stayed with his parents in their house at S.

Held that the assessee had no dwelling place maintained for him in British India and he was not a resident in British India within the meaning of S. 4A (a) (ii).

(Paras 1 & 7)

Anno: Income Tax Act, S. 4 A N. 1.

K. Srinivasan and M. J. Swami, for Applicant; C. S. Rama Rao Sahib, for Respondent.

REFERENCES: Courtwar/Chronological/ Paras

(1925) 9 Tax Cas 261 5

(1926) 10 Tax Cas 424 4

(1928) AC 217: (97 LJ KB 385) 4

VISWANATHA SASTRI J: The question referred for decision is as follows:

"Whether on the facts and in the circumstances of the case the applicant had a dwelling place maintained for him and was a resident in British India within the meaning of S. 4-A(a) (ii) in the year of account".

The years of assessment in question are 1941-42 and 1942-43. The facts found by the Tribunal and adverted to in the statement of the case are these. The assessee, a Muhammadan merchant, carried on business in Ceylon and usually resided there. His parents lived at Sathangulam in the Tinnevely district in a house owned by his mother. The assessee's wife whom he married in 1940 lived some times with his parents and some times with her parents in their respective villages in the Tinnevely district. The assessee was remitting monies now and then to his parents for their maintenance. The assessee visited British India during the years of account and during such visits stayed with his parents in their house at Sathangulam. On these facts the Appellate Tribunal held that the assessee was resident in British India within the meaning of S. 4-A(a) (ii) of the Incometax Act overruling the decision of the appellate Assistant Commissioner. Under the statutory provision above referred to, an individual is resident in British India if he "maintains or has maintained for him a dwelling place in British India for a period or periods amounting in all to 182 days or more in that year and is in British India at any time in that year"

The latter requisite is satisfied in this case and the dispute is whether the assessee maintained or had maintained for him a dwelling place in British India in the years of account.

(2) It cannot be said in this case that the assessee maintained a dwelling place. The house where the assessee stayed during his visits to British India belonged to his mother where she and the assessee's father lived. The expression "maintains a dwelling place" connotes the idea that the assessee owns or has taken on rent or on a mortgage with possession a dwelling house which he can legally and as of right occupy if he is so minded, during his visit to British India. That is not the case here for the assessee has no legal right to occupy the house in Sathangulam which belongs exclusively to his mother. The further question is whether it can be said that the assessee "has maintained for him a dwelling place at Sathangulam".

(3) In our opinion the expression "has maintained for him" would certainly cover a case where the assessee has a right to occupy or live in a dwelling place during his stay in British India though the expenses of maintaining the dwelling place are not met by him in whole or in part. A member of an undivided Hindu family or of a Malabar 'tarwad' or of an Aliasanthana family has a right to live in the family house when he goes there, though the house is maintained by the manager of the family and not by the assessee from his own funds. If the undivided family is sufficiently affluent or if the members are large enough a separate dwelling house might be set apart by the manager for the occupation of one or more members of the family as a matter of convenience. In such cases it can be said that the assessee has a dwelling place maintained for him by the manager of the family for he has a right to occupy the house during his visits to British India.

(4) Would the actual or 'de facto' use or occupation of the house of another person by reason of some relationship or friendship without any kind of right to use or occupy the premises make a person a "resident" within the meaning of the above definition. The decision in — 'Loewenstein v. De Salis', (1926) 10 Tax Cas. 424 which proceeds on the basis that an assessee need not be the owner or the lessee of a dwelling place or be holding any proprietary interest therein to make him a resident has been relied upon by Mr. Rama Rao Sahib, the learned advocate for the Commissioner of Incometax. In that case Rowlatt J. observed that if the lease of the premises would not put him in any better position so far as having the house and the availability of it, and the power of coming to it were concerned, then it can be said that the house was maintained for the assessee.

In that case the assessee maintained an establishment for throughout the year in the house and as the director of a limited company in which he held 90 per cent of the shares, the assessee was in a position to occupy the house belonging to the company without applying for or obtaining any formal permission from the company. Rowlatt J. also observed that in determining a question like residence, one had to consider a bundle of facts and their cumulative effect. The House of Lords has laid down the rule that the question of residence is one of fact and degree and depends upon a consideration of various factors. See — 'Inland Revenue Commrs. v. Lysaght', (1928) A. C. 217; — 'Levene v. Inland Revenue Commrs'. (1928) A. C. 234.

(5) Mr. Srinivasan, learned counsel for the assessee referred us to the decision in — 'Pickles v. Foulsham', (1925) 9 Tax Cas. 261 particularly to the judgment of Rowlatt J. at pages 275 and 276 of the report. The learned Judge referred to the previous decisions and suggested many points of view from which the question of residence of a person could be viewed. The actual decision in the case was that a person who rented and kept a house for his wife and children in Blackpool in England and who came there now and then on a holiday visit was resident in England even though his employment obliged him to stay in the West Coast of Africa for some years. If there is a rented house and an establishment kept continuously to which the assessee could always come to and if he stayed in the house for some time in the year he would be a resident according to the English decisions. As Rowlatt J. observed "a good deal depends upon rather minute colouring in a case like this".

(6) In this connection regard must be had also to the habits and usages of the people of this country. In England a man who marries sets up at once a separate establishment for himself and his wife and the parents reside separately from him. In India, at any rate among members of a joint Hindu family, the home of a married man is more often than not the home of his parents. But here the assessee is a Muhammadan and among Muhammadans there is no joint family and sons have no interest in ancestral property during the lifetime of their parents. Moreover, we are not here concerned with the dictionary meaning of the word "reside" or "residence" but with the statutory definition of residence given in S. 4-A(a) (ii) of the Incometax Act.

(7) In referring the question to us in the form in which it has been referred the Tribunal evidently required our opinion on the point whether on the facts found by them they could come to the conclusion that the assessee was a resident in British India. The outstanding fact is that the assessee's mother owns a house at Sathangulam and she and the assessee's father permanently reside there. A dwelling house is maintained by the parents and for the parents of the assessee. The recently wedded wife of the assessee lives sometimes with her own parents and sometimes with her parents-in-law. The assessee goes to his mother's house as a visitor. It is not as if he goes there as going at home.

It is not as if the assessee is going to Sathangulam and staying for long periods of time so as to make his mother's house his second home. His business keeps him in Ceylon and his visits to Sathangulam appear to have been sporadic. He has no establishment maintained for him in Sathangulam. The dwelling place at Sathangulam is maintained for the parents of the assessee and not for the assessee himself. The fact that the assessee remits money now and then for the maintenance of his wife or his aged parents does not mean that the dwelling house owned by his mother and in which his parents live becomes a dwelling place maintained for him. He may maintain his wife or parents and from this circumstance it cannot be said that the mother's house is maintained for the assessee. For these reasons we answer the question referred to us in the negative and against the Commissioner of Incometax. The assessee will get Rs. 250/- the costs of this reference.

A/V.R.B.

Question answered.

A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 86

RAJAMANNAR C. J. AND VENKATARAMA AYYAR J.

V. O. Vakkan, Appellant v. The Government of the Province of Madras, represented by the Collector of Malabar at Calicut, Respondent.

Appeal No. 185 of 1950, D/- 28-3-1952.

(a) International Law (Private) — Statute of one country imposing tax on non-resident foreigner in respect of profits earned in transactions taking place within its territorial limits — Statute cannot be held to be inconsistent with rule of international law.

It is no doubt a rule of international law that the laws of one country can have no intrinsic force, proprio vigore, except within the territorial limits and jurisdiction of that country. They can bind only its own subjects, and others who are within its jurisdictional limits; and the latter only while they remain therein. Another maxim or proposition is that no State or nation can by its laws directly affect or bind property out of its own territory or bind persons not resident therein whether they are natural born subjects or not.

(Para 6)

But from this rule of law which is certainly well established it does not follow that one who is not a resident of a State can escape from or evade the imposition of taxes by the particular state if the necessary requirements are fulfilled which would justify the levy of a tax. The statute of any country imposing a tax on the profits earned by a person in transactions which take place within the State is not inconsistent with the above rule of international law.

(Paras 7 & 8)

(b) Sales Tax — Madras General Sales Tax Act (9 of 1939), S. 2(b) — “Dealer” — Non-resident assessee — Principal place of business in Cochin State — Contracts of sale executed in Madras State — Delivery of goods also made in Madras State — Assessee held was dealer and was liable to sales tax in respect of such sales — (Constitution of India, Art. 286).

The assessee's principal place of business was in Palluruthy in the Cochin State. He was also a resident of that place. He had large dealings with European firms in Fort Cochin (part of Madras State) to whom he sold coir yarn. The contracts of sale were made in Fort Cochin. The assessee or his son was present in Fort Cochin and executed the contracts. The delivery of the goods was undertaken to be given in the yards of the respective buyers who were all carrying on business in Fort Cochin.

The assessee was assessed to sales tax under the Madras General Sales Tax Act in respect of such sales which had taken place in Fort Cochin.

Held that the assessee must be held to be a person who carried on the business of buying or selling goods in the State of Madras and therefore a dealer within the meaning of S. 2(b) of the Act. The Sales tax is a tax levied on the occasion of the sale of goods. The sales must be deemed to have taken place in Fort Cochin which is part of the State of Madras. The assessee was, therefore, rightly assessed under the Act. Case law discussed.

(Para 17)

T. V. Muthukrishna Aiyar, N. R. Sessa Aiyar, C. T. Verghese and A. V. Ramanatha Aiyar, for Appellant; Govt. Pleader and V. Balakrishna Eradi, for Respondent.

REFERENCES: Courtwar/Chronological/ Paras
 (42) 1942 FCR 90: (AIR 1942 FC 33) 17
 (19) 42 Mad 455: (AIR 1919 Mad 209) 9, 10
 (21) 44 Mad 773: (AIR 1921 Mad 212 SB) 16
 (29) 52 Mad 207: (AIR 1929 Mad 409) 10
 (1896) AC 325: (65 LJ QB 410) 9, 14
 (1908) AC 46: (77 LJ PC 31) 9, 15
 (1926) AC 37: (95 LJ KB 165) 8
 (1879) 12 Ch D 522: (41 LT 46) 7

(1860) 157 ER 1364: (5 H & N 711) 11

(1882) 8 QBD 414: (51 LJ QB 86) 12, 13, 14

(1888) 20 QBD 753: (57 LJ QB 323) 13, 16

RAJAMANNAR C. J.: This appeal arises out of a suit filed by the appellant in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Cochin for a declaration that certain orders passed by the Deputy Commercial Tax Officer, by the Commercial Tax Officer on appeal and by the Board of Revenue on revision in respect of sales tax assessment for 1945-46 are illegal, ultra vires, unauthorised and opposed to the provisions of the Madras General Sales Tax Act and the rules framed thereunder. The learned Subordinate Judge dismissed the suit and hence the appeal.

(2) The facts of this case can be better understood by first referring to the material provisions of the Madras General Sales Tax Act (Act IX of 1939) and the rules framed thereunder. This Act was amended in 1947 and 1949. But we are concerned in this case with the provisions of the Act as they stood before these amendments. The descriptive title of the Act is:

“An Act to provide for the levy of a general tax on the sale of goods in the Province of Madras.”

The following definitions in section 2 are important.

“(b) ‘dealer’ means any person who carries on the business of buying or selling goods.

* * * * *

Explanation (2) — The agent of a person resident outside the Province who carries on the business of buying or selling goods in the province shall be deemed to be the dealer in respect of such business for the purposes of this Act.

“(c) ‘goods’ means all kinds of movable property other than actionable claims, stocks and shares and securities and includes all materials, commodities and articles;

“(h) ‘sale’ with all its grammatical variations and cognate expressions means every transfer of the property in goods by one person to another in the course of trade or business for cash or for deferred payment or other valuable consideration, but does not include a mortgage, hypothecation, charge or pledge;

Explanation: A transfer of goods on the hire-purchase or other instalment system of payment shall notwithstanding the fact that the seller retains the title in the goods as security for payment of the price, be deemed to be a sale.

(i) ‘turnover’ means the aggregate amount for which goods are either bought by or sold by a dealer, whether for cash or for deferred payment or other valuable consideration provided that the proceeds of the sale by a person of agricultural or horticultural produce grown by himself or grown on any land in which he has an interest whether as owner, usufructuary mortgagee, tenant or otherwise, shall be excluded from his turnover.

Section 3 is the charging section and is in the following terms:

“3(1) Subject to the provisions of this Act, every dealer shall pay in each year a tax in accordance with the scale specified below:

(a) If his turnover does not exceed	Five rupees
twenty thousand rupees.	per month
(b) If his turnover exceeds twenty	One half of one thousand rupees.	percent of such turnover.

Provided that any dealer whose turnover in any year is less than ten thousand rupees shall not be liable to pay the tax under this sub-section for that year."

There is another proviso which is not relevant. Section 3(2) provides that the turnover for all the purposes of the Act shall be determined in accordance with, and the tax shall be assessed, levied and collected in such manner and in such instalments as may be prescribed by the rules made by the Government. Every dealer whose turnover is Rs. 10,000 or more for a year shall submit such return or returns of his turnover in such manner and within such periods as may be specified in the rules made under sub-section (2) of section 3 (section 9(1)). If the assessing authority is satisfied that any return so submitted is correct and complete he shall assess the dealer on the basis thereof (section 9(2)(a)). If no return is submitted before the prescribed date or if the return submitted appears to the assessing authority to be incorrect or incomplete the assessing authority shall proceed to determine the turnover in accordance with the rules, provided that before taking action under this clause the dealer shall be given a reasonable opportunity of proving the correctness and completeness of any return submitted by him.

Section 10 provides for the recovery of the tax, section 11 for appeals against the orders of assessment and section 12 for revision by the Board of Revenue. An officer duly empowered by the Provincial Government may require any dealer to produce before him the accounts and other documents and to furnish any other information relating to such business (section 14(1)). Section 14(2) provides for inspection of accounts and registers, goods, offices, shops etc.

(3) In exercise of the powers conferred by sub-section (2) of section 3 of the Act rules were framed called the Madras General Sales Tax (Turnover and Assessment) Rules 1939. Rule 6(2) provided that every dealer commencing business after the first day of October 1939 whose estimated nett turnover for the first twelve months of his business is not less than Rs. 10,000 shall, within 30 days of commencing his business, submit to the assessing authority of the area in which his principal place of business is situated a return in form A-1 showing his estimated gross turnover and the nett turnover for the first 12 months of his business. Rule 6(3) ran thus:

"Every dealer commencing business, who has not submitted a return under sub-rule (2) but whose turnover reaches Rs. 10,000 within the first 12 months of the commencement of the business, shall, within 30 days of the day on which his turnover reaches Rs. 10,000 submit to the assessing authority of the area in which his principal place of business is situated a return in form A-1".

Rule 11(1) is in the following terms:

"Paragraph 1: Every dealer liable to submit a return under rule 6, except those who have elected to be assessed by the method prescribed in rule 13, shall, on or before the first day of May, in every year submit to the assessing authority of the area in which his principal place of business is situated a return in form A showing the actual gross and nett turnover for the preceding year.

"Paragraph 2: Every dealer not liable to submit a return under rule 6 who has a nett turnover of not less than Rs. 10,000 for any year shall (unless he has elected to be assessed by the method prescribed in rule 13) submit to the assessing authority of the area in which his principal place of business is situated, a return in form A showing the actual gross and nett turnover for that year on or before the first day of May of the succeeding year and thereafter, for every year on or before the first day of May immediately following such year."

(4) On 15th March 1947 the Deputy Commercial Officer, Chowghat issued a notice to the appellant informing him that it was seen from the records of the companies stationed in British Cochin that the appellant had sold coir yarn etc. to them to the extent of Rs. 13,37,431-12-3 (the details of which were appended) during the year 1945-46, that as such sales had taken place in British Cochin he was liable to pay tax under the Madras General Sales Tax Act, 1939, that he had neither furnished the turnover in Form A-1 after having reached a taxable turnover of Rs. 10,000 as required by rule 6(3) of the Madras General Sales Tax (Turnover and Assessment) Rules, 1939, nor submitted a return in form A for the said year on or before 1st May 1946 as required by rule 11(1) of the said rules, and giving him notice that if no satisfactory explanation was received from him accompanied by the accounts, if any, on or before the 19th March he would be finally assessed to the best of his judgment on the nett turnover of Rs. 13,37,431-12-3 for 1945-46 without further notice.

To this notice the appellant sent his objections (Exhibit B. 5). He stated that he was resident in Palluruthy and that his principal place of business was also situated in Palluruthy which was in Cochin State, that he had no place of business in British Cochin or in the Province of Madras, that the Sales Tax authorities had no jurisdiction or authority under the said Act to call upon him to submit a return of his turnover in British Cochin and that the provisions of the Madras General Sales Tax Act did not apply to dealers whose place of business was situated outside the Province of Madras unless there was an agent in the Province. He therefore disclaimed any liability to submit a return of his turnover or to pay any tax under the Madras General Sales Tax Act. These objections were overruled and the Deputy Commercial Tax Officer by his order dated the 22nd March 1947 held that the appellant was liable to be assessed on a nett turnover of Rs. 12,30,124/- for the year ending 31st March 1946 and called upon him to pay a sum of Rs. 12,301-4-0 within 21 days.

The plaintiff filed an appeal to the Commercial Tax Officer of Malabar at Calicut against this order of assessment and raised the same contentions. But the Commercial Tax Officer confirmed the order of the Deputy Commercial Tax Officer by his order dated the 22nd May 1947. The appellant then took the matter in revision to the Board of Revenue, but his petition was rejected by the Board by its order dated the 20th October 1947. Thereupon the appellant filed the present suit making more or less the same allegations which he made and raising the same contentions as he raised before the Sales Tax Officers and the Board of Revenue. The learned Subordinate Judge held that the appellant had been rightly assessed under the Act and dismissed the suit.

(5) From the evidence adduced in the case the following facts emerge. The plaintiff's principal place of business is in Palluruthy in the Cochin State. He is also a resident of that place. He had large dealings with European firms in Fort Cochin to whom he sold coir yarn. The contracts relating to these sales were several if not all of them, executed in Fort Cochin. They were signed either by the appellant or by his son. D. W. 3 a clerk in Messrs. Pierce Leslie and Co. Ltd. produced on behalf of his company contracts entered into with the appellant and he deposed that these contracts were signed, some of them by the appellant and the others by his son Joseph, in Fort Cochin in the office of Pierce Leslie & Co. Ltd. The goods were despatched from the appellant's Palluruthy office to Fort Cochin and delivered to the merchants in Fort Cochin.

(6) Mr. Muthukrishna Ayyar, learned counsel for the appellant, raised two main contentions. His first contention was that as the appellant was a resident of Cochin State and his place of business was in that State he was not bound by the laws of a different country, viz., the State of Madras. He cited to us passages from leading text writers on conflict of laws. Story in his book (VIII Edn., page 8) says:

"It is plain that the laws of one country can have no intrinsic force 'proprio vigore', except within the territorial limits and jurisdiction of that country. They can bind only its own subjects, and others who are within its jurisdictional limits; and the latter only while they remain therein."

Again at page 22 he says:

"Another maxim or proposition is that no State or nation can by its laws directly affect or bind property out of its own territory or bind persons not resident therein whether they are natural born subjects or not."

See also Dicey's Conflict of Laws, sixth edn., page 154.

(7) In — 'Ex parte Blain, In re: Sawers', (1879) 12 Ch D 522, James L. J. observed thus: "It appears to me that the whole question is governed by the broad, general, universal Principle that English legislation, unless the contrary is expressly enacted or so plainly implied as to make it the duty of an English Court to give effect to an English statute, is applicable only to English subjects or to foreigners who by coming into this country, whether for a long or a short time have made themselves during that time subject to English jurisdiction."

In our opinion, from this rule of law which is certainly well established it does not follow that one who is not a resident of a State can escape from or evade the imposition of taxes by the particular state if the necessary requirements are fulfilled which would justify the levy of a tax.

(8) In — 'Whitney v. Commissioners of Inland Revenue', (1926) AC 37, the facts were these. The Appellant, a citizen of the United States of America and having possessions in the United Kingdom from which he derived a larger income, was required by the Special Commissioners for income-tax to make a return of his income for the purposes of super-tax. Having failed to make the return he was assessed by the Commissioners to the best of their judgment. It was held by the House of Lords that the assessment was rightly made. The statute of any country imposing a tax on the profits earned by a person in transactions which take place within the State is not inconsistent with the rule of international law of which mention has been made.

(9) Mr. Muthukrishna Ayyar's next contention was in fact the main contention which he strongly pressed before us. The contention was that the appellant cannot be deemed to be a 'dealer' within the meaning of the definition of the term in the Act. Before the appellant could be held to be a dealer it must be established that he carried on the business of buying or selling goods. A person who has no place of business in an area or locality cannot be said to be a person who carries on any business in that place. Even assuming that there have been sales in Fort Cochin the sales alone cannot warrant the inference that the appellant carries on a business in that area or locality. So his argument ran. He relied upon certain decisions to which we shall refer briefly. In — 'Municipal Council of Cocanada v. The 'Clan' Line Steamers, Ltd', 42 Mad 455, the question was whether a Shipping Company which earned profits by carriage of goods by sea and in the course of its business the ships called at several ports in various parts of the world including Cocanada and which employed sub-agent at Cocanada could be assessed by the Municipality of Cocanada to a tax under S. 52 of the District Municipalities Act for exercising a trade and carrying on business in Cocanada. It appeared from the evidence in the case that all contracts with the shippers could be and were entered into by the agent of the Company at Madras. Wallis C. J. after referring to the decision of the House of Lords in — 'Grainger and Son v. Gough', (1896) AC 325, and the decision of the Privy Council in — 'Lovell and Christmas Ltd. v. Commissioner of Taxes', (1908) AC 46 (PC) observed thus:

"Looking at the facts of the present case in the light of these decisions, I think there is no ground for holding that the Clan Line exercises a trade at Cocanada. It is a shipping company which earns profits by the carriage of goods by sea, and in the course of its business trades, in Lord Herschell's language, with, but not necessarily within, Port towns in various parts of the world. It has not been contended before us that a ship-owner exercises his trade at all the ports at which his steamers habitually call to discharge or load cargo, which latter operation may involve entering there and then into contracts with shippers.....It is unnecessary to pursue this question, because it is, I think, clear upon the authorities that where, as in the present case, the freight-earning contracts with shippers which enable profits to be earned by sea carriage are not entered into at the port in question by the ship's master or the local agent of the ship-owner, but elsewhere, the ship-owner cannot be held to exercise his trade at the port, merely because he employs a shipping agent there to attend to other matters, such as issuing shipping orders and signing bills of lading pursuant to contracts already made and receiving payment of advance freight."

Napier J. formulated the test thus:

".....In this class of cases if the contract out of which the profit arises is not made in the place where the tax is sought to be imposed, the liability does not arise."

(10) In — 'Municipal Council, Dindigul v. Bombay Co., Ltd.', 52 Mad 207, the principle laid down in — 'Municipal Council of Cocanada v. The 'Clan' Line Steamers Ltd', 42 Mad 455, was followed. The plaintiff company in that case which had its chief place of business in Madras purchased produce such as cotton and groundnuts through its agent in Dindigul. Contracts in respect of such purchases were entered into at Madras and after purchase the produce was sold abroad at Madras. The agent of the plaintiff company in Dindigul had no power to conclude any contract. The question was whether the company transacted business, that is to say, carried on business within the municipality. Coutts Trotter C. J. said:

"In my opinion it would be no more reasonable so to hold than to hold that a company who sends a commercial traveller all over India to make purchases for them can be said to carry on business in all the various places at which he calls to fulfil the purpose of his employment."

Madhavan Nair J. discussed all the relevant decisions of the English Courts on the point. He came to the same conclusion mainly on the ground that all the business contracts were concluded at Madras. To use his language

"what we have to find out mainly from the evidence is as to where the contracts relating to the business of this company are habitually made"

(11) Mr. Muthukrishna Ayyar referred us to a very early case in — 'Sulley v. The Attorney-General', (1860) 157 ER 1364, but that decision as well as subsequent decisions have all been reviewed both by the House of Lords and by the Privy Council in the two cases above mentioned. The facts in that case were peculiar, as one of the partners in a firm resided at Nottingham in England, whereas the other partners resided in New York where the principal business of the firm was carried on. The profits which arose on the resale of the goods purchased in England at an increased price in America were held not to be subject to the income-tax in the United Kingdom.

(12) As Jessel M. R. pointed out in — 'Erichsen v. Last', (1882) 8 QBD 414:

"there is not.....any principle of law which lays down what carrying on trade is. There are a multitude of things which together make up the carrying on of trade, but I know no one distinguishing incident, for it is a compound fact made up of a variety of things."

Nevertheless the learned Master of the Rolls attached great weight to the fact that the company concerned in the case entered into contracts in England with English subjects for the right of carriage. Brett L. J. observed thus:

"The only thing that we have to decide is whether upon the facts of this case, this company carry on a profit earning trade in this country. I should say that wherever profitable contracts are habitually made in England, by or for foreigners, with persons in England, because they are in England, to do something for or supply something to those persons, such foreigners are exercising a profitable trade in England, even though everything to be done by them in order to fulfil the contracts is done abroad."

In that case it was held that though the principal place of business of the company was at Copenhagen they carried on business also in England, because the contracts were made with the company in England.

(13) In — 'Werle and Co. v. Colquhoun', (1888) 20 QBD 753, the facts were these. A firm of wine merchants at Rheims in France employed a London firm to obtain orders for their wine in England. They had no wine in England, and all orders were forwarded to Rheims and the wine was packed and sent direct from thence to the customers. Payments were made direct to the firm or to the London firm who remitted the amount to the firm at Rheims. It was held that the firm at Rheims exercised a trade within the United Kingdom and were therefore assessable to income-tax in respect of profits arising therefrom. The test enunciated in — 'Erichsen v. Last', (1882) 8 QBD 414 was applied, viz., where were the profitable contracts made? Lord Esher, M. R. summed up the position thus:

"The making of contracts in such a case as the present is the whole substance and essence of the trade, and so the appellants exercise a business in England."

(14) In — 'Grainger and Son v. Gough', (1896) AC 325, a foreign merchant who canvassed through agents in the United Kingdom for orders for the sale of his merchandise to customers in the United Kingdom was held not liable to income-tax in the United Kingdom as he did not exercise a trade therein because the contracts for the sale and all deliveries of the merchandise were made in a foreign country. Stress was laid by the learned Lords on the fact that no contracts were ever made by the canvassing agents on behalf of the assessee. All they did was to transmit the orders received, and it was open to the merchant to accept them or not. Lord Herschell approved of the test enunciated in — 'Erichsen v. Last', (1882) 8 QBD 414, namely where were the contracts habitually made?

(15) The same test was applied by the Privy Council in — 'Lovell and Christmas Ltd. v. Commissioner of Taxes', (1908) AC 46 (PC). The rule is stated thus by Their Lordships:

"One rule is easily deducible from the decided cases. The trade or business in question in such cases ordinarily consists in making certain classes of contracts and in carrying those contracts into operation with a view to profit; and the rule seems to be that where such contracts, forming as they do the essence of the business or trade, are habitually made, there a trade or business is carried on within the meaning of the Income-tax Acts, so as to render the profits liable to income-tax."

(16) In — 'Chief Commissioner of Income-tax v. Bhanjee Ramjee and Co', 44 Mad 773 (SB) the test laid down in — 'Werle and Co. v. Colquhoun', (1888) 20 QBD 753, was expressly applied. In that case the person sought to be taxed under the Indian Income-tax Act resided and had his principal place of business in Cochin State in Mattancherri which adjoined British Cochin and practically formed one town with it. The facts found were that contracts for the supply of goods were entered into and signed at the offices of the firm in British Cochin and the goods were delivered at the jetties of the purchasers. The sale proceeds were paid to the firm's agent or other duly authorised servant in cash in British India or by cheques which were encashed in banks in British India. In these circumstances it was held by a Special Bench consisting of Wallis C. J. and Ayling and Krishnan JJ. that the profits and gains arising through these transactions were assessable under the Indian Income-tax Act.

(17) In the light of the above authorities let us see the facts of this case. The contracts of sale were made in Fort Cochin. The plaintiff or his son was present in Fort Cochin and executed the contracts. The delivery of the goods was undertaken to be given in the yards of the respective buyers who were all carrying on business in Fort Cochin. On these facts we have no hesitation in holding, agreeing with the learned Trial Judge, that the plaintiff must be held to be a person who carries on the business of buying or selling goods in the State of Madras and therefore a dealer within the meaning of S. 2 (b) of the Act. The Sales tax, as observed in — 'The Province of Madras v. Boddu Paidanna and Sons', 1942 FCR 90, is a tax levied on the occasion of the sale of goods. The sales must be deemed to have taken place in Fort Cochin which is part of the State of Madras. The appellant was therefore rightly assessed under the Act.

(18) The appeal is dismissed with costs.

B/K.S.

Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 91

P. V. RAJAMANNAR C. J. AND VENKATARAMA AYYAR J.

Poppatlal Shah, Partner of Messrs. Indo-Malayan Trading Company, Accused-Appellant v. State of Madras Represented by the Deputy Commercial Tax Officer, Sowcarpet, Madras, Respondent.

Criminal Appeal No. 129 of 1952, D/- 29-8-52.

(a) Sales Tax — Madras General Sales Tax Act (9 of 1939), S. 2 (h) — Sale — Meaning of — Extra-territorial operation of Act — Validity of Act.

The word 'sale' in the Madras General Sales Tax Act must be understood in a popular sense and sales tax can be levied under the Act if the transaction substantially takes place within the Province, notwithstanding that the property in the goods does not pass within the State. Though on this construction the Act would have extra-territorial operation affecting transactions concluded in other States, it cannot be held to be 'ultra vires' on that ground. (Paras 13 and 14)

(b) Sales Tax — Madras General Sales Tax Act (9 of 1939), Preamble — Object of Act.

The object of the Sales Tax Act is to impose a tax on all sales and it is a tax imposed on the occasion of sale. (Para 4)

(c) Sales Tax — Madras General Sales Tax Act (9 of 1939), S. 2 (h), Explanation 2 (introduced by Madras General Sales Tax (Amendment) Act, 25 of 1947 — Explanation should be construed as enacted for removing doubts and not to effect change in law. (Para 13)

V. T. Rangaswami Ayyangar and M. M. Ismail, for Appellant; Advocate General, for the State Prosecutor, for the State.

REFERENCES: Courtwar/Chronological/ Paras

- |  |          |
|--|----------|
| ('48) 1948 FLJ 32: (AIR 1948 PC 118)                   | 14       |
| ('42) 1942 FCR 90: (AIR 1942 FC 33)                    | 4        |
| ('49) 1949 FLJ 18: (AIR 1949 FC 18)                    | 14       |
| ('52) W. P. Nos. 21 and 41 of 1952: (AIR 1953 Mad 105) | 4        |
| ('52) 65 Mad LW 793: (AIR 1953 Mad 86)                 | 4, 9, 14 |
| ('52) CS 446 of 1947 (Mad): (1952-3 STC 19)            | 11       |
| (1900) AC 588: (69 LJPC 87)                            | 14       |
| (1949) AC 36 (PC)                                      | 14       |
| (1903) 191 US 441: 48 Law Ed 254                       | 5        |
| (1905) 196 US 133: 49 Law Ed 417                       | 5        |
| (1946) 329 US 69: 91 Law Ed 80                         | 7        |

VENKATARAMA AYYAR J.: The appellant is a partner of a firm of merchants called

'Indo-Malayan Trading Company' and has been convicted in proceedings taken under Section 15 of the Madras General Sales Tax Act for failure to pay the tax which had been imposed on the said firm. The Indo-Malayan Trading Company carries on the business of purchasing and selling groundnut oil, sago and kirana articles and has its head office in the City of Madras.

The usual course of business is that the firm receives orders from merchants in Calcutta for the supply of these articles; the orders are accepted in Madras; the articles are purchased in the local markets and despatched to Calcutta by rail or steamer. The relative railway receipts or bills of lading are taken in the name of the sellers and so are the insurance policies. They are then forwarded to their bankers in Calcutta who deliver the same to the consignees on payment of the price and other charges. During the period from 1-4-1947 to 31-12-1947, which is the period of assessment concerned in these proceedings the turnover of such transactions amounted to Rs. 37,75,357. The point for decision is whether sales tax is leviable on this amount.

(2) The contention of the assessee is that the title to the goods sold passed only in Calcutta because the documents of title were taken in the name of the sellers and delivered to the purchaser on payment of the price at Calcutta and that consequently there was no sale within the Province of Madras and therefore, no liability to pay the tax arises under the Act. The Deputy Commercial Tax Officer passed an order on 12-3-1949 rejecting this contention and assessing the firm to sales tax on these transactions and this decision was affirmed on appeal by the Commercial Tax Officer by his order dated 29-5-1949. On 2-6-1949 notice of the final assessment and demand for payment of the amount of tax was issued to the firm.

The assessee preferred a revision to the Board and that was dismissed on 23-5-1950. On 14-8-1950 the assessee filed a suit O. S. No. 903 of 1950 on the file of the City Civil Court, Madras, for a declaration that the imposition of the tax was not justified by the Act and was in consequence illegal. That suit was dismissed on 31-7-1951 and an appeal against that judgment is pending in this Court, C. C. C. A. No. 131 of 1951. Meanwhile, the Government instituted the prosecution under Section 15, C. T. No. 1358 of 1950, out of which the present appeal has arisen. The accused pleaded in defence that the firm was not liable to be taxed under the provisions of the Act and that the assessment was illegal. That plea was overruled and the appellant was ordered to pay a fine of Rs. 1,000 in addition to the tax. Against the said order the accused has preferred this appeal.

(3) The substantial question that arises for determination in this appeal is whether the sales in question took place within the Province of Madras. Mr. V. T. Rangaswami Iyengar, the learned Advocate for the appellant argues that on the facts already stated — and there is no dispute about them — the sellers continued to be the owners of the goods until they were paid for and cleared in Calcutta and under the provisions of the Sale of Goods Act, the property in the goods passed to the purchasers only in Calcutta and that, therefore, the sale took place only there. The contention of the learned Advocate General, on the other hand, is that for purposes of General Sales Tax Act the question whether there was a sale within the Province of Madras would have to be determined on a factual basis as to where the transaction took place and not on a consideration of questions as to where property passed in the goods.

It is conceded on behalf of the Government that if the correct principle to apply is to determine where property in goods passed, the sales in question could not be held to have taken place within the Province of Madras. On the other hand, it is equally indisputable that if the true test is to determine where the transactions took place, the finding that the sales in question took place within the Province of Madras is unassailable, because the firm had its head office at Madras; its accounts were maintained at Madras; the goods which were the subject matter of sale were in Madras and delivered to common carriers in Madras; and the sale price was entered in the Madras accounts. The question is which of these two stand-points is the correct one to adopt under the Act.

(4) The word 'sale' has both a legal and a popular sense. In the legal sense it imports passing of property in the goods. In its popular sense it signifies the transaction which results in the passing of property. To a lawyer the legal sense would appear to be the correct one to be given to the word in the Sales Tax Act. That is the conception which is familiarised in the provisions of Sale of Goods Act. If one leaves out of account sales tax legislation which is of comparatively recent origin, questions relating to sale of goods usually come up before the Courts only in connection with disputes between the sellers and purchasers. If the goods perish, on whom is the loss to fall? If the purchaser becomes insolvent before payment of price can the goods be claimed by the trustee in bankruptcy?

For deciding these and similar questions it is necessary to determine at what point of time the property in goods passed to the purchaser. Sometimes when the point for determination is as to jurisdiction of Courts to entertain suits based on contract, it may be material to consider where property in the goods passed, that being part of the cause of action. These being the questions which are accustomed to be debated in connection with sale of goods, it is natural that a lawyer should, as a matter of first impression approach the question of sale under the Sales Tax Act with the same concept of a sale. But if the matter is further considered it will be seen that considerations which arise under the Sales Tax Act are altogether different from those which arise under the Sale of Goods Act.

The object of the Sales Tax Act is to impose a tax on all sales and it is a tax imposed on the occasion of sale. Vide — 'The Province of Madras v. Boddu Paidanna & Sons', 1942 FCR 90, — 'Vakkan v. Province of Madras', 65 Mad. LW 793 and — 'V. M. Syed Mohamed & Co. v. State of Madras', W.P. Nos. 21 and 41 of 1952. So far as the Government is concerned, it would be immaterial at what point of time property in the goods actually passed from the seller to the buyer. Of course, there must be a completed sale before tax can be levied and there would be a completed sale only when property passes. That is the scope of the definition of 'sale' in section 2(h). But when once there is a completed sale, the question when property passed in the goods would be a matter of no concern or consequence for purposes of the Sales Tax Act. The Government is interested only in collecting the tax due in respect of the sale and the only fact about which it has to satisfy itself is whether the sale took place within the Province of Madras. In this context the popular meaning of the word is the more natural one and there is good reason for adopting it.

The Officers who have got to assess the tax under the Act need not necessarily be lawyers and it is difficult to believe that the Legislature would have entrusted to their decision abstruse questions as to passing of property which have taxed the legal acumen of learned Judges and lawyers. It is far more probable that they were expected to base their decision on facts and circumstances showing where the transaction took place. They would, in this view, have to enquire where the office of the dealer is located, where the accounts are maintained, where the bargains are made, where the goods were actually lying at the time of the bargain, where they were consigned in pursuance of the contract, and where the sale proceeds were dealt with. These and similar matters are questions of fact which could properly be left to the determination of administrative tribunals.

(5) In — 'Norfolk and W. R. Co. v. Sims', (1903) 191 US 441: 48 Law Ed 254 at p. 256 the facts were that Messrs. Sears Roebuck and Company who were manufacturers of sewing machines in Chicago in the State of Illinois sold a machine to Mrs. Satterfield of Roxboro in the State of North Carolina and consigned the same through a common-carrier. The sellers took out a bill of lading and sent the same to an agent at Roxboro who delivered the same to Mrs. Satterfield on receipt of the price. Before Mrs. Satterfield could take delivery of the machine, the local authorities seized it for payment of a tax alleged to be due from the sellers by virtue of a statute of North Carolina which imposed a licence tax on all persons "engaged in the business of selling" within the State. The question was whether on the facts found, the sellers could be held to have carried on business in selling in Roxboro. The contention of the local authority was that the property in the machine passed only at Roxboro when the bill of lading was delivered on payment of price and therefore there was "business of selling" within the State. In negating this contention the Court observed:

"While it may be entirely true that the property in the thing sold does not pass under a C. O. D. consignment (collection on delivery) until delivery of the goods and payment to the carrier and hence it may be said that the sale is not completed until then, yet, as a matter of fact the bargain is made, and the contract of sale completed as such, when the order is received in Chicago, and the machine shipped in pursuance thereof. A sale really consists of two separate and distinct elements; first, a contract of sale, which is completed when the offer is made and accepted; and second, a delivery of the property which may precede, be accompanied by, or follow the payment of the price, as may have been agreed upon between the parties.

The substance of the sale is the agreement to sell, and its acceptance. That possession shall be retained until payment of the price may or may not have been a part of the original bargain, but in substance it is a mere method of collection, and we have never understood that a licence could be imposed upon this transaction except in connection with the prior agreement to sell, although in certain cases arising under the police power it has been held that the sale is not completed until delivery and sometimes not until payment. Were it not for the opinion of the Supreme Court of North Carolina, we should have said that the words "engaged in the business of selling the same within the State" had reference to the word "selling" in its popular and ordinary sense of selling from a stock on hand or upon a special order to a manufacturer and not to a mere method of collecting the money."

In — 'American Express Co. v. State of Iowa', (1905) 196 US 133: 49 Law Ed 417 at p. 422, the question again arose with reference to goods shipped from one State to another under a C. O. D. contract. After observing that opinion was divided as to when under such a contract property passed the Court proceeded on to state:

"But we need not consider this subject. Beyond possible question the contract to sell and ship was completed in Illinois. The right of the parties to make a contract in Illinois for the sale and purchase of merchandise, and in doing so, to fix by agreement the time when and condition on which the completed title should pass, is beyond question."

(6) The precise question which came up for decision in the above cases was with reference to the commerce clause. But the principles laid down therein as to what constitutes sales would equally be applicable on a question as to where the sale actually takes place in a transaction of an inter-state character.

(7) The following observations of Black J. in — 'Richfield Oil Corporation v. State Board of Equalization', (1946) 329 US 69: 91 Law Ed 80 at p. 95 may be appositely quoted:

"This purely intra-State sale transaction cannot properly be held to have lost its intra-State pre-exportation status by reason of the fact that the parties did not intend "title to pass" until the oil was delivered at the purchaser's ship. For formal "passage of title" is not an adequate criterion for measuring a state's constitutional power to tax sales made within the State. Private parties are free to decide, so far as their own interests are concerned, when legal title shall be considered to "pass". But a state surely is not required by the Constitution to forbear from taxing that part of a sale transaction which precedes the particular moment the parties have arbitrarily selected for a conceptual transfer of title.

Nor need a state withhold the exercise of its power to tax sales until an article is delivered or paid for. That delivery, perhaps the last step in executing this agreement to sell, happened to border on the imaginary line where the actual exporter took possession does not justify us in concluding that therefore this wholesale transaction occurred after exportation. Constitutional interpretations which make serious inroads into the power of both the States and the Federal Government to tax sales made by local businesses should not turn on fine legal concepts of when title passed or delivery occurred in relation to the beginning of exportation."

(8) The point for decision in this case also was whether the transaction in question was repugnant to Article 1, Section 10 (2) of the American Constitution. But the observations quoted above enunciate a general principle which is capable of application to determinations of the power of a State to impose tax on sales.

(9) In — 'Vakkan v. Province of Madras', 65 Mad. LW 793 a subject of the State of Cochin entered into contracts of sale in Fort Cochin in British India and the goods were also delivered in Fort Cochin. On these facts it was held that the sale must be deemed to have taken place in the State of Madras and that taxes were rightly imposed in respect of such sales under the Madras General Sales Tax Act.

(11) Our attention was invited to the decision of Krishnaswami Nayudu J., in — 'Louis Dreyfus & Co. v. Province of Madras', C. S. No. 446 of 1947 (Mad.) on the Original Side of this Court. One of the points that arose for determination there was whether the imposition of sales tax was illegal on the ground that the sales did not take place within the Province. The question was argued on the basis that sale takes place where property in the goods passes and on that basis it was held by the learned Judge that the property in the goods passed at Marma Goa and not in Madras and that, therefore, the imposition was illegal. But the contention now raised by the Advocate General was not put forward in that case and the decision is accordingly of no assistance in the determination of the question now under consideration.

(12) Counsel for the appellant sought to build an argument on the basis of the Madras Act XXV of 1947 which introduced Explanation (2) to the definition of sale of goods under the Act. It runs as follows:

"Explanation (2). Notwithstanding anything to the contrary in the Indian Sale of Goods Act, 1930, the sale or purchase of any goods shall be deemed, for the purposes of this Act, to have taken place in this Province, wherever the contract of sale or purchase might have been made:

(a) if the goods were actually in this Province at the time when the contract of sale or purchase in respect thereof was made, or
(b) in case the contract was for the sale or purchase of future goods by description, then, if the goods are actually produced in this Province at any time after the contract of sale or purchase in respect thereof was made."

(13) It was argued that this Explanation recognizes that under the Act as it stood prior to the amendment, the question as to where the sale took place should be determined in accordance with the principles laid down in the Sale of Goods Act and as the Explanation came into force only on 1-1-1948, it has to be ignored for the purpose of the present proceedings which relate to the assessment for the period from 1-4-1947 to 31-12-1947. This argument proceeds on the assumption that the object of the amendment was to effect a change in the law. That, however, is not necessarily the case. Explanations are inserted for removing doubts and declaring the law. Explanation (2) no doubt states that "notwithstanding anything to the contrary in the Indian Sale of Goods Act, 1930" the sale should be deemed to have taken place in this Province, wherever the contract of sale or purchase might have been made.

But the Sale of Goods Act contains no provision that a sale takes place where a contract of sale or purchase takes place. There is not even a provision in the Act as to where a sale takes place, even though there are provisions as to when property passes in the goods. Under the circumstances, it is more natural to construe the Explanation as enacted for removing doubts and not to effect a change in the law. Our conclusion accordingly is that the word 'sale' in the Madras General Sales Tax Act must be understood in a popular sense and sales tax can be levied under the Act if the transaction substantially takes place within this Province, notwithstanding that the property in the goods does not pass within the State.

(14) A contention was raised that on this construction the Madras General Sales Tax Act would have extra-territorial operation affecting transactions concluded in other States & that it would, therefore, be ultra vires. The answer to this contention is furnished by the decision of the Privy Council in — 'Wallace Brothers & Co. Ltd. v. Commr. of Income Tax, Bombay', 1948 FLJ 32 at p. 36. There, a Company incorporated in England having its registered office there was carrying on business in India. The income-tax authorities in India acting under the provisions of the Indian Income Tax Act imposed a tax on the company not merely in respect of the income received in India but also of the income received in England. On the question whether the Indian Legislature was competent to tax the income received from England, the Privy Council observed:

"The resulting general conception as to the scope of income-tax is that, given a sufficient territorial connection between the person sought to be charged and the country seeking to tax him, income-tax may properly extend to that person in respect of his foreign income."

In — 'A. H. Wadia v. Commissioner of Income-tax', Bombay, 1949 FLJ 18, the Gwalior Durbar was advancing large sums on mortgage of debentures over property in British India. The question was whether interest received by the Durbar at Gwalior was assessable to income-tax. The assessee contended that Section 42(i) of the Income Tax Act under which the assessment was sought to be made was extra-territorial in its operation and therefore, ultra vires of the Indian Legislature. It was held by the majority that on the facts there was sufficient connection to clothe the Indian Legislature with competence to impose the tax and that, therefore, the assessment was not illegal.

In — 'Commissioner of Taxation v. Kirk', (1900) AC 588, the question arose with reference to ores extracted in New South Wales and sold as finished products outside the State. The sale proceeds were realised outside the State. The State of New South Wales sought to levy income-tax on the profits made on such sales. The Privy Council held that it was within the competence of the Legislature of New South Wales to impose tax even though the profits were received outside the State, as part of the process was within the State. In — 'International Harvester Co. of Canada Ltd. v. Provincial Tax Commission', (1949) AC 36, the Privy Council after quoting with approval the above decision observed that "regarding profit as arising solely at the place of sale" is fallacious. Vide also the decision of this Court in — 'Vakkan v. Province of Madras', 65 Mad. LW 793. On these authorities, the attack on the Madras General Sales Tax Act on the ground that it is extra-territorial in its operation must fail.

(15) In the result, this appeal fails and is dismissed.

(16) RAJAMANNAR C. J.: I agree.

A/V.R.B.

Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 94

RAJAMANNAR C. J.

AND VENKATARAMA AIYAR J.

In re P. Ramamoorthi, Petitioner.

Writ Petn. No. 244 of 1952, D/- 7-4-1952.

(a) Constitution of India (1950), Art. 226 — Writ of Certiorari — Powers of High Court — Who can apply — Nomination of members to Legislature by Governor — Right of a person either as legislator or as citizen to apply for writ — Infringement of mere political rights no ground for issue of writ.

It is not the province of the High Court to interfere either 'suo motu' or at the instance of any person whenever there is any disregard or violation of any of the provisions of the Constitution. Its power under Art. 226 of the Constitution can only be involved at the instance of a person who has a personal grievance against any act of the State in its executive capacity which inflicts a legal injury on him since the right which is the foundation of a petition under Art. 226 of the Constitution or a corresponding provision is a personal and individual right. — 'Sweatt v. Painter', (1950) 339 US 629; 94 Law Ed 1114, AIR 1951 SC 41, Rel. on. (Para 3)

A person either as a member of the legislature or a citizen has no such personal and direct interest in the matter of the nomination of a member to legislature as to enable him to invoke the provisions of Art. 226 of the Constitution. (Para 4)

As a remote consequence of the nomination it may be that he had been deprived of the opportunity, along with the other members of his party in the legislatures, of forming the ministry and having the nominations to the legislature made on the advice of that ministry. But where that cannot be said to affect his personal rights even in an indirect manner, he cannot question the validity of nomination by an application under Art. 226. (Para 5)

His political rights if any cannot come into play in a Court of law unless such rights have the character of a legal right. Otherwise any discussion of such rights would be outside the scope of judicial decision. (Para 4)

Anno: Civil P. C., App. III; Const. of Ind., Art. 226 N. 13.

(b) Constitution of India (1950), Art. 164 — Quaere — Act of Governor calling a person to form ministry — It is extremely doubtful whether action can be subject matter of any petition in a Court of law. (Para 4)

(c) Constitution of India (1950), Arts. 164 and 171 — Rights of Legislator.

As a Legislator a person has no right to see that the nominations to the legislature are made properly or that any particular individual does not form a ministry which may be entrusted with the Government of the State. (Para 6)

Petitioner in Person.

REFERENCES: Courtwar/Chronological/ Paras
(51) 1951 SCJ 29: (AIR 1951 SC 41) 3
(50) 63 Mad LW 89 (Journal Section):
(1950-339 US 629: 94 Law Ed 1114) 3

RAJAMANNAR C. J.: This is an application under Art. 226 of the Constitution for the issue of a writ of certiorari to call for the records and quash the order of His Excellency the Governor of Madras made in G. O. Ms. No. 1005 Public (Elections) dated 31st March 1952. The said order runs as follows:

"In pursuance of Cls. 3 (e) & (5) of Art. 171 of the Constitution of India, I, Sri Prakasa, Governor of Madras, hereby nominate the following persons to be members of the Madras Legislative Council:

1. Sri Chakravarthi Rajagopalachari
2. Janab Mahammad Usman
3. Sri Vellapuram Bashyam Ayyangar
4. Sri Omandur P. Ramaswami Reddiar."

The petitioner is a citizen of India and one of the members of the Madras Legislative Assembly elected on the Communist's Party ticket in the recent general elections held in January 1952. In this application he attacks in particular the nomination of the second respondent, namely, Sri C. Rajagopalachari, on several grounds. In view of our decision that the application is not sustainable at the instance of the petitioner in this case, it is not necessary to set out except in the barest outline the several grounds on which the validity of the nomination is impugned.

(2) It was first alleged that the nomination is virtually in exercise of fraud of the powers conferred by the Constitution on the Governor, because the nomination was made with the ulterior object of assisting the Congress Legislature party. The next ground on which the validity of the nomination is challenged is that the Governor cannot exercise the power of making the nominations under Art. 171 (3) (e) (5) of the Constitution except on the advice of the Council of Ministers and having regard to the fact that the nominations are to the Legislative Council which has not yet begun to function, the Council of Ministers who can advise the Government in this matter will be the Council of Ministers appointed from and out of the new Legislative bodies. We refrain from making any remarks on the soundness of any of these several contentions.

(3) We must first dispose of the argument that it is not necessary for the petitioner to have any personal and direct interest in the matter in respect of which he makes the application and that it is the duty of this court to interfere under Art. 226 of the Constitution whenever any violation of any of the provisions of the Constitution is brought to the notice of the court 'pro bono publico' by any citizen of the State. The petitioner who argued his case himself went to the extent of saying that even if the attention of this court was not drawn by any person, it was still incumbent on this court so far as it was practicable, to interfere in this manner 'suo motu'. Indeed it was said that this duty followed from the form of oath taken by the Judges of this Court which comprises 'inter alia' the promise to uphold the Constitution and the Laws. We have no hesitation in not accepting this argument. It is certainly not the province of this court to interfere either 'suo motu' or at the instance of any person whenever there is any disregard or violation of any of the provisions of the Constitution. Our power under Art. 226 of the Constitution can only be invoked at the instance of a person who has a personal grievance against any act of the State in its executive capacity which inflicts a legal injury on him. It has been held over and over again both in the United States of America and in this country that the right which is the foundation of a petition under Art. 226 of the Constitution or a corresponding provision is a personal and individual right. Chief Justice Vinson of the United States in a recent case — 'Sweatt v. Painter', 63 Mad LW 89 (Journal Section), observed:

"It is fundamental that these cases concern rights which are personal and present."

The Supreme Court of this country has also adopted the same principle — 'Charanjit Lal Chowdhury v. The Union of India', 1951 SCJ 29.

(4) It therefore falls to be considered whether the petitioner is in any manner personally injured by the nomination of the second respondent. In the affidavit filed by him in support of the application he states thus in paragraph 10:

"I submit that I am affected by the order of the first respondent inasmuch as I am deprived of the right along with other members of the Legislative Assembly to have the new Government and to have the nominations of the Legislative Council made on the advice of the Council of Ministers responsible to the legislative Assembly. Further, I submit that as the powers conferred under Art. 171 (3) (e) and (5) affect the composition of the Legislature and therefore any legislation that may be passed affects every citizen of the Indian Union."

In spite of the eloquent argument of the petitioner we are unable to agree with him that he has any such personal and direct interest in the matter of the nomination as to enable him to invoke the provisions of Art. 226 of the Constitution. The petitioner developed an argument that he was personally affected by the order of nomination because if Sri C. Rajagopalachari had not been nominated but nevertheless had been called upon to form a ministry as the Chief Minister, then Sri C. Rajagopalachari would have had to face an election at the end of six months from the date of his nomination and at such an election the party to which he belongs might be able to defeat him. In our opinion the petitioner is mixing up two things. What is actually impugned in this petition is the nomination of Sri C. Rajagopalachari and not the act of the Governor in calling upon him to form the ministry. The latter act is not the subject-matter of this petition; and we have grave doubts whether that action can be the subject-matter of any petition in a court of law. So in any consideration of the validity of the nomination, we should completely omit any reference to the action of the Governor in calling upon Sri C. Rajagopalachari to form the ministry. Now, in what way can the petitioner be said to have been personally aggrieved by this nomination? Surely, he cannot say that the majority which his party commands has been upset by this nomination. He is unable to specify any right, be it property right or personal right, which has been infringed in any manner by the nomination. The petitioner spoke of political rights. We presume that these political rights can come into play in a court of law only in so far as they have the character of legal rights. Otherwise, any discussion as to political right would be completely outside the scope of judicial decision. But we are unable to see even such political rights of the petitioner being infringed.

(5) It was said that but for the nomination, it would have been possible for the petitioner along with the other members of his party to have formed a new ministry and to have the nominations made on the advice of the members of that ministry. This is, to say the least, a very remote consequence of the nomination. We are unable to see any personal right of the petitioner which can be said to have been infringed even in an indirect manner by the nomination by the Governor of the second respondent.

(6) Finally, the petitioner dilated on his right as a Legislator to see that the nominations were made properly. We do not agree that the petitioner has any such right as a Legislator. Nor has he got a right to see that Sri C. Rajagopalachari does not form a ministry which may be entrusted with the Government of the State.

(7) This application must therefore be, and is hereby dismissed.

A/M.K.S.

Application dismissed.

* A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 96

CHANDRA REDDI J.

In re V. Chakkarai Chettiar, Petitioner.

Writ Petn. No. 430 of 1952, D/- 15-5-1952.

† * (a) Constitution of India, Art. 226 — Writ of 'quo warranto' — Petitioner not interested in the subject matter — Writ cannot be issued.

The jurisdiction of the High Court under Art. 226 can be invoked only by a person, who has suffered a personal injury. The writ of 'quo warranto', being one of the writs mentioned in Art. 226 falls within the purview of this rule. The contention that Art. 226 enables a citizen of India to ask for the issue of a writ in the nature of 'quo warranto' in order to have the right of a person to an office determined, in the interest of the public, although he has no personal or direct interest in the matter, is, therefore, untenable. So long as the personal rights of the petitioner are not affected and he is not aggrieved by the act of the Government, he is not entitled to question the validity of the act by applying for such a writ. A. I. R. 1953 Mad 94, Rel. on. Case law referred. (Para 11)

(b) Constitution of India, Art. 226 — 'And for any other purpose' — Meaning — Does not allow petitions for agitating public questions.

The expression "and for any other purpose" in Art. 226 does not lend support to the contention that even for the purpose of agitating public questions, the applicant can resort to the process of 'quo warranto' mentioned in the Article. The expression cannot be interpreted to mean a purpose other than protection of the legal rights of a person. Courts are only for the purpose of adjudicating upon legal rights of persons and it is not their province to decide questions of academic importance. The jurisdiction under Art. 226 can be invoked only by or at the instance of a person, who has suffered a legal injury at the hands of the executive Government of the State or some tribunal and the rights under the Article are personal and direct.

(Para 9)

S. Mohan Kumara Mangalam, for Petitioner.

REFERENCES: Courtwar/Chronological/ Paras
(44) 48 Cal WN 766 8
(1864) 11 LT (NS) 372: (148 RR 840) 7
(1914) 235 US 151: (59 Law Ed 169) 3
(51) 1951 SCJ 29: (AIR 1951 SC 41) 5, 6
(52) W. P. No. 244 of 1952: AIR 1953 Mad 94 3, 4

ORDER: This application is by a member of the Legislative Council to call upon the respondent to show cause why writ in the nature of Quo Warranto should not be issued against him to show by what authority he claims to be a member of the Madras Legislative Council. Through the medium of this writ, the applicant calls in question the validity of the nomination of the respondent made by His Excellency the Governor of Madras on the 31st March 1952 in G. O. Ms. No. 1005 Public (Elections). The subject matter of these proceedings runs as follows:

"In pursuance of clauses (3) (e) and (5) of Art. 171 of the Constitution of India, I, Sri Prakasa, Governor of Madras, hereby nominate the following persons to be members of the Madras Legislative Council:

1. Sri Chakravarthi Rajagopalachari,
2. Janab Mahammad Usman,
3. Sri Vellapuram Bhashyam Aiyangar,
4. Sri Omandur P. Ramaswami Reddiar."

(2) The applicant urges that this order nominating the respondent is invalid for two reasons: (1) that this is virtually a fraud of the powers conferred by the Constitution on the Governor, because the Governor by nominating the respondent wanted to assist the Congress Legislature Party; and (2) that the Governor could not exercise the power of making the nomination under Art. 171, clauses (3) (e) and (5) of the Constitution except on the advice of the Council of Ministers and having regard to the fact that by the date of the nomination the new ministry was not formed, the Governor could not have had the benefit of the advice of the Council of Ministers.

(3) Before I examine the soundness of these contentions, I have first of all to see whether the petitioner has 'locus standi' to maintain this application. Attacking the validity of this very nomination, a petition was filed (— 'In re P. Ramamoorthi', W. P. No. 244 of 1952 (Mad)) by one Ramamurthi, an elected member of the Legislative Assembly. The grounds of attack on the nomination of the respondent by His Excellency the Governor in that petition are the same as in the present one. A Bench of this court consisting of the Chief Justice and Venkatarama Aiyar J. rejected that petition on the ground that the petitioner therein could not maintain that petition, as there was no infraction of his personal right.

(4) Mr. Mohan Kumara Mangalam in support of this petition argues that this decision has no application to this case for the reason that the principles that govern the issue of a writ of certiorari are different from those applicable to a proceeding for information in the nature of a quo warranto. On this basis he seeks to distinguish the decision of the Bench in — 'W. P. No. 244 of 1952 (Mad)' and urges that information in the nature of Quo warranto can be filed even at the instance of a private relator, who has no interest in the office in respect of which he seeks that relief.

According to him, Art. 226 enables a citizen of India to ask for the issue of such a writ in order to have the right of a person to an office determined, in the interest of the public, although he has no personal or direct interest in the matter. It is argued by him that if there was no distinction between a writ in the nature of a Quo warranto and other writs mentioned in Art. 226, no useful purpose was served by introducing that writ into Art. 226, because in no case in which information in the nature of Quo warranto is sought is a relator personally or directly interested. I am not very much impressed with this argument. There may be cases in which an applicant seeking that relief may be interested, but that need not detain me here long. An answer to that contention can be found in the provision of Art. 32 of the Constitution Act. Art. 32 (2) enacts:

"The Supreme Court shall have power to issue directions or orders or writs, including writs in the nature of habeas corpus, mandamus, prohibition, quo warranto and certiorari whichever may be appropriate, for the enforcement of any of the rights conferred by this Part."

So under Art. 32 information in the nature of quo warranto can be filed even for protecting the fundamental rights. The fundamental rights mentioned in Chapter III are rights personal and direct to a citizen and for the protection of such right resort can be had to the writ of quo warranto under Art. 32 of the Constitution. In the same manner the Writ in the nature of Quo warranto is mentioned in Art. 226. That being so, there is no force in the contention that if the intendment of Art. 226 is only the protection of the rights guaranteed in Chapter III, there is no point in mentioning Quo warranto in that Article. Hence the line of distinction relied upon by the Counsel for the applicant is therefore not available to him. The distinction sought to be made is not a sound one. It must be remembered that the decision of the Bench in — 'Re P. Ramamoorthi', WP No. 244 of 1952 (Mad) is not confined to the issue of a writ of certiorari. There the proposition is stated that the jurisdiction of this court under Art. 226 can be invoked only by a person, who has suffered a personal injury. The writ of Quo warranto, being one of the writs mentioned in Art. 226 falls, in my opinion, within the purview of the decision of the Bench. I do not propose to go at this stage into the history of this ancient writ which is the foundation of the present day information in the nature of Quo warranto prior to the framing of the Constitution.

(5) In this context, I may refer to the observations of the Supreme Court in — 'Charanjit Lal Chowdhury v. Union of India', 1951 SCJ 29:

"It has been held in a number of cases in the United States of America that no one except those whose rights are directly affected by a law can raise the question of the constitutionality of that law."

This principle has been very clearly stated by Hughes J. in — 'Macabe v. Atchison', (1914) 235 US 151 in these words:

"It is an elementary principle that in order to justify the granting of this extraordinary relief, complainant's need of it and the absence of an adequate remedy at law must clearly appear. The complainant cannot succeed because someone else may be hurt. Nor does it make any difference that other persons who may be injured are persons of the same race or occupation. It is the fact, clearly established, of injury to the complainant — not to others — which justifies judicial interference."

(6) In — 'Charanjitlal Chowdhury v. Union of India', 1951 SCJ 29, the validity of the Sholapur Spinning and Weaving Co. (Emergency Provisions) Act passed by Parliament was impugned by a holder of a share in the company by moving for a writ of mandamus and certain other reliefs under Art. 32 of the Constitution. The opinion expressed by the Supreme Court was that an individual shareholder was not entitled to challenge the validity of the enactment, which affects the fundamental rights of the company, except to the extent that it constitutes an infraction of his rights.

(7) It may not be out of place to quote what Crompton J. said in — 'Reg v. Briggs', (1864) 11 LT (NS) 372 that,

"the object of having a relator who has an interest is that a mere man of straw should not be put forward; but surely in such a case as this an owner of property in the town has an interest."

(8) Mr. Mohan Kumara Mangalam invited my attention to some cases as substantiating the proposition that information in the nature of Quo warranto can lie at the instance of a private relator, who has no interest therein. I do not think the cases cited by him have much bearing because it has not been decided in any of these cases that a relator need not have any interest in the matter. In fact, one of the cases relied upon by him, viz., — 'In re Banwarilal Roy', 48 Cal WN 766 contains some observations, which are far from being helpful to him. Das J. at page 797 of the report remarked:

"It is a very well known form of process and an effective weapon in the judicial armoury for the protection of the rights and franchise alike of the Crown and the subjects."

(9) It was next argued by Mr. Mohan Kumara Mangalam that the expression "and for any other purpose" lends support to his contention that even for the purpose of agitating public questions, the applicant can resort to the process of Quo warranto mentioned in Art. 226. I do not think that that expression can be interpreted to mean a purpose other than protection of the legal rights of a person. Courts are only for the purpose of adjudicating upon legal rights of persons and it is not their province to decide questions of academic importance. I think the jurisdiction under Art. 226 can be invoked only by or at the instance of a person, who has suffered a legal injury at the hands of the executive Government of the State or some tribunal and the rights under the Article are personal and direct.

(10) It was alternatively contended on behalf of the applicant that the nomination of the respondent has affected the personal rights of the applicant. It is argued that the nomination of the respondent being unauthorised and invalid, the respondent is in the position of a stranger intruding into the House and as such it affects the personal rights of the applicant. This point has not been mentioned in the petition. Even otherwise, I do not think there is much substance in this. Assuming that the nomination of the respondent is invalid, it cannot be said that there is any invasion of the personal rights of the applicant. I fail to see how he is aggrieved by this. None of his rights, which are of a legal character, are affected by the nomination of the respondent herein.

(11) So long as the personal rights of the petitioner are not affected and he is not aggrieved by the nomination of the respondent, he is not, in my opinion, entitled to question the validity of the nomination. This obviates the necessity to canvass now whether the nomination is valid or not and to go into the power of His Excellency the Governor to nominate the respondent under the circumstances alleged in the petition.

(12) Learned counsel for the petitioner wanted permission to amend this application into one under Art. 225 and argue it on that basis. I think it is too late now to grant the request. I do not feel called upon to permit the petitioner to amend the application into one under Art. 225 of the Constitution at this stage.

(13) In the circumstances, I decline to issue the Writ nisi and the application is dismissed. A/D.R.R. Application dismissed.

A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 98 (Vol. 40, C. N. 33)

RAJAMANNAR C. J.

AND VENKATARAMA AYYAR J.

Indian Metal and Metallurgical Corporation, Petitioner v. Industrial Tribunal, Madras and another, Respondents.

Writ Petn. No. 260 of 1951, D/- 3-11-1951.

† (a) Constitution of India, Art. 19 (1) (g) — Right to carry on business — Nature and extent — Award under Industrial Disputes Act compelling continuance of business — Validity — Industrial Disputes Act (1947), S. 10.

Article 19 (1) (g) gives every citizen a right to practise any profession or to carry on any occupation, trade or business. Clause (6) of the same article confers powers on the State to impose restrictions on this right. So far as such restrictions are concerned, the only question to be determined under the Constitution is whether the restrictions are reasonable and in the interests of the general public.

Obviously the right conferred by Art. 19 (1) (g) to carry on any business is not absolute. Undeniably, the State has got the right to regulate any business, and this right need not be confined to "public utility business" only. Businesses which are likely to prove dangerous to public safety or public health may be subjected to severe restrictive regulations.

Where however a business is admittedly not a public utility service and which has not received any special consideration from the Government, an award made by the Industrial Tribunal appointed under the Industrial Disputes Act cannot direct the management of an industry to continue to carry on any business against their will, as it follows from Art. 19 (1) (g) that if a citizen has a right to carry on business, he must be at liberty not to carry it on if he so chooses. Such an award is therefore void to that extent as it is inconsistent with the Constitution. Case law referred. (Paras 9, 10, 13)

† (b) Industrial Disputes Act (1947), Ss. 2 (k) and 10 — Closing down business — Not an industrial dispute — Question outside jurisdiction of Industrial Tribunal.

The question whether an employer could or could not close down a business permanently or temporarily falls outside the purview of the Industrial Disputes Act. No doubt the term "industrial dispute" has been very widely defined in S. 2 (k) of the Act; but it is clear that the definition of an "industrial dispute" and the Act taken as a whole assume the continued existence of an industry. Closing down a business even temporarily is distinct and different from a lock-out just as the discontinuance from service of an employee is not the same thing as a strike. While therefore the Industrial Tribunal has got the jurisdiction to adjudicate on the question whether a particular lock-out was justified or not, it cannot decide the question whether an employer can close down his business temporarily for an indefinite period or permanently. (Para 15)

K. V. Venkatasubramaniam, for Petitioner; V. P. Sarathy, for the State Counsel and Arunachalam of Messrs. Arunachalam, for Respondents.

REFERENCES: Courtwar/Chronological/ Paras
(1923) 67 Law Ed 1103: 262 US 522 6, 8, 9, 12
(1877) 94 US 113: 24 Law Ed 77 7
(1920) 251 US 396: 64 Law Ed 323 7
(1924) 264 US 286: 68 Law Ed 686 8
(1925) 267 US 552: 69 Law Ed 785 8
(1934) 291 US 502: 78 Law Ed 940 9
(1937) 301 US 1: 81 Law Ed 893 12

ORDER: This is an application made under Art. 226 of the Constitution to issue such directions, writs or orders as may be deemed appropriate to the case and in particular to call for the records of the proceedings in Industrial Dispute No. 5 of 1951 before the Industrial Tribunal, Madras, and to quash the award passed therein and the reference on which it is based and pass such further or other orders as may be deemed fit. The petitioner is the Indian Metal and Metallurgical Corporation, a partnership firm and the affidavit in support of the application has been filed by one of its partners. The firm carries on 'inter alia' the business of manufacture of brass, copper and aluminium sheets at Mettur. It has also a factory at Tondiarpet in Madras where brass and stainless steel utensils are manufactured. On 3rd February 1951 the management put up a notice as follows:

"The factory at Mettur Dam is closed and hence the raw materials for this factory are not coming. Owing to the serious developments in the foreign countries, the present condition in the local market is far unfavourable to work. Further still many machineries are to be installed for economising production. So we are forced to suspend the work for an indefinite period till we are able to complete the erection and trial to get the sheets (raw materials) from our own plant. Therefore the work will be suspended from Saturday 17th instant after the 14th from today."

In pursuance of the said notice a further notice was put up on 16th February 1951 that payment of the wages due to the workmen would be made between 17th February and 19th February, and subsequently the time for disbursement was further extended, but most of the workers did not turn up to receive their wages. On 18th April 1951 the Government by their Order MS. 1762 referred for adjudication to the Industrial Tribunal at Madras an industrial dispute alleged to have arisen between the workers and the management of the petitioner Corporation. In the annexure to the order were set out the four matters in dispute, namely,

1. Whether the closure of the factory from 17th February 1951 is justified,
2. Whether any compensation is to be paid to the discharged workers;
3. Whether the discharged workers have preferential claim for re-employment at the time of the reopening of the factory; and
4. Whether the discharge of four workers, namely, P. A. Dilly, Turner; T. D. Balakrishnan, Turner; A. Raju, Fitter; and G. Vasudevan, Fitter, is justified.

On notice from the industrial tribunal to the petitioner calling upon the petitioner to present its statement after receipt of the workers' statement, the petitioner filed a counter-affidavit demurring to the competency and validity of the order of reference, the jurisdiction of the tribunal and canvassing the merits of the case. The management also sought to impeach the order of reference made by the Government by an application made to this Court, but this Court felt that there was not sufficient material for deciding the question and also expressed the view that the petitioner may advance its pleas before the tribunal. The matter eventually came up before the Tribunal and the Tribunal after an inquiry made an award on 25th June 1951 directing the payment of all arrears of pay etc., from 17th February 1951 till they were taken back to work to a moiety of the personnel in the different branches, the selection being determined in the strict seniority, the reinstatement of the remaining personnel within a period of four months after the publication of the award and also directing the reinstatement of A. Raju (Fitter) as from 7th February 1951.

(2) The Industrial Tribunal went into the question whether the management was justified in closing the factory. He dealt with the several reasons put forward by the management for the closure. The first reason put forward was that necessary raw materials were not available for continuing the work of the factory. The Industrial Tribunal found that though it was difficult to get steel during the period, it was not impossible to do so and that in any case, there was sufficient steel available with the company to carry on the manufacture in steel for some appreciable period. Even if there was a comparable shortage of brass in the local factory, the shortage could have been easily overcome through purchase in the open market. The second reason was that it was necessary to instal various new machines. In the opinion of the Industrial Tribunal, the installation of new machines would hardly involve the closure of a factory. The Tribunal also rejected the third reason that the management was justified in closing the factory and there could be no complaint by the workers as they were all temporary hands. The last reason was that the factory was working at a loss. Though certain extracts from the accounts were filed before the Tribunal to show that the factory was working at a loss, the Tribunal held that 'prima facie' the local factory should have earned a considerable profit more particularly since the Mettur factory was said to have resulted in heavy loss. He summed up his finding thus:

"It is clear, therefore, that none of the reasons given by the management would have really justified the closing down of the factory, though the apparent shortage of brass to some extent and the necessity for the installation of new machinery may have justified the actual factory work being reduced to some extent."

(3) The Industrial Tribunal did not go into the question whether the petitioner had an inherent and fundamental right to close down the factory & it is this aspect that has been most strongly pressed before us. The petitioner submits that the management could not in law be compelled to continue the business, if it did not desire to continue it and that the right of an employer to close his factory whenever he desires to do so subject to the legal rights of the workmen to wages and other benefits is part of the fundamental right of property guaranteed by the Constitution. The employer cannot be forced to continue to run his factory; nor can he be compelled to carry on his business to enable the workers to earn wages, so the argument ran.

(4) The application was strongly opposed by the General Industrial Workers Union representing the workers of the petitioner corporation. In the affidavit filed by the Secretary of the Union, it was alleged that the factory was closed down with the intention of putting down the workers and curbing their activities in forming an union of workers. They met the plea that the management could not be compelled to continue the business with the assertion that the management was wrong in thinking that in a Democratic Republic State the management could throw out its workers at its whims and fancies and close down the factory to suit its convenience and pleasure. A preliminary objection was also taken to the maintainability of the application, because there was an appeal against the award to the Industrial Appellate Tribunal.

(5) There is no substance in the preliminary objection. The appeal will obviously be confined to the merits of the case. We doubt if the appellate Tribunal has the power to declare the reference by the Government to be invalid or to hold that Industrial Disputes Act itself is invalid or otherwise. In any event the question which has been raised before us, namely, whether the owner of a business can be compelled to continue it against his will could not have been decided by the Appellate Tribunal.

(6) Mr. Venkatasubramania Aiyar, learned counsel for the petitioner, relied on principles of American Constitutional law bearing on similar questions. The leading decision of the Supreme Court is that in — 'Wolff Packing Co. v. Court of Industrial Relations', (1923) 67 Law Ed. 1103: 262 U S 522. The company was a corporation in the State of Kansas engaged in slaughtering hogs and cattle and preparing the meat for sale and shipment. It had about 300 employees. More than half of its products were packed and sold beyond the State. The president and secretary of the Meat Cutters Union filed a complaint with the Industrial Court, established under the Court of Industrial Relations Act, against the company respecting the wages its employees were receiving. The Court made an order directing an increase of wages. The company refused to comply with the order and the Industrial Court then instituted mandamus proceedings in the Supreme Court of the State to compel compliance. That Court appointed a Commissioner who made a report that the company had lost heavily during the previous year and that there was no sufficient evidence of an emergency or danger to the public from the controversy to justify action by the industrial court. The State Supreme Court overruled this report and held that the evidence showed a sufficient emergency and upheld the order of the Industrial Court and the validity of the Act. The Supreme Court of the United States reversed the judgment of the State Supreme Court. The opinion of the Court was delivered by Chief Justice Taft. He first pointed out that the necessary postulate of the Industrial Court Act was that the State representing the people was so much interested in their peace, health and comfort that it could compel those engaged in the manufacture of necessities like food and clothing and the production of fuel, whether owners or workers, to continue in their business and employment on terms fixed by an agency of the State, if they cannot agree. The Act therefore in essence curtailed the right of the employer on the one hand and of the employee on the other to contract about his affairs and this was part of the liberty of the individual protected by the guarantee of the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. This abridgement of the liberty of the individual could only be justified by exceptional circumstances. The question was whether there existed such circumstances. The argument on behalf of the State ran on the following two lines: (1) the Act declared that the preparation of human food was affected by public interest and therefore the legislature had power to regulate the business, (2) the power to regulate a business affected with a public interest extended to fixing wages and terms of employment to secure continuity of operation. In discussing the question, the learned Chief Justice divided businesses said to be clothed with a public interest justifying some public regulation into three classes as follows:

"1. Those which are carried on under the authority of a public grant of privileges which either expressly or impliedly imposes the affirmative duty of rendering a public service demanded by any member of the public. Such are the railroads, other common carriers and public utilities.

2. Certain occupations, regarded as exceptional, the public interest attaching to which, recognised from earliest times, has survived the period of arbitrary laws by Parliament or colonial legislature for regulating all trades and callings. Such are those of the keepers of inns, cabs and gristmills.

3. Businesses which, though not public at their inception may be fairly said to have risen to be such, and have become subject in consequence to some government regulation. They have come to hold such a peculiar relation to the public that this is superimposed upon them. In the language of the cases, the owner, by devoting his business to the public use, in effect grants the public an interest in that use, and subjects himself to public regulation to the extent of that interest, although the property continues to belong to its private owner, and to be entitled to protection accordingly."

It is not necessary to refer at length to the learned Chief Justice's discussion as to when a business could be said to be clothed with a public interest, as it was common ground before us that the business with which we are concerned in this case is not one such. But even in respect of such a business, he points out that

"to say that a business is clothed with a public interest is not to determine what regulation may be permissible in view of the private rights of the owner."

(7) Dealing with businesses which fall under the third head the learned Judge observes:

"The ordinary producer, manufacturer or shop-keeper may sell or not sell as he likes."

He cites with approval the following passage from the opinion in — 'Munn v. People of Illinois', (1877) 94 U. S. 113: 24 Law Ed. 77:

"When, therefore, one devotes his property to a use in which the public has an interest, he in effect grants to the public an interest in that use, and must submit to be controlled by the public for the common good, to the extent of the interest he has thus created. He may withdraw his grant by discontinuing the use but so long as he maintains the use, he must submit to the control," and says:

"The power of a legislature to compel continuity in a business can only arise where the obligation of continued service by the owner and its employees is direct, and is assumed when the business is entered upon. A common carrier which accepts a railroad franchise is not free to withdraw the use of that which it has granted to the public. It is true that, if operation is impossible without continuous loss — 'Brooks Scanlon Co. v. Railroad Commission', (1920) 251 U. S. 396: 64 Law Ed. 323 it may give up its franchise and enterprise; but, short of this, it must continue. Not so the owner when, by mere changed conditions, his business becomes clothed with a public interest. He may stop at will, whether the business be losing or profitable."

In the result the court held that the Industrial Court Act in so far as it permits the fixing of wages in the plaintiff's company, was in conflict with the Fourteenth Amendment, as it deprived it of its property and liberty of contract without due process of law.

(8) In — 'Dorchy v. Kansas' (1924) 264 U. S. 286: 68 Law Ed. 686 the principle of the decision in the — 'Wolff Packing Co. v. Court of Industrial Relations', (1923) 262 U. S. 522: 67 Law Ed. 1103 was applied to the coal mines in the same State. It was held that the system of compulsory arbitration violated the Federal Constitution. In the second 'Wolff Packing Co. v. Court of Industrial Relations', (1925) 267 U. S. 552: 69 Law Ed. 785 the Supreme Court held that the Industrial Relations Act was unconstitutional in so far as it authorised an administrative board to fix hours of labour in industries relating to food, clothing and fuel as it was merely a system of compulsory arbitration for the settlement of labour disputes. The judgment in this case affirmed once again the principles laid down in the — 'first Wolff Packing Co. case', (1923) 262 U. S. 522 : 67 Law Ed. 1103. It is sufficient to extract the following passage from the concluding part of the opinion in this case:

"The system of compulsory arbitration which the Act establishes is intended to compel, and if sustained will compel, the owner and employees to continue the business on terms which are not of their making. It will constrain them not merely to respect the terms if they continue the business, but will constrain them to continue the business on those terms. True, the terms have some qualifications, but as shown in the prior decision the qualifications are rather illusory and do not subtract much from the duty imposed. Such a system infringes the liberty of contract and rights of property guaranteed by the due process of law clause of the 14th Amendment."

(9) We agree with Mr. Venkatasubramania Aiyar, the learned counsel for the petitioner, that the later decision in — 'Nebbia v. New York', (1934) 291 U. S. 502: 78 Law Ed. 940 has not affected the correctness of the decisions in the — 'Wolff Packing Co. v. Court of Industrial Relations', (1923) 262 U. S. 522: 67 Law Ed. 1103 and — 'Wolff Packing Co. v. Court of Industrial Relations', (1925) 267 U. S. 552: 69 Law Ed. 785 which are cited without disapproval in the course of the judgment in that case. But the question is how far the principles laid down in these American decisions can be applied to the present case which must be decided on the provisions of our Constitution as interpreted by us. The relevant provision is Art. 19(1) (g) which says that every citizen has a right to practice any profession or to carry on any occupation, trade or business. Clause (6) of the same article confers power on the State to impose restrictions on this right. It would appear that so far as such restrictions are concerned, the only question to be determined under our Constitution is whether the restrictions are reasonable and in the interests of the general public. There is the further fact that our Constitution, unlike the Constitution of the United States, does not declare or recognise the freedom of contract. We therefore very much doubt if we can apply wholesale the American decisions to cases arising under our Constitution. For instance we find it difficult to hold that a legislation fixing minimum hours of work or regulating the wages is unconstitutional in this country.

(10) Obviously the right conferred by Art. 19 (1) (g) to carry on any business is not absolute. Undeniably, the State has got the right to regulate any business, and this right need not be confined to what we may call "public utility businesses" only. Businesses which are likely to prove dangerous to public safety or public health may be subjected to severe restrictive regulations, as for instance, the manufacture and sale of ammunition. Inasmuch as the general public would be interested even in a private business in the sense that the general public is the ultimate object of service and supply, the State may impose conditions in the interests of the general public subject to which only any business could be carried on. We think it is equally clear that in the interests of a large section of the public, namely, industrial workers, legislature may provide, whether directly or indirectly through administrative bodies for the fixing of reasonable and adequate wages and generally regulate the conditions of service. The Industrial Disputes Act is evidently such a piece of legislation. We fail to see how the Act as such and 'in toto' can be held to be void as being inconsistent with the Constitution. In the absence of a guarantee of the freedom of contract, we do not think it unreasonable to presume that the freedom of contract can, to a certain extent, be curtailed if such curtailment is reasonable and in the general interests of the general public. This may be necessary in regard to the relationship between the employer and employees in a large industrial concern, where it is clear that the contracting parties, namely, the employer and the employee do not stand on the same level.

(11) In this case, however, we are concerned with a much narrower question, namely, whether an award made by the Industrial Tribunal appointed under the Industrial Disputes Act and published by the Government in accordance with the provisions of the Act can direct the management of an industry to continue to carry on any business against their will. If a citizen has got a right to carry on business, we think it follows that, he must be at liberty not to carry it on if he so chooses. A person can no more be compelled to carry on a business than a person can be compelled to acquire or hold property. A person with money can certainly dispose of it as he pleases. He may invest it or part of it in running a business, but he need not. He can invest it in other ways or he may keep the money idle. Mr. Bhashyam was really unable to convince us how any one can be compelled to carry on a business against his will and yet be said to enjoy a right to carry on a business.

(12) We do not wish to say anything regarding industries which come within the definition of "public utility services" in Sec. 2(n) of the Industrial Disputes Act. From the constitutional standpoint of view, it is arguable if a mere declaration by the legislature that a particular business or occupation is a public utility service would be conclusive on the question whether it can in law be brought under that category. We are also not dealing with businesses or industries which have been commenced with the special help rendered to them by the Government and which have received special benefit from the Government. It may be that in such cases the private owner may be compelled to continue the business unless he is willing to surrender the rights and privileges conferred on him by the Government and compensates the Government for the loss sustained by them by a stoppage of the business. We are here concerned with a business which is admittedly not a public utility service and which has not received any special consideration from the Government. Even assuming that indirectly the public have a sort of interest in this business, such interest would last only so long as a business is continued. On this point we follow with great respect the observations that fell from Chief Justice Taft in the — 'First Wolff Packing Co. v. Court of Industrial Relations', (1923) 262 U. S. 522: 67 Law Ed. 1103. Mr. Bhashyam who appeared for the workers was unable to support his contention by any authority. He relied more on the general features of the economic system which throws the employee at the mercy of the employer. He referred to certain observations in — 'National Labour Relations Board v. Jones and Laughlin Steel Corporation', (1937) 301 U. S. 1: 81 Law Ed. 893. But the decision in that case has not even a remote bearing on the facts of the case before us. What Chief Justice Hughes says about the position of employees is unexceptionable. With great respect we agree with him—

"that a single employee was helpless in dealing with an employer; that he was dependent ordinarily on his daily wage for the maintenance of himself and family; that if the employer refused to pay him the wages that he thought fair, he was nevertheless unable to leave the employ and resist arbitrary and unfair treatment; that union was essential to give labourers opportunity to deal on an equality with their employer."

This is true, but it does not follow, because several employees may be thrown out of employment, the employer can be compelled to carry on a business. We also agree with Mr. Bhashyam that the State has an undoubted power to regulate the carrying on of a business or the running of an industry; but regulation is one thing and compulsion to carry on a business is quite another. Logically, according to the argument of Mr. Bhashyam there is nothing to prevent the State compelling any person with money to commence a new business to provide employment for several unemployed persons.

(13) We hold therefore that the award in so far as it directs the petitioner to continue to carry on the business is void as it is inconsistent with the Constitution.

(14) In this view, it is not necessary to embark on an enquiry as to whether the petitioner had proper grounds for deciding to close down the factory temporarily. We do not think it is open to us to canvass the grounds which prompted the owner to discontinue the business. The ground may be actual loss or apprehended loss. It may equally be disinclination to run the risk of running the business. Mr. Bhashyam asserted that even if an employer 'bona fide' decides to close down the business, because he does not want to continue it, he cannot be permitted to do so. We cannot agree with him, and his contention is not supported by any authority.

(15) Apart from this constitutional aspect, we are also inclined to hold that the question whether an employer could or could not close down a business permanently or temporarily falls outside the purview of the Industrial Disputes Act. No doubt the term 'industrial dispute' has been very widely defined in S. 2 (k) of the Act; but it appears to be clear to us that the definition of an "industrial dispute" and the Act taken as a whole assume the continued existence of an industry. The Act does deal with lock-outs and strikes, but Mr. Bhashyam conceded that there has been no lock-out in this case, and he made the concession rightly. In the case of a lock-out, the industry as such is not closed down even temporarily; only particular workers are refused work. Closing down a business even temporarily is distinct and different from a lock-out, just as the discontinuance from service of an employee is not the same thing as a strike. While therefore the Industrial Tribunal has got the jurisdiction to adjudicate on the question whether a particular lock-out was justified or not; it cannot decide the question whether an employer can close down his business temporarily for an indefinite period or permanently. There cannot be dispute strictly so-called between an employer and an employee as regards the continuance, of the business itself. This question was completely outside the Industrial Disputes Act, and we hold that the reference by the Government was without jurisdiction and consequently the award was bad.

(16) The application must be allowed and the award in so far as it directs the petitioner to continue to carry on the business and says that he had no right to close it must be quashed. There will be no order as to costs.

(17) We certify that the case involves a substantial question of law as to the interpretation of the Constitution and in particular Art. 19 (1) (g).

B/D.R.R.

Application allowed.

A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 102 (Vol. 40, C. N. 34)
SUBBA RAO J.

Dindigal Skin Merchants' Association and others, Petitioners v. The Industrial Tribunal, Madurai and others, Respondents.

Writ Petn. No. 779 of 1951, D/- 21-7-1952.

(a) Industrial Disputes Act (1947) — Preamble — Act is not unconstitutional — (Constitution of India, Art. 19(1) (g) and Art. 19 (6)).

In the present social set up it is impossible to hold that the legislation, intended to bring about harmonious relationship between the employers and the employees in the interests of industrial peace is an unreasonable restriction upon the fundamental right guaranteed under Art. 19(1) (g) of the Constitution. Indeed the Industrial Disputes Act by providing a machinery to smoothen out the disputes between the employers and employees enables the employer to carry out his trade or business more effectively than otherwise he could do. In the interests of general public, and particularly when the freedom of contract has not been guaranteed by the Constitution the provisions of the Act empowering the tribunals to decide a dispute between parties notwithstanding their prior agreement to the contrary cannot be held to be an unreasonable restriction on the fundamental right to carry on the trade. The act therefore is not unconstitutional on the ground that it affected the fundamental right guaranteed by Art. 19(1)(g). AIR 1951 Mad 974 and AIR 1953 Mad 98 Rel. on. (Para 3)

(b) Industrial Disputes Act (1947) — Preamble — Writ of certiorari against Tribunal, on ground that there is no dispute — Maintainability — (Constitution of India, Art. 226).

The Industrial Disputes Act is a self-contained Act providing for suitable machinery for deciding the disputes that arise between the employers and the employees. The Act provides for an appeal against the order of the Tribunal. The Tribunal would be in a position to decide the disputes more satisfactorily and effectively than they could be done in a Writ of Certiorari. As the petitioner (employer) has an effective remedy writ will not issue on the ground that there is no dispute between the parties. (Para 6)

D. Narasaraju and T. T. Srinivasan, for Petitioners; V. V. Raghavan, for Govt. Pleader, for the State; V. Venkataraman, for Row and Reddy, for Respondent No. 4.

REFERENCES: Courtwar/Chronological/ Paras ('51) 1951-2 Mad LJ 382: (AIR 1951 Mad 974)

(52) 1952-1 Mad LJ 481: (AIR 1953 Mad 98) 3

ORDER: This is an application for issuing a Writ of Certiorari to call for the records and quash the notification of Government in G. O. No. 4605 (Development Department) dated 19-10-1951 or to issue an order in the nature of mandamus directing the Industrial Tribunal, Madurai, to forbear from proceeding with the reference made by the Government. The petitioner is the Dindigul Skin Merchants Association. That Association was formed to represent the employers of about nineteen tanneries. In regard to the employees working in those tanneries there are three associations, (1) the National Tanneries Workers Association Dindigul registered on 5-7-1948, (2) Tanneries Labour Union, Dindigul formed on 20-11-1950 and (3) the Tannery Workers Union, Dindigul, registered in the year 1942. It was banned by Government in September 1949. The ban was lifted in November 1950 and it began to function again from April 1951. The total number of members on the books in regard to the first union was 511 on 31st March 1951. The membership of the 3rd respondent was 194 on 31st March 1951. The fourth respondent had 420 members on 31st March 1947.

There were disputes between the employees and the employers and an agreement was entered into between the petitioner and the National Tannery Workers Association, settling their disputes on 1-2-1951. It is not clear from the record the total membership of that union on 12-2-1951. It is either because that union did not represent majority of the labourers or because that the other unions did not agree with them. There were subsequent disputes between the employers and the employees, and an attempt was made to get their disputes settled by a Conciliation officer. Respondents 3 and 4 made their demands and copies of them were sent to the petitioner. The Conciliation officer made an infructuous attempt to settle the disputes and finally recommended to the Government that the disputes might be referred for adjudication on the four issues relating to basic wages, dearness allowance, bonus and weekly holiday for all workers on Sundays in respect of eight tanneries about which he was able to gather particulars. The Commissioner of Labour also agreed with the Labour Officer and supported his recommendation and the Government after considering the reports referred the dispute in respect of the eight tanneries to the Industrial Tribunal, Madurai, for adjudication on the above four points by issuing G. O. No. 4605 (Development Department) dated 19-5-1951.

(2) Mr. Narasaraju, the learned counsel for the petitioner raised before me the following points:—

1. The Industrial Disputes Act of 1947 (Act XIV of 1947) is vitiated in so far as it affected the fundamental right of the petitioner to carry on his trade and to enter into agreements for effectively carrying on the trade. He says that the Act which allows the employers or the employees to ignore contracts affects his fundamental right.

2. It has not been established that there is an industrial dispute between the employers and the employees of every tannery.

3. There was no demand by the employees before the Conciliation proceedings started.

(3) Learned counsel in support of his first contention relies upon Art. 19 (1) (g) of the Constitution of India which reads:

"All citizens shall have the right to practise any profession or to carry on any occupation, trade or business."

Art. 19 (6) says:

"Nothing in sub-clause (g) of the said clause shall affect the operation of any existing law in so far as it imposes, or prevent the State from making any law imposing, in the interests of the general public, reasonable restrictions on the exercise of the right conferred by the said sub-clause....."

The question therefore is whether the provision of Act XIV of 1947 compelling the parties to an industrial dispute to get their disputes settled through the bodies mentioned therein is a reasonable restriction on the aforesaid right. Uninfluenced by the decisions cited before me, I have no hesitation to hold that in the present social set up it is impossible to hold that the legislation, intended to bring about harmonious relationship between the employers and the employees in the interests of industrial peace is an unreasonable restriction upon the fundamental right guaranteed under Art. 19(1)(g) of the Constitution. Indeed the Industrial Disputes Act by providing a machinery to smoothen out the disputes between the employers and employees enables the employer to carry out his trade or business more effectively than otherwise he could do. A Bench of this court consisting of Rajamannar C. J. and Satyanarayana Rao J. in — 'Sree Meenakshi Mills Ltd. Madura v. State of Madras', 1951-2 Mad L J 382 has accepted the famous passage of Julian Huxley on the "Economic Man and Social Man" wherein the learned author says:

"Many of our old ideas must be retranslated, so to speak, into a new language. The democratic idea of freedom, for instance, must lose its nineteenth century meaning of individual liberty in the economic sphere, and become adjusted to new conceptions of social duties and responsibilities. When a big employer talks about his democratic right to individual freedom, meaning thereby a claim to socially irresponsible control over a huge industrial concern and over the lives of tens of thousands of human beings whom it happens to employ, he is talking in a dying language."

Though the learned Judges did not express a final opinion in that case, a perusal of the judgment indicates the inclination of their mind to support the restrictions imposed in that case in the interests of society.

In another decision, the — 'Indian Metal and Metallurgical Corporation v. Industrial Tribunal, Madras', 1952-1 Mad L J 481 the learned Chief Justice and Venkatarama Aiyar J. had an occasion to construe the scope of Art. 19 (1) (g) and the limitations on the right conferred by that Article. The question there was whether the Industrial Tribunal has got the jurisdiction to adjudicate on the question whether a particular lock-out was justified or not and whether it can decide the question whether an employer can close down a business temporarily for an indefinite period or permanently. In dealing with the question whether the Industrial Disputes Act is void as being inconsistent with the Constitution, the learned Judges made the following relevant observations:

"We think it is equally clear that in the interests of a large section of the public, namely, industrial workers, Legislature may provide, whether directly or indirectly through administrative bodies for the fixing of reasonable and adequate wages and generally regulate the condition of service. The Industrial Disputes Act is evidently such a piece of legislation. We fail to see how the Act as such and in toto can be held to be void as being inconsistent with the Constitution. In the absence of a guarantee of the freedom of contract, we do not think it unreasonable to presume that the freedom of contract can, to a certain extent, be curtailed, if such curtailment is reasonable and in the general interests of the general public. This may be necessary in regard to the relationship between the employer and employees in a large Industrial concern where it is clear that the contracting parties, namely, the employer and the employee do not stand on the same level."

Apart from the fact that I am bound by this decision, I respectfully agree with the observations made. In this case also the attack on the constitutionality of the Act is based upon the sanctity of the contract. But, as the learned Judges point out, in the interests of general public, and particularly when the freedom of contract has not been guaranteed by the Constitution the provisions of the Act empowering the tribunals to decide a dispute between parties notwithstanding their prior agreement to the contrary cannot be held to be an unreasonable restriction on the fundamental right to carry on the trade.

(4) Learned counsel for the petitioner also has not been able to satisfy me on the material placed before me that there was no industrial dispute between the employers of any one of these eight tanneries and a substantial body of the employees of that tannery. Indeed the affidavits do not in any way disclose any details or particulars to substantiate the said argument. In the circumstances I do not think it is advisable to express my final opinion as any opinion that I may give may prejudice the enquiry before the tribunal. He may raise this point before the tribunal.

(5) The main argument of the learned counsel is that the Government has no jurisdiction to make a reference to the tribunal as, according to him, there is no industrial dispute between the employers and the employees. To put in other words, the learned counsel argues that the union does not represent the substantial body of the employees and that they have not made the demands on the petitioner before the matter was taken up by the Conciliation officer. But it is clear from the aforesaid facts that the 4th respondent made the demands on the petitioner before the Conciliation officer and also served a copy of it on the petitioner.

The said demands were made in a letter dated 6th May 1951. It was written by the President of the 4th respondent to the President of the petitioner's union. It contains eight demands and it ends with a final request that besides a fair understanding must be reached in respect of unreasonable dismissals, suspensions, fines, threats and exchange of angry words in the tanneries. This was a clear demand made by the 4th respondent on the petitioner who is a union representing the employers. The Government stated in their counter affidavit that the two unions mentioned above, i.e. respondents 3 and 4 raised certain demands relating to basic wages, dearness allowance, bonus and weekly holiday for all workers on Sundays, additional leave facilities and provident fund on behalf of the workers in nineteen tanneries in Dindigul and presented them to the Dindigul Skin Merchants Association but the association did not make any response to the Unions. They also stated that on the failure of direct negotiations the Labour Officer took up conciliation with representatives but could not bring about a settlement on account of the tanners' refusal to attend any joint talks with the unions. The counter affidavit further discloses that as the Labour Officer failed to settle the disputes he recommended to the Government that the disputes might be referred to adjudication on the four issues relating to basic wages, dearness allowance, bonus and weekly holiday for all workers on Sundays in respect of the tanneries about which he was able to gather full particulars. It is also found in the affidavit that the Commissioner of Labour agreed with the Labour officer, and the Government after careful consideration of the representations of the Labour Officer and the Commissioner of Labour referred the dispute in respect of eight tanneries to the Industrial Tribunal, Madurai. It is therefore clear from the allegation in the counter affidavit filed by the Government and also from the aforesaid letter that there were disputes between the fourth respondent—union and the petitioner in regard to the aforesaid four matters.

On the question whether the third and fourth respondents represented the tannery workers of Dindigul, in the counter affidavit it is stated that they were the representatives of the union and the National Tannery Workers Association is a management sponsored organisation and is non-representative of the workers. There is no material on record for me to say that the said allegations are untrue and are not supported by facts.

(6) Further the Industrial Disputes Act is a self contained Act providing for suitable machinery for deciding the disputes that arise between the employers and the employees. The Act provides for an appeal against the order of the Tribunal. The Tribunal would be in a position to decide the disputes more satisfactorily and effectively than they could be done in a Writ of Certiorari. As the petitioner has an effective remedy this writ will not issue.

(7) It should not be understood that I have expressed any final opinion on questions of fact and the tribunal will be at liberty to dispose of all the questions raised before it uninfluenced by any observations that I may have made in this order. This application therefore fails and is dismissed with costs.

A/R.G.D.

Application dismissed.

A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 105 (Vol. 40, C. N. 35)

RAJAMANNAR C. J.

AND VENKATARAMA AYYAR J.

V. M. Syed Mohamed and Co. and another, Petitioners v. The State of Madras Represented by the Secretary to Government Revenue Department, Fort Saint George, Madras and another, Respondents.

W. P. Nos. 21 and 41 of 1952, D/- 29-8-1952.

(a) Constitution of India, Art. 226 (1) — Prosecution under S. 15 (b), Madras General Sales Tax Act — Accused taking out writ of 'certiorari' for quashing proceedings — Contentions which can be raised — (Sales Tax — Madras General Sales Tax Act (9 of 1939), S. 12A).

Where the petitioners who were being prosecuted under S. 15 (b) of the Madras General Sales Tax Act, took out a writ for quashing those proceedings on the ground that the Act and the Rules and the assessment made thereunder were void and that the prosecution was illegal.

Held that the petitioners were duly served with notice under the Act and had ample opportunity of putting forward before the Tribunals constituted under the Act all contentions based on the provisions of the Act or the Rules. Not having done so, they could not be permitted to put forward in these proceedings contentions which were available to them before the Tribunals. The only pleas that were open to them were those which could not have been urged before the Tribunals, such as the plea that the Act is 'ultra vires' which could not obviously be entertained by a Tribunal which owes its very existence to the Act. (Para 3)

Anno: C.P.C., Appendix III; Constitution of India, Art. 226 Notes 1 and 13.

(b) Sales Tax — Madras General Sales Tax Act (9 of 1939), S. 16A — Section is not opposed to natural justice.

Where the tax is determined after notice to the assessee, it is not repugnant to rules of natural justice to provide that the validity of assessment shall not be questioned at the stage of realisation of the tax. Section 16A is not, therefore, opposed to natural justice and void on that ground as under the Act the tax is determined after notice to the assessee. (Para 3)

(c) Sales Tax — Madras General Sales Tax Act (9 of 1939), Preamble and S. 3 (5) — Validity of Act — Act is not invalid because it imposes tax on purchasers — (Government of India Act (1935), Sch. VII, List 2, Entry 48).

The words "sales of goods" in Entry 48 import in their ordinary sense a transaction which results in change of ownership from one person to another. That must, by its very nature, be a bilateral transaction, with a seller on the one hand and a purchaser on the other. It is only when there is a contract to which both are parties that there can be a sale. A power to tax sale of goods is, therefore, in reality a power to tax the transaction and the power to tax the transaction carries with it the power to tax either party thereto. (Para 6)

The words "sale tax" are generally understood as importing a tax on the occasion of sale, it is immaterial whether it is collected in the first instance from the sellers or the purchasers, for, eventually it would be passed on to the consumers, and in either case it would be a tax on sales. It is in this sense that the words 'tax on sales' would appear to have been used in Entry No. 48. (Para 9)

Entry No. 48 is of sufficient amplitude to authorise the levy of a tax on purchasers and therefore the Madras General Sales Tax Act which imposes a tax on the act of purchasing of goods is not 'ultra vires'. (Para 9)

(d) Sales Tax — Madras General Sales Tax Act (9 of 1939), Preamble and S. 5 (vi) — Validity of Act and Rules framed thereunder — Act and Rules are not open to challenge on ground of unconstitutional delegation — (Sales Tax — Madras Turnover and Assessment Rules (1939), Rr. 4 and 16) — (Constitution of India, Art. 265).

(1) The Legislature must normally discharge its primary legislative function itself and not through others. (2) Once it is established that it has sovereign powers within a certain sphere, it must follow as a corollary that it is free to legislate within the sphere in any way which appears to it to be the best way to give effect to its intention and policy in making a particular law, and that it may utilize any outside agency to any extent it finds necessary for doing things which it is unable to do itself or finds it inconvenient to do. In other words, it can do everything which is ancillary to and necessary for the full and effective exercise of its power of legislation. (3) It cannot abdicate its legislative functions, and therefore while entrusting power to an outside agency, it must see that such agency acts as a subordinate authority and does not become a parallel Legislature. (4) Therefore, there are only two main checks in this country on the power of the Legislature to delegate, these being its good sense and the principle that it should not cross the line beyond which delegation amounts to "abdication and self-effacement". AIR 1951 SC 332, Foll. (Para 18)

As regards the Madras General Sales Tax Act and the Rules framed thereunder what the Legislature has done is merely to authorise the rule-making authorities to carry out the policies enunciated in the statute and to fill up the details. The Rules themselves are to come into operation only after they are approved by a resolution of the House. Far from effecting self-effacement, the Legislature has retained complete control over the legislation and in fact it has exerted that control by introducing amendments of the Act from time to time. It must, therefore, be held that the Madras Act and the Rules are not open to challenge on the ground of unconstitutional delegation. (Para 21)

In America, the law is well settled that (1) the enunciation of policy is a matter exclusively within the competence of the Legislature and incapable of delegation to other bodies and that (2) it is not unconstitutional to entrust to special bodies the carrying out of the policies declared by the Act and for that purpose to clothe them with authority to frame regulations within the framework of the Act. Therefore, even according to the principles established in American decisions, the power entrusted to the rule-making authorities under the Madras Act cannot be held to be unconstitutional delegation. (Paras 14 and 17)

(e) Sales Tax — Madras General Sales Tax Act (9 of 1939), Preamble — Act and Rules framed thereunder do not offend Art. 14 of Constitution — (Constitution of India, Art. 14) — (Sales Tax — Madras Turnover and Assessment Rules (1939) ).

The following principles may be taken to be well-established: (1) The guarantee of equal protection of laws does not require that the same law should be made applicable to all persons or that the law should have the same operation on all persons. It prohibits only an application of different laws to persons who are in similar circumstances. (2) The requirements as to equal protection of laws do not forbid legislative classifications, provided such classifications rest on some difference germane to the purpose of the statute. (3) A classification cannot be upheld on purely fanciful grounds. (4) With reference to taxing statutes the Legislature has considerable latitude in making classifications. It can select such persons or things as it chooses for purposes of taxation. (5) Taxing statutes must also satisfy the test of equal protection and are liable to be struck down, if they do not. (6) There is a strong presumption in favour of the validity of legislative classification and it is for those who challenge it as arbitrary and unconstitutional to establish it beyond all doubt. (7) The power to make classification could be exercised not only by the Legislature but also by administrative bodies acting under the Act. Case law discussed.

(Paras 22 and 26)

Applying the above principles to the Madras General Sales Tax Act and the Rules which impose sales tax in some cases on the purchaser, while laying it on the sellers in other cases, cannot be held to offend Art. 14 of the Constitution. (Para 29)

(f) Sales Tax — Madras Turnover and Assessment Rules (1939), R. 16 (5) — Validity — (Sales Tax — Madras General Sales Tax Act (9 of 1939), S. 5 (vi) ).

Rule 16 (5) is repugnant to S. 5 (vi) of the Act and must therefore be held to be 'ultra vires'. (Para 32)

(g) Sales Tax — Madras General Sales Tax Act (1939), R. 15 — Forms prescribed under — Form A-4 — Form does not infringe S. 5 (vi) of Madras Act 9 of 1939 — (Sales Tax — Madras General Sales Tax Act (9 of 1939), S. 5 (vi) ). (Para 33)

(h) Sales Tax — Madras Turnover and Assessment Rules (1939), R. 15 (2) — Rule is not unconstitutional — 'Obiter'.

Obiter: Advance payment of tax is a well-recognised feature in the mode of realising tax and the provision in R. 15(2) is in accordance with the practice generally obtaining in this branch of the law. The Rule is accordingly not unconstitutional.

(Para 34)

(i) Sales Tax — Madras Turnover and Assessment Rules (1939), R. 16 (2) — Classification — Repugnancy to Art. 14 of Constitution — (Constitution of India, Art. 14).

The classification of merchants into those who take out licences and those who do not, made by R. 16 (2) is one resting on a rational basis and is not repugnant to Art. 14 of the Constitution. (Para 35)

K. V. Venkatasubramania Ayyar, K. Rajah Ayyar & C. Venugopalachari, for Petitioners; The Advocate General and V. V. Raghavan, for Government Pleader, for Respondents.

REFERENCES: Courtwar/Chronological/ Paras

('45) 1945 FLJ 1: (AIR 1945 PC 48: 46 Cri LJ 589 PC)	18
('49) 1949 FLJ 225: (AIR 1949 FC 175: 50 Cri LJ 897)	18
('51) 1951 SCJ 29: (AIR 1951 SC 41)	22, 23
('51) 1951 SCJ 478: (AIR 1951 SC 318: 52 Cri L J 1361 SC)	22
('51) 1951 SCJ 527: (AIR 1951 SC 332)	18, 20
('52) 1952 SCJ 55: (AIR 1952 SC 75: 1952 Cri LJ 510 SC)	22, 29
('52) 1952 SCR 435: (AIR 1952 SC 123: 1952 Cri LJ 805 SC)	22, 29
('42) 1942 FLJ 61: 1942-2 Mad LJ 327: (AIR 1942 FC 33)	6
('79) 4 Cal 172: (5 Ind App 178 PC)	18, 19
(1885) 10 AC 282: (54 LJPC 7)	12
(1935) AC 500: (AIR 1935 PC 158)	9
(1936) AC 578: (105 LJPC 115)	9
(1935) 79 Law Ed 446: (293 US 388)	12
(1935) 79 Law Ed 1570: 295 US 495	13
57 SCP (Canada) 150	20
(1921) 37 TLR 884: (65 SJ 752)	11
(1922) 38 TLR 781: (91 LJKB 897)	12
(1825) 23 US 43: 6 Law Ed 253	14
(1876) 92 US 575: 23 Law Ed 663	3
(1881) 102 US 586: 26 Law Ed 253	3
(1888) 128 US 174: 32 Law Ed 377	17
(1897) 165 US 150: 41 Law Ed 666	22
(1910) 216 US 400: 54 Law Ed 536	22
227 US 477: 57 Law Ed 603	26
230 US 525: 57 Law Ed 1604	16
(1914) 233 US 304: 58 Law Ed 974	22
(1919) 248 US 152: 63 Law Ed 527	22
(1920) 253 US 412: 64 Law Ed 989	22
(1920) 254 US 64: 65 Law Ed 134	3
(1923) 263 US 234: 68 Law Ed 282	3
(1925) 268 US 137: 69 Law Ed 884	22, 25
(1927) 273 US 407: 71 Law Ed 709	25
(1928) 276 US 394: 72 Law Ed 624	17
(1928) 276 US 567: 72 Law Ed 703	3
(1928) 277 US 32: 72 Law Ed 770	22
(1929) 278 US 515: 73 Law Ed 483	22
(1931) 283 US 527: 75 Law Ed 1248	22
(1934) 292 US 535: 78 Law Ed 1411	22, 27, 34
(1934) 291 US 457: 78 Law Ed 909	17
(1934) 292 US 86: 78 Law Ed 1141	34
(1935) 294 US 580: 79 Law Ed 1070	22, 23, 25
(1935) 294 US 550: 79 Law Ed 1054	22
(1936) 297 US 266: 80 Law Ed 675	22
(1937) 301 US 459: 81 Law Ed 1223	22
(1938) 303 US 573: 82 Law Ed 1024	22, 26
(1940) 309 US 83: 84 Law Ed 590	28

VENKATARAMA AYYAR J. These writs raise the question of the validity of the Madras General Sales Tax Act, IX of 1939, and of the Turnover and Assessment Rules, 1939 framed thereunder hereinafter called the Rules. The petitioners in Writ Petition No. 21 of 1952 are doing business as tanners in Eluru. The course of business is that they purchase raw hides & skins & tan them in their own tannery. They hold a licence as tanners under the Act. Under Rule 15, they were submitting monthly returns of hides and skins purchased by them for the purpose of tanning, in form No. A-4 and an order was passed on 23-2-1951 on the basis of these returns determining the tax payable at Rs. 10,180-7-3.

Payments amounting to Rs. 4,790-13-0 had been made by the petitioners towards the amount of the tax and for the balance Rs. 5,389-10-3 remaining payable, a demand was duly made by notice under Rule 15 (4). No appeal was taken against the order of assessment and it has become final. Nor was any action instituted to contest its validity. The tax not having been paid, the Commercial Tax Officer instituted proceedings under Section 15 (b) of the Act for the recovery of the amount. The Section so far as it is material runs as follows:

"Any person who fails to pay within the time allowed any tax assessed on him, or any fee due from him, under this Act shall, on conviction by a Presidency Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first class, be liable to a fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, and in the case of a conviction under clause (b), the Magistrate shall specify in the order the tax, fee or other amount, which the person convicted has failed or evaded to pay or has wrongfully collected, and the tax, fee or amount so specified shall be recoverable as if it were a fine."

These proceedings are now pending before the Honorary Special First Class Magistrate, Eluru, as C. C. No. 88 of 1951. The petitioners have taken out this writ for quashing these proceedings on the ground that the Act and the Rules and the assessment made thereunder are void and that the prosecution is illegal.

(2) In Writ Petition No. 41 of 1952, the facts are similar. The petitioner is a licenced tanner of hides and skins doing business at Eluru. He sent monthly returns of hides and skins purchased for tanning in form No. A-4 and on the basis of these returns, an order was passed on 23-2-51 determining the tax payable by him at Rs. 4,407-7-0. After deducting Rs. 1,805-3-4 which had been paid by the petitioner towards the amount of the tax, there was a balance of Rs. 2,602-3-8 remaining payable by him and a notice of demand for this amount under Rule 15 (4) was duly served on him.

The order of assessment was not taken in appeal and has become final. Nor was any action filed contesting its validity. Default having been made in the payment of the tax, proceedings were taken for its recovery under Section 15 (b) of the Act. These proceedings are now pending before the Honorary First Class Magistrate, Eluru as C. C. No. 90 of 1951. The present writ has been filed for quashing those proceedings on the ground that the Act and the Rules and the assessment made thereunder are all void and that the prosecution is, therefore, illegal.

(3) It is necessary, to begin with, to define what contentions are open to the petitioners in these proceedings. The Madras General Sales Tax Act which creates the liability to pay tax on sales also constitutes Tribunals for determining the amount payable under the Act and such determination has to be made after notice to the assessee and it is open to appeal and further to a revision. The petitioners were duly served with notice under the Act and had ample opportunity of putting forward before the Tribunals all contentions based on the provisions of the Act or the Rules.

Not having done so, they cannot be permitted to put forward in these proceedings contentions which were available to them before the Tribunals. The only pleas that are now open to them are those which could not have been urged before the Tribunals. Such, for example, would be the plea that the Act is ultra vires: such a plea could not obviously be entertained by a Tribunal which owes its very existence to the Act. Mr. K. V. Venkatasubramania Ayyar, the learned Advocate who appeared for the petitioners, did not contest this position. But he argued that even on this basis Section 16-A should be declared void. It runs as follows:

"The validity of the assessment of any tax, or of the levy of any fee or other amount made under this Act, or the liability of any person to pay any tax, fee or other amount so assessed or levied shall not be questioned in any Criminal Court in any prosecution or other proceeding, whether under this Act or otherwise".

The contention is that the Section prevents the petitioners from showing that they are not liable to be taxed under the Act and is, therefore opposed to rules of natural justice. There would have been substance in this objection, if the petitioners had been denied an opportunity of contesting the claim before an order of assessment was made. But where, as here, the tax is determined after notice to the assessee, it is not repugnant to rules of natural justice to provide that the validity of assessment shall not be questioned at the stage of realisation of the tax. The provision is analogous to the rule which precludes judgment-debtors from putting forward at the stage of execution of a decree defences that were open to them, in the suit itself. The law on the subject is thus summed up by Rotshaefer in his work on Constitutional Law at page 686:

"The general rule is that due process requires that the tax-payer be accorded an opportunity to be heard at some stage in the proceedings before his liability is irrevocably fixed with respect to all matters the ascertainment of which involves the exercise of such administrative or quasi-judicial functions, so far as those matters affect the existence or extent of his liability". — Vide Turner v. Wade, (1920) 254 U. S. 64:65 Law Ed. 134; and again:

"A tax payer who fails to take advantage of the opportunity to be heard accorded him, loses his right to object to an assessment made against him" — (Vide) — Chicago, M., St. P. & P. R. Co. v. Risty, (1928) 276 U. S. 567: 72 Law Ed. 703.

and — McGregor v. Hogan, (1923) 263 U. S. 234: 68 Law Ed. 282. It is also well-settled in America that where the assessment is not otherwise open to objection, laws which provide for their recovery in a speedy and summary manner are not liable to be assailed as unconstitutional. In — State Railroad Tax Cases, (1876) 92 U. S. 575: 23 Law Ed. 663 the Court observed;

"It is a wise policy. It is founded in the simple philosophy derived from the experience of ages that the payment of taxes has to be enforced by summary and stringent means against a reluctant and often adverse sentiment and to do this successfully other instrumentalities and often (sic. other) modes of procedure are necessary than those which belong to Courts of Justice".

In — Springer v. United States, (1881) 102 U. S. 586: 26 Law Ed. 253 the Court stated:

"The prompt payment of taxes is always important to the public welfare. It may be vital to the existence of the Government. The idea that every tax-payer is entitled to the delays of litigation is unreasonable. If the laws here in question involve any wrong or unnecessary harshness it was for Congress or the people who make the Congresses to see the evil was corrected. The remedy does not lie with the judicial branch of the Government."

The contention that S. 16-A is opposed to natural justice must, therefore, be rejected.

(4) Mr. K. V. Venkatasubramania Ayyar urged that the Madras General Sales Tax Act was void on the following grounds:

(1) The Provincial Legislature had no power under the Government of India Act of 1935 to enact a law imposing a tax on purchasers.

(2) The liability to pay a tax on sales is thrown on the purchaser not by the statute but by the Rules. This is an unconstitutional delegation by the Legislature of its functions to the executive & the imposition of the tax is accordingly illegal.

(3) The Act has become void under Art. 14 of the Constitution, as it singles out for taxation purchasers in some trades and is, therefore, discriminatory.

(4) The Rules framed under the Act are inconsistent with the provisions enacted in the body of the Act and are void. Before dealing with these contentions, it will be convenient to set out the relevant provisions of the Act. The preamble to the Act declares that the object of the enactment is "to provide for the levy of a general tax on the sale of goods in the Province of Madras". S. 2 (b) defines a "Dealer" as a person who carries on the business of buying or selling goods. 'Sale' is defined in S. 2 (b) as meaning every transfer of the property in goods by one person to another in the course of trade or business. S. 2 (i) defines 'turnover' as the aggregate amount for which goods are either bought or sold by a dealer. S. 3 which is the charging Section runs as follows:

S. 3 (1) "Subject to the provisions of this Act, (a) every dealer shall pay for each year a tax on his total turnover for such year and (b) the tax shall be calculated at the rate of three pies for every rupee in such turnover".

Sub-Cls. (4) and (5) run as follows:

"(4) For the purposes of this section and the other provisions of this Act, turnover shall be determined in accordance with such rules as may be prescribed: Provided that no such rules shall come into force unless they are approved by a resolution of the Legislative Assembly.

(5) The taxes under Sub-Ss. (1) and (2) shall be assessed, levied and collected in such manner and in such instalments, if any, as may be prescribed: Provided that—(i) in respect of the same transaction of sale, the buyer or the seller, but not both as determined by such rules as may be prescribed, shall be taxed; (ii) where a dealer has been taxed in respect of the purchases of any goods in accordance with the rules referred to in Cl. (i) of this proviso, he shall not be taxed again in respect of any sale of such goods effected by him".

S. 5 (vi) is as follows:

"Subject to such restrictions and conditions as may be prescribed, including conditions as to licences and licence fees, the sale of hides and skins, whether tanned or untanned, shall be liable to tax under S. 3, sub-s. (1), only at such single point in the series of sales by successive dealers as may be prescribed".

(5) Now to take up the first contention, the argument of the petitioners is that under the Government of India Act of 1935 which was the Constitution Act in force when the Madras General Sales Tax Act was enacted, the Provincial Legislature was not competent to impose a tax on purchasers. The power to legislate on this subject was conferred by Entry 48 in the Provincial List which runs as follows: "Taxes on the sale of goods and on advertisements". The argument on behalf of the petitioners is that the words 'taxes on the sale of goods' in this Entry should be construed as meaning tax on the act of selling of goods and on that construction, the Legislature had no power to impose a tax on the act of purchasing of goods.

Support for this contention is sought in the change in language in Entry 54 in the State List of the Constitution of India 1950 which corresponds to Entry 48 of the Provincial List of the Government of India Act 1935. Entry 54 is in these terms: "Taxes on the sale or purchase of goods other than newspapers". It is argued that the change in the language proceeds on a recognition that 'sale' in Entry 48 does not include 'purchase' and that therefore a tax on purchasers was beyond the legislative competence of the Provincial Legislature.

(6) The words 'sale of goods' import in their ordinary sense a transaction which results in change of ownership from one person to another. That must, by its very nature, be a bilateral transaction, with a seller on the one hand and a purchaser on the other. It is only when there is a contract to which both are parties that there can be a sale. A power to tax sale of goods is, therefore, in reality a power to tax the transaction and the power to tax the transaction carries with it the power to tax either party thereto. In —'Madras Province v. Boddu Paidannas & Sons', 1942 FLJ 61: 1942-2 Mad L. J. 327 (F.C.) in discussing the scope of Entry 48 Gwyer, C. J. observed as follows: "The tax on the sale of goods which the Act assigns exclusively to the Provincial Legislature is a tax levied on the occasion of the sale of goods".

(7) This construction accords with the views generally held by textwriters on the subject who treat taxes imposed on purchasers as sales tax and express the view that though the tax might in the first instance be levied on the seller or purchaser, that might not be its ultimate incidence. Thus, Dalton observes: A tax on sales or on turnover is only a tax on the commodities sold or turned over (vide Principles of Public Finance, 15th Edition, page 40); and again "It makes no essential difference whether the tax is legally imposed on buyers or sellers, though this may affect the length of time which will elapse before the process of shifting the direct money burden, or part of it, from one side to the other is completed. Every tax tends for a time; to 'stick to where it falls'. Nicks on Public Finance has the following:

"The other big group of taxes which we have to consider is that consisting of the so-called gross income taxes, turnover taxes and general sales taxes ..... The British War-time purchases tax, however belongs essentially to the same class of tax..... Whatever that may be called and whatever the differences of detail, these taxes are essentially similar in effect. They are regarded by purchasers as additions to costs and are added to selling prices".

(8) In the Encyclopaedia of the Social Sciences by Messrs. Saligman and Johnson, Vol. 13 at p. 517 the nature and scope of the sales tax are thus described:

"Sales taxes may be imposed upon total receipts with deductions for returns, allowances and possible other items; upon the individual transaction; upon the privilege of conducting business, which is supposedly measured by sales; upon sales in general or upon specified types of sale. Not only different jurisdictions but also the same jurisdiction may employ varying basis of taxation. Taxes may be collected from vendors in general or from a certain class or classes of vendors. Customarily the vendor rather than the vendee is liable for taxation, although both may be held responsible for proper payment of the tax".

(9) Findlay Shirras in his work on the Science of Public Finance (Volume 2 page 612) observes that in France, Doctors, Lawyers, and other professional men are exempted from sales tax for the reason that the tax was always shifted to the consumer and therefore, it was impolitic to tax pro-professional men with businessmen. Vide also Ratner on American Taxation, page 404, where it is stated that there was agreement among economists "that the sale tax under normal conditions would be shifted to the consumers". These passages clearly show that the words 'sales tax' are generally understood as importing a tax on the occasion of sale, that it is immaterial whether it is collected in the first instance from the sellers or the purchasers, for, eventually it would be passed on to the consumers, and that in either case it would be a tax on sales. It is in this sense that the words 'tax on sales' would appear to have been used in Entry No. 48.

It is to be particularly remembered that it is a Constitution Act that has to be interpreted and "in interpreting a constituent or organic statute, that construction most beneficial to the widest amplitude of its powers must be adopted". Vide — British Coal Corporation v. The King, (1935) AC 500 at p. 513 and "that a Constitution must not be construed in any narrow and pedantic sense". Vide — James v. Commonwealth of Australia No. 2, (1936) A. C. 578 at p. 614. It would be in accordance with these principles to hold that Entry No. 48 in the Provincial List is of sufficient amplitude to authorise the levy of a tax on purchasers and that the Madras Act IX of 1939 is 'intra vires' of the powers of the Madras Legislature.

(10) (2) It is next contended that even if the Legislature had under Entry 48 the power to tax either the seller or the purchaser, the decision to tax either the one or the other is a legislative act and that must be taken only by the Legislature and cannot be delegated to the Administration. It will be remembered that with reference to hides and skins, Section 5 (vi) did not itself impose a tax on the purchaser, but it left it to the Rules to determine on which point in the series of sales by successive dealers the tax should be levied. It is under Rules 4 and 16 that the liability to pay the tax is thrown on the purchaser. Rule 4 is as follows:

Rule 4. (1) Save as provided in sub rule (2) the gross turnover of a dealer for the purposes of these rules shall be the amount for which goods are sold by him.

(2) In the case of the undermentioned goods the gross turnover of dealer for the purposes of these rules shall be the amount for which the goods are bought by him.

(a) groundnut,

(b) cashew,

(c) untanned hides and skins bought by a licensed tanner in the Province, and

(d) untanned hides and skins exported outside the Province by a licensed dealer in hides or skins.

Rule 16 runs thus:

"Rule 16 (1) In the case of hides and skins the tax payable under section 3 (1) shall be levied in accordance with the provisions of this rule.

(2) No tax shall be levied on the sale of untanned hides or skins by a licensed dealer in hides or skins except at the stage at which such hides or skins are sold to a tanner in the Province or are sold for export outside the Province.

(i) In the case of all untanned hides or skins sold to a tanner in the Province, the tax shall be levied from the tanner on the amount for which the hides or skins are bought by him.

(ii) In the case of all untanned hides or skins which are not sold to a tanner in the Province but are exported outside the Province, the tax shall be levied from the dealer who was the last dealer not exempt from taxation under Sec. 3 (3) who buys them in the Province, on the amount for which they were bought by him.

(3) Sales by licensed dealers of hides or skins which have been tanned within the Province shall be exempt from taxation provided that the hides or skins have been tanned in a tannery which has paid the tax leviable under the Act. If such hides or skins have been tanned in a tannery which is exempt from taxation under Sec. 3 (3), the sale of such hides or skins shall be liable to taxation as under the next sub rule below dealing with hides or skins tanned outside the province.

(4) Sales by licensed dealers in hides or skins which have been tanned outside the Province shall be exempt from taxation except at the stage of sale by the dealer who is the first dealer not exempt from taxation under Sec. 3 (3) who sells them within the province. The tax shall be levied from such dealer on the amount for which he sells such hides or skins.

(5) Sale of hides or skins by dealers other than licensed dealers in hides or skins shall, subject to the provisions of section 3, be liable to taxation on each occasion of sale".

(11) It is argued on behalf of the petitioners that under Art. 265 "No tax shall be levied or collected except by authority of law", that it was the Legislature alone that was competent to impose a tax and the delegation of this function to the Administration was unconstitutional. Reliance was placed upon the decision of the Court of Appeal in — Attorney General v. Wilts United Dairies, Limited, (1921) 37 T. L. R. 884. In that case the facts were that a Food Controller, acting under the Defence of Realm Acts and Regulations imposed a tax of two pence per gallon of milk as a condition for the issue of a licence to purchase milk in a certain area. The Regulation conferred a power on the Controller to issue orders for regulating the production, manufacture, distribution, supply, sale, etc., of milk and milk products. But no power was granted for imposing any charges. In holding that the impost was illegal, the Court of appeal observed that no tax could be levied, unless it is authorised by the Parliament and there being no such authority in the Defence of Realm Acts and Regulations, the levy was illegal. The following observations of Atkin, L. J. may be quoted:

"In these circumstances, if an officer of the Executive seeks to justify a charge upon the subject made for the use of the Crown (which includes all the purposes of the public revenue) he must show, in clear terms, that Parliament has authorised the particular charge. The intention of the Legislature is to be inferred from the language used and the grant of powers may, though not expressed, have to be implied as necessarily arising from the words of a statute ..... I am clearly of opinion that no such powers, & indeed no powers at all, of imposing any such charge are given to the Minister of Food by the statutory provisions on which he relies".

(12) This decision was affirmed on appeal by the House of Lords (vide — Attorney General v. Wilts United Dairies Ltd, (1922) 38 T. L. R. 781. It will be seen that the question discussed here was not the validity of delegated legislation but the existence of any legislation, direct or delegated, authorising the imposition of a tax. Neither the decision nor the observations quoted above are, therefore, of much assistance in the present case, there being clear and express imposition of tax under the Madras Act IX of 1939. On the other hand, there is an observation in the judgment of Bankes, L. J. bearing more directly on the point now under consideration. He stated:

"It is conceivable that Parliament which may pass legislation requiring the subject to pay money to the Crown may also delegate its powers of imposing such payments to the executive".

A direct decision on the point is the one reported in — Powell v. Apollo Candle Co. Ltd., (1885) 10 A. C. 282. Under Section 133 of the Customs Regulation Act of 1879, the Legislature of New South Wales had conferred a power on the Governor to impose a tax on certain articles of import. On a question as to whether the delegation of the powers of taxation to the Governor by the Legislature was legal, the Privy Council observed as follows:

"It is argued that the tax in question has been imposed by the Governor and not by the Legislature who alone had power to impose it. But the duties levied under the Order-in-Council are really levied by the authority of the Act under which the Order is issued. The Legislature has not parted with its perfect control over the Governor, and has the power, of course, at any moment, of withdrawing or altering the power which they have entrusted to him. In these circumstances, their Lordships are of opinion that the judgment of the Supreme Court was wrong in declaring Section 133 of the Customs Regulation Act of 1879 to be beyond the power of the Legislature".

We may now turn to the American authorities cited by the petitioners. In — Panama Refining Co. v. Ryan, (1935) 79 Law. Ed. 446 at P. 459 a Congressional Legislation conferred on the President power to prohibit the transportation of 'hot oil' in inter-state and foreign commerce. The Act contained no definition of the circumstances or conditions under which this power could be exercised. In striking down the Legislation as unconstitutional delegation, Hughes, C. J., observed as follows:

"The Congress manifestly is not permitted to abdicate, or to transfer to others, the essential legislative functioning with which it is thus vested. Undoubtedly legislation must often be adapted to complex conditions involving a host of details with which the national Legislature cannot deal directly. The Constitution has never been regarded as denying to the Congress the necessary resources of flexibility and practicality, which will enable it to perform its function in laying down policies and establishing standards, while leaving to selected instrumentalities the making of subordinate rules within prescribed limits and the determination of facts to which the policy as declared by the Legislature is to apply. Without capacity to give authorizations of that sort we should have the anomaly of a legislative power which in many circumstances calling for its exertion would be but a futility. But the constituent recognition of the necessity and validity of such provisions, and the wide range of administrative authority which has been developed by means of that, cannot be allowed to obscure the limitations of the authority to delegate if our constitutional system is to be maintained".

(13) In — Schechter v. United States, (1935) 79 Law. Ed. 1570: 295 U. S. 495 a Congress Legislation provided that certain trade groups should have the power to frame "a code of fair competition" and that on approval by the President, it should have the force of law. This was held to be an unconstitutional delegation because the Act contained no definition of 'fair competition' and in the words of Justice Cardozo:

"the delegated power of legislation which has found expression in this Code is not canalized within banks that keeps it from overflowing. It is unconfined and vagrant".

(14) It is unnecessary to examine other American authorities bearing on the subject. The law is well-settled and may be summed up in two propositions: (1) the enunciation of policy is a matter exclusively within the competence of the Legislature and incapable of delegation to other bodies. (2) It is not unconstitutional to entrust to special bodies the carrying out of the policies declared by the Act and for that purpose to clothe them with authority to frame regulations within the framework of the Act. Simple as are these propositions as statements of law, in their practical application they present complicated problems. It was observed by Marshal, C. J. in — Wayman v. Southard, (1825) 23 U. S. 43: 6 Law. Ed. 253 at p. 263. that "the line has not been exactly drawn which separates those important subjects which must be entirely regulated by the Legislature itself from those of less interest in which a general provision may be made and power given to those who are to act under such general provisions to fill up the details".

(15) And the course of decisions has been to limit the region of the legislative policies within the narrowest bounds and enlarge the area which can be left to be administered by other bodies. Willis in his work on Constitutional Law at pp. 136-137 remarks:

"It is a dogma (in harmony with our definition) that legislative power cannot be delegated either to other branches of the Government or to independent boards or commissions or even back to the people; but the rule of the dogma has so many exceptions that it is difficult to decide whether the dogma or the exceptions state the true rule".

(16) One of those exceptions is legislation entrusting to outside bodies the power to fix rates. Authority in America is uniform that such legislation is not invalid as constituting delegation of legislative power. In — Oregon R. and Nav. Co. v. Campbell, 230 U. S. 525: 57 Law Ed. 1604, the question was whether a provision under the statute conferring upon a commission the power to fix the rates was valid. In upholding the enactment, the Court observed:

"The Legislature has delegated to the commission the duty of fixing rates, which it does in aid of legislative action, or as an auxiliary to the exercise of the legislative functions. This the authorities all sanction as falling within the legislative power. There can exist no valid objection to conferring such authority upon an administrative board."

(17) Vide also — Georgia R. & Bkg. Co. v. Smith, (1888) 128 U. S. 174: 32 Law Ed. 377 and — United States v. Illinois Central Railroad Co., (1934) 291 U. S. 457: 78 Law Ed. 909. In — J. W. Hampton, JR. & Co. v. United States, (1928) 276 U. S. 394: 72 Law Ed. 624 a Congress Legislation had authorised the President to impose on articles of import such duty as he might determine with the aid of advisers. This provision was impugned as unconstitutional delegation. This contention was repelled and it was held that it was within the competence of the Legislature to assign the work of fixing rates to administrative bodies. Thus, even according to the principles established in American decisions, the power entrusted to the rule-making authorities under the Madras Act cannot be held to be unconstitutional delegation.

(18) The question how far the Indian Legislature was competent to delegate its powers to other bodies was considered by the Privy Council in — 'Queen v. Burah', 4 Cal 172 (P.C.) and in — 'Emperor v. Benoari Lal Sarma', 1945 F. L. J. 1. and the decision was that such delegation was valid. In — 'Jatindra Nath Gupta v. The Province of Bihar', 1949 F. L. J. 225 a majority of judges held that the Proviso to section 1(3) of the Bihar Maintenance of Public Order Act was ultra vires the powers of the Bihar Legislature as amounting to unconstitutional delegation of power. The question was again considered in 'Ref. Under Article 143 of the Constitution of India', In re, 1951 S. C. J. 527, and the decision of the majority was that the laws in question were not bad on the grounds that there was delegation of legislative powers. Fazl Ali, J. summed up the conclusions as follows:

- "(1) The Legislature must normally discharge its primary legislative function itself and not through others.
- (2) Once it is established that it has sovereign powers within a certain sphere, it must follow as a corollary that it is free to legislate within that sphere in any way which appears to it to be the best way to give effect to its intention and policy in making a particular law, and that it may utilize any outside agency to any extent it finds necessary for doing things which it is unable to do itself or finds it inconvenient to do. In other words, it can do everything which is ancillary to and necessary for the full and effective exercise of its power of legislation.
- (3) It cannot abdicate its legislative functions, and therefore while entrusting power to an outside agency, it must see that such agency acts as a subordinate authority and does not become a parallel Legislature.
- (4) Therefore, there are only two main checks in this country on the power of the Legislature to delegate, these being its good sense and the principle that it should not cross the line beyond which delegation amounts to "abdication and self-effacement".

Patanjali Sastri J., as he then was expressed the view that the Legislature had the power to delegate even legislative functions, unless such a delegation was prohibited by the Constitution and that "the Courts in this country cannot strike down an Act of Parliament as unconstitutional merely because Parliament decides in a particular instance to entrust its legislative power to another in whom it has confidence, or, in other words, to exercise such power through its appointed instrumentality, however repugnant such entrustment may to the democratic process. What may be regarded as politically undesirable is constitutionally competent".

Mukherjea J. observed:

"Provided the legislative policy is enunciated with sufficient clearness or a standard laid down the Courts cannot and should not interfere with the discretion that undoubtedly rests with the Legislature itself in determining the extent of delegation necessary in a particular case".

Das J. stated the position as follows:

"If what the Legislature does is legislation within the general scope of the affirmative words which give the power, and if it violates no express condition or restriction by which that power is limited, then it is not for the Court to enquire further or to enlarge constructively those conditions or restrictions; that while the Legislature is acting within its prescribed sphere there is, except as hereinafter stated, no degree of or limit to its power of delegation of its legislative power, it being for the Legislature to determine how far it should seek the aid of subordinate agencies and how long it shall continue them and it is not for the Court to prescribe any limit to the Legislature's power of delegation, and that the power of delegation is, however, subject only to the qualification that the Legislature may not abdicate or efface itself, that is to say, may not, without preserving its own capacity intact, create and endow with its own capacity a new legislative power not created or authorised by the Act to which it owes its own existence".

(19) Bose J. held that the principles laid down in — 'Queen v. Burah', 4 Cal 172 (P.C.) as to the limits of valid delegation of legislative power were applicable to delegation of powers under the Constitution.

(20) Applying these principles it is impossible to hold that there is any abdication by the Madras Legislature of its functions in favour of the rule-making authority. In fact under section 3 (4) the Rules were required to be placed before the Legislative Assembly and they were to come into force only after they were approved by a resolution of the Assembly. In accordance with this provision the Rules were first published on 18-7-1939 for eliciting public opinion. On 3-8-1939 they were laid before the Assembly and the proceedings of the House show that there was considerable debate over the provisions. After they were approved the Rule were again published on 12-9-1939 and actually came into force on 1-10-1939.

Mr. K. V. Venkatasubramanaia Ayyar argued that the resolutions of Legislative Assemblies have not the force of laws and that therefore, the Rules must be judged on their own merits. That undoubtedly is so. Vide Dicey on Law of the Constitutions, 9th Edition, page 55 and the authorities cited there. But the question now is not whether the Rules have independent force as a piece of legislation, but whether the Legislature has, in leaving the matter to be determined by the rule-making authority, abdicated its functions. The fact that the Rules are to come up for consideration before the House and that they are to come into force only after they are approved by a Resolution of the House are sufficient to repel the contention that there has been abdication by the Legislature. The following observations occurring in the judgment of Fazl Ali, J. in 'Ref. under Article 143 of the Constitution of India', 1951 S. C. J. 527 (at P. 581) may be quoted

"It may also be stated that in England 'delegated legislation' often requires the regulations or provisions made by the delegate authority to be laid before the Parliament either in draft form or with the condition that they are not to operate till approved by Parliament or with no further direction. The Acts before us are certainly open to the comment that this valuable safeguard has not been observed, but it seems to me that however desirable the adoption of the safeguard and other safeguards which have been suggested from time to time may be, the validity of the Acts, which has to be determined on purely legal considerations cannot be affected by their absence".

In Re George Edwin Gray 57 S. C. P (Canada) 150, there was a war-time legislation conferring on the Governor wide powers of issuing Orders-in-Council. By virtue of this power, the Governor issued certain Orders-in-Council and they were approved by a resolution of the House. In dealing with the effect of this resolution the Chief justice observed:

"There are obvious objections of a political character to the practice of executive legislation in this country because of local conditions. But these objections should have been urged when the regulations were submitted to parliament for its approval, or better still when the "War Measures Act" was being discussed. Parliament was the delegating authority, and it was for that body to put any limitations on the power conferred upon the executive. I am not aware that the authority to pass these regulations was questioned by a vote in either house."

Anglin, J. observed as follows:—

"The fact that in the present case a resolution was adopted by both Houses of Parliament approving of the orders-in-council, while it does not add anything to their legal force as enactments, makes it abundantly clear that no attempt was made in this instance to take advantage of the powers conferred by section 6 of the "War Measures Act" to pass legislation without the concurrence and approval of parliament".

(21) In the present case, what the Legislature has done is merely to authorise the rule-making authorities to carry out the policies enunciated in the statute and to fill up the details. The Rules themselves are to come into operation only after they are approved by a resolution of the House. Far from effecting self-effacement, the Legislature has retained complete control over the legislation and in fact it has exerted that control by introducing amendments of the Act from time to time. It must, therefore, be held that the Madras Act IX of 1939 and the Rules are not open to challenge on the ground of unconstitutional delegation.

(22) (3) It is next contended on behalf of the petitioners that the provisions of the Madras General Sales Tax Act and the Rules framed thereunder are discriminatory, in that they impose sales tax in some cases on the purchaser, while laying it on the sellers in other cases; that there is no rational basis for this differentiation and that it is repugnant to Article 14 of the Constitution and therefore, void. This Article is substantially based on Section (i) of the 14th Amendment to the American Constitution which runs as follows:

"No State shall ..... deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws".

Mr. K. V. Venkatasubramania Ayyar quoted a number of American Authorities and contended that on the principles enunciated therein the classification made in the Madras General Sales Tax Act and the Rules must be held to be arbitrary and unconstitutional. There is no need to examine them in any great detail in view of the decisions of the Supreme Court in — 'Charanjit Lal Chowdhury v. Union of India', 1951 S.C.J. 29, 'State of Bombay v. F. N. Balsara', 1951 SCJ 478 — 'State of West Bengal v. Anwar Ali Sarkar', (1952) S.C.J. 55 and — 'Kathi Raning Rawat v. State of Sowerashtra', 1952 S.C.R. 435. The following principles may be taken to be well-established: (1) The guarantee of equal protection of laws does not require that the same law should be made applicable to all persons or that the law should have the same operation on all persons. It prohibits only an application of different laws to persons who are in similar circumstances.

"The guaranty of the 14th Amendment of the equal protection of the laws is not a guaranty of equality of operation or application of a state legislation upon all citizens of state".

— 'Stebbins v. Riley', (1925) 268 US 137: 69 Law Ed 384 at p. 888.

"The purpose of the clause in respect of equal protection of the laws is to rest the rights of all persons upon the same rule under similar circumstances."

— 'Frost v. Corporation Commission', (1929) 278 US 515:73 Law Ed 483 at p. 488,

"It must be admitted that the guarantee against the denial of equal protection of laws does not mean that identically the same rules of law should be made applicable to all persons within the territory of India in spite of differences of circumstances and conditions ..... In other words, there should be no discrimination between one person and another, if as regards the subject-matter of the legislation their position is the same....."

Per Mukherjea, J. in — 'Charanjit Lal Chowdhury v. Union of India', 1951 S. C. J. 29 at p. 53.

"The principle of equality does not mean that every law must have universal application for all persons who are not by nature, attainment or circumstances in the same position and the varying needs of different classes of persons often requires separate treatment ..... If a law deals equally with members of a well-defined class, it is not obnoxious and it is not open to the charge of denial of equal protection on the ground that it has no application to other persons".

Per Fazl Ali J. in — 'State of Bombay v. F. N. Balsara 1951 S.C.J. 478 at p. 492.

(2) The requirements as to equal protection of laws do not forbid legislative classifications, provided such classifications rest on some difference germane to the purpose of the statute.

"It must appear not only that a classification has been made but also that it is one based upon reasonable ground, some difference which bears a just and proper relation to the attempted classification and is not a mere arbitrary selection".

— 'Gulf. C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis', (1897) 165 U. S. 150: 41 Law Ed. 666 at p. 672.

"It is unnecessary to say that the equal protection of the laws required by the 14th Amendment does not prevent the States from resorting to classification for the purpose of legislation. Numerous and familiar decisions of this Court establish that they have a wide range of discretion in that regard. But the classification must be reasonable and not arbitrary and must rest upon some ground of difference having a fair and substantial relation to the object of the legislation so that all persons similarly circumstanced shall be treated alike."

— 'Royster Guano Co. v. Virginia', (1920) 253 U.S. 412: 64 Law Ed. 989 at pp. 990-991.

"The principle of equal protection does not take away from the State the power of classifying persons for legitimate purpose. .... While reasonable classification is permissible such classification must be based upon some real and substantial distinction bearing a reasonable and just relation to the object sought to be attained and the classification cannot be made arbitrarily and without any substantial basis."

Per Fazl Ali, J. in — 'State of Bombay v. F. N. Balsara', 1951 S.C.J. 478. (3) A classification cannot be upheld on purely fanciful grounds. "We have no right to conjure up possible situations which might justify discrimination" — 'Mayflower Farms v. Ten Eyek', (1936) 297 U. S. 266: 80 Law Ed. 675. "Discriminations are not to be supported by mere fanciful conjecture". — 'Hartford S. B. I & INS CO. v. Harrison', (1937) 301 US 459: 81 Law Ed. 1223 (4). With reference to taxing statutes the Legislature has considerable latitude in making classifications. It can select such persons or things as it chooses for purposes of taxation.

"In such matters the states necessarily enjoy a wide range of discretion and it would require a clear case to justify the court in striking down a law that is uniformly applicable to all persons pursuing a given occupation on the ground that persons engaged in other occupations more or less like it ought to be similarly taxed."

—"Singer Sewing Machine Co. v. Brickell", (1914) 233 US 304: 58 Law Ed 974. "The power of the state to classify for purposes of taxation is of wide range and flexibility". —"Louisville Gas & E. Co. v. Coleman", (1928) 277 U.S. 32: 72 L. Ed. 770' (at p. 774).

"The power of taxation is fundamental to the very existence of the Government of the states. The restriction that it shall not be so exercised as to deny to any the equal protection of the laws does not compel the adoption of an iron rule of equal taxation in order to prevent variety or differences in taxation or discretion in the selection of subjects or the classification for taxation of properties, businesses, trades, callings or occupations".

—"State Board v. Jackson", (1931) 233 US 527: 75 Law Ed. 1248 at pp. 1255-56".

"The power to make distinctions exists with full vigour in the field of taxation where 'no iron rule' of equality has ever been enforced by the statutes".

—"New York Rapid Transit Corporation v. City of New York" (1938) 303 U.S. 573: 82 Law Ed. 1024".

(5) Taxing statutes must also satisfy the test of equal protection and are liable to be struck down, if they do not. —"Vide Southern Railway v. Greene" (1910) 216 U.S. 400: 54 Law Ed. 536".

"Every taxing law must pass the constitutional test applied by the Courts to the method of imposition."

—"Stewart Dry Goods Co. v. Lewis" (1935) 294 U. S. 550: 79 Law Ed. 1054". (6) There is a strong presumption in favour of the validity of legislative classification and it is for those who challenge it as arbitrary and unconstitutional to establish it beyond all doubt.

"It must be presumed that a Legislature understands and correctly appreciates the need of its own people, that its laws are directed to problems made manifest by expedience and that its discriminations are based upon adequate grounds".

—"Middleton v. Texas Power and L. Co." (1919) 248 U.S. 152: 63 Law Ed. 527".

"By reason of the presumption of validity which attends legislative and official action one who alleges unreasonable discrimination must carry the burden of showing it."

—"Concordia Fire Insurance Co. v. Illinois" (1934) 292 U. S. 535: 78 Law Ed. 1411".

"It is a salutary principle of judicial decision long emphasised and followed by this Court that the burden of establishing the unconstitutionality of a statute rests on him who assails it..... A statutory discrimination will not be set aside as denial of equal protection of the laws if any state of facts reasonably may be conceived to justify it".

—"Metropolitan Casualty Insurance Co. v. Brownell" (1935) 294 U.S. 580: 79 Law Ed. 1070. Willis in his work on Constitutional Law at page 579 states:

"If any state of facts can reasonably be conceived to sustain a classification, the existence of that state of facts must be assumed. One who assails a classification must carry the burden of showing that it does not rest upon any reasonable basis".

To the same effect are the observations of Fazl Ali J. at page 34 and of Mukerjea J. at page 54 in —"Charanjit Lal Choudhury v. Union of India", 1951 S. C. J. 29.

1953 Mad./15 & 16

(23) Such being the principles, the question is whether there is anything in the Madras General Sales Tax Act and in the Rules which offends Article 14. The contention of the petitioners is that the singling out of purchasers of untanned hides and skins for taxation, while imposing tax on the sellers in most of the other businesses cannot be justified on any ground pertinent to the purpose of the Act, and that it is naked discrimination which is repugnant to Art. 14. The burden of establishing that the impugned provisions offend Art. 14 being on the petitioners, what are the materials which they have placed for discharging that burden? None. They merely argue that on the face of the Act, it does not appear that there is any difference between trade in untanned hides and skins, and other trades in which purchasers are not taxed. That however is not sufficient. In —"Metropolitan Casualty Insurance Co. v. Brownell", (1935) 294 U. S. 580: 79 Law Ed. 1070 at p. 1073 a statute of Indiana enacted that agreements made by foreign insurance companies limiting the period within which claims could be made against them were to that extent, unenforceable. In repelling the contention that this was discrimination, the Court observed:

"There is no showing that the situation of foreign Corporations writing casualty insurance contracts in Indiana is so similar to that of domestic Corporations as to preclude any rational distinction between them as regards the time required for negotiating settlement of claims..... Where the record is silent we cannot presume to declare that there is such similarity, or to say that a state is prohibited from making any distinction in the length of time within which suit must be brought".

In —"Charanjit Lal Chowdhury v. The Union of India", 1951 S.C.J. 29, Fazl Ali J. observed:

"Now the petitioner has made no attempt to discharge the burden of proof to which I have referred and we are merely asked to presume that there must be other companies also which would be open to the charge of mismanagement and negligence".

and Mukerjea, J. stated:

"Throwing out of vague hints that there may be other instances of a similar nature is not enough for this purpose. We have not even before us any statement on oath by the petitioner that what has been alleged against this company may be said against other companies as well".

(24) The petitioners before us have not shown that the conditions in other trades are similar to those in the hides and skins business and in the absence of such showing it cannot be presumed in their favour that no such differences exist as would justify a differentiation. Conditions differ from trade to trade and therefore, 'prima facie' what applies to one trade may not necessarily apply to another. Indeed the records show that the trade in untanned hides and skins has certain special features peculiar to it. In the affidavits filed in support of these petitions, it is stated that the South Indian hides and skins command great popularity in the world markets being popularly known as "East India Kips" and that there is considerable demand for them in foreign countries. The untanned hides and skins would either be tanned in this State or exported for tanning to foreign countries.

As Sec. 5 (vi) provides for a tax being imposed on untanned hides and skins only at a single point in the successive series of sales, Rules 4 and 16 provide that this should be done at the stage of their being tanned or exported. It is intelligible that if the article which is to be taxed is liable to be converted into another kind of article by process of manufacture, the proper stage for imposing the tax should be when it is transformed into a different article. On this reasoning, the tax will fall on him who tans the hides and skins and there is, therefore, reason for making the person who purchases untanned hides and skins for the purpose of tanning liable for the tax. In like manner, when the articles are exported to foreign countries for tanning they might be taken to lose their character as untanned hides and skins in the hands of the exporter and in reason, the dealer who purchases them for export should be treated on the same footing as a tanner who purchases them for tanning and tax imposed on him on the amount which he purchased them.

It is not without significance that the two other articles in respect of which the sales tax is levied on the purchaser under Rule 4, viz. groundnut and cashew, are also articles which are much in demand in foreign markets for being manufactured into other products. It would, therefore, appear that the trades in these articles have distinctive features which mark them off from others and it is impossible to hold that the differentiation in the matter of taxation has no relation to the nature of the trade. The learned Advocate for the petitioners has been unable to suggest any reason why the Legislature should have capriciously taxed the purchasers in some cases and the sellers in others. Even though the grounds of distinction are not manifest on the face of the statute, this is a fit case for invoking the presumption which the law raises in favour of legislative classification.

(25) It was next urged that the presumption in favour of the validity of classification would arise only when it is made by the Legislature and that such a presumption would not extend to a classification made by rule-making authorities & reliance was placed for this proposition on certain observations occurring in — ‘Stebbins v. Riley’, (1925) 268 U.S. 137: 69 Law Ed. 884 at pp. 888, 889 and — ‘Metropolitan Casualty Insurance Co. v. Brownell’, (1935) 294 U.S. 580: 79 Law Ed. 1070. In — ‘Stebbins v. Riley’, (1925) 268 U.S. 137: 69 Law Ed. 884, at pp. 888, 889 it was observed, that the basis of classification was “not open to objection unless it precludes the assumption that the classification was made in the exercise of legislative judgment and discretion”;

and this passage was adopted in — ‘Swiss Oil Corporation v. Shanks’, (1927) 273 U.S. 407: 71 Law Ed. 709 at p. 714. In — ‘Metropolitan Casualty Insurance Co. v. Brownell’, (1935) 294 U.S. 580: 79 Law Ed. 1070, it was observed:

“That Courts may not declare a legislative discrimination invalid, unless viewed in the light of facts made known or generally assumed, it is of such a character as to preclude the assumption that the classification rests upon some rational basis within the knowledge and experience of the legislators”.

(26) It is argued on the basis of these observations that the presumption in favour of the validity of legislative classification could be made only when the Legislature applies its mind to it and that such presumption is precluded when the classification is proved to have been made by the rule making authority. But the point in controversy in these cases was not the validity of classification made by the Administration in contradistinction to one made by the Legislature. The question actually under consideration was how far classification made by a statute could be impugned as denying equal protection, without any differentiation between classification made in the statute itself and classification made by the Administration acting under statutory powers.

The legislative knowledge and experience referred to in these observations would include in the context not merely the knowledge and experience of the legislators but also of the members of the administrative body functioning under the legislation. It is worthy of note that in all the three decisions cited above, the validity of classification was upheld. It is well-settled in America that the power to make classification could be exercised not only by the Legislature but also by administrative bodies acting under the Act. In — ‘Bradley v. Richmond’, 227 U.S. 477: 57 Law Ed. 603 an Ordinance imposed a tax on the conduct of various businesses and a power of classifying them was granted to a committee which imposed different rates on different classes of bankers. It was held that the classification did not offend the provision of equal protection of the laws. In — ‘New York Rapid Transit Corporation v. City of New York’, (1938) 303 U.S. 573: 82 Law Ed. 1024. Reed, J. observed as follows:

“No question is or could be made by the Corporation as to the right of a state or a municipality with properly delegated powers to enact laws or Ordinance passed on reasonable classification of the objects of the legislation or the persons whom it affects”.

(27) In — ‘Concordia Fire Insurance Co. v. Illinois’, (1934) 292 U.S. 535: 78 Law Ed. 1411, the presumption of validity of classification was stated to be applicable not merely to legislative but also official action. In the present case, there is the additional circumstance already referred to that under Section 3 (4) the Rules had to be, and were in fact, approved by a resolution of the Legislative Assembly and the classification can, therefore, be properly described as made with the knowledge and experience of the legislators.

(28) And above all, there is the fact that the Madras General Sales Tax Act is a measure of taxation and in respect of taxing statutes, the Legislature enjoys wide powers of classification. It has the power to determine which class of persons or properties shall be taxed and such determination is not open to question on the ground that the tax is not levied on all persons or on all properties.

A State does not have to tax everything in order to tax something. It is allowed to pick and choose districts, objects, persons, methods and even rates for taxation, if it does so reasonably”.

(Willis on Constitutional Law, page 587.)

If it is competent to the Legislature to select some commodities and impose tax on them, such imposition is not open to attack on the ground that it is not made on all commodities. A law imposing a tax only on the sale of hides and skins and making the purchaser liable therefor, could not be challenged under Article 14 on the ground that purchasers of other commodities were not also taxed. If among the purchasers of hides and skins a differentiation was made without a rational basis therefor, different considerations would arise. Here, there is one law of taxation made applicable to all purchasers in the same trade and such a measure is not open to attack under Article 14. At any rate as observed in — ‘Madden v. Kentucky’, (1940) 309 U.S. 83: 84 Law Ed. 590 (593):

“In taxation even more than in other fields Legislatures possess the greatest freedom in classification. The burden is on the one attacking the legislative arrangement to negative every conceivable basis which might support it”.

and that burden has not been discharged by the petitioners.

(29) Considerable reliance was placed for the petitioners on the decision of the Supreme Court in — ‘State of West Bengal v. Anwar Ali Sarkar’, (1952 S. C. J. 55) in which it was decided by a ma-majority that Section 5 (1) of the West Bengal Special Courts Act X of 1950 was void as being repugnant to Article 14. Under that section, power was conferred on the Government to constitute special Courts and to direct such offences or classes of offences or cases or classes of cases as the Government might order in writing, to be tried by such Courts. The procedure prescribed for the trial of cases before the Special Courts was different from that which is prescribed by the Criminal Procedure Code. The question was whether the power conferred on the Government under Section 5 (1) was discriminatory and opposed to Article 14. It was held that it was.

A reading of the judgments shows that the controversy was not so much about the principles applicable as to the application of the principles to the facts of the case. This would be clear from the judgments of the Supreme Court in — Kathi Raning Rawat v. State of Saurashtra, 1952 S. C. R. 435. The statute that was in question in that case was the Saurashtra State Public Safety Ordinance, LXVI of 1949. Sections 9, 10 and 11 of the Ordinance proceeded very much on the lines of the W. Bengal Special Courts Act; it empowered the Government to establish Special Courts and to direct offence to be tried by that Court according to a special procedure prescribed by the Act.

But there was one fundamental difference between the West Bengal Special Courts Act and the Saurashtra State Public Safety Ordinance. Under the latter, the Government had the power to direct only classes of offences or classes of cases to be tried by the Special Court, whereas in the former the power could be exercised with reference to individual cases. The Court held by a majority that the Saurashtra State Public Safety Ordinance was valid because the power to transfer cases to the Special Court could be exercised only with reference to classes of cases and that therefore there was classification such as would take the statute out of the operation of Article 14. Applying these principles to the provisions of the Madras General Sales Tax Act and the Rules, we are unable to agree with the petitioners that they offend Article 14 of the Constitution.

(30) (4) It is finally contended that the Rules framed under the Act do not properly carry out the policy laid down therein and they are even inconsistent therewith and they are therefore void. To appreciate the true position, it is necessary to examine the scheme of taxation which has been adopted in the rules with reference to untanned hides and skins. As already mentioned, these articles are much in demand in foreign markets and their export forms one of the main items in the foreign trade of this State. It also appears that this State enjoys considerable natural advantages for carrying on the business of tanning because the 'avaram bark' which is specially suited for tanning grows in plenty in this State. The course of business appears to be that untanned hides and skins are acquired locally or by import from other states and are either tanned here or exported to foreign countries for tanning.

In broad outline, the scheme of taxation adopted by the Rules is to levy the tax at the stage when the articles are tanned in the State or exported to foreign countries for tanning. Thus under R. 4 (2) (c) when a licensed tanner purchases untanned hides and skins for tanning, the amount for which he purchases the goods is to be included in his turnover and he is taxed thereon; and under R. 4 (2) (d) when a licensed dealer purchases untanned hides and skins for export the amount for which he purchases would be included in his turnover and he would be taxed thereon. Then comes

R. 16 which has come in for considerable criticism. R. 16 (2) fixes in accordance with R. 4 the points of taxation at the stage of tanning or at the stage of export. But then, it limits the operation of this rule to sales by licensed dealers. It is this limitation that furnishes the ground for attack on the rules. To understand the objection it will be useful to analyse the possible cases which might arise on the application of R. 16 (2).

Taking first the case of hides and skins which are tanned within the State, four possible situations might arise. There might be a sale by a licensed dealer either to a licensed tanner or to an unlicensed tanner; or there might be a sale by an unlicensed dealer either to a licensed tanner or to an unlicensed tanner. When the sale is by a licensed dealer, R. 16 (2) (i) provides for a tax being levied on the tanner whether he is licensed or unlicensed. But where the sale is by an unlicensed dealer, there is a difference in the incidence of taxation. If the sale is to a licensed tanner, then under R. 4 (2) (c) the purchaser has to pay the tax. But where the sale is to an unlicensed tanner R. 4 (1) will apply and the tax will fall on the seller. R. 16 (5) provides that sale by dealers other than licensed dealers will be "liable to taxation on each occasion of sale". Under this Sub-clause when there are successive sales by unlicensed dealers the tax will be leviable on such occasion of sale and that will be inconsistent with S. 5 (vi) which provides for taxation at a single point.

(31) Likewise when untanned hides and skins are exported, the last purchaser will be liable under R. 16 (2) (ii) whether he is a licensed dealer or unlicensed dealer, if he purchases from a licensed dealer. But if he purchases from an unlicensed dealer, but is himself a licensed dealer, he will be liable to pay the tax under R. 4 (2) (d). If there is a sale by an unlicensed dealer to an unlicensed dealer who exports the goods on whom does the tax fall? Under R. 4 (1) it is to be borne by the seller. Such a case will fall within the mischief of R. 16 (5), if there are successive sales.

(32) Now the contention of the petitioners is that where there are sales by unlicensed dealers to unlicensed tanners or unlicensed dealers, there is the possibility of multiple taxation and that would be in violation of S. 5 (vi). It is not disputed on behalf of the Government that R. 16 (5) is repugnant to S. 5 (vi). It must therefore be held to be 'ultra vires'. But this can bring no relief to the petitioners, as they are all licensed tanners and are in no manner hurt by the operation of R. 16 (5). This was conceded by the learned Advocate for the petitioners.

(33) Another contention against the validity of the rules was founded on the language of the forms which are prescribed under the Rules for making returns as provided in R. 15. Form A-4 is prescribed for tanners and it is intended to apply to the imposition of tax at the stage of tanning. Form A-5 is prescribed for dealers and is intended to apply for imposition of tax at the stage of export. In Form A-4, the third column is headed "amount for which hides and skins were purchased for tanning by the assessee". The criticism of the petitioners is based on the words "purchased for tanning". Their contention is that after purchasing hides and skins for tanning, the tanner might change his mind and sell them to a dealer and after successive sales those goods might be exported in which case the last purchaser will also be liable to pay the sales tax. The goods are thus taxed in the first instance when they are exported without having been tanned.

This, it is argued, is multiple taxation & opposed to S. 5 (vi). But when the matter is closely examined it will be found that there is no substance in this objection. When a tanner purchases the goods, he himself makes a return stating the amount for which he purchased hides and skins for tanning. If the goods are actually tanned, then no further liability for tax will arise. But if the tanner instead of tanning the goods sells them to the dealer, he is entitled under R. 15 (5) to deduct the purchase price paid for those goods in the return for the next month or to get a refund of the excess. Thus though there was initially a purchase by a tanner, when once he sells his untanned goods, he occupies the position of a dealer and he will not be liable under R. 16 (2)(i) and the matter will be governed by R. 16(2) (ii). Thus there is no infringement of S. 5 (vi) which provides for taxation on a single point.

(34) It is also contended that it is wrong on principle that a tax should be levied before it is finally determined; that under S. 3 (2) of the Act the assessment should be only on the annual turnover and that therefore, R. 15 (2) which provides for advance payments of tax every month before the liability to pay arises, which is only when the goods are actually tanned or exported is unconstitutional and that the position is not altered by R. 15 (5) which provides for deduction of the amounts which turn out in the events not to have been payable in the returns for subsequent months. But advance payment of tax is a well-recognised feature in the mode of realising tax and the provision in R. 15 (2) is in accordance with the practice generally obtaining in this branch of the law. In discussing the validity of a somewhat similar provision in a taxing statute of Southern Iowa, the Court observed:

"It is of course true that as the Report is required on the twentieth of the calendar month for transact one of the preceding months, there may at times be gasoline received in the month covered by the report which has not been exported by the twentieth of the succeeding month; but the distributor is entitled to a credit for such exportation in his report made in the next month, and the mere fact that he cannot claim an anticipatory credit for gasoline not yet exported, but intended so to be, seems to us to be too slight a burden to be of any moment, or to raise a substantial constitutional question".

—Monomotor Oil Co. v. Johnson, (1934) 292 U. S. 86; 78 Law Ed. 1141 (1148). The attack on R. 15 (2) must accordingly fail. It may be added that this contention is of academic interest so far as the petitioners are concerned, as it is admitted by them that they tanned all the goods purchased by them for tanning.

(35) Lastly, it was argued that the rules make a distinction between licensed dealers and unlicensed dealers and that is an arbitrary distinction repugnant to Art. 14. A classification of merchants into those who take out licences and those who do not is one resting on a rational basis and must be upheld. Moreover, if it is a discrimination, it is one in favour of those who take out licences and against those who do not and it is difficult to see how the petitioners who are licence holders can make a complaint of it.

(36) In the result it must be held that the provisions of the Madras General Sales Tax Act and the Rules except R. 16 (5) are intra vires and valid and not obnoxious to Art. 14. These petitions must accordingly be dismissed with costs.

(37) Before concluding, we think it desirable to observe that some of the difficulties and anomalies which have been shown to exist in the working of the Act could be avoided by making it compulsory that all tanners and dealers should take out licences and this is a matter which should engage the attention of the Government.

(38) RAJAMANNAR C. J.: I agree and have nothing to add.

A/V.R.B.

Petitions dismissed.

**A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 116 (Vol. 40, C. N. 36)

RAJAMANNAR C. J. AND VENKATARAMA AYYAR J.

C. Govindarajulu Naidu & Co., Petitioners v. State of Madras, represented by the Revenue Secretary and another, Respondents.

Writ Petn. No. 227 of 1952, D/- 9-9-1952.

** (a) Constitution of India, Art. 286(1)(b) and (2) — "In the course of export" — Meaning of — Sales or purchases having no direct connection with goods exported — Power of States to impose tax thereon.

The decisions on the export and import clause in the American Constitution do not support the contention that an export must be construed as including purchases prior to the transaction under which the goods are exported. Similarly, the authorities on the commerce clause so far from supporting the contention that export should be deemed to include the chain of transactions preceding it clearly establish that immunity from taxation under the commerce clause should be narrowly construed so as to limit it to the period between the actual commencement and termination of inter-state commerce. American case law considered. (Paras 15 & 19)

The words "in the course of export" in Art. 286 cannot bear the same meaning as "for the purpose of export." In their natural meaning the words "in the course of export" would have a more restricted operation than the words "for the purpose of export." Quite obviously the words "in the course of" have been suggested by the decisions of the American Courts on the commerce clause. The object of Art. 286(2) is clearly to prevent States from interfering with the free flow of commerce in the country by erecting barriers of taxation. That was precisely the object of the commerce clause in America. Whether the goods are in the course of transit is the paramount question to be decided under the commerce clause. It is this conception that appears to have been adopted in the words "sale of goods where it takes place in the course of inter-state trade." These words limit the prohibition on the power of the State to impose tax on sales only where they are the subject-matter of inter-state commerce. The power of the State to tax sales before the inter-state commerce commences and after it ends is left untouched. In this view, the power of the States to impose tax under Art. 286(2) would be of the same character and extent as the power of the States in America in relation to the commerce clause. (Para 20)

It would be in accordance with sound rules of construction to put the same meaning on the words "in the course of" occurring both in Article 286(1)(b) and in Art. 286(2). Thus understood the prohibition under Article 286(1)(b) will begin to operate only from the time when the goods exported begin their international journey and it will cease when that journey ceases. In other words, the prohibition is limited to the period covered by the actual exportation or importation of the goods. The power of the State to impose tax at any stage before or after is not affected.

(Para 21)

In American law, the commerce clause and the export and import clause operate differently on the power of the State to impose tax. While under the commerce clause the States have plenary powers of taxation subject only to the powers of the Congress to regular inter-state commerce, in the case of the export and import clause, it is a total want of jurisdiction. It would appear that the intention of the framers of the Constitution of India was to discard this distinction and enact one law for both foreign and inter-state trade and that they chose to adopt the law relating to inter-state commerce in America as furnishing a basis for reconciling the competing demands of both the union to control and regulate commerce, inter-state and foreign, in the best interest of the country, and of the States, to raise revenue on transactions, which are rendered possible by the protection afforded by the States.

(Para 22)

It must accordingly be held that both in Arts. 286(1)(b) and 286(2) the power of the State to impose a tax on export or import or inter-state trade or commerce is taken away only in respect of sales or purchases made directly in relation to the goods which are the subject-matter of transportation either in inter-state or international commerce, whether such sales take place prior to the commencement of the transport or during its progress. The prohibition does not extend to sales or purchases which have no direct connection with the goods which are exported.

(Para 24)

(b) Constitution of India, Art. 286(1)(b) — Purchase of goods in Pakistan — Transport of goods in Madras — Liability of purchaser to be taxed under Madras General Sales Tax Act — (Sales Tax — Madras General Sales Tax Act (9 of 1939) S. 3).

Unless the goods are in transit under a contract between two persons in two different countries, entered into either at the commencement of the transport or during its progress, there can be no question of a sale or purchase in the course of import.

(Para 26)

The representatives of the petitioners used to go to Dacca, make the purchases there, pay the price, and consign the goods from there to Madras. The contracts of purchases were completed in Dacca, before the goods were put in transit; and what the petitioners did was merely to transport their own goods from Dacca to Madras. The petitioners having been assessed to sales tax under the Madras General Sales Tax Act,

Held that the transport by the petitioners of their own goods after purchase in Pakistan could not be brought under Art. 286(1)(b) as a purchase in the course of import, but that as the purchases were completed in Dacca, that would be outside the operation of the Madras General Sales Tax Act as that authorises a levy of tax only on sales or purchases within the Province of Madras; and as the tax was imposed on the petitioners as purchasers, it must be held to be unauthorised.

(Para 26)

** (c) Constitution of India, Arts. 245(1), 246, 286(1) and Explanation and Sch. 7, List II Entries 92, and 54 — Power of State to tax, intra-state and inter-state sales — Contract of sale concluded in another State — Goods delivered in Madras — Liability for taxation under Madras General Sales Tax Act — (Sales Tax — Madras General Sales Tax Act (9 of 1939) Ss. 3 and 22).

The power of a State to impose taxes is not conditioned on the subject-matter being wholly within its jurisdiction. The exercise of the power will be valid, if there is sufficient territorial connection with reference to the subject-matter. AIR 1948 PC 118 Foll.

(Para 27)

The effect of the Explanation to Art. 286(1) is to remove the limitation imposed by Art. 245 and Art. 286(1) on the power of a State to enact extra-territorial legislation and permit the State to levy sales tax on an extra-state sale, provided goods thereunder are delivered within the State. The Explanation should accordingly be construed as not taking away the positive powers of taxation conferred under Art. 246 and Entry No. 54 but as enlarging those powers in cases falling within the Explanation.

(Para 9)

Under the Constitution the States enjoy both a power under Entry 54 to tax sale and purchase of goods and a power under Entry 52 to tax goods on their entry into a local area, subject only to the limitation contained in Art. 286. There is no conflict between the power of States to tax sales under Entry 54 and the power to impose taxes on the use of goods to which the Explanation relates.

(Para 29)

The words "actual delivery" in the Explanation to Art. 286(1) can mean only physical delivery and not constructive delivery such as by transfer of documents of title to the goods. The whole object of the Explanation is to give a power of taxation in respect of goods actually entering the State for the purpose of use therein and it will defeat such a purpose if notional delivery of goods as by transfer of document of title to the goods within the State is held to give the State a power to tax, when the goods are actually delivered in another State.

(Para 30)

The result may be thus summed up: (1) The State has plenary powers of taxation over intra-State sales. (2) The State has no power to impose a tax on extra-state sales. (3) In respect of inter-state sales, the State in which the contract is concluded is the only State which has the power to impose a tax. (4) Where goods are delivered for consumption in a particular State, that State has the power to impose a use tax or a purchase tax thereon notwithstanding that the transaction of sale is extra-state.

(Para 31)

Thus where purchases are made in another State by a person living in Madras and the documents of title are received by post in Madras, or the price is paid to the banks in Madras against delivery of documents of title and the contracts in respect of the sales are concluded in the former State, they will be extra-State sales not liable for taxation under the Madras General Sales Tax Act. If however, the goods are actually delivered in Madras, that will confer on the State of Madras a power to tax the goods under the Explanation to Art. 286(1)(a) which has become incorporated in the Madras General Sales Tax Act by the Adaptation of Laws (Fourth Amendment) Order, 1952.

(Para 32)

(d) Constitution of India, Art. 286(1), Explanation — "Consumption" — Meaning of.

The word "consumption" in the Explanation cannot be understood in the limited sense of eating but in the wider sense of using.

(Para 33)

K. Rajah Iyer and C. Venugopalachari, for Petitioners; V. K. Thiruvengkatachari, Advocate-General and V. V. Raghavan, for Govt. Pleader with him, for the State of Madras.

REFERENCES: Courtwar/Chronological/ Paras

('48) 1948 FLJ 32: (AIR 1948 PC 118)	27
('42) 1942-5 FLJ 61: 1942-2 Mad LJ 327: (AIR 1942 FC 33)	15
('52) Cri Appeal No. 129 of 1952: (AIR 1953 Mad 91)	27, 28, 29
('52) Writ Petn. Nos. 21 & 41 of 1952: (AIR 1953 Mad 105)	3, 4
(1847) 12 Law Ed 287: (5 Howard 573)	15
(1827) 12 US 419: 6 Law Ed 678	12, 14, 15
(1869) 75 US 148: 19 Law Ed 387	16
(1869) 75 US 123: 19 Law Ed 382	16
(1885) 114 US 622: 29 Law Ed 257	16
(1886) 116 US 517: 29 Law Ed 715	16
(1886) 117 US 504: 29 Law Ed 988	13
(1887) 120 US 489: 30 Law Ed 694	17
(1901) 181 US 283: 45 Law Ed 862	12
(1903) 187 US 622: 47 Law Ed 336	28
(1903) 191 US 441: 48 Law Ed 254	28
(1904) 192 US 500: 48 Law Ed 538	16
(1905) 196 US 133: 49 Law Ed 417	28
(1906) 203 US 507: 51 Law Ed 295	28
(1907) 204 US 152: 51 Law Ed 415	34
(1908) 209 US 211: 52 Law Ed 754	18
227 US 504: 57 Law Ed 615	18
228 US 665: 57 Law Ed 1015	18
(1915) 237 US 1: 59 Law Ed 813	12
(1915) 237 US 19: 59 Law Ed 821	12
(1921) 257 US 282: 66 Law Ed 239	17
(1922) 258 US 50: 66 Law Ed 458	17
(1923) 262 US 66: 67 Law Ed 865	13, 14
(1925) 268 US 189: 69 Law Ed 909	17
(1925) 268 US 325: 69 Law Ed 982	17
(1933) 288 US 218: 77 Law Ed 710	12, 15
(1933) 290 US 1: 78 Law Ed 131	18
(1939) 306 US 1: 83 Law Ed 441	17
(1940) 309 US 33: 84 Law Ed 565	16, 22, 28
(1944) 322 US 327: 88 Law Ed 1304	28, 29
(1944) 322 US 335: 88 Law Ed 1309	28
(1944) 324 US 652: 89 Law Ed 1252	15
(1946) 329 US 69: 91 Law Ed 80	22, 23
(1949) 337 US 154: 93 Law Ed 1276	13, 14
(1951) 340 US 602: 95 Law Ed 573	17

VENKATARAMA AYYAR J.: This petition raises substantial questions as to the interpretation of Article 286 of the Constitution. The petitioners are merchants carrying on business in the City of Madras as tanners and exporters of tanned hides and skins. This petition arises out of proceedings taken by the State of Madras under the Madras General Sales Tax Act for assessing the tax payable by the petitioners in respect of their dealings for the year 1950-51. The facts as stated before us by agreement of both the parties are that during this period the petitioners purchased 12,123 pieces of hides and skins from Messrs. Abdul Gani & Company, Dacca for a price of Rs. 1,04,595-4-6; 74,000 pieces from merchants in Calcutta and Cawnpore for a price of Rs. 7,18,042-2-9; and 3,694 pieces locally for a price of Rs. 43,575-0-10, in all 89,817 pieces for a price of Rs. 8,66,212-8-1.

During the same period the petitioners themselves directly exported to foreign countries 7,250 pieces on C.I.F. contracts for a price of Rs. 1,67,515-15-1; sold to dealers in Madras 60,627½ pieces for a price of Rs. 8,55,396-1-0; and sold locally 22,807 pieces for a price of Rs. 2,76,099-4-11, in all 90,684 pieces for a price of Rs. 12,99,011-5-0. It must be stated that with reference to the sale of 60,627½ pieces to local dealers, the petitioners claimed that the goods covered by these sales had in fact been exported to foreign countries, while the respondent stated that it could not be definitely ascertained whether those pieces were ultimately exported or not.

(2) On these facts the point in dispute before the taxing authorities was whether the petitioners were liable to pay sales tax on Rs. 8,66,212-8-1 under Rule 16 (2) (i) and (ii) of the Madras Turnover and Assessment Rules as purchasers of rawhides and skins which were either tanned or exported by them. The petitioners claimed that the goods which they had purchased were all exported to foreign countries either directly or through other dealers and that they must in consequence be regarded as export exempt from taxation under Art. 286 (1) (b). The Deputy Commercial Tax Officer, Moore Market Division rejected this contention by his order dated 14th August, 1951, and stated that "the dealers are not found eligible for any relief under Article 286 of the Indian Constitution as they pay tax on the purchase value of untanned hides and skins bought for tanning, and that all the tanned goods tanned by them and got from others were sold to other dealers in the State, which stages are not one in the course of export outside the Indian Territory."

On this basis, the tax payable was assessed at Rs. 14,936-2-8 and after deducting advance payments amounting to Rs. 6,702-7-9, a demand was made for the balance of Rs. 8,233-10-11. The petitioners preferred an appeal against this order to the Commercial Tax Officer, Madras North, and in the memorandum of appeal they stated their ground of exemption as follows:

"We have to appeal to you that we have sold goods to the exporters at Madras who have ultimately exported the goods outside India which fact could be verified from their records. For many of the items we have clear proof of the goods being exported by documents and bills which clearly proves that our goods were exported."

In a further statement filed by them on 29th September, 1951, they again stated that "out of the total, we have sold to exporting houses for the purpose of export outside India Rs. 10,22,912-0-1." On 23rd February, 1952, the Commercial Tax Officer, North Madras, dismissed the appeal on the ground that "the appellants sold to exporters or themselves exported through commission agents hides and skins tanned by them." That is to say, it was held that the petitioners did not directly export the goods themselves, but only sold them to dealers who exported them; or that they tanned the rawhides and skins and exported them as tanned goods and therefore, they were liable as purchasers of raw hides and skins and not as exporters of tanned goods.

It should be stated that under the Madras Act VI of 1951 which came into force on 20th April, 1951, the petitioners had a right to prefer an appeal against the order of the Commercial Tax Officer dated 23rd February, 1952, to the Sales Tax Tribunal and in fact on 17th March, 1952, they wrote to the Deputy Commercial Tax Officer to stay the collection on the ground that they were appealing to the Tribunal. But no such appeal was preferred and instead, the present writ has been filed challenging the validity and correctness of the order of assessment. In this petition the following questions were raised for our determination:

- (1) Is the Madras General Sales Tax Act 'ultra vires' of the powers of the Madras Legislature on the ground that Entry No. 48 in the Provincial List in the 7th schedule to the Government of India Act of 1935 authorised tax only on sales and not on purchases?
- (2) Is the imposition of tax on the purchaser by the Turnover and Assessment Rules void on the ground that the Legislature had unconstitutionally delegated its functions to the executive?
- (3) Is the Madras General Sales Tax Act void as repugnant to Article 14 of the Constitution on the ground that it discriminated against purchasers in some trades while taxing sellers generally?
- (4) Are the Turnover and Assessment Rules framed under the Madras General Sales Tax Act void on the ground that they are repugnant to the parent Act?
- (5) Whether the imposition of tax is in contravention of Article 286 of the Constitution and, therefore, illegal?

(3) We have held in Writ Petn. Nos. 21 and 41 of 1952 that this Court would not entertain in proceedings by way of writ such objections to the assessment of the sales tax as could have been urged before the Tribunals constituted under the Act and that only objections relating to the validity of the Act would be open to the petitioners. In this view, the petitioners would be entitled to urge objections (1) to (4) aforesaid. As for objection No. (5), we should decline to entertain it in accordance with our judgment in Writ Petition Nos. 21 and 41 of 1952. But, Mr. K. Rajah Ayyar pressed upon us that it would be inconvenient that some questions should be decided in writ and others before the Sales Tax Tribunal and that it would be more satisfactory that the entire question should be disposed of by us. The learned Advocate-General also invited us to decide the issues raised with reference to Article 286 as they go to the root of the matter and a decision thereon would settle all the controversies. We accordingly proceed to deal with the various contentions.

(4) This petition was heard along with Writ Petn. Nos. 21 and 41 of 1952 in which questions (1) to (4) herein were the sole points for determination and after hearing counsel in all these petitions on those questions, we held therein that the Madras Act IX of 1939 was 'intra vires' of the powers of the Provincial Legislature, that it was not open to the objection that it was an unconstitutional delegation by the Legislature of its functions to the executive, that it was not repugnant to Article 14 of the Constitution as being discriminative and that the Rules framed thereunder were valid excepting only Rule 16 (5). That Judgment will govern this petition also and the questions (1) to (4) herein must accordingly be answered against the petitioners.

(5) The substantial question that remains for determination is whether the imposition of tax in this case is in contravention of Article 286 of the Constitution.

(6) Article 286 of the Constitution so far as is material is as follows:

"286 (1). No law of a State shall impose, or authorise the imposition of, a tax on the sale or purchase of goods where such sale or purchase takes place (a) outside the State; or (b) in the course of the import of the goods into, or export of the goods out of, the territory of India.

EXPLANATION: For the purpose of sub-clause (a), a sale or purchase shall be deemed to have taken place in the State in which the goods have actually been delivered as a direct result of such sale or purchase for the purpose of consumption in that State, notwithstanding the fact that under the general law relating to sale of goods the property in the goods has by reason of such sale or purchase passed in another State.

(2) Except in so far as Parliament may by law otherwise provide, no law of a State shall impose, or authorise the imposition of, a tax on the sale or purchase of any goods where such sale or purchase takes place in the course of inter-State trade or commerce:

Provided that President may by order direct that any tax on the sale or purchase of goods which was being lawfully levied by the Government of any State immediately before the commencement of this Constitution shall, notwithstanding that the imposition of such tax is contrary to the provisions of this clause, continue to be levied until the thirtyfirst day of March 1951."

(7) It will be seen that Article 286 deals with three classes of cases: (1) Where the sale or purchase takes place outside the State which must mean the State imposing the tax, and according to the explanation, sale or purchase must be deemed to take place in that State where as a direct result of the sale the goods are delivered for the purpose of consumption in that State; Article 286 (1) (a) and Explanation: (2) Where the sale or purchase takes place in the course of the import of goods into or export of goods out of India; Article 286 (1) (b); and (3) Where the sale or purchase takes place in the course of inter-State trade or commerce with a proviso that the operation of this Rule might be suspended by the President until 31st March, 1951; Article 286 (2). In the three cases aforesaid, the power of the State to impose a tax is taken away. The third category mentioned above might be left out of account as the assessment in question relates to the period 1950-51 and by virtue of the Adaptation of Laws (Fourth Amendment) Order, 1952, Article 286 is to come into operation in Madras only after 31st March, 1951.

(8) The questions that have been argued before us are:

(1) The purchase of hides and skins by the petitioners in Dacca in Pakistan and in the States of West Bengal and Uttar Pradesh as also locally was all for the purpose of export to foreign countries and that, therefore, they are exempt from taxation on the ground that it was made in the course of export and that Article 286 (1) (b) gives to such purchases immunity from State taxation;

(2) If the above contention fails, the purchase of 12,123 pieces from Dacca for a price of Rs. 1,04,595-4-6 must be considered as purchase in the course of import into India and that it is, therefore, exempt from taxation under Article 286 (1) (b).

(3) The purchases in Calcutta and Cawnpore were outside the State of Madras and therefore not liable for taxation in view of Article 286 (1) (a). And

(4) lastly, it was argued that the Turnover and Assessment Rules framed as they were in 1939 mixed up indiscriminately sales which are liable to be taxed under the Constitution and sales which are not, and that, therefore, they must be rejected in their entirety.

QUESTIONS 1 AND 2:

(9) It will be convenient to consider these two questions together as their determination depends on the meaning to be given to the words "sales or purchases in the course of export or import." The learned Advocate-General contends that those words must be limited to the sales or purchases under which the goods are actually exported or imported, whereas Mr. Rajah Ayyar contends that those words must be given an extended significance as including not merely the particular transaction under which the export or import of goods takes place, but all the chain of transactions which are entered into either with the object of exporting or importing the goods or with the knowledge that they would be exported or imported. He argues that for this purpose, we must have regard to the nature of the goods which are exported or imported, the usual course of business and the exigencies of the trade in those goods and on a consideration of all the circumstances it must be decided whether the transactions in respect of which immunity is claimed under the Article are so intimately connected with the actual export or import as properly to be considered as forming part of it.

It is stated that the rawhides and skins of South India enjoy considerable popularity in world markets under the name of East India Kips, that there is considerable demand for it in foreign countries, that the export of hides and skins is one of the main items of the foreign trade of this State, that they are generally purchased with the object of being exported and that it would therefore be legitimate to treat the chain of sales culminating in the export as forming one transaction. It is accordingly contended that all the purchases of raw hides and skins wherever made were all made in the course of export and therefore, not liable for taxation. Authority for this extended construction was sought in American decisions, in Article 1, section 8 (3), section 9 (5), and section 10 (2).

(10) Section 8 (3) is as follows:

"The Congress shall have power to regulate commerce..... among the several States." This is familiarly known as the 'commerce clause.'

(11) Section 9 (5) is as follows:

"No tax or duty shall be laid on articles exported from any State."

(12) This is a restriction on the power of the Congress. Section 10 (2) is in these terms:

"No State shall, without the consent of the Congress, lay any imposts and duties on imports or exports, except what may be absolutely necessary for executing its inspection laws."

These two provisions are generally referred to as the export and import clause and as it is on the authorities on this clause that the petitioners mainly rely in support of their position; they will be examined first. In — 'Brown v. The State of Maryland', (1827) 12 U S 419: 6 Law Ed. 678 a statute of Maryland provided that all importers of foreign articles should obtain a licence on payment of a prescribed fee before they sold the goods and the appellant was convicted under the Act for selling imported goods without taking out a licence. The Court held that this was in substance a tax on imports and therefore, opposed to section 10 (2). In answer to a contention that as soon as the goods entered the State they ceased to be imports and were therefore liable to be taxed by the State like other goods within its jurisdiction, the Court observed:

"While we admit that there must be a point of time when the prohibition ceases and the power of the State to tax commences, we cannot admit that this point of time is the instant that the articles enter the country... It is sufficient for the present to say generally that when the importer has so acted upon the thing imported that it has become incorporated and mixed up with the mass of property in the country, it has perhaps lost its distinctive character as an import and has become subject to the taxing power of the State; but while remaining the property of the importer in his ware-house in the original form or package in which it was imported, a tax upon it is too plainly a duty on imports to escape the prohibition in the Constitution."

In — 'Anglo-Chilean Nitrate Sales Corporation v. Alabama', (1933) 288 US 218: 77 Law Ed 710, the appellant was a Corporation carrying on the business of importing nitrate from Chile and selling it to purchasers in its original packages. In holding that a tax by the State of Alabama on these sales was obnoxious to section 10 (2) as amounting to a tax on imports the Court observed:

"The right to import the nitrate included the right to sell it in the original bags while it remained the property of appellant and before it lost its distinctive character as an import. State prohibition of such sales would take from the appellant the very rights in respect of importation that are conferred by the Constitution and laws of the United States."

It is argued on the basis of these two decisions that if import does not cease on the entry of the goods into the country but extends to the stage of their first sale, export should likewise be held to begin not when the goods leave the country, but when they are purchased with the object of being exported and that therefore the purchase made by the petitioners with the object of export must be held to be purchase which "takes place in the course of export." It is conceded by the petitioners that no authority on the export and import clause has laid down such a proposition.

The cases cited by them with reference to export. — 'Fair Bank v. United States', (1901) 181 U S 283: 45 Law Ed. 862, — 'United States

v. Hvoslef', (1915) 237 U S 1: 59 Law Ed. 813, and — 'Thames and Mersey Marine Insurance Co. v. United States', (1915) 237 U S 19: 59 Law Ed. 821, do not bear on this point. They merely decided that to levy a stamp duty on documents which are considered according to mercantile usage as forming part of the documents of title relating to the exported goods, would in substance be to tax the goods themselves and that would be in contravention of section 9 (5). In — 'Fair Bank v. United States', the duty was levied on foreign bills of lading; in — 'United States v. Hvoslef', it was imposed upon charter-parties which were exclusively engaged in the carriage of cargo to foreign ports, and in — 'Thames and Mersey Marine Insurance Co. v. United States', it was upon policies insuring cargo against marine risks during the voyage to foreign ports.

(13) On the other hand, the decisions in — 'Turpin v. Burgess', (1886) 117 U S 504: 29 Law Ed. 988, — 'Spalding v. Edwards', (1923) 262 U S 66: 67 Law Ed. 865 and — 'Empresa Siderurgica, S. A. v. Merced', (1949) 337 U S 154: 93 Law Ed. 1276, point to a contrary conclusion.

(14) In — 'Turpin v. Burgess', (1886) 117 US 504: 29 Law Ed. 988, the tax was levied on manufactured tobacco which was intended for export. At the time of the imposition, the goods were in the factory. It was held that the tax was not on exports because it was laid before the goods had left the factory. In — 'Spalding v. Edwards', (1923) 262 U S 66: 67 Law Ed. 865, the appellants had sold goods to a firm in Venezuela through commission agents in New York. The appellants entrusted the goods to a common carrier, the consignment being made deliverable to the firm at Venezuela. But the sale documents were drawn up in the name of the commission agents who paid the price after the appellants had entrusted the goods to the common carrier. In form the transaction was one of sale by the appellants to the commission agents and not to the Venezuela firm.

The State of New York claimed the right to impose a tax on the sale on the footing that the sale was to the commission agent and that at that stage the export had not begun and that therefore section 10 (2) did not apply. It was held that notwithstanding that on the documents the transaction was one of sale between the appellants and the Commission agents in substance the export had begun when the goods had been entrusted to the common carrier and that section 10 (2) would therefore operate on such goods and the document of sale between the appellants and the commission agents did not affect the matter. If the contention of the petitioners is well-founded, a simple answer to the claim of the State would have been to hold that even on the basis that the sale was by the appellants to the commission agents, that was impressed with the character of export on the principle laid down in — 'Brown v. The State of Maryland', (1827) 12 U S 419: 6 Law Ed. 678, and that therefore the sale could not be taxed having regard to section 10 (2).

'Empresa Siderurgica, S. A. v. Merced', (1949) 337 U S 154: 93 Law Ed. 1276, is a recent decision in which the scope of the export and the import clause came up again for consideration. A corporation in Columbia purchased a cement plant in California with a view to export it to Columbia. The factory was being gradually dismantled and the materials transported to Columbia. During the years of assessment, a portion had been dismantled and the rest was in the process of being dismantled. A tax having been levied on the property at that stage, the question arose whether it could be considered as export for purposes of section 10 (2). Douglas, J., observed:

"It is not enough that there is an intent to export, or a plan which contemplates exportation, or an integrated series of events which will end with it. The tax immunity runs to the process of exportation and the transactions and documents embraced in it..... It is the entrance of the articles into the export stream that marks the start of the process of exportation. Then there is certainty that the goods are headed for their foreign destination and will not be diverted to domestic use. Nothing less will suffice."

It was accordingly held that though there was the intention to transport the materials to Columbia and that was in the process of being carried out, nevertheless as the foreign journey had not actually begun, there was no export within the meaning of section 10 (2). This decision is direct authority against the contention of the petitioners that a purchase preceding the actual export is part of it. Though the purchase was for the purpose of export, it was held that that was not sufficient to give immunity from taxation and that section 10 (2) would not come into operation until the goods were put in transit.

(15) Apart from authorities, an examination of the grounds on which the decisions in — 'Brown v. The State of Maryland', (1827) 12 U S 419: 6 Law Ed. 678 and — 'Anglo Chilean Nitrate Sales Corporation v. Alabama', (1933) 288 U S 213: 77 Law Ed. 710 rest also show that they are incapable of application to sales preceding exports as contended by the petitioners. One ground for holding that import of goods extends to the first sale is that the object of importing them is to sell them in the country of import and that therefore the import must be held to continue until they reach the hands of the purchaser. In the — 'Licence cases', (1847) 12 Law Ed 287 at p. 288. Taney, C. J., stated that while imported articles "are in the hands of the importer for sale... they may be regarded as merely 'in transitu' and on their way to the distant cities, villages and country for which they are destined and where they are expected to be used and consumed and for the supply of which they were in truth imported."

Black J., observed in — 'Hooven v. Evatt', (1944) 324 U S 652: 89 Law Ed. 1252:

"The Court in — 'Brown v. Maryland', was in reality treating goods in the hands of an importer for sale as though they were still in transit until the first sale had been made."

This reasoning will not apply to a transaction which takes place before the transit begins. Another reason assigned for this rule is thus stated by Marshall, C. J., in — 'Brown v. The State of Maryland':

"The counsel for the plaintiffs in error contended that the importer purchases, by payment of the duty to the United States, a right to dispose of his merchandise, as well as to bring it into the country, and certainly the argument is supported by strong reason, as well as by the practice of nations, including our own. The object of importation is sale; it constitutes the motive for paying the duties; and if the United States possess the power of conferring the right to sell, as the consideration for which the duty is paid, every principle of fair dealing requires that they should be understood to confer it."

That is to say, when an importer pays to the United States customs duties on the goods imported he thereby purchases a right to sell the goods free from any further taxation and that therefore the States cannot impose a tax on those goods. This reasoning again will be inapplicable to a purchase preceding the export and apart from that, there is also high judicial authority in India for holding that this doctrine is inapplicable to the law of this country. In the — 'Province of Madras v. Paidanna and Sons', 1942-5 F L J 61: 1942-2 Mad L J 327 at p. 336, Sir Maurice Gwyer, C. J., observed as follows:

"It does not appear to us that it would necessarily follow from the principle of the Maryland decision that in India the payment of customs duty on goods imported from abroad or the payment of an excise duty on goods manufactured or produced in India can be regarded as conferring some kind of licence or title on the importer or manufacturer to sell his goods to any purchaser without incurring a further liability to tax."

He also expressed himself strongly against the introduction of the doctrine of original packages into Indian law and observed:

"I should much regret if any contribution of mine to the elucidation of the problems which come before this Court were thought to have included the introduction of some kind of 'original package' doctrine and all the refinements and complications which that doctrine has brought in its train in the Courts of America."

Thus the decisions on the export and import clause do not support the contention of the petitioners that an export must be construed as including purchases prior to the transaction under which the goods are exported.

(16) We may now examine the authorities on the commerce clause. Section 8 (3) confers on the Congress the power to regulate inter-state commerce and as the Congress is supreme in respect of the powers delegated to it under the Constitution, any State legislation which encroaches on that field would be void. On the other hand, the States possess, subject to the powers delegated to the Congress and subject to such other limitations as are imposed by the Constitution, sovereign powers and the power of taxation is one of such powers which could be exercised, subject only to the limitations aforesaid. When, therefore, the validity of a taxing statute of a State is called in question as infringing section 8 (3), the point that arises for determination is, whether the impugned statute trespasses into the area of inter-state commerce and that in turn depends on where the region of inter-state commerce begins and where it ends. If the State legislation cuts in between those two points it will be struck down as unconstitutional. But subject to this, it will have full operation.

Thus, the discussion in the authorities on this subject is directed to ascertaining the points of commencement and of termination of the inter-state commerce. A number of authorities has been cited before us on the question. It will be sufficient to refer to the more important among them. In — 'Coe v. Errol', (1886) 116 U S 517: 29 Law Ed. 715 at pp. 718-719, timber standing in a forest in the State of New Hampshire was cut down with the object of exporting them to the State of Maine and the logs had in furtherance of this object been deposited on the riverside for the purpose of being floated down. The State of New Hampshire imposed a tax on the logs of wood and the question was, whether it was in contravention of section 8 (3). In negating this contention, Bradley, J., observed:

"Are the products of a State, although intended for exportation to another State and partially prepared for that purpose by being deposited at a place or port of shipment within the State, liable to be taxed like other property within the State? Do the owner's state of mind in relation to the goods, that is, his intent to export them, and his partial preparation to do so, exempt them from taxation? This is the precise question for solution..... There must be a point of time when they cease to be governed exclusively by the domestic law and begin to be governed and protected by the national law of commercial regulation, and that moment seems to us to be a legitimate one for this purpose, in which they commence their final movement for transportation from the State of their origin to that of their destination."

When the products of the farm or the forest are collected and brought in from the surrounding country to a town or station serving as an 'entrepot' for that particular region, whether on a river or a line of railroad such products are not yet exports nor are they in process of exportation, nor is exportation begun until they are committed to the common carrier for transportation out of the State to the State of their destination or have started on their ultimate passage to that State. Such goods do not cease to be part of the general mass of property in the State, subject, as such, to its jurisdiction and to taxation in the usual way, until they have been shipped or entered with a common carrier for transportation to another State or have been started upon such transportation in a continuous route or journey."

This authority lays down that the power of the State to tax properties within its jurisdiction is not taken away until the inter-state journey begins; and that the fact that the goods are intended for inter-state commerce, is not enough to deprive States of their powers of taxation. This is a principle that has been uniformly followed in the subsequent decisions. In — 'Mcgoldrick v. Berwind-White Coal Mining Co.', (1940) 309 U S 33: 84 Law Ed 565 at pp. 572 & 575, the respondent which was a Corporation in Pennsylvania engaged in the production of coal challenged the validity of a New York legislation imposing a tax on the sales effected by it in New York. The respondent maintained an office in New York, obtained orders and for carrying them out imported goods and the local agent at New York distributed them to the purchasers. On these facts it was contended that the tax was illegal as levied on inter-state commerce. In negating this contention the Court observed that after the goods had come to rest in the State of New York they were liable to be taxed like every other property within the State and that

"its only relation to the commerce arises from the fact that immediately preceding transfer of possession to the purchaser within the State, which is the taxable event regardless of the time and place of passing title, the merchandise has been transported in inter-state commerce and brought to its journey's end. Such a tax has no different effect upon inter-state commerce than a tax on the "use" of property which has just been moved in inter-state commerce..... or the familiar property tax on goods by the state of destination at the conclusion of their inter-state journey. — 'Brown v. Houston', (1885) 114 U S 622: 29 Law Ed. 257, — 'American Steel and Wire Co., v. Speed', (1904) 192 U S 500: 48 Law Ed. 538.

This Court has uniformly sustained a tax imposed by the State of the buyer upon a sale of goods, in several instances in the 'original packages,' effected by delivery to the purchaser upon arrival at destination after an inter-state journey, both when the local seller has purchased the goods extra-state for the purpose of resale and when the extra-state seller has shipped them into the taxing state for sale there. Respondent, pointing to the course of its business and to its contracts which contemplate the shipment of the coal inter-state upon orders of the New York customers, insists that a distinction is to be taken between a tax laid on sales made, without previous contract, after the merchandise has crossed the state boundary, and sales, the contracts for which when made contemplate or require the transportation of merchandise inter-state to the taxing state... But we think this distinction is without the support of reason or authority."

In the result, the taxation was held to be legal. The principle established in this case that the doctrine of original packages has no application to inter-state commerce had been already laid down in — 'Woodruff v. Parham', (1869) 75 US 123: 19 Law Ed. 382, and — 'Hinson v. Lott', (1869) 75 U S 148: 19 Law Ed. 387; and it has never been questioned.

(17) Considerable reliance was placed on behalf of the petitioners on the following decisions: — 'Robbins v. Taxing District of Shelby County', (1887) 120 U S 489: 30 Law Ed 694, — 'Dahnke-Walker Milling Co. v. Bondurant', (1921) 257 U S 282: 66 Law Ed 239, — 'Lemke v. Farmers' Grain Co.', (1922) 258 US 50: 66 Law Ed 458, — 'Shafer v. Farmers' Grain Co.', (1925) 268 U S 189: 69 Law Ed 909, — 'Real Silk Hosiery Mills v. Portland', (1925) 268 U S 325: 69 Law Ed 982, and — 'Currin v. Wallace', (1939) 306 U S 1: 83 Law Ed. 441. In — 'Robbins v. Taxing District of Shelby County', the appellant was carrying on within the State of Tennessee the business of soliciting orders for the sale of goods of the firm of Rose, Robbins and Company, of Cincinnati, in the State of Ohio, by exhibiting samples, a business known as that of a drummer. Under a law of Tennessee, drummers were required to take out before carrying on their business a licence on payment of the fees prescribed thereunder. The validity of this imposition was impugned on the ground that the drummer was engaged in the carrying on of inter-state commerce and that the State had no power to burden it by any measure of taxation. This contention was upheld.

In — 'Dahnke-Walker Milling Co. v. Bondurant', the question was about the validity of a statute of Kentucky which prescribed various conditions under which Corporations of other States could do business in the State. As the business out of which the dispute arose was purchase of grain for inter-state commerce, it was held that the provisions of the Act amounted to an interference with that commerce, and were therefore void. In — 'Lemke v. Farmers' Grain Co.', North Dakota enacted a legislation requiring that the purchases of grains intended for transport to markets in Minnesota should be made only by persons holding a licence and imposed various restrictions in the matter of carrying on of that business. It was held that this was unconstitutional interference with the carrying on of inter-state commerce and was illegal. The decision in — 'Shafer v. Farmers' Grain Co.', is again on the validity of a North Dakota statute which introduced a compulsory system of licence and regulation with reference to the purchase of grains intended to be exported to other States. The Act was held to be unconstitutional.

In — 'Real Silk Hosiery Mills v. Portland', a statute of Oregon required licence to be taken from persons engaged in inter-state trade as a condition of their carrying on business. Following the decision in — 'Robbins v. Taxing District of Shelby County', the Court held that this was an unconstitutional interference with inter-state commerce. It will be noticed that in all the above cases the point for determination was whether the States could impose restrictions on the carrying on of inter-state commerce by requiring that a licence should be taken and imposing restrictive conditions.

These authorities do not bear directly on the question as to when transactions assume the character of inter-state commerce so as to be immune from taxation. The principle on which these decisions rest is that a State Law will be invalid, if it, to any extent, burdens inter-state commerce. Vide — 'Spector Motor Service v. O'Connor', (1951) 340 U.S. 602: 95 Law Ed. 573. In — 'Currin v. Wallace', the question was about the validity of a federal legislation providing for the regulation of the tobacco trade. The contention was that it related purely to intra-state commerce and was therefore unconstitutional. It was held that the purchase of goods in one State for transportation into another constituted inter-state commerce and was, therefore, within the regulatory jurisdiction of the Congress under section 8 (3).

(18) Our attention was also invited to decisions in which the question discussed was how far interruptions in the course of transport of goods could be regarded as terminating the journey so as to enable the States to impose a tax on the goods at that stage. Thus, in — 'General Oil Co. v. Crain', (1908) 209 U S 211: 52 Law Ed 754 oil which was shipped from Pennsylvania and destined ultimately for points in the States of Arkansas, Louisiana, and Mississippi was held not to be inter-state commerce when in the course of transit it was unloaded into tanks and barrels for the purpose of distribution at the places of destination. A tax laid on it was upheld as not being in violation of section 8 (3).

In — Becon v. Illinois, 227 U S 504: 57 Law Ed 615 at p. 620 it was decided that grain which was shipped from the Western States for delivery in the Eastern States ceased to be in transit, when it was stopped at Chicago and removed to the owner's grain elevator for inspection, weighment and assortment before being despatched to their destination. It was observed that the owner had "established a local facility in Chicago for his own benefit, & while through its employment, the grain was there at rest, there was no reason why it should not be included with his other property within the state in an assessment for taxation which was made in the usual way, without discrimination."

In — Susquehanna Coal Company v. South Amboy, 228 US 665: 57 Law Ed 1015 coal shipped from the State of Pennsylvania and landed at New Jersey and dumped into a coal depot was held liable for State taxation, although destined ultimately for ports in other States as there was something more than an incidental interruption of the continuity of the transportation through the State and there was "a business purpose and advantage in the delay." These authorities are relevant only as showing that the period during which the State loses its power to tax on the ground of inter-state commerce should be confined to the time when there is a continuous course of transit. In — Minnesota v. Blasius, (1933) 290 US 1: 78 Law Ed 131 the law relating to the power of the State to impose tax in relation to the commerce clause was thus summed up:

"Thus, the State cannot tax inter-state commerce, either by laying the tax upon the business which constitutes such commerce or the privilege of engaging in it, or upon the receipts, as such, derived from it. Similarly, the States may not tax property in transit in inter-state commerce ..... If the inter-state movement has not begun, the mere fact that such a movement is contemplated does not withdraw the property from the State's power to tax it. If the inter-state movement has begun, it may be regarded as continuing, so as to maintain the immunity of the property from State taxation, despite temporary interruptions due to the necessities of the journey or for the purpose of safety and convenience in the course of the movement ..... When property has come to rest within a State, being held there at the pleasure of the owner, for disposal or use, so that he may dispose of it either within the State, or for shipment elsewhere, as his interest dictates, it is deemed to be a part of the general mass of property within the State and is thus subject to its taxing power."

(19) The above authorities on the commerce clause, far from supporting the contention of the petitioners that export should be deemed to include the chain of transactions preceding it clearly establish that immunity from taxation under the commerce clause should be narrowly construed so as to limit it to the period between the actual commencement and termination of inter-state commerce.

(20) Turning now to Article 286, the question is what is the exact import of the words "sale of goods where it takes place in the course of export or import" or "in the course of inter-state trade." Mr. K. Rajah Ayyar argues that the words "in the course of export" are equivalent to "for the purpose of export" & that construction would take in not merely the last transaction under which the goods are actually exported but also the prior sales which were effected for the purpose of export or even with the knowledge that the goods will be exported. But when dealing with extra-state transactions, the Explanation to Article 286 (1) (a) enacts that the delivery must be "for the purpose of consumption."

And when two different expressions are used in the same context, the reasonable inference is that they refer to two different matters, and therefore, the words "in the course of export" cannot bear the same meaning as "for the purpose of export." In their natural meaning the words "in the course of export" would have a more restricted operation than the words "for the purpose of export." Quite obviously the words "in the course of" have been suggested by the decisions of the American Courts on the commerce clause. The object of Article 286 (2) is clearly to prevent States from interfering with the free flow of commerce in the country by erecting barriers of taxation. That was precisely the object of the commerce clause in America and, interpreting that clause, the decisions have established as already seen that the States enjoy full powers of taxation so long as they do not trespass into the region of inter-state commerce and that that region begins when the goods commence their inter-state journey and ends when they reach their destination.

Whether the goods are in the course of transit is the paramount question to be decided under the commerce clause. It is this conception that appears to have been adopted in the words "sale of goods where it takes place in the course of inter-state trade." These words limit the prohibition on the power of the State to impose tax on sales only where they are the subject-matter of inter-state commerce. The power of the State to tax sales before the inter-state commerce commences and after it ends is left untouched. In this view, the power of the States to impose tax under Article 286 (2) would be of the same character and extent as the power of the States in America in relation to the commerce clause.

(21) It has next to be noted that under Article 286 (1) (b) the prohibition on the power of the State to tax exports & imports is stated in precisely the same terms as in relation to inter-state commerce under Article 286 (2); and that is only in respect of sales or purchases which take place in the course of the import or the export of the goods. It would be in accordance with sound rules of construction to put the same meaning on the words "in the course of" occurring both in Article 286 (1) (b) and in Article 286 (2). Thus understood the prohibition under Article 286 (1) (b) will begin to operate only from the time when the goods exported begin their international journey and it will cease when that journey ceases. In other words, the prohibition is limited to the period covered by the actual exportation or importation of the goods. The power of the State to impose tax at any stage before or after is not affected.

(22) It may also be observed that in American law, the commerce clause and the export and import clause operate differently on the power of the State to impose tax. While under the commerce clause the States have, as already mentioned, plenary powers of taxation subject only to the powers of the Congress to regulate inter-state commerce, in the case of the export and import clause, it is a total want of jurisdiction. The distinction between the two was thus stated in — Richfield Oil Corporation v. State Board, (1946) 329 U S 69: 91 Law Ed 80:

"The two constitutional provisions, while related, are not co-terminous. To be sure, a State tax has at times been held unconstitutional both under the Import-Export Clause and under the Commerce Clause. But there are important differences between the two. The invalidity of one derives from the prohibition of taxation on the import or export; the validity of the other turns nowise on whether the article was, or had ever been, an import or export. Moreover, the Commerce Clause is cast, not in terms of a prohibition against taxes, but in terms of a power on the part of Congress to regulate commerce..... As recently stated in — McGoldrick v. Berwind-White Coal Mining Co., (1910) 309 US 33: 84 Law Ed 565, the law under the Commerce Clause has been fashioned by the Court in an effort 'to reconcile competing constitutional demands, that commerce between the States shall not be unduly impeded by State action, and that the power to lay taxes for the support of State Government shall not be unduly curtailed.'"

It would appear that the intention of the framers of the Constitution was to discard this distinction and enact one law for both foreign and inter-state trade and that they chose to adopt the law relating to inter-state commerce in America as furnishing a basis for reconciling the competing demands of both the union to control and regulate commerce, inter-state and foreign, in the best interest of the country, and of the States, to raise revenue on transactions, which are rendered possible by the protection afforded by the States.

(23) If that is the true meaning of Article 286, why asks Mr. Rajah Ayyar, should not the Legislature have simply enacted that the State shall not lay tax on exports or imports. But then that would have brought in the doctrine of original packages and it was clearly with a view, to avoid it and assimilate the law on the subject of the exports and imports to that on inter-state commerce that the language used in the American authorities on the construction of the commerce clause was adopted. Even so, argues Mr. Rajah Ayyar, the language used in Article 286 suggests a wider operation of the prohibition on the powers of the State to tax than would result on the construction adopted here. The language is, it must be conceded, somewhat involved but it is due to the fact that two different classes of transactions were clubbed together in one Article. If A in Madras sells goods to B in Calcutta and in performance of the contract consigns them to a common carrier, then from that stage the goods are in transit in inter-state commerce and the State loses its power of taxing the sale. That is a plain case under the inter-state commerce clause.

But not seldom does it happen that even before a contract is entered into with reference to goods A might consign them to his own order or control in Calcutta and while the goods are actually in transit a transaction of sale might be concluded and completed by transfer of the relative documents of title. That transaction might be concluded at Madras. But nevertheless, the State of Madras will have no power to tax the sale as the sale takes place while the goods are in the course of inter-state commerce. It is the lumping up of these two kinds of transactions in a single provision that has resulted in a tangle in expression.

(24) It must accordingly be held that both in Articles 285 (1) (b) and 286 (2) the power of the State to impose a tax on export or import or inter-state trade or commerce is taken away only in respect of sales or purchases made directly in relation to the goods which are the subject-matter of transportation either in inter-state or international commerce, whether such sales take place prior to the commencement of the transport or during its progress. The prohibition does not extend to sales or purchases which have no direct connection with the goods which are exported.

(25) In the light of this conclusion we may examine the facts relating to the first question. 7,250 pieces of hides and skins were exported directly by the petitioners under C.I.F. contracts. That would clearly be exports not liable for taxation. The Commercial Tax Officer held that the goods which had been purchased as raw hides and skins were tanned by the petitioners in their own tannery and exported as tanned hides and skins. The petitioners contend that what they did was not tanning but merely curing the hides and skins so as to preserve them from decay and putrefaction so that they may be in a fit condition for export. If that is so — and that is not seriously disputed — the ground on which the tax was imposed in the present case must be rejected as untenable. But the substance of the matter is that the petitioners are not taxed as exporters, but as the last purchasers who exported the goods and the tax is imposed on the sum of Rs. 8,66,212-8-1 which is the price which they paid to their sellers in Dacca, Calcutta, Cawnpore and locally. Therefore, if the contention of the petitioners that all their purchases form part of the process of export fails, then they can escape taxation only by establishing that the purchases by them are not liable to be taxed, and that is the point raised in questions 2 and 3.

(26) On the second question relating to the purchase of 12,123 pieces of raw hides and skins in Dacca, the argument of the petitioners is that they are imports from Pakistan and exempt from taxation in view of Article 285 (1) (b). The facts established are that the representatives of the petitioners used to go to Dacca, make the purchases there, pay the price, and consign the goods from there to Madras. The contracts of purchase were completed in Dacca, before the goods were put in transit; and what the petitioners did was merely to transport their own goods from Dacca to Madras.

Dealing with inter-state commerce, Willis remarks that "whenever there is traffic or commercial intercourse between a person in one state and a person in another state there is inter-state commerce." Vide Willis on Constitutional Law, page 289. On the same principle, unless the goods are in transit under a contract between two persons in two different countries, entered into either at the commencement of the transport or during its progress, there can be no question of a sale or purchase in the course of import. It should therefore be held that the transport by the petitioners of their own goods after purchase in Pakistan cannot be brought under Article 286 (1) (b) as a purchase in the course of import.

But the claim of the petitioners to exemption in respect of these purchases must be upheld on a different ground. If, the purchases were completed in Dacca, that would be outside the operation of the Madras General Sales Tax Act as that authorises a levy of tax only on sales or purchases within the Province of Madras; and as the tax has been imposed on the petitioners as purchasers, it must be held to be unauthorised. It may be that the petitioners are liable to be taxed under the Act in respect of any subsequent dealings by them with reference to these goods within the State of Madras, if that is authorised by the Act. But the assessment of tax has been made on them only as purchasers of hides and skins, and that is clearly illegal.

(27) The third contention relates to the purchase of 74,000 pieces of hides and skins in Calcutta and Cawnpore for a price of Rs. 7,18,042-2-9 and it raises a rather difficult question on the interpretation of Article 286 (1) (a) and the Explanation thereto. For a proper appreciation of these provisions, it will be useful if we first ascertain the powers of taxation which States possess apart from Article 286, and then examine how far those powers have been abridged or modified by the provisions of that Article. The power to impose taxes on sales was conferred on the States by Entry No. 48 in the Provincial List in the Government of India Act, 1935, and under the Constitution that power is granted by Entry No. 54 in the State List in the Seventh Schedule. Article 245 (1) enacts that "The Legislature of a State may make laws for the whole or any part of the State."

On these provisions three possible cases can be conceived. There may be a sale which is wholly intra-state; a sale which is wholly extra state and a sale which may be described as inter-state by which is meant a sale in which the essential ingredients such as conclusion of the contract, delivery of the goods, payment of price and the passing of title take place partly in one State and partly in another or others. The first two categories do not present any difficulties; taxation of an intra-state sale will be 'intra vires' and the taxation of an extra-state sale 'ultra vires' of the powers of the State Legislature. The problem arises only with reference to inter-state sales. One question is whether having regard to the limitations prescribed in Article 245 (1), the State Legislature has competence to impose a tax on such sales. It is well-settled that the power of a State to impose taxes is not conditioned on the subject-matter being wholly within its jurisdiction. The exercise of the power will be valid, if there is sufficient territorial connection with reference to the subject-matter. That was clearly laid down by the Privy Council in — Wallace Brothers and Co. v. Commissioner of Income-tax, Bombay, 1948 FLJ 32 at page 36, where it was observed:

"Given a sufficient territorial connection between the person sought to be charged and the country seeking to tax him, income-tax may properly extend to that person in respect of his foreign income."

We had occasion recently to consider this question in Criminal Appeal No. 129 of 1952 (Mad) and we held that sales tax could be levied on sales which are of an inter-state character, provided they were substantially effected within the State and that a law imposing such a tax is not 'ultra vires' of the powers of the Legislature. It is unnecessary to cover the same ground once again. It may be added that a different conclusion would lead to the startling result that inter-state sales could not be the subject of taxation by any State.

(28) A more difficult question is which among the States in which inter-state sales take place has the power to tax such sales? One possible view is that as there is a sale only when property in the goods passes, it is only that State in which property passes that the competence to impose tax on the sale. This was the substantial question which was considered by us in Criminal Appeal No. 129 of 1952 (Mad) to which reference has already been made. There, the assessee who were carrying on business in the City of Madras claimed exemption from sales tax in respect of certain sales in which the property passed to the purchasers in Calcutta. But the contracts themselves had been concluded in Madras. The goods were consigned to the common carrier in Madras and the assessee had also their Head Office in Madras. On these facts, we held that for purposes of sales tax the sale must be held to take place where the bargain was concluded and the transaction substantially effected and that passing of property in goods was not a decisive factor.

This conclusion was reached on a consideration of — Norfolk and W. R. Co. v. Sims, (1903) 191 U S 441: 48 Law Ed 254 and — American Express Co. v. State of Iowa, (1905) 196 U S 133: 49 Law Ed 417. These authorities lay down that when there is a sale of goods, the material element for the purpose of taxation is the agreement of sale under which the right of the parties get finally fixed; that the passing of property, delivery of goods and payment of price are matters on which the parties are free to settle their own terms; that the power of the State to impose taxes cannot depend on the terms of the bargains which the parties might make; and that where there is a consummated sale, the venue of the sale for purposes of taxation is the place where the agreement was concluded, the rest of the transaction being treated merely as a process of execution of the agreement.

Reliance was also placed on the observations of Black J., in — Richfield Oil Corporation v. State Board of Equalisation, (1946) 329 U S 69: 91 Law Ed 80. Reference may also be made to the following observations of Stone J., in — McGoldrick v. Berwind-White Coal Mining Co., (1940) 309 U S 33: 84 Law Ed 565 at page 581: "The place where the title passes has not been regarded as the test of inter-state character of sale." How far the later decision in — McLeod v. Dilworth Co., (1944) 322 US 327: 88 Law Ed 1304, can be reconciled with the decision in — McGoldrick v. Berwind-White Coal Mining Co., is not material for the present discussion as Frankfurter, J., who delivered the judgment of the majority accepts the authority of — McGoldrick v. Berwind-

White Coal Mining Co.', and proceeds to distinguish it. Nor is it material to consider how far the decision in — 'McLeod v. Dilworth Co.', could be reconciled with the decision of the same learned Judge in — 'General Trading Co. v. State Tax Commission', (1944) 322 U S 335: 88 Law Ed 1309. The point is that it is generally agreed that it is not the passing of property in goods that determines the right of the states to impose tax. The position is thus stated by a learned American Writer. Vide 57 Harvard Law Review, page 1091.

"Furthermore, the question whether title passes in the state of origin of the goods or in the state of destination has not hitherto been thought determining under the commerce clause. — 'Caldwell v. North Carolina', (1903) 187 U S 622: 47 Law Ed 336; — 'Norfolk and W. R. Co. v. Sims'; — 'Rearick v. Pennsylvania', (1906) 203 U S 507: 51 Law Ed 295. In this last case, Mr. Justice Holmes said: 'Commerce among the several States is a practical conception, not drawn from the 'witty diversities' of the law of sales.'"

Under the Indian Sale of Goods Act the provisions as to passing of title are subject to a contract to the contrary 'vide' section 19. If the power of a State to impose sales tax is to depend on the passing of property in the goods, it will follow that it is in the power of the parties to determine by their bargain the extent of that power and it would be possible for them to deprive a State of its power to tax a transaction which takes place within its limits by adopting artificial terms as to the passing of title. While such terms will be binding on the parties themselves in determining their mutual rights and obligations as to when the risk commences and the like, there is no reason why the State which has sovereign power of taxation within the limits prescribed by the Constitution should, in the exercise of such power, be controlled by the contracts of the parties. The correct view, therefore, to take of the matter, is to hold that the right to impose a tax arises in India, as in America, when the contract is concluded, provided of course the contract is completed by the passing of property.

(29) In — Criminal Appeal No. 129 of 1952 (Mad) we had not to consider the effect of Art. 286 of the Constitution on the powers of a State to impose sales tax, as the assessment under consideration there related to the period between 1st April 1947 and 31st December 1947. The point for determination now is how far the power which the States otherwise possess of imposing sales tax is affected by Art. 286 (1) (a) and that depends on the interpretation to be given to the Explanation. Is the power of taxation conferred by the Explanation in addition to the power possessed by the State? Or, is it in substitution of it?

To take an illustration, if a contract is concluded in Madras and to bring out the problem in relief, let us assume that under the agreement of parties the property in the goods also passed in Madras, but the goods are actually delivered in Bombay, would the State of Madras have the power to tax the sale? But for the Explanation, it would have had. Has the Explanation the effect of taking away the right? It is undoubted that under the Explanation, the State of Bombay will have the power to impose tax. If the Explanation has to be interpreted as conferring an additional power, then both the States will have the power to tax, the State of Madras acting under Entry No. 54 and under the Madras General Sales Tax Act and the State of Bombay by virtue of the Explanation.

What can be put against this construction is that it results in double taxation of the same transaction. But if we adopt the view that the Explanation has the effect of superseding powers of the State Legislature in cases falling under the Explanation, that will have the effect of depriving the States of revenue in respect of transactions which are substantially effected there. Looking at the cast of the statute, the conferment of the power of taxation on States is under Article 246 of the Constitution and Entry 54 in the State List which correspond to section 100 and Entry 48 in the Seventh Schedule in the Government of India Act of 1935. Then comes Article 286 (1) (a) which prohibits the imposition of tax on extra-state sales — a prohibition which is already to be found enacted in Article 245. While Article 245 is positive in its terms, Article 286 (1) is negative.

The Explanation then steps in and provides that for the purpose of Article 286 (1) (a) a sale must be considered to take place in that State in which the goods are actually delivered for consumption. The effect of this Explanation is to remove the limitation imposed by Article 245 and Article 286 (1) on the power of a State to enact extra-territorial legislation and permit the State to levy sales tax on an extra-state sale, provided goods thereunder are delivered within the State. The Explanation should accordingly be construed as not taking away the positive powers of taxation conferred under Article 246 and Entry No. 54 but as enlarging those powers in cases falling within the Explanation. This conclusion is reinforced by a reference to the circumstance under which the Explanation came to be incorporated in the Article. It was not originally in the Bill and it came to be inserted at the last stage out of deference to the representations made on behalf of certain States that the Law as it stood would prevent them from taxing commodities which would be used in the State and that a power to tax such transactions should be conferred on them. Read in the light of this background, the language of the Explanation is also significant. It applies only when the goods have been delivered for the purpose of consumption in that State. It is really what is termed in American Legislation as 'use tax' which though functionally allied to sales tax, is different in its operation. In — 'McLeod v. Dilworth Co.', (1944) 322 U S 327: 88 Law Ed 1304 at pages 1306-1307, the difference between the two kinds of tax was thus explained:

"A sales tax and a use tax in many instances may bring about the same result. But they are different in conception, are assessments upon different transactions, and in the interlacings of the two legislative authorities within our federation may have to justify themselves on different constitutional grounds. A sales tax is a tax on the freedom of purchase. A use tax is a tax on the enjoyment of that which was purchased."

We are not concerned with the constitutional problem as it presented itself for solution in that case; because under the Constitution the States enjoy both a power under Entry 54 to tax sale and purchase of goods and a power under Entry 52 to tax goods on their entry into a local area, subject only to the limitations contained in Article 286. But the observations quoted above are sufficient to show that there is no conflict between the power of States to tax sales under Entry 54 and the power to impose taxes on the use of goods to which the Explanation relates.

(30) This interpretation further gives a clue to the correct meaning of the words "actual delivery" in the Explanation. In the context it can mean only physical delivery and not constructive delivery such as by transfer of documents of title to the goods. The whole object of the Explanation is to give a power of taxation in respect of goods actually entering the State for the purpose of use therein and it will defeat such a purpose if notional delivery of goods as by transfer of documents of title to the goods within the State is held to give the state a power to tax, when the goods are actually delivered in another State.

(31) The result may be thus summed up:

1. The State has plenary powers of taxation over intra-state sales.
2. The State has no power to impose a tax on extra-state sales.
3. In respect of inter-state sales, the State in which the contract is concluded is the only State which has the power to impose a tax.
4. Where goods are delivered for consumption in a particular State, that State has the power to impose a use tax or a purchase tax thereon notwithstanding that the transaction of sale is extra-state.

(32) In the light of the above discussion it is necessary to examine whether on the facts established in the present case the petitioners are entitled to exemption from tax in respect of hides and skins purchased in Calcutta and Cawnpore. The affidavit in support of the petition does not give particulars as to where the contract was concluded or where the delivery was made. In a statement filed on behalf of the respondent it is stated that in respect of the purchases made in Calcutta the documents of title were received by post in Madras. In the view taken by us that would not be sufficient to confer on the State a power to tax the sales. If the contracts in respect of these sales were concluded in Calcutta, they will be extra-state sales not liable for taxation under the Madras General Sales Tax Act.

It would appear, however, that the goods were actually delivered in Madras and if so, that will confer on the State of Madras a power to tax the goods under the Explanation to Article 286 (1) (a) which has become incorporated in the Madras General Sales Tax Act by the Adaptation of Laws (Fourth Amendment) Order, 1952, which by virtue of section 1 (2) shall be deemed to have come into force on the 26th January, 1950. With reference to the purchases made in Cawnpore also it is stated on behalf of the respondent that the prices were paid to the banks in Madras against delivery of documents of title. This circumstance would not be sufficient to clothe the State of Madras with authority to impose a tax on these sales, though property in the goods might pass in Madras, as in the view expressed by us, the locus of the contract is not where the property passes, but where the agreement is concluded. But if the goods were delivered in Madras, as appears from the statement on behalf of the respondent, the Madras State would have jurisdiction to impose tax under the Explanation to Article 286 (1) (a).

(33) We must mention that on the construction of the Explanation to Article 286 (1) (a) Mr. K. Rajah Ayyar argued that the word 'consumption' occurring therein should be understood in the limited sense of eating and not in the wider sense of using. He relied on the language of Entry 52 in schedule 2 where both 'consumption' and 'use' are used disjunctively. But Entry 53 speaks of taxes on the consumption or sale of electricity; and obviously consumption here can mean only use. Reference was made to the Dictionary meaning of the word 'consumption'. But that gives both a popular sense and an economic sense. It is the latter that we are concerned with, and that is given in Webster's New International Dictionary, Vol I, page 483, as follows:

"Consumption.—(3) Economics.—The use of (economic) goods resulting in the diminution or destruction of their utilities; opposed to production. Consumption may consist in the active use of goods in such a manner as to accomplish their direct and immediate destruction, as in eating food, wearing clothes or burning fuel; or it may consist in the mere keeping, and enjoying the presence or prospect of, a thing, which is destroyed only by the gradual processes of natural decay, as in the maintenance of a picture gallery. Generally, it may be said that consumption means using things, and production means adapting them for use."

In the Oxford New English Dictionary, Vol. II, page 888, consumption is defined as: "(1) The action or fact of consuming or destroying; destruction..... (7) Pol. Econ. The destructive employment or utilisation of the products of industry." There is no substance in this contention.

(34) (4) The fourth contention of the petitioners is that the power of the State to impose sales tax has undergone a material change by the operation of Article 286, that taxes which would be lawful prior to the Constitution have now been rendered illegal; that the Turnover and Assessment Rules which were framed before the Constitution have mixed up what would not now be taxable with what is taxable; and that therefore they should be declared void in their entirety as the turnover under the Act is one and indivisible. We are unable to agree with this contention. As already mentioned, Article 286 is now part of the Madras General Sales Tax Act, by virtue of the Adaptation of Laws (Fourth Amendment) Order, 1952; and if the assessment is to any extent not authorised by the Statute the assessee is entitled to be relieved from the imposition to that extent. They cannot claim further that they should be freed altogether from liability even to the extent that they are liable under the Act. As was observed by Holmes, J., in — 'New York Ex. Rel. Hatch v. Edward Reardon', (1907) 204 U S 152: 51 Law Ed 415,

"with regard to taxes, especially perhaps it might be assumed that the Legislature meant them to be valid to whatever extent they could be sustained."

(35) The result of the findings is that the sum of Rs. 1,04,595-4-6 representing the price paid by the petitioners for the hides and skins purchased in Dacca, should be excluded from their assessable turnover; and that in respect of the purchases made in Calcutta, Cawnpore and locally amounting to Rs. 7,61,617-3-7 they are liable for sales tax.

(36) The learned Advocate-General agrees that the taxing authorities will revise the assessments in accordance with the conclusions expressed herein.

(37) There will be no order as to costs.

(38) RAJAMANNAR C. J.: I agree.

A/V.R.B.

Order accordingly.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 129 (Vol. 40, C. N. 37)

RAJAMANNAR C. J. AND VENKATA-
RAMA AIYAR J.

Kama Umi Isa Ammal, Petitioner v. Rama Kudumban and others, Respondents.

Civil Misc. Petn. No. 13514 of 1950, D/- 6-8-1952.

Tenancy Laws — Madras Estates (Abolition and Conversion into Ryotwari) Act (26 of 1948) S. 67 — Rules framed under — Rules relating to procedure for being followed by Tribunals appointed under S. 8 of Act — Validity — Orders passed by two members sitting as tribunal is without jurisdiction — (Constitution of India, (1950) Art. 226).

The Tribunal, according to the definition means a Tribunal constituted under S. 8 and under S. 8 (2) it is expressly provided that each Tribunal shall consist of three members. When the substantive provision in the Act clearly lays down that the Tribunal shall consist of three members it is not open for the Government to provide by a rule that a Tribunal may consist of less than three members. AIR 1951 SC 230 Rel. on. (Para 4)

Presumably, the legislature prescribed in S. 8 different qualifications for the three members deliberately and on purpose made the officer of the status of the District Judge the Chairman of the Tribunal. The intention of the legislature appears to be obvious that they wanted the tribunal to consist of members possessing legal qualifications as well as an officer having knowledge of revenue matters. The rule which allows two members of the tribunal to function as a tribunal would be inconsistent with the express intention of the legislature contained in S. 8 (2), if, for example, in one contingency the two judicial members alone sit without the assistance of the revenue member. Equally inconsistent would be the result when the Tribunal should sit and dispose of appeals without the chairman, a person who is more highly qualified than the other two members. (Para 5)

Therefore, the rules empowering two members of the tribunal to sit and dispose of matters which have to be decided by the Tribunal under various provisions of the Act are ultra vires and invalid. Consequently orders passed by two members only sitting as the tribunal is without jurisdiction and must be quashed. (Para 8)

Anno: Civ. P. C., App. III, Const. of India, Art. 226 N. 13.

1953 Mad/17 & 18

R. Kesava Aiyangar and K. Parasaran, for Petitioner; Advocate General, assisted by V. V. Raghavan for Govt. Pleader, for the State.

REFERENCE..... /Para
(51) 1951 SCR 380: (AIR 1951 SC 230) 5

ORDER: This is an application for the issue of a writ of certiorari to quash the proceedings and the decision of the Estates Abolition Tribunal at Madurai dated 22nd May 1950 in Revenue appeal No. 54 of 1950. The only ground on which the writ is sought is that only two members of the Tribunal heard and disposed of the appeal filed by the petitioner under S. 9 (4) of Madras Act XXVI of 1948 when the tribunal as constituted by the Government consisted of three members. The petitioner is a mortgagee of a village in Ramnad taluk. The Settlement Officer Ramnad, acting under S. 9 of Madras Act XXVI of 1948 held an enquiry and declared the village not to be an inam estate as defined in S. 2 (7) of the said Act. Against his decision there was an appeal to the Estates Abolition Tribunal at Madurai by a ryot of the village. Two members of the Tribunal set and heard the appeal and by their judgment dated 22nd May 1950 reversed the decision of the Settlement Officer and declared the village to be an inam village.

(2) The following are the provisions of Madras Act XXVI of 1948 material for disposal of the contention raised in this case. Section 2 (14) defines Tribunal as "a tribunal constituted under S. 8 and having jurisdiction". Section 8 provides for the constitution of tribunals for certain of the purposes of the Act, and runs thus:

- "1. The Government shall constitute as many tribunals as may be necessary for the purposes of this Act.
2. Each Tribunal shall consist of three members; one of them (who shall be its chairman) shall be a District Judge or an officer eligible to be appointed as a District Judge, another shall be a Subordinate Judge or an officer eligible to be appointed as a Subordinate Judge, and the third shall be a revenue Divisional Officer or an officer eligible to be appointed as a Revenue Divisional Officer.
3. Each Tribunal shall have such jurisdiction, and over such estates or parts thereof, as the Government may, by notification from time to time, determine.
4. Every Tribunal shall have all the powers of a civil court to compel the attendance of witnesses and the production of documents."

(3) Under S. 9 (4) (a) any person deeming himself aggrieved by a decision of the settlement Officer under sub-sec. (3) may appeal to the Tribunal. Where any such appeal is preferred the Tribunal after notice to the interested parties, and after giving them a reasonable opportunity of being heard, shall give its decision. (Section 9 (4) (b)). Besides the jurisdiction to decide appeals from the decision of the Settlement Officer under S. 9, the Tribunal is also entrusted with several important duties and for carrying them out large powers have been conferred on the Tribunals. Sec. 67 empowers the Government to make rules to carry out the purposes of the Act, and in particular such rules may provide for, inter alia,

"(b) the procedure to be followed by the Tribunals, special Tribunal, authorities and officers appointed, or having jurisdiction, under this Act."

Purporting to act in exercise of this power the following rules have been made and published by the Government in the following notification:

"In exercise of the powers conferred by Sec. 67 (1) and (2) (b) of the Madras Estates (Abolition and Conversion into Ryotwari) Act, 1948, Madras Act XXVI of 1948, His Excellency the Governor of Madras hereby makes the following rules in regard to the procedure to be followed by the Tribunals constituted under S. 8 of that Act:

RULES

1. Not less than two members shall be necessary to constitute a sitting of a Tribunal.

2. All questions arising for the decision of a Tribunal, in any matter before it, shall be decided according to the opinion of the majority of the members. If any matter has been heard by only two of the members and the members are divided in opinion as to the decision to be given the matter shall be referred to the third member and decided according to the opinion which along with his constitute the opinion of the majority.

3. When the Chairman of a Tribunal is ill or absent for any other reason the Second Judicial Member of the Tribunal shall act as the Chairman."

(4) It was contended on behalf of the petitioner that the above rules, in so far as they purport to authorise two members of a Tribunal to sit and dispose of matters arising for the decision of the Tribunal are invalid as being ultra vires the provisions of the Act. In our opinion on a plain reading of the language of the material sections this contention must prevail. Under S. 9 (4) (b) it is the "Tribunal" which must hear and give its decision in an appeal preferred to it under S. 9 (4) (a). The Tribunal, according to the definition, means a Tribunal constituted under S. 8 and under S. 8 (2) it is expressly provided that each Tribunal shall consist of three members. When the substantive provision in the Act clearly lays down that the Tribunal shall consist of three members it is not open for the Government to provide by a rule that a Tribunal may consist of less than three members.

(5) We find support for this view in the observations which occur in the recent decision of the Supreme Court in — 'the United Commercial Bank Ltd. v. Their Workmen', 1951 SCR 380. That case dealt with the validity of an award made by an Industrial Tribunal under the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947. The Central Government constituted an Industrial Tribunal consisting of A, B and C, for deciding certain disputes and the Tribunal commenced its sittings in September 1949. On 23rd November 1949 the services of C one of the members of the Tribunal were required for some other purpose and he accordingly ceased to take part in the sittings of the Tribunal. The remaining members continued to sit and hear the disputes. In February 1950 C returned and began to sit again with the other two members and hear the further proceedings in the case. Some awards were made by A and B before C returned and some awards were made after his return by all the three together. It was held by a majority of their Lordships, that all the awards were void. It was held that the two remaining members were not a duly constituted Tribunal and the duty to work and decide was the joint responsibility of all the three members who originally constituted the Tribunal and the matter was one of complete absence of jurisdiction. Section 7 of the Industrial Disputes Act provides inter alia that the Government may constitute one or more Industrial Tribunals for the adjudication of industrial disputes and that a Tribunal shall consist of such number of members as the appropriate Government thought fit, and where the Tribunal consists of two or more members one of them shall be appointed as the Chairman. S. 8 (1) runs thus:

"If the services of the Chairman of a Board or the Chairman or other member of a court or Tribunal cease to be available at any time, the appropriate Government shall in the case of a Chairman, and may in the case of any other member, appoint another independent person to fill the vacancy, and the proceedings shall be continued before the Board, Court or Tribunal so reconstituted."

Their Lordships held that there was no appointment as contemplated by S. 8 (1) and, therefore, the Tribunal was not a duly constituted one after C left the Tribunal and even after he joined again.

Kania C. J. in dealing with the effect of the relevant provisions said at page 390:

"Section 15 of the Act provides that when an Industrial dispute has been referred to a Tribunal for adjudication, it shall hold its proceedings expeditiously and as soon as practicable and at the conclusion thereof submit its award to the appropriate Government. It is thus clear and indeed it is not disputed that the Tribunal as a body should sit together and the award has to be the result of the joint deliberations of all members of the Tribunal acting in a joint capacity."

Mukherjea J., though his Lordship was in the minority, observed as follows:

"Having regard to the language of S. 7 which admittedly contemplates that the members of a Tribunal must act all together, it would, in my opinion, be a perfectly legitimate view to take that if the Legislature did intend to make an exception to this rule, it would have done so in clear terms instead of leaving it to be gathered inferentially from the provision of another section which itself is not couched in unambiguous language."

"I am not impressed by the argument of Mr. De that a Tribunal is to be conceived of as an entity different from the members of which it is composed and whatever changes might occur in the composition of the Tribunal, the identity of the Tribunal remains intact. A distinction undoubtedly exists between the court and the Judge who presides over it, but if the constitution of the Court requires that it is to be composed of a certain number of Judges, obviously a lesser number could not perform the functions of the Court," and again,

"It is quite true that a quasi-judicial tribunal enjoys greater flexibility and freedom from the strict rules of law and procedure than an ordinary court of law, but however much informality and celerity, might be considered to be desirable in regard to the proceedings of an industrial tribunal, it is absolutely necessary that the Tribunal must be properly constituted in accordance with requirements of law before it is allowed to function at all."

The objection appears to us to be not merely technical. The three members of the Tribunal do not have the same qualifications. One is a superior Judicial Officer of the status of a District Judge, the other of the status of a Subordinate Judge, whereas the third member is an officer of the Revenue Department of the Government. Presumably, the legislature prescribed these different qualifications for the three members deliberately and on purpose made the officer of the status of the District Judge the Chairman of the Tribunal. The intention of the Legislature appears to be obvious that they wanted the Tribunal to consist of members possessing legal qualifications as well as an officer having knowledge of revenue matters. The rule which allows two members of the tribunal to function as a tribunal would be inconsistent with the express intention of the legislature contained in S. 8 (2), if, for example, in one contingency the two Judicial members alone sit without the assistance of the revenue member. Equally inconsistent, it appears to us, would be the result when the Tribunal should sit and dispose of appeals without the Chairman, a person who is more highly qualified than the other two members.

(6) If analogy can be of some assistance, reference can be made to S. 51 (1) of the Act which provides for a special Tribunal. It says that any person deeming himself aggrieved by any decision of the Tribunal under Ss. 43 to 50 may appeal to a special Tribunal consisting of two Judges of the High Court nominated from time to time by the Chief Justice in that behalf. Now, can the Government make a rule providing that one of the two Judges of the High Court so nominated may sit alone and dispose of an appeal as the Special Tribunal? Obviously not.

(7) It is no doubt true that when there is a right of appeal to the High Court all the Judges of the High Court do not sit and dispose of the appeal. But that is because of a special provision in the Letters Patent under which the High Courts were constituted, namely, clause 36 which declared that any function directed to be performed by the High Court in the exercise of its original or appellate jurisdiction may be performed by any Judge or by any Division court appointed or constituted for such purpose.

(8) We have no hesitation in holding that the rules empowering two members of the Tribunal to sit and dispose of matters which have to be decided by the Tribunal under various provisions of the Act are ultra vires and invalid. The impugned order was therefore passed without jurisdiction and must therefore be quashed. The appeal, of course, will have to be reheard by the Tribunal as constituted consisting of three members.

(9) This ruling of ours will have the effect of rendering not only the order in question in this application invalid, but every similar order passed by two members of the Tribunal. We think it unnecessary that there should be similar orders in each one of such cases. Those orders may all be treated as passed without jurisdiction and therefore void, and instructions may be issued for the reposting of the appeals disposed of by two members for fresh disposal according to law.

B/M.K.S.

Petition allowed.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 131 (Vol. 40, C. N. 38)

RAJAMANNAR C. J. AND VENKATARAMA AIYAR J.

M. J. Jamal Mohideen Saheb and Co., Petitioners v. The State of Madras represented by the Commercial Tax Officer, Madras, Respondent.

Writ Petn. No. 264 of 1952, D/- 9-9-1952.

Constitution of India, Arts. 226 and 286 — Petitioner assessed to tax under Madras General Sales Tax Act — Appeal — Notice of demand — Petition under Art. 226 — Maintainability — (Sales Tax — Madras General Sales Tax Act (9 of 1939 S. 12-A)).

Where, under the provisions of the Madras General Sales Tax Act, the Deputy Commercial Tax Officer determined the taxable turnover of the petitioner and assessed the tax payable thereon and the petitioner preferred an appeal against the orders of such officer and on receiving notice calling upon him to pay the tax the petitioner took out the writ challenging the validity of the Act and disputing the correctness of the assessment under Art. 286 of the Constitution,

Held that it was open to the petitioner to raise all questions as to the extent of his liability under the Act and under Art. 286 before the Appellate Officer and therefore the High Court would decline to entertain the petition. (Para 2)

Anno: C. P. C., Appendix III, Constitution of India, Art. 226 Notes 8 and 13.

C. Venugopalachari, T. T. Srinivasan and A. N. Rangaswamy, for Petitioners; V. K. Thiruvengkatachari, Advocate-General and V. V. Raghavan, for Govt. Pleader with him, for Respondent.

REFERENCES: Courtwar/Chronological/ Paras ('52) Writ Petns. Nos. 21 and 41 of 1952:

(AIR 1953 Mad 105)

2

('52) Writ Petn. No. 227 of 1952:

(AIR 1953 Mad 116)

2

VENKATARAMA AIYAR J.: The petitioners are a firm of merchants carrying on business as tanners in the City of Madras. The Deputy Commercial Tax Officer, Esplanade Division, by his order dated 28th February, 1952, determined the taxable turnover of the petitioners for the period 1st April, 1950, to 31st March, 1951, at Rs. 14,97,726-12-11 and the tax payable thereon was assessed at Rs. 23,401-15-8. After deducting a sum of Rs. 2,303-5-6 paid as advance tax, the balance payable by the petitioners was Rs. 21,098-10-2. Notice was issued to the petitioners in Form No. B-1 calling upon them to pay the tax and stating that in case it was not paid within the time limited, it would be recovered as though it was an arrear of land revenue and that further the assessee would be also liable to be proceeded against under Section 15 of the Madras General Sales Tax Act. The petitioners have replied by taking out this writ challenging the validity of the Madras General Sales Tax Act and further disputing the correctness of the assessment under Article 286 of the Constitution.

(2) Under the Act an appeal is provided against the orders of the Deputy Commercial Tax Officer and the petitioners have in fact preferred such an appeal. It is open to them to raise all questions as to the extent of their liability under the Act and under Article 286 of the Constitution before the Appellate Officer. We should therefore decline to entertain this petition. We may add that in writ petns. Nos. 21, 41 and 227 of 1952 (Mad), we have decided the points raised by the petitioners with reference to the validity of the Madras General Sales Tax Act and the scope and the operation of Article 286. Under the circumstances, the petition is dismissed.

(3) There will be no order as to costs.

(4) RAJAMANNAR C. J.: I agree.

A/V.R.B.

Petition dismissed.

*A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 132 (Vol. 40, C. N. 39)
CHANDRA REDDI AND RAMASWAMI JJ.

Thirumaleshwara Bhatta being minor by next friend Shanker Bhatta, Appellant v. Kashmutt Ganapayya and others, Respondents.

Second Appeals Nos. 1823 and 2212 of 1947, D/- 24-1-1952.

*(a) Hindu Law — Adoption — Adoptive father having wife living at time of adoption — Nomination or designation of deceased wife as adoptive mother.

Where the adoptive father has remarried before adoption and has a wife living at the time of the adoption, the deceased wife of the adoptive father cannot be nominated or designated as the adoptive mother of the adopted son. AIR 1933 Mad 550 (FB) Criticised. Case law discussed. (Para 29)

†(b) Hindu Law — Adoption — Adopter's wife dying before adoption — Right of adopted son to inherit property belonging to her.

Adopted son of a Hindu, whose only wife had died before the adoption, becomes the son of that deceased wife, so as to inherit the properties that belonged to her, and that the adoption would take effect as if the adoption had been made in the life time of the wife herself and, in the absence of any special custom, the adopted son will be entitled to divest all intermediate estates which had vested before his adoption subsequent to the death of the adoptive mother, either by inheritance or by the application of the custom of reverter. (Para 16)

K. Bhashyam and M. L. Nayak, for Appellant; K. Srinivasa Rao, for Respondents.

REFERENCES: Courtwar/Chronological/ Paras
(1900) 23 Mad 1: (26 Ind App 246 PC) 20, 21
(88) 12 Bom 329 20
(91) 18 Cal 69 21
(1864-65) 2 Mad HCR 367 20
(68-69) 4 Mad HCR 270 20
(95) 18 Mad 277: (5 Mad LJ 121) 20, 21
(26) 49 Mad 941: (AIR 1926 Mad 1203) 20, 21, 28
(29) 52 Mad 373: (AIR 1929 Mad 11) 21
(33) 56 Mad 759: (AIR 1933 Mad 550 FB) 20, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 28a
(37) 1937-1 Mad LJ 60: 59 Mad 1064: (AIR 1936 Mad 642) 28
(45) 1945-2 Mad LJ 228: (AIR 1945 Mad 487) 16

(46) 1946 Mad WN 447: (AIR 1946 Mad 187) 16

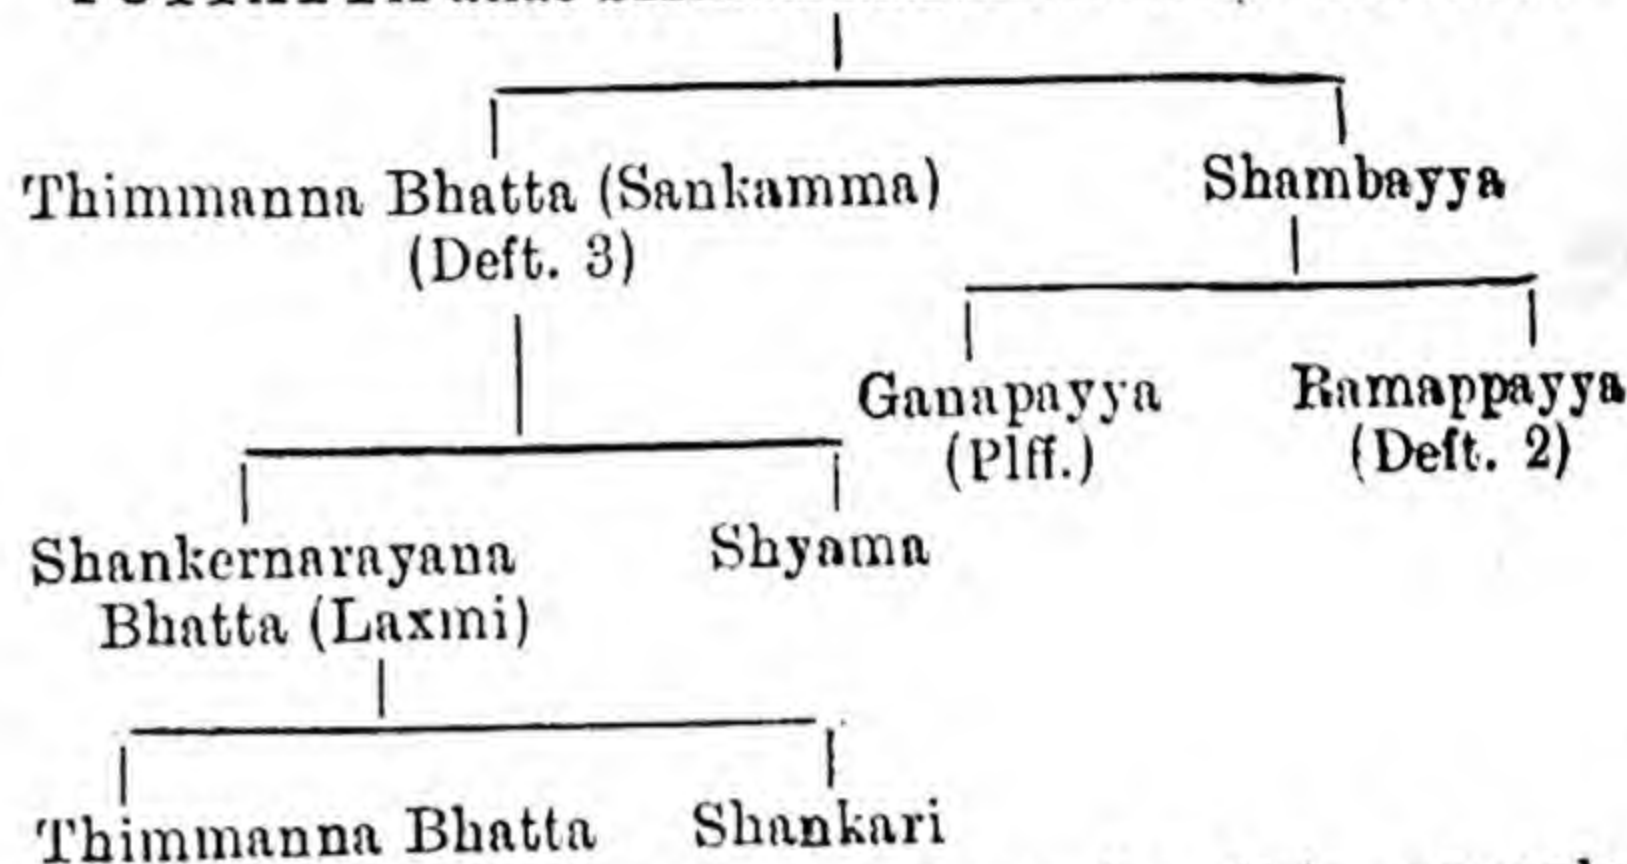

(47) A. S. No. 83 of 1947 (FB) (Mad) 24
(1853) 4 HLC 1: (23 LJ Ch 348) 28
2 Stra HL 91 21

RAMASWAMI J.: S. A. Nos. 1823 and 2212 of 1947:—

(2) These are two connected appeals preferred against the decree and judgment of the learned District Judge of South Kanara in A.S. No. 216 of 1945 arising from O. S. No. 76 of 1943 on the file of the Subordinate Judge's Court, South Kanara.

(3) The facts of this case can be easily followed if we take on hand the genealogical tree appended below:

PUTTAYYA alias SHANKERNARAYANA BHATTA

(4) The information given by this genealogical tree has to be completed by bearing in mind the following facts: Shankernarayana Bhatta died in 1927 and his widow Laxmi died in 1941. Shankernarayana Bhatta's son Thimmanna Bhatta had died unmarried during his father's lifetime and his daughter Shankari who was the first wife of the first defendant Shanker Bhatta died on 9-8-1943. Sankamma, the paternal grandmother of Shankari died after the disposal of the first appeal on 20th May 1949.

(5) It is unnecessary to re-set the multifarious controversies between the parties set out in the judgments of the lower courts because the contest has resolved itself now into a single question of fact and law regarding the two adoptions which are said to have been made in the case of the appellant in S. A. No. 1823 of 1947, namely, Tirumaleshwara Bhatta, minor by next friend Shanker Bhatta.

(6) The controversy before us is simple, namely, if either the alleged adoption of Tirumaleshwara Bhatta in the first instance on 12-7-1943 is believed or the second adoption dated 29-10-1944 is accepted as having been validly made with the adoptive mother as the then deceased Shankari, then this Tirumaleshwara Bhatta would be entitled to succeed and his opponents, the next reversioners of the deceased Shankernarayana Bhatta or the now deceased Sankamma, would not be entitled to succeed to the considerable landed properties situated in four villages and which are the root cause of all this trouble between the parties.

(7) There is no dispute before us that the next reversioners, namely, the plaintiff in the suit O. S. No. 76 of 1943 and the second defendant therein would be entitled to take all these properties on the death of Shankari and Sankamma but for the intervention which is set up by the husband of that Shankari, namely, that Tirumaleshwara Bhatta had been adopted by him (Shanker Bhatta) while his wife Shankari was alive, namely, on 12th July 1943, because Shankari died on 9th August 1943.

(8) In regard to this alleged adoption of Tirumaleshwara Bhatta on 12th July 1943, if it is believed as a fact no further point of law is involved because he would have been adopted to this Shanker Bhatta with Shankari as the adoptive mother. On the evidence, however, it has been found by both the courts below that this adoption set up as having taken place on 12th July 1943 is false. In these second appeals the learned advocate for Tirumaleshwara Bhatta once more pressed this point. He has not been able to convince us that the conclusion of the lower courts is incorrect. On the other hand, the lower courts have come to this conclusion on ample and satisfactory evidence which may be briefly recapitulated as follows. This Shanker Bhatta, the alleged adopted father, sought to prove this adoption on 12th July 1943 by means of oral, documentary and circumstantial evidence. (His Lordship recapitulated the evidence and concluded:)

(9-13) Therefore, the first adoption set up, as having taken place on 12th July 1943 during the lifetime of Shankeri, is false.

(14) This Shanker Bhatta sets up a second adoption of the same boy on 29th October 1944 and wanted to nominate or designate the deceased Shankeri as the boy's adoptive mother, though by this time this Shanker Bhatta had married and his second wife was living and apparently could have been present even at the time of this adoption. In regard to this adoption two questions arise, namely, did such an adoption take place and secondly, could this Shanker Bhatta nominate or designate his deceased wife Shankeri as the adoptive mother in preference to his living wife?

(15) Both the lower courts have found that an adoption took place on 29th October 1944 as alleged and that this is made out by the oral evidence of D. Ws. 4 to 8 and by the printed invitation cards Exs. D. 8 and D. 8a and the adoption deed Ex. D. 5. Therefore, the learned Subordinate Judge found as follows:

"I find that the adoption of the 6th defendant on 29th October 1944 has been satisfactorily proved."

In appeal the learned District Judge has observed:

"The learned Subordinate Judge has upon the evidence held that there was an adoption on 29th October 1944, and I concur with him, that as a matter of fact this adoption did take place."

Therefore, as a fact this adoption of 1944 can be taken as having been established and it was not challenged before us.

(16) On a point of law, however, the learned Subordinate Judge held that this adoption was invalid on two grounds. Firstly, that it was a 'Sagotra' adoption and that as the mother of the adopted boy in her maiden state could not have lawfully married the adoptive father, the adoption was invalid, and secondly, that this adoption cannot serve to divest the estate, which on the death of Shankeri had already become vested in other persons (be it the next reversioners of Sankamma). The learned District Judge rightly declined to uphold both these contentions. Firstly, in so far as Saghotra point was concerned, it was found as a fact that the 'Sagotram', namely, Gouthama 'Gothram', was not proved and secondly, it has been held in — 'Simhadri Raju v. Satyanarayana Pantulu', 1945-2 Mad L J 228, that custom sanctions the practice of 'Sagotra' adoption.

It was laid down that the prohibition contained in the rule of the texts that there can be no valid adoption unless a legal marriage is possible between the person for whom the adoption is made and the mother of the boy who is adopted, in her maiden state, is overridden by custom in the Madras Presidency. Secondly, the learned District Judge held, and we agree with him, that if the adoption is valid it can divest the estate which had already become vested in other persons on the death of the previous owner. The case to our mind in point is a Bench decision, by which we are bound unless we are prepared to refer the matter to a Full Bench which is not necessary in the circumstances of this case viz., in — 'Subramanian v. Muthiah Chettair', 1946 Mad W N 447.

It is laid down in this decision that an adopted son of a Hindu, whose only wife had died before the adoption, becomes the son of that deceased wife, so as to inherit the properties that belonged to her, and that the adoption would take effect as if the adoption had been made in the life time of the wife herself and, in the absence of any special custom, the adopted son will be entitled to divest all intermediate estates which had vested before his adoption subsequent to the death of the adoptive mother, either by inheritance or by the application of the custom of reverter. Therefore, if the adoption of the 6th defendant was a valid adoption in the sense that the 6th defendant would become the adopted son of the deceased Shankeri, it will, without the slightest doubt, serve to divest the estate which had become vested in the heirs of the last maleholder, be it limited as in the case of Sankamma or absolute as in the case of the reversioners.

(17) The question however is whether the adoption on 29th October 1944 was an adoption in the sense that the sixth defendant would become the adopted son of the deceased Shankeri in spite of the fact that the adoptive father, the first defendant, had re-married before the adoption took place and had a living wife on the date of adoption. For, there can be no dispute that if the adoptive mother cannot be held to be Shankeri, the adopted boy cannot succeed to the estate of Shankeri's father and vice versa.

(18) The learned District Judge came to the conclusion that the adoptive father had no right to name a non-existent wife as the mother of the adopted boy in preference to the one that was in existence and that therefore, though the adoption was valid it cannot be held that the adoptive mother was Shankeri. The resultant consequence was that the adopted son could not succeed to the estate of Shanker's father.

(19) This conclusion is attacked by the learned advocate for Tirumaleshwara Bhatta, Mr. Bhashyam and his case is that on the case-law developments that have taken place in regard to the theory of adoption, which is of a fictitious nature, the right to name a non-existent deceased wife in preference to the existing living wife is the logical extension. This is buttressed up by the following two lines of citations.

(20) FIRST LINE: The case law has gone to the extent of holding that a bachelor can adopt: — 'Gopal Anant v. Narayan Ganesh', 12 Bom 329; that a widower can adopt: — 'Nagappa Udapa v. Subba Sastry', 2 Mad HCR 367; — 'Chandrasekharudu v. Brahmanna', 4 Mad H C R 270; — 'Sundaramma v. Venkatasubbier', 49 Mad 941 and — 'Sowntharapandian v. Periaveeru Thevan', 56 Mad 759 F.B.; that a man with a plurality of wives can adopt even in opposition to his wife's wishes and foist an adopted son on one or more of them: — 'Annapurni Nachiar v. Collector of Tinnelvely', 18 Mad 277; — 'Annapurni Nachiar v. Forbes', 23 Mad 1 (PC); — 'Sundaramma v. Venkatasubba Aiyar', 49 Mad 941 and — 'Sowntharapandian v. Periaveeru Thevan', 56 Mad 759 F.B.; that a wife has no place in the ceremonies connected therewith though ultimately she will participate in the spiritual welfare assured to the husband by 'Tilothaka' and 'Pinda' offered by the adopted boy after her demise. The adoption is to the husband and not to the wife but in consequence of the superiority of the husband, by his mere act of adoption, the filiation of the adopted as the son of the wife, is complete in the same manner as her property in any other thing accepted by the husband: Vide Dat. Mima I, 22 cited on page 244 of Mayne on Hindu Law and Usage, 11th Edn. The principle deduced from these citations is that the adoption by the husband is to himself and he could filiate as he likes that son to his wife and make that son succeed to her properties.

(21) SECOND LINE: Having deduced these absolute powers of the husband to filiate or foist a son on his barren wife, the case law has gone to the extent in the second line of decisions of his being able to nominate or designate the adoptive mother for that boy. If he was a monogamist and the wife had died at the time of adoption, the deceased wife would be construed to be the adoptive mother on the principle that a boy cut off from his natural family should be found a mother whenever possible — 'Sundaramma v. Venkatasubba Aiyar', 49 Mad 941. If the adoptive father has two or more wives, that person whom he associates in the function will be the adoptive mother: — 'Annapurni Nachiar v. Collector of Tinnelvely', 18 Mad 277; — 'Annapurni Nachiar v. Forbes', 23 Mad 1 (PC).

If the man intending to adopt has two or more wives and dies giving a joint power to his widows to adopt and they adopt a boy the seniormost would, as the 'Dharmapatni' and on the principle that the adopted boy could not have more than one mother which is opposed to nature, be the adoptive mother in the event of an adoption: — 'Tirumangalaratnam v. Butchayya', 52 Mad 373. If the authority has been given to the widows severally, the junior may adopt without the consent of the senior, if the latter refuses to adopt: — 'Mondakini Dasi v. Adinath', 18 Cal 69. Where there are several widows, if a special authority has been given to one of them to adopt, she, of course, can act upon it without the assent of the others, and she alone could act upon it; Vide '2 Stra. H. L. 91' cited at page 205 of Mayne on Hindu Law and Usage, 11th Edn. These permutations and combinations establish the right of the husband to designate or nominate the wife who should be the adoptive mother of the boy adopted.

(22) The learned advocate Mr. Bashyam concedes that no decision has gone to the extent of saying that the husband who is adopting a son to himself has got the power to nominate or designate a dead wife as the adoptive mother of the boy in reference to a living wife existing and present at the time of the adoption (obviously for the purpose of altering the natural line of devolution of property and consolidating it in his own family) but that this designation is nothing more than a logical extension of the powers of nomination of the husband set out in the second line of decisions. In other words, the substance of Mr. Bashyam's arguments is that when the law has been swallowing a camel why should it strain at a gnat of this description?

(23) We regret our inability to accept the contention of the learned advocate Mr. Bashyam on account of the following considerations.

(24) First of all, the correctness of — 'Sowntharapandian v. Periaveeru Thevan', 56 Mad 759 (FB) has come to be doubted by very eminent jurists and in fact was the subject matter of a reference to a Full Bench in — 'A. S. No. 83 of 1947' by Govinda Menon and Basheer Ahmed Sayeed JJ. This matter, however, could not be disposed of by a Full Bench because the parties compromised and the hearing of this matter became otiose. The order of reference contains the following:

"In Mayne's Hindu law, tenth edition, pages 258 and 259 the learned editor discusses the question regarding the adoption by a widower as well as which wife happens to be the adoptive mother. At page 258 the learned editor observes as follows:

'The real difficulty however lies elsewhere: Where a person has no wife in existence at the date of adoption, can his deceased wife be said to be the adoptive mother? This question requires much more consideration than it has received. Where an adoption is made by a widow, it relates back to her husband's death; but where the adoption is made by a widower, there is no reason or principle why it should date back to an earlier date such as the death of his wife. The Dattaka Mimamsa contemplates a living wife and not one who is dead. It is imposing a fiction upon a fiction to say, either that the wife must be deemed to be alive at the date of the adoption, or that the adoption should relate back to the moment of her death. For the legal fiction of maternity, there must be a wife in existence at the time of the adoption to whom the law can point as the mother.

For the adoption is to the husband, and not to her. But in consequence of the superiority of the husband, by his mere act of adoption, the filiation of the adopted as son of the wife, is complete in the same manner as her property, in any other thing accepted by the husband". This passage is conclusive to show that the acquirer of the property in the son must be a living person. So too, if a bachelor makes an adoption as he is entitled to do, the fiction of maternity has no scope and it is impossible to constitute the wife he may marry thereafter, as the legal mother of the adopted boy. She might not have even been in existence at the date of adoption. The simpler and more logical conclusion appears to be that a person can be the mother of the adopted boy when she is in existence as a wife at the date of the adoption, whether or not, she consents to it."

(25) The editor remarks in the foot-note, "Ramesam J.'s dictum in — 'Sowndarapandian v. Periaaveeru Thevan', 56 Mad 759 (F B). "Nor is there any need to rely on any theory of the adoption relating back to Kothai Ammal's lifetime "proceeds upon a misconception."

(26) Another equally eminent authority has also criticised the correctness of the decision in — 'Sowntharapandian v. Periaaveeru Thevan', 56 Mad 759 (FB). Sir M. Venkatasubba Rao, after his retirement from the High Court of Madras, in reviewing Mayne's Hindu law, 10th Edn., observed as follows:

"By way of refreshing contrast, the criticism of the Full Bench decision in — 'Sowntharapandian v. Periaaveeru Thevan', 56 Mad 759 (FB) is liberal in outlook. That the adopted son of a widower becomes the son of his deceased wife is a rule that outrages both reason and natural feeling. To suppose that the deceased wife is alive, or to relate back the adoption to the moment of her death, as the editor rightly points out, is to impose a fiction upon a fiction. The absurdity of invoking the fiction of maternity in the case of a bachelor who first adopts and then marries is patent."

(27) We cannot, as was the case also with our learned brethren Govinda Menon and Basheer Ahmed Sayeed JJ., ignore that circumstance that two eminent jurists late Mr. S. Srinivasa Aiyangar and Sir M. Venkatasubba Rao were of the opinion that — 'Sowntharapandian v. Periaaveeru Thevan', 56 Mad 759 (FB) had not been correctly decided. We would have referred this matter to a Full Bench but for the circumstances that on the footing that — 'Sowndarapandian v. Periaaveeru Thevan', 56 Mad 759 (F B) has been correctly decided the extension which the learned advocate Mr. Bashyam asks for is not deducible from the 'ratio decidendi' in that case.

(28) In fact — 'Sowntharapandian v. Periaaveeru Thevan', 56 Mad 759 (FB) following the earlier decision of — 'Sundaramma v. Venkatasubbier', 49 Mad 941 which for the purpose of our argument can be considered to constitute one group, contained observations showing the need for caution in imposing fiction upon fiction in developing the fictitious theory of adoption. It is a salutary principle right through that the adopted son is after all a son by fiction only. To adopt the words of Lord Truro in — 'Egerton v. Brownlow', (1853) 4 H. L. C. 1, uttered in another context, the fiction of adoption constitutes "a very unruly horse and when once you get astride of it you never know where it will carry you." The caution enjoined in — 'Subramanian v. Soma-sundaram', (1937)-1 Mad L J 60: 59 Mad 1064 at 1078 that "even a fiction cannot be carried to illogical limits" is too wholesome to be ignored.

And in this connection it has to be remembered and borne in mind that the text writers should not be taken literally and verbally because those text writers, for instance like Dattaka Mimamsa where it is stated about the wife of the adopter becoming the mother of the adopted boy independently of her volition, were only thinking of matters spiritual and in terms of perpetuation of the sacred fire (agnihotra), 'Shradha' etc. Otherwise, if we do not keep in mind this limitation there would be a complete perversion of the laws of inheritance. In a series of cases it has now been held by our court that more than one wife of the adopter cannot become the mother of the boy for the purpose of succession. Under the Shastras the theory of maternity arising in the case of all the wives of a person is based upon the spiritual aspect.

In fact Jagannatha has gone to the extent of remarking that if a son be adopted by a man married to two wives, he would have two maternal grandmothers and two sets of maternal ancestor; see Colebrooke's Hindu Law, 4th Edn. Vol. II. page 394. Similarly, Vyavastha-chandrika states that if an adopted son is received by none of the wives either in conjunction with or under the authority of the husband but by the husband alone, the adopted son should perform the 'Parvana Sradha' in honour of the ancestors of all such wives of the adopter: See Vol. II, page 147, verse 32. Therefore, unless we bear in mind the limitation, we would be creating confusion in regard to succession. So also if we literally accept these texts as not only covering matters spiritual but also matters secular, we would be making a mockery of adoption not by making it a substitute for the real thing, namely, the adopted son being the reflection of a real son, but a caricature of the same.

An 'aurasa' son if his father is married to two or more wives can only succeed to his own natural mother's properties and not be the heir of his step-mothers' properties devolving on them from their parents. Therefore when Mr. Bashyam asked for an additional fiction we must bear in mind these limitations and examine whether such an extension is based upon the two factors involved in an adoption, namely, the spiritual and the material one. But before examining this aspect of the case we shall draw attention to certain observations in — 'Sundaramma v. Venkatasubbier', 49 Mad 941 and — 'Sowndarapandian v. Periaaveeru Thevan', 56 Mad 759 (F B) which throw considerable light on the question to be considered. In — 'Sundaramma v. Venkatasubbier', 49 Mad 941, Phillips J. observed:

"The theory then appears to be that the adopted boy by a legal fiction becomes the natural son of the adoptive father and presumably also of his wife. The question here is not complicated by the existence of two or more wives."

In — 'Sowndarapandian v. Periaaveeru Thevan', 56 Mad 759 FB, Ananthakrishna Aiyar J. observed:

"In the case of plurality of wives, several tests have been indicated to find out the intention of the husband as to which of the wives should be the mother of the adopted son. In the absence of any indication by the husband himself just as, associating one wife with him in the act of adoption, or otherwise declaring who is to be the mother, it may be that the seniormost wife — 'Dharmapatni' — might be held to be the mother. If some wives be dead but others living other circumstances might have to be considered."

In other words, these two decisions contain cautions against extending the fiction and take on an additional fiction as now called for by Mr. Bashyam.

(28a) The 'ratio decidendi' in both these cases is that the adopted boy gets entirely cut off from his natural family, though we may not go to the extent of considering whether he is civilly dead and concerning which there has been a lot of controversy. Therefore, courts have felt that wherever possible a mother should be found for the boy in 'Suddha Dattaka' affiliation. That mother was described as "Pratigrahitri Yamatha" and this term has in its turn led to a lot of controversy and our court has considered the definition of this term in — 'Sowndarapandian v. Periaaveeru Thevan', 56 Mad 759 (FB) and Justice Ananthakrishna Aiyar has held that the expression means only the adoptive mother and not the woman who actually received the boy.

In the article "Theories of Maternal affiliation in adoption" contained at p. 21 of 1948-2 Mad L J Journal portion the learned author Mr. S. Venkataraman points out that it is noteworthy that the term has always been understood by scholars as referring to an adoptive mother generally and not carrying its etimological significance. This construction was evolved because as I have stated the endeavour of the courts has always been whenever possible to find a mother for the boy and on that construction it was possible to deduce that where a widower adopts, the deceased wife could by fiction be made the adoptive mother of the son adopted so as to inherit her father's properties.

(29) Could this be done in the case of an adoptive father who has remarried before adoption and has a wife living and who has no necessity to haunt for a mother for the adopted boy because there is one ready to hand. In our opinion there can be only one answer and it is the answer which has been given by the learned District Judge, namely, that the deceased wife of the first defendant cannot be nominated or designated as the adoptive mother of the sixth defendant.

(30) This is based upon a two fold reasoning. First of all the various fictions in regard to the power of a husband to designate or nominate a deceased wife or in the case of a bachelor a subsequently acquired wife to be the adoptive mother is based on the principle that the adoptive boy having lost his natural mother must be found a mother wherever possible and this is not the case here. Secondly, powers of preference of the husband can apply only as between the living wives of a person and not for elucidating the rights of a wife who had died prior to the adoption and a wife who is living at the time of adoption. The recognition of such a nomination would not give effect to the rule that when the first wife dies the next wife becomes the 'Dharmapatni' and in fact a wife has to be taken in order that acts of religion might be done properly.

So, the importation of the fiction will result in the anomaly, namely, that with reference to the adopter and his then existing wife the son is fictionally born in his family on the date of the actual adoption but with reference to the deceased wife he should be deemed to have come into existence on the date of her death, a different date; so much so the son comes into existence not at the same time as regards both the parents, namely, Shanker Bhatta and Shankeri but at one time with reference to Shanker Bhatta and his second wife and at another time with reference to the alleged adoptive mother Shankeri. Adoption ceases to be an imitation of nature but becomes a mockery of it.

(31) It is interesting in this connection to look into the Hindu Code, 1948, which has not been passed into law but is on the legislative anvil. It is printed as Appendix IV to Mayne on Hindu Law and Usage, 11th Edn. In S. 54 of the said Code it is stated that any male Hindu who is of sound mind and has completed the age of eighteen years has the capacity to take a son in adoption but cannot do so except with the consent of his wife or, if he has more than one wife, except with the consent of at least one of such wives. In S. 70 of the said Code it is stated that "where a Hindu who has a wife living adopts a son, she shall be deemed to be the adoptive mother" and

"where a Hindu has more than one wife living, that wife in association with whom or with whose consent he makes the adoption, or if more than one wife has been so associated or has so consented, the seniormost in marriage among the wives so associated or consenting shall be deemed to be the adoptive mother, and the other wives the step-mothers, of the adopted son. Where a widower adopts at any time after his wife's death, the wife who died last immediately preceding the adoption, shall be deemed to be the adoptive mother, and any other predeceased wife or any wife subsequently married by him shall be deemed to be the step mother of the adopted son. Where a bachelor adopts, any wife subsequently married by him shall be deemed to be step-mother of the adopted son."

There can be no dispute that these sections are the embodiment of the case-law as it now stands and the progress which is sought to be embodied. It will be noticed that the framers of the Code have not thought fit to apply the extension now sought for as it is opposed to both the spirit and of the texts as well as the limitations placed by case-law in regard to this thorny subject of adoption by the male.

(32) In the result, it follows that the decree and judgment of the lower appellate court has got to be set aside because Sankamma has subsequently died and there is no impediment to the reversioners' claim and the decree and judgment of the learned Subordinate Judge has got to be affirmed, though on different grounds. The second appeal by Tirumaleshwara Bhatta (S. A. No. 1823 of 1947) is dismissed and the second appeal by the reversioners (S. A. No. 2112 of 1947) is allowed.

(33) The reason which induced the learned District Judge to dismiss the action was that it was too premature as Sankamma was alive at the date of the suit and the date of first appeal. Subsequent to the filing of the appeal here the impediment has been removed by the death of Sankamma. Therefore it follows that the plaintiffs are entitled to a decree in terms of the learned Subordinate Judge's findings, but as regards mesne profits we direct that the plaintiffs be entitled to a decree only from the date of the death of Sankamma, that is, 20th May 1949. Each party to bear its own costs throughout.

A/V.R.B.

Order accordingly.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 137 (Vol. 40, C. N. 40)

RAMASWAMI J.

In re, V. V. Satyanarayanamurthy, Petitioner.
Criminal Revn. Case No. 603 of 1952 and Criminal Revn. Petn. No. 499 of 1952, D/- 23-7-1952.

Prevention of Corruption Act (1947) S. 5(1) (c) — Section does not pro tanto repeal S. 409 Penal Code — (Penal Code (1860) Ss. 5, 41 and 409). AIR 1952 Punjab 89 Dissented from. Case law reviewed. (Paras 3, 4)

Anno: Penal Code, S. 5 N. 1; S. 41 N. 1; S. 409 N. 1.

Adavi Rama Rao, for Petitioner.

REFERENCES: Courtwar/Chronological/ Paras
5 NWP 49

('32) AIR 1932 All 18: (33 Cri LJ 236)	5
('32) AIR 1932 All 69: (33 Cri LJ 309)	4
('95) 22 Cal 131	4
('07) 11 Cal WN 100: (4 Cri LJ 439)	4, 5
('67) 4 Myn Cri 17: (8 WR Cr 55)	4
('83) 6 Mad 249: (1 Weir 89)	5
('29) 52 Mad 79: (AIR 1928 Mad 1235: 30 Cri LJ 432)	4
('52) AIR 1952 Punj 89: (1952 Cri LJ 316)	3

ORDER: This is a revision petition sought to be filed against the affirming judgment of the learned Sessions Judge of Krishna in C.A. No. 17 of 1952 confirming the conviction and sentence of the Additional First Class Magistrate of Vijayawada in C. C. No. 432 of 1950.

(2) The facts of the case have been fully set out in the judgments of the lower courts and the record shows that there was valid, acceptable, and adequate evidence for the conviction that followed and the sentence is also found to be appropriate. Therefore, there are no grounds to interfere in regard to the merits as well as the extent of the sentence.

(3) The substantial point of law taken before me is the contention based upon the decision of the Punjab High Court in — 'The State v. Gurcharan Singh', AIR 1952 Punj 89, wherein it was held that S. 5 (1) (c) of Act II of 1947 repealed 'pro tanto' S. 409 I. P. C. But with greatest respect for the decision, I find no reasons whatsoever for holding that S. 5 (1) (c) of the Prevention of Corruption Act repeals S. 409 I. P. C.

(4) A "Special law" is a law applicable to a particular subject: see S. 41 I. P. C. Under S. 5 I.P.C., no special law is repealed, varied, suspended or affected by the enactment of the Indian Penal Code. Although an offence is expressly made punishable by a special or local law, it will be also punishable under the Penal Code, if the facts come within the definition of the Code: — 'The Queen v. Ramachandrappa', 6 Mad 249. The general principle of law is that the Penal Code would apply if the acts fall within the Indian Penal Code though there may be specific offences and penalties under the special Act. Accordingly, the High Court of Madras held that a prisoner might be punished under Section 465 I. P. C. for making a false declaration under S. 5 of Act X of 1841 (Ship Register), though a specified penalty is provided by S. 23 of that Act. (See Rulings of 1865 on Sec. 5). There have been similar decisions in regard to other special Acts. It is enough to cite a few cases. In regard to offence under Indian Penal Code and Provincial Insolvency Act, see — 'Queen v. Ramachandrappa', 6 Mad 249; for offences under Local Boards Act and Indian Penal Code, see — 'Molaiappa Goundan v. Emperor', 52 Mad 79; for conviction under Indian Penal Code though offence falls within purview of Motor Vehicles Act also, see — 'Jiwa Ram v. Emperor', AIR 1932 All 69; for offences under Salt Act and Indian Penal Code, see — 'Emperor v. Joti Prasad', AIR 1932 All 18; for Indian Railways Act and Indian Penal Code, see — 'Kuloda Prosad Mazumdar v. Emperor', 11 Cal W N 100 distinguished — 'Chandi Pershad v. Abdur Rahman', 22 Cal 131, wherein it was held that a special penal provision as in the Railways Act would not always exclude the operation of the Penal Code.

The most familiar example however is of the identical provisions contained in the Indian Penal Code regarding rash and negligent driving and under the Motor Vehicles Act. Thus where the accused while driving a motor car on the wrong side of the road and at a blind corner between two roads of considerable traffic came into collision with a motor bicycle and caused damage to the side car of the bicycle it was held that the accused was guilty of an offence under S. 279 I. P. C. and the sentence of three months' rigorous imprisonment served on the accused by the lower court was upheld. It was argued on behalf of the accused in this case that the more appropriate section would be S. 59 of the Motor Vehicles Act but the Judges remarked that the offence committed by the accused was serious and that the mere fact that the Motor Vehicles Act also contained a provision for dealing with offences of this nature would not exclude the operation of the Indian Penal Code. Therefore, it is idle to contend that a special law repeals the provisions of the Indian Penal Code because both of them deal with offences arising under both the Acts.

(5) There are however two important restrictions. No prosecution under the Special law is admissible if it appears upon the whole frame of the Special Act that it was intended to be complete in itself and to be enforced by the penalties created by it. See — 'Chandi Pershad v. Abdur Rahman', 22 Cal 131 at p. 138. The court of session has jurisdiction to hear appeals on sentences passed by a Magistrate under such special and local laws (Rulings of Madras High Court, 1865, on S. 409 CrI. P. C. Act XXV of 1861); and conversely, it is no reason for quashing a conviction under a special law, for instance, under S. 29 of Act V of 1861 (General police), that the facts would constitute an offence punishable under the Penal Code: — 'Kasimuddin in re', 4 Myn CrI. 17. If the magistrate proceeds under the Penal Code it is better to drop the charge under the local Act. But secondly, a person cannot be punished under both the Penal Code and the Special law for the same offence. If an offence under a special law is likewise one under the Penal Code it is punishable either under the special law or under the Code as laid down in — 'Queen v. Ramachandrappa', 6 Mad 249 and — 'Kasimuddin in re', 4 Myn. CrL. 17; but of course not under both as laid down in — 'Rex v. Husson Ali', 5 N. W. P. 49. See also S. 26 of the General Clauses Act X of 1897, viz., where an act or omission constitutes an offence under two or more enactments the offender is liable to be prosecuted and punished under either or any of those enactments but shall not be liable to be punished twice for the same act or omission.

(6) Therefore, there are no grounds to interfere in revision and this revision case is dismissed.

A/R.G.D.

Revision dismissed.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 138 (Vol. 40, C. N. 41)

MACK AND CHANDRA REDDI JJ.

In re Ramaswami Reddiar and another, Appellants.

Criminal Appeals Nos. 655 and 656 of 1951, D/- 22-8-1952.

†(a) Criminal P. C. (1898) Ss. 164, 176(1), 364 and 533(1) — Who can record statement or confession — Magistrate holding inquest under S. 176 — Non-compliance with S. 364.

It cannot be said that no Magistrate can ever record a confession from an accused person except in strict conformity with S. 164. Section 164 does not mean that a Magistrate of the second class not empowered under S. 164 Cr. P. C. and a Magistrate of the third class can under no circumstances record or give oral evidence of a confession made to them. Thus a Magistrate holding an inquest under S. 176 and not empowered to record confessions under S. 164 can record a confession, as the powers under S. 176(1) include the power of taking down any statement, whether it be a confession or not, from any person who knows anything about the cause of death. It is not necessary for the Magistrate to immediately send the accused to a Magistrate empowered to record confessions under S. 164. The confession should be recorded in the form of questions and answers as required by S. 364; but the failure to comply with this provision may, in the circumstances of a case, be curable under S. 533(1). AIR 1936 PC 253(2), Explan. and Disting.

(Paras 14, 16 and 20)

Anno: Cr. P. C., S. 164 N. 3. Pl. 7; S. 364 N. 1; S. 533 N. 4.

(b) Criminal P. C. (1898) S. 164 — Scope of section.

Section 164 Cr. P. C. comes into play when during an investigation an accused is formally brought before a Magistrate for the purpose of recording his confession.

(Para 18)

Anno: Cr. P. C., S. 164 N. 1.

(c) Evidence Act (1872), S. 21 — Confession — Magistrate holding inquest under S. 176, Cr. P. C. recording confession — Admissibility — (Criminal P. C. (1898) Ss. 164 and 176).

Per Chandra Reddy J.: A statement made to a Magistrate holding an inquest under S. 176 is admissible under S. 21 of the Evidence Act. It follows that a confession recorded by a Magistrate holding an inquest under S. 176, Cr. P. C. and not empowered under S. 164 to record confession is admissible in evidence and can be used against the accused as it falls within the scope of S. 21, Evidence Act. (Para 23) Anno: Evidence Act, S. 21 N. 10; Cr. P. C., S. 164 N. 3.

R. V. Raghavan as Amicus Curiae, for Appellants; Asst. Public Prosecutor, for the State.

REFERENCES: Courtwar/Chronological/ Paras ('36) 17 Lah 629: (AIR 1936 PC 253(2):

37 Cri LJ 897) 15, 18, 19, 23

('51) Ghulam Hussain v. The King:

(51 Cri LJ 1552 PC) 23

('45) Govt. of Bombay v. Dashrath Ramnivas:

(AIR 1945 Bom 265: 46 Cri LJ 714 FB) 17

('39) 1939 Mad WN Cr 172: (AIR 1940

Mad 138): 41 Cri LJ 322 15

MACK J.: The two appellants, who incidentally bear the same name, have been found guilty under S. 302 I.P.C. of the murder of Sellappa Reddiar, an elderly man in the early hours of the 17th of May 1951 on a pathway leading from Paravoi village to Ariyalur, the nearest centre with a District Munsif's court and regular lawyers.

(2) The prosecution case is that the 1st accused and the deceased were proceeding together from their village of Vedakkalur to Ariyalur via Paravoi where they halted for some hours on the night of the 16th of May 1951. They left Paravoi together in the early hours of the 17th of August when about 1½ miles from Paravoi, the 2nd accused with implements for murder and burial by prior arrangement with the 1st accused came on the scene. Sellappa Reddiar was killed on the pathway and then buried about half a furlong away. It was not till the 24th of May seven days later that his body was dug up.

(3) The motive centres round the deceased's young wife Bangaru Ammal P. W. 2, now aged 18 whom he is said to have married when over 40 when she was only about nine years old. This girl came from a poor family of Paravoi. The 2nd accused is her elder brother. She grew into an attractive young woman and like the precious metal after which she was named, she was according to the prosecution case destined to lure men to murder and destruction. She joined her husband, who lived in Vedakkalur about six miles from Paravoi, about 3 or 4 years ago. It was not long before she and the 1st accused aged 30, a married man with two children, who owned a cattle shed near the deceased's house became enamoured of each other.

There is plenty of evidence including that of Bangaru Ammal herself as P. W. 2 to show that they were on terms of illicit intimacy in which Sellappa Reddiar ultimately acquiesced and he was at the time of the offence on terms of ostensible friendship with the first accused. The deceased appeared content so long as his wife stayed in his house, but about three months prior to the offence, she went to her mother's house at Paravoi where very soon she struck up illicit intimacy with one Sivalinga Padayachi (P. W. 3) a friend of her brother, the 2nd accused. Though she herself deposed that P. W. 3 was only a friend, P. W. 3 himself admitted intimacy with this young woman. So we have instead of the usual triangle, a quadrangle of a foolish old husband, a very young and attractive wife and two of her paramours.

(4) The immediate motive so far as the 2nd accused is concerned relates to property. Sellappa Reddiar had settled on Bangaru Ammal a house and some land. The deed has not been filed. Incensed at her leaving him, he sold 2½ cents of this land under Ex. P. 1 dated 7-5-51 to P. W. 9, who has also deposed to strained relations between the deceased and his young wife for about two years, and her periodic absence at Paravoi, where the 1st accused used to visit her. There is no reason to disbelieve the evidence of P. W. 9 that deceased told him he wanted to cancel the settlement deed and asked P. W. 9 for a letter to his advocate at Ariyalur. It was while the deceased was on his way to Ariyalur accompanied by the 1st accused to instruct an advocate that he was, according to the prosecution case, killed.

Paravoi is six miles from Vedakkalur and about 11 miles from Ariyalur. The route from Paravoi is by a pathway between 4 and 5 miles long which joins the main Perambalur-Ariyalur road. There is, in the first place, ample evidence to show that deceased locked up his house at Vadakkalur on Thursday the 16th of May, handed over the key to a Muslim woman, P. W. 8 and left the village along with the 1st accused, his wife and two children in a bullock cart. P. W. 8 understood that they were both going to Ariyalur. The deceased did not return again and after the corpse was found, she handed over the key to the village Magistrate. P. W. 1 who is married to the deceased's brother's daughter, is the only male relation of this lonely old man examined as a witness. There is no reason to disbelieve his evidence and also that of another Reddiar, P. W. 18, that the deceased left Vadakkalur in the company of the 1st accused.

(5) Any doubt about this is set completely at rest by two Paravoi witnesses, P. W. 4 and her son P. W. 5. (His Lordship referred to the evidence of P. Ws. 4 and 5 and proceeded:)

(6) It was not till the 22nd of August that some persons hunting hare including P. W. 11 saw a human leg protruding from the ground with crows and kites all round it. P. W. 12 took information to the village Magistrate of Varagannur, P. W. 13, who sent reports Exs. P. 10 and P. 11 to the authorities. When he went to the scene, he saw no sign of any protruding leg bone and at the place pointed out by P. W. 12 there was earth thrown over and stones placed. This evidence suggests that an interested culprit in the vicinity had tried to repair the ravages of birds of prey. Ex. P. 10 reached the Perambalur police station 15 miles away at 4 p.m. on 23-5-51. Another report Ex. P. 13 by the village Magistrate of Paravoi P. W. 14, who inspected the scene at 9 a.m. on a Vetti's report, was also despatched at 11 a.m. and reached the Valikondapuram police station 10 miles from the scene of offence at 5-15 p.m. A constable there P. W. 16 registered a death report and went that night to the scene of burial and claims to have guarded the spot with village menials.

Next morning, in response to reports and requisitions, there was a convegence of various functionaries to the suspected place of burial including the Circle Inspector of Perambalur who has not been examined as a witness, the Sub Magistrate, Perambalur (P. W. 10) who received the requisition Ex. P. 2 at 5-45 p.m. on 23-5-51 and also the Assistant Surgeon, P. W. 15. P. W. 10 says he arrived at the spot at 9-45 a.m. and P. W. 15 at 9-30 a.m. The body had been superficially buried with the arms folded across the chest and the legs bent under, the whole body wrapped up in a white lungi, M. O. 2. The whole of the face was eaten away. On the right ear, which was present, was a ear-ring set with a red stone, M. O. 1. In the pit was found one sandal (M. O. 3). Post-mortem examination by the doctor held on the spot disclosed two lacerated wounds each 1½" long and 2" deep in the region of the right thigh, fracture of no less than 6 ribs and fracture of the lower and upper jaws.

There was also what is described as a transverse cut over the middle of the thyroid cartilage which was hanging down. In the stomach was found one ounce of semi solid rice dhal and chillies bearing out the testimony of P. W. 4. There can be no doubt that the deceased died in consequence of a violent and murderous attack by both sharp and blunt weapons. The corpse was identified by P. W. 1 and also by Bangaru Ammal P. W. 2 herself as that of the deceased Sellappa Reddiar. Although the body was not identifiable and it has been urged that M. Os. 1, 2 and 3 do not conclusively establish its identity we are quite satisfied on the cumulative evidence in the case that this was the body of Sellappa Reddiar. It may even be impossible sometimes for relatives to identify a corpse exhumed after several days. But identity can be established by other evidence which is forthcoming in the present case in abundant measure.

(7) The inquest was held by the Sub Magistrate Sri R. W. Michael, P. W. 10 uptill 1 p.m. near the corpse. After that he moved with the Panchayatdars to Paravoi village and continued the examination of the witnesses in the chavadi from 3 p.m. until he closed the inquest at midnight. He recorded from the 2nd accused, who was produced before him a confession Ex. P. 6 inter alia to the effect that he had buried two weeding instruments and a sandal in his field. The Sub-Inspector of Valikondapuram who only reached Paravoi at 11 a.m. the morning after the other official accompanied the 2nd accused, who produced from his field buried there a left foot sandal M. O. 4, a weeding instrument M. O. 5, a stick M. O. 6 and a spade handle M. O. 7. M. O. 7, has a blood stain on it; proved on chemical analysis to be human blood.

It would appear that after these discoveries the Sub Magistrate examined the 1st accused, who made a long confessional statement Ex. P. 5. The learned Sessions Judge held that Exs. P. 5 and P. 6 were admissible in evidence. The Sub Magistrate, Sri R. W. Michael was not empowered under S. 164 CrI. P. C. to record confessions, though he was empowered to hold inquests. The admissibility in evidence of Exs. P. 5 and P. 6 has been elaborately argued before us by Sri Raghavan who has appeared amicus curiae for the two appellants and by the learned Public Prosecutor. Before dealing with this legal point, the other evidence in the case may be briefly referred to.

(His Lordship referred to the evidence in the case and proceeded:)

(8-12) Quite apart from the confessions Exs. P. 5 and P. 6 there is, therefore, a good deal of evidence both against accused 1 and 2 to prove their participation in this murder. Accused 1's total denial of all the evidence against him and his taking refuge in the unproved assertion that he never left Vadakkalur at all in the company of the deceased reinforces the prosecution case, once the evidence of accused 1's own relations P. Ws. 4 and 5 is accepted. So far as motive is concerned, that animating the 2nd accused is clear cut, solicitude for his sister and the preservation of the property settled on her. The motive so far as the 1st accused is concerned appears to be pure infatuation for Bangaru Ammal, as he had nothing very much to gain himself by killing this old man, who did not, according to the evidence, object to his amorous association with P. W. 2. The motive against the 1st accused is rendered weaker by the existence of P. W. 3 as another paramour of P. W. 2. But it may well be that the 1st accused did not know of this relationship, which P. W. 2 also denied, in the witness box. So far as motive is concerned, we are satisfied that the prosecution evidence discloses adequate motive so far as both the accused are concerned.

(13) We now come to the admissibility of the confessions Exs. P. 5 and P. 6. These are two long statements recorded by a Magistrate empowered to hold inquests under S. 176(1) Crl. P. C. who in any case mentioned in S. 174(a), (b) or (c)

"may hold an enquiry into the cause of death either instead of or in addition to the investigation held by the police officer and if he does so, he shall have all the powers in conducting it which he would have in holding an enquiry into an offence."

The Magistrate holding such an enquiry shall record the evidence taken by him in connection therewith in any of the manners hereinafter prescribed according to the circumstances of the case. The Magistrate examined other witnesses at the inquest on oath. When he came to the examination of accused 1 and 2, it would appear that on becoming aware that they were making confessions, he administered no oath to them in correct conformity with S. 342(4) Crl. P. C. after he completed the statements they were read out to the two accused, who signed them in the usual manner. The statements and confessions were recorded on police case diary paper.

(14) An extreme but in our opinion quite untenable position has been taken that no Magistrate can ever record a confession from an accused person except in strict conformity with S. 164 Crl. P. C. This section empowers all Magistrates of the First Class and any Magistrate of the second class, specifically empowered under it to record statements and confessions made in the course of an investigation in a particular manner. This however does not mean that a Magistrate of the second class not empowered under S. 164 Crl. P. C. and a Magistrate of the third class can under no circumstances record or give oral evidence of a confession made to them.

(15) The extreme position taken is sought to be founded on what appears to us to be a clear mis-interpretation of the Privy Council decision — 'Nazir Ahmad v. King Emperor', 17 Lah. 629 (PC). In that case the facts restricted the Magistrate clearly to the confines of S. 164 Crl. P. C. The investigating police took with them a First Class Magistrate and one, therefore, empowered under S. 164 Crl. P. C. to investigate a case of dacoity. The accused in handcuffs accompanied the party in another car. After sending the police to some distance, the Magistrate deposed that each of the accused pointed places out. He made rough notes of a full confession the convicted appellant made, destroyed them after dictating a memorandum to his typist and gave evidence in court on the basis of the memorandum which apparently also was filed. This was not even read out to the accused and not even signed by him. This was very obviously a case to which S. 164 Crl. P. C. had clear application, the provisions of which were rather blatantly disregarded by the Magistrate. It was in this background of fact that their Lordships of the Privy Council made the following dictum reproduced in the headnote reporting the decision, "it is a well recognised rule of construction that where a power is given to do a certain thing in a certain way the thing must be done in that way or not at all—other methods of performance are necessarily forbidden."

The effect of this decision was that a Magistrate, who was empowered to record a confession under S. 164 Crl. P. C. and grossly violated the requirements of that section, could not ignore such violation and give oral evidence of a confession he heard from an accused person in police custody in the course of an investigation. This decision was considered by Burn and Stodart JJ. in — 'Nainamuthu v. Emperor', 1939 Mad WN Cr 172. In that case, the accused after killing his concubine, appeared before a Magistrate and made a confession that he had killed her. The Magistrate took down the confession without observing any of the formalities required by S. 164 Crl. P. C. and it was held to be admissible in evidence as a first information of the crime. It was also a statement not recorded "in the course of an investigation" even to attract the operation of S. 164 Crl. P. C.

(16) The point for determination before us is really a simple one. In this case, the Magistrate who recorded these confessions could not have proceeded under S. 164 Crl. P. C. as he was not empowered to record confessions in cases to which that section applied. S. 164 is, therefore, for determination of the admissibility of these two confessions, quite irrelevant. The simple point we have to determine is whether this Magistrate who was holding an inquest empowered as he was to hold one under S. 176(2) Crl. P. C. recorded these confessions within the scope of these special powers. This inquest was held by him as "an inquiry into the cause of death" in addition to the investigation held by the Police officers, who were while the inquest was in progress, making their own investigation.

Under S. 176(1) Crl. P. C., the Magistrate shall have all the powers in conducting it which he would have in holding an enquiry into an offence. These powers in our opinion include the power of taking down any statement, whether it be a confession or not from any person who knows anything about the cause of death. Under this section, the Magistrate shall record the evidence in any of the manners prescribed by the Code. The only defect in the procedure adopted by this Magistrate holding the inquest appears to be that as soon as he was aware that these two accused were making confessions, he should have recorded their statements in the form of questions and answers as required by S. 364 Crl. P. C. We are unable to see any other defect in the procedure adopted by this Magistrate within his powers of holding inquest. Nor can we see how S. 164, Cr. P. C. which specifically empowers certain Magistrates to record statements or confessions under other circumstances can have the effect of destroying the powers of the Magistrate holding an inquest under S. 176 Crl. P. C. In this case the Magistrate could not have acted at all under S. 164 CrI. P. C. nor was it necessary for him even to look into the provisions of that section to guide him.

Mr. Raghavan has urged that as soon as the Magistrate realised that a confession was being made to him at the inquest, which he was not empowered to record, or even listen to, he should have immediately sent these accused to a Magistrate empowered to record confessions. Any such interpretation of S. 176(1) CrI. P. C. in conjunction with S. 164 CrI. P. C. would reduce the position of a Magistrate holding an inquest to one of helpless absurdity. In the case of a police officer holding an inquest on a confession being made before him, he can and does record it nor is he bound as a Magistrate is by the procedure prescribed by S. 176(1) CrI. P. C. but a confession made at an inquest held by a Police Officer is unfortunately clearly inadmissible in evidence under Ss. 25 and 26 of the Evidence Act. Where the Magistrate holds the inquest, the position is, of course, entirely different.

(17) The only relevant decision amongst many which have been placed before us is a Full Bench decision of the Bombay High Court, — 'Government of Bombay v. Dashrath Ramnivas', (AIR 1945 Bom 265 FB). That was a case in which a Coroner appointed under Act IV of 1871, applicable only to Calcutta and Bombay, recorded a confession under S. 19 of the Coroners Act without observing the formalities laid down in S. 164 CrI. P. C. and some High Court circulars. In an appeal against an order of acquittal at the High Court criminal sessions a Full Bench set it aside and ordered a retrial holding inter alia that the remark of the trial Judge that the Coroner ought to have complied with the formalities of S. 164 CrI. P. C., when he was not in law bound to do so, would amount to a misdirection because it was not improbable that the jury was led to think that the confession was not properly recorded and therefore not voluntary.

It is significant in this connection that under S. 20 of the Coroners Act for the purpose of S. 26 of the Evidence Act, a Coroner shall be deemed to be a Magistrate. According to S. 26, no confession made by any person whilst he is in the custody of a police officer unless it be made in the immediate presence of a Magistrate, shall be proved as against such person. The Coroner was therefore deemed to be a Magistrate for the explicit purpose of being able to record a confession made to him at an inquest, which could be proved at a subsequent trial. We can see no difference in the position of a Coroner under the Coroner's Act and a Magistrate holding an inquest under S. 176(1) CrI. P. C. in the matter of recording confessions.

(18) There is also a provision of law which is apt to be completely forgotten in excessive concentration on S. 164 CrI. P. C. and that is S. 163(2) CrI. P. C. which is to the following effect:

"No police officer or other person shall prevent by any caution or otherwise any person from making in the course of any investigation under this chapter any statement which he may be disposed to make of his own free will."

The extreme untenable position based on S. 164 CrI. P. C. would seek to make Magistrates of all persons (classes?) guilty of a violation of S. 163(2) CrI. P. C. by stopping such persons making statements of their own free will by unnecessary cautions, nowhere contemplated by law. If for instance the Magistrate holding the inquest had also been a First Class Magistrate or one specifically empowered to record confessions under S. 164 CrI. P. C. and had in fact acted under this section, and adopted the procedure usually followed in these cases of giving the accused time to reflect after removing him from all police influence without taking any statement immediately from him, he would have acted in direct violation of the positive requirements of S. 176(2) CrI. P. C. and also from a minor standpoint in violation of S. 163(2). The admissibility of a confession rests fundamentally on its spontaneous and voluntary nature, and is irrelevant under S. 24 of the Evidence Act, if it appears to have been caused by any inducement, threat or promise having reference to the charge against an accused person proceeding from a person in authority, and sufficient in the opinion of the court to give the accused person reasonable grounds for thinking that by making it, he would gain some advantage or avoid some evil.

The type of case to which S. 164 applies is that in which an accused person is produced not at an inquest but in the course of a police investigation, after he has made a confession to the police or has declared his desire to confess while in police custody before a Magistrate. Sarkar in his law of Evidence, 8th edn., page 241 has an interesting commentary on the effect of the Privy Council decision — 'Nazir Ahmad v. King Emperor', 17 Lah. 629 (PC), and on the extent to which previous decisions have been affected by that decision. We find ourselves in complete agreement with the following observation of his:

"It may however be observed that S. 164, Criminal P. C. comes into play when during an investigation an accused is formally brought before a magistrate for the purpose of recording his confession."

This being in accordance with our opinion, we would like to give it judicial endorsement. We are also in agreement with his further opinion to the following effect:

"Admission of guilt or of an incriminating fact may be made by an accused to a Magistrate in the course of a statement to him on occasions other than when he is so brought for recording his confession and such statements appear to stand at least on the same footing as an extra judicial confession to a third person or an admission under S. 21."

(19) The extreme position, which seeks to push the Privy Council decision — 'Nazir Ahmad v. King Emperor', 17 Lah 629 (PC), to logical conclusion on the basis of the headnote to which we have referred and one which in our respectful opinion their Lordships of the Privy Council never contemplated would in fact reduce a Magistrate to a far lower level than an ordinary citizen in the matter of deposing to confessions made to him. A confession may be made to a village magistrate and be admissible but made to a Third Class Magistrate, it should be unconditionally ruled out nor should he make any record of it.

If made to a First Class Magistrate or one empowered under S. 164, Criminal P. C. whether in his personal or official capacity, he cannot depose to it unless he has recorded the confession in strict conformity with S. 164, Criminal P. C. and produced the document required by law to be reduced to a particular form under S. 91 of the Indian Evidence Act in strict conformity with S. 164, Criminal P. C.

We have taken the opportunity to dispel with the able assistance of the learned Public Prosecutor to the best of our ability erroneous notions of the interpretation of the decision — 'Nazir Ahmad v. King Emperor', 17 Lah 629 (PC), in a manner which we think their Lordships of the Privy Council never contemplated the observations relied on there having been made in a totally different and particular background to which S. 164, Criminal P. C. was exclusively applicable.

(20) The legal point for determination, a really simple one, can be answered out of the Acts themselves, which create no difficulty. No decision has been placed before us which lays down that a confession made before a Magistrate holding an inquest but not empowered under S. 164, Criminal P. C. has been held to be inadmissible. We can only as we stated 'supra', find one technical defect in the procedure of the Sub-Magistrate, i.e., in his failure to record the confessions of accused 1 and 2 in question and answer form in compliance with S. 364, Criminal P. C. We consider this however in the circumstances of this case a technical defect which is curable under S. 533 (1), Criminal P. C. We do not think that the omission of the Magistrate to put and record preliminary questions to these accused asking them whether they knew anything about the cause of death has injured their defence on the merits.

We have no reason to doubt that the result of such questions being recorded would have been the same and that the accused would have made to the Magistrate before the 'Panchayatdars' the same confessions they did. There was absolutely no time for these two long detailed confessions, Exs. P. 5 and P. 6 independently made before the Magistrate and the 'Panchayatdars' to have been induced in any manner contemplated by S. 24 of the Evidence Act. They are only explicable on the basis of their being substantially true and voluntarily made by these two accused in sudden consternation at the discovery of the corpse and their interrogation by the police. The two confessions have been set out 'in extenso' in the trial court judgment. Except that the first accused sought to fasten culpability for the actual attack on the deceased on the second accused and the second accused on the first accused the long confessions are in conformity with the salient facts and evidence in the case.

We have no hesitation in finding on the abundant evidence in this case that accused 1 and 2 jointly murdered the deceased and disposed of his body. The learned Sessions Judge has seen fit to pass on the two accused the lesser punishment for a rather curious reason which cannot have the seal of our approval viz., that as there were no eye-witnesses to the actual murder, it was not certain from the evidence as to who dealt the fatal blows and played the leading role. With the observation that the appellants have been fortunate in being awarded the lesser sentence, we confirm the convictions and sentences and dismiss the appeals.

(21) We would like to place on record our appreciation of the arguments of Mr. R. V. Raghavan who has appeared for the appellants 'amicus curiae'. Unfortunately existing rules do not permit the payment to him of any remuneration.

(22) CHANDRA REDDI J.: I am in general agreement with the conclusions of my learned brother. But I like to add a few words on the admissibility of the two confessions, Exs. P. 5 and P. 6 made by the two appellants, having regard to the importance of the question. In the judgment of my learned brother, the contents of these two confessions and the circumstances under which they came to be made are set out. The two documents are very important as the convictions of the appellants to a large extent depend on them. If the confessions are receivable in evidence and if they have been found to be voluntarily made, the guilt of the appellants can be said to have been established beyond reasonable doubt.

(23) Counsel for the appellants contends that these confessions are not admissible in evidence as they were recorded by a Magistrate who was not empowered under S. 164, Criminal P. C. to record statements and confessions in the course of investigation. Although this contention is not altogether without substance I am afraid I cannot give effect to it. The Magistrate who recorded Exs. P. 5 and P. 6 did not purport to act under S. 164, Criminal P. C. as he was not one of those who was specially empowered to do so under that section and therefore they are outside the scope of S. 164, Criminal P. C. These statements were recorded by the Magistrate at the inquest which he was holding under S. 176, Criminal P. C. My learned brother has adverted to some of the cases bearing on the subject.

However I will refer to one decision of the Privy Council, viz., — 'Ghulam Hussain v. The King', (51 Cri LJ 1552 PC), which in my opinion gives support to our view. There it was ruled that a statement made to a Magistrate which did not amount to a confession being a self-exculpatory one could be used against the maker of it under Ss. 18 to 21 of the Evidence Act. This seems to be an authority for the position that statements of accused falling outside the purview of S. 164, Criminal P. C. are admissible as admissions within Ss. 18 to 21 of the Evidence Act. On the principle contained therein I must hold that a statement made to a Magistrate holding an inquest under S. 176, Criminal P. C. is admissible under S. 21 of the Evidence Act. It follows that Exs. P. 5 and P. 6 are admissible in evidence and can be used against the accused as they fall within the scope of S. 21 of the Evidence Act. In the result I agree that the appeal should be dismissed.

A/V.R.B.

Appeals dismissed.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 142 (Vol. 40, C. N. 42) RAMASWAMI J.

In re Sundara Nadar, Petitioner.
Criminal Misc. Petn. No. 1345 of 1952, D/-
20-8-1952.

Constitution of India, Art. 19 (1) (f) (g) and (6) — Explosives Act (1884), not ultra vires.

Explosives should not be manufactured and explosive substances should not be stocked except under conditions which would not be detrimental to the public safety, health, and convenience. Therefore, the restrictions imposed on the acquisition holding and disposal of property, that is to say, explosives and explosive substances and the right to practise one's profession, trade etc., in manufacturing explosives are restrictions permissible under Clause (6) of Art. 19 of the Constitution. Consequently, the Explosives Act is not ultra vires of the Constitution and can be justified under the proviso in Art. 19(6) of the Constitution. The Explosives Act does not constitute a violation of the freedom guaranteed under clauses (f) and (g) of Art. 19 (1) of the Constitution. (Paras 6, 7)

A. K. Annaswami Aiyar, for Petitioner; Public Prosecutor, for the State.

REFERENCE.....

149 ALR 1416

Para.
6

ORDER: This is an application under Article 228 of the Constitution of India for withdrawing C. C. No. 1419 of 1951 on the file of the City First Class Magistrate's Court, Madurai, to the High Court.

(2) The facts are: On 24th October 1951 on information received, premises bearing door No. 3, Veerabhadra Aiyar Lane, South Veli Street, Madurai, was searched after complying with the formalities prescribed by law. The third and fourth accused are living in door No. 3 and the first and second accused were found manufacturing explosives and on searching the premises articles which are obviously and exclusively required for the manufacture of explosives and components of explosive substances were found. These four persons have been charged, the first and the second for the manufacturing and the third and fourth accused for allowing 1 and 2 to manufacture explosives such as fire-works, crackers etc. in a residential locality without any licence or permit. I may add for the completeness of information that there is no dispute that these persons have no permit.

(3) The point taken now is that in charging these persons there has been infringement of fundamental rights given to citizens under clauses (f) and (g) of Art. 19 (1) of the Constitution of India.

(4) Article 19 (1), Clauses (f) and (g) state that all citizens shall have the right to acquire, hold and dispose of property and to practise any profession, or to carry on any occupation, trade or business.

(5) The point for consideration is whether the present case involves a substantial question of law?

(6) There is no substantial question of law involved as would compel the High Court to withdraw the case. It is no doubt true that under the Constitution of India any citizen has the right to acquire, hold and dispose of property in any place to which he goes or in which he resides and that place may be anywhere within the Indian Union and that the expression "property" includes every interest one may have in any and everything that is the subject of ownership by man together with right to freely possess, enjoy and dispose of the same: — 'Metropolitan Trust Co. v. Jones', 149 ALR 1416. It is also quite true that the right of every citizen to practice any profession or to carry on any occupation, trade or business is guaranteed under the next clause. But it is also equally obvious that these freedoms are subject to the same conditions and restrictions as the freedom vouchsafed under the other clauses of Art. 19, viz., that restrictions may be imposed upon the use of the property or in practising one's profession, trade, etc. in promotion of the public welfare, convenience, health and general prosperity. That explosives substances should not be manufactured and that explosive conditions which would not be detrimental to the public safety, health, and convenience requires no expatiation whatsoever. Therefore, the restrictions imposed on the acquisition, holding and disposal of property, that is to say, explosives and explosive substances and the right to practise one's profession, trade etc., in manufacturing explosives are restrictions permissible under clause (6) of Art. 19 of the Constitution. Consequently, it cannot be stated at all that the Explosives Act is 'ultra vires' of the Constitution and cannot be justified under the proviso in Art. 19 (6) of the Constitution.

(7) On coming to the conclusion that the Explosives Act does not constitute a violation of the freedom guaranteed under clauses (f) and (g) of Art. 19 (1) of the Constitution of India, there are no reasons whatsoever to withdraw C. C. No. 1419 of 1951 on the file of the City First Class Magistrate's Court, Madurai, to the High Court. This criminal miscellaneous petition is hereby dismissed and the lower court is directed to get along expeditiously with the disposal of the case which under the device of this petition has been getting protracted.

A/D.H.

Petition dismissed.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 143 (Vol. 40, C. N. 43)

RAJAMANNAR C. J.

AND VENKATARAMA AIYAR J.

P. S. Abdul Kadir, Appellant v. The Mahlarathul Kadiria Sabha Kayalpatnam, represented by its President Vilak Mohideen Thambi Kulam Sathak Thambi brought on record, Respondent.

Appeal No. 383 of 1947, D/- 1-8-1952.

(a) Muhammadan Law — Wakf—Alienation — Sanction of Kazi or Court can be given retrospectively.

Alienation of wakf property has to be sanctioned by Kazi. The sanction of the Kazi is evidently intended to be a safeguard against improper alienations. That purpose will be amply served by insisting upon sanction of the Court, either previous or subsequent, so long, of course as there is an assurance that the transaction could be examined on its merits, and there is an enquiry as to whether it is supported by legal necessity or benefit to the trust. The Court can give sanction with retrospective effect. 37 Cal 179 Followed. Case law Ref. Views of text writes Wilson and Ameer Ali not followed.

(Para 9)

(b) Muhammadan Law — Wakf — Muta-walli may lawfully change wakf property i.e. alter investment — Alteration has to be sanctioned by Court — Sanction can be given retrospectively — Alteration of property by selling it and investing proceeds in purchase of another property held beneficial—Retrospective sanction granted.

(Para 12)

K. Rajah Ayyar & R. Ramamurthy Iyer, for Appellant; B. Pocker, for Respondent.

REFERENCES: Courtwar/Chronological/ Paras
(35) 57 All 727: (AIR 1935 All 792) 5
(42) AIR 1942 Bom 21: (138 Ind Cas 439) 5
(10) 37 Cal 179: (3 Ind Cas 353) 5, 6, 7, 9
(32) 59 Cal 586: (AIR 1932 Cal 356) 5

RAJAMANNAR C. J.: The defendant in O. S. No. 58 of 1945 in the court of the Subordinate Judge of Tuticorin is the appellant before us. The suit was for the recovery of property consisting of a house and site in Kayalpatnam in Tirunelveli district. The suit property originally belonged to one Abdul Khadar who made a wakf of the same by a deed dated 14-6-1921, Ex. D. 2. The wakf deed was executed in favour of two persons, M. K. K. T. Ahmed Mohideen and Chinna M. K. Ahmed Moideen as managers of the Mahlara at Ambala Maricair Avergal Street belonging to the Kadiria Muslim community of Kayalpatnam south. The Kadiria Tharikh is a small sect of Muslims said to have been founded by a disciple of the Holy Prophet. The sect holds certain peculiar tenets and believes in the efficacy of zikir. This property was sold to the defendant by a deed dated 10-4-1941 for a sum of Rs. 1550 by Chinna K. M. Mahomed Labbai and Chinna A. K. Sheik Abdul Khadar describing themselves as managers of the Mahlara. It is common ground that with the monies raised by this sale the vendors purchased as managers and on behalf of the Mahlara property consisting of site and buildings in the town of Tuticorin for a sum of Rs. 1430.

(2) The plaintiff is the Mahlaratual Kadiria Sabha, Kayalpatnam, a society registered under the Societies Registration Act and is represented by its President. The plaintiff alleged that the affairs of the Mahlara for whose benefit the wakf had been created in 1921 were being managed by it since 1941 and that it is entitled to represent the Mahlara, that the sale in favour of the defendant was invalid and illegal as it was beyond the competence of the managers to sell the property which had been dedicated under a wakf, and that the sale was for inadequate consideration and was not justified by any necessity. The plaintiff referred to the purchase of the property in Tuticorin but refrained from making any statement regarding it. The defendant denied the plaintiff's claim to represent the Mahlara and its competence to maintain the suit. He asserted that the plaintiff Sabha did not represent the Kadiria community in Kayalpatnam. The main plea, however, was a justification of the sale in his favour. It was alleged by him that the building had deteriorated in value and was not in a sound condition, that a large amount of money would have been required for putting it in good repair but the Mahlara had not sufficient surplus funds to effect the repairs and that under the circumstances the persons who were in management thought it a most prudent act to sell away the property and to purchase with the sale proceeds property which was likely to fetch more income for the Mahlara & that the property purchased at Tuticorin did yield more income than the property in suit. It was also pleaded by him that ever since the Tuticorin property had been purchased the plaintiff had been in possession and enjoyment of it and had been collecting the income therefrom, and, therefore, the plaintiff was precluded from questioning the validity of the sale in favour of the defendant which formed a part of the same transaction along with the Tuticorin sale.

(3) The learned Subordinate Judge found that the plaintiff Sabha was not a de jure manager of the Mahlara and its property because the general body meeting at which its members were elected did not represent the entire Kadiria sect of Kayalpatnam, but it was a trustee 'de son tort' and as such entitled to file the suit for recovery of possession of property belonging to the Mahlara. He found that the suit property at about the time of the sale to the defendant was fetching only a rent of Re. 1 per mensem, that a portion of the western wall of the building had fallen down, that the roof of one of the shops had collapsed and another was about to collapse and that the Mahlara had no reserve or surplus funds from which the building could be repaired, nor was there evidence that the repair could be done within a reasonable amount. The entire sale proceeds had been invested in purchasing pucca house properties at Tuticorin which fetched a rent of Rs. 12 per mensem. He further found that the consideration for the sale in favour of the defendant was proper and adequate. On the question of law raised in the case the learned Judge was of the opinion that an alienation of wakf property could be validly made only with the prior sanction of the Kazi, or as the court is vested with the powers of the Kazi, with the sanction of the court, and that it was impossible for him to validate the transaction retrospectively merely because it was beneficial to the Mahlara, as he considered that the transaction was not strictly necessary. He, therefore, held that the sale to the defendant was not binding on the Mahlara. He also held against the defendant on his plea of estoppel. In the result he decreed the suit for recovery of possession, but dismissed it as regards the other reliefs.

(4) Mr. Rajah Aiyar who appeared for the defendant-appellant did not challenge the finding of the learned trial Judge that the plaintiff Sabha was entitled to maintain the suit as de jure trustee of the Mahlara. He urged before us two grounds, (1) that the retrospective approval or sanction can be given by the court to an alienation of wakf property if it was found to be supported by necessity or if it was beneficial to the trust and (2) that the plaintiff had accepted the benefit of the transaction which comprises the purchase in Tuticorin along with the sale to the defendant and was precluded from attacking the sale to the defendant, after retaining the Tuticorin property.

(5) The first ground raises an important question of Muhammadan Law on which there is no direct authority of this court. The leading decision on the subject is that of the Calcutta High Court in — 'Nemai Chand v. Mir Golam Hossein', 37 Cal 179. That was no doubt a case of a mortgage of wakf property, but the decision has been understood to apply generally to any alienation of wakf property. The learned Judges Mookerjee and Vincent JJ. after an examination of several texts, observe as follows:

"These texts indicate that property which has been validly dedicated as wakf cannot, unless the Mutavalli is expressly empowered by the deed of endowment to do so, be ordinarily sold or mortgaged. If, however, necessity is established and the permission of the Kazi is obtained, such alienation is valid. Some of the texts, however, indicate that the Mutavalli may borrow on his own authority if the Cadi happens to be at a distance..... This would seem to show that the previous permission of the Cadi is not a condition precedent, and Sir Roland Wilson appears to favour this view when he suggests that the transaction may be retrospectively confirmed by the court..... The texts, however, to which we have referred, indicate plainly that the consent of the Cadi is essential whenever he is available, and if so, there is no reason why approval subsequent to the transaction should not be treated as effective in the same manner as approval prior to the transaction. It is but rational to hold that the approval of the Cadi was deemed requisite, primarily with a view to make sure that the loan was necessary, and in this view approval, antecedent or subsequent, ought to be equally effectual."

So far as we are aware the soundness of this decision has not been challenged in any subsequent decision of any of the High Courts in this country. On the other hand, in — 'Afzal Husain v. Chhedi Lal', 57 All 727, this decision was expressly followed in so far as it held that the requisite sanction to validate an alienation of wakf property could subsequently be given by the court with retrospective effect. In — 'Sailendranath v. Hade Kaza', 59 Cal 586, the principle laid down in the earlier decision was again affirmed (See p. 611). In — 'Zafarbai v. Chhaganlal', AIR 1942 Bom 21, dealing with a long term lease of wakf property, Divatia J. took the same view. He said,

"I see no distinction in principle between antecedent and subsequent sanction in the case of a long term lease if a mortgage by a Mutavalli can be validated by subsequent sanction as in — 'Nemaichand v. Golam Hossein', 37 Cal 179 and — 'Afzal Hussain v. Chhedilal', 57 All 727. The test in both the cases is the same, viz., necessity or benefit to the institution."

Mr. Rajah Aiyar, besides relying on these decisions, also referred us to the opinion of text writers. Mulla in his Mahomedan Law, 13th Edn., states thus:

"A Mutavalli has no power, without the permission of the court, to mortgage, sell or exchange wakf property or any part thereof, unless he is expressly empowered by the deed of wakf to do so..... It has been held in Calcutta that a mortgage of wakf property though made without the previous sanction of the court may be retrospectively confirmed by the court."

In Tyabji's Muhammadian Law, 3rd Edn., we find the following summary of the law on the point,

"Unless the dedication or the court authorises the Mutavalli to sell or mortgage the wakf property he has no authority to do so; and where he does so he is guilty of a breach of trust for which he may be removed. The court may, if wakf land becomes unfit for the objects of the wakf, order its sale; or, in a proper case, for urgent necessity, empower or retrospectively approve and validate a sale, or mortgage, or a long or perpetual lease." (pages 657-658).

(6) Sir Ronald Wilson in an earlier edition (3rd Edn.) of his Anglo-Muhammadian Law was apparently inclined to the view that an alienation by a Mutavalli could be retrospectively confirmed by the court. This view of his was also relied on by the learned Judges in — 'Nemaichand v. Golam Hossein', 37 Cal 179 at p. 187. But in a subsequent edition the learned author corrected the impression and said,

"The learned Judge went on to say, 'Sir Ronald Wilson appears to favour this view when he suggests that the transaction may be retrospectively confirmed by the court'. My suggestion, however, (omitted in the present edition) was made with reference to leasing, not to mortgaging."

He pointed out that it was based on a passage in Baillie's Digest which did not seem to him subsequently to bear that construction. He then adds:

"It seems likely that if this loophole is left open the parties concerned will always be disposed to consider that the 'Kazi' is at too great a distance to be conveniently applied to, and mortgages of wakf property will have been placed practically on the same footing as mortgages of Hindu family property, namely, that the parties take the risk of being able to satisfy the court that there was a bona fide necessity, if the transaction is challenged."

We fail to see anything so startling in the result as appeared to Sir Ronald. There appears to us no reason why any substantial difference should be made between alienations of property belonging to Hindu religious institutions and Muhammadan religious institutions.

(7) Ameer Ali made strong adverse comment on the decision in — 'Nemai Chand v. Golam Hossain', 37 Cal 179 as follows:

"Speaking with respect, the view here expressed misses the principle underlying the rule of Mussalman Law. According to all the authorities the validity of a transaction creating a burden on a wakf depends on the prior sanction of the Judge, which is essential in every case and not as is said in the judgment merely 'whenever he is available'. The qualification of the law implied in these words, it is respectfully submitted is not warranted by the authorities for even the statement that when the mutavalli is at a distance from the Judge he may act of his own authority does not vary the law; it only throws the responsibility on the Mutavalli himself. 'Ex post facto' sanction was never contemplated by the Mussalman jurists. For the permission of the Judge was made an absolute condition to see not only that the loan was necessary, but also whether it was proper, that the terms were not onerous and there was no other mode of meeting the necessity." (4th Edn., p. 490).

(8) With due respect to the learned author we may remark that the Mussalman jurists could not have contemplated the Kazi ceasing to have the powers with which he was vested in their days and the substitution of the Court for the Kazi.

(9) Notwithstanding the opinion of the text writers, Wilson and Ameer Ali, we are inclined to follow the decision in — 'Nemaichand v. Golam Hossein', 37 Cal 179, which, as already mentioned, has been consistently followed in other courts. The sanction of the Kazi was evidently intended to be a safeguard against improper alienations. That purpose will be amply served by insisting upon sanction of the Court, either previous or subsequent, so long, of course as there is an assurance that the transaction could be examined on its merits, and there is an enquiry as to whether it is supported by legal necessity or benefit to the trust.

(10) We wish to observe further that in this case there is no alienation of wakf property in the sense that the proceeds of the alienation have been spent away and, therefore, are irre-coverably lost to the institution. In this case what has happened is a sale of a particular wakf property and a re-investment of the sale proceeds in another property. That this kind of transaction was contemplated and permitted by Muhammadan Law is clear from several authorities. In 'Raddu-ul-muhtar', Vol. 3, page 600, we find that in the absence of any power of sale expressly reserved in the deed of wakf the Kazi, if he deem it expedient, may authorise the sale of the wakf property and re-investment of the proceeds in any shape conducive to the proper maintenance of the wakf. The following is from Surrat-ul-Fatawa, pages 420-421:

"In the Fatawa's Sirajia it is stated that when the sale or exchange of a wakf property is distinctly advantageous to the wakf, the Kazi may direct it. For example, if no income is derived from the property, and somebody is anxious to purchase it, and in lieu thereof is willing to give such land or house as would yield an income for the wakf, in that case the exchange is authorised according to Abu Yousuf as well as Mohammed.

"Where the wakf property yields an income, but some person is desirous of exchanging it for another property yielding a much larger income, e.g. if the wakf property is a bazar situated in a lane and the person anxious to take it is willing to exchange it for a bazar situated in a better place, in such a case, but not otherwise the exchange is lawful according to Kazi Abu Yousuf; on(?) this is the practice.

In the Commentary of Nazim Wahbandi it is stated upon the authority of the Muhit and Kazi Khan that according to Imam Mohammed the Mutavalli is authorised to exchange for a better and more productive piece of land the one dedicated, if it has deteriorated in productive powers."

(11) To the same effect is the following passage in Fath-ul-Kadir (Vol. II, page 639):

"In the Fatawari Kazi Khan it is stated that the rule laid down by Abu Yousuf & Hillal is correct. So has Ansari declared that such a condition is lawful, but it cannot be sold (by the Mutavalli) without the sanction of the Judge. And when this matter is brought before the Judge and it appears to him necessary for the benefit of the wakf (that the investment should be changed), he should give the sanction."

(12) Ameer Ali in his text book, has summarised the result of the authorities thus:

"The general result of the authorities seems to be that the wakf (mutawalli ?) may lawfully change the wakf property, in other words, alter the investment provided he has reserved, at the time of dedication, power to that effect. Otherwise, no alteration can be effected without the leave of the Kazi or Judge, who has the power to authorise a change of investment whenever he considers it beneficial for the wakf" (page 436).

(13) No doubt, the sanction of the Kazi contemplated in these texts is sanction prior to the transaction. But we entirely agree with the learned Judges of the Calcutta High Court that no difference should be made between antecedent and subsequent sanction of the court which now takes the place of the Kazi.

(13a) The learned advocate for the respondent contended that on the evidence it could not be said that the transaction was justified because the state of the building was not so bad as to render it thoroughly useless, that even if repairs were needed much money was not necessary and there were surplus funds at the disposal of the Mahlara for the execution of the repairs. We were taken through the evidence on this point. But learned counsel for the respondent was unable to persuade us to come to a conclusion different from that of the learned trial Judge. We concur with the learned Judge who had the opportunity of seeing and listening to the witnesses, in his estimate of the oral evidence, namely, that the evidence on the side of the defendant is far superior to and deserves between credit than that of the plaintiff's witnesses. We also agree with him that the price fetched by the sale to the defendant was adequate and that the Mahlara had no surplus funds from which the building could be repaired and that the building was in need of extensive repairs which could not be effected with a small amount. The learned Judge was of the opinion that the transaction was beneficial to the Mahlara (see para. 47), but he thought that as the transaction was not strictly necessary it was impossible for him to validate it retrospectively. We think otherwise. On the facts and in the circumstances above narrated it was clearly beneficial to the Mahlara that the Kayalpatnam property should be disposed of and the proceeds of the sale invested in a more remunerative property. Admittedly the Tuticorin property brought more income to the trust. The case was eminently fit for the exercise of the power of the court to grant retrospective sanction. We accordingly give the necessary sanction to the transaction.

(14) In this view the suit must fail. It, therefore, becomes unnecessary to deal at length with the other grounds raised by Mr. Rajah Aiyar, namely, that the plaintiff Sabha is precluded from challenging the sale in favour of the defendant as it retained the benefit of the Tuticorin purchase. We are inclined, however to hold that it would be most inequitable to allow the plaintiff Sabha on behalf of the Mahlara to keep both the Tuticorin property and the property sold to the defendant. The Secretary of the Sabha deposed as follows:

"Tuticorin property belongs to the Mahlara now. With the sale proceeds of suit property the Tuticorin property was purchased..... I want both the properties, but I am prepared to pay the indemnity amount of Rs. 1550."

We are clearly of opinion the Sabha cannot be permitted to do this, that is, to keep both the properties.

(15) The appeal is allowed and the suit dismissed with costs here and in the court below. The Memorandum of objections is not pressed and dismissed. No costs.

A/R.G.D.

Appeal allowed.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 146 (Vol. 40, C. N. 44)
SATYANARAYANA RAO AND RAJA-
GOPALAN JJ.

Grandhi Ramakrishnayya and others, Appellants v. Grandhi Atchutha Ramayya and others, Respondents.

Appeal No. 523 of 1948, D/- 17-7-1952.

(a) Hindu Law — Partition — Mode of — Partition of bad debts.

An outstanding due to a family, although a bad debt, can be a subject of partition. The proper direction in such a case would be to order that this item should be sold in auction between the parties and the highest bidder should get the debt assigned to him, the purchase price being divided in proportion to the shares of the coparceners. (Para 5)

(b) Hindu Law — Partition — Minor — Notice and suit on behalf of minor by person other than lawful guardian.

A notice demanding partition issued on behalf of the minor by a person other than the lawful guardian as his next friend is effective in law to bring about severance in status from the date of the notice, if in the suit for partition it is ultimately found that the partition is for the benefit of the minor. AIR 1945 Mad 290 and AIR 1933 Mad 890 (FB) Applied. (Para 7)

K. Ramamurthy, for Appellants; N. Bapiraju, for Respondents.

REFERENCES: Courtwar/Chronological/ Paras
(34) 57 Mad 95: (AIR 1933 Mad 890 FB) 7
(45) ILR (1945) Mad 710: (AIR 1945 Mad 290) 7

JUDGMENT: There is an appeal by the defendants and a memorandum of cross-objections by the plaintiffs against the decree of the Subordinate Judge of Rajahmundry in the suit O. S. No. 126 of 1947 for partition. The first defendant is the father of plaintiffs 1 to 3. Plaintiffs 2 and 3 are minors represented by their next friend and brother the first plaintiff. They are the sons by the deceased first wife of the first defendant, and the second defendant is the second wife of the first defendant. The third defendant is the son of the first defendant, born on 15-11-1947 during the pendency of this suit which was instituted on 13-3-1947. The suit was preceded by a notice of 1-12-1946, Ex. B. 1, issued on behalf of the plaintiffs by their pleader in which they claimed a partition of the family properties into four shares and for delivery of possession of three out of them to the plaintiffs. In the suit, the plaintiffs claimed a division of the properties specified in A, B, C and D schedules into four equal shares and for allotment of three shares to the plaintiffs and also for recovery of profits of Rs. 1360 for 1946. The first defendant, the father, claimed in the suit certain items of property comprised in A, B, C and D schedules as self-acquisitions in which the plaintiffs were not entitled to any share. Those items are specified in issue 4 in the suit. He further resisted the suit on the ground, that the partition of the properties was not in the interests of the minor plaintiffs 2 and 3, and that the status of the family was not divided on 1-12-1946 the date of the notice and that it continued undivided till the filing of the suit.

(2) It was found by the trial court that the items claimed by the first defendant as his self-acquisitions were in fact joint family properties, as they were acquired from out of the nucleus of the ancestral property which came into the hands of the first defendant consequent on the partition between him and his brothers in 1931, as evidenced by the registered partition deed, Ex. A. 1. He, however, found with reference to item 13 of D schedule, an outstanding due to the family, that it was a bad debt and, therefore, it was not available for partition. On issue 2 he found that the interests of the father were undoubtedly adverse to that of the minor plaintiffs 2 and 3, and that in fact his whole conduct established that he was acting hostile to the interests of the minor plaintiffs. He, therefore, found that the partition of the family properties was undoubtedly in the interests of and for the benefit of the minor plaintiffs. These two findings were not challenged by the first defendant, in the appeal. The plaintiffs, however, claimed in their memorandum of cross-objections that even if item 13 of D schedule is a bad debt, the Subordinate Judge should have divided it and should have given a direction to that effect in the preliminary decree. As regards the division in status, as the first plaintiff was an adult coparcener on the date of Ex. B. 1, the learned Judge found that it had effected an immediate severance in status from 1-12-1946 so far as he was concerned. It was claimed by the first defendant that the third defendant who was born on 15-11-1947 during the pendency of the suit was in fact in his mother's womb even on the date of the notice, and that, therefore, even if there was a division in status so far as the first plaintiff was concerned which would take effect from 1-12-1946, it is of no consequence and that the property should be divided into five equal shares taking into consideration the right of the third defendant also. In the alternative, it was contended that even if he was not in his mother's womb on that date, the notice issued by the first plaintiff on behalf of himself and on behalf of his minor brothers, was in any event ineffective to bring about a division in status so far as plaintiffs 2 and 3 were concerned, as the first plaintiff was not the lawful guardian of plaintiffs 2 and 3, and such a notice even if it was subsequently found in the suit that the partition was in the interests of and for the benefit of the minor plaintiffs, could not effect a severance in status so far as plaintiffs 2 and 3 were concerned. The learned Judge did not accept the case of the first defendant, that the third defendant was in his mother's womb on the date of Ex. B. 1, as the period of gestation of a long period of 345 days was unusual and no extraordinary circumstances were disclosed in the evidence to accept the position, that in fact the third defendant was in his mother's womb on the date of the notice. He, however, felt that as there was no binding authority on the point that as the first plaintiff was not the lawful guardian of plaintiffs 2 and 3, the notice issued by him on behalf of the minors was ineffective to bring about a severance in status. The result was that he gave a one-fourth share to the first plaintiff, the major coparcener; but so far as the remaining three fourth share is concerned, he found that it continued to be joint family property until the date of suit, as meanwhile the third defendant was born, the three-fourth share should be divided into four equal shares and out of it the plaintiffs 2 and 3 should get two shares leaving the remaining two shares to defendants 1 and 3. The memorandum of cross-objections filed on behalf of the plaintiffs challenges the correctness of this position adopted by the trial Court.

(3) In the appeal filed by the defendants, the only point of substance is whether the third defendant was conceived on the date of Ex. B. 1. This question can be easily disposed of, and it does not present any difficulty. The first defendant was married to the second defendant in 1945 and she joined her husband sometime in September 1945. In June 1946, a child was born but that child died immediately. In the reply notice which the first defendant gave, Ex. B. 2, there was a reference to the pregnancy of the second defendant, but that must have reference only to the pregnancy in 1946 when she was driven out of the house along with her husband according to the allegations in the notice. On the 23-12-1946, the first defendant filed a complaint before the District Superintendent of Police, Kakinada, Ex. B. 3, in which he asserted that by then the second wife was carrying three months, which will take the date of conception to September or October 1946. According to the evidence of the second defendant, examined as D. W. 3, the third defendant was in the womb for 11 months, and again she stated that the child was born 10 months and 15 days after conception. To substantiate this statement, except her interested testimony, there is no other evidence on record. The birth of the first child was quite normal. If the evidence of the second defendant were to be accepted, the conception could not have been at or before the date of the notice, Ex. B. 1. It could only be subsequent to the notice. There is no special reason disclosed in the evidence why the period of gestation which was normal in the case of the first child should have been abnormal in the case of the third defendant. (After considering the evidence of a doctor, the judgment proceeds:)

His evidence is, therefore, of no value, and there is no reason to accept the case of the first defendant, that the third defendant was in existence in the eye of law even by the date of Ex. B. 1, i.e., 1-12-1946. The finding of the Subordinate Judge, therefore, must be accepted, the result of which will be that the appeal must be dismissed with costs.

(4) There remains the memorandum of cross-objections filed by the plaintiffs. It raises two questions, first, regarding the disallowance of a share in item 13 of D schedule to the plaintiffs on the ground that it is a bad debt, and second, whether or not there was division in status by reason of the notice Ex. B. 1 even with regard to plaintiffs 2 and 3, and whether the view of law taken by the learned Subordinate Judge on this question is correct.

(5) On the first point we think it is but just that even if item 13 of D schedule was a bad debt, it should be the subject of partition. The proper direction in the circumstances would be to order that this item should be sold in auction between the parties and the highest bidder should get the debt assigned to him. The purchase price will be divided in proportion to the shares of the coparceners.

(6) It is true that the third defendant died subsequent to the filing of the appeal, but if the position taken up by the first defendant were correct, he would get the advantage of the share of the third defendant. If, however, the view taken by the learned Subordinate Judge is wrong, plaintiffs 2 and 3 would also be entitled to a quarter share in the entire properties in the same manner as the first plaintiff. If his view is correct the decree of the lower court in so far as it directed the division of the three fourth share into four equal shares will be legal.

(7) It is now well established that in order to bring about a disruption of the joint status of a member in a coparcenary it is not necessary that there should be an agreement between all the coparceners, though if there should be actual division and distribution of property such an agreement would be essential. Division in status as opposed to physical division can be brought about by a definite and unambiguous declaration of the intention by one member to separate himself from the joint family, communicated to the other members. This declaration may be by a notice or by conduct or by institution of a suit for partition by an adult member. So much has been settled by the decisions of the Judicial Committee and also by the decisions of various High Courts. It is the exercise of the individual volition of the adult coparcener to get himself divided in status that determines the choice and justifies the exercise of discretion by him to get himself severed in status from the coparcenary. In the case of adults, therefore, it is the exercise of discretion by the adult member and his judgment that counts. If a suit is instituted by an adult coparcener claiming partition in such a case, the intention expressed in the plaint and communicated to the other coparceners who are defendants to the suit would effect a severance in status from the date of plaint. In the case of minors, however, as a minor is incapable of exercising any discretion by himself, it is recognised by decisions that this may be exercised on his behalf by his lawful guardian. The lawful guardian may either issue a notice or may institute a suit as a next friend. But in either case, it is subject to one qualification, that the division in status would be brought about only if ultimately it is found by the court that the partition of the properties is for the benefit of the minor and to his interest. If this is not found, the notice or the institution of the suit will be ineffective in law and insufficient to bring about a disruption of the status of the minor coparcener from the family.

In our High Court for some time there was a conflict of decisions whether in the case of a suit instituted on behalf of a minor coparcener by his next friend, the division in status dates from the date of the plaint or from the date when in the suit the decision is reached by the court that the division is in the best interests of the minor. This conflict was, however, resolved by the Full Bench in — 'Rangasayi v. Nagarathnamma', 57 Mad 95. But in this case also, the guardian who acted on behalf of the minor as the next friend was the natural guardian, the mother. It is a case of a suit and no notice issued before suit. That the severance in status can be taken back even to the date of the notice issued anterior to the suit was laid down by a Bench in — 'Kotayya v. Krishna Rao', ILR (1945) Mad 710. This is really the logical extension of the doctrine elaborately discussed and settled in — 'Rangasayi v. Nagarathnamma', 57 Mad 95 (FB). If once it is conceded that a unilateral declaration of intention to sever exercised and intimated on behalf of a minor coparcener by a lawful guardian is effective in law to bring about a severance in status from that date if ultimately it is found in the suit that the physical division is in the interests of the minor, there is no reason for limiting the taking effect of the division in status to the date of the suit itself, if such volition was exercised anterior to the suit. In such an event there is every justification to extend its operation even to the date of the notice and the logical extension of the principle, therefore, if we may say so with respect, was perfectly justified as found by the learned Judges in — 'Kotayya v. Krishna Rao', ILR (1945) Mad 710. In that case, however, the question whether a notice given on behalf of a minor by a person other than a lawful guardian would have the same consequence if ultimately it was found in the subsequent suit for partition that it was in the circumstances not only justified but was to the positive benefit of the minor coparcener was left open as the learned Judges were not called upon to decide that point. It is this question that now arises for decision in the present appeal. We are unable to see any difference in principle between the notice given by a lawful guardian on behalf of a minor and the case where the notice was given by a person other than the lawful guardian, as in the present case by the elder brother. Take for example this very case. The interests of the lawful guardian, the father, are adverse to the interests of the minor plaintiffs; the mother is no more; and the lawful guardian cannot act on behalf of the minors because it is not to his interests that there should be a division. On the other hand, he has been opposing tooth and nail such a division. In such a case, apart from the question of any anterior notice if the suit was instituted by a person other than the lawful guardian, the court would be called upon to try the question whether such a partition was or was not in the interests of the minor plaintiff.

In law there is no objection to a person other than a lawful guardian acting as next friend and institute a suit on behalf of the minor plaintiff subject of course, to the provisions of O. XXXII, Civil P. C. Under that Order as amended in Madras, any person of sound mind and who has attained majority may act as next friend of the minor. If there is a guardian appointed or declared by a competent authority, however, unless for reasons to be recorded the court appoints another person as next friend and permits him to act, he alone can institute the suit. A person who has an interest adverse to that of the minor cannot, of course, be appointed as next friend. Subject to these and other limitations imposed by the Code, a person other than the lawful guardian can always institute a suit on behalf of a minor plaintiff. If, therefore, a suit for partition was instituted by a person other than a lawful guardian as next friend of the minor and in such a suit it is found ultimately that the partition is for the benefit of the minor, according to the decision of the Full Bench in — 'Rangasayi v. Nagarathnamma', 57 Mad 95, when there is a decree, for partition in the suit, the division in status takes effect from the date of the plaint. The fact that the choice was exercised by a person who is not the lawful guardian would not prevent the application of the rule in — 'Rangasayi v. Nagarathnamma', 57 Mad 95 (FB), to such a case. If, therefore, a suit can validly be instituted by a person who is not the legal guardian of the minor members with a view to bring about a division in status, if it is established to the satisfaction of the court that such a division is in the interests of the minor, there is no reason in principle and there is no authority to the contrary to make a distinction between the case of such a suit and a notice which preceded such a suit issued by a person, who is not the lawful guardian of the minor. In our opinion, the suit and the notice in such circumstances so far as the legal consequences are concerned must stand on the same footing subject, of course, to the same limitation in both the cases, viz., that it is ultimately found by the court that the division was in the interests of the minor. The volition in either event exercised by the person who is not the lawful guardian always takes effect conditional on the court finding ultimately that the severance is in the interests of the minor and for his benefit.

It must be remembered whether by a suit or by a notice issued on behalf of the minor, the division in status results not merely by the exercise of a volition by somebody on behalf of the minor but by the ultimate sanction of the court and it is its imprimatur that brings about the result. It may be said that this might encourage frivolous and vexatious suit by meddlesome persons purporting to act in the interests of the minor but really to serve their private ends. But this inconvenience was noticed by Ananthakrishna Aiyar J. in — 'Rangasayi v. Nagarathnamma', 57 Mad 95 (FB), and such suits as pointed out by the learned Judge may be stayed by the court during the course of the trial if it is satisfied that the object of the suit was not bona fide and the next friend may be penalised by being made to pay the costs personally. A notice would not have a legal effect by itself. It must ultimately be put in suit and the question of the propriety of the partition in the circumstances of the case must be decided by the court. It is only then that the division in status is brought about. We, therefore, think that on principle there is no reason to limit the operation of the rule laid down in — 'Kotayya v. Krishna Rao', ILR (1945) Mad 710, to the case of lawful guardians alone. In the present case, the first plaintiff was the only other person who could have served the interests of the minors in the circumstances, and his action was found to be in the interests of the minors by the court. That finding was not challenged by the first defendant in the appeal. It, therefore, follows that plaintiffs 2 and 3 also became divided in status on 1-12-1946 along with the first plaintiff. They would, therefore, be each entitled to a quarter share in the whole of the property and not merely a quarter share in the three fourth as decreed by the lower court. The result is the memorandum of cross-objections must be allowed and the decree of the lower court must be modified in the manner indicated above. As the plaintiffs have succeeded they are entitled to their costs in the memorandum of cross-objections.

A/G.M.J.

Decree modified;
Cross-objections allowed.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 149 (Vol. 40, C. N. 45)

SATYANARAYANA RAO AND RAJA-
GOPALAN JJ.

Devaraja Shenoy and others, Petitioners v.
State of Madras, by Secretary, Legal Department and another, Respondents.

Writ Petn. No. 668 of 1951, D/- 13-12-1951.

Constitution of India, Art. 26 — Religious Denomination — Gowd Saraswath Brahmin community is a religious denomination — Inclusion of Shri Venkataramana Temple, Mulki in list under S. 38, Madras Act 19 of 1951 — Petition under Art. 26 is maintainable — (Madras Hindu Religious and Charitable Endowments Act (19 of 1951) S. 38).

The Gowd Saraswath Brahmin community is undoubtedly a religious denomination or at any rate a section of a religious denomination. Therefore, the protection under Art. 26 can be claimed on behalf of the trustees of a temple belonging to the denomination. Therefore, the provisions of the Madras Hindu Religious and Charitable Endowments Act in so far as they interfere with the autonomy of the religious denomination which own and has the sole and exclusive control of the temple should not be allowed to be enforced, including the provision relating to notification procedure which vests an arbitrary power in the Commissioner and the Government to wrest from the hands of the trustees the power to administer the temple (Para 3).

Mere inclusion of the temple in the list under S. 38, is enough for the trustees to move the Court under Art. 26 since inclusion of temple in the list means that the Board have taken a definite decision to apply the provisions of the Act to the temple owned by the trustees. The petition cannot be thrown out in limine on the ground that the petitioners are not persons aggrieved and that there is at present no danger of the provisions of the Act being applied to the temple. On the contrary the petitioners are entitled to a rule absolute directing the Board not to enforce any of the provisions of the Act which interfere with the autonomy of the petitioner's institution. AIR 1952 Mad. 613 Relied on. (Para 4)

In the case of Sri Venkataramana Temple, Mulki, the temple and its properties belong to the entire denomination of the community (Gowd Saraswath Brahmin community) resident in Mulki comprising all the three villages, excluding, of course, the Vaidikis, i.e. the priests of the temple. Therefore, what applies to the Chidambaram temple owned by the denomination of Dikshitaras should also apply to this temple Sri Venkataramana Temple, Mulki, owned by the religious denomination consisting of Gowd Saraswath Brahmins resident in Mulkipetta. It is, therefore, unnecessary to enumerate over again the provisions of the impugned Act which are ultra vires the Legislature in so far as the Act applies to Sri Venkataramana Temple Mulki, the trustees thereof and the religious denomination that owns it. Those sections have already been enumerated in AIR 1952 Mad 613. AIR 1952 Mad 613. Rel. on. (Para 5)

M. K. Nambiar and M. L. Nayak, for Petitioners; Advocate General, for the Govt. Pleader, for Respondents.

REFERENCES: Courtwar/Chronological/ Paras
(51) 1951 SCJ 29: (AIR 1951 SC 41) 4
(51) CMP No. 2591 of 1951:
(AIR 1952 Mad 613) 3, 5
(1912) 230 US 513: (57 Law Ed 1597) 4

ORDER: This application relates to Sri Venkataramana Temple, Mulki, South Kanara

district and was filed by five of the trustees for the issue of a writ of mandamus or any other appropriate writ or order directing the first respondent, the State of Madras, to forbear from enforcing any of the provisions of the Madras Hindu Religious and Charitable Endowments Act, 1951, against the petitioners, the Shri Venkataramana Temple and its endowments. The application was filed after the new Act came into force. The administration of this temple is governed by a scheme framed by the Sub-Court, South Kanara, in O. S. No. 26 of 1915 known as the Moolki Temple Scheme. There are certain peculiar features regarding this temple which can be gathered from the scheme framed in that suit which for convenient reference is added as an appendix to this judgment as the contentions raised turned mostly upon a correct appreciation of the principles underlying the scheme.

Under the scheme the general control and the management of the affairs of the temple both secular and religious are vested in the members of the Gowd Saraswath Brahmin community, residing at in Moolkypeta, i.e., the villages of Bappanad, Karnad and Manampadi. The Vaideekis who are the temple priests are excluded from this. The actual management of the affairs of the temple, however, has to be conducted by a council of trustees called Moktessors through a Parpathyagar (Manager). Five of the trustees are elected by an electorate consisting of every member of the community whose name is registered in a book called the register of electors which it is the duty of the trustees to maintain. The qualifications of the electors are enumerated in the scheme as well as the mode of conducting the elections. The Council of Moktessors consists of seven members of whom two shall be senior members for the time being of the families of U. Srinivasa Shanbhogue and T. Vasudeva Shanbhogue, and the rest shall be elected by the general body of electors. Two out of the seven, therefore, may be treated as hereditary trustees. The responsibility for the due and proper administration of the trust is laid on the council of Moktessors. Provision is made to elect out of the Moktessors two treasurers, and there are other provisions requiring them to meet periodically and providing for the manner and method of conducting the business at such meetings. It is unnecessary to refer to these details. The Parpathyagar is to be appointed by the Moktessors on a salary of not less than Rs. 75 a month. The rights and duties of the Parpathyagar have been specified in the scheme. It contains as many as 67 clauses. This scheme was in vogue ever since it was settled by Court.

(2) After the new Act came into force on 30-9-1951 the Commissioner for Hindu Religious and Charitable Endowments by his memorandum of 30-9-1951 issued an order stating that the temple of Sri Venkataramana was included in the list published by the Commissioner under S. 38 of the Act. Attempts were being made to enforce the order under the new Act notwithstanding the protests of the trustees. It was, therefore, apprehended by the petitioners that all the provisions of the new Act will be enforced by the Commissioner. The Act was questioned on the ground that it was ultra vires the State Legislature in so far as its provisions relate to the petitioners' temple and its endowments, as the Gowd Saraswath community is a religious denomination which is entitled to protection under Art. 26 of the Constitution. It is also further claimed that the Board had no right to impose a contribution under S. 76 of the Act, which is a tax the levy of which is prohibited by Art. 27. The notification proceedings and the other provisions relating to the control and management of the religious institutions were also attacked. It appears, and it is not disputed, that an original petition is now pending in the District Court, South Kanara, O. P. No. 46 of 1950 for amending the provisions of the scheme.

(3) The Gowd Saraswath Brahmin community is undoubtedly a religious denomination or at any rate a section of a religious denomination. Therefore, the protection under Art. 26 has been rightly claimed on behalf of the petitioners. The effect of classifying the temple and including it in the list maintained under S. 38 is to decide that it is an institution whose income is not less than Rs. 20000 and that the jurisdiction of the Area Committee does not extend to it. It implies, therefore, that all the provisions of the Act are applicable, the provisions relating to the settlement of the scheme, the notification proceedings and the control and supervision, the duty to obey all lawful directions and so on which have been more fully set out in our judgment in — 'Shirur Mutt v. Commr. Hindu Religious Endowments, Madras', C. M. P. No. 2591 of 1951 (Mad). As rightly contended by Mr. Nambiar, learned advocate for the petitioners, the provisions of the Act in substance and in effect destroy the community's right of administration. The right to appoint, dismiss, suspend and remove trustees is vested in the Commissioner and also the appointment of non-hereditary trustees—vide Ss. 18 and 39(2). This power to appoint trustees under Ss. 39 and 41 of the Act can be exercised by the authorities concerned notwithstanding that a scheme has been already settled which scheme is deemed under the new Act to have been settled under that Act in respect of such institution. This institution has among the council of trustees, non-hereditary as well as hereditary trustees. Power is vested under the scheme in the religious denomination. That power is now taken away.

The power to remove and dismiss trustees which is vested under the scheme in the general body is vested by the new Act in the case of the present temple in the Commissioner. The trustees are under an obligation to obey and carry out all lawful directions issued as provided by S. 54 and S. 45(b) provides that disobedience of lawful orders will entail suspension, removal or dismissal of a trustee. The power to fix the fees for archakas and determine their apportionment as well as fixing the standard of scales of expenditure or the dittam is also taken away from the trustees and vested in the Commissioner. The budget has to be passed. The surplus funds can be diverted to objects other than those of the temple. In other words, the effect of the Act is to reduce the trustees to the position of servants, the Government and the Commissioner being the masters, as the relationship is nothing more and nothing less. In case of disputes with reference to various matters, the determination by the Government or its servants, the decision of the Commissioner or the Deputy Commissioner is final. The Act vests in executive with judicial functions and the rights guaranteed under the Constitution have been made illusory and nugatory by the provisions of the Act. The trustees cannot have any legitimate objection if the Act should have provided for submitting the accounts or budgets for information; but what they contend is that they should not be dictated with reference to these matters by an extraneous authority so as to seriously interfere with and destroy the religious freedom that has been guaranteed by Art. 26. So long as one wants to know what one is doing there may not be a serious objection; but when the other party tries to dictate as to what one should do then comes the rub.

In the light of the various considerations adverted to by us in the judgment in — 'C. M. P. No. 2591 of 1951 (Mad)', we have no hesitation in holding that the provisions of the Act in so far as they interfere with the autonomy of the religious denomination which own and has the sole and exclusive control of the temple should not be allowed to be enforced including the provision relating to notification procedure which vests an arbitrary power in the Commissioner and the Government to wrest from the hands of the trustees the power to administer the temple. We have held in — 'C. M. P. No. 2591 of 1951 (Mad)', that the levy of contribution under S. 76 offends Art. 27 and, therefore, is illegal.

(4) Apart from contending on the lines in which arguments were advanced in the other cases regarding Art. 26 which we have already dealt with, on behalf of the respondent one other fundamental objection has been raised and that is that nothing serious has been done by way of infringing the rights of the religious denomination as all that was done was the harmless and innocuous inclusion of the temple in the list maintained under S. 38. The learned Government Pleader relied on the observations of Fazl Ali J. in — 'Chiranjit Lal v. Union of India', 1951 S. C. J. 29, and also a passage from Willis on Constitutional Law and Cooley's Constitutional limitations. He also relied on the decision in — 'Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Co. v. William G. Conley', (1912) 230 U. S. 513. The passage in Willis at page 91 is as follows:

"Who can raise constitutional questions? Who are entitled to raise questions of constitutionality? Any one whose rights are injuriously affected and no one else. It is not enough that the Statute is unconstitutional, as to other persons or classes. The person attacking the statute must come within the class. A party benefited rather than injured by a statute may not question its constitutionality. If no attempt is made to enforce a provision, one cannot attack it."

To similar effect is the opinion of Cooley in his Constitutional Limitations, Vol. I, at pages 335 to 341 where the matter is fully discussed. Unlike the case in — 'Charanjit Lal Chowdhury v. Union of India', 1951 S. C. J. 29 the petitioners are personally aggrieved as trustees of the institution as the Endowments Board issued a notice that the temple was included under S. 38, which means that they have taken a definite decision to apply the provisions of the Act to the temple owned by the petitioners. The Commissioner did not stop with pious intentions but has taken a step and perhaps a serious step, in deciding to apply the provisions of the Act to the institution. It is rather difficult, therefore, to accept the contention of the learned Government Pleader that the petition should be thrown out in limine on the ground that the petitioners are not persons aggrieved and that there is at present no danger of the provisions of the Act being applied to the temple. We are, therefore, unable to agree with that contention and the petitioners, in our opinion, are entitled to maintain the petition. The petitioners are entitled to a rule absolute directing the Board not to enforce any of the provisions of the Act which interfere with the autonomy of the petitioners' institution.

(5) In — 'W. P. Nos. 379 and 380 of 1951', we have held that the sections of the impugned new Act, enumerated in detail in — 'Sri Shirur Mutt v. Commr. Hindu Religious Endowments, Madras', C. M. P. No. 2591 of 1951 (Mad), were ultra vires the State Legislature. The Sri Venkataramana Temple, Mulki, in South Kanara, with which we are concerned in this petition, is analogous to the Sri Sabhanayakar temple at Chidambaram, with which we had to deal in W. P. Nos. 379 and 380 of 1951. In the case of Sri Venkataramana Temple, Mulki, also, there is a judicial decision, that the temple and its properties belong to the entire denomination of the community resident in Mulki, comprising all the three villages, excluding, of course, the Vaidikis, i.e., the priests of the temple. Therefore, what applies to the Chidambaram temple owned by the denomination of Dikshitaras should also apply to this temple, Sri Venkataramana Temple, Mulki, owned by the religious denomination consisting of Gowd Saraswath Brahmins resident in Mulkipetta. It is, therefore, unnecessary to enumerate over again the provisions of the impugned Act which are ultra vires the Legislature in so far as that Act applies to Sri Venkataramana Temple, Mulki, the trustees thereof and the religious denomination that owns it. Those sections have already been enumerated in C. M. P. No. 2591 of 1951.

The rule nisi must be made absolute.

The petitioner is entitled to his costs. Advocate's fee Rs. 250. We certify under Art. 132 of the Constitution that this is a fit case for appeal to the Supreme Court.

A/R.G.D.

Rule made absolute.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 152 (Vol. 40, C. N. 46)

RAJAMANNAR C. J. AND VENKATARAMA AIYAR J.

Commr. of Income-tax, Madras, Complainant v. G. M. Dandekar of Messrs. M. K. Dandekar & Co., Chartered Accountants, Madras, Respondent.

Refd. Case No. 57 of 1951, D/- 10-4-1952.

† Chartered Accountants Act (1949) S. 21 and Sch. Cl. (q) — Chartered Accountant — Duty to Income-tax Department.

If the Chartered Accountant was auditing the accounts of a joint stock company, he is under a clear duty to "probe into the transactions" and report on their true character. But when the auditing relates to the accounts of individuals, the auditor acts only for those individuals and it is his duty to act on their instructions, and to audit the accounts produced by them and prepare statements from them. He is under an obligation to them to perform the auditing with due skill and diligence and if he does that it is difficult to see what further obligation he has in the matter and in favour of whom. The accountant is under a duty to prepare and present correct statements of the accounts of the assessee, and he should, of course, neither suggest nor assist in the preparation of false accounts. But he is under no duty to investigate whether the accounts produced by the assessee are correct or not. That is a matter for the decision of the Income-tax Tribunals. He is under no duty to the department. (Held that the accountant was not guilty of any conduct which rendered him unfit to be a member of the Institute). Case law rel. on.

(Paras 8, 9, 10 and 11)

R. Ramamurthi Aiyar, for Forwarding Authority; A. Sundaram Aiyar, for C. S. Rama Rao Sahib, for Secretary to the Govt. of India (Ministry of Finance); T. V. Viswanatha Aiyar and C. R. Pattabhiraman, for Respondent.

REFERENCES: Courtwar/Chronological/ Paras
(1895) 2 Ch 673: (64 LJ Ch 866) 8
(1896) 2 Ch 279: (65 LJ Ch 673) 8
(1925) Ch 407: (94 LJ Ch 445) 8

VENKATARAMA AIYAR J.: This is a reference under S. 21 Chartered Accountants Act (Act XXXVIII of 1949). The respondent is a partner in firm of Chartered Accountants. Messrs. A. Mohamed and Co. are a firm of merchants carrying on business in hardware in the City of Madras and they entrusted the work of auditing their accounts and preparing income-tax returns to the respondent's firm. The complaint against the respondent is that he performed this work negligently.

(2) It appears from the assessment order dated 31-10-1944 that Messrs. A. Mohamed and Co. had considerable business in black-market and maintained two sets of accounts — regular day books and ledgers for the open market transactions and a separate book for the black market transactions. While the former accounts contained entries showing daily transactions the latter contained only consolidated entries made at the end of each week, of all the transactions of that week. At the end of the financial year all the weekly entries in the separate account were totalled up and these totals were entered in the regular accounts. For the year in question, 1943-44, the entries thus carried into regular account books show purchases of the value of Rs. 97,403-7-6 and sales of the value of Rs. 1,69,766-7-6.

(3) The respondent examined only the regular account books of the assessee and prepared the statements and incometax return on the basis of those accounts. All the statements were signed by him and there was also an endorsement at the foot of the balance-sheet that it was "verified and found to be correct." The profit and loss statement as drawn up by the respondent contained under the heading "stocks" the following entry: "Recorded in separate book Rs. 97,403-7-6" and under the heading "Sales" the following entry: "Recorded in separate book Rs. 1,69,766-7-6". The income-tax return was signed by the assessee and the respondent forwarded the same and the statements prepared by him to the Incometax Officer, with a covering letter dated 11-7-1944. Therein he stated as follows:

"To

The Incometax Officer,
Special (Central) Circle, Madras.

Sir,

Re: G. I. No. 510 Incometax and E. P. T. Assessment 1944-45—Messrs. A. Mohamed and Company.

We have examined the books of accounts of Messrs. A. Mohamed and Co. Hardware merchants, Madras, for Samvat year 1999 ended 29-10-1943 and beg to report as under:

Books examined: 1. Rokad — cash and day book
2. Khatavahi — ledger
3. Jinna Nondh — purchase journal
4. Udhar Nondh — sales journal and account books pertaining to property income purchases and sales vouchers, invoices, bank pass books and again

"The books of accounts are kept in the Gujarathi style in the usual course of business and the statement and schedules prepared therefrom represent in our opinion correct income of the firm."

(4) On receipt of the return and the statements mentioned above, the Income-tax Officer called upon the assessee to produce their accounts and on examining them he found several discrepancies the most important of which was the difference between the sales as entered in the regular accounts and the sales as shown in the statements. On 23-8-1944 he wrote to the respondent for an explanation of this difference. On 2-10-1944 the respondent replied that the difference was to be accounted for by the sales entered in the separate book and it was added that there were "unfortunately no details" for those sales in the account book. The Income-tax Officer held that the separate accounts were inaccurate and unreliable. He accordingly proceeded to assess the profits made by the assessee in the black market transactions on estimate and computed the same at Rs. 3,50,000 and determined the tax payable on the basis of that figure. This assessment was finally confirmed on 30-7-1947.

(5) On these facts the Income-tax Department took up the matter against the respondent, and filed a complaint against him on 6-1-1951 charging him with gross negligence in the discharge of his duties. Their contention is that the statements of the respondent in his letter dated 11-7-1944 that the account books of the assessee were maintained in the usual course of business and that the income received by the firm as shown in the statement was correct were erroneous and could easily have been discovered to be erroneous by the proper investigation. They also contend that the explanation given by the respondent in his letter dated 2-10-1944 is equally erroneous and could have been avoided if he had acted with due diligence.

(6) Notice of this complaint was given to the respondent. He filed a statement in which he pleaded that he prepared the return and the statements only on the basis of the accounts produced before him by the assessee, that he acted throughout only as their representative, that he had no personal responsibility in the matter and that he was not guilty of any negligence. The matter was enquired into by the Disciplinary Committee who held that the charge of negligence was made out and that the respondent was guilty under Cl. (q) of the schedule of the Act. The matter comes up before us on reference under S. 21 of the Act.

(7) The point for decision is whether on the facts above mentioned the respondent can be held to be guilty of gross negligence. There can be no negligence unless there is a duty cast upon the person to do a particular act and he fails to do it.

(8) It is, therefore, necessary to ascertain what the duties of the respondent are as the auditor of Messrs. A. Mohamed and Co. It is contended by the respondent that when an assessee engages him for auditing his accounts and preparing the income-tax returns for him, his duty is only to prepare the statements on the basis of the accounts produced by the assessee and that he is under no obligation to go further and enquire whether the account books maintained by the assessee are reliable. The view taken by the Disciplinary Committee is that the respondent had not discharged his duty by merely preparing the abstracts from the accounts of the assessee, that it was further his duty "to probe into the matter" and investigate whether the accounts were correct. That such would have been his duty if he was auditing the accounts of a joint stock company, we do not doubt. In that case the audit is intended for the protection of the share-holders and the auditor is expected to examine the accounts maintained by the directors with a view to inform the share-holders of the true financial position of the company. The directors are in the position of trustees in relation to the share-holders and in auditing the accounts maintained by the directors the auditor acts in the interests of the share-holders who are in the position of beneficiaries. The auditor is, in such a case, under a clear duty to "probe into the transactions" and report on their true character. It was so held by Lord Alverstone C. J. in —'In re: London Oil Storage Co. Ltd. v. Seear Haslack and Co.', Dicksee on Auditing, p. 781, 10th Edn. wherein he observed:

"That he must exercise such reasonable care as would satisfy a man that the accounts are genuine, assuming that there is nothing to arouse his suspicion of honesty and if he does that he fulfils his duty; if his suspicion is aroused, his duty is to "probe the thing to the bottom" and tell the directors of it and get what information he can."

Vide also the observations in—'In re: London General Bank (No. 3)', (1895) 2-Ch. 673; — 'In re: Kingston Cotton Mill Co. (No. 2)', (1896) 2-Ch. 279 and — 'In re: City Equitable Fire Insurance Co. Ltd.', (1925) Ch. 407.

(9) But the question is whether there is the same duty when the auditing relates to the accounts of individuals. In those cases the auditor acts only for those individuals and it is his duty to act on their instructions, and to audit the accounts produced by them and prepare statements from them. He is under an obligation to them to perform the auditing with due skill and diligence and if he does that it is difficult to see what further obligation he has in the matter and in favour of whom. Mr. Ra-mamurthi Iyer the learned advocate for the Council contended that the respondent was a representative of the assessee in the income-tax proceedings; that his position was analogous to that of an advocate appearing for a party in court and that he owed a duty to the income-tax department to act fairly in the presentation of the case of the assessee.

We agree that the position of Chartered Accountants representing the income-tax assessee is similar to that of Advocates representing parties in court and that their obligations are similar to those of advocates. But what are the obligations of the Advocates? They are bound to act strictly within the instructions of their clients; they are under a duty not to misrepresent facts or to mislead the court and they should be no parties in any manner to setting up false defences but they are under no obligation to suspect their clients or to investigate whether their case is true or false. It is a matter for the court to decide and not for the advocates to "probe into". In like manner the accountant is under a duty to prepare and present correct statements of the accounts of the assessee; and he should, of course, neither suggest nor assist in the preparation of false accounts. But he is under no duty to investigate whether the accounts produced by the assessee are correct or not. That is a matter for the decision of the Income-tax Tribunals. Judged by this standard the question is whether the respondent has said or done anything which can be held to be a breach of his duties as aforesaid.

(10) The points that have been urged against him are the following: 1. In his letter dated 11-7-1944 the respondent stated that "books of accounts are kept in the Gujarathi style in the usual course of business". It is argued that this statement is incorrect because it has been found that the account books are imperfect and unreliable. But the statement of the respondent only means that the entries in the account books were made at about the time when the transactions took place or shortly thereafter and that is what they purported to be. It has not been found by the Disciplinary Committee that the entries in the regular account books were not made in the usual course and indeed the Income-tax Officer accepted them as correct so far as they went. The opinion of the Committee that the accounts were not kept in the usual course of business is based on its finding that those account books were not complete. But they do not for that reason cease to be accounts maintained in the usual course of business.

2. In the letter dated 11-7-1944 the respondent stated that,

"the statements and schedules prepared therefrom (from the accounts) represent, in our opinion, correct income of the firm";

and he also endorsed on the balance sheet that it was "verified and found correct". It is argued that it would be impossible to make a correct determination of the profits made by the assessee without a proper examination of the separate book; that the Income-tax department has in fact found that the statements prepared by the respondent were incorrect and that, therefore, he must be held to have acted negligently in passing on the figures from the accounts without making an independent investigation. It is also added that the reference to separate book in the profit and loss statement is misleading as it suggests that the book was also examined. But if the duty of the respondent was only to prepare a correct statement from the accounts of the assessee and not to investigate whether those accounts are correct or not this charge must fall to the ground. The respondent did not state that the figures mentioned in the statement represented the real profits made by the assessee. He only stated that the balance sheet represented the correct position according to the accounts of the assessee. Nor is there any foundation for the suggestion that the reference to the separate books in the profits and loss statement was misleading. It represents only the entries in the separate book carried forward into regular account books which had been examined by the respondent. In fact the letter clearly mentions that all accounts had been examined by the respondent and this is not one of them.

3. Finally it was stated that in his letter dated 2-10-1944 the respondent gave an explanation that the differences between sales mentioned in the regular account books and those shown in the statements were to be accounted for by the sales entered in the separate book and that this explanation was found to be false, and that the respondent was negligent in passing on the statement of his client without satisfying himself whether it was correct or not. But if he was only acting as the representative of the assessee, he was under a duty to place their representation before the Income-tax authorities and that is all that was done by the respondent in his letter dated 2-10-1944.

(11) There is no charge against the respondent that he connived at the assessee's putting forward a false statement or that he had in any manner associated himself with the attempt of the assessee to mislead the department. The charge is that he owed a duty to the department, to himself investigate the truth and correctness of the accounts of the assessee and not merely to act as their post office in transmitting them. We do not agree that the respondent is under such duty to the department and, therefore, no question of negligence arises.

(12) Before concluding we think it is necessary to comment on the inordinate delay in the institution of these proceedings. The statements complained of were made on 11-7-1944 and 2-10-1944; they were found to be unacceptable by the department by its order dated 31-10-1944; the assessment proceedings were themselves finally closed on 30-7-1947 and this complaint is filed on 6-1-1951. It is essential that charges of this kind should be made with promptitude.

(13) In the result, we hold that the respondent is not guilty of any conduct which renders him unfit to be a member of the Institute. There will be no order for costs in this reference.

B/D.H.

Order accordingly.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 154 (Vol. 40, C. N. 47)
RAMASWAMI J.

In re E. P. Arumugham Pillai and another, Petitioners.

Criminal Revn. Cases Nos. 34 and 35 of 1952 (Criminal Revn. Petns. Nos. 34 and 35 of 1952), D/- 4-9-1952.

Factories Act (1948) Ss. 2(m) and 85 — Madras G. O. No. 2210 (Development Department), D/- 22-4-1948 — Order is ultra vires of S. 85.

The Madras G. O. No. 2210 (Development Department), D/- 22-4-1948 which declares every place in the Province wherein more than 10 and less than 20 people are employed and a manufacturing process is carried on without the aid of power, generally as a factory, is illegal and ultra vires the powers conferred under S. 85, Factories Act. It practically renders nugatory the definition of a factory in S. 2(m) of the Act. The object of S. 2(m) in restricting the term "factory" to places which employ 20 or more persons engaging in a manufacturing process without the aid of power, is that small undertakings, most often practically family businesses, should not be subjected to the rigorous restrictions imposed by the Factories Act and that in fact such business would not be requiring the rigorous restrictions under the Factories Act. The Central Legislature has at the same time contemplated that in particular places and in certain types of businesses run with less than 20 but more than ten persons without the aid of power conditions may exist calling for the application of the salutary provisions of the Factories Act in ensuring the welfare of the workers.

(Para 5)

Anno: Factories Act, S. 2 N. 1.

S. Ramachandra Aiyar, for Petitioner; Public Prosecutor, for the State.

ORDER: These are criminal revision cases which have been filed against the convictions and sentences of the Additional First Class Magistrate, Tiruchirapalli, in S. T. Nos. 1138 and 1141 of 1951 respectively.

(2) The facts are: The petitioners before us who were respectively accused in the lower court were running cigar factories in Tiruchirapalli town. There is no dispute that each of these businesses is employing only less than 20 workers and that the manufacturing process is being carried on without the aid of Electric power. P. W. 1, the Assistant Inspector of Labour, First Circle, Tiruchirapalli, visited these places and noted certain contravention of the provisions of the Factories Act which need not detain us here. These petitioners Arumugham Pillai, and Sundaram Pillai were prosecuted for infraction of the provisions of the Factories Act. Each of them was fined Rs. 10 or in default to simple imprisonment for ten days.

(3) The point taken is that these business premises are not factories within the meaning of the Indian Factories Act and that the lower court should have held that the G. O. No. 2210 (Development Department) dated 22-4-1948 is illegal and ultra vires.

(4) S. 2(m) Factories Act, LXIII of 1948, defines a factory as any premises including the precincts thereof wherein 20 or more workers are working or were working on any day of the preceding 12 months, and in any part of which a manufacturing process is being carried on without the aid of power, or is ordinarily so carried on. But notwithstanding this definition power is given under S. 85(i) to the State Governments by notification in the Official Gazette to declare that all or any of the provisions of the Act shall apply to any place wherein manufacturing process is carried on notwithstanding that the number of persons employed is less than 20, if working without the aid of power. In pursuance of this, G. O. No. 2210 (Development Department) dated 22-4-1948 has been issued in the following terms:

"In exercise of the powers conferred by S. 85(1) of the Factories Act, 1948 (Central Act LXIII of 1948) His Excellency the Governor of Madras, declares that all the provisions of the said Act shall apply to any place wherein a manufacturing process is carried on without the aid of power or is so ordinarily carried on and ten or more but less than 20 persons are employed."

(5) There can be no doubt that this G. O. is illegal and ultra vires and beyond the powers conferred under S. 85, Factories Act. The State Government would have been within its powers if they notified particular named places as factories. But instead of doing so this G. O. makes every place from Ganjam to Ram-eswaram generally as a factory provided there are more than 10 and less than 20 people employed and engaged in the manufacturing process without the aid of power. This practically renders nugatory the definition of a factory in S. 2(m) of the Act. The object of S. 2(m) in restricting the term "factory" to places which employ 20 or more persons engaging in a manufacturing process without the aid of power, is that small undertakings most often practically family businesses, should not be subjected to the rigorous restrictions imposed by the Factories Act and that in fact such business would not be requiring the rigorous restrictions under the Factories Act. The Central Legislature has at the same time contemplated that in particular places and in certain types of businesses run with less than 20 but more than ten persons without the aid of power conditions may exist calling for the application of the salutary provisions of the Factories Act in ensuring the welfare of the workers. The Central Legislature has also certainly contemplated that the provisions of the Factories Act might get defeated by scrupulously keeping the number of workers down to 19. That is why power has been given to the State Governments to prevent the abuse of the limitations imposed in S. 2(m). This special power conferred on the State Government cannot be exercised in this manner and used as if it were a blank cheque and issue a G. O. in the aforesaid terms. One instance how this power should be used by the State Government is to be found in S. 3. Section 3 for instance lays down that "in this Act references to time of day are references to Indian Standard time." But they recognising that the Indian Standard Time might not be observed all over India and that local conditions would require modifications, a proviso has been inserted that for any area in which Indian standard time (?) is not ordinarily observed the Provincial Government may make rules specifying the area, defining the local meantime observed therein, and permitting such time to be observed in all or any of the factories situated in the area. In a reported Scotch decision — 'Macbeth v. Ashely', Vol. II, 1870-5 (33-39 Vict) Scotch Appeal cases, 352, the term "any particular locality" was construed as follows: "Eleven O'clock at night is the hour appointed for closing public houses in Scotland (under 25 and 26 Vict. Ch. 35) although in special cases and for well considered reasons a deviation is allowed with reference to any particular locality really requiring it. An order by the Magistrate of Rothesay for closing at ten, instead of eleven, though limited by its words to a 'particular locality' embraced every public house in the burgh. Held, by the House of Lords, agreeing with the court below, that the Magistrate's order was ultra vires."

In these circumstances the lower court ought to have held that G. O. No. 2210 was illegal and ultra vires and erred in holding that the business premises of the accused was a factory and that there was any contravention of the Indian Factories Act.

(6) This does not mean that we are leaving the State without any remedy in regard to bringing these businesses within the meaning of the Factories Act. All that the State has got to do is to make use of the provisions of S. 85 of the Act in special cases and for well considered reasons, and notify the particular places as factories.

(7) These revision cases are allowed and the convictions and sentences are set aside. The fine amounts, if collected, will be refunded. (The rest of the order is not material for the purposes of this report.)

A/K.S.

Revisions dismissed.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 156 (Vol. 40, C. N. 48)

RAMASWAMI J.

In re Kasi Raja, Proprietor, Thiruveswarar Rice Mills, Ariyur, Petitioner.

Criminal Revn. Case No. 1027 of 1951 (Criminal Revn. Petn. No. 1088 of 1951), D/- 28-8-1952.

Essential Supplies (Temporary Powers) Act (1946) S. 7(1) — Govt. Order, 432, Food Department, D/- 12-4-47 — Contravention of — Accused, owner of Rice Mill, prosecuted for hulling paddy without permit — Owner held liable for act of his servant done without his knowledge — Plea of absence of mens rea — (Penal Code (1860) S. 40) — (Master and servant — Vicarious liability).

It is quite true that as a general rule of criminal law the master is not responsible for the unauthorised acts of his servants. But in many cases the law imposes upon the owner of the property the obligation of managing it, so that it shall not injuriously affect any one else or the public, or requires or forbids the dealing with it in some particular way. In such cases, where the breach of obligation is punishable criminally, the owner cannot free himself from liability by delegating the management to some one else on his behalf. This liability of the master is insisted upon because otherwise every master will be able to get at nought the entire series of special Acts by employing servants AD HOC and getting illegal acts done and at the same time disown his liability therefor and would take care always to be out of the way. (Para 5)

The true test is to look at the object of each Act that is under consideration to see how far knowledge is of the essence of the offence created. In arriving at this decision, it has been held material to enquire; (1) whether the object of the statute would be frustrated, if proof of such knowledge was necessary; (2) whether there is anything in the wording of the particular section which implies knowledge; (3) whether there is anything in other sections showing that knowledge is an element in the offence, which is omitted or referred to in the section under discussion. These tests have been applied in cases arising under the Licence Laws and other special enactments. (Para 11)

The accused an owner of a rice mill was prosecuted under S. 7(1) of the Essential Supplies Temporary Powers Act, 1946, for contravention of Govt. Order, 432, Food Department, dated 12-4-1947 by which hulling of paddy by the owner or a person in charge of the mill without a permit was made punishable. On a certain night at 2-30 A.M. a surprise raid was made on the rice mill belonging to the accused. The engine driver who was the person in charge of machine was caught red-handed while hulling paddy without a permit. The owner who was living in the same village not far away was absent.

Held that in the circumstances of the case and in terms of the particular enactment which the accused had violated, the master was liable for the acts of his servant notwithstanding the plea that he might put forward that as the acts were done without his knowledge, he had no mens rea. Case law discussed. (Para 16)

Anno: Penal Code, S. 40 N. 1.

S. Sitarama Iyyar, for Petitioner; Public Prosecutor on behalf of the State.

REFERENCES: Courtwar/Chronological/ Paras

('47) 1947-2 Mad LJ 328: (AIR 1947 PC 135)	6
('51) 1951 Mad WN Cri 102: (AIR 1951 SC 204: 52 Cri LJ 768)	12
('48) AIR 1948 Bom 364: (49 Cri LJ 551)	6
('49) 53 Cal WN 300: (50 Cri LJ 590)	7
('49) Cri Revn Case No 1181 of 1949 (Mad)	6
('50) 1950 Mad WN Cri 302: (AIR 1951 Mad 261)	7
(1875) R v Prince: (1875-2 CLR 154)	9
(1901) 2 KB 290: (70 LJKB 747)	15
(1906) 1 KB 131: (75 LJKB 163)	15
(1910) 2 KB 471: (79 LJKB 1123)	15
(1917) 2 KB 836: (87 LJKB 82)	12
(1924) 1 KB 102: (93 LJKB 50)	5
(1924) 1 KB 311: (93 LJKB 144)	15
(1930) 1 KB 211: (99 LJKB 146)	6
(1866) 1 QB 702: (7 B & S 710)	5
(1874) 9 QB 292: (43 LJMC 61)	14
(1891) 2 QB 588: (61 LJMC 38)	13
(1895) 1 QB 918: (64 LJMC 218)	15
(1876) 1 QBD 89: (45 LJMC 65)	5
(1879) 5 QBD 259: (49 LJMC 45)	15
(1884) 13 QBD 207: (53 LJMC 125)	15
(1888) 20 QBD 771: (57 LJMC 100)	15
(1889) R v Tolson: (1889-23 QBD 168)	9
(1890) 21 QBD 249: (57 LJMC 105)	5

ORDER: This is a Criminal Revision Case which has been filed against the conviction and sentence of the Second Additional First Class Magistrate of Thiruchirapalli in S. T. Case No. 129 of 1951.

(2) The facts are: The petitioner Kasi Raja son of Periyasami Muthuraja is the proprietor of the Thiruveswarar Rice Mills, Ariyur. This proprietor employed a driver who has been examined as P. W. 3 in this case for driving the rice mill. On the night of 21-10-1950 at about 2-30 A.M. the Taluk Supply Officer, who has been examined as P. W. 1, made a surprise visit. Then he found that the driver was hulling four kalams of paddy belonging to one Appu Ayyar of Ariyur village without a permit. The proprietor was absent from the place. Therefore the Taluk Supply Officer recorded statements from the engine driver as well as the village Munsif. The statement given by the driver is Ex. P-1 and the statement given by the village Munsif is Ex. P-2. In the statement given by the driver and from which he went behind in the Court when he was examined as P. W. 3, on account of which he was treated as hostile to the prosecution and was cross-examined, this driver has admitted as follows: (After quoting the evidence of this witness His Lordship proceeded:) The village munsif gave a statement to which he has stuck to in the Court when he was examined as P. W. 2 namely that when the mill was suddenly inspected by the Taluk Supply Officer at 2-30 A.M. the facts found were as set out in the above statement of the driver. The village munsif also touched the machine and found it very hot showing that it had just been running. In addition, the Taluk Supply Officer stated that when he made this surprise raid he found persons dispersing with loads of paddy & that the lights were put out. Therefore he obtained necessary sanction of the Collector and prosecuted this proprietor Kasi Rajan under S. 7(1), Essential Supplies Temporary Powers Act.

(3) The case for the accused seems to be two-fold namely that there was no running of the machine & hulling of paddy of Appu Ayyar without a permit & secondly that he the master is not liable for the act of the servants. One is a finding of fact and the other is a point of law.

(4) Turning to the point of fact, there cannot be the slightest doubt that the version of the petitioner before us is a tissue of lies from beginning to end. (After discussion of the evidence His Lordship concluded). It is manifest therefore, that what was being hulled was hulled without the proper hulling permit. Therefore it is absolutely clear that when the Taluk Supply Officer had raided this mill at an unearthly hour, the mill was working and was actually grinding paddy for Appu Ayyar without a hulling permit.

(5) Then we come to the point of law raised which is (not?) unsubstantial and which has practically become a time-honoured defence in these cases. The point taken is that the master who was quietly at home and did not know what was going on in the mill is not liable for the act of the servant and that since the master has not got the necessary MENS REA he could not be convicted. It is quite true that as a general rule of criminal law the master is not responsible for the unauthorised acts of his servants. But in many cases the law imposes upon the owner of the property the obligation of managing it, so that it shall not injuriously affect any one else or the public, or requires or forbids the dealing with it in some particular way. In such cases, where the breach of obligation is punishable criminally, the owner cannot free himself from liability by delegating the management to someone else on his behalf. This liability of the master is insisted upon because otherwise every master will be able to set at nought the entire series of special acts by employing servants AD HOC and getting illegal acts done and at the same time disown his liability therefor and would take care always to be out of the way. (R. v. Stephens, (1866) 1 Q B 702; — Redgate v. Haynes, (1876) 1 Q B 89; — Bond v. Evans, (1890) 21 Q B D 249; — Allen v. Whitehead, (1930) 1 K B 211; — Griffiths v. Studebaker, Ltd., (1924) 1 K B 102.)

(6) In fact this very argument was advanced in this Court in — Cri. Rev. Case No. 1181 of 1949 (Mad) and it was repelled. The argument was that the master had no MENS REA because the actual hulling was done at the instance of the manager. My learned brother Govinda Menon J. repelled that argument and stated that this plea did not appeal to him because of the specific provisions of the order which had been contravened, and that the learned Magistrate had also pointed out that in Government Order 432, Food Department dated 12-4-1947 hulling paddy either by the owner or a person in charge of a mill without a permit was made punishable. The Privy Council decision in — Srinivas Mall v. Emperor, 1947-2 Mad L J 328 was relied upon before my learned brother and he pointed out as follows:

"There Sir John Beaumont quotes a passage from the judgment of the Lord Chief Justice where a specific mention is made that in cases where the legal provision contravened exempts matters in which MENS REA is made not necessary in such cases the master can be made liable for the acts of servants. The learned counsel also relies upon the judgment of the Chief Justice of Bombay in — Isak Solomon Macmull v. Emperor, AIR 1948 Bom. 364. I do not find that the Bombay decision can be of much help to the facts of the present case. Here according to the order promulgated 'any owner who allows paddy to be hulled in his rice mill without a permit is made liable'."

(7) The question as to the precise kind of MENS REA which is required in such cases formed also the subject-matter of discussion in — Narayana Naik v. State, 1950 Mad W. N. Cri. 302 where reliance was placed in — Bhola-prasad v. The King, 53 Cal. W. N. 300, before Panchapagesa Sastry J. Panchapagesa Sastri J. held that what was meant by saying that MENS REA should be established was that it should be proved that the accused had a guilty mind in doing the act; if the accused knew that the law and the conditions of the licence given to him required that he should comply with certain formalities (such as making certain entries in the receipts issued by him) and with that knowledge he deliberately omitted to comply with those formalities, he must be held to have a guilty mind; what the law requires is only a conscious violation of the statute and the profit motive or anything analogous to it is not essential. In that case Panchapagesa Sastri J. examined relevant circumstances and found that the accused could not have escaped having a guilty mind.

(8) In the instant case let us examine the circumstances which the Taluk Supply Officer found when he raided the mill. Its owner, the accused, is living in the village not far from the mill. The mill was kept working at the most unusual part of the night namely 2-30 a.m. On seeing the Taluk Supply Officer many persons with head loads of paddy dispersed helter-skelter. Then the person who was caught was the driver with the machine running with the hull full of paddy and the vazhi full of rice. The owner could not escape having knowledge that his mill was being run in the night and that it was hulling paddy without permits and the hulled paddy not being brought into account. The accused cannot escape by saying that because he was living at some distance he had no knowledge of the mill running, for in order to run the mill there must be consumption of oil and other incidental expenses. So how can this owner escape knowledge of the fact that his mill was being run at nights for illegal purposes? Therefore, in this case even if a conscious violation of the statute is required such conscious violation was present in this case and can be deduced from the circumstances set out above.

(9) But as a matter of fact this plea of MENS REA is very often used without fully comprehending its place either in the Indian Penal Code or in the special Acts which are being enacted in larger and larger numbers. It is an almost immemorial common place of English Judges to state that there can be no conviction on a criminal charge, unless the prisoner has a 'mens rea' or guilty mind. The maxim which lays down this doctrine ('actus non facit reum nisi mens sit rea'): ('Non est reus nisi mens sit rea') has been traced by Sir James Stephen backwards through Lord Coke to the laws of Henry I. Its meaning was discussed with great elaboration in two cases (— 'R. v. Prince', (1875) 2 CLR 154) and — 'R. v. Tolson', (1889-23 Q B D 168) where the Judges differed completely as to its application. In the last case, Stephen J., with characteristic independence expressed an opinion that the maxim itself was not of much practical value, and was not only likely to mislead but was absolutely misleading and in this opinion, Manisty J. who agreed with him in nothing else, most heartily concurred. When the maxim originated, criminal law practically dealt with common law offences, none of which was defined. The law gave them certain names, such as treason, murder, burglary, larceny or rape and left any person who was interested in the matter to find out for himself what these terms meant. To do this he had to resort to the explanations of text-writers and the decisions of Judges. There he found that the crime consisted not merely in doing a particular act, such as killing a man, or carrying away his purse, but in doing the act with a particular knowledge or purpose. This superadded mental state was generalized by the term 'mens rea'.

(10) But under the Penal Code such a maxim is wholly out of place. Every offence is defined, and the definition states not only what the accused must have done, but the state of his mind with regard to the act when he was doing it. It must have been done, knowingly, voluntarily, fraudulently, dishonestly, or the like. And when it is stated that the act must be done with a particular knowledge or intention, the definition goes on to state what he must have known, or what he must have intended.

(11) If this is the case with the Indian Penal Code, we find now a large and growing class of statutory offences, where acts previously innocent are forbidden, or acts previously optional are commanded, simply because the State considers such legislation necessary for its own interests, or for the protection of some particular class of community. We shall now examine what place this plea of mens rea has got in these special Acts. Here the object of the State is merely to compel the adoption of a particular line of conduct, and the penalties that are imposed are intended, not for punishment, but for prevention as the only means which the State has at its disposal for the enforcement of its laws. Now, in regard to such cases, questions have frequently arisen, whether a person is punishable under the statute, when he has violated its provisions in ignorance of the fact on which the violation depends. In some cases of this sort, the Judges, influenced by the 'mens rea' doctrine, have sought to solve the question by enquiring whether the proceeding was really a criminal proceeding or not. It is now, however, settled that the true test is to look at the object of each Act that is under consideration to see how far knowledge is of the essence of the offence created. In arriving at this decision, it has been held material to enquire: (1) Whether the object of the statute would be frustrated, if proof of such knowledge was necessary; (2) Whether there is anything in the wording of the particular section which implies knowledge; (3) Whether there is anything in other sections showing that knowledge is an element in the offence, which is omitted or referred to in the section under discussion. These tests have been applied in cases arising under the Licence Laws and other special enactments.

(12) The place of mens rea in special Acts has been discussed at considerable length in Supreme Court decision in — 'Hariprasada Rao v. The State', 1951 Mad W N Cri 102 (S.C.). There the English decisions were examined & have been cited with approval. It is pointed out there that in — 'Mousell Brothers Ltd. v. London and North Western Railway', (1917) 2 K. B. 836 at P. 844, Viscount Reading C. J. dealing with a case under the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, observed as follows:

"'Prima facie' then, a master is not to be made criminally responsible for the acts of his servant to which the master is not a party. But it may be the intention of the Legislature, in order to guard against happening of the forbidden thing, to impose a liability upon a principal even though he does not know of, and is not party to, the forbidden act done by his servant. Many statutes are passed with this object. Acts done by the servant of the licensed holder of licensed premises render the licensed holder in some instances liable, even though the act was done by his servant without the knowledge of the master. Under the Food and Drugs Act there are again instances well known in these Courts where the master is made responsible, even though he knows nothing of the act done by his servant and he may be fined or rendered amenable to the penalty enjoined by the law. In those cases the Legislature absolutely forbids the act and makes the principal liable without a mens rea."

(13) In the same case, Atkin J. expressed the same view in these words:

"I think that the authorities cited by my Lord make it plain that while prima facie a principal is not to be made criminally responsible for the acts of his servants, yet the Legislature may prohibit an act or enforce a duty in such words as to make the prohibition or the duty absolute; in which case the principal is liable if the act is in fact done by his servants. To ascertain whether a particular Act of Parliament has that effect or not regard must be had to the object of the statute, the words used, the nature of the duty laid down, the person upon whom it is imposed, the person by whom it would in ordinary circumstances be performed, and the person upon whom the penalty is imposed. If authority for this is necessary, it will be found in the judgment of Bowen L. J. in — 'Reg v. Tyler', (1891) 2 Q. B. 588 at P. 592"

(14) In — 'Mullins v. Collins', (1874) 9 Q. B. 292 the servant of a licensed victualler having knowingly supplied liquor to a constable on duty without the authority of his superior officer, it was held that the licensed victualler was liable to be convicted although he had no knowledge of the act of his servant. In dealing with this case, Blackburn J., observed thus:

"If we held that there must be a personal knowledge in the licensed person, we should make the enactment of no effect."

(15) There are many other cases in England in which the same view has been enunciated and some of them have been collected and classified in the judgment of Wright J. in — 'Sherras v. De Rutzen', (1895) 1-Q. B. 918 at P. 921. The familiar English cases are:—'R. v. Duke of Leinster', (1924) 1 KB 311. c.f. 18 Cox 2:—'R. v. Bishop', (1879)-5 Q.B.D. 259; —'Hobbs v. Corporation of Winchester', (1910)-2-K.B. 471; —'Betts v. Armstead', (1888) 20 Q.B.D. 771; —'Goulder v. Rook', (1901) 2 K. B. 290; —'Laird v. Dobell', (1906) 1 K. B. 131; —'Cundy v. Lecocq', (1884) 13 Q.B.D. 207. The principle laid down in these cases has been followed in several cases in this country also.

(16) There cannot be the slightest doubt, therefore that in the circumstances of the case and in terms of the particular enactment which this accused has violated the master is liable for the acts of his servants notwithstanding the plea that he might put forward that as the acts were done without his knowledge, he had no 'mens rea'.

(17) In the result, this criminal revision petition, wholly devoid of merits, is dismissed.
B/K.S. Revision dismissed.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 159 (Vol. 40, C. N. 49)

FULL BENCH

P. V. RAJAMANNAR C. J., SOMASUNDARAM AND VENKATARAMA AIYAR JJ.

Bandi Veeraju and others, Appellants v. Bandi Narayanamma, Respondent.

S. A. No. 488 of 1948 and Memo of objections, D/- 25-7-1952.

Hindu Law — Widow — Maintenance — Fixing quantum — Income of family as on which date relevant.

The widow of a deceased coparcener in a joint Hindu family has a right of maintenance against the surviving coparceners quoad the share of her deceased husband which survives to them. This is an absolute right which accrues to her as a member of the joint family. On the death of her husband a widow continues to be a member of the joint family along with the male coparceners. Her fortunes are bound up with the fortunes of the family. If the income of the family increases she will be entitled to the benefit of it. Likewise, if the income of the family decreases, she must submit to a reduction of her maintenance. The quantum of maintenance to which a widow is entitled is subject to variation, even when fixed by the court, by reason of a change of circumstances. Therefore, it is right to fix the rate of maintenance taking into consideration the income of the joint family at the time of the institution of her suit and not as on the death of her husband: 27 MLJ 291, Foll.; 27 Mad 45 and 21 MLJ 706, Expl. and Disting.; Case law discussed.

(Paras 7, 9)

K. Ramachandra Rao, for Appellants; Y. G. Krishnamurthy, for Respondent.

RAJAMANNAR C. J.: This second appeal was first heard by Ramaswami J. who considered that an important question affecting the award of maintenance to the widow of a deceased coparcener against the surviving coparceners arose in this case, on which there appeared to be a conflict of judicial opinion. Hence this reference to a Full Bench.

(2) The second appeal arises out of a suit filed by the respondent for the recovery of maintenance at the rate of Rs. 1000 per annum from the date of suit and for arrears of maintenance for about a year before the institution of the suit at the same rate, for provision for residence and other minor reliefs. The respondent's deceased husband, Venkatarayudu, and defendants 2 and 4 who are appellants 1 and 3 were the undivided sons of the first defendant. The 3rd defendant (2nd appellant) is the son of the 1st appellant. The respondent's husband died undivided from the family nearly 30 years before the suit. The respondent claimed a sum of Rs. 1000 as a proper rate of maintenance on the allegation that the family owned about 150 acres of land fetching an annual income of Rs. 20,000 and had also a large moneylending business. The defendants pleaded 'inter alia' that soon after the plaintiff's husband's death there was an agreement between the plaintiff's father acting on her behalf and the first defendant that the plaintiff should be paid a sum of Rs. 100 per annum towards her maintenance and that neither the plaintiff nor the defendants should ask for its alteration at any time. This amount was fixed, according to them, having regard to the extent of the family estate at the time of the plaintiff's husband's death namely, about 54 acres of land of which 6 acres alone were wet. The learned District Munsif of Kovur who tried the suit held that the arrangement set up by the defendants was not true and proceeded to fix the maintenance. He held that the quantum of maintenance had to be fixed taking into consideration the income of the family on the date of the suit and the plaintiff's husband's share therein if he had been alive. He estimated the nett income of the family at not less than Rs. 7000 and fixed a sum of Rs. 750 per annum. He also awarded arrears of maintenance at the same rate for the year 1943. The defendants appealed to the Subordinate Judge, who confirmed the decision of the District Munsif except as regards costs. The defendants thereupon filed the second appeal which is now before us.

(3) The main ground which was taken in the memorandum of appeal was that the lower courts should have held that the plaintiff was entitled to maintenance only from the share of her husband in the properties that the family owned and possessed at the time of his death. Learned counsel for the appellants pressed only this point before us. He contended that the rate of maintenance should be fixed having regard to the properties which were owned by the joint family at the time of the plaintiff's husband's death and she should not get the benefit of subsequent acquisitions made by the family.

(4) On this question there is direct authority in this court. In — Manicka Mudaliar v. Sowbagiammal, 27 Mad L J 291 it was held by a Division Bench consisting of Sankaran Nair and Spencer JJ. that the amount of maintenance should be fixed with reference to the income of the family as it stood at the date of the suit and not as it stood at the date of the husband's death. In that case, the plaintiff's husband died in 1897 and the suit for maintenance was brought in 1911. When the plaintiff's husband died the joint family was possessed of about 1 acre of wet land and about 1½ acres of dry land and was carrying on a small trade in cloth. After his death, the trade increased and the profits became large and properties were purchased out of the income from the trade. The income of the family on the date of the suit was estimated at Rs. 17500 per annum on an average. The District Judge awarded maintenance at the rate of Rs. 50 per mensem. It was contended that the lower court was wrong in fixing the maintenance with reference to the present income of the family but this contention was overruled. They observed:

"It is not contended that the property out of which the plaintiff seeks to be maintained is not joint family property; that the defendants did not take her husband's interest by survivorship and that formed in part the nucleus of this acquisition. It is also clear that if the family income had been reduced, the plaintiff would only get a reduced rate of maintenance and she would not be entitled to have it fixed with reference to the family income at the date of her husband's death."

They followed two rulings of the Bombay High Court in — Madhavray Keshav Tilak v. Gangabai, 2 Bom 639 and — Adhibai v. Gurusandas Nathur, 11 Bom 199. In — Madhavray Keshav Tilak v. Gangabai, 2 Bom 639, Westropp C. J. and Kemball J. had held that a Hindu widow is not entitled to a larger portion of the annual produce of the joint family property as maintenance than the annual proceeds of the share to which her husband would have been entitled on partition were he then living, and this decision had been followed in the later case. Wadsworth J. followed the decision in — Manicka Mudaliar v. Sowbagiammal, 27 Mad L J 291 in — Veerayya v. Chellamma, ILR 1939 Mad 234. No doubt, that was a suit for enhancement of maintenance already fixed by a decree of court. But the principle applied was the same. He held that the maximum which could be awarded to the widow be the amount of the income from the share to which her husband would have been entitled had he been alive and a coparcener at the date of the suit for enhancement. The learned Judge pointed that the ruling in — Manicka Mudaliar v. Sowbagia Ammal, 27 Mad L J 291 had not been challenged by subsequent rulings of this court in the 24 years which had elapsed since that decision had been passed.

(5) The only support which learned counsel for the appellant sought for the contrary view for which he contended was from certain observations in two decisions of this court. In — Jayanti Subbiah v. Alamelu Mangamma, 27 Mad 45, Bhashyam Aiyangar J. said:

"When an undivided Hindu family consists of two or more males related as father and sons or otherwise and one of them dies leaving a widow, she has a right of maintenance against the surviving coparcener or coparceners, 'quoad' the share or interest of her deceased husband in the joint family property which has come by survivorship into the hands of the surviving coparcener or coparceners, and though such right does not in itself form a charge upon her husband's share or interest in the joint family property, yet, when it becomes necessary to enforce or preserve such right effectually, it could be made a specific charge on a reasonable portion of the joint family property, such portion of course not exceeding her husband's share or interest therein."

(6) In — Rangathayi Ammal v. Munuswami Chetti, 21 Mad L J 706, the following passage occurs in the judgment in a discussion as to the amount of maintenance which a Hindu widow is entitled to:

"No hard and fast rule can be laid down that she is entitled to a particular fraction of the income, although she could, in no event, claim more than the income of the share of the estate which her husband would have been entitled to, if a division had taken place during his lifetime."

As pointed out in — Bansidhar Lala v. Champoo Bibi Mst., 21 Luck 152, the observations in — Jayanti Subbiah v. Alamelu Mangamma, 27 Mad 45 cited above can scarcely be regarded as authority for the proposition that the maximum limit for the maintenance allowance of a Hindu widow is her husband's share in the income of the family property at the time of his death. In that case, no question arose as to the amount of maintenance. A creditor of the deceased husband of a widow had obtained a decree on a promissory note executed by him and in execution of that decree he became the purchaser of the house which belonged to the deceased in which the widow was living. When the decree-holder proceeded to obtain delivery of the house he was resisted by the widow on the ground that she had a right of residence during her lifetime and that she could not therefore be ejected from the residential portion of the house. The District Judge upheld her contention. But the learned Judges of this court reversed the decision of the District Judge on this point. It was in the course of dealing with the nature of the widow's right of maintenance that the learned Judge made the observations above extracted. In — Rangathayi Ammal v. Muniswami Chetti, 21 Mad L J 706, no doubt the question was, what was the proper rate of maintenance to be awarded to a widow against her step-son. It appears from the facts set out in the judgment that no considerable time elapsed between the death of her husband and the institution of the suit for maintenance by the widow. No question therefore arose as to whether the income of the family on the date of the husband's death or on the date of the institution of the suit should be taken into consideration in fixing the amount of maintenance. We cannot therefore take this decision as a direct authority on the question now before us. We may also mention that there is no reference by the learned Judges to the Bombay decisions which were referred to in — 'Manicka Mudaliar v. Sowbagiammal', 27 Mad L J 291.

(7) On principle, we are in entire agreement with the decisions in — 'Manicka Mudaliar v. Sowbagiammal', 27 Mad L J 291 and — 'Veerayya v. Chellammal', ILR 1939 Mad 234. The law is well settled that the widow of a deceased coparcener in a joint Hindu family has a right of maintenance against the surviving coparceners 'quoad' the share of her deceased husband which survives to them. This is an absolute right which accrues to her as a member of the joint family. The correct conception of the widow's right is thus set out in — 'Lingayya v. Kanakamma', I L R 38 Mad 153, at p. 154:

"The wives of the male coparceners in a Hindu family are not entitled to equal shares with the males in the family estate, nor do they take their husband's shares by representation on their death, but in place thereof, they are entitled to a portion of their estate for their enjoyment during their lifetime sufficient to maintain them in comfort according to the means of the family. This is an absolute right due to their membership in the family and does not depend on their necessity arising from their want of other means to support themselves."

(Vide also — 'Commr. of Income-tax v. Bhagwati', ILR 1947 All 543 at p. 551 P.C.).

(8) It must not be overlooked that the wives or widows of the coparceners, though they may not be themselves coparceners are members of the undivided family along with the males. (— 'Bhagwati v. Commissioner of Income-tax', ILR 1941 All 43). There can be a joint family even with the single male member provided there are widows of the deceased coparceners or other persons entitled to maintenance from him (— 'Vedathunni v. Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras', 56 Mad 1). Their Lordships of the Judicial Committee expressly say that they do not agree that a Hindu joint family necessarily consists of male members only: (— 'Kalyanji Vithal Das v. Commissioner of Incometax, Bengal', ILR 1937-1 Cal 653 PC). There can be a joint family where there are widows only, for a Hindu joint family is not finally terminated so long as it is possible in nature or law to add a male member to it. Any of the widows can bring into the family a new male member by adoption (Mayne's Hindu Law, 11th Edn., page 334).

(9) It follows, therefore, that on the death of her husband a widow continues to be a member of the joint family along with the male coparceners. Her fortunes are bound up with the fortunes of the family. If the income of the family increases she will be entitled to the benefit of it. Likewise, if the income of the family decreases she must submit to a reduction of her maintenance. The learned advocate for the appellants did not contest the proposition that the quantum of maintenance to which a widow is entitled is subject to variation, even when fixed by the court, by reason of a change of circumstances. This feature is inconsistent with the contention of the appellants that the widow's maintenance should be fixed taking into consideration her husband's share in the income of the joint family at the time of his death and at no subsequent time. Reference was made to the decision in — 'Audemma v. Varadareddi', ILR 1948 Mad 803. The exact question which is now before us did not arise in that case. But Govindarajachari J. notices the apparent conflict between — 'Rangathayi Ammal v. Munisami Chetti', 21 Mad L J 706 and — 'Manicka Mudaliar v. Sowbagia Ammal', 27 Mad LJ 291. It was unnecessary for the purpose of that case to resolve the conflict. But we agree with the following observations made by the learned Judge in dealing with the claim for maintenance by a widow against coparcenary property in which at one time her husband was a sharer:

"If it is borne in mind that the widow's right of maintenance is the truncated right which still remains out of what was at one time a claim to a share of the family property, there will be no difficulty in recognising that, as a necessary and logical consequence of the nature of the right possessed by the widow, her maintenance would be dependent upon the varying fortunes of the family. Her comforts would dwindle if the family property is reduced; but, if the family becomes more affluent, she will be entitled to participate in that affluence."

We have therefore no hesitation in holding that in fixing the rate of maintenance the courts below were right in taking into consideration the income of the joint family at the time of the institution of the suit. Having regard to the net income estimated at Rs. 7,000, we think that the amount fixed by the courts below, namely, Rs. 750 per annum, is proper and reasonable. We see no reason to alter that figure. The second appeal and Memorandum of objections are dismissed with costs.

A/M.K.S.

Appeal dismissed.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 161 (Vol. 40, C. N. 50)

CHANDRA REDDI J.

Syed Sulaiman Sahib, Appellant v. Kader Ibrahim Meeral Bivi and others, Respondents.

Second Appeal No. 1461 of 1948, D/- 29.1.1952.

(a) Family settlement — Essentials — For a family settlement, the parties thereto must have competing titles in respect of the properties in dispute — Invalid gift deed cannot be construed as a family settlement; 13 Rang 679 and ILR 1943 Mad 1 (PC) Rel. on. ILR 52 All 716 Disting — (Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 5).

Anno: T. P. Act, S. 5 N. 4.

(b) Muhammadian Law — Succession — Relinquishment of future inheritance does not operate as estoppel — (Evidence Act (1872), S. 115).

As Muhammadian Law prohibits relinquishment of rights of future inheritance, whether for consideration or not, such a relinquishment is void and it cannot be relied upon as an estoppel against the heir apparent so as to preclude him from repudiating the transaction by which he was benefited: 41 Mad 365 Rel. on. ILR 1936 All 834 Diss.

(Para 10)

Apart from it, there can be no estoppel on a question of law or against statute:

AIR 1939 PC 201 Relied on. (1945) 2 MLJ 208 Ref. (Para 11)
Anno: Evi. Act, S. 115 N. 3(c), 50.

(c) Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 35 — Courses to be elected must be legal — Doctrine cannot be resorted to cure illegality.

No question of election arises when one of the courses open to the person is not a legal or lawful one. If the result of electing one of the remedies is to put a person to the necessity of choosing a course which is opposed to law this doctrine should not be invoked. The doctrine of election cannot be resorted to in order to cure an illegality: Case law referred. (Para 13)
Anno: T. P. Act, S. 35 N. 15.

(d) Muhammadan Law — Gift — Gift by father to his sons — Eldest son alienating properties donated to him — Death of father — Suit by eldest son for partition of father's estate — Maintainability.

A, a Muhammadan, executed a gift deed in favour of all his sons. B, his eldest son, alienated the properties donated to him for consideration. On A's death B sued for partition and possession of his share in A's property.

Held (1) that the gift deed was invalid under the Muhammadan Law and hence inoperative.

(2) that there was no estoppel against B by reason of his sale of the properties gifted to him under the deed.

(3) That A would be deemed to have died possessed of the entire estate including what was gifted to B and that the parties in the suit were entitled to share in the entire estate in accordance with the provisions of Muhammadan Law.

(Para 15)

S. Ramachandra Iyer, for Appellant; G. R. Jagadesa Iyer, for Respondents.

JUDGMENT: The plaintiff is the appellant. His suit for partition of his father's estate and for possession of 98-616 share in those properties with past and future mesne profits was dismissed by the District Munsif of Tenkasi, which was confirmed on appeal by the District Judge of Tinevelly.

(2) Plaintiff and defendants 1 to 7 are the children of one Sehu Mian Tharaganar by his three wives. On 9-7-1934, Sehu Mian executed Ex. D. 1, a gift deed in which he made various dispositions, the construction of which is one of the tasks in this appeal. He died in April 1941. Prior to his death, the plaintiff, who was one of the donees under the deed sold a portion of the properties under Ex. D. 2 for a sum of Rs. 200. In 1943, i.e., on 10-3-1943 the plaintiff alienated the other properties which were gifted to him under Ex. D. 1 for a sum of Rs. 2235, the sale deed being Ex. D. 3. Having sold away the properties which he got under the gift deed, he filed the suit, which has given rise to the present appeal, for the reliefs mentioned above.

(3) While the 2nd defendant supported the plaintiff the other defendants contested the suit. The defences to the suit were

1. That the gift deed was a valid one.
2. That even if it were not valid as a gift, it amounted to a family settlement, and
3. That the plaintiff was estopped from questioning the validity of the settlement deed.

The trial court answered the issues relating to the family settlement and estoppel in favour of the defendants and against the plaintiff and dismissed the suit. On appeal, the District Judge agreed with the trial court on the issue as to estoppel and in that view thought it unnecessary to consider whether the dispositions under Ex. D. 1 could amount to a family settlement or not. In the result, the appeal was dismissed with costs.

(4) The plaintiff, who is dissatisfied with the decision of the District Judge has preferred the second appeal. In support of the appeal, various contentions were put forward by Mr. Ramachandra Aiyer.

(5) The first point that arises on these contentions is whether Ex. D. 1 evidences a valid gift in favour of the plaintiff and defendants or not. In spite of the strenuous arguments of Mr. Jagadisan to convince me that the gifts in favour of the several donees are valid and can take effect, I am satisfied that the dispositions made by the donor under Ex. D. 1 are opposed to the provisions of Muhammadan law & therefore void. It is unnecessary for me to make a detailed examination of the various provisions in Ex. D. 1 as the document prima facie appears to contain invalid gifts.

(6) Mr. Ramachandra Aiyer, while arguing that the dispositions in favour of the other parties were void, being forbidden by Muhammadan law, wanted to save the gift in favour of the plaintiff by urging that there is nothing invalid so far as the disposition in favour of the plaintiff is concerned. I do not think I can give effect to this argument. On reading the documents as a whole and having regard to the fact that these gifts are inter-dependent on one another, I should hold that Ex. D. 1 as a gift deed was invalid.

(7) Finding that it is a hopeless task to support the validity of Ex. D. 1 as a gift deed Mr. Jagadisan attempted to have the various gifts upheld on the plea of a family settlement, which plea found favour with the trial court. I do not think I can accept this argument. Apart from the question whether an invalid gift can be supported as a family settlement which seems to be doubtful in view of the decision in — 'Phul Bee Bee v. R. M. P. Chettiar Firm', 13 Rang. 679 which decided that an invalid gift cannot be construed as a family settlement, it looks to me that it is futile to contend in this case that the gift deed evidenced a valid family settlement. For a family settlement, the parties thereto should have competing titles in respect of the properties in dispute. In — 'Ramayya v. Lakshmayya', ILR (1943) Mad 1, in dealing with the argument that an arrangement, which was sought to be supported in that case was a bona fide settlement of family disputes, their Lordships of the Privy Council remarked thus:

"But what is important to notice is this, that Subbaramayya had no right to the properties except what he derived by the gift made in his favour by Bangaramma. Since it has not been shown that Subbaramayya had any competing title of his own in respect of the properties in dispute, there can be no basis in their Lordships' opinion for a valid family settlement between the parties which would bind the reversion. In — 'Khunilal v. Gobind Krishna Narain', 33 All 356, their Lordships pointed out that 'the true test to apply to a transaction which is challenged by the reversioners as an alienation not binding on them is whether the alienee derives title from the holder of the limited interest or life tenant.' In the present case, it is clear that what title Subbaramayya had to the properties was acquired under the compromise from the widow since he had no antecedent title of his own to them. In the circumstances their Lordships agree with the High Court that the claim of the contesting defendants to a two thirds share of the properties cannot be sustained on the basis of the arrangement in 1867."

(8) In support of his contention that Ex. D. 1 could be viewed as a family settlement, Mr. Jagadisan placed reliance on a ruling of the Allahabad High Court in — 'Poohar Singh v. Dulari Kunwar', 52 All 716. But that decision is not an authority for the proposition that, to sustain a family settlement the parties thereto need not have competing titles. All that that case laid down was that the dispute need not be a present one & that the existence of a family dispute to be settled was not essential to the validity of a family arrangement. So, this contention also fails.

(9) This leads me to the question whether the plaintiff was in anyway estopped from claiming a share in the suit properties. In coming to the conclusion that the plaintiff was so estopped, the learned District Judge relied on a ruling of the Allahabad High Court in — 'Latafat Hussain v. Hidayat Hussain', ILR 1936 All 834. It was laid down there that a relinquishment or renunciation of a future right of inheritance is void as it is prohibited under Muhammadan Law; but the heir apparent who so renounced that future right to inherit, may be estopped from claiming the inheritance when it falls due by this conduct. The opinion of the learned Judges was that while the relinquishment or renunciation of the future right of inheritance is void, a contract made by the heir for consideration not to claim that right, cannot be in anyway illegal or forbidden by any law. I am unable to appreciate the distinction drawn by the learned Judges. I fail to see how a contract to enforce a thing which is void can be said to be valid. With respect to the learned Judges, I am unable to accept the proposition as a sound one. Section 23 of the Indian Contract Act lays down in unmistakable terms that it is only contracts which are not forbidden by law, that are valid and can be enforced.

(10) Further this ruling seems to be opposed to the view taken in our High Court. In — 'Asa Beevi v. Karuppan Chetti', 41 I. C. 361, the question arose whether an arrangement by which an heir apparent renounced his future right for consideration to inherit property was a valid one and could be enforced. Sadasiva Aiyar J. took the view that as Muhammadan Law prohibits relinquishment of rights of future inheritance, whether for consideration or not such a relinquishment was void and it could not be relied upon as an estoppel, while Spencer J. came to a contrary conclusion. In the opinion of Spencer J. a renunciation of a right to succession is not opposed to the principles of Muhammadan law and when, under that arrangement the heir apparent accepts a benefit, he is estopped from repudiating the transaction by which he has benefited. Dealing with the question of estoppel, Sadasiva Aiyar J. observed, there can be no question of estoppel on a question of law and that the representation in order to work as an estoppel must be a material statement of fact and must have reference to present or past state of things.

(11) On this difference of opinion, the matter came up for hearing before Sir John Wallis C. J., Bakewell J. and Kumaraswami Sastriar J. The decision of these three Judges is reported in — 'Assabeevi v. Karuppan Chetti', 41 Mad 365. The learned Judges agreed with the conclusion arrived at by Sadasiva Aiyar J. on the ground that the transfer of an expectancy of that kind was not permitted by Muhammadan law. They did not expressly state that there could be no estoppel in such a case. However in view of the fact that the learned Judges agreed with Sadasiva Aiyar J. that the second appeal should be dismissed, which could only be on the basis that the heir apparent who entered into the arrangement referred to above was not estopped from claiming a share in the inheritance it can be reasonably assumed that they concurred with Sadasiva Aiyar J. on that point also. Even apart from it, the principle that there can be no estoppel on a question of law or against statute cannot be open to serious doubt. In — 'Kartar Singh v. Dayal Das', AIR 1939 P. C. 201, it was laid down by the Privy Council that there could be no estoppel on a statement of law relating to the validity of nomination of a person as a chela under the terms of a will. See also — 'Virayya v. Bapayya', 1945-2-M.L.J. 208.

(12) Mr. Jagadisan sought to support the judgment of the courts below on the question of estoppel by putting forward the following argument. By adopting Ex. D. 1 as a valid one the plaintiff induced the defendants to believe that he would not claim a share in the suit properties and thereby led them to discharge the debts left by the donor. He referred to a number of cases for the position that a party can be estopped if he has so conducted himself as to induce other person to act in a manner which would materially affect their position. It is unnecessary for me to refer to any of these decisions as the foundation, necessary for building such an argument, has not been laid in this case. There is absolutely no evidence in this case that any debts were discharged by the defendants subsequent to the alienation by the plaintiff under Ex. D. 3. It follows that the plea of estoppel is not available to the defendants in this case.

(13) The next point that arises for consideration is whether there is any scope in this case for the doctrine of election. Mr. Jagadisan urged that by virtue of the plaintiff having alienated a major portion of the properties under Ex. D. 3 in 1943, long after succession opened which amounts to his having accepted the validity of the gift deed, he cannot be permitted to resile from that position and challenge Ex. D. 1. I do not think I can agree with this contention. For one thing, I am not able to see anything in Ex. D. 3 which amounts to an acceptance of the whole gift deed as a valid one or a declaration of his intention not to claim a share in the properties as argued by the learned counsel for the respondents. Secondly, even if there is any such acceptance no question of election arises, when one of the courses open to him is not a legal or lawful one. If the result of electing one of the remedies is to put a person to the necessity of choosing a course which is opposed to law, this doctrine should not be invoked. I think the doctrine of election cannot to be resorted to in order to cure an illegality. The following passage in Mulla's Transfer of Property Act III edition page 168 is pertinent.

"The doctrine of election cannot be resorted to in order to cure an illegality and a gift which infringes the rule against the perpetuities cannot be used to raise a case for election."

In — Volloston v. King, 1869 L. R. 8 Eq. 165 a testatrix under her marriage settlement had power to appoint a fund to her children. She appointed a part of the fund to her son C for life, with remainder to such persons as C might by will appoint. C was in esse at the time when the power was created and therefore, the remainder after C's life estate was void as contravening the rule against perpetuities. By the same will she made a general residuary appointment of the settled fund to her daughter to whom she bequeathed other benefits. As the gift of the remainder to C's testamentary appointees was void, the daughters were not put to their election. In a latter case in — Re Oliver's Settlement, 1905-1-Ch. 191 Farwell J. said

"the court will refuse to aid a testator to commit any breach of the law."

To show that the passage extracted above does not contain a sound principle of law, Mr. Jagadisan cited to me a decision of Kekewich J. in — In re Bradshaw; Bradshaw v. Bradshaw, 1902-1-Ch. 436, where the learned Judge was not inclined to agree with the principle embodied in the cases referred to in that passage.

(14) But in — Cook v. Frederick, 1910-1-Ch. 1 the court of appeal was not prepared to follow the opinion of Kekewich J. and preferred to follow rulings which took the contrary view. Cozens-Hardy Master of the Rolls who delivered the judgment of the Court, expressed the opinion that the view taken by the majority of the Judges which was opposed to the one adopted by Kekewich J. in — In re Bradshaw, 1902-1-Ch. 436 was a sound one and he did not think that he could usefully add anything more than to say that "I desire for myself to adopt not merely the decision but the careful and elaborate reasoning of Farwell J. in the case of — In re Oliver's Settlement, 1905-1-Ch. 191."

It may be mentioned that the last mentioned case is one of the cases relied on by the learned author in support of his view.

(15) Mr. Jagadisan then referred to — Douglas Mezi v. Umphelby, 1908 A. C. 224 and contended that the facts in that case are analogous to the present one and that I should decide this case on the same lines. Even if I apply the principle laid down in that decision to the present case the plaintiff cannot be non-suited on the doctrine of election. All that was laid down in — Douglas Menzies v. Umphelby, 1908 A. C. 224 was that a person who claims under law and against a will cannot claim a legacy given to him under the will, i.e., a person who defeats a will in part cannot claim a legacy under another part of the will. Giving effect to the principle laid down in that case, all that could be legitimately argued is that the plaintiff who was trying to defeat the gift deed could not get any benefit under another part of the same document and that he should be called upon to renounce the benefit which he has derived under the gift deed. But, in this case, the same result will be reached as a corollary to my having held that no disposition under Ex. D. 1 will take effect for the reasons stated above. The resulting position is that Sehu Mian Thanagunar would be deemed to have died possessed of the entire estate including what was gifted to the plaintiff and that the parties in the suit are entitled to share in accordance with the provisions of Muhammadan law. What follows is that the plaintiff will be entitled to a share in the estate left by his father under Muhammadan law along with the defendants. For this purpose the property alienated by him and the property gifted to the 2nd defendant but which has not been included in the suit, will also form part of the property to be partitioned amongst the various sharers.

(16) In the result there should be a preliminary decree for partition. In allotting the shares to the parties the suit properties and the properties alienated by the plaintiff not only under Ex. D. 3 but also under Ex. D. 2 as well will be valued as on the date of the allotment of the shares and the properties alienated by the plaintiff should be allotted to the share of the plaintiff as a part of his share.

(17) Mr. Jagadisan argues that it should be made clear in the judgment that if the properties alienated by the plaintiff should exceed the value of the share to be allotted to him, the plaintiff will not be entitled to anything more by way of a share. I do not think it is necessary for me to state it because if as a matter of fact, the properties sold by him under Exs. D. 2 and D. 3 are equivalent to or in excess of the share to be allotted to him, he will certainly not be given anything more.

(18) It should also be made clear that plaintiff would also be liable along with the other sharers for any debts that might have been left by their father. It follows that the decree of the lower appellate court, which confirmed that of the trial court cannot be sustained and ought to be set aside. On the mistaken view of the law, the courts below dismissed the suit instead of passing a preliminary decree on the terms indicated above.

(19) In the result the appeal is allowed and the suit is remanded to the trial court passing preliminary decree and for consequential proceedings. The appellant will get a refund of the court fee paid by him in this appeal and in the lower appellate court also. The other costs incurred so far will abide the result. Leave refused.

A/D.R.R.

Appeal allowed.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 164 (Vol. 40, C. N. 51)
MACK J.

Veerni Soorayya, Petitioner v. Veerni Mallayya and others, Respondents.

Civil Revn. No. 1370 of 1950, D/- 22-4-1952.

Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (1887), Sch. II Art. 41 — Joint and several decree for costs against several judgment-debtors — One of them paying entire decretal amount — Suit for contribution against other co-judgment-debtors — Sch. II, Art. 41 is not applicable — Suit is therefore cognizable by a Small Cause Court. 14 M.L.J. 480 and 28 All 292 Rel. on: AIR 1941 Pat 49 Dist. (Para 1)

Anno: Prov. Sm. Cause Courts Act, Sch. II Art. 41 N. 1, 2 and 5.

C. Rama Rao, for Petitioner.

JUDGMENT: Petitioner and defendants were made jointly and severally liable on a decree for costs amounting to Rs. 442-8-0. Petitioner paid the whole amount and filed a small cause suit to recover Rs. 86-11-0 from defendants 1, 2 and 3 and from defendants 4 to 7. The learned Small Cause Judge erroneously held that this suit was not cognizable by a Small Cause Court and returned it for presentation to the proper court. He followed a Patna decision — 'Mt. Sarror Fatima v. Chaudhury Seikh Mohammad Safiuddin', AIR 1941 Patna 49, which is not in point. It was there held that where a suit was brought by one co-sharer, who had paid land revenue to Government to recover contribution from the other co-sharers it could not be tried by a Small Cause Court under Art. 41 of Schedule II of the Small Cause Courts Act. In a suit of that kind, there were several avenues for contest open which took it out of the category of a small cause suit. The present suit is clearly not covered by Art. 41 where there has been a decree already passed making the petitioner and defendants jointly liable. It was well-settled long ago that this type of suit for contribution is cognizable by a Small Cause Court. See — 'Ramaswami Pantulu v. Narayanamurthi Pantulu', 14 MLJ 480 and also, if it is necessary to go outside our State, — 'Bhairon v. Ram Baran', 28 All 292. The view taken by the lower court is erroneous. Its order is set aside. The plaint will be received and tried as expeditiously as possible as a small cause suit.

(2) The petition is allowed with costs.
B/K.S. Revision allowed.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 165 (Vol. 40, C. N. 52)
SUBBA RAO J.

Punithavalli Ammal, Appellant v. K. P. Chidambara Mudaliar, Respondent.

A. A. A. O. No. 22 of 1949, D/- 24-4-1951.

(a) Debt Laws — Provincial Debts Laws (Temporary Validation) Ordinance (XI (11) of 1945), S. 2 — Decree passed before issue of Ordinance — Re-opening.

Where, after adjudication, the Court refused to apply the provision of the Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act and passed decree for the unscaled amount, cl. (a) of S. 2 cannot have the effect of reopening the decree passed; nor does clause (b) apply to such cases. It does not touch the case of a decree being passed on the basis that the Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act was ultra vires of the Legislature so far as promissory notes were concerned. The Ordinance will not enable the judgment-debtor to reopen decrees passed before the issue of the said Ordinance whereunder the provisions of the Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act were not applied.

(b) Debt Laws — Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act (IV (4) of 1938), S. 19(2) — Retrospective effect.

Section 19(2) has no application to decrees that had become final before the Madras Act 23 of 1948 came into force: CMA Nos. 316 and 391 of 1947 Foll.

(Para 3)
V. Seshadri and K. S. Ramamurthy, for Appellant; A. Sundaram Ayyar, for Respondent.

JUDGMENT: This civil miscellaneous second appeal arises out of an order passed in execution in E. P. No. 38 of 1947 in O. S. No. 8 of 1942 on the file of the court of the Subordinate Judge, Vellore. The appellant obtained a decree in O. S. No. 8 of 1942 on a promissory note executed by the respondent in his favour. The learned Subordinate Judge dismissed the suit applying the provisions of the Madras Act 4 of 1938. In appeal, the District Judge of North Arcot confirmed the decree of the first court. The plaintiff preferred the second appeal to the High Court, S. A. No. 116 of 1944. The High Court held that the Madras Act 4 of 1938 did not affect the claims on promissory notes and decreed the suit on 8th March 1945. The decreeholder filed E. P. No. 38 of 1947 for executing the decree. After the disposal of the second appeal Government issued an ordinance, Ordinance No. 6 of 1945 Provincial Debts Laws (Temporary Validation Ordinance, 1945) whereunder the Act was made expressly applicable to transactions based on promissory notes. Relying upon this Ordinance the judgment-debtor opposed the execution petition and asked for scaling down the decree amount under the Act. The Subordinate Judge and in appeal the District Judge held that in view of the Ordinance the decree was liable to be scaled down. The plaintiff preferred the above second appeal.

(2) The learned counsel for the appellant contended that the Ordinance does not reopen decrees passed before the issue of the said Ordinance whereunder the provisions of the Madras Agriculturists Relief Act were not applied. The Ordinance reads as follows:

"S. 2: Temporary validation of Provincial debt laws in certain respects — While this Ordinance remains in force (a) the provisions of the Acts set out in the first schedule and of the amendments enacted after the 1st day of April 1937 and before the 12th day of December 1944 to the Acts set out in the second schedule shall, in so far as they relate to, or affect promissory notes, transactions based on promissory notes or proceedings arising out of such transactions, be deemed to be and always to have been as valid & effectual for all purposes as if they had been in relation to such matters as aforesaid, enacted by the Central Legislature & (b) no decree, declaration or order of any court for debt settlement tribunal (by whatever name called) made whether before the commencement or during the continuance of this Ordinance shall be called in question or subjected to notification on the ground that such of the said provisions as are relevant are invalid and ineffectual by reason of the incompetence of the Provincial Legislature concerned to make laws relating to aforesaid matters."

Clause (a) cannot obviously apply to decrees passed in suits for in express terms the operation of that clause is confined only to promissory notes and to transactions based upon promissory notes or proceedings arising out of such transactions. Where, after adjudication the court refused to apply the provisions of the Act and passed decree for the unscaled amount this provision cannot have the effect of reopening the decree passed; nor does cl. (b) apply to such cases. Under cl. (b) decrees, declarations or orders made on the basis that the Madras Agriculturists Relief Act applied to promissory notes could not be questioned. It does not touch the converse case of a decree being passed on the basis that the Madras Agriculturists Relief Act was 'ultra vires' of the Legislature so far as promissory notes were concerned. I, therefore agree with the contention of the learned counsel for the appellant and hold that the Provincial Debts Laws Temporary Validation Ordinance, Ordinance No. 11 of 1945 will not enable the judgment-debtor to obtain relief under the provisions of the Madras Agriculturists Relief Act.

(3) It is then argued by the learned counsel for the respondent that the lower courts had jurisdiction to scale down the decree under S. 19(2) of the Madras Act IV of 1938. S. 19(2) was added to S. 19 by the amending Act 23 of 1948. By reason of that amendment, an application could be filed for amending the decree though passed after the commencement of the Act 4 of 1938. The first objection to this contention is that no application under S. 19(2) of the Madras Agriculturists Relief Act was filed and that the question was raised only in execution. Apart from this technical objection, I am also of opinion that S. 19 clause (2) has no application to decrees that had become final before the Madras Act 23 of 1948 came into force. S. 16 of the Madras Act 23 of 1948 limits the scope and its retrospective effect to the category of cases mentioned thereunder. S. 16 of the Act reads:

"The amendments made by this Act shall apply to the following suits and proceedings, namely: (i) all suits and proceedings instituted after the commencement of this Act; (ii) all suits and proceedings instituted before the commencement of this Act, in which no decree or order passed has not become final, before such commencement; (iii) all suits and proceedings in which the decree or order passed has not been executed or satisfied in full before the commencement of this Act; Provided that no creditor shall be required to refund any sum which has been paid to or realised by him, before the commencement of this Act."

A Bench of this court of which I was a member explained the scope of S. 16 in C.M.A. Nos. 316 and 391 of 1947. The learned Judges say

"clauses 2 and 3 of S. 16 of the Madras Act 23 of 1948 are independent of each other and cl. 3 cannot have any application to proceedings in which decrees or orders have become final before the commencement of the Act. Clause 3 is confined to suits and proceedings in which decree or order has not become final. In other words, the section gives retrospective operation in regard to suits and proceedings before the Act in which decrees or orders had not become final and also had not been fully satisfied."

I am bound by that judgment. In the present case, the decree in O. S. No. 8 of 1942 had become final. If so S. 19(2) which had been added by the Amending Act 23 of 1948 cannot apply as by reason of S. 16 of the Act its retrospective activity is confined only to a decree that has not become final.

(4) For the aforesaid reasons, I hold that the respondent is not entitled to have the decree scaled down under the provisions of the Madras Agriculturists Relief Act. In the result the appeal is allowed with costs throughout. Leave refused.

B/D.H.

Appeal allowed.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 166 (Vol. 40, C. N. 53)

SATYANARAYANA RAO AND RAJAGOPALAN JJ.

Mrs. D. M. Alexander, Applicant v. The Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras, Respondent.

Case Ref. No. 14 of 1948, D/- 15-4-1952.

(a) Income-tax Act (1922), S. 2 (4) — Adventure or concern in the nature of trade — Test to decide — Isolated transaction of purchase and re-sale — Intention to resell with profit — Not conclusive proof — Transaction held on facts to be adventure in the nature of trade.

In the case of isolated transactions, there is no test of universal application or an infallible test to decide whether a given transaction is an adventure in the nature of trade within the meaning of S. 2 (4), Income-tax Act. It is really with reference to the facts held proved in each case that the difficult question has to be answered.

(Para 14)

Though a dominant or even a sole intention to resell is not by itself conclusive proof, it is certainly a relevant factor in deciding whether a particular transaction of purchase and resale was an adventure in the nature of trade, and in conjunction with other circumstances including the conduct of the assessee, such an intention might well establish beyond doubt that the adventure was in the nature of trade: 15 TC 333, Relied on. Case law referred.

(Para 17)

Held on facts that there was certainly sufficient evidence for the Tribunal to conclude that the transaction of the purchase and sale of certain group of estates by the assessee was an adventure in the nature of trade and that the profits of that transaction in the hands of the assessee constituted an assessable income.

(Para 24)

Anno: I.-tax Act, S. 2 N. 6.

(b) Income-tax Act (1922), S. 66 (1) — Reference under — Jurisdiction of High Court — Nature of.

That it is possible for a different judicial tribunal to arrive at the opposite conclusion is no justification for a Court acting within the limited scope of S. 66 (1), Indian Income-tax Act, to refuse to accept the finding of the Tribunal.

(Para 19)

Anno: I.-tax Act, S. 66 N. 20.

(c) Income-tax Act (1922), S. 13 — Scope — Method of accounting — When can be determined by Income-tax Officer.

No doubt, under S. 13 an assessee has a statutory right to choose his method of accounting. But before he can claim that his assessable income should be computed on the basis of the system of accounting of his choice, he must satisfy two conditions: (1) that it was a method of accounting regularly employed and (2) that it was a method of accounting from which, in the opinion of the Income-tax Officer, the income, profits and gains could be properly deduced. If neither of those conditions was satisfied, the proviso to S. 13 gave a statutory right to the Income-tax Officer to determine the basis and manner in which the income should be computed for purposes of assessment.

(Para 29)

Thus, where the assessee neither maintained any accounts nor regularly adopted any method of accounting for his income from his coffee estate, the Income-tax Officer had a right under S. 13 to adopt the mercantile basis of accounting the value of the stock of the produce which remained on hand unsold at the end of the year.

(Para 30)

T. M. Krishnaswami Aiyar, for M. Subbaraya Aiyar, for Applicant; C. S. Rama Rao Sahib, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT:

The two questions that were referred to this court were:

1. Whether there are materials for the Tribunal to come to the conclusion that the sum of Rs. 3,00,000 received by Captain T. P. M. Alexander by the sale of Cottangady estate in excess of its purchase price was a revenue receipt.
2. Whether in the circumstances of the case for the proper ascertainment of the profits and gains in respect of raising and selling coffee, tea and other produce of the estate, the Tribunal was right in upholding the decision of the Appellate Assistant Commissioner in taking into consideration the value of the produce which remained on hand unsold at the end of the year of account.

The accounting year was 1-4-1942 to 31-3-1943, and the year of assessment was 1943-44.

(2) It is better to deal with each question separately, as the sets of facts necessary for answering each question are different.

(3) The facts necessary for considering the points raised by the first question are as follows. Though the assessee, Captain T. P. M. Alexander, died in July 1946 — the proceedings have been continued by his widow — it should be easier to refer to him as the assessee in the rest of this judgment. The assessee was a planter in South India. He acquired estates where rubber, tea, coffee and cardamom were raised. We need not concern ourselves in this case with the Kailasam estate which the assessee owned and which he sold in 1938; nor with the Aruna group of estates which the assessee purchased in 1936 jointly with Sir James Deak; the assessee's interest in the Aruna group of estates appears to have been sold in March 1949. The assessee purchased the Sivalogam estate in Travancore State in 1929; he sold that in August 1942. That estate was managed by the agents Messrs. Harrison and Crossfield all through. Though the assessee was originally a planter himself, for a period of about 12 years, i.e. between 1930 and January 1942, he was employed as a Labour Officer in Burmah Shell Company. After retiring from the service of the Burmah Shell Company in January 1942, he obtained employment as the agency manager of the South India Plantations Agency Ltd. at Coonoor. That company acted as agents and secretaries of various tea and coffee estates in South India. He occupied that post till February 1943, when he became the director of that company, the South India Plantations Agency Ltd. In the latter half of 1942, the assessee was also the Secretary of the Southern India Planters Association for about three months. He left India finally in January 1944. He died in England in July 1946.

(4) When the assessee sold the Sivalogam estate in August 1942 he realised a sum of Rs. 4,46,000. That obviously provided the capital for his subsequent transactions. In September 1942 the assessee started negotiations for the purchase of four estates, comprehensively referred to as the Cottangady group of estates. One of these four belonged to one Mr. Hall, and the other three to his mother Mrs. Emily Hall. These estates were first offered for sale to the Southern India Planters

Association at a time when the assessee was the Secretary of that association. The association declined the offer. On 2-9-1942, the assessee inspected the Cottangady group of estates with a view to purchase. Again on 6-10-1942, he inspected the estates along with Mr. Walker Leigh of Messrs. Davidson & Company. The company sold agricultural implements. The inspection of Mr. Leigh was to suggest improvements to the estate and the purchase of the necessary material including machinery. On 9-10-1942, Mr. Leigh drew up a report which he forwarded to Harrison and Crossfield, who, it should be remembered, had been managing the Sivalogam estate for the assessee, and Mr. Leigh requested Messrs. Harrison and Crossfield in that letter to furnish estimates to the assessee to give effect to the recommendations of Mr. Leigh. Though the estimate furnished by Messrs. Harrison and Crossfield was not on record, it would appear that their estimate came to Rs. 80,000. The assessee paid the purchase price of Rs. 2,50,000 for all the four estates and took possession of them on 11-11-1942. It was agreed between the vendors and the assessee that the purchase should take effect from 1-7-1942 i.e. the assessee became entitled to the crops that stood on the estates on 1-7-1942 or were grown thereafter. No sale deed however was executed then. Even before the purchase it would appear that the assessee arranged through Messrs. Shaw Wallace Company to supply manure for the estates; and the supply of manure was on a long range basis i.e. to improve the productivity of the estates on a long term plan. Though Mr. Hall and his mother Mrs. Emily Hall offered the estates for sale first to the Southern India Planters Association, they would appear to have been keen on the idea that the sale should be to a person who would keep the estates and satisfy their sentiment based on pride of ownership of a well-maintained estate. On 21-9-1942 Mr. Smith, Director of South India Plantations Agency Ltd., of which the assessee was then the Agency Manager, wrote to Mr. Hall:

"Glad that Alexander is pleased with the estate. I am sure that Mrs. Hall and you will be better pleased for the estate to be sold to a proprietor who will take the same interest in it as you have done in the past, rather than to a public company."

From the extracts of correspondence supplied by the assessee during the enquiry before the Income-tax authorities and appended to the printed record made available to us, it would appear that on 13-11-1942 — it should be remembered that the assessee took possession of the estates on 11-11-1942 — the assessee supplied his agent Velu Menon of Cottangady with sets of account books. There were also other letters to show that the assessee himself was managing the estates up to 5-2-1943. From a letter written on 8-2-1943 by the assessee to Davidson and Co., it would appear that the assessee placed an order with them for the supply of a Sirocco Drier and a 44" S. A. Roller. These were two items of machinery included in the improvements suggested by Mr. Leigh in his report dated 9-10-1942. The order itself was not put in evidence, and there was nothing to indicate on which date the order was placed with Davidson & Co. Davidson & company would appear to have supplied the 44" S. A.

Roller, because in the letter dated 8-2-1943 the assessee asked for the erection of this plant. In the same letter, the assessee cancelled his order for the Sirocco Drier. It was represented during the arguments before us that the 44" S. A. Roller cost about Rs. 9,500. As the assessee himself explained in his letter dated 8-2-1943, he cancelled the order for the Sirocco Drier as he had already taken steps to sell the Cottangady group of estates. On 3-2-1943, the assessee entered into an oral agreement with Mr. P. S. George to sell the Cottangady group of estates to him for Rs. 5,50,000 and the assessee received an advance of Rs. 27,500. On 13-2-1943, the assessee executed the written agreement of sale. It was during the interval, on 8-2-1943, that the assessee informed Davidson & Company that the order for the supply of the Sirocco Drier should stand cancelled.

(5) It should be remembered that, though the assessee took possession of the Cottangady estates on 11-11-1942, no document of sale was executed by the vendors. It was subsequent to the agreement of sale between the assessee and Mr. P. S. George that the sale deeds were executed by Mr. Hall and Mrs. Emily Hall. One sale deed was executed on 11-2-1943 covering the three estates that were situated in Cochin State. The second sale deed for the fourth estate, which was in British India, was executed on 26-2-1943. Though Mr. P. S. George negotiated the purchase of this group of estates, it was obviously his intention that the eventual purchaser should be the Chandramalai Estate Ltd., which company Mr. P. S. George promoted. The agreement of sale dated 13-2-1943 provided for the sale to Mr. George or his nominee. Clause 7 of that agreement required the assessee to make out a good and clear title to the properties sold, and that was apparently why the assessee had to obtain the sale deeds from the previous owners, Mr. Hall and Mrs. Emily Hall. Rs. 27,500 of the agreed purchase price, it should be remembered, was paid to the assessee on 3-2-1943 itself. The agreement of 13-2-1943 provided for the payment of the balance before 31st March 1943; the balance was actually paid on 10th March 1943. On 19-4-1943 the assessee executed the sale deeds in favour of Chandramalai Estate Ltd.

(6) Thus the position was that within about three months after his purchase of the Cottangady group of estates for Rs. 2,50,000, the assessee entered into an agreement to sell the estates for Rs. 5,50,000, and within a month thereafter, i.e., by the 10th March 1943, he received in full that Rs. 5,50,000. The Income-tax Officer treated the difference between the purchase price and the sale price in the hands of the assessee as income that accrued to the assessee during the year of account and assessed that sum to income-tax. The contention of the assessee was that he intended to keep the property as a source of income, that it was an investment, and that the excess of Rs. 3,00,000 of the sale price over the purchase price he had paid was a capital accretion. That contention was rejected by the Income-tax Officer and also on appeal by the Assistant Commissioner of Income-tax. A further appeal preferred by the assessee to the Tribunal also failed. It was subsequent to that that the first question was referred to this Court under S. 66 (1), Indian Income-tax Act.

(7) When the matter came up for hearing first, the Court was of the opinion that the statement as drawn up by the Tribunal and submitted to the Court was defective, and the Court called upon the Tribunal to furnish a further and better statement of the case. That statement was furnished.

In paragraph 11 of the further statement submitted by the Tribunal it recorded:

"The tribunal held that almost simultaneously with the negotiations for the purchase of the estate and its improvement, negotiations for its sale were also being carried on by the assessee. The letters written to Harrison and Crossfield and Davidson & Co., dated 8th February 1943 suggested that the negotiations for sale were complete by that date and that in these circumstances, it was difficult to hold that the assessee's intention at the time of the purchase of the property was to keep it and improve it; that the idea at the time of the purchase in the mind of the assessee was to make a profit upon it; and that the interval of time that lapsed between the dates of purchase and sale also suggested that his intention was to make a profit by sale which he actually did. Under these circumstances, the tribunal came to the conclusion that the profit was received from a business transaction."

(8) To complete the statement of the case, it is necessary to refer to the purchase and sale of the Umbhidikhan estate in Mysore. The assessee purchased it in October 1942 for Rs. 75,000 in partnership with Mr. H. S. Cameron, also an employee of the Southern India Plantations Agency Ltd. The partnership sold the estate in March 1943 for Rs. 1,05,000, thus making a profit of Rs. 30,000. In this case also, the original owner Mr. Mayer did not execute any sale deed in favour of the assessee and Mr. Cameron. Subsequent to the sale in March 1943 by the Assessee and Mr. Cameron to the Southern Plantations Ltd, Calicut, Mr. Mayer executed the sale deed under directions of the partnership directly in favour of the Southern Plantations Ltd., Calicut. The assessee's share of the profit of Rs. 30,000 was treated as income and was assessed to income-tax. The assessee appears to have accepted that decision.

(9) It was as a receipt from business that the Rs. 3,00,000 was assessed to income-tax. That represented the profits of an "isolated" transaction, the purchase and sale of the Cottangady group of estates. It is well-established that if a person is engaged in the buying and selling of lands, he can be assessed to tax upon any surplus only if he is shown to have carried on a business of buying and selling lands. Business has been defined by S. 2 (4) of the Indian Income-tax Act. "Business includes any trade, commerce, or manufacture or any adventure or concern in the nature of trade, commerce or manufacture." Even a single venture may amount to business, and the profits of such a single venture may be taxable as income arising from business. An isolated transaction of purchase and sale of land, even if it is not business as it is normally understood, may be business within the scope of the definition, an adventure in the nature of trade. An isolated transaction of purchase and sale of land may be a speculation. Every speculation is an adventure; but unless it is an adventure in the nature of trade, the profits therefrom will not be income assessable to tax. In — Balgownie Land Trust Ltd. v. The Commissioners of Inland Revenue, 14 T. C. 684 Lord President Clyde pointed out at page 691:

"A single plunge may be enough provided it is shown to the satisfaction of the Court that the plunge is made in the waters of trade; but the sale of a piece of property — if that is all that is involved in the plunge — may easily fall short of anything in the nature of trade. Transactions of sale are characteristic of trade, but they are not necessarily distinctive of it; much depends on the circumstances."

(10) Where, as in this case, the purchase and resale of landed property constituted an isolated transaction, it is a matter of extreme difficulty to determine whether this was an adventure in the nature of trade. But as Lawrence L. J. pointed out in — Leeming v. Jones, 15 T. C. 333; at 354:

"It seems to me that in the case of an isolated transaction of purchase and resale of property there is really no middle course open. It is either an adventure in the nature of trade, or else it is simply a case of sale and resale of property."

(11) The test formulated by Lord President Clyde in — The Commissioners of Inland Revenue v. Livingstone, 11 T. C. 538 at page 542 was:

"I think the test, which must be used to determine whether a venture such as we are now considering is, or is not, "In the nature of trade," is whether the operations involved in it are of the same kind, and carried on in the same way, as those which are characteristic of ordinary trading in the line of business in which the venture was made. If they are, I do not see why the venture should not be regarded as "In the nature of trade," merely because it was a single venture which took only three months to complete."

The learned Judge did not obviously formulate this as the sole test or even as a test capable of universal application in answering the question, whether an isolated transaction of purchase and resale constituted an adventure in the nature of trade. It was with reference to the facts of that case, which Lord Sands described as a "novel and difficult one" (see page 545), that the observations of the Lord President have to be considered. The learned Judge himself summed up the facts of that case:

"The respondents (assessee) began by getting together a capital stock sufficient (1) to buy a second-hand vessel, and (2) to convert her into a marketable drifter. They bought the vessel and caused it to be converted at their expense with that object in view, and they successfully put her on the market. From beginning to end, these operations seem to me to be the same as those which characterise the trade of converting and refitting second-hand articles for sale. It may be that, in commercial practice relative to ships, this kind of business is not usually followed separately from the general business of ship builders and ship-repairers. But, even so, I think, it is none the less "in the nature of trade". The profit made by the venture arose, not from the mere appreciation of the capital value of an isolated purchase for resale, but from the expenditure on the subject purchased of money laid out upon it for the purpose of making it marketable at a profit. That seems to me of the very essence of trade."

That test may not be conclusive in deciding the question at issue in the present case. The conduct of the assessee, Captain Alexander particularly between the date of purchase of the Cottangady group of estates and the date of its resale was no doubt not inconsistent with that of a regular dealer in such plantations. But then some of his conduct at least, e.g. his plans to improve the equipment of the estate and his plans to manure the soil on a long range view was as consistent with his desire to keep the estate for himself as with a desire to make it more attractive for resale.

(12) Nor can the test suggested by Rowlatt J. in — Graham v. Green, 9 T. C. 309 really help us in this case. It should be remembered that what that learned Judge had to consider in the case before him was not a case of an isolated transaction. The learned Judge observed at page 312:

".....There is no doubt that if you set on foot an organised seeking after emoluments which are not in themselves profits, you may create, by way of a trade or an adventure or a vocation, subject-matter which does bear fruit in the shape of profits or gains. Really a different conception arises, a conception of a trade or vocation which differs in its nature, in my judgment, from the individual acts which go to build it up, just as a bundle differs from odd sticks. You may say, I think, without perhaps an abuse of language, there is something organic about the whole which does not exist in its separate parts."

At page 313, the learned Judge laid down:

"As I have said, there is no doubt that you might create a trade by making an organized effort to obtain emoluments which are not in themselves taxable as profits, and the most familiar instance of all, of course, is a trade which has for its object the securing of capital increment. A person who buys an object which subsequently turns out to be more valuable, and then sells it, does not thereby make a profit or gain. But he can organize himself to do that in a commercial and mercantile way, and the profits which emerge are taxable profits, not of the transaction, but of the trade."

Those observations must be read in the light of the facts of that case, which failed to prove the organization or the adoption of the commercial and mercantile way referred to by Rowlatt J. The basis of a bet itself or a series of bets was, in the opinion of that learned Judge, an irrational agreement. The organization to do anything in a commercial and mercantile way should obviously have a rational basis.

(13) In — Smith Barry v. Cordy, 28 T. C. 250, Scott L. J. laid down:

"Unless ex facie the single transaction is obviously commercial, the profit from it is more likely to be an accretion of capital and not a yield of income."

The learned Judge qualified that statement by pointing out: "But that question is almost necessarily one of fact." That case again did not deal with an isolated transaction; but with a series of transactions which satisfied the test formulated by Rowlatt J. in — Graham v. Green, 9 TC 309:

"A person.....can organize himself to do that (buy) in a commercial and mercantile way, and the profits which emerge are taxable profits, not of the transaction, but of the trade."

This was quoted with approval by Scott L. J. at page 260.

(14) Even in the case of isolated transactions, judicial research and learning both in Great Britain and India have failed to produce any test of universal application, an infallible test. It is really with reference to the facts held proved in each case that the difficult question has to be answered, whether a given transaction was an adventure in the nature of trade.

(15) The Tribunal found that Captain Alexander's intention when he purchased the Cotangady group of estates "was to make a profit by sale which he actually did." No doubt, if the estate had been purchased without any intention then of reselling it at a profit, a sale under changed circumstances would not stamp the transaction of sale with a business character. The sale by itself would not be an adventure in the nature of trade, though the profit motive had actuated the sale. But then, the intention to resell at a profit would not by itself make a transaction of purchase and sale an adventure in the nature of trade. This was clearly laid down in — 'Leeming v. Jones', 15 T. C. 333 by Lord Buckmaster:

"An accretion to capital does not become income merely because the original capital was invested in the hope and expectation that it would rise in value; if it does so rise, its realisation does not make it income."

Viscount Dunedin made it even clearer at page 360:

"The fact that a man does not mean to hold an investment may be an item of evidence tending to show whether he is carrying on a trade or concern in the nature of trade in respect of his investments but per se it leads to no conclusion whatever."

(15a) These principles were accepted by a Full Bench of the Rangoon High Court in — 'Mrs. Sooniram Poddar v. Commissioner of Incometax, Burma', 1939 I.T.R. 470. After referring to — 'Leeming v. Jones', 15 T. C. 333, Roberts C. J. laid down at page 478:

"Stopping there, this means that if a man, outside his regular business, makes a speculative purchase of an article or commodity with a view to its profitable resale, he is not for that reason alone venturing on a trade. To use the words of our Act, it is not necessarily "an adventure or concern in the nature of trade, commerce or manufacture."

A Full Bench of the Lahore High Court, however, took a different view in — 'Behari Lal Jhandu Mal, In Re', 1944 I.T.R. 209, specifically dissenting from the view taken by the Rangoon High Court in — 'Mrs. Sooniram Poddar v. Commissioner of Incometax, Burma', 1939 ITR 470. Munir J. stated at page 225:

"With the greatest respect to the learned Judges, who decided that case, I must say that that case does not appear to me to have been rightly decided."

The facts in the Lahore case were: The assessee, a Hindu undivided family carrying on a moneylending business purchased in 1931, when England went off the gold standard, 1600 tolas of gold and paid the purchase price of Rs. 35,050 in two instalments of Rs. 17,525 each, by withdrawing money from fixed deposits before their maturity and from a firm in which it was a partner and also by borrowing from another firm. In 1936, the assessee sold one fourth of the gold for Rs. 13,800 and thus made a profit of Rs. 5,037, which was assessed by the Income-tax authorities as profits from business under S. 10 of the Indian Income-tax Act. After pointing out that — 'Commissioners of Inland Revenue v. Livingstone', 11 T.C. 538 was not an authority for the position taken up by the assessee, that the profits of the sale of a fourth of the quantity of gold he had purchased did not constitute assessable income, and after explaining the observations of Lord President Clyde in the above case with reference to that learned Judge's observations in the later case of — 'Rutledge v. Commissioners of Inland Revenue', 14 T. C. 490, Munir J. observed at page 225:

"The essential test in my opinion in such cases is whether the purchase of metal was made not with the intention to use it nor with the intention to invest one's capital in it but with the sole object of selling it in future in order to make a profit. If the purchase is with that intention the purchase and the subsequent sale are an adventure in the nature of trade."

Earlier at page 220 Munir J. pointed out:

"If, however, at the date of the purchase the object of the purchaser was not to bring the article in his own use but to sell it at a profit, there can hardly be any doubt that in that case the transaction would be a venture in the nature of trade."

(16) It is not really necessary for the purposes of deciding the case before us to consider whether the Rangoon view or the Lahore view is, in our opinion, the correct one. The observations of the learned Judges in each of those 2 cases have to be construed with reference to the facts of that case. In both cases the learned Judges held that the purchase and resale of gold were outside the scope of the normal trading activities of the assessee, which in each case was a money-lending firm. Suffice it to say Captain Alexander's position was totally different. To that we shall advert later. The learned Judges of the Lahore High Court held that the case before them fell within the scope of the rule in — 'Rutledge v. Commissioners of Inland Revenue', 14 T. C. 490. Even in that case the Lord President himself observed at page 497:

"the crisis of judgment might turn on the particular circumstances."

The Lord President himself did not see any conflict between his views in — 'Commissioners of Inland Revenue v. Livingstone', 11 T. C. 538 and those he expounded later in — 'Rutledge v. Commissioners of Inland Revenue', 14 T. C. 490. On the question whether an intention to resell was a conclusive test in deciding whether a given transaction of purchase and resale was an adventure in the nature of trade, nothing could be more categorical than the observations of Lord Buckmaster and Viscount Dunedin in — 'Leeming v. Jones', 15 T. C. 333, with which we respectfully agree.

(17) Though a dominant or even a sole intention to resell is not by itself conclusive proof, it is certainly a relevant factor in deciding whether the transaction of purchase and resale was an adventure in the nature of trade, and in conjunction with other circumstances including the conduct of the assessee, such an intention might well establish beyond doubt that the adventure was in the nature of trade.

(18) As we have already pointed out, courts have never treated such a question as one capable of easy solution by the taxing authorities. Our task however, it should be remembered, is more limited in scope. Did the evidence on record justify the finding of the Tribunal, that the purchase and sale of the Cottangady group of estates by the assessee constituted an adventure in the nature of trade.

(19) We have no hesitation in answering that question against the assessee. That it is possible for a different judicial tribunal to arrive at the opposite conclusion — and as Lawrence L. J. pointed out in — ‘Leeming v. Jones’, 15 T. C. 333 there is no middle course open or possible — is no justification for a court acting within the limited scope of S. 66 (1), Indian Income-tax Act, to refuse to accept the finding of the Tribunal.

(20) Captain Alexander sold the Sivalogam estate in August 1942 and was in possession of considerable funds. Judicial notice can be taken of the facts, that there was a real threat of invasion of India by the Japanese a little earlier, and that there were civil disturbances in this country in August 1942, when the Quit India Campaign against the Britishers was intensified. It was a period when planting estates changed hands and Indian purchasers came in. In one of the letters on record in this case, Davidson & Co. pointed out on 12-2-1943 that the Cottangady group of estates had been sold to an Indian purchaser. By August 1942, Captain Alexander had ceased to be in the service of the Burmah Shell Company; and with his connections with the South India Plantations Agency Ltd. and the Southern India Planters Association he was obviously in a better position in August 1942 to look after his estate with his residence at Coonoor. Yet he sold the Sivalogam estate in August 1942. His association with the South India Plantations Agency and the Southern India Planters Association gave him the means of knowing which were the estates the European owners were anxious to sell at that period. Though there was no evidence on the point, when Captain Alexander conceived the idea of leaving India, in fact he did leave India for good in January 1944. It is against this background that the sale of the Sivalogam estate and the evidence regarding the subsequent purchase and sale of estates by Captain Alexander have to be viewed.

(21) We observed earlier that Captain Alexander's position between August 1942 and March 1943 was in no way analogous to that of the assessee in — ‘Mrs. Sooniram Poddar v. Commissioner of Income-tax, Burma’, 1939 I.T.R. 470 and — ‘Behari Lal Jhandu Mal, In Re’, 1944 I.T.R. 209. He was a planter to start with. His main estate he sold in August 1942. At that period he was in the employ of planting associations. Subsequent to August 1942, he bought two sets of estates and sold them, the Cottangady group of estates and the Umbidikhan estate. That was a time when he should have been in a better position than many others to know the market conditions of the plantations which changed from European owners to Indian owners.

(22) Despite the steps taken by the assessee, Captain Alexander, to improve the Cottangady group of estates, there was certainly sufficient material on record to justify the finding of the appellate tribunal, that the purchase was with a view to resell the estate at a profit. The purchase price was paid and possession of the Cottangady group of estates was taken on 11-11-1942. The agreement of sale to Mr. P. S. George was within a short time i.e. on 3-2-1943. When exactly negotiations for the sale of the estates to Mr. P. S. George commenced, there was no specific evidence to show. The tribunal's comment on that was:

“That almost simultaneously with the negotiations for the purchase of the estate and its improvement, negotiations for its sale were also being carried on by the assessee.”

That might not be strictly accurate in the absence of any specific evidence as to when exactly negotiations for the sale to Mr. P. S. George were commenced. But obviously the negotiations must have commenced sometime before 3-2-1943. Between 11-11-1942 and 3-2-1943, Captain Alexander did not even obtain sale deeds from the previous owners, Mr. Hall and Mrs. Emily Hall. He got the sale deeds from the vendors subsequent to 3-2-1943, obviously only to satisfy the conditions of cl. 7 of the agreement of sale dated 11-2-1943, which Captain Alexander executed in favour of Mr. P. S. George. That condition barred the adoption of the technique of sale of the Umbidikhan estate during the same period. The sale deed in the case of the Umbidikhan estate was executed directly in favour of the vendee from Captain Alexander and his partner by the previous owner, Mr. Mayer from whom Captain Alexander and his partner bought that estate.

(23) To support the contention, that the sale of the Umbidikhan estate was an irrelevant factor in deciding the question at issue, whether the purchase and sale of the Cottangady group of estates constituted an adventure in the nature of a trade, learned counsel for the assessee relied on — ‘Cooksey and Bibbey v. Rednail’, 30 T. C. 514. The facts of that case were: In 1924 Cooksey, a solicitor, and Bibbey, a farmer, purchased jointly a farm within six miles of Birmingham and let it to a tenant. Between 1920 and 1925 the firm in which Cooksey was a partner purchased and developed three housing estates, and from 1930 to 1940 Cooksey and Bibbey in partnership bought and developed five housing estates. It was admitted that these were trading transactions for income-tax purposes. In 1938 Cooksey and Bibbey sold the farm to the Birmingham Corporation and they were jointly assessed to income-tax on the profit realized. Croom-Johnson J. pointed out at page 518 that Bibbey had nothing to do with Thomas Cooksey and Company which carried out the operations referred to above between 1920 and 1925. The learned Judge observed:

“Is it any evidence that another partnership, (Thomas Cooksey and Co.,) which is not this partnership, was engaged in speculation and development of land by building houses between 1920 and 1925? This assessment is raised against these two gentlemen on the basis that they are a partnership, and accordingly it is a separate and distinct assessment. It is that partnership, not some other partnership, which the Crown is seeking to establish was engaged in transactions in the nature of trade. I shall have to look and see what other evidence there is, but, in my judgment, the evidence — as to the activities of Thomas Cooksey & Co. in transactions dealing with land, in which firm Mr. Bibbey was not a partner, is no evidence upon which anybody could come to the conclusion that a partnership or joint adventure existing between Cooksey and Bibbey can be proved to be established for purposes of trade."

It must be observed that it was not a rule of law that the learned Judge intended to lay down; nor did that learned Judge lay down that evidence of the activities of Thomas Cooksey & Co. of which Bibbey was not a partner was wholly irrelevant. What the learned Judge really held was that the evidence afforded by the activities of Thomas Cooksey & Co. was not evidence that could lead to any definite conclusion. By itself, the sale of the Umbidikhan estate could not conclude the question at issue, whether the purchase and sale of the Cottangady group of estates was an adventure in the nature of trade. But the purchase and sale of the Umbidikhan estate at the same period, though it was in partnership with another, is a relevant piece of evidence to be considered in conjunction with the other pieces of evidence on record.

(24) We feel that there was certainly sufficient evidence for the Tribunal to conclude that the transaction of the purchase and sale of the Cottangady group of estates was an adventure in the nature of trade and that the profits of that transaction in the hands of the assessee Captain Alexander constituted assessable income.

(25) The first question is answered in the affirmative and against the assessee.

(26) The facts necessary for the disposal of the second of the questions referred to us are as follows: During the accounting year, the assessee was in possession of three estates, the Sivalogam estate, the Cottangady group of estates and the Umbidikhan estate. Each of these three estates was managed by agents, the Sivalogam estate by Messrs. Harrison & Crossfield, the Cottangady group of estates by Pierce Leslie & Co., and the Umbidikhan estate by Mysore Coffee Curing Works Ltd. The produce from all these estates was sold in what was then British India by these agents, and the sale proceeds paid into Captain Alexander's account with a bank in British India. The return of income submitted by Captain Alexander for the year of assessment was not placed before us. But it was not disputed that he did not in the first instance include in his return any income from any of these three estates. Eventually, the assessee filed the profit and loss statements furnished to him by his agents with reference to each of these three estates. That the amounts shown as profits in those statements was assessable to tax as income was not in dispute before us. Those profit and loss statements showed fairly large stocks of estate produce unsold at the end of the accounting year. These stocks were sold in the next accounting year. The Income-tax Officer treated the sale price so realised as the value of the stock unsold on 31-3-1943, treated it as income that accrued during the accounting year ending on 31-3-1943, and added the sum so arrived at to the profits as disclosed in the profit and loss statements the assessee received from his agents. No separate accounts were maintained for any of these three estates by the assessee himself.

On appeal, the Assistant Commissioner held that it was not the sale price of the stock unsold on 31-3-1943 that represented the income but only its cost price. That he worked out by deducting from the price realised by the sales in the succeeding year of account the proportionate working expenses incurred during the accounting year ending with March 1943. The assessee did not dispute the correctness of those figures in the appeal he preferred to the Tribunal. The Tribunal rejected the contention of the assessee, that even the cost price of the stock unsold on 31-3-1943 was not income that accrued during the year of account ending with 31-3-1943 and confirmed the order of the Assistant Commissioner on this point.

(27) The reference was first heard by this Court in March 1951. In calling for a further and better statement of the case from the Tribunal the learned Judges observed:

"If the system adopted by him (the assessee) is a mercantile accountancy system then the value of the produce which remained on hand unsold at the end of the year of account would have to be taken into account as the value of the closing stock. If the system of accounting is on a cash basis then it is only the actual receipts and disbursements that will have to be taken into account in arriving at the assessable profits during the year of account."

(28) It was admitted that the assessee did not maintain any separate accounts of his own for any of these three groups of estates. The income from these estates was not taxed in any year prior to 1942-43; nor apparently was there any scope for any assessment in any subsequent year; Captain Alexander parted with all the three estates before the end of March 1943. After pointing out that the question, whether the estate accounts had been kept by the agents on a mercantile or cash basis, did not come up for consideration in any of the prior years as there was no taxable income from the estates, the Tribunal recorded in their further and better statement of the case the finding:

"It follows in view of the mercantile system adopted by the managing agents all the income from the estates has to be computed by following the closing stock of unsold produce at cost price calculated by taking the proportion of the working expenses relating to the unsold stock."

As we have already observed, the assessee did not maintain any accounts of his own. The return he submitted is not before us; but then the income from the estates was obviously not included in the original return. The Income-tax Officer recorded that the method of accounting on which his assessment was based was mercantile. No objection appears to have been taken before the Assistant Commissioner, that the mercantile basis of accounting should not have been adopted by the Income-tax Officer when the assessee himself did not adopt it. Even before the tribunal, no such specific plea appears to have been taken. In its order the Tribunal recorded:

"The argument of the learned lawyer for the (assessee) appellant seems to be that businesses of this type need not take into consideration, for the purpose of determining their income from year to year, the value of any stock remaining unsold at the close of their accounting year."

That contention the appellate tribunal rejected.

(29) In view of the observations in the order of this Court, to which one of us was a party, and with which we entirely agree, "If the system adopted by the assessee was a mercantile accountancy system, then the value of the produce which remained on hand unsold at the end of the year of account would have to be taken into account as the value of the closing stock", the only question to be decided now is whether the taxing authorities were right in adopting the mercantile system of accounting as the basis of assessment. S. 13 of the Income-tax Act runs:

"Income, profits and gains shall be computed, for the purposes of sections 10 and 12, in accordance with the method of accounting regularly employed by the assessee:

Provided that, if no method of accounting has been regularly employed, or if the method employed is such that, in the opinion of the Income-tax Officer, the income, profits and gains cannot properly be deduced therefrom, then the computation shall be made upon such basis and in such manner as the Income-tax Officer may determine."

The section itself should suffice to answer the second question against the assessee. There was no evidence that the assessee had any method of accounting for the income from the three groups of estates, which method he regularly employed. The finding was that he did not maintain any accounts of his own. No doubt, assessee has a statutory right to choose his method of accounting. But before he can claim that his assessable income should be computed on the basis of the system of accounting of his choice, he must satisfy two conditions (1) that it was a method of accounting regularly employed and (2) that it was a method of accounting from which in the opinion of the Income-tax Officer, the income, profits and gains could properly be deduced. If neither of those conditions was satisfied, the proviso to S. 13 gave a statutory right to the Income-tax Officer to determine the basis and manner in which the income should be computed for purposes of assessment. In this case we need not concern ourselves whether the second of these two conditions was satisfied. The assessee did not maintain any accounts. He did not regularly adopt any method of accounting for his income from the estates. So, the provisions of the proviso to S. 13 that had to be invoked were "if no method of accounting has been regularly employed—then the computation shall be made upon such basis and in such manner as the Income-tax Officer may determine." No method of accounting had been employed by the assessee and the Income-tax Officer determined that the computation should be on the mercantile basis. With the exercise of such a statutory right given to the Income-tax Officer, there can be no scope for any interference in the circumstances of this case at this stage. That this was not the approach to the question at issue either by the Assistant Commissioner or by the Tribunal—and it must be remembered the question was not raised in that form before them—does not really affect the determination of that question.

(30) The Tribunal recorded that the method of accounting adopted by the agents of the assessee was mercantile. In view of what we have said above, the question whether the accounts maintained by the agents should be treated as the accounts of the assessee even when he maintained none of his own, does not arise for consideration. Even had those accounts of the agents not been produced, the Income-tax Officer would have had the right to adopt the mercantile basis of accounting for computing the income of Captain Alexander from his estates when he himself had not regularly employed any method of accounting for his income from that source.

(31) As the tribunal observed, the correctness of the computation as finally made by the Assistant Commissioner was not challenged even before the tribunal.

(32) The answer to the second question referred to us is in the affirmative and against the assessee.

(33) As the assessee, now represented by his widow, the legal representative, Mrs. Alexander, has failed, she will pay the costs of the Commissioner of Income-tax—Rs. 250.

B/D.R.R.

Reference answered.

A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 173 (Vol. 40, C. N. 54)
SUBBA RAO J.

V. M. Krishnaswami Mudaliar, Petitioner v. Rahman Baig and another, Respondents.

Civil Misc. Petn. No. 7915 of 1950, D/- 18-7-1951.

Houses and Rents — Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (15 of 1946), S. 7 (2) (i) — Arrangement between landlord and tenant — Rent of particular month to be appropriated or spent in particular manner — Rent for that month cannot be said to be due within section. (Para 2)

N. K. Pattabhirama and N. K. Mohanaragam Pillai, for Petitioner; M. Natesan and V. Ramaswami Iyer, for Respondents.

ORDER: This is an application for issuing a writ of certiorari and for quashing the order of the Subordinate Judge of Vellore made in appeal against the order of the Rent Controller, Vellore.

(2) The petitioner is the owner of the building. He rented it out to the respondent on a monthly rental of Rs. 16-8-0 in the year 1944, and he had taken an advance of Rs. 33. For the month of March 1949 the tenant did not pay the rent before the last day of April, but on 31st May 1949 he sent a sum of Rs. 33 towards the rent for those two months. The petitioner filed the application before the Rent Controller for evicting the respondent on the ground amongst others that he did not pay the rent for the month of March before the end of April. Among other contentions the respondent raised the plea that the petitioner consented to certain alterations to the house to be made by the respondent by spending the money from and out of the rent payable by him, and that pursuant to that arrangement he was taking steps for getting the repairs done. Later on, having come to know that the respondent was taking steps to evict him, the respondent sent the money before the end of May.

The learned Subordinate Judge on the materials placed before him found that because of that arrangement the respondent kept the rent for one month and that when he found a change in the attitude of the landlord he remitted that amount. If there was an arrangement between the landlord and the tenant in and by which the rent of any particular month was to be appropriated or spent in a particular manner, it cannot be said that the rent for the month was due within the meaning of S. 7. I cannot therefore say that there is an error of law apparent on the record or that the Subordinate Judge acted without jurisdiction.

(3) The application is therefore dismissed but in the circumstances of the case without costs. B/V.R.B. Application dismissed.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 174 (Vol. 40, C. N. 55)
SUBBA RAO J.

Dasari Janakiramayya and another, Petitioners v. Nune Ranganayakamma, Respondent.

Civil Revision Petition No. 1326 of 1950, D/- 29-11-1951.

(a) Debt Laws — Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act, (4 of 1938), S. 4(h) — Object of — Tests for applicability — Due and own — Meaning — Value of property of life estate holder — Held, exemption applied — (Words and Phrases — 'Due and own' — Meaning).

The object of the exemption under S. 4 (h) is to protect women of slender means from the consequences of the drastic provisions of the Act.

The legislature intended to provide for two tests for the application of the exemption which are: (i) whether the debt is due to a woman and (ii) whether the value of property owned by her, whether as life estate holder or as absolute owner, did not exceed Rs. 6000.

The first question depends upon the meaning of the word "due". Ordinarily, it means 'payable'. As a noun, it connotes an existing obligation. As an adjective, it means capable of being justly demanded, claimed as of right, payable. Thus where a debt is certainly payable to the life estate holder and she can claim to recover it as of right and if the debtor pays her, he gets a full discharge, the debt is 'due' to a life-estate-holder who is a woman.

As to the second question the dictionary meaning of the word "own" is to have a good legal title to, or to hold as a property. The owner of a property is one, who has an absolute dominion over it and in regard to which he has a right to do as he pleases. In that sense, ownership of a life-estate-holder in a property is only confined to her life interest in the said property. Where therefore certain debt is due to a woman, who happens to be a life-estate-holder, the value of her property for the purpose of exemption under S. 4(h) is the value of her interest in the property:

Held that as the value of the property owned by the life estate holder did not exceed Rs. 6000, the exception under S. 4(h) applied to the debt in question. (1940) 2 MLJ 342 Distinguished. (Paras 3 to 7)

(b) Interpretation of Statutes — Duty of Court.

The Court cannot rely upon the hidden meaning of the legislature but must give effect to its express intention and must be guided only by the plain meaning of the express words used in the section.

(Para 3)

Anno: Civil P. C., Pre. N. 7.

V. Subramaniam and M. Ramakrishna, for Petitioners; K. Kotayya, for Respondent.

JUDGMENT: The only question in this revision is whether the debt due to the respondent is exempted under S. 4(h) of the Madras Agriculturists Relief Act (Act 4 of 1938).

(2) The facts are simple and are not in dispute. The first petitioner and his father executed a promissory note Ex. B 1 dated 25-4-1929, in favour of one Subbarayudu for a sum of Rs. 200. After some renewals of the debt in favour of Subbarayudu and after his death, petitioners executed a promissory note dated 16-2-1936 for a sum of Rs. 378-4-6 in favour of Perindevamma, wife of Subbarayudu. On 21-2-1926, Subbarayudu executed a Will, whereunder Perindevamma was given a life-estate in all his properties and the vested remainder was given to his daughter, Ranganayakamma, the respondent herein. Though the definite date of the death of Perindevamma is not known, it is clear from the evidence that she died only subsequent to 24-7-1938. Ranganayakamma filed S. C. No. 154 of 1944 on the file of the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Guntur for recovery of the amount due under the promissory note and obtained a decree therein. The petitioners filed an application under S. 19 of the Act for scaling down the debt. The learned Subordinate Judge held that the petitioners were agriculturists but they were not entitled to have the debt scaled down as the debt was due to Perindevamma, a woman, on 1-10-1937 and the value of her life estate did not exceed Rs. 6000. He dismissed the petition. The petitioners have filed the above revision against that order.

(3) The learned Counsel for the petitioners contended that Perindevamma was only a life-estate holder and, therefore, only that portion of the debt, which she could appropriate for herself as a life estate holder, is only liable to be exempted. The relevant provision of S. 4 reads:

"Nothing in this Act shall affect debts and liabilities of an agriculturist falling under the following heads:

(h) any debt or debts due to a woman on the 1st October 1937 provided that the value of the property owned by her on that date including the principal amount of the debt or debts so due did not exceed Rs. 6000."

The object of this exemption is to protect women of slender means from the consequences of the drastic provisions of the Act. If the contention of the learned counsel is accepted, not only will it lead to many complications but, in some cases, the protection intended to be given under this section may become illusory. A creditor on 1-10-1937 may be a man and the remainderman may be a woman or vice versa. The remainder may be vested or contingent. Courts would have to value the life estates and remainders vested or contingent. Proportional values will have to be fixed on complicated calculations. The nature of the woman's estate would have to be ascertained, viz., whether it is a life-estate, absolute estate, woman's estate, or a woman's estate with an absolute power of alienation conferred on the holder of that estate. I do not think that the legislature contemplated by enacting the aforesaid simple clause, to comprehend all the aforesaid questions. It obviously intended to provide for two tests for the application of that exemption, (i) whether the debt is due to a woman and (ii) whether the value of property owned by her, whether as life estate holder or as absolute owner, did not exceed Rs. 6000. It cannot rely upon the hidden meaning of the legislature but must give effect to its express intention. I must be guided only by the plain meaning of the express words used in the section.

(4) Then two questions arise for consideration:

(i) What is the debt to a woman, who is a life-estate holder?

(ii) What is the value of the property owned by her?

(5) The first question depends upon the meaning of the word "due". Ordinarily, it means payable. As a noun, it connotes an existing obligation. As an adjective, it means capable of being justly demanded, claimed as of right, payable (Ramanatha Aiyar's Law Lexicon). The debt is certainly payable to the life estate holder and she can claim to recover it as of right. If the debtor pays her, he gets a full discharge. If he does not, she can file a suit and recover the amount. It is not open to the debtor to raise the plea that there is an outstanding vested remainder and, therefore, the entire debt is not due to the life-estate-holder. Giving the ordinary meaning to the word "due" I hold that the entire amount payable under the promissory note was due to the life-estate holder, who was a woman on 1-10-1937.

(6) The next question is what is the value of the property owned by her. The dictionary meaning of the word "own" is to have a good legal title to, or to hold as a property. The owner of a property is one, who has an absolute dominion over it and in regard to which he has a right to do as he pleases. In that sense, ownership of a life estate-holder in a property is only confined to her life interest in the said property. The life estate holder cannot mortgage, alienate or otherwise do anything to destroy or affect the interest of the remainderman. The property owned by such a life estate holder is only her or his interest in that property. For the purpose of this section therefore, the value of the interest owned by a life-estate-holder shall be ascertained for applying the provisions of the Act. So construed, the position is this. The entire debt is due to a woman, though she happens to be a life-estate-holder. The value of her property for the purpose of exemption is the value of her interest in the property. This conclusion may appear inconsistent but this is in accord with the express words used and it also gives ample protection to a woman of slender means holding only a life estate in a property.

(7) The learned counsel for the petitioners relied upon the judgment of Wadsworth J. in — 'Bhadrachalam v. Nagarupavattamma', 1940-2 MLJ 342. There an agriculturist was indebted jointly to two women. The learned Judge held that the debt as well as the assets of each woman must be separately ascertained for the application of S. 4(h) of the Act. It is not necessary to express my view on that decision, as the situation in the present case is radically different. That decision is not of any help in this case. As the learned Subordinate Judge found that the value of the life-estate does not exceed Rs. 6000, the petitioners are not entitled to relief under the provisions of the Act. The revision petition fails and is dismissed with costs.

B/D.R.R.

Revision dismissed.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 175 (Vol. 40, C. N. 56)

SUBBA RAO J.

Panchayat Board, Kudaravalli Gudiwada Taluk, Krishna District, represented by its President, Sanka Gopala Rao and others, Petitioners v. Inspector of Municipal Councils and Local Boards, Madras and another, Respondents.

Civil Misc. Petn. No. 260 of 1951, D/- 22-8-1951.

Madras Local Boards Act (14 of 1920), S. 45 A (1) — Order under — Reasons for — Necessity.

In the interests of public institutions in this country, an officer, however competent and otherwise honest, cannot be entrusted with drastic powers without the elementary safeguard that he should give reasons for his action. But it is for the Legislature to amend the Act suitably having regard to the changed circumstances after this country has become independent. Though the Inspector has got to exercise his functions judicially, the section does not impose on him a duty to give reasons for his action. An order under S. 45 A (1) will not be bad because it does not disclose any reasons: W. P. No. 171 of 1951, Disting.

(Para 4)

D. Narasaraaju and K. B. Krishnamurthy, for Petitioners; The Govt. Pleader and A. Sambasiva Rao, for Respondents.

ORDER: This application is for quashing the order of the Inspector of Municipal Councils and Local Boards dated 20th December 1950 superseding under S. 45-A (1) of the Madras Local Boards Act the Kudaravalli Panchayat Board for a period of one year. On 12th October 1950 the Inspector of Municipal Councils and Local Boards issued a notice to the Panchayat Board calling upon them to show cause within 15 days from the date of the receipt of the notice why the Panchayat Board should not be superseded under S. 45-A (1) of the Madras Local Boards Act. In that notice, the Inspector stated the following reasons for the proposed action: (1) For the year 1949-50, the Panchayat Board realised a large amount from the proceeds of the grass sales but only credited a sum of Rs. 164; (2) No amenity worth the name has been provided by the Panchayat Board and that they have not kept the fresh water tank in a sanitary condition; (3) the Panchayat Board has not checked the President or reported to the higher authorities the following irregularities; (a) the President has been keeping large cash balance on hand but the Board failed to pull up the President; and (b) the President failed to serve notice of meetings with agenda to the members.

To this notice the Panchayat Board filed a statement explaining the charges made against the President and also the members of the Panchayat Board. The Inspector of Municipal Councils and Local Boards considered the reports of the subordinate officers and the explanation of the Panchayat Board together with the remarks made by the District Panchayat Officer and was satisfied that action should be taken against the Panchayat Board under S. 45-A (1). On 20th December 1950 the Inspector of Municipal Councils and Local Boards passed an order superseding the Panchayat Board.

(2) The learned counsel for the petitioner raised before me three points: (1) the order of the Inspector was based upon non-existing facts; (2) the order was made mala fide having regard to extraneous circumstances and (3) the order does not disclose the reasons as a judicial order should do.

(3) The petitioner has filed a long affidavit before me canvassing the various reasons disclosed in the notice issued by the Inspector for the action taken by him. After going through the affidavit in some detail, though there is the possibility of another tribunal coming to a different conclusion, I cannot say that there is no material on which the Inspector could have come to the conclusion which he did. Nor am I satisfied by the allegations made in the affidavit that the proceedings were started not in the interests of the Board but for other extraneous reasons. There is also no materials to hold that the Inspector acted mala fide in the exercise of his jurisdiction.

(4) Mr. Narasaraju then argued that drastic power in the hands of an Officer is susceptible of abuse if he is not bound to give reasons for his satisfaction. In support of his argument he relied upon my order in — 'W. P. No. 171 of 1951'. There I held that the Government in setting aside the orders of inferior tribunals under S. 64 A of the Motor Vehicles Act should disclose the reasons in their order. But the Government in exercising the power under S. 64-A of the Motor Vehicles Act is exercising revisional jurisdiction, whereas in the case of an Inspector, though he has got to exercise his functions judicially, the section does not impose on him a duty to give reasons for his action. I agree with Mr. Narasaraju that in the interests of public institutions in this country, an officer, however competent and otherwise honest, cannot be entrusted with drastic powers without the elementary safeguard that he should give reasons for his action. But it is for the Legislature to amend the Act suitably having regard to the changed circumstances after this country had become independent. But on the section as it stands I am not prepared to extend the principle laid down by me in — 'W. P. No. 171 of 1951' to an order under S. 45-A (1) of the Madras Local Boards Act. This petition is dismissed with costs, one set. Advocate's fee Rs. 100.

B/D.H.

Petition dismissed.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 176 (Vol. 40, C. N. 57)

GOVINDA MENON

AND KRISHNASWAMI NAYUDU JJ.

Dhanam alias Dhanalakshmi Ammal and another, Appellants v. Varadarajan, Respondent.

Appeal No. 732 of 1948, D/- 31-3-1952.

(a) Madras Hindu Women's Rights to Property (Extension to Agricultural Land) Act (26 of 1947) — Widow in Madras is not entitled to share in agricultural land left by her deceased husband, when the Act had not come into force at the time of her husband's death — (Hindu Women's Right to Property Act (1937), S. 3): 1941 FCR 12 and 1942 FCR 52, Rel. on. (Para 1)

Anno: Hindu Women's Right to Property Act, S. 3 N. 1.

(b) Hindu Women's Right to Property Act (1937), before its amendment by Madras Act (26 of 1947), S. 3 — Agricultural land — Leases and mortgages of agricultural land — Widow of deceased cannot claim share in it — Such interest is interest in agricultural land — Similarly are the arrears of rent due from tenants in agricultural lands and are excluded from operation of Act: ILR 1945 Mad 777 and ILR

1945 Mad 781, Rel. on; 1951-1 MLJ 364, Overruled. (Paras 9, 11)

Anno: Hindu Women's Right to Property Act, S. 3 N. 1.

G. R. Jagadeesa Iyer, for Appellants; S. Thiagaraja Iyer, for Respondent.

GOVINDA MENON J.: The plaintiffs, who were the 2nd and 3rd wives of Dr. Srinivasa Mudaliar, who died on 15-12-1943, filed O. S. No. 37 of 1944 on the file of the Subordinate Judge's Court, Vellore, for partition and recovery of possession of their share of the properties left by the deceased Srinivasa Mudaliar. The suit was based on the ground that according to Act 18 of 1937, the Hindu Women's Right to Property Act, the widows are entitled to a share of the properties of the deceased husband in equal rights with those of any sons left behind by the deceased. As Madras Act 26 of 1947 which enables the widows to claim their rights in agricultural lands as well had not come into force, when Srinivasa Mudaliar died and when this suit was filed, in accordance with the decisions of the Supreme Court — 'In Re a Special Reference under S. 213 of the Government of India Act, 1935', 1941 F. C. R. 12 and — 'Meghraj v. Alla Rakhia', 1942 F. C. R. 52, the plaintiffs are not entitled to claim a share in the agricultural lands as legislation with regard to such lands can be undertaken after the coming into operation of the Government of India Act, 1935, only by the Provincial Legislature. Since Act 17 of 1937 was by the Central Legislature, it cannot affect proprietary rights so far as agricultural lands are concerned. So the lower court had to give a decree to the plaintiffs only with regard to properties other than agricultural lands.

(2) But the dispute centred round certain items mentioned in C. 2 and C. 4 schedule as well as items 1 to 4 in the D schedule. C. 2 schedule related to certain mortgages executed in favour of Srinivasa Mudaliar, both simple as well as usufructuary, and the plaintiffs claimed their shares on those mortgages. These mortgages were over agricultural lands. C. 4 schedule related to arrears of rent due to Srinivasa Mudaliar from tenants of agricultural lands let into possession by him. Items 1 to 4 of D schedule related to certain moveables. The learned Subordinate Judge relying upon two decisions of this court in — 'Kotayya v. Annapurnamma', ILR 1945 Mad 777 and — 'Ramaswami v. Murugayyan', ILR 1945 Mad 781, as well as an unreported decision in — 'A. S. No. 2 of 1944' held that the plaintiffs are not entitled to a share because leases of agricultural lands and mortgages of agricultural lands came within the definition of interest in agricultural property within the meaning of entry 21 in the 7th schedule to the Act and could not be divided. It is against that decree that the plaintiffs have appealed.

(3) We are now concerned with such of the items in the C. 2 schedule which relate to leases of agricultural property and mortgages over agricultural property. It is clear from the various exhibits filed in the case that the deceased Srinivasa Mudaliar was a mortgagee; some of the mortgagees were simple and the others usufructuary of some of the properties in the C. 2 schedule. He had also leased out to various tenants properties, the rents of which have been mentioned in C. 4 schedule.

(4) In — 'Kotayya v. Annapurnamma', ILR 1945 Mad 777, a Bench of this court held that Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937 does not confer upon a widow of a deceased Hindu coparcener any interest in a lease of agricultural lands obtained by the joint family. The same learned Judges held in — 'Ramaswami v. Murugayyan', ILR 1945 Mad 781 that the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, 1937, does not confer on a Hindu widow any right to or interest in a simple mortgage of agricultural land executed in favour of her husband. To the same effect is the decision in A. S. No. 2 of 1944 where the same learned Judges reaffirmed and reiterated what they had already laid down in the decisions aforesaid. They also referred to the decision of the Federal Court, in — 'In Re a Special Reference under S. 213 of the Government of India Act 1935', 1941 F. C. R. 12, and held that the judgment of the Federal Court would apply equally to corporeal and incorporeal rights in land, which meant that a Hindu widow was not entitled to any share in a mortgage on agricultural land.

(5) This case comes before us on account of apparent conflict between the decisions above-mentioned and the judgment of our learned brother Subba Rao J. in — 'Veerayamma v. Venkanna', 1951-1-M. L. J. 364. In that case the learned Judge held that since a mortgage debt apart from the security can be transferred, a suit by a Hindu widow for a share in a mortgage debt under the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, before it was amended by Madras Act 26 of 1947 is maintainable. The learned Judge referred to the decisions in — 'Imperial Bank of India v. Bengal National Bank', 59 Cal 377 P. C. and — 'Fanny Skinner v. Bank of Upper India', 57 All 314 P. C. In those decisions the Privy Council has held that apart from the security the debt as such can be transferred. The attention of the learned Judge was not invited to the two Bench decisions of this court referred to. It seems to us that even if it is possible to consider the debt as differentiated from the security, still the interest in agricultural lands in the debt does not cease as such.

(6) Our attention was also invited to another unreported judgment in — 'A. S. No. 142 of 1945'. In that case Leach C. J. and Kuppuswami Aiyar J. have held that the Hindu widow was not entitled to a partition of mortgages because the Central Legislature had no power to legislate with regard to agricultural lands. But the learned Judges also held that the widow is entitled to a share of the mortgage debt if it had already been realised before the filing of the suit that is, if the mortgage debt had been collected and the money has come into the hands of the coparcener as such, then the interest in agricultural lands has already ceased, and such being the case, what was once a mortgage debt having become money in the hands of the coparcener is liable to be divided.

(7) Mr. G. R. Jagadisa Aiyar for the appellants also relied upon the decision of the Federal Court in — 'Mt. Parkasa Kaur v. Mt. Udham Kaur', 1947-1-M. L. J. 127. We do not find that that decision can be of any help to the appellants, because Zafrullah Khan J. after referring to the decision of the Privy Council in — 'Imperial Bank of India v. Bengal National Bank', 59 Cal 377 and quoting a passage from it, says that that decision cannot apply because the property in the case before the Federal Court related to usufructuary mortgage for a term without any personal covenant for payment.

(8) In our opinion the decision of this case depends on the principles enunciated in — 'Kotayya v. Annapurnamma', ILR 1945 Mad 777 and — 'Ramaswami v. Murugayyan', ILR 1945 Mad 781. In one of the cases it has been held that the leasehold interest in agricultural land is not liable to be divided, and in the other that the mortgage interest in agricultural land cannot be divided. We find great difficulty in distinguishing that case from the facts of the present case.

(9) In — 'Veerayamma v. Venkanna', 1951-1-M. L. J. 364 Subba Rao J. after referring to the decisions in — 'Imperial Bank of India v. Bengal National Bank', 59 Cal 377 and — 'Fanny Skinner v. Bank of Upper India Ltd.', 57 All 314 P. C. states as follows:

"From the aforesaid two judgments it is clear that a debt, apart from the security, can be transferred though the debt could be realised by enforcing the security by the mortgagee or assignee from him. If it is assignable as a debt 'simpliciter' it is equally partible."

The fact that a debt can be assigned apart from the security would not make the mortgage any the less interest in agricultural land. The learned Judge has not stated that the method of transferring the debt apart from the security would take it away from the category of interests in agricultural property. In — 'Megh Raj v. Allah Rakhia', 1942 F. C. R. 52 it has been held that land comprises both corporeal and incorporeal rights and interests. That is in cases where the agricultural land has been subject to mortgage or leases it would include both corporeal and incorporeal rights and as such would not come within the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act. We are therefore of opinion that the learned Subordinate Judge was right in refusing to allow partition of the leasehold and mortgage interest in agricultural lands in C. 2 schedule to the plaint.

(10) Mr. Jagadisa Aiyar wants us to make it clear that the mortgage over agricultural lands referred to in C. 2 schedule would not comprise items 2, 4, 5, 11, 12, 14, 15 & 16 because the 1st defendant in his written statement has admitted that these mortgages are over non-agricultural lands. This position is not disputed by Mr. Thyagaraja Aiyar for the respondent.

(11) With regard to the arrears of rent due from the tenants in agricultural lands in C. 4 schedule the matter stands on a similar footing. As laid down in — 'Kotayya v. Annapurnamma', ILR 1945 Mad 777 rent due from such lands is interest in agricultural lands and therefore that also has to be excluded from the operation of the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act.

(12) The only other question that remains to be considered is with regard to items 1 to 4 in D schedule. Mr. G. R. Jagadisa Aiyar contends that these items have been entrusted to one Subramaniam, the guardian of the first defendant, after an inventory had been taken. According to the inventory, it is stated that certain items have been exclusively given over to the plaintiffs and certain other items have been given over to the 1st defendant through his guardian. No mention has been made of those items as to whom these should go and since they have been handed over to the guardian of the 1st defendant, learned counsel contends that they are liable to be partitioned. We do not find any justification for this argument. It is not shown that the movable properties handed over to the guardian are not those which have been specifically and definitely allotted and given over to him. We do not think that there is any point in this contention as well. The appeal therefore fails and is dismissed with costs. B/R.G.D. Appeal dismissed.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 178 (Vol. 40, C. N. 58)
SOMASUNDARAM J.

The Public Prosecutor, Appellant v. Kuncham Venkateswarulu, Respondent.

Criminal Appeal No. 459 of 1951, D/- 1-4-1952.

Sales Tax — Madras General Sales Tax Act (9 of 1939), Ss. 2(g-1), 8-A, 9, 13 and 15(h) — Prosecution under S. 13 — Burden of proof — No proof that accused is registered dealer — Accused cannot be prosecuted.

For an offence under S. 13, the prosecution must prove that the accused is a registered dealer within the meaning of the Act. If an assessee has not registered himself he may be punishable for that; but not for not maintaining correct accounts, which is an obligation cast on registered dealer only. In the absence of the proof that the accused is a registered dealer he cannot be prosecuted under S. 13 read with S. 15(h).

(Para 3)

Adavi Rama Rao, for Accused; The Public Prosecutor on behalf of the State.

JUDGMENT: This is an appeal by the State against the acquittal of the respondent by the Additional First Class Magistrate of Kakinada. The respondent was charged for an offence under Sec. 13 read with Sec. 15(h) of the Madras General Sales-tax Act.

(2) The accused is having a rice shop and a visit was made by the Assistant Commercial Tax Officer on 17th May 1949. There he found one Badam Anjaneyalu sitting in the shop and he saw something underneath the gunny bag on which the said Anjaneyalu was sitting. When he was asked about it, Anjaneyalu picked up the book and tried to run away with it. But he was soon caught hold of and one B. Venkatachalam took the book from Anjaneyalu and gave it to the witness. This is Ex. P. 3. It appears to be an account book, and according to the evidence, it is in the handwriting of D. W. 1, the clerk of the accused. This was compared with the regular accounts maintained by the accused and submitted to the Commercial Tax Officer for purpose of assessment. All the entries found in the regular account books were found in this and there were some more entries in this book Ex. P. 3 for which there was no corresponding entry in the original accounts which are filed as Exs. P. 6 and P. 13. P. W. 2 who is the Commercial Tax Officer speaks to the fact that the person who wrote Exs. P. 6 and P. 13, the accounts submitted to the Commercial Tax Office, is the person who has written Ex. P. 3. This evidence has not been challenged in cross-examination.

But it is only in defence that the clerk comes forward and says that Ex. P. 3 is not in his handwriting. His evidence is not of much value in as much as his evidence is interested and the evidence given by P. W. 2 was not challenged in cross-examination. I am satisfied on the evidence that Ex. P. 3 is another account maintained by the accused apart from Exs. P. 6 and P. 13 which he has submitted to the authorities for purposes of assessment. The Magistrate below acquitted the accused on the ground that the entries in Ex. P. 3 which are not to be found in Exs. P. 6 and P. 13 have not been proved because none of the purchasers or sellers relating to the entries has been examined. He also stated that the account book Ex. P. 3 was seized from the possession of Anjaneyalu and not from the possession of the accused or his clerk. He therefore acquitted the accused.

(3) If the case is to be decided merely on this point I would certainly have reversed the decision of the lower court as in my opinion it has been satisfactorily proved that the books of account not only belong to the accused but that they were in the possession of the accused. But a certain point which has been overlooked in the conduct of the prosecution in the lower court has been brought to my notice by the learned advocate Mr. Rama Rao, who appears for the accused. The prosecution as already stated, is for an offence under S. 13 read with S. 15(h). Sec. 13 casts an obligation on every registered dealer and every person licensed under the Act to keep and maintain a true and correct account. A "registered dealer" has been defined as a dealer registered under the Act. A "dealer" has been defined as any person who carries on the business of buying or selling goods. This complaint can therefore be laid against the accused only if he is a registered dealer within the meaning of the term in (g) (1) of S. 2, General Sales-tax Act.

It is pointed out by Mr. Rama Rao that the complaint laid in this case refers to the accused as a dealer. In two places he is referred to only as a dealer. In the evidence also of P. W. 1, he simply states that the accused is a dealer under the Madras General Sales-tax Act. If an expression such as a "dealer" is used by the Officer concerned, he must be deemed to have used it in the sense in which it is used in the Act. The Act undoubtedly makes a distinction between a dealer and a registered dealer. Under S. 8(a) which is an amended section, every dealer whose turnover in any case is not less than Rs. 7500 shall and any other dealer may get himself registered under the Act. An obligation is therefore cast upon every dealer whose turnover is more than Rs. 7500 to get himself registered under the Act. It is only then that he can collect any amount by way of sales tax under this Act and a dealer who has not registered himself shall not collect any such amount.

Under Sec. 13, it is a registered dealer who should keep and maintain true accounts. It is therefore clear from the reading of the sections that for an offence under S. 13 the prosecution must prove that the accused is a registered dealer within the meaning of the Act. Such proof in my opinion is lacking in this case. It is pointed out by the learned Public Prosecutor that this accused is an assessee and that an assessee is one whose turnover is Rs. 10,000 or more and therefore he must be deemed to be a registered dealer. It is true that under Sec. 9(1) every dealer whose turnover is ten thousand or more in a year shall submit such return or returns relating to his turnover in the manner prescribed by the Act and then if his accounts are accepted he is assessed. Although an obligation is cast under Sec. 8(a) on every dealer whose turnover is more than Rs. 7500 to get himself registered, still the expression that is used in Sec. 9 is not a "registered dealer" but a "dealer" which will be construed in the sense in which it is used in Sec. 2(b).

It appears to me that when the amendment was introduced, the Legislature overlooked this. Every assessee has to be a registered dealer and the expression in Sec. 9 should be a registered dealer & not dealer. If an assessee has not registered himself he may be punishable for that; but not for not maintaining correct accounts, which is an obligation cast on registered dealers only. On the facts of the case, as stated already, no proof has been let in that this accused is a registered dealer within the meaning of the term of Sec. 2(g) (1) of the Act. In the absence of such proof he cannot be prosecuted under S. 13 read with S. 15(h) of the Act. I must say that the credit of taking this point goes to Mr. Rama Rao who appears for the accused. In the result the appeal is dismissed. B/V.R.B. Appeal dismissed.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 179 (Vol. 40, C. N. 59)
MACK AND BASHEER AHMED SAYEED JJ.

In re Molagan alias Same Goundan and another, Appellants.

Criminal Appeals Nos. 363 and 366 of 1951, D/- 4-4-1952.

(a) Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 172 (2) — Defending counsel is not entitled as of right to see case diary of police — But there is no prohibition against the Court permitting in its discretion defending counsel to see portions thereof, which the Court considers that in the interest of justice, he should see and use in the defence of the case — The appropriate court is the committing Court and not the Sessions — (Case held fit one when the committing Court should have shown such portions to the defence counsel, to verify what the accused told the police as recorded there before formulating his defence): Case law Ref. (Para 17)

Anno: Cr.P.C., S. 172 N. 5.

(b) Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 162 — Defence cannot put question even in cross examination to police what accused told during investigation — It is however duty of Court, which has seen the police diary, to put such question to police, under its wide powers under S. 165, Evidence Act, if it thinks that the answer would benefit the accused in his defence — (Evidence Act (1872), S. 165). (Para 18)

Anno: Cr.P.C., S. 162 N. 4; Evi. Act, 165 N. 1.

V. Rajagopalachari, E. Subramaniam and S. Chellaswami (Amicus Curiae), for Appellants; The Asst. Public Prosecutor, for the State.

MACK J.: (Cr. Ap. No. 363 of 1951): The first appellant (A. 1) is a widow aged over 45. She and her two younger brothers (A. 2 and A. 3) have been found guilty under S. 302 I. P. C. of the murder of one Srinivasa Asari, who was hacked with an aruval in several places in their village street at about 2 p.m. on the 6th of November 1950. A sister of the appellants, one Chinnammal (A. 4) was also charged with this murder but acquitted.

(2) The case is rather remarkable as this widow (A. 1), at her sessions trial, took full responsibility for cutting Srinivasa Asari with a bill-hook (M. O. 1). She appeared with this blood stained weapon at the Dharmapuri Police station 20 miles away, at 10 a.m. the following morning, where she made a statement and surrendered herself. At Dharmapuri before she appeared at the police station, she went at 8 a.m. to the house of a Brahmin lady (P. W. 4), whom there is no reason to disbelieve. She knew A. 1 very well as she used to do cooly work in her house and other houses for several years when she was in Elumichenpatti, her native village. According to P. W. 4, A. 1 seemed very upset and told her that she had killed the man, who had murdered the husband and son of her younger sister A. 4. The Sub-Inspector enquired P. W. 4 the following day.

(3) In the meantime, Srinivasa Asari's wife (P. W. 1) made a complaint Ex. P. 1 to the village Magistrate (P. W. 3) who lived only 70 yards from the scene of murder. That was to the effect that at about 2 p.m. her husband went from their house into the street and that, immediately after he left, she heard cries and on rushing up, she found A. 1 holding her husband down by his head, while A. 2 and A. 3 cut him several times with a bill-hook. When she raised an alarm, they threatened to cut her also. P. W. 3 was sitting on his pial when, according to him, P. W. 1 came there weeping and told him about the offence. There is no reference in Ex. P. 1 to A. 4.

(4) The prosecution case against A. 1 to A. 4 rested entirely on the evidence of P. W. 1 and another eye-witness (P. W. 2) a ten-year old boy, who claims to have been by himself in his father's sundry shop and to have witnessed the tragedy. According to him, A. 1 suddenly came behind the deceased and cut him with this bill-hook on the left shoulder. Then A. 2, came running, took M. O. 1 and cut him on the head and right shoulder. Then A. 3 came from the house of A. 4, took the bill-hook from A. 2 and cut deceased on his neck and again on the abdomen. Then last came A. 4 running from her house saying "life is not yet extinct, give two more blows." P. W. 1 says when she rushed out she saw A. 1 holding the deceased by his tuft and bending his head backwards, that A. 2 took the bill-hook and cut the deceased on the head and on the right shoulder. Then A. 3 took the bill-hook and cut the deceased twice on the neck and then last A. 4 came running from her house exhorting to give two more cuts. Thereupon, A. 3 cut the deceased on the abdomen after he fell down. Then, according to her, A. 1 took the aruval from A. 3 and all went away. This witness explains her omission to say anything about A. 4 in Ex. P. 1 as being due in confusion and distress.

(5) The motive-background in the case is this. The deceased Srinivasa Asari was charged with the murder of A. 4's husband and their young son and of attempting to murder A. 4 herself by administering aconite poison, the accusation in that case being that he attempted in fact to poison the whole of A. 4's family. The deceased was acquitted on 5th September 1950 by the Sessions Judge of Salem in S. C. No. 85 of 1950. The judgment in that case shows that A. 4, who was P. W. 2 in that case, deposed that she had been on illicit intimacy with Srinivasa Asari for about three years but, when her husband came to know of it, she terminated it and would have nothing further to do with the deceased, who lived in a house, according to the plan Ex. P. 9, next to the house in which A. 4 lived along with her widowed sister A. 1. A. 1 appears to have been a widow for many years and to have been depending on the charity and bounty of her sister, A. 4 and her poisoned husband. It was less than two months after the acquittal of the deceased in that poisoning case that he was done to death in broad day light a few yards from his house. A. 2 and A. 3 lived in separate houses, marked J and H in the plan, from where the scene of offence could not have been visible, in a separate lane and with several houses intervening.

(6) A significant fact is that A. 4 who was examined by the Sub Inspector at the inquest, had an incised wound  $1\frac{1}{2}'' \times \frac{1}{2}'' \times \frac{1}{2}''$  on the lower third of her right fore-arm according to her wound certificate, Ex. P. 5. She had quite clearly been mixed up in the tragedy. Unfortunately she was, on the basis of the evidence of P. Ws. 1 and 2, put into the position of an accused person and in both courts took refuge in a complete denial of knowledge. In the Sessions Court, she said that she got this cut on her hand while she was cutting fuel with this bill-hook. According to the evidence of P. W. 1, A. 2, A. 3 and A. 4 were in the village and readily came to the scene when called after the arrival of the Police, though A. 1 had disappeared. Unfortunately, we have the Sub Inspector (P. W. 12) saying in evidence in chief that he searched for Accused 1 to 3 during the night of 6th November 1950 but found all of them not available and that he arrested A. 2 and A. 3 at Dhandakarampatti on 12th November 1950. It is most regrettable that the Sub Inspector should have given his evidence in this misleading sequence, as on looking into the case diary, we find that he actually examined A. 2 and A. 3 and made a note of their statements to him on 6th November 1950 itself, bearing out the testimony of P. W. 1 that these two accused readily came after the arrival of the Police. It would appear from a letter, Ex. D. 5 written by the Sub Inspector Sri P. S. Krishnamurthi (P. W. 12) that he referred the case for instructions to his superior officers and only after the receipt of them arrested A. 2 and A. 3 presumably on the basis of the evidence of P. Ws. 1 and 2.

(7) The learned Sessions Judge was greatly impressed by the evidence of P. Ws. 1 and 2 and bases his conviction of A. 2 and A. 3 on their testimony, holding it was very improbable that this widow A. 1 by herself could have caused all these fatal injuries on Srinivasa Asari. The deceased was cut in ten places on the head, neck, shoulders and abdomen and also in the left hand in the region of the fingers. We find ourselves unable to accept the evidence of these two eye witnesses, P. Ws. 1 and 2. It does not explain the injury A. 4 had on her forearm and the omission of A. 4 by P. W. 1 from Ex. P. 1. It is quite possible that this boy (P. W. 2) saw something of the offence and a possible encounter between Srinivasa Asari and A. 4 which culminated in A. 1 attacking him with the bill-hook she had in her hand. The evidence of P. W. 1 suggests that the whole of this family were waiting for her husband in the street that afternoon with murderous intent and that all set upon him and killed him as soon as he emerged. Even according to the prosecution, only one bill-hook was used and it was passed from one accused to the other till, for reasons which are quite inexplicable, after A. 3 dealt with the final fatal cuts, it was handed back to A. 1 who went away with it to Dharmapuri Police station.

(8) A. 1 in the committing Magistrate's court denied having cut Srinivasa Asari, though she admitted that she appeared at the police station with the bill-hook. She said she found it lying on her way and she took it with her. In the Sessions Court, however, she took the sole responsibility for cutting the deceased, saying that it was he who had killed her sister's husband and son, who had been maintaining and protecting her after her husband died. She further said that the deceased had been proclaiming in the village that he would file a suit for damages for malicious prosecution in the poison case in which he was acquitted. There can be no doubt that this widow has been most reluctant even to attribute anything to A. 4 who was undoubtedly present at the time of this attack on the deceased, as evidenced by the injury on her hand. We are inclined to the view that the deceased when he came out of his house met A. 4, and it was during the passage of abuse between them that A. 1 rushed out with an aruval and later hacked him. We do not think there is anything improbable in A. 1 having caused all the fatal injuries on the deceased with M. O. 1, which she may have had in her hands cutting fuel, as she stated in the committing court.

(9) A. 1 had a very powerful motive for hatred against the deceased, whom she doubtless held responsible, despite his acquittal, for the murder of her sister's husband, who had been supporting her. After his death, these two widowed sisters lived together unfortunately in a house very near that of the deceased and after his return from jail, A. 1's feelings towards him were doubtless, as she has described, very strong indeed. We can see nothing improbable in A. 1 losing all control over herself with this aruval in her hand, on probably seeing the deceased engaged in some altercation with A. 4, seeing red and then hacking him to death. We are unable to accept the Sessions Judge's appreciation of the evidence of P. Ws. 1 and 2, which seems to us extremely artificial and designed to bring in A. 1 to A. 4 and to give them each some unnatural part. That A. 1 appeared at the Dharmapuri police station 20 miles away with this blood-stained aruval and there presumably made a confession, which unfortunately is not admissible in evidence is an outstanding feature in this somewhat remarkable case.

(10) We have no hesitation in setting aside the convictions of A. 2 and A. 3, who, we are satisfied, had nothing to do with the attack on the deceased. The evidence shows that the investigating Sub Inspector himself was very doubtful about charging A. 2 and A. 3 and all we can say is that it is very unfortunate that he was instructed to lay the charge-sheet against all the four accused. After perusing the case diary, we have no hesitation in expressing the view that A. 4, who gave evidence at the inquest, should have been a prosecution witness and not in the dock.

(11) The conviction of A. 1 under S. 302, I. P. C., is however correct and is upheld. There can be no doubt, as she has pleaded at her trial that it was she who caused all these injuries on Srinivasa Asari with this bill-hook (M. O. 1). In the state of the legally admissible evidence, it is quite impossible for us to find exactly the true circumstances under which A. 1 lost all control and attacked the deceased. No plea of grave and sudden provocation has been taken, with the exclusion of A. 4 from the witness box and her being quite unjustly put into the dock as one of the accused.

(12) Before dealing with the question of sentence, now that the conviction has been dealt with on the evidence legally admissible, we would like to consider from the revelations in this concrete case the present practice based it is said on existing law of withholding from defending Counsel copies of the statements made by accused persons in the course of investigation. We would like to extract here the record in the case diary of what A. 4 examined as P. W. 8 at the inquest said.

"P. W. 8 came to the spot at the time of inquest and I examined her and she stated that while she was in the street, the deceased who came from north abused her. She also abused him. In the meanwhile A. 1 who was in her house to start for bringing fuel with a bill-hook came there and gave a cut on the shoulder of the deceased. The deceased Srinivasa Asari caught hold of the bill-hook and she attempted to snatch the same and due to that she sustained injury on hand. Then A. 1 her elder sister, snatched the bill-hook and cut the deceased on his head, stomach, neck etc., places and then A. 1 went towards the south with the bill-hook. She (P. W. 8) went to her house."

Then again, there is the following extract from the case diary also dated 6th November 1950.

"I sent for A. 2 and A. 3 noted in the margin and they came to the spot.

I questioned A. 2 and he denied the offence and added that he was grazing his cattle in the fields and learnt about the occurrence and ran to the spot and found the deceased, and learnt that A. 1 cut the deceased with a bill-hook and that he (deceased) died.

A. 3 denied the offence and said that while he was grazing the cattle in the field he learnt about the occurrence at about 4 p.m. and came to the spot and found the deceased, learnt that A. 1 cut the deceased with a bill-hook and that the deceased died.

(13) There can be no doubt, in our opinion, that the defence in this case has been greatly handicapped for want of knowledge by defending counsel as to precisely what A. 2, A. 3 and A. 4 told the police when they were questioned. Mr. Rajagopalachari was in complete ignorance of these diary extracts when he read them out to him &, after recovering from his initial surprise, had no hesitation in saying that a wholly different line of defence should have been adopted in this case, both in the committing court and in the sessions court. We have heard arguments by Mr. Rajagopalachari and also the learned Public Prosecutor on the expediency, in the light of the revelations in this case and also in other cases of which we have had recent experience, of furnishing defending counsel, on request, with copies of statements made by accused persons to the investigating police, as recorded in the case diary.

(14) Our attention has been drawn to a Full Bench decision of four Judges — 'Queen Empress v. Arumugham and others', 20 Mad 189 which considered in 1897 the question whether an accused person was entitled, while on remand, to a copy of the Police charge-sheet. Collins C. J. and Benson J. held that charge sheets were not public documents within the meaning of S. 74, Evidence Act, and that an accused person is not entitled before trial to copies. Collins C. J. however specifically said that he expressed no opinion whether an accused can call for police reports and the charge sheet during the progress of the trial. Shephard J. who made the reference to the Full Bench with Subramania Aiyar J. held that an accused person was entitled to a copy of the charge sheet before the trial but not of other police reports. Subramania Aiyar J. was of the opinion that an accused was entitled not only to copies of the charge sheet but of all police reports also, before the trial began. It was not however till the year 1921 that is 24 years later that an accused person became entitled to copies of charge sheets before the trial began, by the enactment of S. 173(4) of the Cr. P. C. which gave an accused person this statutory right.

(15) The record in the case diary containing the substance of what each accused said to the Police when first interrogated is beset with a special difficulty in view of the Full Bench decision in — 'In re Syamo Maha Patro', 55 Mad 903 (FB) which brought within the ambit of S. 162 Cr. P. C. statements made by accused persons to the police in the course of an investigation. Reilly J. delivering the judgment of the Full Bench of three learned Judges by which we are bound, gave expression to the sharp differences of opinion on this point between Judges in our own High Court and also other High Courts. At p. 918 he observed that of the six Judges of the Madras High Court, who held the view that S. 162 Cr. P. C. applied to statements of accused persons, Waller J. had since altered his view. There is reference in the judgment of Reilly J. to a wealth of case law, much of it conflicting. He referred to the Full Bench decision of five Judges of the Rangoon High Court, in — 'King Emperor v. Maung Tha Din', 4 Rang. 72 F. B. which held that S. 162, Cr. P. C. applied to oral as well as written statements. In considering the decision in — 'Jagwa Dhanuk v. King Emperor', 5 Pat 63, a Bench decision by Mullick J. and Jwala Prasad J., which took the view that S. 162, Cr. P. C. did not prohibit the admission of statements made by accused persons to the Police, provided they were not confession, Reilly J. considered the arguments pro and contra. One argument that the application of S. 162, Cr. P. C. to a statement made by accused persons would seriously prejudice them by shutting out evidence that they had made exculpatory statements to the Police at a very early stage, Reilly J. met as follows.

"I think it is enough to say that the learned Judge in his anxiety to prevent evidence of statements which may be of help to the accused from being shut out has forgotten how often statements made by the accused to the Police may tell most seriously against them, which is the reason why the prosecution wishes to use the statements of the accused in the present case."

In the great majority of cases, which took the view that statements made by accused persons to the Police were shut out in evidence by S. 162 Cr. P. C. it was the prosecution who wanted such statements to be admitted which while not amounting to confessions nonetheless supplied evidence against the accused. No doubt, as Reilly J. has observed, a larger number of accused would be benefited by the total exclusion of such evidence, and it would only be a comparatively small number of accused persons who in particular cases will derive some benefit by the elucidation of what they told the Police in the first instance.

(16) The present state of the law as laid down in the Full Bench decision lays a heavy responsibility on trial courts, and as it appears to me justice can only be done in cases such as the present case by resort to S. 172(2) Cr. P. C. which gives full discretion to a criminal court to call for police diaries which they "may use .....not as evidence in the case, but to aid it in such inquiry or trial". Under this section also "neither the accused nor his agents shall be entitled to call for such diaries nor shall he or they are entitled to see them merely because they are referred to by the court". The accused, therefore, are not entitled as of right to see any portion of the diaries that they may wish to see. If however a court on a perusal of the diary finds something there, which helps the accused to establish his innocence or to mitigate his offence, what is a court to do? The answer is by no means easy, and procedure will have, in the interests of justice, to depend on the facts of each case. I have myself, in about 20 years experience as a trial Judge in murder cases, never hesitated on perusing a case diary and finding there something helpful to an accused person in showing that portion of the diary to the defending counsel. The learned Public Prosecutor, Mr. Rangaswami Aiyangar, who has had a great deal of experience in defending criminals, has frankly stated that he has also been afforded a similar courtesy by some Judges before whom he has appeared, but he is unable to point to any specific section of law under which that indulgence, if it may be called so, has been shown. I have myself justified that practice on grounds of simple and natural justice, as a proper user of the case diary as an aid in the enquiry or trial under S. 172(2) Cr. P. C. Personally, I am quite unable to see how anything favourable to the accused discovered in a case diary can be utilised by the court without disclosure to defending counsel. He is not entitled as of right to see the case diary but, as I read S. 172(2) there is no prohibition contained therein against the court permitting in its discretion defending counsel to see any portion of the case diary, which the court considers in the interest of justice he should see and use in the defence of the case.

(17) In a number of cases, which have come up before us, and the present is a concrete one, we have found defences formulated in the committing court more often than not, instructed by village lawyers and intermediaries who, in the unfortunate conditions prevailing in rural areas unserved by any channel of controlled legal service, allow their imaginations to run riot, a process which often continues in the Sessions court and sometimes even up to this Court, without any regard to the statement made by the accused when first questioned by the Police. There is an ordinary presumption that an accused person will tell his lawyer what he told the Police in the first instance. But in prevailing conditions, the defending advocate is often completely in the dark and is far from sure what exactly his client has told the Police in the first instance. An accused person in the state of the law, as it stands, has no right 'per se' to obtain copies of his statements to the Police until the law is amended. But we can see no legal impediment to the committing court permitting in its discretion and in appropriate cases defending counsel at his request to look into a case diary to verify what the accused told the Police as recorded there, before formulating his defence, under S. 172(2) to aid the court in the enquiry or trial. It must be made clear that such a permission cannot be claimed by the accused as a matter of right. It is of comparatively little use for defending Counsel being permitted by the Sessions Judge to look into the case diary at a belated stage of the trial only when the learned Judge himself on a perusal of it finds something of great use to the accused. It is necessary for responsible defence from the start that in cases such as the present, defending counsel should know what the accused told the Police in the first instance. We have not come across any more appropriate concrete case than the present in which this course should have been 'ab initio' adopted.

(18) There is a further aspect of this matter, viz., how a statement made by an accused person to the Police, if to his advantage, can be used in the trial. It does not appear possible in view of the Full Bench decision in — 'In re Syamo Maha Patro', 55 Mad 903 F. B. for a defending advocate even in cross-examination to ask a Police officer whether an accused at the very outset told him something self-exculpatory or for instance set up an alibi which may prove his innocence. Reilly J. referred to the decision in — 'Sheik Kalesha in re', in which Jackson and Cornish JJ. held that a statement made by an accused to a police officer on which the defence wished to rely was shut out by S. 162, Cr. P. C. In these rare cases, a court which has a case diary in its possession, at the request of the defending counsel, would we think be perfectly justified in putting a question to a Police officer to elicit what an accused told him purely in the interests of the accused, within its very wide powers under S. 165 of the Evidence Act, which permits a Judge to ask any question he pleases, in any form, at any time, of any witness about any fact relevant or irrelevant. There is in the present state of the law as regards the admissibility of statements made by accused persons to the Police, a heavy responsibility on courts in the user of case diaries under S. 172(2), Cr. P. C. and on public prosecutors to bring to the notice of the trial Judge anything in the case diary favourable to the accused. Had the learned Sessions Judge perused the case diary in the present case, we have no doubt that he would have cleared up a regrettable and misleading obscurity consequent upon the Sub Inspector (P. W. 12) deposing to his inability to find A. 2 and A. 3 that night and his not disclosing the fact that he had already examined them earlier that day. We must also express our great surprise that A. 4 in both the committing court and the trial court adopted the line of defence that she knew nothing at all in view of the record of her evidence as P. W. 8 at the inquest.

(19) Taking all circumstances into consideration in the matter of sentence, we consider it a fit case, while confirming the sentence of transportation for life passed on this widow (A. 1) really on her plea of guilty, we would be justified in making a recommendation to Government for commutation of her sentence to seven years' rigorous imprisonment under S. 401, Cr. P. C. satisfied as we are that, though she inflicted these fatal injuries on Srinivasa Asari, she and her family had sustained very grave and sustained provocation at his hands and that he gave her sister A. 4 also grave provocation in an altercation with her that afternoon.

(20) We directed the release of accused 2 and 3 on 25th March 1952 at the conclusion of arguments.

B/R.G.D.

Order accordingly.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 183 (Vol. 40, C. N. 60)

SUEBA RAO J.

Doddi Dorayya, Appellant v. Bathula Adinarayana, Respondent.

Second Appeal No. 167 of 1950, D/- 10-4-1952.

Debt Laws — Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act (4 of 1938), S. 28 — Rules under — Rr. 2, 4, 7, 9 and 10 — Proceedings under R. 2 are not of summary nature but are in nature of suit — Order therein that person is not agriculturist — Order operates as res judicata in subsequent suit by such person for possession alleging that he was an agriculturist — (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 11) — ILR 1946 Mad 566 Foll. (Para 3)

Anno: C. P. C., S. 11 N. 28.

S. Ramamurti, for Appellant; E. Venkatesam and E. L. Bhagiratha Rao, for Respondent.

JUDGMENT: This second appeal arises out of O. S. No. 68 of 1947 on the file of the District Munsif's Court, Vizagapatam, a suit filed by the appellant to direct the defendants to put him in possession of the plaint schedule property and for a declaration that the entire amount due under the usufructuary mortgage dated 22nd July 1873 was completely discharged.

(2) To appreciate the contentions of the parties, it is enough to state the relevant facts. The plaintiff, alleging to be the owner of the equity of redemption and also the purchaser of two-thirds of the mortgage interest in the aforesaid mortgage, filed the said suit for redemption and for possession of the plaint schedule properties. The plaintiff's case is that he is an agriculturist and that, if the provisions of the Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act are applied to the debt, the debt would be discharged. The defendants contended, inter alia, that the plaintiff is not an agriculturist and that the suit is premature. They also pleaded that the plaintiff is precluded from raising the plea that he is an agriculturist by reason of the order in the application taken by him under the provisions of the Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act.

The learned District Munsif held that the decision in the earlier proceedings would not be a bar for the maintainability of the suit as, according to him, the plaintiff's right to file a suit was expressly reserved. The learned District Munsif and the learned District Judge in appeal held that the order in the earlier proceedings would operate as res judicata. They also held that the suit would be premature as, if the debt was not scaled down, the mortgage debt would not be discharged. The plaintiff preferred the above second appeal.

(3) Mr. Ramamurthi, learned counsel for the appellant, contended before me that the view of the courts below on the question of res judicata is unsound. To appreciate his contention, it is necessary to notice the scope of the previous proceedings and the order made therein. As aforesaid, the plaintiff filed O. P. No. 43 of 1941 on the file of the Court of the District Munsif, Vizagapatam, for a declaration of the debt due by him. The said application was filed under Rule 2 of the rules relating to applications to civil courts for scaling down of non-decreed debt. The District Munsif raised the following issues:

1. Whether the petitioner and his vendor are agriculturists?
2. Whether the properties mortgaged in 1873 and those purchased by the petitioner are the same?
3. Whether this petition is in time?
4. Whether the debt is not liable to be scaled down? and
5. If the debt is liable to be scaled down, what amount, if any, is due thereon?

The learned District Munsif held on issue 1 that the petitioner and his vendor were agriculturists, on issue 2 that the properties mortgaged in 1873 and those purchased by the petitioner are the same, on issue 3 that the petition was in time, on issue 4 that the debt was liable to be scaled down and on issue 5 that the amount due to the respondent was only a sum of Rs. 112-4-0 with interest at 6½ per cent per annum from 1st October 1937 till payment. The respondent preferred an appeal to the District Court, Vizagapatam. The learned District Judge definitely held that he was not prepared to hold on the evidence that the petitioner was an agriculturist entitled to present the petition and expressed the view that on that short ground the petition should have been dismissed. In regard to the other question raised in that petition he also expressed the view that that matter could only be decided in a regular suit. The appellant preferred an appeal against the order of the District Judge to the High Court in A. A. A. O. No. 361 of 1943. Wadsworth J. dismissed the appeal. But in dismissing the appeal he observed as follows:

"The appellant has not satisfied the lower appellate court either that he is an agriculturist or that he is the owner of the whole of the mortgagor's interest. It does not appear to have been either averred or proved that the persons, who were the titular mortgagors when Madras Act IV of 1938 came into force were agriculturists ..... In such a case, the claimant should be required to prove strictly his right to the relief which he seeks. The appeal is dismissed with costs."

On a perusal of the judgments of the District Judge and of Wadsworth J., I find it very difficult to accept the contention of the learned counsel for the appellant that the District Judge as well as Wadsworth J. left open the question whether the plaintiff is an agriculturist or not to be decided in a regular suit. The District Judge specifically held that the plaintiff was not an agriculturist. Wadsworth J. agreed with him and pointed out that it was not averred or proved that the persons who were the titular mortgagors when Madras Act IV of 1938 came into force were agriculturists. In dismissing the appeal, the learned Judge did not expressly reserve the other questions to be decided in a suit. But it is not necessary to decide whether the courts on the previous occasion reserved questions other than the question whether the plaintiff is an agriculturist or not to be decided in a regular suit. It is manifest that the question whether the plaintiff is an agriculturist has been finally decided against the plaintiff.

In those circumstances, the next question that arises is whether the said finding would operate as res judicata in the present proceedings. The question viz., under what circumstances the decision in a petition would operate as res judicata in a regular suit has been decided by Somayya and Yahya Ali JJ. in — 'Arikapudi Balakotayya v. Yadlapalli Nagayya', ILR 1946 Mad 566. There, the question was whether a decision of a District Court under S. 84(1) of the Madras Hindu Religious Endowments Act negating the contentions of the applicants that they and their forefathers were hereditary trustees of the temple, would be res judicata in a suit filed by them for a declaration that the office of trusteeship was hereditary in their family.

The learned Judges held that the doctrine of res judicata is not confined to decisions in suits but applies even to decisions rendered in proceedings, which are not suits. To ascertain whether a proceeding is summary or not, they have laid down various tests and held that if the proceeding is not a summary one, a decision therein would be res judicata if the conditions laid down in S. 11 C. P. C. are complied with. They negatived the contention that a proceeding under S. 84(1) of the Madras Hindu Religious Endowments Act is summary in nature. The fact that the District Court is bound to take evidence, should act on the materials placed before it by parties, should decide substantial questions affecting rights of parties and similar characteristics were considered as indicating that the proceedings were not summary in their nature.

In the present case, the object of the rules relating to applications to civil courts for scaling down of non-decreed debts is apparent. They were intended to provide for an expeditious cheaper remedy for ascertaining the debt due to the creditor. The rules would enable the creditor to institute a suit for recovery of the amount declared due to him and thereby to avoid excessive court fees and invite objections from the debtors. The rules also would enable a debtor to pay off the debt scaled down instead of involving himself in unnecessary and costly litigation. To effectuate this purpose, the rules provide for an enquiry wherein the parties are enabled to adduce the entire evidence available to them. The particulars that are to be given under rule 4 of the rules are those that are found in a plaint.

Under rule 7, on the date originally fixed under rule 6, or on any subsequent date to which the application may be adjourned by the court, the court shall after taking such evidence or making such enquiry as it may consider necessary, pass such order on the application as it thinks fit. This rule, therefore, enables parties to adduce necessary evidence. Rule 9 says that the order of the court declaring the amount of the debt under rule 7 shall be subject to appeal and second appeal as if it were a decree in an original suit. Under rule 10, the courts having jurisdiction under these rules shall be the courts which would have jurisdiction to entertain suits for the recovery of the debts as unscaled.

It is therefore clear from the aforesaid rules that they provide for pleadings, prescribe the same form in which a suit would have to be filed, enable the parties to adduce evidence and provide for an appeal, and second appeal as if the order made was a decree. I cannot hold that the proceedings are of a summary nature. I therefore hold following the decision in — 'Arikapudi Balakotayya v. Yedlapalli Nagayya', ILR 1946 Mad 566 that the order made in A. A. A. O. No. 361 of 1943 would operate as res judicata and preclude the plaintiff from raising the plea that he is not an agriculturist over again. No other point was argued.

(4) In the result the appeal fails and it is dismissed with costs. No leave.

B/V.R.B.

Appeal dismissed.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 184 (Vol. 40, C. N. 61)

PANCHAPAKESA AYYAR J.

Nagu Thevar and others, Petitioners v. Periakaruppa Thevan, Respondent.

Criminal Revn. Case No. 1145 of 1950 and Cri. Revn. Petn. No. 1074 of 1950, D/- 10-8-1951.

Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 203 — 'Sufficient ground for proceeding' — Complaint prima facie disclosing offence of cheating — Dismissal under S. 203 is not proper.

The complainant alleged that the accused had cheated him by asking to admit payment of the consideration before the Sub-Registrar on a promise to pay the consideration at once as soon as the document was registered and in pursuance of it he made the statement and got the document registered and parted with valuable properties which he would not have done but for such deceit. The magistrate dismissed the complaint under S. 203, Criminal P. C., as disclosing a civil matter.

Held that the order of dismissal under S. 203 was not justified as it was not a mere case where the consideration was promised to be paid later on, but finally not paid. The order of dismissal should, therefore, be set aside and the complaint inquired into in the interests of justice: 43 MLJ 535 and Cr RC No 925 of 1946 Dist. (Para 1)

Anno: Cr. P. C., S. 203 N. 5.

T. S. Vaidyanatha Iyer, for Petitioners; C. K. Venkatanarsimham, for Respondent; The Public Prosecutor, for State.

ORDER: This is certainly not a case for my interfering in revision with the learned Sessions Judge's order setting aside the order of dismissal by the Magistrate. Here a deceit was alleged by the complainant, namely, that he was asked by the accused to admit payment of the consideration before the Sub-Registrar on a promise to pay the consideration at once as soon as the document was registered and that he registered it and made that statement and parted with valuable properties which he would not have done but for such deceit. It is not a mere case where the consideration was promised to be paid later on, but finally not paid. This postponement of payment in this case relates to the payment promised at a panchayat subsequent to the alleged cheating. So the witnesses regarding the alleged cheating ought to have been heard, and it was not a case for dismissal under S. 203, Cr. P.C. as a civil matter. The learned counsel for the petitioner relied on the rulings in — 'Krishna Pillai and others', 43 MLJ 535, and in — 'Cr. R. C. No. 925 of 1946. I have looked into them. They will not apply to a dismissal of a case under S. 203, Cr. P. C. in a case like this. Certainly where an alleged cheating by a representation as in this complaint, has not been properly understood and gone into by the trial Magistrate, the interests of justice and public interests require that it be gone into. So the learned Sessions Judge's order was perfectly correct. This petition deserves to be and is hereby dismissed.

B/K.S.

Revision dismissed.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 185 (Vol. 40, C. N. 62)

RAJAMANNAR C. J. AND VENKATARAMA AYYAR J.

Sri Ravu Janardhana Krishna Ranga Rao Bahadur, Petitioner v. The State of Madras, represented by the Collector of Srikakulam district at Srikakulam and others, Respondents.

Civil Misc. Petn. No. 6554 of 1951, D/- 14-4-1952.

Tenancy Laws — Madras Estates (Abolition and Conversion into Ryotwari) Act (26 of 1948), Ss. 3, 41, 50 — Impartible estates — Compensation paid under Ss. 41 and 50 — Right of co-parceners to share — (Hindu Law — Impartible Estates) — (Madras Impartible Estates Act (2 of 1904), S. 9).

In the case of an estate to which the incident of impartibility attaches by custom, custom supersedes the general Mithakshara law excepting in the matter of devolution of the property by right of survivorship. The rights which a coparcener acquires by birth in the joint family cannot be claimed in the estate and the estate remains clothed with the incidents of separate and self-acquired property of the holder. The estate is not held as a coparcenary property. (Paras 7, 9)

When such an estate is acquired by the Government and compensation is paid the compensation received retains the incident of impartibility. It is not correct to say that the customary incident of impartibility attached to the estate lasts only so long as it remains in the form of immovable property. The principle that conversion would not alter the nature of the estate is universal. (Paras 6, 12)

The fact that the estate has been included in the Schedule to the Madras Impartible Estates Act, 1904 only means that its customary incident of impartibility is recognised and not that it has become an impartible estate by virtue of such inclusion and therefore the repeal of that Act cannot, in any way, affect its character. (Para 6)

Since only persons who have an interest in the property which is acquired are entitled to a share in the compensation paid on the acquisition of the property by the Government the coparceners who have no right either to the estate or the compensation paid on acquisition cannot claim a share in the compensation paid under Ss. 41 and 50 of the Madras Estates (Abolition and Conversion into Ryotwari) Act, 1948. (Paras 7, 10)

In any event, the material time for the purpose of determining the rights of parties would be the date of the notification by virtue of which the estate is statutorily transferred to the Government. On that date the coparceners cannot be deemed to have a subsisting and real interest in the estate, as their right to get maintenance according to the custom embodied in S. 9, Madras Impartible Estates Act is not attributable to any present interest in the estate and their right to succession in certain contingencies cannot be considered as a right to share in the property during the life time of the holder. Therefore where they have no right to a share in the corpus of the estate on the date of notification under this Act, they cannot claim that they will have such a right after the notification and after the estate had vested in the Government. Case law referred.

(Para 13)

K. Rajah Ayyar, D. Srinivasa Sarma and C. H. Suryanarayana Rao, for Petitioner; The Advocate General for the Government Pleader, N. Rajagopala Iyengar and A. Kupuswami, for Respondents.

ORDER: The petitioner is the younger brother of the Zamindar of Bobbili, the third respondent. In the affidavit filed in support of the petition he states that he is a junior coparcener of the joint family which owned the ancient and impartible estate of Bobbili which was notified under the Madras Estates (Abolition and Conversion into Ryotwari) Act of 1948 with effect from 7th September 1949, that on the date when this estate was so notified the joint family consisted of the petitioner, the third respondent, the fourth respondent the son of the third respondent and the male descendants of the petitioner himself, that after the estate was taken over by the Government the Government deposited in the office of the Estates Abolition Tribunal, Vizianagaram (second respondent) on 30th March 1950 a sum of Rs. 8,17,445 towards advance compensation under S. 41 of the Act and a further sum of Rs. 58371 under S. 50 of the Act on 14th July 1950, that on and from the notified date the Madras Impartible Estates Act, 1904, should be deemed to have been repealed in its application to this estate under S. 66 of the Act, and that having regard to the rights of the parties and applying the general law ignoring the rule of impartibility and the rule of primogeniture which is incidental thereto he is entitled to a half share of the compensation money remaining after the satisfaction of the claims, if any, of the genuine creditors of the estate and of the maintenance holders.

(2) The petitioner impugns the validity of the Act providing for a distribution of the compensation amount in the case of certain impartible estates. The following are such provisions:

"45(1) In the case of an impartible estate which had to be regarded as the property of a joint Hindu family for the purpose of ascertaining the succession thereto immediately before the notified date, the following provisions shall apply.

(2) The Tribunal shall determine the aggregate compensation payable to all the following persons, considered as a single group —

(a) the principal landholder and his legitimate sons, grandsons and great grandsons in the male line living or in the womb on the notified date including sons, grandsons and great grandsons, adopted before such date (who are hereinafter called 'sharers'); and

(b) other persons who, immediately before the notified date, were entitled to maintenance out of the estate and its income either under S. 9 or 12 of the Madras Impartible Estates Act, 1904, or under any decree or order of a court, award, or other instrument in writing or contract or family arrangement which is binding on the principal landholder (who are hereinafter called 'maintenance-holders').

Provided that no such maintenance-holder shall be entitled to any portion of the aggregate compensation aforesaid, if, before the notified date his claim for maintenance or the claim of his branch of the family for maintenance, has been settled or discharged in full ...

(4) The portion of the aggregate compensation aforesaid payable to the maintenance holders shall be determined by the Tribunal and notwithstanding any arrangement already made in respect of maintenance whether by a decree or order of a court, award or other instrument in writing or contract or family arrangement, such portion shall not exceed one fifth of the remainder referred to in sub-sec. (3), except in the case referred to in the second proviso to S. 47, sub-sec. (2).

(6) The balance of the aggregate compensation shall be divided among the sharers, as if they owned such balance as a joint Hindu family and a partition thereof had been effected among them on the notified date.

47(1). Every maintenance-holder entitled to a portion of the compensation under S. 45 shall also be entitled to the grant of a ryotwari patta in respect of a portion of the lands referred to in S. 12 or 14, as the case may be.

(2) The Tribunal shall determine the total extent of the lands in respect of which ryotwari pattas may be granted to the maintenance-holders and divide the same among them, and in doing so, the Tribunal shall, unless for reasons recorded in writing it considers that it is inappropriate to do so, having regard to the considerations set forth in S. 45, sub-sec. (5) and the manner in which the compensation payable to the maintenance-holder has been or may be apportioned among them under that sub-section:

Provided that the total extent of the lands granted to all such maintenance-holders shall not exceed one-fifth of the extent of the lands in respect of which a ryotwari patta may be granted under S. 12 or 14:

Provided further that where it is found to be inconvenient or impracticable to grant any such lands, or to grant any such lands to the full extent to which the maintenance-holder may be regarded as entitled, whether on the ground that such a grant will result in the creation of an uneconomic holding or for any other reason, the share of the compensation awarded to the maintenance-holder may be increased by such amount as the Tribunal may consider reasonable;

(3) The lands in respect of which a ryotwari patta may be granted under S. 12 or 14, after excluding any lands which may be granted to maintenance holders under sub-sec. (2) shall be divided among the sharers, as if they owned such lands as a joint Hindu family & a partition thereof had been effected among them on the notified date."

(3) S. 50 provides for interim payments.

(4) The validity of these sections is impeached on several grounds, viz., that it was not competent of the Provincial legislature to pass any law on that subject-matter, because it is not covered by any entry in the State Legislature List, or Concurrent List that these provisions are on the basis of an arbitrary classification offending against Art. 14 of the Constitution and that the scheme of distribution interferes with the vested rights of the other members of the family like the petitioner. Mr. Rajah Aiyar, however, pressed upon us at the outset the position that the compensation amount represents the equivalent of an ancestral estate to which the incident of impartibility can no longer attach after its conversion into money and after the repeal of the Madras Impartible Estates Act. Having taken the place of ancestral property and having lost the special feature of impartibility the compensation amount would be partible as between the persons having the right of survivorship based on the right by birth. So the argument ran. It is on this point we heard the matter fully, and in our opinion the petition can be disposed of on the decision which we have arrived at on this point.

(5) The argument of Mr. Rajah Aiyar, learned counsel for the petitioner, was that with the taking over of the estate by the Government and the repeal of the Impartible Estates Act so far as this estate is concerned and the conversion of the immovable property which constituted the impartible estate into money, namely, the compensation payable by the Government, the incident of impartibility which attached to the estate should be deemed to have ceased and therefore the compensation amount should be treated as the property of the joint family consisting not only of the third respondent and his son, the fourth respondent, but also the petitioner and his male issue.

(6) We are unable to follow his argument that the repeal of the Madras Impartible Estates Act brought about an extinguishment of the incident of impartibility. So far as the Bobbili estate is concerned, it does not become an impartible estate by virtue of its inclusion in the schedule to Madras Act II of 1904. It was an ancient impartible estate and the utmost that could be said of its inclusion in the schedule is that its impartibility was recognised. Nor are we able to appreciate his argument that the custom of impartibility which admittedly attached to the Estate lasted and could last only so long as the estate was in the shape of immoveable property, and in particular landed property, and that as soon as the estate or a part of it is acquired by the Government the compensation amount payable for such acquisition must be deemed to be not impressed with the custom of impartibility. Learned counsel was unable to cite any authority even remotely bearing on the question.

(7) It is obvious that only persons who have an interest in the property which is acquired are entitled to a share in the compensation awarded on the acquisition of the property by the Government (See Halsbury's Laws of England, 2nd Edn, Vol VI at page 39). The real question in this case is whether the petitioner and persons like him can be said to have any interest in the estate since acquired. The nature and incidents of an impartible estate have come up for discussion and authoritative exposition by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee on several occasions. It suffices to refer to the statement of the law by Sir Dinshaw Mulla in — 'Shiba Prasad Singh v. Prayagkumari Debee', 59 Cal 1399 P. C.

"Impartibility is essentially a creature of custom. In the case of ordinary joint family property, the members of the family have (1) the right of partition, (2) the right to restrain alienations by the head of the family except for necessity, (3) the right of maintenance, and (4) the right of survivorship. The first of these rights cannot exist in the case of an impartible estate, though ancestral, from the very nature of the estate. The second is incompatible with the custom of impartibility as laid down in 'Satraj Kuari's case', 10 All 272 P. C. and the first Pittapur case, 22 Mad 383 P. C. and so also the third as held in the — 'Second Pittapur case', 41 Mad 778 PC. To this extent the general law of the Mitakshara has been superseded by custom and the impartible estate, though ancestral, is clothed with the incidents of self-acquired and separate property. But the right of survivorship is not inconsistent with the custom of impartibility. This right, therefore, still remains, and this is what was held in — 'Bajinath's case', 43 All 228 PC. To this extent the estate still retains its character of joint family property, and its devolution is governed by the general Mitakshara law applicable to such property. Though the other rights, which a coparcener acquired by birth in joint family property no longer exist, the birth right of the senior member to take by survivorship still remains."

(8) Subsequent to this statement of the law there were certain observations made by the Privy Council in — 'Collector of Gorakhpur v. Ram Sundar Mal', 56 All 468,

"One result is at length clearly shown to be that there is now no reason why the earlier judgments of the Board should not be followed, such as for instance the — 'Chellapalli case, Raja Yarlagadda Mallikarjuna Prasada Nayudu v. Raja Yarlagadda Durga Prasada', 24 Mad 147, which regarded their right to maintenance, however limited, out of an impartible estate as being based upon the joint ownership of the junior member of the family, with the result that these members holding zamindari lands for maintenance could still be considered as joint in estate with the zamindar in possession."

(9) In a later case, namely, — 'Commissioner of Income-tax Punjab v. Krishna Kishore', 23 Lah 1, their Lordships, after an elaborate review of all the important decisions of the Board bearing on the point, observed that the law as declared in — 'Shibprasad Singh v. Prayag-kumari Debee', 59 Cal 1399 PC, had not been unsettled by the decision in — 'Collector of Gorakhpur v. Ram Sundarmal', 56 All 468. In — 'Anant Bikappa v. Shankar Ramchandra', ILR 1944 Bom 116, their Lordships said:

"Now an impartible estate is not held in coparcenary (— 'Rani Satraj Kuari v. Deoraj Kuari', 10 All 272 PC) though it may be joint family property. It may devolve as joint family property or as separate property of the last male owner. In the former case it goes by survivorship to that individual, among those male members who in fact and in law are undivided in respect of the estate, who is singled out by the special custom, e.g., lineal male primogeniture. In the latter case jointness and survivorship are not as such in point; the estate devolves by inheritance from the last male owner in the order prescribed by the special custom or according to the ordinary law of inheritance as modified by the custom."

(10) In view of the above pronouncements of the Privy Council learned counsel for the petitioner could not succeed in convincing us that the petitioner had any right to the impartible estate or the compensation paid on its acquisition. The petitioner undoubtedly is entitled to maintenance both according to the custom and according to the statutory provisions embodied in S. 9 etc., of the Madras Impartible Estates Act. But his right to maintenance is not attributable to any present interest in the estate.

(11) Mr. Rajah Aiyar was unable to cite any authority for the position that the custom of impartibility with all its incidents will cease to apply once the estate is converted into money. On the other hand, when proceedings under the Land Acquisition Act have been taken to acquire a part of an impartible estate the proceeds have been regarded as money belonging to a person not capable of alienating the land acquired (see — 'Special Deputy Collector, Ramnad v. Rajah of Ramnad', 58 Mad 442). It is difficult to follow the argument that the nature of an estate in any immovable property is changed once it is converted into money.

(12) Taking the obvious case of a Hindu widow holding immovable property with the limitations of a widow's estate, it cannot be said that if the Government acquired that property the compensation paid therefor would not be subject to the limitations of a widow's estate and that the widow will have a right of absolute disposal over the compensation. In — 'Ramachandrarao v. Ramachandrarao', 45 Mad 320 PC, their Lordships of the Judicial Committee refer to the land acquired by Government for which compensation had been deposited as a "piece of land represented by a sum of money paid into court". The principle that conversion would not alter the quality or nature of the estate is of universal application. In England when money is paid into court as the produce of real estate converted by compulsory powers it is treated as impressed with the quality of real estate (Vide White and Tudor's leading Cases on Equity, 9th Edn., page 325).

(13) In any event, we are of opinion that the petitioner cannot be deemed to have had any interest in the estate at the time of the notification. The material time for the purpose of determining the rights of parties would be the date of the notification by virtue of which the estate is statutorily transferred to the Government. The simple question is, at that point of time did the petitioner have any subsisting and real interest in the estate? The answer must be none except his right to get maintenance in accordance with the custom embodied in S. 9 of the Madras Impartible Estates Act. Of course, the petitioner will have his right of succession in certain contingencies. But one certainly cannot treat this right as a right to a share in the property during the lifetime of the holder for the time being. If at the time of the notification, the petitioner did not have any right to a share in the corpus of the estate, then he cannot contend that after the notification and after the estate had vested in the Government he will have such a right.

(14) In this view, it is unnecessary to deal with the constitutional issues raised by the petitioner concerning the validity of S. 45 and connected provisions of the law. The application is therefore dismissed.

B/M.K.S.

Application dismissed.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 188 (Vol. 40, C. N. 63)

GOVINDA MENON

AND KRISHNASWAMI NAYUDU JJ.

Kanakammal, Appellant v. Muhammad Kathija Beevi, Respondent.

Letters Patent Appeal No. 107 of 1949, D/- 29-1-1952.

Debt Laws — Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act (4 (IV) of 1938), S. 19 — Question of scaling down debts — Failure to raise in earlier execution application — Effect — Nature of application under S. 19 — (Civil P. C. (1908), Ss. 11, 47).

An application under S. 19 of the Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act is not one which comes under S. 47, Civil P. C. and therefore the principle of res judicata in execution cannot apply, where a judgment-debtor fails to raise the question of scaling down the debts in an earlier application for execution so as to disentitle him from raising the question at the later stage.

Further, the mere fact that the judgment-debtor raised an objection to the executability of the whole decree on the ground that it has to be scaled down is no ground for scaling down the decree and the Court will not be justified in so scaling down without a separate application under S. 19 of the Madras Act. This is also another ground for holding that the judgment-debtor is not barred from filing the application to scale down the decree even though he had not raised the question at an earlier stage of the execution proceedings: ILR 1948 Mad 505, Expl.; (1949) 2 MLJ 493, Disting. (Para 6)

Anno: C. P. C., S. 11 N. 23; S. 47 N. 3.

R. Kesava Iyengar, for Appellant; T. R. Srinivasan and S. Gopalaratnam, for Respondent.

GOVINDA MENON J.: In execution of the compromise decree passed in the appellate Court in O. S. No. 49 of 1928 on 13th November 1931 certain properties were sold on 6th December 1939. The appellant who is the decree-holder filed another application for execution and in that the judgment-debtor raised the objection that the application was barred by res judicata. In — 'C. M. S. A. No. 177 of 1944' Bell J. held that the execution application was not barred by limitation. While this appeal was pending, the present respondent filed an application under S. 19 of the Madras Agriculturists Relief Act for scaling down the decree and both the lower courts held that the decree has to be scaled down. When the matter came up to this court in C. M. S. A. No. 243 of 1946 our learned brother Subba Rao J. held that the objection taken by the decree-holder that the judgment-debtor should have applied for scaling down the decree when the earlier application was pending cannot be maintained and therefore held that the judgment-debtor is entitled to scaling down and the learned Judge granted leave to appeal.

(2) The question raised is one of the res judicata in execution namely whether it was the bounden duty of the judgment-debtor when an execution application was pending to raise the question regarding the scaling down and if he failed to do that, whether it is open to him at a later stage to file an application for scaling down. Subba Rao J. held that the decision in — 'Adaikappa Chettiar v. Chandrasekhara Thevar', ILR 1948 Mad 505, did not go to the extent of holding that an application under S. 19 of the Madras Agriculturists Relief Act is one relating to the execution of the decree in order that all the other provisions of the Code regarding executability of the decree should apply to that application. Subba Rao J. was of opinion that the decision of the Privy Council amounted to this, namely, that so far as appealability is concerned, an order under S. 19 should be deemed to be as if made under execution and no more.

(3) We have perused the judgment of the Privy Council in — 'Adaikappa Chettiar v. Chandrasekhara Thevar', ILR 1948 Mad 505, and it seems to us that their Lordships did not hold that an application under S. 19, Madras Agriculturists Relief Act, is one relating to execution of the decree. What their Lordships held was that the decision of this court in — 'Nagappa v. Annapoorni', ILR 1941 Mad 261, to the effect that no appeal lay from an order passed under S. 19 is incorrect, because in their Lordships' view a decision under S. 19 is one which finally determines the rights of the parties and is a formal expression of adjudication so far as the Court expressing it is concerned and it conclusively determines the rights of the parties with regard to one of the matters in controversy in the suit. Such being the case, an order under S. 19 is one which can come within the definition of the decree in S. 2(2), Civil P. C. Mr. Kesava Ayyangar relied upon the sentence at page 514 in — 'Adaikappa Chettiar v. Chandrasekhara Thevar', ILR 1948 Mad 505, where their Lordships state that one of the orders contemplated in that appeal, namely, the order of 25th July 1938 was one relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree within the meaning of S. 47 of the Code and an appeal lay under S. 96. The order was one passed under S. 20, Madras Agriculturists Relief Act, by which the judgment-debtor requested the court to postpone the execution of the decree in order to enable him to file an application for scaling down the decree. Section 20 lays down that if no relevant application under S. 19 is made within 60 days, then the execution will have to proceed. It cannot be disputed that so far as an order under S. 20 is concerned, it is one relating to execution of the decree, because what is asked for is a postponement of the execution of the decree and it is therefore a matter relating to the execution of the decree. The decision of the Privy Council referred to does not say that because of the above observations regarding the nature of the application under S. 20, the order under S. 19 should be treated as one falling within the definition of execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree under S. 47, C.P.C.

(4) Our attention was invited by Mr. Kesava Aiyangar to another decision in — 'Sha Sivaraj Gopalji v. Ayissa Bi', 1949-2 MLJ 493, where the facts were these: The decree-holder attempted to attach the share of a member of a Mappilla Marumakathayam tarwad and because of the law regarding impartibility then in existence it was not allowed, though by the time the order had been passed, the Madras Mappilla Marumakathayam Act which allowed partibility had been passed by the legislature. The result of this enactment was that the share of any member could be attached and sold in execution of the decree. It was sought to be raised in the appeal before this court but was not permitted and the appeal was dismissed. The decree-holder filed a fresh execution application asking for attachment of the share of the judgment-debtors and the Sub Court ordered the attachment. In appeal again this Court held that the order in the previous execution application was res judicata as the decree-holder could have raised the plea in the earlier application but failed to do so it is therefore barred by the principle of res judicata. The view of the High Court was upheld by the Privy Council. We do not see how the decision of the Judicial Committee can be applied to the facts of the present case. Section 19 does not state the period during which an application for scaling down has to be made. It has been held by this Court that so long as the decree is in existence and could be executed, it is open to the judgment-debtor to apply for scaling down. We do not think that the decision in — ‘Sha Sivaraj Gopalji v. Ayissa Bi’ can be of any assistance to this appeal.

(5) The decision of the present case can be made to rest on much narrower ground, namely, that before Bell J. finally decided C. M. S. A. No. 177 of 1944 there was an application made to the executing Court E. A. No. 229 of 1944, to stay execution proceedings and that was allowed on 21st July 1944. It was in pursuance of that application that the present I. A. No. 430 of 1944 was filed to scale down the decree. Therefore, the genesis of I. A. No. 430 of 1944 was antecedent to the order of the High Court holding that the execution of the decree was not barred by limitation. A Full Bench of this Court in — ‘Desikachariar v. Ramachandra Reddiar’, 1951-1 MLJ 23, has laid down that if in an application under S. 20, the question whether the applicant is an agriculturist or not had been raised and decided that would operate as res judicata in any subsequent application to scale down the decree. Therefore then in E. A. No. 229 of 1944 it was held on 21st July 1944 that the applicant was an agriculturist entitled to the benefits of the Act and therefore entitled to scaling down the decree and that has not been set aside by any proceedings, we cannot say that the applicant did not raise the question of the scaling down before the High Court decided C. M. S. A. No. 177 of 1944. Such being the case, the objection raised namely, that the present application for scaling down is barred on account of the principle of res judicata in execution relying upon the decision in — ‘Adaikappa Chettiar v. Chandrasekhara Thevar’, ILR 1948 Mad 505, is not sustainable.

(6) Another point to be considered is that even if there is an execution petition pending and the judgment-debtor raises the question that the decree has to be scaled down, it is not open to the court to take notice of that objection unless either the decree-holder or the judgment-debtor files an application under S. 19 of the Act, since S. 19 positively lays down that a decree can be scaled down only on an application. The mere fact that the judgment-debtor raised an objection to the executability of the whole decree on the ground that it has to be scaled down is no ground for scaling down the decree and the court will not be justified in so scaling down without a separate application. This is also another ground for holding that the judgment-debtor is not barred from filing the application to scale down the decree even though he had not raised the question at an earlier stage of the execution proceedings. We are therefore definitely of opinion that an application under S. 19 of the Act is not one which comes under S. 47, Civil P. C. and therefore the principle of res judicata in execution cannot apply to the facts of the present case.

(7) This Letters Patent Appeal is, therefore, dismissed with costs.

B/D.R.R.

Appeal dismissed.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 189 (Vol. 40, C. N. 64)
RAJAMANNAR C. J.

Durbha Viswanadha Sastri, power of attorney holder for Ivaluri Nallikarjuna Rao and others, Appellants v. Dronamraju Venkatakrishna Rao and others, Respondents.

Second Appeal No. 45 of 1947, D/- 3-12-1951.

Civil P. C. (1908), O. 21 Rr. 89, 90 — Judgment-debtor obtaining benefit of half rent for certain faslis under Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act, IV of 1938, S. 15, and depositing amount in Court — Amount withdrawn by decree-holder — Decree-holder taking out execution for entire amount and not for balance only in spite of order of Court — Decree-holder knowing what was due — Property sold in execution and purchased by decree-holder himself — Held that decree-holder who knew that what was due under the decree was an amount far less than the amount for which he brought the properties of the judgment debtor to sale, could not retain the properties purchased at such a sale by himself and that therefore the sale had to be set aside: AIR 1917 Mad 739(2), 14 Cal 18 Distinguished. (Paras 1, 3)

Anno: Civil P. C., O. 21 R. 89 N. 17; R. 90 N. 31.

V. Parthasarthy, for Appellants; U. Sethumadhava Rao, K. Krishnamurthy and M. Dwarkanath, for Respondents.

JUDGMENT: Both the Courts have held that the sale held in execution of the decree in S. S. No. 312 of 1937 in E. P. No. 26 of 1938 was not valid. The District Munsif who tried the suit set aside the sale on four grounds, but in appeal the learned Subordinate Judge held that the decree had to be set aside on two grounds. These two grounds really amount to this, namely, that the decree was executed for an excess amount and to the knowledge of the decree-holder who himself was the purchaser. By virtue of Sec. 15 of Madras Act 4 of 1938 the judgment-debtor obtained benefit of half the rent for faslis 1344, 1345, and 1346. The amount deposited by the judgment-debtor was even withdrawn by the decree-holder. Nevertheless, execution was levied for the entire amount and not for the balance only, and this, in spite of an order of court. Obviously, therefore, the decree-holder who knew that what was due under the decree was an amount far less than the amount for which he brought the properties of the judgment-debtor to sale cannot retain the properties purchased at such a sale by himself, whatever might be the case of an innocent third party purchaser. It will really amount to allowing a person who is in the wrong to take advantage of that wrong.

(2) Observations in a decision of a Division Bench in — ‘Kasthuri Aiyangar v. Arunachalam Chettiar’, 34 IC 350 at 352 were relied upon by learned Counsel for the appellants. In that case the learned Judges held that the levy of execution for the full amount was justified, but went on to say by way of obiter that even if a certain payment had been taken into account, there would still be money due and it could not be said that the court had no jurisdiction to proceed with the execution of the decree. There was no necessity in that case to finally determine the question whether, in cir-circumstances like those in the present case, namely, of a decree-holder himself purchasing the property in execution levied for a much larger amount than what was actually due and to his knowledge, the sale should be allowed to stand. In — Rewa Mahton v. Ramkishan Singh, ILR 14 Cal 18 the purchaser was a third party who could not be impressed with the knowledge of another decree against the decree-holder in the case in favour of the judgment-debtor.

(3) I agree with the learned Subordinate Judge in holding that the sale has to be set aside. The second appeal is, therefore, dismissed with costs. Leave refused.

B/R.G.D.

Appeal dismissed.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 190 (Vol. 40, C. N. 65)

SUEBA RAO AND PANCHAPAKESA Ayyar JJ.

V. Srinivasa Ayyangar, Petitioner v. The State of Madras and another, Respondents.

Civil Misc. Petn. No. 8302 of 1950, D/- 4-4-1952.

(a) Tenancy Laws — Madras Estates Land Act (1 of 1908), S. 3(2)(d) — Confirmation by British Government of part of inam village.

An inam village would come under the definition of an "estate" if it was granted, confirmed or recognised by the British Government. A confirmation or recognition by the British Government of the inam village will only confer a right to the inam village, on the recipient. It follows that the confirmation or recognition by the British Government must necessarily be of the entire village. Where though the entire village was granted, a part of the village was resumed and included in the village and what was confirmed by the British Government was only that part of the village which continued to be an inam, it would not be an estate within the meaning of S. 3(2)(d). Hence the notification issued by the Government fixing the rate of rent in respect of 15/16th part of a village and other proceedings taken under Act 30 of 1947 in respect of that part are invalid: Case law discussed. (Paras 3, 5, 6)

(b) Tenancy Laws — Madras Estates (Abolition and Conversion into Ryotwari) Act (26 of 1948), S. 20 — Notification notifying minor inam as under tenure.

Though a minor inam cannot be treated as a separate estate, it vests in the Government along with the parent estate subject to the other provisions of the Act. S. 20 saves such minor inams. S. 20 is not confined only to leases. The post-settlement minor inams or the minor inams included in the assets of the zamindari at the time of the permanent settlement would be protected under S. 20 and the rights, thereunder, can be enforced against the Government. The notification of Government under Madras Act 26 of 1948 notifying the one-sixteenth part of the village included in the assets of the zamindari as an under-tenure estate is clearly wrong. It follows that the notification under S. 3(2) of the Madras Estates Land Act is also bad: Case law discussed. (Paras 8, 9)

(c) Tenancy Laws — Madras Estates Land Act (1 of 1908), S. 3(2)(d) — Quaere whether,

if a grant was of an entire village and though the entire village was confirmed either in one proceeding or in different proceedings and separate title deeds were issued, the village covered by the separate deeds ceases to be an estate. (Para 11)

(d) Tenancy Laws — Madras Estates Land (Reduction of Rent) Act (30 of 1947) — (Quaere) Whether, where Government did not purport to issue the notification under the Act fixing rates of rent on the basis of entire Zamindari, Government can fix rents in respect of the minor inam treating it as part of the Zamindari along with the other parts of the Zamindari. (Para 12)

R. Kesava Aiyangar and K. Parasaran, for Petitioner; The Government Pleader, for Respondents.

ORDER: This is an application for issuing a writ of certiorari, and for quashing the proceedings taken by the respondents under the Madras Acts 30 of 1947 and 26 of 1948 with regard to the petitioner's village, Karuppur.

(2) The said village is situated in Rajasingamangalam Zamin taluk, Ramnad zamindari. It is an ancient pre-settlement Dharasanam granted in A. D. 1757 by the then ruler of the country, Muthuvijaya Raghunatha Sethupathi, to the original grantees. 1/16th part of the village was resumed by the Raja before the permanent settlement and added to the zamindari. At the time of the permanent settlement this 1/16th part was included in the assets of the zamindari. At the time of the Inam Commission enquiry, the Inam Commissioner confirmed only 15/16th portion of the village on 31st December 1863 subject to a payment of jodi of Rs. 142-14-4 and a quit rent of Rs. 24, and title deed No. 404 was issued for the said portion. The State of Madras issued a notification G. O. Ms. 2169 Revenue, dated 22nd August 1949 under Madras Act 26 of 1948 notifying part of the village included in the assets of the zamindari as an under-tenure estate. On 20th June 1950, they had also issued a notification in Fort St. George Gazette fixing rates of rent under Madras Act 30 of 1947 in regard to the two parts of the village.

The petitioner says that the notifications are ultra vires and void. In regard to the 15/16th portion of the village confirmed by the Government, it was argued that that part would not be an estate, as the Government did not confirm the entire village originally granted. Alternatively it was argued that though the original grant was of the entire village, the grantor himself resumed 1/16th part of the village, and therefore the effective grant was only of a part of the village.

(3) The governing provision is S. 3(2)(d) of the Madras Estates Land Act. It reads:

" "Estate" means—

(d) any inam village of which the grant has been made, confirmed, or recognised by the British Government, notwithstanding that subsequent to the grant, the village has been partitioned among the grantees or the successors in title of the grantee or grantees."

An inam village would come under the definition of an "estate" if it was granted, confirmed or recognised by the British Government. The previous rulers made grants of villages and parts of villages. After the British Government became the ruling power, they recognised or confirmed some of those inams. The definition of "estate" apparently was intended to take in those villages, whether granted by the British Government, or though granted by some other ruling power were confirmed or recognised by the British Government. If so construed, the confirmation by the British Government must be in respect of the whole village. Explanation (2) provides for an exception where a portion of the inam village is resumed by the Government. It says:

"Where a portion of an inam village is resumed by the Government, such portion shall cease to be part of the estate, but the rest of the village shall be deemed to be an inam village for the purposes of this sub-clause. If the portion so resumed or any part thereof is subsequently re-granted by the Government as an inam, such portion or part shall, from the date of such re-grant, be regarded as forming part of the inam village for the purposes of this sub-clause."

This Explanation also shows that the Legislature was dealing with the grant or confirmation of whole inam villages. Otherwise there was no need to provide for the exception.

(4) Under sub-clause (d) minor inams or grants of parts of a village are excluded from the definition of an "estate". The whole inam villages granted by the British Government or subsequently confirmed by them are estates. Though a whole inam village was granted by some ruling power, after the British Government became the ruling power, that grant would not bind the British Government unless confirmed or recognised by them. The grantees would not have any legal title, till it was conferred on them by the British Government. The validity of the grant would necessarily depend upon the confirmation. If so, if the sub-clause is read as the Government Pleader asks us to read, it will mean that if the entire village was granted originally by a grantor other than the British Government, confirmation by the British Government of any part thereof would amount to validating grants of whole village, though the entire grant was not recognised by the Government; if the entire village is not confirmed or recognised by the British Government, there cannot legally be an entire inam village, the existence of which is a necessary condition for bringing the grant within the definition.

(5) The law relating to the effect of the cession of a territory to a new ruling power on the pre-existing grants is found in — 'Secretary of State for India v. Bai Rajbai', 39 Bom 625. At page 646, their Lordships of the Judicial Committee observed:

"The relation in which they stood to their native sovereigns before this cession, and the legal rights they enjoyed under them, are, save in one respect, entirely irrelevant matters. They could not carry in under the new regime the legal rights, if any, which they might have enjoyed under the old. The only legal enforceable rights they could have as against their new sovereign were those, and only those, which that new sovereign by agreement expressed or implied or by legislation, chose to confer upon them."

Similar observations were made by the Judicial Committee in — 'Vajesingji v. Secretary of State for India', 48 Bom 613. Their Lordships observed:

"After a sovereign state has acquired territory, either by conquest, or by cession under treaty, or by the occupation of such as has theretofore been unoccupied by a recognised ruler, or otherwise, an inhabitant of the territory can enforce in the municipal courts only such proprietary rights as the Sovereign has conferred or recognised."

It is therefore clear from the aforesaid two decisions that a confirmation or recognition by the British Government of the inam village will only confer a right to the inam village on the recipient. It follows that the confirmation or recognition by the British Government must necessarily be of the entire village.

(6) The scope of the sub-clause was laid down by Kuppuswami Aiyar J. in — 'Viswanadham Bros. v. Subbaiya', 1945-1-M.L.J. 443. There an entire village was granted to a person by way of bhattavritti shrotriam inam. After the original grant, there was a grant by the grantee of some portion of it which was treated as a minor inam. At the time of the inam settlement the minor inam granted by the aghaharamdar was confirmed as inam and a title deed was issued. The question in that case was whether a lessee of a piece of land which formed part of the minor inam could claim that it was land in an estate within the meaning of S. 3 (2) (d) of the Madras Estates Land Act. The learned Judge held that merely because the land in question formed part of the original grant of an entire village it could not be said that at the time when it was recognised, it was part of the whole inam which was recognised or confirmed by the British Government, and that therefore the land in question could not be deemed to be part of an estate.

At page 444, the learned Judge made the following relevant remarks:

"The only provision of law under which the lessee could claim that this is part of an estate is S. 3 (2) (d) of the Estates Land Act. Under that section 'Estate' means any inam village of which the grant has been made, confirmed or recognised by the British Government, notwithstanding that subsequent to the grant, the village has been partitioned among the grantees or the successors-in-title of the grantee or grantees. The answer to the question as to whether the confirmation or recognition by the British Government was in respect of the entire inam village or of only a portion is the basis for the decision as to whether the land was an estate or not..... Admittedly the land in dispute forms part of the land to which title deed No. 1004 relates and that title deed does not relate to the entire village but only to a portion of it. So merely because it formed part of the original grant of an entire village or aghaharam it cannot be said that at the time when it was recognised this was part of the inam in favour of the aghaharam which was recognised or confirmed by the British Government."

We respectfully agree with these observations. Shahabuddin J. followed the principles laid down in the aforesaid judgment in the case in — 'Mangamma v. Appadu', 1948-1-M.L.J. 247: 64 L W 1. In that case, two parcels of land comprised in an inam village were treated even before the inam settlement as separate grants, and at the time of the settlement the lands were confirmed under two title deeds. The learned Judge held that the lands comprised under one of the title deeds did not form part of an estate, and that the tenant thereof could not claim occupancy rights. At page 250 the learned Judge pointed out the principle underlying the sub-clause. He said:

"According to the definition of an estate mentioned above what has to be seen is whether the confirmation or recognition by the British Government was in respect of the entire inam village or of only a portion."

But the learned Government Pleader relied upon a judgment of the Judicial Committee in — 'Krishnaswami Aiyangar v. Perumal Goundan', in support of his contention that the confirmation or recognition of the entire village by the British Government was not necessary to bring the village within the definition of estate, if at the time of the grant, though not made by the British Government, the entire village was granted.

The facts in that case were: An entire village was granted in pre-British times. In 1795, a small part of the village was resumed by the Government and granted in ryotwari tenure, but the rest of the village, by far the larger part continued to be treated as an inam village. The Government resumed the rest of the village also in 1894. In 1895, the Government granted on inam tenure the whole village, i.e., the whole village which for the past 100 years had been recognised an inam village. Their Lordships held that the grant was of the whole inam village. We are not able to appreciate the relevancy of the citation. In that case though the village at some remote time formed part of a larger village for over 100 years it was treated as a separate village. At the time of the grant by the Government it was treated as a whole village, and was granted as such. As the grant was of the whole inam village by the British Government it certainly came within the definition of estate under S. 3 (2) (d) of the Act. We therefore hold that as the Government did not confirm the entire village but only 15/16th part of the village, it would not be an estate within the meaning of S. 3 (2) (d) of the Madras Estates Land Act. It follows that the notification issued by the Government fixing the rate of rent in respect of the 15/16th part of the village and other proceedings taken under Act 30 of 1947 in respect of that part are invalid.

The notification and the said proceedings are hereby quashed. But we should not be understood to have expressed an opinion on the question whether if a grant was of an entire village and though the entire village was confirmed either in one proceeding or in different proceedings and separate title deeds were issued that the village covered by the separate deeds ceases to be an estate, for in this case though the entire village was granted, a part of the village was resumed and included in the village, and what was confirmed was only that part of the village which continued to be an inam.

(7) The next question is whether the notification of the Government of Madras under Madras Act 26 of 1948 notifying the one-sixteenth part of the village as an undertenure estate and also the notification dated 20-6-1950, fixing the rates of rent under Madras Act 30 of 1947, are valid. Learned counsel for the petitioner contended that both the notifications are invalid as undertenure minor inams are not governed by either of the two Acts. We shall deal with the argument in regard to the application of the aforesaid two Acts to the inam in question separately. The first question therefore is whether an undertenure minor inam is abolished under Act 26 of 1948. Learned Govt. Pleader argued that the undertenure minor inams are parts of the zamindari estate and therefore along with the zamindari estate they are also abolished under the Act. Learned counsel for the petitioner on the other hand pressed on us to hold that the Legislature did not intend to abolish minor inams, whether they are pre-settlement inams excluded from the assets of the zamindari or included in the assets of the zamindari or whether they are post settlement inams. He emphasised upon the fact that there cannot be any logical distinction on principle between the different classes of minor inams which could have compelled the legislature to make a distinction in the application of the Act. He also strongly relied upon the circumstance that a minor inamdar is a owner of the minor inam and as the Act does not expressly abolish the minor inams we should hold that the minor inams were not touched by the Act.

To appreciate the contentions of the learned counsel it is necessary to notice some of the relevant provisions of Madras Act 26 of 1948, which we extract below:

"S. 1(3): It applies to all estates as defined in S. 3, clause 2 of the Madras Estates Land Act, 1908, except inam villages which became estates by virtue of the Madras Estates Land (Third Amendment) Act, 1936.

S. 2(3): "Estate" means a zamindari or an undertenure or an inam estate;

S. 2(7): "Inam estate" means an estate within the meaning of S. 3, clause (2) (d), of the Estates Land Act, but does not include an inam village which became an estate by virtue of the Madras Estates Land (Third Amendment) Act, 1936;

S. 2(15): "Under-tenure estate" means an estate within the meaning of S. 3, clause 2 (e) of the Estates Land Act.

S. 2(16): "Zamindari estate" means:

(i) an estate within the meaning of Sec. 3 clause 2 (a) of the Estates Land Act, after excluding therefrom every portion which is itself an estate under S. 3, clause (2) (b) or (2) (e) of that Act; or

(ii) an estate within the meaning of S. 3, clause (2) (b) or (2) (c) of the Estates Land Act, after excluding therefrom every portion which is itself an estate under S. 3, clause (2) (e) of that Act.

S. 3: With effect on and from the notified date and save as otherwise expressly provided in this Act:

(a) the Madras Permanent Settlement Regulation, 1802, the Estates Land Act, and all other enactments applicable to the estate as such except the Madras Estates Land (Reduction of Rent) Act, 1947 shall be deemed to have been repealed in their application to the estate;

(b) the entire estate (including all communal lands and porombokes; other non-ryoti lands; waste lands; pasture lands; lanka lands; forests; mines; and minerals; quarries; rivers, and streams; tanks and irrigation works; fisheries; and ferries), shall stand transferred to the Government and vest in them, free of all encumbrances; and the Madras Revenue Recovery Act, 1864, the Madras Irrigation Cess Act, 1865, and all other enactments applicable to ryotwari areas shall apply to the estate;

(c) all rights and interests created in or over the estate before the notified date by the principal or any other landholder, shall as against the Government cease and determine;

(f) the relationship of landholder and ryot shall, as between them, be extinguished.

S. 20(1): In cases not governed by Ss. 18 and 19, where, before the notified date, a landholder has created any right in any land (whether by way of lease or otherwise) including rights in any forest, mines or minerals, quarries, fisheries or ferries, the transaction shall be deemed to be valid; and all rights and obligations arising thereunder, on or after the notified date, shall be enforceable by or against the Government.

Provided that the transaction was not void or illegal under any law in force at the time."

It is clear from the aforesaid provisions that all estates defined under Madras Estates Land Act, 1908 except inam villages which became estates by virtue of Madras Estates Land (Third Amendment) Act, 1936, vest in the Government. The estates under that definition comprise of five classes: (a) a permanently settled estate or temporarily settled zamindari; (b) any portion of such permanently settled estate or temporarily settled zamindari which is separately registered in the office of the collector; (c) any unsettled palayam or Jagir; (d) any village of which the land revenue alone has been granted in inam to a person not owning the kudiwaram thereof, provided that the grant has been made, confirmed or recognised by the British Government, or any separated part of such village; (e) any portion consisting of one or more villages of any of the estates specified above in clauses (a), (b) and (c) which is held on a permanent undertenure.

A minor inam therefore whether it is a post-settlement or pre-settlement grant is not separately designated as an estate under the said Act. Pre-settlement minor inams obviously do not come under any of the 5 aforesaid categories of estates. But it is said that a post-settlement minor inam or though a pre-settlement minor inam but included in the assets of the zamindari at the time of the permanent settlement, will come under the first category, namely, any permanently settled estate, or a temporarily settled zamindari. Strong reliance was placed on the definition of zamindari estate under S. 2 (16) of Act 26 of 1948. Zamindari estate is defined under that sub-section as:

"an estate within the meaning of S. 3, clause (2) (a) of the Estates Land Act, after excluding therefrom every portion which is itself an estate under S. 3, clause (2) (b) or (2) (e) of the Act."

The definition indicates that the estates under S. 3 (2) (b) or (2) (e) of the Act would be part of the zamindari estate but for the exclusion. As the section does not exclude the minor inams held under the zamindar, the argument was advanced that the minor inams are parts of the zamindari.

This contention based upon the definition was sought to be supported by the principles evolved by legal decisions in regard to minor inams prior to the enactment of Act 26 of 1948. We would at this stage proceed to consider the citations made by the learned counsel which would afford a historic basis for the definition introduced in the new Act. — 'Virabhadrayya v. Sonti Venkanna', 24 M L J 659 affords an example for the converse proposition. Therein it was held that an inam though situate within the limits of a zamindari, if it had been excluded from the zamindari assets at the time of the permanent settlement as lekhiraj is no longer part of the zamindari and consequently not an estate within the meaning of S. 3 of the Estates Land Act. When it was contended that the pre-settlement aghaharam was a village in a portion of the Nuzvid zamindari separately registered in the office of the Collector, the learned Judges pointed out that as it was excluded from the assets of the zamindari any ownership on the part of the Nuzvid zamindar over the village ceased at the settlement, and his interest in it was confined only to the right to receive 1000 pagodas a year as that was alone included in the assets.

In — 'Brundavanachandra Horischandra Raja v. Ramayya', 26 M L J 600, it was held that portions of estates which are granted away but which do not come under S. 3 (2) (e) of the Act continue to be part of the estates notwithstanding such grants. In — 'Gadhadhara Das Bavaji v. Suryanarayana Patnaik', 44 Mad 677 the question was whether a holder of a post-settlement inam grant of a portion of a village with both the warams on a permanent Kattubadi was a landholder within the meaning of S. 3 (2) (e) of the Madras Estates Land Act and the tenants had permanent occupancy rights therein. Ayling and Coutts-Trotter JJ. held that such a minor inamdar was a landholder within the meaning of S. 3, cl. (5) whereas Kumaraswami Sastri J. recorded a dissenting note. In dealing with the question at page 685 Ayling J. observed:

"The suit lands admittedly, but for the grant in inam, would fall within clause (a) of S. 3 (2) of the Act. As regards the definition of 'landholder' it may be conceded at once that so long as the zamindar reserves to himself a quit rent the inamdar cannot be regarded as the owner of the lands in the ordinary legal meaning of the term. But the definition of "landholder" includes "every person entitled to collect the rents of the whole or any portion of the estate by virtue of any transfer from the owner", and I think the grant in inam must be regarded as such a transfer."

A detailed and exhaustive treatment of the scope of S. 3 (5) of the Madras Estates Land Act in its application to a minor inamdar is found in the Full Bench judgment in — 'Brahmayya v. Achiraju', 45 Mad 716. The court by a majority, the Chief Justice and Devadoss J. dissenting, held that when a zamindar makes a post-settlement inam grant of portion of a village with both warams and permanent kattubadi, the grantee is a landholder within the meaning of S. 3 (5) of the Madras Estates Land Act. At page 732 Oldfield J. observed:

"It is, however, unnecessary to pursue these considerations; because I have come to the conclusion that an inamdar with both warams of a part of a village is in any case a landholder under S. 3 (5), because he is a person entitled at least to 'collect the rent by virtue of a transfer from the owner or his predecessor in title.'"

Phillips J. poses the question at page 739 as follows:

"The question really, in my opinion, is whether the word 'owning' under clause 5, must necessarily mean owner of every conceivable right in the estate, or whether the present inamdar to whom a grant of the land was made subject to a payment of quit rent to the zamindar can be deemed to be owner."

At page 740 the basis for the learned Judge's conclusion is disclosed. He says:

"In construing the word 'owning', therefore, I do not think that we can say that it means the ultimate owner who has reserved even the smallest right for himself. What, I take it, must be reserved is not a mere payment but some actual interest in the land itself. In the present case, quit rent cannot be recovered by the zamindar under the summary provisions of Act 1 of 1908, and although it may be called a charge upon the land, it does not, in my opinion, amount to an interest in the land."

The learned Judge therefore held that a minor inamdar was owner of part of an estate within the meaning of S. 3 (5). Venkatasubba Rao J. stated that the minor inamdar would come under the two parts of the definition in S. 3(5). At page 761 the learned Judge observed as follows:

"It is said that the land of which the inam consists is not a part of the estate under S. 3 (5). The terms of the Reference assume that the land in question is within a zamindari. If physically the land is within a zamindari, I fail to see how the land is not part of an estate. Would it be argued that a purchaser of a part of the estate does not come within the definition on the ground that though the part he purchased is geographically within the limits of the estate it is still not a part thereof? I am unable to accept this contention."

The Full Bench therefore held that a minor inamdar is a landholder under S. 3 (5) of the Madras Estates Land Act. Under S. 3 (5) "landholder" means:

"a person owning an estate or part thereof and includes every person entitled to collect the rents of the whole or any portion of the estate by virtue of any transfer from the owner or his predecessor in title or of any order of a competent court or of any provision of law."

To come under the first part of the definition the minor inamdar must own an estate or part of an estate. The reasoning of some of the learned Judges in the Full Bench clearly shows that they treated him as owner of part of an estate. Relying upon this decision, it was argued that a minor inamdar is a owner of the minor inam and therefore it ceased to be part of the zamindari. But the Full Bench does not say that if it ceased to be part of an estate he could not be a owner of part of an estate. Under S. 3 (2), a part of an estate unless separately registered is not an estate within the definition; but though it is not an estate within the definition, it is still a part of an estate and as the minor inamdar owns that part, he is a landholder within the meaning of S. 3 (5). The Full Bench judgment therefore though it is an authority for the position that a minor inamdar is a owner, it also supports the contention that the minor inam is still part of the zamindari.

The conflict between the various views of the learned Judges of this court in regard to the rights of the minor inamdars and the tenants holding under them has finally been settled by the Judicial Committee in — Narayanaraju v. Suryanarayudu, ILR 1940 Mad 1. There a zamindar made a post-settlement grant of a portion of a moknasa village as manyam. Their Lordships held that the grantee was a landholder within the meaning of S. 3 (5) of the Madras Estates Land Act. They noticed the conflicting views expressed by different Judges and also the difficulty in construing the section but in the end they accepted the majority view expressed in — Brahmayya v. Achiraju, 45 Mad 716.

(8) At page 15 they made the following observations:

"But they cannot agree that 'part of the estate' or 'portion of the estate' does not refer to the land itself by the word 'estate', nor do they feel any confidence in the doctrine that so long as the zamindar reserves any interest however insignificant a permanent grantee from him cannot be the owner. It may be that the words "or part thereof" were given a place in the definition of landholder without full appreciation of their effect in connection with the definition of 'estate'; but there is no presumption to that effect; the words cannot be ignored; and good reason must be found in the Act itself for restricting their prima facie meaning."

This judgment also shows that a minor inam is part of an estate and the holder thereof is a owner of that part.

In a case arising under the Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act, — Navaneethakrishna v. Ramanujulu Chetti, 1941-2 Mad L J 159 Wadsworth J. and Patanjali Sastri J., as he then was, held that the jodi payable by an agra-haramdar to the Kalahasti zamindar was rent within the meaning of S. 15 (4) of the Act. In the course of the judgment when it was contended that a zamindar cannot be a landholder as the inamdar was the landholder, the learned Judges stated thus:

"The position therefore is that the agra-haram here in question which is in Kalahasti zamindari continued as before the Permanent Settlement to be held on an undertenure under the zamindar whose right has now become vested in the petitioner. In such circumstances, we can see no reason why the petitioner should not still be regarded as the owner, and therefore, the 'landholder' of the village. The fact that by virtue of the amending Act 18 of 1936 the respondent has also to be regarded as a 'landholder' does not affect the position of the petitioner as a landholder in respect of that village. The definition of a landholder clearly contemplates a plurality of landholders by making express provision for settlement of disputes that may arise in such cases. The relation between the petitioner and the respondent is thus one of owner and an undertenure holder, just as it would be if the zamindar had made a post-settlement grant of the village as an agra-haram."

This judgment supports the view that for certain purposes the inamdar may be a owner, but the zamindar does not cease to be the owner. A brief statement of the pre-existing state of law prior to the enactment of Act 26 of 1948 as disclosed in the aforesaid decisions may be stated thus: The Madras Estates Land Act recognises five categories of estates. Neither a pre-settlement minor inam nor a post-settlement minor inam is an estate under any one of these categories. A pre-settlement minor inam cannot even be part of an estate, whereas a post-settlement minor inam or though a pre-settlement inam but included in the assets at the time of the Permanent Settlement, could be a part of an estate. It may be a part of a permanently settled estate or a temporarily settled zamindari or any part of any portion of permanently settled estate or temporarily settled zamindari which is separately registered in the office of the Collector. Though the said inam cannot be an estate within the meaning of S. 3 (2), Madras Estates Land Act, the inamdar is a landholder within the meaning of S. 3 (5) of the Act. It is because he is either a person owning a part of the estate or a person entitled to collect the rents for the whole or any portion of the estate by virtue of the transfer from the owner.

For the purpose of the definition of landholder under S. 3 (5) he is the owner of the part of the estate though the proprietor of the estate did not completely part with his entire rights in the estate. The reversion still vests in him. He will be entitled to recover jodi from the inamdar. The proprietor therefore does not cease to be the owner. If that is the legal position, it follows that minor inam is part of the zamindari. The definition of "zamindari estate" in Act 26 of 1948 accepted and adopted the view by judicial decisions. The Act purports to abolish the estates defined under the Madras Estates Land Act except inam villages which became estates by virtue of Madras Estates Land (Third Amendment) Act, 1936. The definition of "zamindari estate" also shows that it takes in even the minor inams which did not come under any one or other of the other categories of the estates. It follows that though a minor inam cannot be treated as a separate estate, it vests in the Government along with the parent estate subject to the other provisions of the Act.

(9) The argument advanced by learned counsel for the petitioner on the basis that no logical principle can be discovered in the Legislature making a distinction between pre-settlement minor inams and post-settlement minor inams does not appeal to us. It may not be possible to predicate the legislative policy underlying the enactment. If the minor inams can be abolished only as part of a zamindari, it will lead to another anomaly, namely, that the inamdar of a whole inam village which is an undertenure estate within the meaning of the Act will get a higher rate of compensation than a minor inamdar whose land will be taken as part of the zamindari for the sliding scale provided in the Act for calculating compensation may affect him adversely. But the legislature in our view steered clear of these difficulties by enacting S. 20 in the Act. In our view S. 20 of Madras Act 26 of 1948 saves such minor inams. S. 20 says:

"In cases not governed by Ss. 18 and 19, where before the notified date a landholder has created any right in any land (whether by way of lease or otherwise) including rights in any forest, mines or minerals, quarries, fisheries or ferries, the transaction shall be deemed to be valid; and all rights and obligations arising thereunder, on or after the notified date, shall be enforceable by or against the Government."

It was argued by the learned Government Pleader that S. 20 does not apply to minor inams for according to him the said section applies only to leases and that under S. 3(c) of the Act the estate would vest in the Government free from the interests created by the landholder. Under S. 3 (c), "all rights and interests created in or over the estate before the notified date by the principal or any other landholder, shall as against the Government cease and determine".

But the said section itself starts by saying "with effect on and from the notified date and save as otherwise expressly provided in this Act", and S. 20 is the saving clause. We cannot also accept the argument that S. 20 should be confined only to leases. S. 20 expressly saves all interests created by the landholder in any land whether by way of lease or otherwise before the notified date. If S. 20 takes in a permanent lease on a fixed rent, we do not see why minor inams subject to jodi which are similar to permanent leases on fixed rent should be treated differently.

The argument that S. 20 should be confined to leases only is obviously untenable as the section itself says that the creation of interests by the landholder may be "by way of lease or otherwise". The section also confers upon the Government the power to terminate the rights so conferred in public interests after paying full compensation. But it is not suggested that the Govt. invoked that power in public interests. We therefore hold that the post-settlement minor inams or the minor inams included in the assets of the zamindari at the time of the permanent settlement would be protected under S. 20 of the Act and the rights thereunder, can be enforced against the Government. The notification of Government under Madras Act 26 of 1948 notifying the 1/16th part of the village included in the assets of the zamindari as an undertenure estate is clearly wrong.

Even so it was argued by learned Government Pleader that the notification under Act 30 of 1947 fixing the rates of rent would be valid, as in the view expressed the 1/16th part of the village is part of the zamindari and therefore is part of an estate under S. 3 (2) (a) of the Madras Estates Land Act. As the Government did not purport to issue the notification on the basis of the entire zamindari it is not necessary to express our opinion on the question whether the Government can fix rents in respect of the minor inam treating it as part of the zamindari along with the other parts of the zamindari. That question will have to be decided in appropriate proceedings when it is specifically raised. It follows that the notification under S. 3 (2) is also bad. In the result the two notifications are quashed. The petitioner will have his costs.

(10) (This petition having been posted for being spoken to this day the Court made the following order) ORDER (Delivered by Subba Rao J.) This appeal is posted for being spoken to as some observations made by us appeared to be wider than we intended. We thought it would be in the interests of all the parties concerned to clarify that part of the judgment at this stage than to leave it for future elucidation and argument. The learned counsel appearing for the parties also agree in regard to the advisability of the course adopted by us.

(11) In the course of the judgment we said though the grant was of an entire village, if a part of the same was confirmed it would not be an estate within the meaning of the Act. We should not be understood to have expressed our opinion on the question whether if a grant was of an entire village and though the entire village was confirmed either in one proceeding or in different proceedings and separate title deeds were issued that the village covered by the separate deeds ceases to be an estate; for, in the case we decided though the entire village was granted, a part of the village was resumed and included in the assets of the zamindari; and what was confirmed was only that part of the village which continued to be an inam.

(12) We held that the estate in question is not an undertenure and therefore the provisions of Act 30 of 1947 do not apply. But it was contended by the Government Pleader that though it is not an undertenure it is part of the zamindari and therefore the Act would apply. As the Government did not purport to issue the notification on the basis of the entire zamindari, it is not necessary to express our opinion on the question whether the Government can fix rents in respect of the minor inam treating it as part of the zamindari along with the other parts of the zamindari. That question will have to be decided in appropriate proceedings when it is specifically raised.

B/D.H.

Order accordingly.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 196 (Vol. 40, C. N. 66)

SOMASUNDARAM J.

The Public Prosecutor, Appellant v. Ustepalle Swami Chetty and others, Respondents.

Criminal Appeals Nos. 910 to 913 of 1951, D/-10-4-1952.

Companies Act (1913), S. 248 (2) — Regulations under — Regulation 14 (a) and (b) — Offence under Act — Complaint — Who can make.

With regard to the offences under the Companies Act there is no provision that any offence should not be taken cognizance of unless the complaint is filed by any of the persons mentioned in the Act. In the absence of such a provision the normal rule namely that any person may set the criminal law in motion will apply. Clauses (a) and (b) of Reg. 14 do not take away the right of any citizen to file a complaint under the Companies Act. Hence, a complaint either by any citizen or a member of the company or by the Assistant Registrar will be a valid complaint. (Para 4)

Anno: Companies Act, S. 248 N. 1.

The Asst. Public Prosecutor, for Appellant; P. C. Parthasarathi Aiyangar, for Respondents.

JUDGMENT: This is an appeal by the State against the acquittal of the respondents herein on the ground that no proper sanction has been accorded for the prosecution of the accused for offences under Ss. 76 and 131, Companies Act.

(2) A complaint was laid against the respondents by the Assistant Registrar at the instance of the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies for the said offences. Under S. 248 (2), Companies Act

"The Central Government may appoint such registrars and assistant registrars as it thinks necessary for the registration of companies under this Act, and may make regulations with respect to their duties."

In pursuance of this power, the Central Government has made certain regulations and we are concerned here only with Regulation 14(a) and (b). Regulation 14(a) says:

"The Registrar may in his discretion institute such enquiries or make such investigation in respect of any matter as may in his opinion be necessary for the proper performance of his duties and the due administration of the Act and may institute or cause to be instituted prosecutions under the Act for defaults on the part of companies or persons in furnishing such returns, documents or notices as the law requires them to furnish or for any other non-compliance of the provisions of the Act for which penalties are provided therein."

Clause (b) says:

"Whenever it is found necessary to enforce the penal provisions of the Act against any company or person, the Registrar or Assistant Registrar, as the case may be, shall request the State Counsel in case the registered office of the company concerned is situated in the city of Madras, and in other cases, the District Magistrate of the district in which such registered office is situated, to take the necessary steps."

(3) In this case there is no doubt that the Assistant Registrar has written to the District Magistrate setting out the facts of the case and asking him to take necessary action but the District Magistrate seems to have given the paper back to the Assistant Registrar who merely filed it in court. It is now contended that according to the Regulation 14(b), the complaint must be laid either by the District Registrar or District Magistrate, or at the instance of the District Magistrate. The lower court has taken the view that such a complaint is necessary and therefore acquitted the accused as there was no such complaint of the District Magistrate or at his instance.

(4) With regard to the offence under the Companies Act there is no provision that any offence should not be taken cognizance of unless the complaint is filed by any of the persons mentioned in the Act. In the absence of such a provision the normal rule namely that any person may set the criminal law in motion will apply. But in cases under the Companies Act, it has been considered desirable that either the Registrar or Joint Registrar or officer concerned in dealing with the Act should prefer the complaint. The Regulations framed assigned the duty of making investigations into these matters to the above officers and directing them to file the complaint in such matters. But these Regulations do not take away the right of any citizen to file a complaint under the Companies Act. In the absence, therefore, of any special provision requiring that the complaint should be filed by a particular person, a complaint either by any citizen or a member of the company or by the Assistant Registrar will be a valid complaint. The complaint, therefore, filed in this case is a valid one and the acquittal on that ground is wrong and is therefore set aside. The case is remanded to the lower court for disposal according to law.

(5) The respondents have filed a petition before the Sub-Divisional Magistrate in which they have set out in detail the reasons for not calling the meeting in time. The lower court will give due weight to what is stated in the petition and dispose of the case according to law.

B/V.R.B.

Case remanded.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 197 (Vol. 40, C. N. 67)

P. V. RAJAMANNAR C. J.
AND VENKATARAMA AIYAR J.

The Associated Industrial Engineers by their Managing Partner, P. V. Padmanabha Naidu, Appellant v. P. A. Jabbar Sahib and others, Respondents.

O. S. Appeals Nos. 32 of 1951 and 20 of 1952, D/- 21-3-1952.

(a) Companies Act (1913), S. 87 C — Office allowance and remuneration — Provision in contract for both — Office allowance expressly stated payable is distinct from remuneration.

A provision in a contract of managing agency providing for the payment to managing agent both an office allowance and remuneration is quite in accordance with the provisions of S. 87 C. The minimum payment of remuneration to the managing agent in the absence of or inadequacy of profits, the making of a provision for which is contemplated in sub-s. (1) is not the same thing as office allowance and what is expressly stated to be payable as office allowance is not in the nature of remuneration. That sum when it is specified in the contract is "defined" as contemplated by the section and it is not necessary that the contract should specify the number of clerks, peons etc. The word "defined" cannot be construed to mean "described in detail". (Para 7)

Anno: Comp. Act, S. 87 C N. 1.

(b) Companies Act (1913), Ss. 87 C and 87 B (f) — Contract for specified period — Provisions for payment of office allowance and remuneration — Agent to be indemnified against loss or damage arising out of breach of condition etc., by company — Winding up before expiry of contract period — Claim for office allowance and damages.

The terms of a contract of managing agency were that the appointment was for a period of 20 years, that the managing agent was to get an office allowance at a specified rate per month in addition to remuneration of ten per cent. out of net profits as defined under S. 87 C (3), that salaries of staff and other expenses of the business of the company were to be separately borne by the company, that the appointment was not terminable unless the managing agent was found guilty of fraud or gross negligence or as provided for by law and that the company should indemnify the managing agent for loss or damages caused to him by the failure, default or breach of the conditions by the company. Subsequently disputes arising between the company and the managing agent, the former prevented the latter from being in charge of the company and terminated the contract by resolution of the directors for which however the approval of the general meeting was not obtained. The managing agent continued to have the records of the company and maintain his separate office. Very little business was done by the company but not due to the fault of the managing agent. Finally the company went into liquidation before the expiry of the period of contract.

Held (i) that the person appointed continued to be the managing agent until the company ceased to exist and the termination of his office by the resolution of the directors was not a valid termination in view of S. 87 B (f): AIR 1950 PC 81, Rel. on.

(ii) that when he had been wrongfully prevented from being in charge of the company that could not be made a ground for refusing to pay him the stipulated office allowance upto the date of winding up and that under the circumstances he was entitled to that payment. (Para 8)

(iii) that it was not an implied term of the agreement that the company shall continue to carry on business during the period specified in the contract and hence office allowance after date of liquidation could not be claimed.

(iv) that the claim for damages against remuneration receivable during the period after winding up was not sustainable as there was no implied condition for continuation of business for the full 20 years, and as there was also no wrongful termination of the agency: Case law referred to. (Para 9)

Anno: Comp. Act, S. 87 C N. 1; S. 87 B N. 1.

G. Vasantha Pai, for Appellant in O. S. A. 32/51; M. G. Kamath, for 3rd Respondent in O. S. A. 32/51, S. G. Rangaramanujam, for Appellant in O. S. A. 20/52 and for Respondent No. 2 in O. S. A. 32/51.

RAJAMANNAR C. J.: These two appeals are against an order of Krishnaswami Nayudu J. passed on an application in the course of liquidation of a limited company called the South Indian Industrial Engineering Syndicate Ltd., Gudiyatham. The company was registered on 12th March 1946, with a nominal capital of 30 lakhs divided into three lakhs of ordinary shares of Rs. 10 each out of which there was an issue of fifty thousand shares. In and by an agreement dated 10th April 1946 a firm known by the name of Messrs. Associate Industrial Engineers was appointed as Managing agents of the company for a period of twenty years on terms and conditions set out therein. The company obtained a certificate for the commencement of the business on 30th July. Very soon thereafter misunderstandings arose between P. V. Padmanabha Naidu, the Managing partner of the Associate Industrial Engineers, and some of the directors of the company of whom the most prominent was one P. A. Jabbar Sahib. He filed two criminal complaints against Padmanabha Naidu. On 1st October 1946, Mr. Oates, one of the partners of the managing agency firm wrote to the Directors of the Company stating that he had severed his connection with the firm and that the firm had been dissolved. Thereupon the Board of Directors resolved on 6th October 1946 that in view of the criminal cases pending against Padmanabha Naidu and the non-receipt of the audit report and the dissolution of the managing agency firm, the business and all monies and other transactions of the company by the managing agents be suspended till the final decision of the disputes. Subsequently, on 11th November 1946, two of the directors were constituted as a committee to carry on the business of the company. On 29th November 1946, this committee filed a complaint against Padmanabha Naidu for wrongfully withholding the delivery of account books and records of the company. On 6th January 1947, two share-holders filed a petition in this court for winding up of the company but it was dismissed.

On 12th April 1947, the Committee of Directors instituted a suit in the court of the District Munsif, Vellore (O. S. No. 151 of 1947) against the partners of the managing agency firm for a declaration that the Managing agents were lawfully suspended as per resolution dated 6th October 1946 and for an injunction restraining them from interfering or causing obstruction in the management of the company. This suit was decreed by the District Munsif on 29th June 1948. But on appeal the learned Subordinate Judge of Vellore held that the resolution of the 6th October 1946 was ultra vires and invalid but granted a permanent injunction restraining the managing agents from interfering in the affairs of the company. By order of this court dated 6th December 1949, the company was directed to be wound up.

The two main grounds in the petition for winding up were: (1) That the company defaulted in filing the statutory report and in holding the statutory meeting under S. 162(2), Companies Act; and (2) That it did not commence business within a year of its incorporation.

(2) In May 1950, Padmanabha Naidu on behalf of the Associate Industrial Engineers, the managing agency firm, filed a claim before the Official Liquidator who had been appointed in the winding-up proceedings. The claim was made up of three items as follows:

1. A sum of Rs. 1705-9-6 alleged to be the amount advanced by the managing agency firm to the Board of Directors of the company;
2. A sum of Rs. 49400-5-0 being the amount of office allowance payable to the managing agency firm from 1st March 1947 to 6th December 1949, as per the terms of the agreement, and,
3. A sum of Rs. 25000 as damages for premature termination of the managing agency agreement.

In accordance with the directions of the learned Judge sitting in Chambers, Krishnaswami Nayudu J., the Official Liquidator, after notice to the concerned parties, made an enquiry and allowed the claim in its entirety. The members of the Committee of Directors then made an application to the learned Judge in Chambers for setting aside the order of the Official Liquidator allowing the claim preferred on behalf of the Managing agents. Before the learned Judge there was no dispute as regards the first item of Rs. 1705-9-6. The learned Judge disallowed the second item and allowed only a sum of Rs. 10,000 in respect of the third item. In the result he held that the Managing agents would be entitled to a sum of Rs. 11705-9-6. Against this order of the learned Judge, the Managing Agents have filed O. S. A. No. 32 of 1951. O. S. A. No. 20 of 1952 is by the Committee of Directors. In this judgment, the managing agency firm will be referred to as the appellant and the Committee of Directors as the respondents.

(3) To understand the basis of the claim of the appellant it is necessary to set out the material terms and conditions of the managing agency agreement Ex. P. 2. They are as follows:

Clause (1): The said appointment of the Managing Agents shall be initially for a period of 20 years from the date of these presents notwithstanding any change in the constitution or in the name and style of the said firm, its successors and assigns;

Clause (3): The managing agents shall be entitled to the following remunerations:

(a) An office allowance for the first six months from the date of these presents a sum of Rs. 800 (Rs. eight hundred) per month; for the next six months thereafter at the rate of Rs. 1200 (one thousand two hundred) per month; and thereafter at the rate of Rs. 1500 (one thousand five hundred), p.m.; with a provision to increase this allowance, from time to time as the business increases, at the discretion of the Directors to a maximum of Rs. five thousand (Rs. 5000) per month, provided however that the salaries of the staff and other expenses for the business of the company shall be borne by the company and shall not be included in the said office allowance.

(b) The managing agents shall also be entitled to a remuneration of 10 per cent (ten per cent) of the annual nett profits of the company as defined by S. 87 (c) (3), Companies Act, provided however that the managing agents agree to waive such portion or the full amount of their remuneration of 10 percent on the said annual nett profits, as may be necessary in any year, in which the said annual nett profits of the company are not sufficient for declaration of at least six percent dividend on the paid-up share capital of the company.

(c) The abovesaid remuneration shall be paid by the company to the managing agents during the period of their appointment, namely 20 years.

Clause 8: Except in the case of the Managing agents being found guilty of fraud or gross negligence or in cases where the law provides, the managing agents shall not be liable to be discharged from their office or be liable to indemnify the company or any one else, for any acts or omissions done by them in the discharge of their duties as managing agents of the company. In all such cases, the company shall indemnify the Managing agents for any loss or damage suffered by them.

Clause 9: The managing agents shall also be entitled to be indemnified for loss or damage that they may suffer by reason of failure or default or breach of any of the conditions herein on the part of the said company.

(4) The second item of claim is made up of two amounts:

(1) Rs. 1560 as office allowance due from 1st March 1947 to 9th April 1947 at the rate of Rs. 1200 per month, and

(2) an amount of Rs. 47840 being such allowance for the period from 10th April 1947 to 6th December 1949 at the rate of Rs. 1500 per month.

This item is expressly founded on clause 3 (a) of the agreement. Prima facie the appellant appears to be entitled to the amount of this item. The company was wound up only on 6th December 1949 and the amount is claimed in respect of a period anterior to this date. The claim was resisted by the respondents mainly on the following grounds:

(a) that the suspension of the managing agency by a resolution of the company dated 6th October 1946 was proper and therefore the appellant was not entitled to any remuneration or office allowance thereafter.

(b) that the Managing Agency firm had ceased to exist when it must be deemed to have been dissolved by one of the partners severing his connection with the firm;

(c) that the winding up of the company was due to the negligence, default and mismanagement of the managing agents.

(5) Before the Official Liquidator, apart from these grounds which were contained in the affidavit filed by the respondents in answer to the claim, certain other legal objections were also raised. These objections are founded on the provisions of the Companies Act. The learned Judge held that the resolution of the 6th October 1946 purporting to suspend the managing agency was ultra vires and invalid. He further held that notwithstanding the retirement of one of the partners, Mr. Oates, the managing agency firm must be deemed to have continued and therefore there had been no lawful termination by the company of the services of the managing agents. The learned Judge also found that the winding up was brought about by the negligence and default of the managing agents in carrying out their duties and that therefore the managing agents had not disentitled themselves to any compensation for the termination of the contract. These findings were not challenged by the learned counsel for the respondents before us. But the learned Judge disallowed this item of claim because in his opinion the amount specified as office allowance was not in the nature of a minimum remuneration, that the managing agents would be entitled to be paid office allowance only so long as the company functioned and that the managing agents were prevented from being in charge of the company.

(6) Learned counsel for the appellant contended that the amount referred to in clause (3) of the agreement as office allowance is really in the nature of minimum remuneration. In the alternative he contended that he would be entitled to the amount claimed as office allowance. Both sides relied on certain provisions of the Indian Companies Act which we shall now set out. Section 87-C of the Act in so far as it is material runs as follows:

“(1) Where any company appoints a Managing Agent after the commencement of the Indian Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936 the remuneration of the managing agent shall be a sum based on a fixed percentage of the nett annual profits of the company, with provision for a minimum payment in the case of absence of or inadequacy of profits, together with an office allowance to be defined in the agreement of management;

(2) Any stipulation for remuneration additional to or in any other form than the remuneration specified in sub-sec. (1) shall not be binding on the company unless sanctioned by a special resolution of the company.”

(7) Now it is clear that on the face of it the Managing agency agreement provides both for an office allowance and a remuneration. This is quite in accordance with the statutory provision. We are unable to agree with the contention of the appellant that the amount expressly stated to be payable as official allowance is in the nature of a minimum remuneration. Sec. 270(1) (S. 87 C (1)?) no doubt does contemplate a provision being made for a minimum payment as remuneration in the case of absence of or inadequacy of profits. But on the language of that sub-section, it is equally clear that this minimum payment is something different from the office allowance. Besides, if it is argued that this provision is in the nature of a stipulation for additional remuneration in a different form, then it would offend the provision of S. 87(c) (2) of the Act. It only remains to be considered whether the appellant is entitled to the amount of the second item as office allowance defined in the agreement for management. We cannot agree with the learned Counsel for the respondent that the agreement does not define the office allowance. When a specific sum is mentioned as the office allowance payable, we fail to see why this allowance cannot be held to be defined. The respondent's counsel, if we understood him aright wanted us to construe the word “defined” to mean “described in detail”. This is to say, the agreement should specify the number of clerks, peons, attenders, stationery etc. Counsel was unable to cite any authority in support of this construction and we have no hesitation in refusing to adopt what appears to us to be an unreasonable interpretation.

(8) The learned Judge, as already mentioned, disallowed the appellant's claim to the second item on the ground that the appellant firm was prevented from being in charge of the company. With respect to the learned Judge, we fail to see how this circumstance would deprive the appellant of his rights under the agreement. On 6th October 1946, there was no doubt a resolution of the Board of Directors suspending the functioning of the Managing Agency firm as such. But it is important to notice that this resolution did not purport to terminate the managing agency. Under S. 87-B(f) the removal of a managing agent shall not be valid unless approved by the company by resolution at a general meeting of the company. (See — Ram Kissendas v. Satya Charan, AIR 1950 P. C. 81). Our attention has not been drawn to any such resolution of the company. It is mainly on this ground that the learned Additional Subordinate Judge of Vellore held that the resolution of 6th October 1946 was ultra vires. It is true that the respondents made several attempts to prevent the appellant from acting as managing agents. There were criminal cases and an application for injunction. The criminal cases, however, ended in an acquittal of the managing partner of the appellant firm. From these proceedings, it is apparent that the appellant continued to have the records of the company with it. It may be that there was not much business done by the company, but it cannot be said that this was entirely due to the fault of the appellant. Even assuming the appellant firm was prevented from being in charge of the company it was so prevented by the wrongful action of the respondents. They cannot either in law or in equity rely on their own wrongful conduct as a circumstance disentitling the appellant to the office allowance during the period when the appellant was so prevented. Before us, the argument proceeded on the basis that the managing agency was lawfully terminated only on the date of the winding up of the company, i.e., 6th December 1949. If this be so, the appellant would prima facie be entitled to be paid the office allowance as provided in the agreement. It was not suggested by Counsel for the respondents that the managing agency firm did not have its own office. That office was obviously different from the office of the company as is clear from Cl. 3(a) of the managing agency agreement which refers to the salaries of the staff and other expenses for the business of the company which had to be borne by the company and were not included in the office allowance payable to the managing agents. In our opinion the appellant was entitled to the office allowance for the period upto the date of winding up, viz., 6th December 1949 at the rates mentioned in clause (3) of the agreement. The second item of the claim must be allowed in its favour.

(9) The third item of claim is by way of special damages payable to the appellant for the premature termination of the managing agency. The appellant's counsel expressly abandoned the appellant's claim to damages on the basis of the remuneration of ten per cent of the annual nett profits of the company and confined the basis of his claim to the provision for the payment of the office allowance at a fixed rate. Though according to this basis he would be entitled to claim at the rate of Rs. 1500 a month for the balance of the term of 20 years, he restricted his claim to Rs. 25000. Clause 8 of the managing agency agreement provides that except in the case of managing agents being found guilty of fraud or gross negligence or in cases where the law provides, the managing agents shall not be liable to be discharged from their office, and under Cl. 9 the managing agents shall be entitled to be indemnified for loss or damage suffered by reason of failure or default or breach of any of the conditions on the part of the company. Learned counsel for the appellant relied on several English decisions in support of his contention that when an agreement provides for the payment of a salary and other allowances to an employee or agent, the employee or agent is entitled on termination of his employment or agency to such salary and allowances for the unexpired portion of his contract of employment or agency. In — 'In re English Joint Stock Bank Yelland's case', 4 Eq. 350, one Mr. Y. was engaged as the sole manager of a branch of a bank for a term of five years from 1st July 1865 at a stipend of not less than £. 500 a year. It was also provided that whilst he should continue to act as manager of the branch he should have the right of occupying the bank premises as a dwelling house free of all rent, taxes and other outgoings. Y acted as manager of the branch of the bank until 11th May 1866 when the bank stopped payment. An order for winding it up was made on 25th May 1866. On 1st August Y received a notice from the Official Liquidator that his engagement was at an end and that his services would no longer be required. Y sent in a claim for £. 1958 for three years and 11 months' salary at the rate of £. 500 a year and a further sum of £. 360 being equivalent to £. 120 a year for three years' residence and offices on the bank premises free of rent, rates and taxes calculated from 24th June 1867 when he would have to vacate the premises. It was held by Sir Page Wood V. C. that the proper course would be to ascertain the present value of an annuity of £. 500 terminating on 1st July 1870 and a proper rent for the bank premises for the rest of the term, regard being had to the risk to health and life and from that amount deduction should be made for Y being at liberty to obtain a fresh appointment and regard must also be had to the liberty reserved to him by the agreement of acting as agent for other companies. The matter was sent back to Chambers for calculation upon this principle.

(10) In — 'In re: London and Colonial Co., Ex parte Clark', L. R. 7 Eq. 550 by an agreement between a limited trading company and their agent in a British Colony it was provided that the salary of the agent was to be £. 750 a year for a period of five years from the day of his arrival in the colony and in addition he was to be allowed certain commissions on remittances made by him to England. The company also agreed to defray all expenses for offices, ware-houses and staff of clerks. The agent arrived in the colony in December 1865 and commenced business. In March 1867 the voluntary winding up of the company was ordered to be continued under supervision and in January 1868 the agent's services were put an end to. The agent claimed salary at £. 750 per annum from 18th January 1868 to 18th December 1870 and commission on certain remittances made by him and also estimated commission which would have been payable to him during the remainder of his engagement, expenses of his voyage and legal proceedings. The Vice Chancellor made the following declaration as regards his claims:

"Following what was done in 'Yalland's case', L. R. 4 Eq. 350 allow to Mr. Clark his full salary to the end of the five years.

Also allow to him a proper sum for rent and office expenses for the same period, having regard to the amount expended whilst the company was a going concern, also his commission upon all goods handed over by him under the power of attorney at invoice prices; also allow him a proper sum for the expenses of his return voyage and those of his wife; and in taking such accounts let there be a separate account of all commissions and salaries due to him after the winding up."

(11) In — 'In re English & Scottish Marine Insurance Co., Ex parte Maclure', 5 Ch. Ap. 737 the agreement between an Insurance company and its agent provided not only for a fixed salary but also for a commission of ten percent, on all business transacted. The agreement was for a period of five years, but before the five years had expired the company was wound up voluntarily. The agent claimed against the company,

(1) The balance due to him at the time of the commencement of the liquidation for salary, office expenses and commission. This was agreed to by the liquidators;

(2) The prospective value of £. 500 a year till the expiry of the period of five years;

(3) The office expenses to the same date; and

(4) The prospective value of the commission to the same date.

The claim was heard by the Master of the Rolls who held that the agent was entitled to the salary for the balance of the period of the agreement, but disallowed his claim in respect of the value of the commission. As regards office expenses there was a subsequent agreement between the Official Liquidator and the Agent under which the agent agreed to accept a specified sum. There was an appeal which was disposed of by Sir W. M. James L. J. He held that the agent was not entitled to prove against the company for the loss of his commission during the remainder of the term of five years.

(12) In — 'In re the Patent Floor Cloth Co., Dean and Gilbert's claim', 41 L. J. Ch. 476 there was no fixed salary. A company engaged two persons to act as their commercial travellers for three years in a certain district at a commission upon goods ordered. The company was wound up before the termination of the three years. It was held that the commercial travellers were entitled to compensation in respect of the commission for the unexpired portion of the term, and the amount was directed to be ascertained by the Chief Clerk in Chambers. The case in — 'In re, English and Scottish Marine Insurance Co., Ex parte Maclure', 5 Ch. Ap. 737 in which the claim for commission had been disallowed was distinguished on the ground that in that case the remuneration was salary and commission whereas the remuneration was only commission in this case.

(13) The ruling in — 'Reigate v. Union Manufacturing Co., (Ramsbottom)', 1918-1-K. B. 592 is more or less on similar lines. Here a manufacturing company employed the plaintiff as agent for a period of seven years for the sale of their goods. The agent was to obtain orders at agreed prices and he was to get a commission upon the invoice prices of all goods delivered by the company and duly paid for by the purchasers. Before the expiry of the period of seven years, the company passed resolutions for voluntary winding up and eventually sold their business. In an action to recover damages for breach of the agreement it was held that the company was liable to damages. The enquiry as to damages was directed to be made by the Official Referee and the company was allowed to show circumstances which might lead to the conclusion that during the remainder of the period there was very little prospect of any large quantity of business being done.

(14) Before applying the principles laid down in the above decisions to the facts of the present case we think we should also refer to a decision not cited before us, namely, — 'Rhodes v. Forwood', 1 A. C. 256. A and B agreed that for seven years A should be the sole agent for the sale of B's coals and that B should not employ any other agent for that purpose. A was to be paid a fixed commission of three per cent. At the end of four years, B sold the colliery itself. In an action by A for damages for breach of the agreement it was held by the House of Lords that the action was not maintainable. The 'ratio decidendi' was that where two parties agree for a fixed period the one to employ the other as his sole agent for certain business, there is no implied condition that the business itself shall continue to be carried on during the period named. Lord Hatherley observed:

"The parties seem to me to have entered into a simple contract of agency, which necessarily determines when the subject-matter of the agency is gone. The subject-matter of the agency has disappeared without mala fides on either side. Therefore the contract is brought to an end by the course of events— by that happening which might necessarily have been expected to happen and which would have the effect of putting an end to the contract.....

My Lords, it appears to me that all that has happened is this: The parties meet together, and they assume as between themselves the probability of a certain state of things existing, but they do not enter into a guarantee that that state of things shall continue to exist."

Lord Penzance pointed that the natural reading of such a contract as that before the House was that as long as the principal chooses to carry on his business he shall be bound to employ the person with whom he has agreed as his agent, but that he shall be at liberty when he likes to put an end to that business to do so. The rule of law enunciated by the House of Lords in this case has been referred to in several of the decisions cited by the appellant's counsel.

In — 'In re, the Patent Floor Cloth Co., Dean and Gilbert's claim', 41 L. J. Ch. 476 though the ruling itself is not referred to as the case was decided earlier the same principle is stated. Distinguishing — 'In re, English and Scottish Marine Insurance Co., ex parte Maclure', 5 Ch. Ap. 737 Bacon V. C. said:

"But that was a case in which the man had stipulated for two things, salary and commission, and if the man who had agreed to pay him the salary chose to leave off business the servant could not prescribe to his master that he must carry on business whether he liked it or not."

(Vide also — 'Reigate v. Union Manufacturing Co., (Ramsbottom)', 1918-1-K. B. 592 at 600, 601). Buckley in his Commentary on the Companies Act, 12th Edn. sums up the legal position on a review of all the authorities thus:

"Where two parties mutually agree for a fixed period the one to employ the other as his sole agent in a certain business at a certain place, the other that he will act in that business for no other principal at that place, a condition that the business itself shall continue to be carried on during the period named is not to be implied in the absence of special circumstance, e.g., if under the terms of the agreement the principal is bound to accept orders obtained by the agent" (pp. 619-620).

In our opinion this principle must be applied with greater force to the case of a managing agency such as that with which we are concerned in the present case. We have excluded altogether out of consideration cases in which though the company may continue to carry on business the managing agents' services have been wrongfully dispensed with. Such cases would stand on quite a different footing.

Here we have a case where the company has been compelled to close down its business and it is only by this event that the managing agency has come to an end. Can we infer as an implied term of the agreement that the company is bound to carry on business for a period of 20 years? We think not. If that be so and if the company has been forced to come to an end the managing agent cannot be heard to say that he must be paid what he might have earned if the company had continued to carry on business for the full term of 20 years. This of course would obviously apply to any claim which may be put forward by the appellant for an estimated amount of profits which might have been earned by the company if it had continued. We think that the same consideration must also apply to the claim for office allowance. The appellant cannot compel the company to continue to carry on business for 20 years or pay him office allowance for the full period of 20 years though the company itself may cease to carry on business long before the expiry of the period. We further think that the position of a managing agent materially differs from that of an ordinary employee of the company, employed at a fixed salary. In this view the third item of claim must be entirely disallowed.

(15) O. S. A. No. 32 of 1951 is allowed in part. The appellant will get proportionate costs but the respondents 1 and 2 will bear their own costs. Respondent 3, the Official Liquidator will take the costs from the company's funds. O. S. A. No. 20 of 1952 is allowed with costs. B/M.K.S. Order accordingly.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 202 (Vol. 40, C. N. 68)

GOVINDA MENON AND KRISHNA-SWAMI NAYUDU JJ.

Muthalammal, Appellant v. Veeraraghavalu Nayudu and others, Respondents.

Second Appeal No. 1803 of 1948, D/- 8-4-1952.

Civil P. C. (1908), O. 22, Rr. 1 and 10 — Right to sue in personal actions — 'Widow's claim to maintenance against husband's estate — Death of widow pending suit — Survival of claim to legal representative — (T. P. Act (1882) S. 6(dd) ) — (Hindu law — Widow — Maintenance).

The right of a Hindu widow to claim maintenance out of her husband's estate when it has not crystallised into a definite sum is an inchoate right which cannot be transferred or assigned. Her claim to maintenance is personal and, therefore, if she dies pending her suit for maintenance against the estate of her husband in the hands of a coparcener the claim does not survive to her legal representative: Case law referred to and discussed. (Para 10)

Anno: Civil P. C., O. 22 R. 1 N. 5; O. 22 R. 10 N. 9; T. P. Act, S. 6 N. 13.

T. R. Srinivasan and S. Gopalaratnam, for Appellant; K. V. Ramachandra Iyer, for Respondents.

GOVINDA MENON J.: The appellant, whose mother had filed a suit in 'forma pauperis' against her husband's brother for past and future maintenance at the rate of Rs. 100 per year to be made a charge on the family properties, was on her death brought on record as the legal representative of her mother in the trial court. Both the lower courts have dismissed the suit on the ground that the appellant's mother's claim for maintenance against her husband's estate in the hands of the coparcener was a personal claim which does not survive to her legal representative on her death. The learned District Munsif relied upon a decision of Happell J. in C. R. P. No. 675 of 1945 in which the facts were as follows:

(2) A certain lady filed a suit against her husband for maintenance and while the suit was pending she died. But before her death she purported to assign her rights to past maintenance to her father, and on her death, the father filed an application to be brought on record as the legal representative of the daughter. The learned Judge held that the question of the original plaintiff's right to maintenance was a personal right and since it was not a suit to recover an ascertained sum, a transfer of such a personal right could not be recognised in law. The claim of an unliquidated and unascertained amount due to a Hindu lady by way of maintenance could not be the subject of an assignment.

(3) This judgment of Happell J. has not been referred to by the learned District Judge. In his judgment the two cases cited before him viz., — 'Rangappa Aithala v. Shiva Aithala', 65 MLJ 410 and — 'Rajalakshmi Deviammal v. Naganna Naidu', 21 LW 461, were distinguished by the learned District Judge on the ground that they were cases where the claim was for a specific sum of money, already ascertained as the quantum of arrears.

(4) Under the Mitakshara law, it is clear that the wife of a member of a joint family, though a member of the family as such, is not a coparcener in any sense of the term. Her right to maintenance has therefore to be ascertained by a consideration of the rights which she has to it and the obligation which her husband, or husband's coparceners, have to discharge. It is also well settled that the widow of an undivided coparcener is not entitled to claim from the survivor as maintenance more than the proceeds of the share which would have been allotted to her husband had there been a partition during his lifetime. What, therefore, is the nature of her right to maintenance in the share of her husband in the joint family property? The contention urged on behalf of the appellant is that according to Hindu law-givers, originally the wife and the husband had common ownership of property and her right to maintenance had to be traced to such ownership. It is by subsequent evolution that the ownership in the property has ceased to exist and in its place a maintenance right has been substituted.

The nature of the claim is thus described in Apastamba's Dharma-sutras, quoted at page 234 of Golapchandra Sarkar Sastri's Hindu Law, 8th edition:

"There is no partition (or separation) between husband and wife because from the 'taking of hand' (i.e., marriage) companionship (or jointness, of husband and wife) in (religious) acts (is ordained); likewise in the fruits of (acts of) spiritual merit; and also in the ownership of wealth; since (Manu and other sages) do not declare (the commission of the offence of) theft, in the case of necessary gift (made by a wife, of her husband's property."

The exact expression is द्रव्य परिग्रहेषुच "Dravyaparigrahashucha".

From the fact that as a result of marriage it is stated that there is jointness in the ownership of wealth, the earlier Hindu law-givers contemplated the wife to have some kind of right in the property of her husband. The origin and nature of such a right can also be inferred from other passages in the same book, such as at p. 271:

"The wife is declared to become co-owner of the husband from the time of their marriage." and at p. 278 where in dealing with woman's rights the learned author says as follows:

"'Wife's right to husband's property': The 'patni' or lawfully wedded wife acquires from the moment of her marriage a right to everything belonging to the husband, so as to become his co-owner. But her right is not co-equal to that of the husband but is subordinate to the same, and resembles the son's right to the father's self-acquired property. The husband alone is competent to alienate the same, and the wife cannot interdict his disposal, but being dependent on him must acquiesce in it, provided it does not unjustly affect her right to maintenance out of it. Nor can the wife enforce a partition of the property. But it is by virtue of this right that the wife enjoys the husband's property, and is entitled to get maintenance out of it; and it is also by virtue of this right that she gets a share equal to that of a son, when partition takes place at the instance of the male members. Thus the wife also of a male member becomes a coparcener of the family property.

The widow under S. 3, sub-s. (2) of the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act gets in the joint family property the same interest as her husband had. Consequently, if the husband was joint with his brothers and sons, then on the death of the husband, the widow becomes a member of the coparcenary with the rights of survivorship and of securing the joint status."

(5) The argument put forward is that what was once a right of the wife in the property of her husband has now become converted into a right for maintenance and for this argument other passages in the same book are also cited and they are Chapter XI, Section 3, sub-s. (iii) at page 528 dealing with the rights of the wife and the widow: and chapter XI, S. 4, sub-s. (i). Again, at page 540 the following passage occurs:

"Where the right to maintenance is the legal incident of a right to property, such as that of the widow of the deceased proprietor, the lowest limit is to be determined by having regard to the extent of the property, and to similar right, if any, of any other person."

At page 541 we find the following passage:

"But all this is open to the objection that the right to maintenance being a right to property, which the law confers on one person against another, and annexes it to some estate, why should any such extraneous consideration affect it in the manner set forth above, when the law does not say so? It is, therefore, held that improvement of her financial condition is no ground for reducing the maintenance."

(6) These passages may refer to Dayabhaga System of law.

(7) A right to maintenance is also described as arising from the theory of an undivided family where the head of the family is bound to maintain its members, their wives and children. See page 813 of Mayne on Hindu law and Usage, 11th Edition.

(8) If the basic principle of the right of a male member's wife for maintenance to be paid out of the property of the joint family, or that of a widow from her husband's estate in the hands of the surviving coparceners, is based upon the theory that in remote past, when the Hindu law had not developed as a result of judicial decisions as it is today, the female member had some kind of rights in property without being a coparcener and without being entitled to claim a share, then it is said that such a right is one which relates to rights in property and can be made the subject of inheritance or transfer. In — Hoymoluttu Debia Chowdrain v. Korrana Moyee Debia Chowdrain, 8 WR 41, a Bench of the Calcutta High Court held that such a right is heritable and transferable. But the report is so meagre that it is not possible to ascertain as to whether the subject of that decision was an ascertained sum or a mere right to claim maintenance out of the estate. Our attention was also invited to — Subbarayulu Chetti v. Kamalavalli Thayaramma, 21 MLJ 493 at p. 499 and — Rajalakshmi Deviammal v. Naganna Naidu, 21 LW 461 at p. 468. But as the learned District Judge has himself remarked, these were cases where a specific, ascertained and liquidated sum of money was claimed from the estate. If that is so, such an amount is capable of being transferred. We do not think that the passages at pages 88 and 92 of Travelyan's Hindu Law, 2nd Edn., carry the case any further than what has been stated in the quotations extracted above from Golapchandra Sarkar Sastri's Hindu Law, 8th edition.

(9) The real difficulty which the appellant has to encounter is that even if the widow's right is one which arises in property or out of property, still, since that amount is not ascertained, liquidated and specified, it cannot be the subject of a transfer. For one thing it might be, as is contended by the respondent in this case, the widow is entitled to nothing as she has remarried or she might have become disentitled to maintenance on account of her subsequent unchastity. Therefore, it is not, in all cases, that a Hindu widow can have a defined and ascertained sum claimable from her husband's estate unless by agreement between the parties a sum of money has been specifically fixed, which has to be paid out of the estate.

(10) For the respondent it is contended that right to maintenance is not property and that a woman is not a coparcener though she is a member of the family. Since the right to maintenance is not property it cannot be assigned. At pages 333 and 334 of Mayne on Hindu Law and Usage, 11th Edn. the learned author states that the female members of the family have no vested right by birth and come in only as heirs to obstructed heritage and cannot be coparceners with the male members, though, along with the males, or in exceptional cases by themselves, they are members of the undivided family as a corporate body.

That this is so is clear from observations in various authorities such as — Radha Ammal v. Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras, ILR 1951 Mad 56 and — Seethamma v. Veeranna, ILR 1950 Mad 1076. Both these cases arose after the Hindu Women's Right to Property Act (XVIII of 1937) was passed, but even then it has been held that she is not a coparcener though entitled to a share on the death of her husband. At page 1082 of the report in — Seethamma v. Veeranna, ILR 1950 Mad 1076, the learned Chief Justice says as follows:

"In our opinion, the status of a Hindu widow of a deceased member of a joint family governed by the Mitakshara under the provisions of the Act is not that of a coparcener, but that of a member of the joint family with certain special statutory rights."

If that is so such inchoate rights which have not crystallised into a definite sum cannot be made the subject of transfer. In this connection an earlier decision of the Calcutta High Court reported in — Bhyrub Chunder v. Nubo Chunder, 5 WR 111, which was followed in —

'Naradabai v. Mahadeo Narayan Kashinath Narayan and Shama Bai', 5 Bom 99, 103, 104, is worthy of note. At pages 103 and 104 of the latter decision West J. observes as follows:

"The husband's duty of maintaining his wife is one which he cannot owe to another. Her right as against him is one that she cannot transfer to another. Even a widow's right to maintenance against the heirs taking her husband's property cannot be assigned. Ordinarily, therefore, a Hindu wife has no property in her husband's estate that she can part with as a consideration for a contract to her, and a right in her maintenance by way of contract cannot rest on such a consideration."

[With respect we are inclined to follow the expression of opinion by West J. and hold that a widow's right to maintenance against her husband's property is one which cannot be transferred or assigned. It seems to us therefore that the decision of the lower appellate Court is right and the second appeal is dismissed with costs.

B/M.K.S.

Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 204 (Vol. 40, C.N. 69)

GOVINDA MENON AND MACK JJ.

The Public Prosecutor, Appellant v. Veerabhadrapa Lakshminarayana Setty, Respondent.

Criminal Appeal No. 939 of 1951, D/- 23-7-52.

Factories Act (1948), Ss. 14, 92 and 106 — Failure to construct dust-proof husk chamber — Complaint — Limitation.

The Inspector of Factories inspected a factory on 5-10-1950 and found that the accused had failed to construct a pucca dust-proof husk chamber as required by S. 14. The Inspector visited the factory again on 24-1-1951 when also he found the above defect and laid a complaint on 15-3-1951 for an offence under S. 92. The question was whether the complaint was barred by limitation as being beyond three months of the first visit of the Inspector on 5-10-50.

Held that the offence committed was a continuing one, and when the Inspector visited the factory on the second occasion on 24-1-1951 the offence committed on that date came to his knowledge on that day, and the prosecution having been launched within three months of that date was in time. (Para 5)

The Appellant in person; N. V. Ganapathi, for Respondent.

ORDER OF REFERENCE

SOMASUNDARAM J.: In this case, the Inspector of Factories inspected the factory in question on 5-10-1950 and found that the accused had failed to construct a pucca dust-proof husk Chamber as required by S. 14, Factories Act. The failure to do this is an offence punishable under S. 92 of the Act. Under S. 106 of the Act no court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under this Act unless complaint thereof is made within 3 months of the date on which the alleged commission of the offence came to the knowledge of the Inspector. A complaint for this offence must be laid within 3 months from the above date, i.e., 5-10-1950. But the complaint was laid on 15-3-1951 and it is clearly beyond 3 months.

But it is argued that the Inspector visited the factory again on 24-1-1951 when also he found the above defect and the complaint being within 3 months from the later date, the complaint is within time. In support of this contention a decision of Subba Rao J. in — 'Cr. P. C. No. 417 of 1950' is cited. In my view, the period of 3 months is to be calculated from the time the Inspector had first knowledge of the offence. Otherwise, it would only mean an extension of period. The knowledge in the section means the knowledge which the Inspector had first obtained and not subsequently. In view of the different opinion which Subba Rao J. has held it is necessary that this should be decided by a Bench. I therefore direct this to be posted before a Bench.

JUDGMENT

(2) GOVINDA MENON J.: This appeal has been referred to a Bench by Somasundaram J. on account of a difference of view between himself and Subba Rao J. with regard to the proper construction to be put upon S. 106, Factories Act, 63 of 1948. The facts are stated in the judgment of our learned brother, Somasundaram J. and need not be restated here. What happened was that the respondent here failed to comply with the provisions of S. 14, Factories Act, by not putting up a dust-proof husk chamber in the factory, and this was noticed by the Inspector of Factories when he visited the place on 5-10-1950. As a result of that, the Inspector issued a notice to the manager and the occupier to rectify this defect within a period of time mentioned by him. Nothing was done with the result that when the Inspector again visited the factory on 24-1-1951 it was found that the 'status quo ante' continued, whereupon a charge-sheet under S. 92, Factories Act, for having committed an offence under S. 14, Factories Act, was laid before the Magistrate on 15-3-1951.

Among other points, the learned Magistrate found that the prosecution was barred by the provisions of S. 106, Factories Act, because the alleged offence came to the knowledge of the Inspector on 5-10-1950 when he first visited the factory, and the prosecution having been launched more than three months thereafter, was barred by the provisions of that section. Subba Rao J. in — 'Cr. R. C. No. 417 of 1950' took the view that such offences were continuing ones and, according to the learned Judge, if the argument of limitation were to prevail, it would lead to an anomalous situation that once the authorities concerned overlooked a contravention of a certain specific provision by the manager or the owner of the factory, they would be precluded for ever from complaining against subsequent delinquencies on his part. Such being the case, the learned Judge was of opinion that, being a continuing wrong, every succeeding act gave rise to a cause of action.

(3) It cannot be disputed that the offence committed is a continuing one, for the non-erection of a dust proof husk chamber, for every day of such failure, amounts to an offence. If it is an offence on a particular date, it does not cease to be an offence on the next day and so on, until the deficiency is rectified. We feel that the offence is certainly a continuing one. But the question is what exactly is the import of the expression "the offence came to the knowledge of the inspector". Does it mean the date when the offence first came to the knowledge of the inspector, or a continuing offence coming to the knowledge of the Inspector on any subsequent day? Section 106 is modelled somewhat on S. 146 of the Factory and Workshop Act, 1901 (1 Edward 7, Ch. 22), which is as follows:

"The information shall be laid within three months after the date at which the 'offence comes to the knowledge of the inspector' for the district within which the offence is charged to have been committed....."

Here also, the words are 'within three months after the date at which the offence comes to the knowledge of the inspector'. Therefore, it seems to us that in interpreting the present section the meaning put upon the words in a similar English statute by English Courts will be very helpful. In — Verney v. Mark Fletcher and Sons Ltd., 1909-1-KB 444, a Divisional Court of the King's Bench division consisting of Lord Alverstone C. J., Higham J. and Walton J. had to construe that section. What happened there was that in May 1905 and again on March 12, 1908 an Inspector of Factories for the district in which a factory of the respondents was situated, visited the factory and found that the fly-wheel of an engine was not fenced as required by the Factory and Workshop Act, 1901. Nothing seems to have been done except that he told the respondents that the fly-wheel was not securely fenced and required them to fence it in accordance with the provisions of the Act.

Again, he visited the factory on 1st July 1908 and found that the same fly-wheel was still unfenced. On 22nd July 1908, the Inspector laid information against the respondents for an offence under S. 135 of the Act in that the factory was, on 1st July 1908, not kept in conformity with the Act in that the fly-wheel was not securely fenced as required by S. 10 of the Act. It was argued before the Divisional Court by eminent Counsel like Avory K. G. and Patrick-Hastings that since the Inspector had knowledge of this deficiency in May 1905 and in March 1908 it should be said that the alleged offence came to the knowledge of the Inspector more than three months prior to the date of the initiation of the prosecution. The learned Lord Chief Justice who delivered the judgment, in answer to this contention expressed the following opinion:

"The information in the present case charges the respondents that their factory was on July 1, 1908, not kept in conformity with the Act by reason of the omission to fence their fly-wheel. If that be proved, I have not the slightest doubt that there was on July 1 a direct and continuing breach of the provisions of S. 10. It is said that because in May 1905 and again in March 1908, the fly-wheel was unfenced, to the knowledge of the inspector, and the information was not laid until July 22, 1908, the requirements of S. 146 have not been complied with. In my opinion, an offence was committed on July 1, 1908, just as much as in March 1908, or May 1905, and the offence committed on July 1 came to the knowledge of the inspector on that day, when he visited the respondents' factory. I therefore, come to the conclusion that the information was laid in time."

(4) We respectfully are in agreement with these dicta.

(5) In the present case, as we have already held, the offence committed is a continuing one, and when the Inspector visited the factory on the second occasion on 24th January 1951 the offence committed on that date came to his knowledge on that day, and the prosecution having been launched within three months of that date is in time. We are therefore of opinion that the learned Magistrate was wrong in the construction he put upon S. 106 of the Factories Act. In view of the fact that the appeal has been filed mainly with the object of having a pronouncement on this question of law, we think it is unnecessary to proceed with the matter any further except by stating what the correct law, in our opinion is. We therefore set aside the order of acquittal, but in the circumstances we do not wish to impose any sentence on the respondents. The other two points are only subsidiary matter on which we agree with the lower court.

B/V.R.B.

Order set aside.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 205 (Vol. 40, C. N. 70)

RAJAMANNAR C. J. AND VENKATA-RAMA AYYAR J.

Velu Pillai alias Veluswami Pillai, Appellant v. G. V. Sundararajulu Naidu and others, Respondents.

Letters Patent Appeal No. 79 of 1949, D/- 11-7-1952.

Civil P. C. (1908), S. 48 — Execution application — Application for execution of mortgage decree filed in time returned for amendment of decree — Application for amendment of decree made also in time — Amendment of decree made after 12 years — Decree-holder trying to continue execution is not barred by S. 48.

(Para 1)

Anno: C. P. C., S. 48 N. 7.

T. S. Venkatarama Iyer, for Appellant; T. K. Subramania Pillai, for Respondents.

RAJAMANNAR C. J.: We agree with the learned Judge Panchapakesa Aiyar J. against whose judgment this Letters Patent Appeal has been filed that the execution petition filed by the respondent is not barred by limitation. The decree in question was passed on 2-11-1933. It is a mortgage decree but by inadvertence, interest subsequent to the date of the decree was not awarded by it. On 29-3-1945 the respondent filed an execution petition including subsequent interest also which was not awarded by the decree. The petition was therefore returned to be represented after the decree had been amended. Thereupon the respondent filed an application for amendment within 12 years from the date of the original decree. The amendment, however, was ordered only on 26th March 1946. Thereafter when the respondent wanted to continue the execution proceedings, he was met with the plea that the decree had become barred under S. 48, C. P. C. as 12 years had elapsed from the date of the original decree. We fail to see how the bar of limitation can be successfully sustained in this case. Admittedly the execution petition which is now sought to be proceeded with was filed within 12 years from the date of the original decree. The application for amendment of the decree was also made within that period. The fact that the amendment was eventually ordered on a date after the expiry of the period of 12 years would not make a difference because the amendment would obviously date back to the date of the application at least, if not to the date of the original decree. It was contended for the appellant judgment-debtor that the original execution petition must be deemed to be one not in accordance with law; but we are unable to accept this contention. He also relied upon the ruling in — Faquir Chand v.

Kundan Singh', 54 All 622. That decision, however, has no bearing whatever on the facts of this case because in that case the execution petition itself was filed after the lapse of 12 years from the date of the original decree. In the present case, the execution petition was filed well within time but was being returned to be represented after the amendment of the decree had been carried out. In these circumstances, there was no bar of limitation under S. 48, C. P. C. The appeal is dismissed with costs.

B/V.S.B.

Appeal dismissed.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 206 (Vol. 40, C. N. 71)

CHANDRA REDDI J.

Proprietor, St. Joseph's Automobile and Mechanical Works, Tuticorin, Appellant v. Maria Soosai Pillai, Respondent.

A. A. O. No. 321 of 1950, D/- 23-4-1952.

(a) Workmen's Compensation Act (1923), S. 30 — Questions of fact — Interference.

Under S. 30, the appellate Court's jurisdiction to interfere with an order of the Commissioner for Workmen's Compensation in appeal is confined to substantial questions of law. Hence, it is not open to the appellant to question the correctness of the conclusion of the Commissioner on the question of facts. (Para 4)

Anno: W. C. Act, S. 30 N. 3.

(b) Workmen's Compensation Act (1923), S. 2 (1) (d) (ii) — Father of deceased.

When the earnings of the deceased workman were hardly sufficient for his maintenance and no balance left which would contribute to the family fund the parent cannot be said to be a dependent within the meaning of S. 2, clause 1 (d). But if the deceased workman was rendering either valuable services to the family that might be taken into consideration in determining the degree of dependency, the dependency is with reference to the date of the death of the workman and the fact that at a future date the father might have to depend upon the son is not a relevant consideration. Where the earnings of the deceased workman far from being an asset to the family were not sufficient to maintain him and the father had to spend considerable portion of his earnings on the maintenance of his deceased son, the father not being a dependent wholly or partially on the earnings of the deceased workman was not a dependent within the meaning of the definition in S. 2 (1) (d). Case law discussed.

(Paras 11, 12)

Anno: W. C. Act, S. 2 N. 3, 5.

K. S. Rajagopalachari, for Appellant; G. Chandrasekhara Sastri (Amicus Curiae), for Respondent.

JUDGMENT: This appeal arises out of an application filed by the respondent herein for compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act. The respondent's son who was of tender years was employed as a workman in the appellant's workshop as a cleaner on a daily wage of Rs. 0-4-0. The workman met with an accident on 8-5-1949 while working in the factory during night time which resulted in his death. The respondent claimed a lump sum payment of Rs. 500 under S. 3 of the Act.

(2) This application was opposed by the employer on the ground that respondent's son was not a workman within the meaning of the Act as he was only an apprentice, that the accident did not arise during the course of his employment and lastly that the application was incompetent as the applicant was not a dependent within the meaning of S. 2(1) (d) of the Act. The Commissioner for workmen's compensation overruled these objections and granted a sum of Rs. 500 by way of compensation to the applicant. He found that the deceased was a workman within the meaning of S. 2(1) (n) and that the accident occurred in the course of his employment under the applicant. As regards the competency of the applicant to maintain the application, the opinion of the Commissioner was that the applicant was partly dependent on the deceased and as such was entitled to claim compensation.

(3) The employer has filed this appeal against that order.

(4) In this appeal, the findings of the Commissioner on the first two issues were not seriously challenged as they were essentially questions of fact. Under S. 30 of the Act, this court's jurisdiction to interfere with an order of the Commissioner for Workmen's Compensation in appeal is confined to substantial questions of law. That being so, it is not open to the appellant to question the correctness of the conclusion of the Commissioner on those two questions.

(5) The only point that was debated was that the respondent was not a dependent within the meaning of S. 2(1) (d) of the Act. Under that section a dependent "includes a parent other than a widowed mother if wholly or in part dependent on the earnings of the workman at the time of his death". In order to come within the ambit of the definition of "a dependent" a father has to prove that he was dependent upon the earnings of his deceased son either wholly or in part.

(6) The appellant contends that in this case the parent is not a dependent because on his own admission he was not in any way depending on the earnings of his son. The statement of the applicant in the evidence that has given rise to this conclusion is this:

"At the time of his death he was eking Rs. 0-4-0 per day. The expenses for the food of the deceased would be about Rs. 20 to Rs. 25 per month. He was paid Rs. 6 per month. For other expenses, I used to pay him for dress etc."

(7) The counsel for the appellant urges that on this admission the father cannot be said to be a dependent within the meaning of S. 2(1) (d) of the Act. In order to claim the benefit under S. 2, the parent must show, the learned counsel argues, that out of the earnings of the son there was a balance which was useful to him. In support of this contention, he cited a decision of a Bench of this court in — 'Venkatarama Aiyar v. Babasahib', 1942-1 M.L.J. 406. There their Lordships had to consider whether a father without even alleging that he was dependent on the earnings of his deceased workman could maintain an application for compensation.

The learned Judges expressed the opinion that under S. 2(1) (d) as amended by Act XI of 1933 a parent had no locus standi to claim compensation under the Act without proof of his dependence on the earnings of his workman either wholly or in part. It may be pointed out that prior to 1933, sub-cl. (d) stood as follows:

"'Dependent' means any of the following relatives of a deceased workman, namely, a wife, husband, parent, minor son, unmarried daughter, married daughter who is a minor etc."

But the amendment took away the parent other than the widowed mother from that category and under the amended definition a father could be regarded as a dependent only when he could establish that he was really depending on the earnings of the workman either wholly or partly. This case did not decide the point that arises for consideration in this case.

(8) The question that I have to decide is whether a mere contribution by the workman towards the expenses of the family is sufficient to enable the father to claim as a dependent within the meaning of the Act irrespective of the fact whether the parent derived any advantage out of the earnings of the deceased workman. This point has come up for discussion in other courts, though there is no case of our court bearing on this point.

(9) In — Damjee v. Maung Hla Sein, AIR 1939 Rang. 369 the question was whether a husband was a dependent on the earnings of his wife within the meaning of S. 2(1) (d) of the Act. All that was alleged in the application for compensation was that he and his wife used to pool their earnings which went into a common pot. The learned Judges took the view that that was not sufficient to constitute the husband a dependent who could claim compensation under the Act. The test, according to the learned Judges was whether as a result of the death of the workman any loss had occurred to the applicant and whether without the earnings of the deceased workman he could live as well as he lived before. The learned Judges remarked that the purpose of the statute was not to give solatium to a relative of the deceased workman but to replace the loss sustained as a result of the fatal accident to the workman.

(9a) There is a very elucidating exposition of the law on the subject in the speech of Scrutton LJ in — 'Pear v. Blockow Vaughan and Co.', 94 L.J.K.B. 497 at 510;

"It seems to me that one person is not dependent upon another unless he is receiving a net advantage from that person, that is to say, a balance after paying the expenses of the maintenance if he bears them."

Again, it is observed in the speech of the same Law-Lord on page 510:

"I wish, however, to guard myself on one question, that is, if at the time of the death there is no dependency, because at the time of the death there is no balance coming, or which has come in the past, from the deceased to the alleged dependant. I personally am not at present satisfied that in such a case it can be said 'Oh, but he is dependent, because there would have been a contribution, or might have been a contribution in the future'."

In the same case Warrington L. J. remarked that if the son made no contribution for the provision of the ordinary necessities, the father could not be treated as a partial dependent on the son. In that case, a son who was a boy of 11 years and employed in a coal mine was earning 11 Sh. 10 d. a week which was contributed to the family fund. There being no evidence as to what was the amount of burden thrown upon the father and as to the net balance in respect of which there is dependency on the part of the father, it was held that the father was not a co-dependent on the deceased workman wholly or in part.

(10) In — 'Tamworth Colliery Co. Ltd. v. Hall', 1911 A. C. 655, the principle was stated to be that if the father did not gain anything from the earnings of his son, he was not a dependent who could claim compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act. Lord Loreburn L. C. observed that "the proper course is to look at all the circumstances and to say to what extent, if at all, was the father dependent upon his son's earnings." Support may be found for this view in — 'Nugent v. Londonderry Collieries Ltd.', 1930-1-K. B. 159.

(11) Mr. Chandrasekhara Sastri who assisted the court as Amicus Curiae has cited a decision of the House of Lords in the — 'Main Colliery Co. Ltd. v. Davies', 1900 A. C. 358. It was decided there that as the wages of the workman contributed to the family fund with which the father could keep his family the father must be said to be dependent partially on the earnings of his deceased son who was a workman and comes within the definition of "dependent". According to that decision, the test in deciding whether a parent was dependent wholly or partially upon the deceased workman was:

"What the family was in fact earning, what the family was in fact spending, for the purpose of its maintenance as a family seems to me to be the only thing which the country court Judge could properly regard."

This decision lays down that in deciding whether a person was dependent on the deceased workman within the meaning of the definition "dependent" it has to be ascertained whether there was any kind of dependency at all giving a right to claim compensation. The principle deducible from the various decisions is that when the earnings of the deceased workman were hardly sufficient for his maintenance and no balance left which would contribute to the family fund the parent cannot be said to be a dependent within the meaning of S. 2, Cl. 1(d). But if the deceased workman was rendering either valuable services to the family, that might be taken into consideration in determining the degree of dependency. It may also be stated that the dependency is with reference to the date of the death of the workman and the fact that at a future date the father might have to depend upon the son is not a relevant consideration.

(12) In this context, I may also refer to a passage in Halsbury's Laws of England (2nd Edition, volume 34), at page 894:

"Where several members of a family contribute to a family fund, a diminution of this fund by withdrawal of the contribution of one of its members owing to death by accident, will only give a right to the head of the family to compensation if the contribution so withdrawn was expended wholly or in part upon the necessities of life for the family."

As I have already pointed out the admission of the applicant makes it abundantly clear that the earnings of the deceased workman far from being an asset to the family were not sufficient to maintain him and the applicant had to spend considerable portion of his earnings on the maintenance of his deceased son. In these circumstances, the only conclusion that could be reached is that the father not being a dependent wholly or partially on the earnings of the deceased workman was not a dependent within the meaning of the definition in S. 2(1) (d) and therefore has no 'locus standi' to maintain this application. It follows that the order of the Commissioner for the Workmen's Compensation is erroneous and ought to be set aside.

(13) In the result, the appeal is allowed. The appellant is willing to make 'ex gratia' a payment of Rs. 100 to the respondent in addition to the amount already given by him to the applicant for the funerals of his son. He will therefore be entitled to get back the amount deposited less the sum of Rs. 100 which will be paid out to the respondent.

(14) Before leaving this I must thank Mr. Chandrasekhara Sastri who assisted me as 'amicus curiae' in this case.

B/D.H.

Appeal allowed.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 208 (Vol. 40, C. N. 72)

SUBBA RAO J.

Gudivada Jagannadham, Petitioner v. M/s. A. S. Krishna and Co., Ltd. and another, Respondents.

Civil Miscellaneous Petition No. 9258 of 1950, D/- 10-9-1951.

Houses and Rents — Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (25 (XXV) of 1949), S. 10 — Grounds taken but not pressed — Application dismissed — It is final adjudication on those grounds — (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 11).

When an application with specific grounds is filed and if some of the grounds are not pressed, the order of the Court dismissing the application on that basis is a final adjudication on the question raised but not pressed: 1949-2 MLJ 594, Distinguished.

(Para 1)

Anno: C.P.C., S. 11 N. 106.

V. Sulvamaniam and V. Ramakrishna, for the Petitioner and K. Rajah Ayyar and A. V. Krishna Rao, for the Respondents.

ORDER: This is an application for issuing a writ of certiorari to quash the order of the Additional Subordinate Judge of Guntur made in an appeal filed against the order of the Rent Controller of Guntur.

The first respondent is the owner of a three-fifths share in the house and premises bearing door No. 7411 in Guntur Municipality. The petitioner is a tenant in respect of that share. It is not necessary to notice the previous litigation between the first respondent and others whereunder the first respondent's right to three-fifths share in the suit premises was recognised and declared, as the title of the first respondent to that share is not now disputed before me. The first respondent filed H.R.C. No. 13 of 1949 under S. 7 (2) (1) of the Madras Act 25 of 1949 for evicting the petitioner. It was alleged in that petition that the house required urgent repairs and also that the petitioner made a default in payment of the rent. That application was filed on 2nd February 1949. On 12th April 1949, the petitioner filed another application for amendment of the petition by adding the following clause to paragraph 7. It reads:

"as the petitioner's lease to occupy the premises which he has been occupying has expired by 1st February 1949 and the petitioner has vacated the same and as the petitioner does not own any other non-residential building in Guntur town for the purpose of carrying his business and as there is no other non-residential building in Guntur to the possession of which it is entitled for carrying on its business."

There is some argument before me on the question whether this amendment was actually ordered by the Rent Controller of Guntur. A counter affidavit was filed to the application for amendment on 18th April 1949. The Rent Controller noticed the argument based upon the amendment. He practically, though not definitely, accepted all the grounds alleged in the petition and those added by the amendment and ordered eviction. The respondent preferred an appeal (C. M. A. No. 54 of 1949) to the Subordinate Judge of Guntur. In that appeal, the points formulated for decision were as follows:

"1. Whether the rent fixed by the Rent Controller is fair and reasonable; if not, what is the fair rent due for the building in question?

2. Whether the appellant was in arrears of rent and was liable to be evicted?"

The appellate judgment also disclosed that the advocate who appeared for the respondent at that stage gave up his other two contentions, namely, that the appellant caused damage to the building, and that, subsequent to the filing of the petition for eviction, the respondent wanted the building for carrying on his own business. The learned Subordinate Judge held against the petitioner on the points formulated and allowed the appeal. From the aforesaid facts, it is manifest that the amendment must have been allowed. Otherwise, the Rent Controller would not have decided the point raised by the amendment. Nor would the appellate Judge have recorded the fact that the point raised by the amendment was not pressed before him. Indeed, the learned Subordinate Judge who disposed of the present appeal observed in his judgment that the amendment must presumably have been allowed. In the counter affidavit filed by the respondent before him it is not stated either expressly or by necessary implication that the amendment was not made. Indeed, throughout the proceedings the case was argued on the basis that the amendment was allowed. It may therefore be accepted for the purpose of this application that the amendment was allowed. The result of the previous litigation would then be that the petitioner applied for eviction on four grounds and that he gave up two grounds, and, in respect of the other two grounds, the learned Subordinate Judge found against him. The respondent filed the present application for eviction against the petitioner, the main ground being that the petitioner required the premises for his own occupation. The Rent Controller ordered eviction. The appeal filed against that order was also dismissed. The petitioner questions that order on the ground that the learned Subordinate Judge erred in holding that the order in the previous application did not preclude the respondent from filing the present application under S. 10 of the Madras Act 25 of 1949. Section 10 reads as follows:

"The Controller shall summarily reject any application under sub-s. (2) or under sub-s.

(3) of S. 7, which raises between the same parties or between the parties under whom they or any of them claim, substantially the same issues as have been finally decided, or as purport to have been finally decided in former proceedings."

The only question therefore is whether the learned Judge in C. M. A. No. 54 of 1949 finally decided or purports to have finally decided the question, namely, whether the respondent required the premises for his own occupation. From the narration of the aforesaid facts it will be seen that the learned Subordinate Judge dismissed the application of the respondent as he did not press the present contention before him and as he found against him on other contention raised. Ordinarily, a decision arrived at by a court of law in those circumstances would operate as a bar of res judicata under S. 11, Civil P. C. But Mr. Rajah Aiyar contended that the wording of S. 10 of Madras Act 25 of 1949 is different and that unless the question was finally decided in the previous application, S. 10 would not operate as a bar for the maintainability of a fresh application. In support of his argument, he relied on the decision of Rajamannar C. J. and Raghava Rao J. in — 'Miss Revathi v. Venkataraman', 1949-2 MLJ 594. There, the previous application was dismissed for default. When a second application was filed, the learned Judges held that a dismissal for default would not be a final decision within the meaning of S. 10. I respectfully agree with the view expressed therein. But that decision has no bearing on the question to be decided in the present case, where an application is dismissed not for default, but on merits. It is also not necessary to consider the question whether the principle of constructive res judicata applies to this case, for the question was specifically raised and not pressed. I hold that when an application with specific grounds is filed and if some of the grounds are not pressed, the order of the court dismissing the application on that basis is a final adjudication on the question raised but not pressed. In that view, the order made in C. M. A. No. 54 of 1949 is a bar to the maintainability of the present application. In the result, the order of the learned Subordinate Judge is hereby quashed and the petitioner will have his costs.

B/R.G.D.

Order quashed.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 209 (Vol. 40, C. N. 73)

SATYANARAYANA RAO, AND RAJAGOPALAN, JJ.

R. Hanumanthappa and Son, Applicant v. The Commissioner of Income Tax, Madras, Respondent.

Referred Case No. 52 of 1950, D/- 9-4-1952.

Income-tax Act (1922), S. 16 — Hindu undivided family — Father and son entering into Managing Agency agreement with a stranger company — Subsequent partnership between father and son with effect from date of Managing Agency agreement — Their income from Managing Agency cannot be included in total income of joint family assessee — (Companies Act, S. 2, Cl. 9(a)).

A father and a son, members of a Hindu undivided family had entered into Managing Agency agreement with a stranger company on 15-3-1937 i.e. before Mysore Companies Act (18 of 1938) came into force — On 20-3-1940 they (the father and the son) entered into partnership. The partnership deed provided that partnership constituted partnership even on 15-3-1937 the date of Managing Agency agreement. It was also provided that the parties (father & son) would have liberty to draw separately their respective shares in the income of the company & to credit them to the joint family firm. On the question whether the income of the Managing Agency could be included in the total income of the joint family firm for the purpose of income tax.

1953 Mad./27 & 28

Held (i) That though at the moment the Managing Agency agreement was entered into, there was no partition under Mysore Companies Act which came into force in 1938, it was clear from the language of the agreement that the other party of the agreement was the firm and not individual members of the joint family. The disability under S. 2, Cl. 9 (a) Indian Companies Act that a joint family as such could not enter into Managing Agency agreement did not exist at the time of the agreement, would not therefore help the revenue authorities to include this income into the total income of the joint family assessee.

(ii) Even if they had entered into the agreement in their individual capacity, they were not purporting to act on behalf of or for the benefit of the joint family.

(iii) That it was partnership between father and son that had entered into the Managing Agency and the income of the father and son derived from that Agency was not the income of the joint family but was the individual income of the partners. Its inclusion in the total income of the joint family assessee was therefore not legal: AIR 1952 Mad 828, Followed. (Para 3)

S. Swaminathan for Applicant; C. S. Rama Rao Saheb for Respondent.

REFERENCE .....

/Para

('52) 1952-21 ITR 311: (AIR 1952 Mad 828) 3

JUDGMENT: The question that was referred to us for our decision is:

"Whether on the facts and in the circumstances of the case, the inclusion of a sum of Rs. 2,46,407 for the assessment year 1944-45, and Rs. 1,03,985 for the assessment year 1945-46 representing remuneration derived by the Managing Agency of the Devangere Cotton Mills Ltd., Devangere, in the total income of the assessee family is lawful."

(2) The assessee is a Hindu undivided family. The only question that arises for consideration in this reference is, whether the income derived by Hanumanthappa and his son under the Managing Agency agreement with the Devangere Cotton Mills Co., entered into on 15-3-1937 should be included in the total income of the assessee under S. 16 of the Act. Being an income which accrued in the native state, it is exempt under S. 14 of the Act from tax, but it could be taken into consideration under S. 16 of the Act in computing the total income of the assessee for the purpose of determining the rate. It is from that point of view that the question becomes relevant.

(3) The joint family was carrying on business in British India under the name and style of R. Hanumanthappa and Son. At the time of the Managing Agency agreement, the two members, Hanumanthappa and Rama Setty constituted themselves into a firm and entered into the Managing Agency agreement. Rama Setty has a minor son and we do not know the exact date of his birth and therefore we are unable to state whether this boy was in existence on the date on which the Managing Agency agreement was entered into.

Under the Indian Companies Act, as interpreted by this court in — 'Murugappa Chetti and Sons v. Commr. of Income-tax, Madras', 1952-21 ITR 311 (Mad) a joint family as such cannot enter into a Managing Agency agreement in view of the definition of "managing agent" in S. 2, cl. 9(a), Companies Act. In the Mysore State, the Mysore Companies Act (XVIII of 1938), contains also similar provisions as the Indian Companies Act with reference to Managing agency and the definition is also identical. Though at the moment this agreement was entered into by the firm of Hanumanthappa and Son with the limited company, Devangere Cotton Mills, there was no prohibition as the Mysore Act came into force only in 1938, still, on the language of the document, it is clear that the other party of the document was the firm and not the individuals Hanumanthappa and Rama Setty. Even if they have entered into in their individual capacity, the joint family as such would not acquire any interest in the commission earned by the individuals, because they were not purporting to act on behalf of and for the benefit of the joint family. The fact therefore that the disability which, under the law, as it now exists, viz., that a joint family as such could not enter into a managing agency agreement did not exist when this agreement was entered into in Mysore State would not help the revenue authorities to enable them to include this income in the total income of the assessee.

On 20-3-1940, the deed of partnership was executed between the two, Hanumanthappa and Rama Setty, whereunder it was stated that even on 15-3-1937 when the Managing agency agreement was entered into with the company, it was decided that the two individuals should constitute themselves into a partnership under the name and style of R. Hanumanthappa and Son with effect from 20-11-1936. This undoubtedly establishes that there was a partnership which was in existence even in 1937, partnership between Hanumanthappa and his son, and it was that partnership that in fact entered into an agreement with the company. The deed of partnership is also important as it contains a provision that the two partners should have the liberty to draw separately and utilise their respective shares in the income of the company, that is, the managing agency commission, and it will be open to them to credit to the joint Hindu family firm doing business in cotton and running several factories under the name and style of R. Hanumanthappa and Son.

It is made clear by this court that unless and until the partners divide the profits as between themselves and exercise the option of bringing that income into the income of the joint family, it would not become the income of the joint family. (Murugappa Chetti and Sons v. Commissioner of I.-T., 1952-21 ITR 311 (Mad)). This partnership deed was registered as early as 20-3-1940 under S. 58(1), Mysore Partnership Act, before the Registrar of Mysore and therefore no question of its genuineness arises. Apparently, this document was executed after the Mysore Companies Act came into force which contains similar provisions regarding Managing Agency agreement as the Indian Companies Act in which the amendments were introduced in 1936. As the assessment which is now under consideration is long after the date of this partnership deed, whatever the position might have been before 1940, this deed of partnership makes it clear that the income earned by these two persons as partners was not the income of the joint family but is the individual income of the partners.

The circumstances under which the commission earned by the members of the Hindu undivided family could be made an income of the Hindu undivided family was considered in this court in — 'Murugappa Chetti and Sons v. Commr. of Income-tax, Madras', 1952-21 ITR 311 (Mad). As pointed out in that judgment, merely because in the previous years, the assessee did not object to treat the income as income of the joint family would not convert the subsequent income which accrued into a joint family income unless the parties who have earned the income agreed to throw it into the common stock and blend it with the income of the joint family. For these reasons, we think that the question referred to us by the Tribunal must be answered in the negative and in favour of the assessee. As the assessee has succeeded, he will be entitled to his costs, which we fix at Rs. 250/-.

B/H.G.P.

Reference answered.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 210 (Vol. 40, C. N. 74)

CHANDRA REDDY J.

Medikenduri and others, Appellants v. Kata Venkatayya and another, Respondents.

Second Appeal No. 2411 of 1948, D/- 22-7-52.

(a) Hindu Law — Debts — Antecedent debt.

In order to support a sale on the doctrine of antecedent debt there should not only be antecedency in time but there should be real dissociation in fact. (Para 5)

(b) Hindu Law — Alienation — Alienation by manager and by shebait — Distinction.

There is a real distinction between an alienation by a manager of a joint Hindu family and an alienation by a shebait of a temple. Powers of a manager of a joint Hindu family are larger than those of a shebait of a temple in this respect. (Para 8)

† (c) Hindu Law — Alienation — Benefit to estate — Sale of ancestral land in order to purchase lands elsewhere.

In order to validate a sale of ancestral land by the father, the benefit need not be purely of a defensive or protective character. To hold so should be to miss the significance of the expression "benefit to the estate". If the transaction is not a speculative or risky one but is beneficial or advantageous from the financial point of view and is calculated to confer a benefit on the estate the sale must be held to be a valid one binding on the members of the estate. Whether a particular transaction is beneficial to the estate or not varies according to the circumstances of that case: Case law discussed. (Paras 9 and 19)

The sale of ancestral land by a manager of joint family in order to purchase lands elsewhere therefore constitutes a benefit to the estate so as to be binding on the joint Hindu family. (Para 7)

M. Ramchandra Rao and L. Krishna Rao, for Appellants; K. Kottayya, for Respondents.

JUDGMENT: This second appeal is filed by the plaintiffs against the judgment of the Subordinate Judge of Guntur reversing the decree of the District Munsif, Guntur, in their favour. The reliefs claimed in the plaint are a permanent injunction restraining the defendants from disturbing their possession or in the alternative for possession and alternatively for division of the suit properties and allotment of 4/5 share to them. There was prayer for mesne profits also.

(2) The material facts are these: The plaintiffs who were minors at the time of the filing of this suit are the sons of the first defendant. The first defendant and the plaintiffs constitute a Hindu joint family of which the first defendant is the manager. The family owned considerable properties including the suit properties. The properties in suit were given to the adoptive mother of the first defendant in lieu of her maintenance. On the 2nd of February 1944, the first defendant entered into an agreement for the purchase of lands in a village called Kakumanu and paid an advance of Rs. 450. He had to get a sum of Rs. 700 from the vendors. In order to find the balance of the purchase money, he sold the lands in question under Ex. D. 2 to the second defendant on 5-2-1944 for a sum of Rs. 2000.

The lands purchased by the first defendant were of the extent of 5 acres, and 3 cents while the lands sold by the first defendant were of the extent of 3 acres. Subsequently the first defendant sold three acres 53 cents and retained for the family 1 acre and 50 cents. Shortly after this the plaintiffs instituted the present suit represented by their mother as their guardian alleging that the sale by the father under Ex. D. 2 in favour of the second defendant was a sham and collusive transaction not supported by consideration and that, in any event, the sale did not bind their four fifths share in the family property as it was not for purposes binding upon the family.

(3) The first defendant remained ex parte. The suit was contested by the second and third defendants, the latter being a lessee from the second defendant. The chief defences to the suit are: that the sale was fully supported by consideration and was a bona fide transaction and it was binding on all the members of the family as it was in the interests of the joint family to enter into the transaction impugned.

(4) The trial court upheld the plea of the second defendant so far as the genuineness of the transaction was concerned but it agreed with the defendants that the sale in question was not one that conferred any benefit on the family and, therefore, not binding on the plaintiff and decreed the suit for partition and allotment of 4/5 share in the suit properties to the plaintiffs. The second defendant filed an appeal against the judgment of the District Munsif. The plaintiffs acquiesced in the finding of the trial court as regards the payment of consideration and that finding has become final. The Subordinate Judge reversing the decree of the trial court held that the sale in question could be supported both on the ground of antecedent debt and benefit to the estate. The plaintiffs who are aggrieved by this decision have preferred this second appeal.

(5) In support of this appeal Mr. Ramachandra Rao contended that the findings of the lower appellate court both as regards the nature of the debt for the discharge of which the suit transaction was entered into and as to the benefit conferred on the family cannot be supported. It was urged by him that the debt incurred by the first defendant for purchasing the lands in Kakumanu cannot be an antecedent debt for the reason that there is no antecedency in fact. There seems to be great force in this argument of Mr. Ramachandra Rao. Remembering the shortness of the interval between the date of the agreement for the purchase of the lands at Kakumanu and the sale of the suit lands, it seems to be difficult to predicate that the debt was antecedently incurred and there was real dissociation between the two transactions. In order to support a sale on the doctrine of antecedent debt there should not only be antecedency in time but there should be real dissociation in fact. It is unnecessary to refer to various decisions that have laid this proposition.

It should also be noted in this connection that at the time when the first defendant entered into an agreement for the purchase of Kakumanu lands he was at the end of his personal resources and he must have contemplated a sale of this land for the purpose of discharging the liability. There can therefore be no basis for holding that the sale of the suit lands in favour of the second defendant can be validated on the doctrine of antecedent debt. It follows that the finding of the trial court that the sale in question was effected with a view to discharge an antecedent liability cannot be sustained.

(6) This does not however dispose of the second appeal. The question remains whether the sale can be sustained on the plea of benefit to the family. It should be borne in mind in this connection that the suit lands were given to one Rangamma, the adoptive mother of the first defendant, in lieu of maintenance and so far as the plaintiffs' family is concerned it was not fetching any income whereas by the purchase of the Kakumanu lands, the plaintiffs' family was deriving an annual income of about Rs. 170. The land purchased was wet land while the land which is now the subject-matter of this appeal is dry land.

(7) The main contention of Mr. Ramachandra Rao was that the sale of ancestral land by a manager of a joint family in order to purchase lands elsewhere cannot constitute a benefit to the estate so as to be binding on the joint Hindu family and the sale can be justified only for the preservation or protection of the other properties of the family. In support of this contention, he relied on some decisions of this court in — 'In re Krishnaswami Doss Reddi', 1912 M. W. N. 167. Sundara Aiyar J. expressed the opinion that the sale by a Hindu father of ancestral property for the purpose of purchasing lands elsewhere could not be binding on the family, although it was convenient for better management and was in no way prejudicial to the interests of the joint family. This view is shared by a Bench of this Court in — 'Subramania Nadan v. Ramasami Nadan', 25 M. L. J. 563. It was decided by Wallis C. J. and Kumaraswami Sastri J. in — 'Ganesa Aiyar v. Amirthasami Odayar', 1918 M. W. N. 892 that the sale of family lands by a Hindu father, some miles away from his place of residence, for the purchase of lands nearer home cannot be justified and would not bind the other members of the joint family.

(8) Reliance was also placed on behalf of the appellants on the decision of the Privy Council in — 'Palaniappa Chetty v. Sreemath

Devasikhamony Pandara Sannadhi', 40 Mad. 709. In that case, it was held by the Privy Council that the 'shebait' of a Hindu temple is not entitled to sell a 'debattar' property for the purpose of fetching an interest larger than the income to be derived from the property. I do not think that this last case is of much assistance to the appellant. The observations relied upon by the learned counsel in support of his contention that the benefit to the estate must be only of a defensive character and should be calculated to preserve or to protect the estate occur in the following passage:

"The preservation, however, of the estate, from extinction, the defence against hostile litigation affecting it, the protection of it or portions from injury or deterioration by inundation, these and such like things would obviously be benefits."

But it should not be forgotten that their Lordships have definitely stated that it is impossible to give a precise definition of benefit applicable to all cases and they did not attempt to do so. Further, in that case their Lordships were dealing with an alienation by a 'shebait' and it cannot be overlooked that there is a real distinction between an alienation by a manager of a joint Hindu family and an alienation by a 'shebait' of a temple. In my opinion the powers of a manager of a joint Hindu family are larger than those of a 'shebait' of a temple in this respect.

(9) In this connection, the dictum laid down by the Privy Council in — 'Hanooman Persad Panday v. Mussamat Babooee Munraj Koonwaree', 6 M. I. A. 392 at 423 in dealing with the question as to the circumstances under which alienation of joint family properties by a Hindu father would bind the estate may usefully be extracted:

"The actual pressure on the estate, the danger to be averted, or the benefit to be conferred upon it in the particular instance is a thing to be regarded."

This passage in the judgment of their Lordships in my opinion does not lend countenance to the contention that in order to validate a sale of ancestral land by the father the benefit should be purely of a defensive or protective character. To hold so would be to miss the significance of the expression "benefit to the estate". If it was purely of a defensive character, there was absolutely no necessity for the expression "benefit to be conferred on the estate" because the actual pressure on the estate and the danger to be averted will cover the case of necessity.

(10) In this connection it may not be out of place to refer to the text on Mitakshara dealing with alienation of joint family properties by a Hindu father. The three circumstances under which the sale can be effected are stated to be 'Apathkala', translated as time of distress; 'Kutumbārtha', i.e., for the benefit of the family and 'Dharmārtha', i.e., for pious purposes. The author of the Mitakshara illustrates the reference to 'Kutumbārtha' by referring to 'Kutumba Poshana'. The reference to 'Kutumba Poshana' cannot be taken as exhaustive but only as illustrative. If it was only a need of defensive character that could validate the sale of ancestral land, there was no necessity to lay down the second circumstance, namely, 'kutumbārtha'. That the benefit to be conferred on the estate is not synonymous with necessity is illustrated in a recent case in which there is a marked departure from the view taken in the earlier cases that the benefit to the estate should be of a defensive or preservative character.

(11) In — 'Sellappa v. Suppan', I. L. R. 1937 Mad. 906 Venkatasubba Rao J. who was one of the members of the Bench observed after referring to — 'Palaniappa Chetty v. Sreemath Devasikamony Pandara Sannadhi', 40 Mad 709 as follows:

"To infer from the three instances given in this passage that the transaction should be of a defensive nature does not seem warranted by the language used. These three instances are given as cases of obvious benefit, which seems necessarily to imply, far from suggesting the contrary, that cases of less obvious benefit are not to be excluded. Indeed it could be easily conceived what strange anomalies would arise were the restricted view to prevail. To take a familiar example, where unproductive immovable property is sold with a view to the investment of the proceeds in the purchase of more suitable property, we fail to see why the sale should be condemned as not being for a justifiable purpose. Other similar cases may be supposed in which it would be in the interests of the coparcenary to sell ancestral property with a view to make a fresh purchase."

(12) The learned Judge refers to the Full Bench decision of the Allahabad High Court in — 'Jagat Narain v. Mathuradas', 50 All. 969 with approval. In the Allahabad case, a Hindu father sold joint family properties and put it in a bank. A year thereafter the bank failed and the question arose whether the sale would be supported on the ground of benefit to the estate. The learned Judges held that it was binding on the family as the transaction was calculated to confer benefit on the estate and was such as would be entered into by prudent owner of properties. The test propounded by the learned Judges there was whether the transaction was such as a prudent owner would enter into.

(13) The trend of the recent cases has been to lean strongly towards sustaining such alienations if they were beneficial to the family from a financial point of view or advantageous otherwise, as can be seen not only from the cases cited above but also the unreported decisions of this court.

(14) In — 'App. Nos. 60 and 61 of 1934', Varadachariar and King JJ. upheld the alienation of ancestral property by a Hindu father in the following circumstances: In 1927 certain items of the joint family properties were sold by the father of a Hindu joint family and a portion of the sale proceeds was invested in the purchase of lands for the family and the other portion was utilised for investing in family businesses. In dealing with this question, their Lordships observe that so long as the father was actuated by a desire to benefit the family, the alienation could not be said to be an invalid one. The test laid down there by the learned Judge was one of prudence and benefit to the estate. The learned Judge remarked that in the absence of proof that the father was not prompted by improper motives in alienating the property the transaction should be held to be one binding on the members of the family.

(15) In — 'App. No. 206 of 1942' another Bench of this court expressed the same opinion as in — 'App. Nos. 60 and 61 of 1934'.

There, ancestral lands were sold for Rs. 73,000 out of which Rs. 37,000 was applied for buying lands nearer home. With regard to the balance, it was not proved that it was used for purposes binding on the estate. The learned Judge held that the sale by the father was valid for the reason that a good portion was used for buying land. The fact that other portion of the sale price was not proved to have been used for binding purposes did not in the opinion of the learned Judge render the sale an ineffective one, since the purchasers had made bona fide enquiries as to the need for the sale.

To the same effect is the decision of the learned Chief Justice and Satyanarayana Rao J. in — ‘App. Nos. 261 and 418 of 1946’. There a Hindu widow mortgaged properties belonging to her husband's estate to discharge a debt which she incurred for converting an old house into a terraced house. The question was whether the original borrowing was for the benefit of the family. The learned Judges following the ruling in — ‘Sellappa v. Suppan’, I. L. R. 1937 Mad. 906 and the decision in — ‘App. Nos. 60 and 61 of 1944’ upheld the transaction as in their opinion it was calculated to confer benefit on the estate.

(16) Mr. Ramachandra Rao cited the decision in — ‘Hemraju Dattubuva v. Nathu’, 59 Bom. 525, as substantiating his contention. But I do not think it really lends much support to it. What was laid down there was that the manager of a minor's estate is not entitled to alienate the minor's property for the purpose of enhancing the value of the estate or for the purpose of increasing the income but it would not be safe to hold that a transaction which is not of a preservative or productive character would not be said to be for the benefit of the minor. From this it is clear that the contention that the benefit should be of a defensive character was repelled. After referring to the several authorities touching the subject, the learned Chief Justice stated thus:

“On the other hand I am not prepared to go quite so far as Mr. Justice Patker went in — ‘Ragho v. Zaga Ekoba’, 53 Bom. 419 and to say that no transaction can be for the benefit of the minor which is not of a character to protect or preserve property of the minor. It would, generally, I think, be difficult to justify a sale not of that character, but I can conceive of cases not of that character in which the facts might nevertheless be of such a compelling character that any court would hold the transactions to be for the benefit of the estate, e.g., the sale of the land which could not conveniently be cultivated with other property of the minor, and the investment of the purchase money in lands which could be so conveniently cultivated, assuming, of course that the price obtained, and the price paid, were proper, or the sale of lands in order to raise money to secure irrigation or permanent improvement of the other lands of the minor; or a beneficial exchange; or a case like the one in — ‘Nagindas Maneklal v. Mahomed Yusuf’, 46 Bom. 312 where it was necessary to sell in order to prevent the destruction of the property.”

(17) I do not think that these observations give any support to the proposition that in no case can a sale of ancestral lands would be justified except it be for the preservation or protection of that estate. If the sale is really beneficial and advantageous to the estate I do not find any reason why it should not be upheld.

(18) The Patna High Court seems to have taken the same view that is expressed by this court in — ‘Sellappa v. Suppan’, ILR 1937 Mad 906; in — ‘Baijuath Thakur v. Survan Chowdhury’, AIR 1940 Pat. 423, where a mortgage by the manager of a joint Hindu family in order to purchase lands for the benefit of the family was held to be binding on the family.

(19) On a consideration of the decided cases and the textual authority bearing on the subject, I have reached the conclusion that if the transaction is not a speculative or risky one but is beneficial or advantageous from the financial point of view and is calculated to confer a benefit on the estate the sale must be held to be a valid one binding on the members of the estate. Whether a particular transaction is beneficial to the estate or not varies according to the circumstances of that case.

(20) In these circumstances I hold that the view of the learned Subordinate Judge that the sale conferred a benefit on the family and is consequently a valid one binding on the plaintiffs is a sound one and cannot be set aside.

(21) The result is that the decision of the lower appellate court is confirmed and the second appeal is dismissed. The respondent will get two-thirds of his costs throughout. No leave.

B/V.R.B.

Appeal dismissed.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 213 (Vol. 40, C. N. 75)

P. V. RAJAMANNAR C. J. AND VENKATA-RAMA AIYAR J.

Gada Venkata Subbayya, Appellant v. Koyal-lamudi Venkanna, Respondent.

Letters Patent Appeal No. 27 of 1949, D/- 8-7-1952.

Limitation Act (1908), Arts. 182 and 181 — Decree scaled down — Execution application — Limitation — (Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act (4 of 1938), Ss. 19 and 20).

While the execution was pending the judgment-debtor filed application under S. 20, Madras Agriculturists' Relief Act. On that application there was an order for stay and on the same day the execution petition was “struck off”. Subsequently the decree was scaled down. More than 3 years after scaling down of the decree the decree-holder filed application to bring previous execution on pending list and to continue further execution.

Held, that a scaled-down decree was not a fresh decree to give fresh starting point to the decree-holder; and even after scaling down, what could be executed was only the original decree though the amount for which execution could be levied might be less than the amount of the original decree.

(Para 2)

Held further, that since the execution was not dismissed, nor could it have been lawfully dismissed, the court did not intend by the words ‘struck off’ to finally dispose of the execution petition. The original decree must therefore be deemed to have been alive all the time and it was not necessary for the decree-holder to file an application to revive the original execution petition under Art. 181, Lim. Act. 28 Mad 50 (FB), Dist. (Para 3)

Anno: Lim. Act, Art. 182 N. 143 Pt. 12.

V. Parthasarathy, for Appellant; P. Satyanarayana Raju, for Respondent.

REFERENCE .....

/Para
3

('05) 28 Mad 50 (FB)

RAJAMANNAR C. J.: This is an appeal under the Letters Patent against the judgment of Panchapakesa Aiyar J. in a Civ. Misc. second appeal arising on the following facts. The respondent obtained a decree in O. S. No. 243 of 1933 on the file of the District Munsif, Kovvur, for Rs. 1053-4-3 and costs. The decree-holder filed applications for execution of the decree the last of which was E. P. No. 338 of 1939. When this was pending, the judgment-debtor filed an application E. A. No. 565 of 1940 on 28th June 1940 under S. 20 of Madras Act, 4 of 1938 and on that application there was an order for stay passed on 2-7-1940. On the same day, E. P. No. 338 of 1939 was "struck off." On 28th August 1940, the judgment-debtor filed a regular application under S. 19 of Madras Act, 4 of 1938 and the decree was eventually scaled down to about Rs. 300 by an order of court dated 31st January 1941. On 22-11-1944 more than three years after the order scaling down the decree, the decree-holder filed E. A. No. 1341 of 1944 to bring E. P. No. 338 of 1939 into the pending list and to continue further execution. The contention of the judgment-debtor was that the decree-holder's right to execute was barred by time. This plea was upheld by the lower appellate court but the learned Judge Panchapakesa Aiyar J. held that the decree-holder's right to execute had not become barred by time. The judgment debtor is the appellant before us.

(2) The argument of the learned counsel for the appellant was shortly as follows. It is true that when E. P. No. 338 of 1939 was "struck off" it could not be treated as a dismissal on the merits and that the order should be treated as a purely ministerial or administrative direction to keep the petition off the file of current cases. But the decree was actually amended on 31-1-1941 and if this was the decree which had to be executed, the application for execution should have been filed within three years from the date of the order scaling down the decree and as E. A. No. 1341 of 1944 was filed more than three years after that date, the decree-holder's rights had become barred. So the argument ran. The fallacy in this argument is to treat the scaled down decree as a fresh decree and to assume that the decree-holder gets a fresh starting point from the date of the order scaling down the decree. Not only is there no authority in support of the appellant's contention but there is authority for the position that a scaled-down decree is not a fresh decree and even after scaling down, what can be executed is only the original decree though the amount for which execution can be levied might be less than the amount of the original decree. This argument therefore must fail.

(3) It was next contended that it was necessary for the decree-holder to file an application to revive the original execution petition which had been struck off and that application for revival must be filed within three years from the date on which the impediment to the continuance of the original execution petition had been removed viz., 31-1-1941, the date on which the decree was scaled down. The basis of this argument is the application of Art. 181 of the Limitation Act. The answer to this contention is that here there is no question of reviving an execution petition which legally must be deemed to be dead. It may be that when, as in the case in — 'Suppa Reddiar v. Avudi Ammal', 28 Mad 50 (FB) an execution petition is dismissed on some ground or other but subsequently that dismissal turns out to be wrong and the decree-holder becomes entitled to have the dismissed execution petition revived, then an application must be made for revival and such an application might well fall within Art. 181 of the present Limitation Act, (Art. 178 of the Act in — 'Suppa Reddiar v. Avudi Ammal', 28 Mad 50 (FB).) In this case, however, EP No. 338 of 1939 was not dismissed nor could it have been lawfully dismissed. There was no default on the part of the decree-holder and the court did not intend by the words "struck off" to finally dispose of the execution petition. It must be deemed to have been alive all the time and all that the decree-holder presumably did in E. A. No. 1341 of 1944 was to request the court to take up the petition and to proceed with further execution. Art. 181 will not have any application to such a request. We agree with the learned Judge on both the points which were pressed by the judgment debtor before the learned Judge and before us.

(4) The appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

B/H.G.P.

Appeal dismissed.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 214 (Vol. 40, C. N. 76)

BASHEER AHMED SAYEED J.

C. P. Kunhambu Nair, Petitioner v. Kunnuntara Vadakka Veetil Ambu and others, Respondents.

Civil Revn. Petn. No. 2167 of 1951, D/- 17-7-1952.

(a) Madras Hindu Religious Endowments Act (19 of 1951), S. 103(j) — Does not deal with forum.

All that seems to have been intended and aimed at by the provision of S. 103(j) is only the substitution of the authority which is to continue the proceedings. It does not have any reference to the "forum" before which these proceedings have to be continued. (Para 2)

(b) Interpretation of statutes — Court will not fill in lacuna when language is clear.

When there is a specific language available, the language alone has to be construed and understood and in interpreting and construing the language it is not for the Court to make up the lacuna that might have occurred in the process of enacting any legislation. Court is not concerned with any possible intention behind it which is not expressed. Filling up of any omission or making up any lacuna is the business of legislation. (Para 3)

(c) Madras Hindu Religious Endowments Act (19 of 1951), S. 103(j), Explanation and S. 6(6)(i) — Proceedings under old Act, 2 of 1927 pending in mofussil in District Court — Coming into force of the new Act of 1951 — Proceedings are automatically transferred to sub Court — All that the District Court has to do is the physical act of transferring the papers with the petition to the Sub-Court. (Para 6)

(d) Madras Hindu Religious Endowments Act (19 of 1951), S. 106 — Scope.

S. 106 appears to be intended only to remove difficulties in the administration of the Act in matters other than the strict interpretation of the provisions of the Act and their applicability. It does not help a person to seek help from Govt. in interpreting Act according to intended intention of the legislature. (Para 6)

(e) Madras Hindu Religious Endowments Act (19 of 1951), S. 106 — Whether offends against rule of delegated legislature. (Quaere). (Para 6)

(f) Madras Religious Endowments Act (19 of 1951), S. 103(k) — Does not refer to forum. (Para 6)

M. K. Nambiar, for Petitioner; A. Achuthan Nambiar, for Respondents.

ORDER: Mr. M. K. Nambiar appearing for the petitioner is seeking to revise the order of the learned District Judge of South Kanara whereby he declared that the pending proceedings in O. P. No. 26 of 1951 stood automatically transferred to the appropriate court or authority and that they should be deemed to be pending before that court or authority by virtue of S. 103(j) and (k) of Act 19 of 1951, the New Hindu Religious Endowments Act.

(2) O. P. No. 26 of 1951 was originally filed under S. 84(2), Hindu Religious Endowments Act, 2 of 1927 praying that the District Court might set aside the order of the Hindu Religious Endowments Board that the Vishnu-moorthi temple of Cheemani village, Kasargod taluk was a private temple within the meaning of the Hindu Religious Endowments Act. When this petition was pending before the learned District Judge of South Kanara, the old Act was re-enacted as Act No. 19 of 1951. In the old Act, S. 9(3) defined court as meaning the District court. Under the new Act, which came into operation on the 29th September 1951, by a notification, S. 6(1) and (2) defined the court as the City Civil Court instead of the High Court and as sub-court instead of the District Court. The effect of this enactment is that instead of the District court, as in the previous Act, the Sub-Court became substituted for purpose of filing applications to set aside orders passed by the Hindu Religious Endowments Board. Similarly, instead of the High Court for purposes of proceedings within the City of Madras, the City Civil Court was substituted. Similarly under S. 103(j) instead of the Board the authority by or against whom any proceedings could be instituted in the court became the Commissioner of Religious Endowments instead of the Hindu Religious Endowments Board, as was the case under the old Act. The Explanation to S. 103(j) of the new Act provides for the continuation of the proceedings so far as the High Court was concerned. Instead of the pending proceedings being continued in the High Court this provision states that they should be continued in the City Civil Court. Therefore, while there is a specific provision that proceedings now pending before the High Court should be continued in the City Civil Court, there is no corresponding provision in the new Act governing pending proceedings in the mofussil courts, apart from the substitution of the Sub-court for the District Court, provided for by S. 6(6) (i).

(3) Mr. Nambiar contends that in the absence of a specific provision on similar lines as the one contained in the Explanation to S. 103(j), pending proceedings in the District Court cannot be transferred or cannot be deemed to have been automatically transferred to the Sub Court. There is no provision, according to him, in the whole of the new Act which authorises the District Judge to transfer these proceedings to the Sub-court. Simply because the District court had been specifically mentioned in the old Act, and in its place the Sub court has been specifically mentioned the general law, namely, the Civil Procedure Code also would not entitle the District court to transfer such proceedings to the Sub-court. The provision in the new Act 19 of 1951 which has been relied upon by the learned District Judge, namely, S. 103(j), only refers to the "continuation" of the pending proceedings by the "concerned authority". It states that instead of the Board, as was the case previously, under this Act, it should be the Commissioner. The learned counsel for the respondents seeking to support the interpretation put upon this provision by the learned District Judge would seek to import into the meaning of this provision that the continuation by the Commissioner in place of the Board also would mean continuation in the new court that has been substituted for the old court.

A reading of the language of this sub-clause (j) of S. 103, in my opinion, does not warrant this extension of the meaning sought to be given to it by the learned District Judge or the learned counsel for the respondent in this court. That section has reference only to suits, applications or proceedings taken by or on behalf of or against the Board under the provisions of the said Act and pending at the commencement of that Act and provides that they may be continued by or on behalf of or against the Commissioner subject to the provisions and in so far as they are not inconsistent with this Act. All that seems to have been intended and aimed at by this provision is only the substitution of the authority which is to continue the proceedings and that has been made the commissioner instead of the Board. It does not have any reference to the "forum" before which those proceedings have to be continued. It might be that it might have been the intention of the framers of this Act that the forum also would become substituted by this provision whereby it is provided that the pending proceedings shall be continued by the Commissioner instead of by the Board. But actual language used does not warrant any such interpretation so far as I could see. That intention does not appear to have been carried into effect by the language used.

The learned counsel for the respondent would seek to emphasise upon the words "subject to the provisions of and in so far as they are not inconsistent with this Act", to mean that the forum in which the continuation should take place also gets automatically substituted according to the new definition provided in this court. I do not think that I can agree to this interpretation as I think it will be straining far too much the language of this sub-clause (j) of S. 103 of the Act. As a matter of fact, while the explanation to S. 103 (j) provides that "all suits, and applications under the said Act in the High Court in respect of religious institutions within the presidency town and pending on the date of the commencement of this Act, which would have been instituted in the Madras City Civil Court if this Act had been in force at the time when such suit or applications were instituted shall be continued in, and disposed of by the High Court, no such provision has been made in regard to the pending proceedings in the courts in the mofussil outside the presidency town the effect being that pending proceedings will have to be dealt with by the District court only. This seems to be an obvious omission on the part of the legislature and it is not for this court to go into the reasons or causes for such omission. When there is a specific language available, the language alone has to be construed and understood and in interpreting and construing the language it is not for the court to make up the lacuna that might have occurred in the process of enacting any legislation. This court is concerned only with express language found in any provision and not with any possible intention behind it which is not expressed. Filling up of any omission or making up any lacuna is the business of legislation and it is not open to the court to go outside the strict language that is found in the provision that it is called upon to interpretate and apply.

(4) Mr. Nambiar has invited my attention to certain provisions in certain other Acts which have been made for the purpose of meeting situations of a similar kind. For instance in the Act passed by the Dominion Legislature to provide for the enlargement of the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal court in civil cases, namely, Act 1 of 1948, in order to meet a similar situation in respect of pending proceedings before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council the Legislature thought it fit to enact S. 5 specifically so as to provide for the transference of pending proceedings from the Privy Council to the Federal court. There the section is to the following effect:

"Every application to His Majesty in Council for special leave to appeal from a judgment to which this Act applies remaining undisposed of immediately before the appointed day shall on that day stand transferred to the Federal court by virtue of this Act, and shall be disposed of by that court as if it had been an application duly made to that court for special leave to appeal from the said judgment."

(5) This illustrates the necessity for a specific provision in situations like the one under consideration to meet the need for continuing pending proceedings in one court by their transference to another court. Even so, in an Act passed by the Parliament of India, viz., Act 33 of 1950, to provide for the extension of certain opium and revenue laws to certain parts of India, there is found a specific section, viz., S. 3(a) setting forth modifications of state laws, relating to Income-tax investigation, in order to bring within the scope of the Investigation Commission appointed by the Central Government investigation proceedings pending in Part B State and it is in the following terms:

"If immediately before the commencement of this Act there is no force in any Part B State other than Jammu and Kashmir any law (hereinafter in this section referred to as 'the State law') corresponding to the Taxation on Income (Investigation Commission) Act, 1947 (Act XXX of 1947) that law shall continue to remain in force with the following modifications, namely, (a) all cases referred to or pending before the State Commission (by whatever name called) in respect of matter relating to taxation on income other than agricultural income shall stand transferred to the Central Commission for disposal."

This again illustrates the necessity felt by the legislature to introduce specific provision for the transfer of pending proceedings from one court to another when the forum gets altered by means of a new enactment. That no such thing has been done in the new Act 19 of 1951 only goes to show that it is an omission which has gone unnoticed by the legislative body which was responsible for the enactment.

(6) Mr. Achuthan Nambiar appearing for the respondent contends that the remedy for the aggrieved party in cases like this is provided by the provision in S. 106 of the new Act, which is to the effect that "if any difficulty arises in giving effect to the provisions of this Act, the Government may, as occasion may require by order, do anything, which appears to them necessary for the purpose of removing the difficulty."

He would suggest that the aggrieved party, namely, Mr. Nambiar's client, should approach the Government and get his grievances redressed. I do not think there is any force in this argument. That section is not intended for the purpose for which Mr. Achuthan Nambiar thinks it may be available. That section, in my view, appears to be intended only to remove difficulties in the administration of the Act in matters other than the strict interpretation of the provisions of the Act and their applicability. It is first of all very doubtful whether a provision of this kind does not offend against the doctrine of delegated legislation. But it is not necessary for me to go into that question as it does not arise and it is not relevant to the issue before me. However I do not think I can agree with the contention of the learned counsel for the respondent that this section gives the remedy to the aggrieved party in the present case. Even S. 103 (k) which only refers to any remedy by way of application, suit, or appeal which is provided by this Act which was available in respect of proceedings under old Act pending at the commencement of the new Act, and provides that such remedies should still be available as if the proceedings in respect of which the remedy is sought had been instituted under this Act. This again has no reference to the forum in which the remedy could be sought. It only applies to the remedy which was available under the old Act and which is being preserved under the new Act.

Therefore in the view I have taken of the meaning and import of S. 103 (j) and explanation thereof, I do not think I can agree with the construction put upon this by the learned District Judge. In my view it cannot be said by reason of sub-clause (j) and the Explanation to it, that S. 103 lays down that the pending proceedings stand automatically transferred to the new forum contemplated by the new Act, namely, the Sub Court, and that all that the District Judge is called upon to do is to resort to the physical act of transferring the papers concerned with the petition now pending. If that was really the intention of the legislature, then it should have been made clear even as the provisions in the Indian Independence Act of 1947, namely, S. 15 has made it clear that all actions pending against the Secretary of State at the time when the Indian Independence Act was passed were to be dealt with by the High Commissioner for India in Britain.

In such circumstances it is difficult to make good the omission by an interpretation of S. 103 (j) or the Explanation thereof and consequently this revision petition has to be allowed. I make no order as to costs.

B/R.G.D.

Order accordingly.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 217 (Vol. 40, C. N. 77)

GOVINDA MENON AND MACK JJ.

The Dominion of India formerly the Governor General in Council, New Delhi, represented by the General Manager of the South Indian Railway, having its head office at Tiruchirapalli, Appellant v. Adam Haji Pir Muhamed Essac represented by his duly authorised agent Sulaiman Abdulla, Respondent.

Appeal No. 6 of 1948, D/- 31-7-1952.

(a) Railways Act (1890), S. 80 — Form of suit — Goods consigned at Cawnpore station on G. I. P. Rly. for Cuddalore station on South Indian Railway — Deterioration and damage of goods at Cuddalore Station as a result of negligence amounting to misconduct committed on South Indian Railway — Suit for compensation under S. 80 against South Indian Railway — South Indian Railway and not G. I. P. Railway held was prima facie liable for compensation and suit was therefore properly instituted: 29 All 228 (FB), 71 MLJ 325, Disting. (Para 4)

Anno: Railways Act, S. 80 N. 1.

(b) Railways Act (1890), S. 56 (2) — Auction Sale of unclaimed goods — Obligation of consignor — (Contract Act, S. 160).

There is nothing in the bailment sections of the Contract Act, which lay down any obligation on the bailor to take delivery from the bailee when he offers it, nor is there any decision, which lays down any such hard and fast rule. Normally as property in the goods entrusted to a carrier remains with the owner, he is bound to take delivery even if they are damaged, his remedy being to claim compensation, nor can he cast upon the bailee responsibility for further custody as bailee without payment of storage or demurrage dues. Each case has to be considered on its own facts and no hard and fast rule can be laid down.

Held on facts, that despite the refusal of the railway company to give delivery when the plaintiff's representative demanded it and all the bags in the Cuddalore godshed, there was nevertheless a duty cast on the plaintiff to have taken delivery of the goods, though damaged when delivery was offered in accordance with the very fair and reasonable term offered by the railway company. (Para 7)

There was therefore no justification for disallowing the freight and demurrage charges to the Railway Company from the claim for compensation against it: AIR 1926 Lah 512; AIR 1926 Lah 575, Explained. (Para 8)

Anno: Railways Act, S. 56 N. 1; Contract Act, S. 160 N. 1.

S. S. Ramachandra Iyer, for Appellant; G. Ramakrishna Iyer, for Respondent.

MACK J.: Appellant is the South Indian Railway impleaded in the suit filed in 1945 as the Governor General in Council, New Delhi, represented by the General Manager. There has been much evolutionary change since, with all the Railways in the Union nationalised and today the appellant is the Dominion of India. The original plaintiff was Adam Haji Pir Muhammad Esack and he too is now represented by the Custodian of Evacuee Property. He will however, be referred to in this judgment for convenience as the plaintiff. He sued to recover Rs. 5600 from the South Indian Railway in respect of a consignment of 200 bags of Bengal gram, which were booked at Cawnpore on the G. I. P. Railway on 1-11-1944 to Cuddalore on the South Indian Railway. The learned Subordinate Judge decreed his suit in full.

(2) The relevant facts are these: Plaintiff, a wholesale dealer in grains, groceries and so on had business ramifications throughout what was then British India. He had a branch at Cawnpore and another at Cuddalore. The 200 bags of Bengal gram were, according to invoice No. 6 of 1944 Ex. P. 1, dated 1-11-1944, consigned in the name of someone by name R. F. C. to one M. Bagavandas. Subsequent to the consignment, Bagavandas endorsed Ex. P. 1 to the plaintiff, who appears to have purchased it after it was consigned for transit. It is common ground that the bags arrived at Arkonam in a full sealed wagon on the broad gauge railway and were there transhipped into two meter gauge wagons M. C. 413 and M. C. 60 each containing 100 bags. These two wagons with seal cards with No. "8" on them instead of the correct invoice No. 6 reached Cuddalore on 16-11-1944. It is common ground that the invoices were prepared in triplicate and that one copy had to be carried by the guard. The copy, which should have been in the guard's possession, was not forthcoming and had got mislaid somewhere. The result was that when plaintiff's agent at Cuddalore (P. W. 1) went to the goods station and asked for delivery on 17-11-1944 on the strength of Ex. P. 1, the Goods Station Master, D. W. 3 declined to deliver without instructions, for which he wired. His main difficulty appears to have been that the seal cards on the wagons showed invoice No. 8 and as the guard was unable to produce the copy of the invoice, which should have been in his possession, he was not sure whether these bags related to Ex. P. 1. On 23-11-1944, an Inspector (D. W. 1) was sent to Cuddalore and he opened the wagons to see if the bags had marks. He found no identifying marks and further more that the seal card did not show the date of the invoice. The bags were unloaded on 13-12-1944 from the wagons and stacked in a covered shed. Despite the South Indian Railway writing to the G. I. P. Railway that there was only one person claiming under invoice No. 6, it was not till 24-1-1945 that the G. I. P. Railway authorised delivery. The station master, Cuddalore, then sent word to the plaintiff's branch there to take delivery. They declined. Registered notices, (see Ex. D. 31 dated 30-1-1945) were sent both to the plaintiff and to Bagavandas calling upon them to take delivery in the following terms:

"Legally you cannot refuse delivery of a consignment or part thereof in whatever condition it may be available for delivery. The railway is prepared to allow delivery on remarks for actual condition and weight. The consignment is lying undelivered solely at your risk according wharfage. The delay in delivery is due to you and the railway is not responsible."

Plaintiff replied by letter Ex. D. 33 dated 4-2-1945 declining to take delivery on various grounds, that the goods had become deteriorated and damaged while lying in a state of exposure in the goods shed, and that after the arrival of the goods at Cuddalore, there had been a fall in price of Rs. 8 a bag. At the same time, this letter appreciated the fairness of the railway offer of delivery with remarks on actual condition and weight, meaning that the plaintiff would be compensated for loss sustained by them. It was not till 29-5-45 that the railway company sold the 200 bags in public auction for Rs. 3625 under S. 56(2) of the Railways Act. The delay is satisfactorily explained as grain being a controlled commodity, the collector's permission had to be obtained for sale. Deducting freight of Rs. 432 and demurrage of Rs. 1052, there was a balance of Rs. 2140-9-8 available to the plaintiff, who however sued to recover the full value of the grain according to the invoice.

(3) The first point taken by Mr. Ramachandra Aiyar for the appellant is that the suit against the South Indian Railway is not maintainable and that the plaintiff should have sued the contracting railway, i.e., the G. I. P. Railway. He relied on — 'Chunnilal v. Nizam's Guaranteed State Railway Co.', 29 All. 228 a Full Bench decision of the Allahabad High Court followed by King J. in — 'South Indian Railway v. Krishnaswami Naidu', 71 M. L. J. 325. The facts of those cases were quite different and they were held to be not covered by S. 80, Railways Act, which enables a suit for compensation for injury to through booked traffic being brought either against the contracting railway administration or against the railway on which loss, injury, destruction or deterioration occurred. In the present case, there is clear and ample evidence to show that the deterioration occurred at Cuddalore, where the goods arrived in good time on 16-11-44. In two letters Ex. D. 21 dated 17-1-45 and Ex. D. 25 dated 25-1-45 written by railway officials 'inter se', there is a clear reference to the deterioration of these bags, and a request for instructions by wire if delivery can be made to invoice No. 6. Quite apart from this positive evidence of deterioration, the main grievance of the plaintiff is that although these bags arrived in Cuddalore on 16-11-1944, his representative was refused delivery and delivery was only offered more than 2 months later not only after the bags had deteriorated, but also after there had been a substantial fall in price. There can be no doubt that there was a muddle and a mistake arising out of negligence, amounting to misconduct on the part of the railway servants, which resulted in the delivery of these bags being refused to the plaintiff immediately after their arrival.

(4) We have looked into the original invoice Ex. P. 1 and find there invoice No. 6 and also the digit 8 in the column for the descriptive marks on the consignment. This doubtless accounted for the mistake in the seal cards on which No. 8 appeared. Mr. Ramachandra Aiyar, while conceding the mistakes committed on the railway, has pleaded that the South Indian Railway did everything possible to put matters right, and has gone to the length of suggesting that plaintiff's representative at Cuddalore could easily have written to the plaintiff at Cawnpore to put matters right with the consigning railway there. We have no hesitation in finding in the first place that there was deterioration and damage at Cuddalore, as a result of negligence amounting to misconduct committed on the South Indian Railway and that this being the case, the suit has been properly instituted under S. 80, Railways Act, against the South Indian Railway.

(5) The South Indian Railway will, therefore, be prima facie liable for compensation as a result of such misconduct. It is next urged by Ramachandra Aiyar that the consignor was also guilty of negligence in not putting identifying marks on these bags. It is urged that, had this been done, it would have enabled the Inspector who opened the wagons on 23-11-1944 to give delivery. As regards this, negligence was shared between the consignor and the railway company, who should have seen that the bags were marked with the identifying marks noted in the invoice before final acceptance. We do not think that the absence of identifying marks on the bags had really anything to do with the refusal to deliver these bags to the plaintiff, one which was the direct cause of other negligent mistakes of both the railway companies.

(6) It is finally urged that the plaintiff was at fault in not taking delivery of the bags towards the end of January when after considerable delay, the G. I. P. Railway authorised the South Indian Railway to deliver. There appears to us some substance in this contention. Reliance has been placed on — 'East Indian Railway Co. v. Behari Lal', AIR 1926 Lah. 512 and — 'Secretary of State for India v. Firm Harikrishna Das', AIR 1926 Lah. 575 two Bench decisions of the Lahore High Court. In both these cases, it was held that a consignee is bound to take delivery of goods even if they are damaged, his remedy being to claim compensation. In the first case, a consignment of 200 bags of atta despatched from Delhi reached its destination after about four and a half months in 1920. There was no evidence as regards the condition of the atta on arrival and no damage being established, the plaintiff was held entitled only to the auction-realisation less auctioneer's commission and certain freight charges, restoring the trial court decree and reversing the decision of the District Judge in appeal that the consignee in the circumstances were not bound to take delivery. In the second case, — 'Secretary of State for India v. Krishnadas', AIR 1926 Lah. 575, 172 bags of atta arrived at its destination on the railway on 3rd July 1920 but the plaintiff consignee did not claim them till 10th July and refused delivery on the ground that the atta had been damaged by rain, which had fallen that very day. Here too the trial court gave the plaintiff a decree for the price realised by the auction held on the 1st of December 1920 under S. 56(2), Railways Act, less the demurrage. The District Judge allowed the plaintiff's claim for the value of the goods minus freight and demurrage only after 10th July. Here too, the trial court decree was restored.

(7) We are unable to regard these decisions as authority for the position that in all cases in which a consignor refuses to take delivery, he can only recover what the goods fetch in auction less freight and demurrage. There is nothing in the bailment sections of the Contract Act, which lay down any obligation on the bailor to take delivery from the bailee when he offers it, nor is there any decision, which lays down any such hard and fast rule. Normally as property in the goods entrusted to a carrier remains with the owner, he is bound to take delivery even if they are damaged, his remedy being to claim compensation, nor can he cast upon the bailee responsibility for further custody as bailee without payment of storage or demurrage dues. Each case has to be considered on its own facts and no hard and fast rule can be laid down. On the facts of the present case, we are satisfied that despite the refusal of the railway company to give delivery on 17-11-1944 when the plaintiff's representative demanded it and all these bags were in the Cuddalore goods shed, there was nevertheless a duty cast on the plaintiff to have taken delivery of the goods, though damaged when delivery was offered on 24-1-1945 in accordance with the very fair and reasonable terms offered by the railway company in their letter, Ex. D. 31. The legal position in the extract from this letter supra is, in our opinion, correct though it does not necessarily follow in all cases that a consignor refusing to take delivery is precluded from filing his suit for compensation and can only receive what the goods fetch in auction when sold under S. 56(2) of the Railways Act. In the present case, there can be no doubt that by 24-1-1945 the price of Bengal gram had fallen by Rs. 8 a bag and further more that there was deterioration due to exposure while the bags were unnecessarily detained in the Cuddalore goods shed in consequence of the negligence of the railway companies for a period of more than two months.

(8) We are unable to uphold the lower court's decree in full for Rs. 5600 with full costs. There is no justification for disallowing the freight, and in view of the plaintiff's wrongful refusal to take delivery when ultimately offered on 24-1-1945, he must also pay demurrage charges of Rs. 1052. Plaintiff will accordingly have a modified decree for Rs. 4116 against the railway company with half costs throughout, and interest at six per cent from date of lower court's decree.

B/H.G.P.

Decree modified.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 219 (Vol. 40, C. N. 78)
RAMASWAMI J.

In re Nallamothe Chimpireyya and others, Petitioners.

Criminal Revn. Case No. 553 of 1952 and Criminal Revn. Petn. No. 450 of 1952, D/- 11-7-1952.

Madras Hindu Religious and Charitable Endowments Act (19 of 1951), Ss. 62 and 87 — Civil suit under S. 62 — Power of Civil Court to restrain by injunction proceedings under S. 87 — Jurisdiction of magistrate to pass order under S. 87 during pendency of suit — Interference in revision — (Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 439).

When the Assistant Commissioner appoints a new trustee and orders delivery of possession of the trust property to that trustee a party aggrieved by the order is entitled under S. 62 to file a civil suit. But the Civil Court which has jurisdiction to modify or cancel the order has no power to stay the order pending the disposal of the suit. (Para 5)

The pendency of the Civil suit will not affect the jurisdiction of the magistrate under S. 87 to enquire into the matter of putting the new trustee in possession of the property of the trust. The magistrate, apart from S. 62, is not a subordinate of the Civil Court and the proceedings before him cannot be stayed by the Civil Court.

(Para 5)

Where there is valid appointment of a trustee by the Assistant Commissioner and a certificate in the prescribed form has been issued by him and the magistrate pronounces an order in conformity with the provisions of the Criminal P. C. stating the point for decision, the decisions and reasons therefor, after holding an enquiry within the four corners of S. 87, Madras Religious and Charitable Endowments Act, the High Court will refuse to interfere in revision. (Para 5)

Anno: Cr. P. C., S. 439 N. 1.

M. Ramakrishna Rao, for Neti Subramaniam and J. V. Krishna Sarma, for Petitioners.

ORDER: This is a criminal revision case which is sought to be filed against the order made by the learned Joint Magistrate of Ongole under S. 87, Madras Hindu Religious and Charitable Endowments Act, 19 of 1951.

(2) The short facts are: Koneri Veerayya was appointed as Trustee of the Chennakeswaraswami temple in Kothakote village in Ongole taluk by the Assistant Commissioner for Hindu Religious Endowments, Guntur district, on 9-6-1948. The respondents before the Joint Magistrate, Ongole, who are petitioners before me are the ex-trustees of the temple. In this case, a certificate has been issued as contemplated under S. 87 of the new Act in the prescribed form setting forth certain properties belonging to the religious institution and directing delivery of possession to the person appointed as aforesaid of such properties etc. The ex-trustees have been obstructing and preventing the trustee lawfully appointed by the Assistant Commissioner from taking possession of the properties mentioned in the certificate. Therefore, the petition had been filed under S. 87 of the new Act for necessary action. The learned Joint Magistrate of Ongole directed the respondents before him, viz., the petitioners before me to deliver possession of the properties to the respondent-trustee before me. Thereupon this revision case has been filed.

(3) I may point out here that the petitioners' case is that a suit has been filed in the Sub-Court, Ongole, under S. 62 of the present Act and that he has obtained an order on 11-3-1952 restraining the respondents from taking possession of the lands pending disposal of that suit. This contention was overruled by the learned Joint Magistrate and this is reiterated here as the only point of substance before me for admitting this revision case.

(4) The contentions of the petitioners before me are as follows: That the learned Joint Magistrate should have held that he had no jurisdiction to direct delivery of possession of the properties when a civil suit was pending in respect of the same subject matter; that the learned Joint Magistrate should have seen that the power under S. 87 exercised by the Subordinate Judge (sic) — probably Joint Magistrate — is subject to the filing of the suit by the aggrieved party and that when the suit is pending in respect of the same matter there is no jurisdiction for him; that the Joint Magistrate should have held that in view of the order of temporary injunction issued by the Subordinate Judge he had no power to direct delivery of possession of the properties; that the Joint Magistrate should have held that in matters pending before the civil court long prior to Act 19 of 1951 came into force he cannot affect matters which have been started long before the Act came into operation; and that the Joint Magistrate, Ongole, erred in finding that the Assistant Commissioner's order corresponds to the order of the Commissioner under the new Act in respect of the appointment of the first respondent as trustee.

(5) These objections singly or cumulatively are devoid of any substance and here are my reasons. The first contention about jurisdiction is meaningless because the First Class Magistrate is vested with jurisdiction to enquire into the matter of putting the trustee or executive officer in possession and the pendency of a civil suit will not in any way affect his jurisdiction. In fact S. 62 of the new Act clearly lays down that an aggrieved party can file a suit; but the civil court while vested with the jurisdiction to modify or cancel such order shall have no power to stay the Commissioner's order pending the disposal of the suit. This is precisely what is sought to be done here. S. 62 is an answer to the second and third points raised by the petitioners. In fact it is overlooked that apart from S. 62, the Joint Magistrate, Ongole, is not the subordinate of the learned Subordinate Judge of Ongole and an injunction cannot be granted to stay proceedings in a court not subordinate to that from which an injunction is sought and to stay proceedings in any criminal matter. Incidentally the penultimate point taken is not correct because as a matter of fact the suit filed by the petitioners before us was under the new Act, though it might have been started under the old Act. The last point is equally devoid of substance because of the transitory provisions provided for in the new Act. This revision petition is nothing more than a device to protract proceedings and to defeat the very object of the new Act.

In this connection we may briefly allude to the statement of objects and reasons when S. 78 of the old Act was substituted for the previous S. 78 by Act 4 of 1930. It was stated:

"It is notorious that trustees dismissed by Committees under Act 20 of 1863 have in several instances refused to hand over possession to the persons newly appointed and have defied the committees by remaining in possession pending the end of protracted litigation started by them. This clause is intended to end the scandal."

But unfortunately for the framers of this new section, for reasons with which we are not concerned here, the praiseworthy object was defeated. Therefore, when the new Act 19 of 1951 was framed a more summary and expeditious method of putting trustees appointed under the Act in possession was adopted, viz., clothing the Magistrate of the area with jurisdiction and interdict civil courts from interfering by means of injunctions and bringing to a standstill the orders of the Commissioner.

These provisions are now sought to be undermined by the type-design contentions as advanced above and they merit no encouragement at our hands. On the other hand, so far as our criminal revisional jurisdiction is concerned, all that we have to consider is the legality and propriety of the order made by the lower courts and once it is found that a trustee has been lawfully appointed by the Assistant Commissioner and that a certificate in the prescribed form has been issued and that a fair and proper enquiry has been held by the Magistrate within the four corners of S. 87 and that an order in conformity with the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code is pronounced, viz., stating the point for decision, the decision and the reasons for the decision, the High Court will not interfere in revision leaving it to the party to canvass his grievance in the suit prescribed by the new Act and obey the order of the Magistrate and in the event of his succeeding in the suit take back delivery of possession because in this case it can never be said that a restitution will be impossible.

(6) There are no grounds whatsoever to interfere with the order of the lower court and this criminal revision case is dismissed. (Leave refused).

B/M.K.S.

Petition dismissed.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 220 (Vol. 40, C. N. 79)
CHANDRA REDDI J.

Kamarusu Kasi Viswanadhan and another, Appellants v. Rudra Viranna, Respondent.

Second Appeal No. 2175 of 1948, D/- 8-7-1952.

Civil P. C. (1908), S. 92 — Village fund — Suit for accounts — S. 92 held applied.

The fund was to be utilised only for purposes connected with the village, but the purposes had to be determined by a majority of the members of the village community. Whatever might be the purpose for which it might be utilised, as a result of the decision of the majority of the villagers it must be for the benefit of the village community as a whole. The fund was meant for being utilised for the amenities of the villagers and not for the benefit of any individual or a particular group of persons. The plaint in a suit by some of the residents in the village for accounts against the defendants entrusted with the fund made out a case of a trust created for the public purpose of a charitable nature:

Held that the allegations came within the mischief of S. 92 and the provisions of the section should be complied with: 1946-2 MLJ 17 Relied on. (Paras 8, 9)

Anno: Civil P. C., S. 92 N. 2, 5.

V. Parthasarathy, for Appellants; D. Narasimharaju and K. B. Krishnamurthy, for Respondent.

JUDGMENT: The plaintiffs are the appellants. They filed the suit out of which this second appeal arises on behalf of all persons interested in a fund said to be a common fund of the village for directing the defendant to render an account of the amounts entrusted to him. The allegations, material for the purpose of this enquiry, are as follows:

(2) The plaintiffs and defendant are residents of the village named Duvva. It has been the practice in the village to have a common fund of the village for the use and convenience of the villagers and to keep the same in the custody of somebody in the village selected by a majority of the villagers assembled and to use the fund for such purpose as might be determined by the majority. All the villagers have equal rights to the said common village fund. All the villagers have got a right to demand in what manner and to what extent the said amount is being utilised. The person in charge of the fund is bound to render an account for the use made of it.

(3) Again in paragraph 5, it is alleged that this fund was kept with the defendant for the common purpose of the community.

(4) One of the defences to the suit was that S. 92, Civil P. C. was a bar. The courts below dismissed the suit upholding this defence as the procedure prescribed in S. 92, Civil P. C. has not been followed. The plaintiffs who are aggrieved by this decision have preferred this second appeal.

(5) In support of this appeal Mr. Parthasarathi contended that inasmuch as the purposes for which the common fund should be utilised had to be determined by the villagers and that was not so done, it could not be said that the fund was impressed with the trust of a public charitable nature and would not therefore fall under S. 92, C. P. C. I do not think I can give effect to this contention. In Halsbury's Laws of England, 2nd Edn., Hailsham Edn., Vol. 4, at page 109 "Charity" is described as follows:

"Charity in its legal sense comprises four principal divisions: trusts for the relief of poverty, trusts for the advancement of education, trusts for the advancement of religion, and trusts for other purposes beneficial to the community not falling under any of the preceding heads. Within one of these divisions all charity to be administered by the court must fall, though every object which might be brought within one of them is not necessarily a charity, for, it must, further, be of a public nature and capable of administration by the court."

(6) At page 126 the learned author says in paragraph 167:

"The benefit of a charitable trust of this class need not extend to the whole community, provided that the class to be benefited is substantial enough to give the trust a public character."

It is pointed out by the author in paragraph 168 that in deciding whether a particular gift is charitable as being beneficial to the community, the main point to be considered is the purpose to which it would be put.

(7) In Mayne on Hindu Law and Usage, after extracting the passage in paragraph 145 of Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol. 4, the learned author says:

"The Courts in India have, in relation to Hindu Wills and gifts adopted the technical meaning of charitable trusts and charitable purposes which the courts in England have placed upon the term 'charity' in the statute of Elizabeth. All purposes which are charitable according to English law will be charitable under Hindu law. But, in addition, under the head of advancement of religion, there are other charitable objects in Hindu law which will not be charitable according to English law."

(8) This passage is quoted with approval by the Federal Court in — 'Manikasundara Bhattar v. R. S. Nayudu', 1946-2 MLJ 17. It was observed by the learned Judges:

"In our judgment therefore the word 'charities' is an appropriate generic term of wide scope and meaning apt to include all public, secular, charitable and religious trusts and institutions recognised as such by British Indian law."

It is clear from what has been cited above that any purpose connected with a village community is a public purpose of a charitable nature falling under S. 92, C. P. C. whatever might be the nature of that purpose. On the allegations in the plaint it is clear that the fund is to be utilised only for purposes connected with the village, but that the purposes have to be determined by a majority of the members of the village community. According to the plaint whatever might be the purpose for which it might be utilised, as a result of the decision of the majority of the villagers it must be for the benefit of the village community as a whole. It is specifically stated that the fund is meant for being utilised for the amenities of the villagers. It is not the case of the plaintiffs that the fund is to be distributed amongst all the villagers or that it is for the benefit of any individual or a particular group of persons. The allegations in the plaint make out a case of a trust created for the public purpose of a charitable nature. There can therefore be no doubt that these allegations come within the mischief of S. 92, C. P. C. (See decision of the learned Chief Justice and Somasundaram J. reported in — 'Abdul Razack Sahib v. Abdul Hamid Sait', 1950-2 MLJ 282).

(9) What emerges from this discussion is that if the fund is for the use of the villagers, that is for purposes connected with the village community, as a whole or with a substantial part of the village community, whatever may be the nature of the purpose to which it might be utilised, the trust must be said to be one of a public charitable nature. In my opinion the allegations in the plaint and the prayers asked for will certainly bring the case within the ambit of S. 92, C. P. C. Therefore in agreement with the courts below I hold that this case falls under S. 92, C. P. C. and the provisions of that section should have been complied with. In these circumstances, I must uphold the decision of the courts below and dismiss this second appeal with costs. (Leave to appeal is refused).

B/R.G.D.

Appeal dismissed.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 221 (Vol. 40, C. N. 80)

SATYANARAYANA RAO AND RAJA-GOPALAN JJ.

C. S. Hajee Mohamed Ibrahim and Co., Applicant v. Commissioner of Excess Profits Tax, Respondent.

Refd. Case No. 38 of 1950, D/- 7-4-1952.

(a) Excess Profits Tax Act (1940), S. 10A — Burden of proving that transaction came within S. 10A — (Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101 to 103).

The burden of establishing that the transaction in question is within the mischief of S. 10A is undoubtedly on the department and it is for them to establish by cogent and convincing evidence that there were circumstances which point to the conclusion that the main purpose of the transaction was to avoid or reduce the liability to excess profits tax. It is not enough for the department in order to discharge the onus on them to establish merely that the transaction was one which came into existence after the Act came into force. There should be additional circumstance or circumstances which would point to the conclusion that the object with which the parties entered into the transaction and the main object was to avoid the tax or to get it reduced. R. C. No. 64 of 1946 Foll. 18 ITR 988, 29 TC 289 Rel. on. (Para 4)

Anno: E. P. T. Act, S. 10A N. 1; Evidence Act, Ss. 101 to 103 N. 1, 6, 8.

(b) Excess Profits Tax Act (1940), S. 10A — Purpose of transaction being avoidance of reduction of liability to excess profits.

It is the right of every individual to enter into a partnership, to get it dissolved and to constitute new partnership and merely because the partnership happened to be dissolved and the new partnerships were brought into existence at a time when the Excess Profits Tax Act was in force, from that circumstance itself it cannot be inferred that the motive and object of the person so acting was to avoid the liability for excess profits tax. (Para 5)

Anno: E. P. T. Act, S. 10A N. 1.

T. M. Krishnaswami Aiyar, for M. Subbaraya Aiyar, for Applicant; C. S. Rama Rao Sahib, for Respondent.

SATYANARAYANA RAO J.: Under S. 66(2) of the Indian Income-tax Act the following question was referred to this court for decision by the Appellate Tribunal, viz.,

"Whether on the facts and circumstances of this case the dissolution of the firm of Hajee Mohammed Ibrahim and Co. in 1941 and the formation of two partnerships each consisting of two of the partners of the old firm at Erode and Salem were entered into with the main purpose of avoiding or reducing liability to excess profits tax."

The question referred to us has to be decided with reference to the language of S. 10-A of the Excess Profits Tax Act. It provides that if the Excess Profits Tax officer is of opinion that the main purpose for which any transaction or transactions was or were effected was the avoidance or reduction of liability to excess profits tax, he may with the previous approval of the Inspecting Assistant Commissioner make such adjustments as respects liability to excess profits tax as he considers appropriate so as to counteract the avoidance or reduction of liability to excess profits tax which would otherwise be effected by the transaction or transactions.

(2) There was originally a firm which carried on business at Erode and Salem under the name and style of C. S. Hajee Ibrahim & Co. Its business consisted of purchase and sale of clothes and fancy goods. It consisted of six partners, (1) C. S. Hajee Muhammad Ibrahim Rowther, (2) C. S. Hajee Abdul Majeed Rowther, (3) P. K. Mohamad Yusuf Rowther, (4) C. K. E. Mohamed Hanifa Rowther, (5) A. C. K. Shaik Abdul Kadir Rowther, and (6) P. K. Mohamed Habib Rowther. Of the six, Mohamed Habib Rowther (No. 6) retired from the partnership on 22-1-1941. By reason of the dissensions between the partners in December 1951 the firm which then consisted of five partners was dissolved under a deed of dissolution of partnership dated 15-12-1941. Out of the five partners, Mohamed Yusuf Rowther was paid his share of the capital and profits in the business after debiting his drawings. It amounted to a sum of Rs. 7415-3-0. The remaining four partners formed themselves into two partnerships of two persons each. Hajee Abdul Hajeed Rowther and Muhamad Hanifa Rowther agreed under a deed of partnership D/- 13-12-1941 to carry on business under the name & style of C. S. Hajee Abdul Majeed & Co. at Salem. On the same day there was another partnership between Hajee Mohamed Ibrahim Rowther & A. C. K. Sheik Abdul Kadir Rowther who under another deed of partnership agreed to carry on business at Erode under the name & style of Hajee Hohamed Ibrahim and Co.

In the deed of dissolution it was provided that the partners who entered into the new partnership to carry on business at Erode should take the assets and liabilities as stated in schedule A attached to the deed of dissolution. This schedule A shows the value of the stock on hand at Erode as well as other assets of the partnership, including the outstandings. Similarly, schedule B shows the assets and liabilities allotted to the new partnership which agreed to carry on business at Salem. Under the new deeds of partnership it was agreed that the capital which has been entered in the personal account of each partner should be treated as the capital of the business and if any further capital is required the partners should contribute individually. The shares of the partners in the Salem partnership were 18 shares of which Hajee Abdul Majeed Rowther had ten shares & Mohamed Hanif Rowther had 8 shares. In the Erode partnership firm the shares were: Hajee Mohamed Ibrahim 32 shares out of 49 and Sheik Abdul Kadir Rowther 17 out of 49. These partnerships commenced to carry on business immediately after the partnerships were brought into existence and in the fourth chargeable accounting period the new firms earned profits of Rs. 32289 in respect of Erode partnership and Rs. 26817 in respect of the Salem Partnership. Before dissolution the net excess profits of the old firm were only Rs. 803.

The Excess Profits Tax Officer issued a notice under S. 10-A on 22nd July 1946 stating that as there was no break between the dissolution of the old firm and the commencement of the business of the new firms he proposed to treat the business carried by the new firms as merely a continuation of the business of the old firm without any break especially when the capital required by the new business was found from the old business and as the two firms carried on the same kind of business as the old firm. This view was finally upheld by the Appellate Tribunal.

(3) The reason given in the deed of dissolution of partnership was that there were dissensions between the partners and therefore the partnership had to be dissolved and new partnerships had to be constituted after one of the five remaining partners agreed to go out of the business by taking the balance of his capital and profits outstanding in the old partnership. In proof of these dissensions and the consequent arbitration by two persons — one of whom subsequently was appointed as District Judge — a statement of one of them Hajee Chellakani Rowther was filed before the Excess Profits Tax Officer. He stated in that statement that as the partners in C. S. Hajee Mohamed Ibrahim and Co. were having quarrels and in order to have a peaceful division of the Erode and Salem firms, they had him and the other gentleman who was an Advocate at Trichi as arbitrators and effected division and that the reason for the division was only dissension among them. The Appellate Tribunal while adverting to this statement thought that that statement by itself did not conclude the matter and that it was duty of the assessee to have examined the other arbitrator who became a District Judge, or, at any rate, they should have obtained an affidavit from him supporting the statement of Chellikani Rowther. In view of this omission they were not inclined to accept the case of arbitration and consequent dissolution of the firm. They further added as reason for their conclusion that there was no fresh capital for the business of the new partnerships and that there was no break in the business either at Erode or at Salem. On these grounds they confirmed the view taken by the revenue authorities.

(4) In our opinion, the Tribunal approached the case from a wrong perspective altogether. As has been decided in this court in 'R. C. No. 64 of 1946' the burden of establishing that the transaction in question is within the mischief of S. 10-A of the Act is undoubtedly on the Department and it is for them to establish by cogent and convincing evidence that there were circumstances which point to the conclusion that the main purpose of the transaction was to avoid or reduce the liability to excess profits tax. This view is also supported by the decision in — 'Gangha Sahai Umrao Sing v. Commissioner of Excess Profits Tax', 18 ITR 988, and in — 'Dixon & Gount Ltd., James Dare Ltd. v. Commissioner of Inland Revenue', 29 TC 289. The department made no effort to place any circumstance to establish that the main purpose of the transaction was to avoid or reduce the tax. All that is urged and which has also been stressed before us by Mr. Rama Rao Sahib, the learned advocate for the Income-tax Commissioner, was the time-factor and the result, meaning thereby that if a transaction was brought into existence after the Excess Profits Tax Act came into force and when it continued to operate and if the result of the transaction was in fact to avoid or reduce the tax, it must be presumed that the transaction was within the mischief of S. 10-A of the Act. This argument if accepted would practically shift the burden of proof in every case to the assessee for the section can only apply to transactions which were brought into existence either after the Act came into force or even before the Act came into force when it was fairly well known that the Act would be passed. It would be impossible to conceive of any cause, applying that test, which would not fall within the purview of the section.

It is not enough, in our opinion, for the department in order to discharge the onus on them to establish merely that the transaction was one which came into existence after the Act came into force. There should be additional circumstance or circumstances which would point to the conclusion that the object with which the parties entered into the transaction and the main object was to avoid the tax or to get it reduced. In the present case the other circumstances point to the contrary conclusion rather than supporting the view of the department. That there were dissensions was recited in the deed of dissolution of partnership and was also proved by the statement of Chellikani Rowther. It is difficult to understand what the Tribunal meant when it said that this statement of Chellakani Rowther did not by itself conclude the matter. If the department thought that this statement was not credible it was up to them to have examined the other arbitrator who is now in judicial service as a District Judge. No effort was made on that behalf. On the other hand, the blame was thrown on the assessee for not examining him or for not even obtaining an affidavit from him. The fact of dissensions and of consequent arbitration, in our opinion, is amply established by the evidence on record.

(5) The objection that there was no fresh capital and that there was no break in the continuity of the business is unfounded. The capital, as stated above, of each of the partnerships was as stated in the deed of dissolution the capital which was credited to the personal account of each of the partners as per the schedules appended to the deed of dissolution. Provision was made for bringing in fresh capital by the individual partners whenever it was needed. As regards the break in the continuity of the business, if an existing partnership is dissolved and one of the partners goes out of the business altogether and the remaining partners split up the business at the two places and constitute two distinct partnerships, though of course to carry on the same kind of business, it would undoubtedly constitute a break in the continuity of the business and it is impossible to agree with the conclusion that there was a continuity of the business of the old partnership by these new partnerships. It is the right of every individual to enter into a partnership, to get it dissolved and to constitute new partnerships and merely because the partnership happened to be dissolved and the new partnerships were brought into existence at a time when the Excess Profits Tax Act was in force, from that circumstance itself it cannot be inferred that the motive and object of the person so acting was to avoid the liability for excess profits tax.

(6) We are therefore of opinion that the question referred to us must be answered in the negative and in favour of the assessee. The assessee has succeeded and is entitled to costs which is fixed at Rs. 250.

B/D.H.

Answer in the negative.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 223 (Vol. 40, C. N. 81)
SATYANARAYANA RAO AND RAJA-
GOPALAN JJ.

R. Venkataswamy Naidu, Peelamedu, Coimbatore, Appellant v. The Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras, Respondent.

Case Ref. No. 30 of 1950, D/- 15-4-1952.

Income-tax Act (1922), S. 2(1) — Agricultural income — Income from sale of milk of cows fed on agricultural lands.

Where the cows are reared on the agricultural lands and are primarily fed on the produce of such lands, the income derived from the sale of their milk is agricultural income. AIR 1938 Rang 260 (FB) and AIR 1950 Mad 566, Rel on. (Para 11)

Anno: Income Tax Act, S. 2 N. 3.

T. M. Krishnaswami Aiyar, for M. Subbaraya Aiyar, for Appellant; C. S. Rama Rao Sahib, for Respondent.

REFERENCES: Courtwise/Chronological/ Paras
 ('38) 1938-6 ITR 502: (AIR 1938 Rang 260 FB)

('50) 1950-18 ITR 259: (AIR 1950 Mad 566) 3, 8

('22) 45 Mad 710: (AIR 1922 Mad 351) 6

(1933) AC 618: (102 LJKB 456) 6

JUDGMENT: The question that has been referred to us under S. 66 (2) of the Indian Income-tax Act runs:

"Whether on the facts and circumstances of the case, the income from the sale of milk received by the assessee during the accounting year is not 'agricultural income' within the meaning of the Income-tax Act."

The accounting year of the assessee ended with 31st March 1946. The assessment year was 1946-47. The assessee, an undivided Hindu family, owned about 70 acres of agricultural land at Perur near Coimbatore. The family also owned 65 cows & 10 pairs of bulls. With reference to the cows the statement of the assessee furnished to the Income-tax Officer was:

"The cows are purely pasture-fed and not stall-fed. It is not being run as a commercial proposition. The cows are maintained purely for manuring and other purposes connected with agriculture and only surplus milk after satisfying assessee's needs is sold to outsiders."

During the year of account, the assessee received about Rs. 28,000 as sale proceeds of milk. The milk was sold to the Co-operative Milk Supply Union at Coimbatore. The assessee claimed that the profits of the sale of milk constituted agricultural income which was exempt from the payment of income-tax. The Income-tax Officer rejected that contention. In the absence of any accounts with reference to these cattle, the Income-tax Officer estimated the profits of the sale of milk in the year of account at Rs. 4000 and assessed the amount to income-tax. The Assistant Commissioner, & on further appeal, the Appellate Tribunal upheld that assessment.

(2) Income and agricultural income have been defined by S. 2, Income-tax Act. The expression "agriculture", however, has not been defined by the Act. "Agricultural income" has been defined by S. 2(1) of the Act. "Agricultural income" means:

"(a) any rent or revenue derived from land which is used for agricultural purposes, and is either assessed to land revenue in British India or subject to a local rate assessed and collected by officers of the Crown as such;

(b) any income derived from such land by—
(i) agriculture, or

(ii) the performance by a cultivator or receiver of rent-in-kind of any process ordinarily employed by a cultivator or receiver of rent-in-kind to render the produce raised or received by him fit to be taken to market, or

(iii) the sale by a cultivator or receiver of rent-in-kind of the produce raised or received by him, in respect of which no process has been performed other than a process of the nature described in sub-cl. (ii);

(c) any income derived from any building owned and occupied by the receiver of the rent or revenue of any such land, or occupied by the cultivator, or the receiver of rent in kind, of any land with respect to which, or the produce of which, any operation mentioned in sub-clauses (ii) and (iii) is carried on;"

(3) In — 'Commr. of Incometax, Burma v. Kokine Dairy, Rangoon', 1938-6 I T R 502 Rang. (FB) Roberts C. J. delivering the leading judgment of the Full Bench of the Rangoon High Court, observed at page 509:

"What is exempted from tax by the Income-tax Act is agricultural income and for the purpose of considering the position of a dairy farm and the milk which is derived from it, it is necessary to enquire whether the cattle are kept in an urban area and stall-fed or whether they are pastured upon the land. Where cattle are wholly stall-fed and not pastured upon the land at all, doubtless it is trade and no agricultural operation is being carried on; where cattle are being exclusively or mainly pastured and are nonetheless fed with small amounts of oil cake or the like, it may well be that the income derived from the sale of their milk is agricultural income."

The learned Chief Justice observed further:

".....the Income-tax Officer has to see whether the cattle derived sustenance to a material extent from the produce of the ground, and whether they did so or not is entirely a question of fact for him and one which cannot be reviewed by this Court."

(4) Those observations were not specifically correlated by the learned Chief Justice to the definition of agricultural income in S. 2 (1) of the Act. However, we respectfully agree with the principles as enunciated by the Full Bench of the Rangoon High Court. On an examination of the implications of the statutory definition of agricultural income in S. 2(1) of the Act, we are satisfied that the principles enunciated in that case and extracted above are correct.

(5) The question that arose for consideration in this case was, whether the income derived from the sale of milk by the assessee in the accounting year was agricultural income. It was neither rent nor revenue within the meaning of S. 2 (1) (a) of the Act, and that clause could not apply; nor can S. 2(1)(b)(ii) or S. 2 (1) (c) of the Act apply to the facts of this case. That leaves S. 2 (1) (b) (i) and 2 (1) (b) (iii). Even before either of these provisions could be invoked, the condition to be satisfied by the assessee was that the income had been derived from "such land" within the meaning of S. 2 (1) (b). The expression "such land" has to be construed with reference to the definition in S. 2 (1) (a), i.e., it must have been land used for agricultural purposes and assessed to land revenue. That this test was satisfied by the assessee in the accounting year was really never in dispute. The 70 acres of land that the assessee owned at Perur were agricultural lands, held obviously on ryotwari tenure, subject to liability for payment of land revenue to the Government.

(6) So the question is, was the income derived during the accounting year by the assessee by the sale of milk, income derived from "such land" by agriculture within the meaning of S. 2 (1) (b) (i)? As we have already pointed out, the expression "agriculture" itself was not defined by the Act. In — 'Commr. of Incometax, Madras v. K. E. Sundara Mudaliar', 1950-18 I T R 259, to which decision one of us was a party, after referring to the meaning given to the word "agriculture" by the Oxford Dictionary, which treated agriculture as synonymous with husbandry, Viswanatha Sastri J. observed at p. 272:

"In my opinion the word 'agriculture' is used in S. 2 of the Income-tax Act in a wide sense so as to denote the raising of useful or valuable products which derive nutriment from the soil with the aid of human skill and labour. It would include horticulture, which involved intensive cultivation of land as garden in the production of fruits, flowers or vegetables. It would also include growing of trees or plants whose growth is effected by the expenditure of human effort, skill and attention in such operations, as those of ploughing, sowing, planting, pruning, manuring, watering, protecting etc. as held by Spencer J. in — 'Pavadai Pathan v. Ramaswami Chetti', 45 Mad 710. The word 'agriculture' applied to the cultivation of the soil for food produce or any other useful or valuable growth of the field or garden and is wide enough to cover the rearing, feeding, and management of livestock, which live on the land and draw their sustenance from the soil."

We respectfully agree with those observations. It should therefore be unnecessary for us to review again the case law on the subject which was considered in — 'Commr. of Incometax, Madras v. K. E. Sundara Mudaliar', 1950-18 I T R 259 (Mad). We shall content ourselves with a reference to the dicta of Lord Wright at pages 638, 639 in — 'Lord Glanely v. Wightman', 1933 A C 618:

".....equally it is obvious that the rearing of animals, regarded as they must be as products of the soil — since it is from the soil that they draw their sustenance and on the soil that they live — is a source of profit from the occupation of land, whether these animals are for consumption as food (such as bullocks, pigs, or chickens) or for the provision of food (such as cows, goats or fowls), or for recreation (such as hunters or racehorses), or for use (such as draught or plough horses). All these animals are appurtenant to the soil, in the relevant sense for this purpose, as much as trees, wheat crops, flowers or roots, though no doubt they differ in obvious respects."

(7) It is with reference to these principles that we have to answer the primary question that arose for consideration in this case: "Was the milk the assessee sold in the accounting year an agricultural produce?" If it was, the profits of sale of the milk should be viewed either as income derived from "such land" by agriculture within the meaning of S. 2 (1) (b) (i), or as income derived from such land "by the sale by a cultivator of the produce raised .....by him in respect of which no process has been performed other than a process of the nature described in sub-clause (ii)" within the meaning of S. 2 (1) (b) (iii). In fact, it would satisfy the requirements of both the subsections, though even one would be sufficient to treat the income as agricultural income to secure for it the exemption granted by the Act.

(8) While there was nothing in the material before the Tribunal to establish that the milk in this case was not an agricultural produce, the evidence on record really justified only one conclusion, that it was agricultural produce. The assessee had 70 acres of agricultural lands. The cows were fed primarily on the produce of those agricultural lands. There was no indication that they were stall-fed. The assessee satisfied the test formulated by the Full Bench of the Rangoon High Court in — 'Commr. of Incometax, Burma v. Kokine Dairy, Rangoon', 1938-6 I T R 502 Rang. (FB) with which test, as we have pointed out, we agree,

(8) The grounds given by the Tribunal for holding that it was not agricultural income were set out in the statement of the case:

"The Tribunal was not satisfied that this was agricultural income for the reasons inter alia:

(i) it was not explained why 65 cows were necessary for obtaining manure;

(ii) there was nothing to show how much manure was actually required for agricultural operations;

(iii) that the account for the maintenance of these cows had been deliberately withheld;

(iv) that milk sales exceeded Rs. 2000 a month;

(v) that it was difficult to believe that cows just let loose on pasture lands would yield milk of that value; and

(vi) the supply of milk to the Co-operative Milk Supply Union shows that sales were on organised business lines."

(9) Of these, grounds 1, 2, 4 and 6 were not relevant factors at all. Even had the assessee kept the cows primarily for the sale of milk, in the circumstances established in this case, the milk would nonetheless have been agricultural produce, the produce of agricultural lands; and the profits of the sale of such milk would still have been agricultural income. That the sale of that milk was organised on business lines would not affect the real question at issue, was that milk, agricultural produce? In this case, there was the additional claim of the assessee that he maintained cows primarily for the manure he could get out of them, a claim not established to be false. It is rather futile to expect the assessee to maintain a stock book of the manure collected and later expended on his lands. We are unable to see anything inherently suspicious in the claim of the assessee, that he maintained 65 cows in addition to the ploughing bulls for manuring 70 acres of agricultural lands.

(10) Grounds 3 and 5 of the grounds set out by the Tribunal may be considered together. With reference to ground 5 we have to observe that it was not the sale price of the milk but the quantum of yield of milk that the Tribunal should have considered. The primary question that they should have considered was whether the cows were stall-fed or whether they were primarily fed on the produce of the land; and to that question neither the taxing authorities nor the Tribunal ever really addressed themselves. The assessee's failure to produce his accounts was no doubt a relevant factor in deciding whether the cows were primarily fed on the produce of the land. If accounts had been maintained the failure to produce them would justify, in the absence of any other relevant factor, an inference of facts adverse to the assessee. But there was no proof that the assessee maintained any accounts for feeding his cattle. There was for instance no evidence that all the produce of the land, the 70 acres of agricultural lands, was sold by the assessee and none was retained for feeding the cattle.

(11) Even a prima facie view based upon the ownership of such an extent of land, taken in conjunction with the number of cattle maintained, would certainly justify an inference, that cows were primarily fed on the produce of the soil, the produce of those 70 acres of agricultural lands. Investigation by the taxing authorities and by the Appellate Tribunal did not run on those lines at all. The authorities were obsessed with what was really an irrelevant factor, the organised sales of milk on a commercial scale. As we have already pointed out, ground No. 5 was not correlated to the yield of milk but was correlated to the money yield of the sale of milk. There were obviously no data furnished by any comparable case to show how much milk any given cow or herd of cows yielded when they were pasture-fed and how much they yielded when they were primarily stall-fed. On an examination of the grounds furnished by the Tribunal we have to hold that there was no material on record on which they could come to the conclusion that the milk sold by the assessee in the accounting year was not agricultural produce, i.e., the produce of "husbandry", with its implication, that the cows were reared on the agricultural lands of the assessee and were primarily fed on the produce of those lands. There was no material to show that the profits of the sale of such milk constituted anything but agricultural income in the hands of the assessee.

(12) Our answer to the question referred to us for decision is that there was no material available to the Tribunal to hold that the income received from the sale of milk by the assessee during the accounting year was not "agricultural income" within the meaning of the Income-tax Act.

(13) As the assessee has succeeded in this court, he should get the costs of this reference from the respondent the Commissioner of Income-tax — Rs. 250.

B/G.M.J.

Reference answered.

A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 226 (Vol. 40, C. N. 82)
RAMASWAMI J.

In re R Umanatha Rao, Petitioner.

Criminal Revn. Case No. 302 of 1952 and Criminal Revn. Petn. No. 282 of 1952, D/- 24-3-1952.

Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 439 — Anticipation of defence by petitions by raising preliminary points — Order passed on such petition — Procedure deprecated — Revision from order — Duty of High Court.

A system of procedure not contemplated by the Code is developing in the subordinate criminal courts in the State of Madras. In warrant cases (and a fortiori in Sessions cases also) accused persons before they are charged and put upon their defence anticipate their defence by petitions raising preliminary points upon which the Court passes judgment. These are then brought up on revision to the High Court pending which the trial of the case is adjourned. Interlocutory petitions of this nature are deprecated. The result of following such a procedure is that the trial of a case degenerates into trials within a trial, and the trial Judge is compelled to prematurely commit himself to one view or another. When the matter is taken up to the High Court, the High Court by going into the merits of these contentions increases the risk of premature disposals on points which ought to be really disposed of at the end of the case and considered at the time of writing the judgment.

(Para 2)

In a revision petition from such an interlocutory order, the High Court will restrict itself to find whether acceptable or unacceptable reasons have been given by the Judge for his conclusions and whether a prima facie case has or has not been made out for interfering or not interfering with these conclusions. If the legality and propriety of these conclusions are prima facie satisfactory there will be no necessity to interfere in revision. (Para 7)

Anno: Cr. P. C., S. 439 N. 26.

S. Mohan Kumaramangalam, for Petitioner;
The Public Prosecutor, for the State.

ORDER: This is an unusual criminal revision case filed against an unusual order made by the learned Additional Sessions Judge of Tiruchirapalli division in Crl. M. P. No. 82 of 1952 in Sessions Case No. 53 of 1951.

(2) Before entering into the merits of this case, I may point out that in a circular issued by the High Court of Madras dated 10th January 1951 interlocutory petitions of this nature are thoroughly deprecated and the Honourable Judges point out as follows:

"Instances have come up to the High Court which disclose that a system of procedure not contemplated by the Code is developing in the subordinate criminal courts. In warrant cases (and a fortiori in Sessions cases also) accused persons before they are charged and put upon their defence anticipate their defence by petitions raising preliminary points upon which the court passes judgment. These are then brought up on revision to the High Court pending which the trial of the case is adjourned. The High Court desires to impress upon the lower courts that this procedure is unwarranted and makes for delay and extra work. An accused person has no right to raise a preliminary point before he is charged. He must wait to defend himself till he is charged and if he is convicted, his first remedy is in most cases by way of appeal."

I need not dwell upon the mischief caused by such a procedure. The trial of a case degenerates into trials within a trial, and the trial Judge is compelled to prematurely commit himself to one view or another, and what is more, when the matter is taken up to the High Court, the High Court by going into the merits of these contentions increases the risk of premature disposals on points which ought to be really disposed of at the end of the case and considered at the time of writing the judgment and the due reasons given for the conclusions arrived at by the Judge, which will enable the appellate court to be fully seised of the matter and bring its own mind to bear upon the points in controversy and satisfactorily dispose of the entire case against the accused, be it one of conviction or of acquittal.

(3) It is, therefore, really astonishing that the learned Additional Sessions Judge, Mr. B. R. Chakravarti, has allowed himself to embark upon such a detailed exposition of the points raised before him, which ought to be really relegated to the time when these matters should be considered, viz., after hearing the defence and while writing the judgment. I must attribute it only to the comparative inexperience in criminal work of the Additional Sessions Judge and it is to be hoped that there will be no further repetition either by him or by other subordinate courts of this State.

(4) The Additional Sessions Judge is trying what is popularly known as the Tiruchirapalli Conspiracy case and the prosecution case has been closed and the Judge has started recording the statements of the accused under S. 342, Criminal P. C. It is at this stage the accused invited the Judge to pass orders on three specific points before the statements were recorded. I directed the Additional Sessions Judge to get along with the recording of the statements under S. 342, Criminal P. C. and promised to pass orders on Monday on this case.

(5) The three points raised before the Additional Sessions Judge were (1) that the entire proceedings before the committing Magistrate were void for want of necessary sanction as required by Ss. 196 and 196(a), Criminal P. C. and consequently the trial before that court was void; (2) that the court had no jurisdiction to try this case because the conspiracy was hatched in Calcutta and (3) 160 documents which had been admitted in evidence must, on the evidence of the Investigating Officer, be held to have come not from proper custody and therefore a ruling should be given on this matter.

(6) The learned Additional Sessions Judge, I am glad to state, has carefully and temperately and with a wealth of justifiable legal learning discussed all these points and shown that points (1) and (2) are devoid of substance and that point (3) is a matter of assessment of the probative value of these documents and that this aspect of the case will have due regard when the case comes to be decided.

(7) This is not the stage where I should discuss once more the points for and against the three contentions raised by the accused because if I were to decide these points now the learned Sessions Judge would feel himself precluded from going into these matters again at the time he comes to hear the arguments at the Bar after both sides have closed their case. But that is proper stage when all these matters have to be carefully considered even though the learned Additional Sessions Judge has now passed this interlocutory order. Therefore my examination must consist of nothing more than, at this stage, to find whether acceptable or unacceptable reasons have been given by the learned Additional Sessions Judge for his conclusions and whether a prima facie case has or has not been made out for interfering or not interfering with these conclusions at this stage. If the legality and propriety of these conclusions are prima facie satisfactory at this stage, there will be no necessity to interfere in revision now. It is on that basis I shall examine the findings for this limited purpose.

(8) Taking the most important of the three points first, viz., the contentions relating to the 160 documents, the point taken is simply this. These documents were seized by the Police long anterior to this case from different sources and have been in their custody for a shorter while or a longer while before they had been put into court in connection with this case. Be it noted that these documents have all been properly proved and they have been admitted and there is no dispute about their relevancy. The only point taken is that by reason of their being in the custody of the police for a shorter or longer while instead of being produced before the court then and there which it is stated must be done under S. 523, Criminal P. C., a case has been made out for the court to give a ruling. The request is made in this vague language because the lower court has rightly pointed out that the learned counsel for the accused Mr. Kailai Anandar fairly conceded that the mere fact that these documents have been in the custody of the Police officers for sometime, or that some of the documents being typewritten or cyclostyled and interpolations were possible, was not a ground for rejecting all these documents en bloc or the court being asked to deal with each document and say whether or not it accepts the proof adduced by the prosecution or what weight the court is going to attach to its contents. The learned Additional Sessions Judge has, therefore, pointed out

"Beyond, therefore, observing that the custody of the documents with the Police before they actually came into court will be borne in mind in considering whether the evidence adduced by the prosecution in regard to each of them is sufficient and satisfactory. No further order can be properly made at this stage and I do not therefore make any." This conclusion is prima facie correct and merits no interference in revision.

(9) The second point taken regarding the committal being void for want of necessary sanction as required by Ss. 196 and 196(a), Cr. P. C., has been fully dealt with by the learned Additional Sessions Judge. In fact in regard to this contention, the only aspect pressed before me is that the memorandum of the Government dated 22-8-1950 signed by the Deputy Secretary to Government in modification of Ex. P. 252 was neither properly proved nor admissible and that the lower court ought to have held that the order of His Excellency the Governor could not be modified by the Deputy Secretary. This point has been dealt with in para 20 of the Order of the lower court and the Add. Sessions Judge has shown how the first clause of the sanction clearly covered an offence under S. 120-B read with S. 153-A and similarly the second clause covered an offence under S. 121-A although S. 120-B too has been added to it unnecessarily and that these are the only two offences in regard to which objection can be raised and has been raised. The reasons given by the Additional Sessions Judge for this conclusion are prima facie acceptable and merit no interference in revision.

(10) The final point taken is that the conspiracy was hatched in Calcutta, and that therefore this case could not have been launched in Tiruchirapalli. The learned Additional Sessions Judge has carefully considered this point and states as follows:

"There is little substance in the contention raised under this point, and I am not quite sure if the counsel for the accused himself was very serious in his arguments on this point. It is not the case of the prosecution nor is it the evidence adduced in the case—I am not here referring to the truth or otherwise of the evidence adduced, this being a matter to be dealt with only in the judgment, but only to the trend of it—that the accused are to be convicted in regard to a conspiracy which took place at Calcutta. What took place at Calcutta was the 2nd party congress of the communist party of India. The decision in that congress is referred to in the evidence only for the purpose of rendering the prosecution case probable, namely, that the accused, or many of them, who are communists, were parties to a conspiracy or conspiracies which took place in the District of Tiruchirapalli among other places, for the purpose of implementing the decision of that congress, as also other directives of the party issued from time to time. The purport of the evidence so far adduced in this case is—I repeat I am not concerned with the truth of the evidence at this stage—that the accused or several of them met or otherwise conspired to commit the offence set out in the charge in the District of Tiruchirapalli. Moreover, where the conspiracy alleged is a continuous thing ranging over a period of two years and the offence is committed in many places including Tiruchirapalli district, this court will have undoubtedly jurisdiction to try this case under S. 182, Cr. P. C."

The reasons given are prima facie correct and merit no interference in revision.

(11) In the result this criminal revision case is dismissed and the learned Additional Sessions Judge is directed to proceed with the disposal of the case expeditiously and according to law.
C/V.S.B. Revision dismissed.

A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 228 (Vol. 40, C.N. 83)
RAMASWAMI J.

P. S. Narayanaswamy, Petitioner v. The State of Madras, represented by the Chief Secretary to the Government, Respondent.

Civil Revn. Petn. No. 6 of 1952, D/- 15-4-1952.

Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 123 and 124 — Scope — Official communications and unpublished official records — Production of — Claim of privilege — Procedure — (Civil P. C. (1908), O. 11, Rr. 12 and 13).

On an application by a party for the production of documents referred to in Ss. 123 and 124, Evidence Act, summons should be issued to the head of the department concerned. The head of the department must thereupon apply his mind to the documents sought to be disclosed and come to his own conclusion whether public interest would or would not be suffered by such disclosure. He has then to claim privilege if he chooses to do so by means of a communication, preferably in the form of an affidavit, claiming privilege and sufficiently indicating why he is claiming the privilege. It is also desirable but not indispensable that the records should be sent in a sealed cover through an officer of the department claiming privilege. The statement of the head of the department would be considered conclusive unless for compelling reasons to the contrary and the privilege will be upheld. But, in any event, it is the duty of the Court to apply its own mind as to whether the claim is not arbitrary and capricious and if need be it would be open to the Court to look into the documents and come to its own conclusion. The final decision of both the departmental heads as well as the presiding judge will be governed by only one consideration viz., whether the disclosure would result in any injury being caused to the public interest as S. 124 gives effect to the principle that public interest must be paramount and private interest must give way when there is a conflict between public and private interest. (Para 3)

Hence, where the Court, after applying its mind to the documents in respect of which the privilege is claimed, upholds the privilege, its decision will not be interfered with in revision. (Paras 7, 8)

Anno: Evi. Act, S. 123 N. 1 and S. 124 N. 1; Civil P. C., O. 11 Rr. 12 and 13 N. 9, 10.

Arunachalam and Jagannadham, for Petitioner; The Government Pleader, for Respondent.

ORDER: This is a civil revision petition filed against the order made by the learned Subordinate Judge of Ootacamund in I. A. No. 335 of 1950 in O. S. No. 74 of 1949.

(2) The facts are: The petitioner P. S. Narayanaswami before us was employed in the Chinchona Directorate located at Ootacamund. He has been dismissed from service. Thereupon, he has filed the suit O. S. No. 74 of 1949 against the State of Madras. This former dismissed employee wanted the production of a considerable quantity of unpublished official records. Therefore, summons was issued to the Director who is the head of this department. He looked into the records asked to be produced. Then he has filed an affidavit classifying the records sought to be produced under two heads, viz., those in regard to which he claimed privilege on the ground that the disclosure of those documents would be prejudicial to public interest and those which might be disclosed. The records were sent to court with an affidavit. The learned Subordinate Judge applied his own mind and upheld the claim of privilege in regard to documents for which privilege was claimed. In regard to documents which the director had no objection to disclose the plaintiff stated them to be irrelevant for his purpose. Thereupon the learned Subordinate Judge has passed an order to that effect and the present petition is preferred against that order.

(3) There are no merits in this petition at all because what has been done in the lower court is in strict compliance with S. 124 of the Indian Evidence Act as interpreted in leading decisions. The substance of these leading decisions can be summarised as follows. On an application by a party for the production of these documents, summons should be issued to the head of the department concerned. That head of the department must thereupon apply his mind to the documents sought to be disclosed and come to his own conclusion whether public interest would or would not be suffered by such disclosure. He has then to claim privilege if he chooses to do so by means of a communication, preferably in the form of an affidavit, claiming privilege and sufficiently indicating why he is claiming the privilege. It is also desirable but not indispensable that the records should be sent in a sealed cover through an officer of the department claiming privilege. The statement of the head of the department would be considered conclusive unless for compelling reasons to the contrary and the privilege will be upheld. But in any event it is the duty of the court to apply its own mind as to whether the claim is not arbitrary and capricious and if need be it would be open to the court to look into the documents and come to its own conclusion.

In other words, under S. 124, Evidence Act, the four stages are, summoning, application of the mind of the head of the department to the documents sought to be disclosed and coming to the conclusion whether the privilege should be claimed or not, communicating this claim of privilege preferably by means of an affidavit and sending wherever possible the concerned documents in a sealed cover through an officer of the department claiming privilege and the application of the presiding Judge's mind to the claim put forward and accepting it unless the claim is arbitrary or capricious or false. The final decision of both the departmental head as well as the presiding judge will be governed by only one consideration viz., whether the disclosure would result in an injury being caused to the public interest as the section gives effect to the principle that public interest must be paramount and private interest must give way when there is a conflict between public and private interests. The only loyalty which the section contemplates and which must undoubtedly prevail over private interest is the loyalty to the State in the sense that public interest must prevail over private interest and the disclosure of a particular document will damnify public interest and so even though injustice may be done to private interest it is much better that such injustice should be done rather than public interest should be injured by the disclosure of a document: vide — 'Dinbai v. Dominion of India', AIR 1951 Bom 72 decided by Chagla C. J. and Bhagavati J.

(4) The aforesaid principles which constitute the four stages are deducible from the following decisions on this matter which can be grouped into, the decisions of the Madras High Court, the decisions of other High Courts and the decision of the House of Lords. In — 'Nagaraja Pillai v. Secretary of State', 39 Mad 304 a Bench of this court held that the object of S. 124, Evidence Act, is to prevent the disclosures to the detriment of public interests and the decisions as to such detriment rests with the officer to whom the communication is made and does not depend upon the special use of the word "confidential". The decision in — 'Venkatachala Chettiar v. Sampathu Chettiar', 32 Mad 62 was followed.

In — 'Secretary of State v. Saminatha', AIR 1930 Mad 342 (2), Jackson J. held that the public officer concerned and not the Judge is to decide whether the evidence referred to should be given or withheld and if the objection is taken by the proper person the court will not go behind it. Under S. 124, it rested exclusively with the public officer concerned to withhold or give permission as he is the sole judge as to whether public interest will or will not suffer by the disclosure though such discretion must naturally be exercised on well-established principles and not arbitrarily.

In — 'Makky Moithu in re', 1943-1 MLJ 154 Horwill J. on a question whether a certain report made by the Deputy Tahsildar of a Government Forest to the Collector was privileged, held that S. 124, Evidence Act, left it to the court to consider whether the communication was of the nature covered by the section; that is, the court has to decide whether the section can be applied. If it does the court has to exclude the document if the public officer concerned considers that public interest will suffer by the disclosure. Where the report was undoubtedly a confidential document and was not intended to be revealed to the public but only to such persons to whom the Collector thought fit to send it, the court cannot question the decision.

(5) Three other decisions of the other High Courts may be usefully referred to in this connection. In — 'Weston v. Peary', 40 Cal 898 it was laid down that protection under this section is not dependent upon a claim of privilege being put forward. It is the duty of the Judge himself to exclude the evidence. A fortiori if objection is taken it cannot be made a ground of adverse inference as the law allows it. In — 'Governor-General in Council v. Peer Mohd.', AIR 1950 EP 228 a Full Bench of the Punjab

High Court held that where the privilege claimed is attached to state papers which are of an administrative character the disclosure of which would be injurious to the proper functioning of the public services the court can hold an enquiry into the validity of an objection. But it is nevertheless true that once the court comes to the conclusion that the document relates to an affair of the State, the decision of the head of the department to give or withhold permission to its production must be accepted as final. Ordinarily, the head of the department will mean the officer who is in control of the department and in whose custody the records of the department remain. Similarly in — 'I. M. Lall v. Secretary of State', AIR 1944 Lah 209, it was held that the principle or foundation on which S. 123 rests is concern for the public interest. If an affidavit is made by the head of the department that he does not wish to produce certain documents as they constitute unpublished official records relating to affairs of State, he is deposing by implication that the production of those documents will be prejudicial to public interest. The use of the word "concerned" in relation to the head of the department shows that the affidavit must contain a sworn statement by the head of the department in whose custody the documents happen to be at the time when discovery and production is claimed.

(6) These decisions are based upon a long line of English decisions of which the most important is the decision of the House of Lords in — 'Ducan v. Cammell Laird and Co.', 1942 AC 624. Their Lordships have clearly laid down the principles which are embodied for us in Ss. 123 and 124, Evidence Act.

"A court of law should uphold an objection taken by a public department, called on to produce documents in a suit between private citizens, if on grounds of public policy they ought not to be produced. Documents otherwise relevant and liable to production must not be produced if the public interest requires that they should be withheld. The test may be found to be satisfied either (a) by having regard to the contents of the particular documents, or (b) by the fact that the document belongs to a class which, on grounds of public interest, must as such be withheld from production. It is essential that the decision to object should be taken by the minister who is the political head of department concerned and that he should have seen and considered the contents of the documents and himself formed the view that on the grounds of public interest they ought not to be produced. If the question arises before trial the objection would ordinarily be taken by affidavit of the minister. If it arises on 'subpoena' the objection may in the first instance be conveyed to the Court by an official of the department, who produces a certificate signed by the minister stating what is necessary, but if the court is not satisfied it can request the minister's personal attendance.

An objection validly taken to production on the ground that it would be injurious to the public interest is conclusive. The mere fact that the minister or the department does not wish the documents to be produced is not an adequate justification for objecting to their production. Production should only be withheld when the public interest would otherwise be damnified, as where disclosure would be injurious to national defence or to good diplomatic relations, or where the practice of keeping a class of documents secret is necessary for the proper functioning of the public service. In such a case, the court should not require to see the document, for the purpose of ascertaining whether the disclosure would be injurious to the public interest."

(7) So, applying those principles the lower court has correctly decided that documents Nos. 4, 5, 7, 8, 10, 12, 14 and 17 to 20 cannot be asked to be produced and marked as evidence.

(8) There are no merits in this civil revision petition and it is hereby dismissed with costs. Advocate's fee Rs. 50/-.

B/K.S.

Revision dismissed.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 230 (Vol. 40, C. N. 84)

VENKATARAMA AIYAR J.

Rangaswami Goundar, Appellant v. Marappa Gounder and others, Respondents.

S. A. No. 1580 of 1948, D/- 28-3-1952.

(a) Hindu law — Gift — Property inherited by minor — Gift by mother to relation — Validity.

A gift by a widow of the property inherited by her minor son from his father in favour of the daughter of her co-widow out of affection is not binding on the minor son. (Para 4)

(b) Limitation Act (1908), Art. 44 — Unauthorised alienation by lawful guardian — Setting aside of, within time prescribed by Article.

When a natural guardian having authority to alienate the properties of the ward for proper purposes effects a transfer which is in excess of that authority it cannot be put in the same position as an alienation by an unauthorised person. An unauthorised alienation by a lawful guardian is only voidable and must be set aside within the time prescribed by Art. 44, unlike an alienation by an unauthorised person, which is void under the law and does not require to be set aside under that Article. (Para 5)

Anno: Limitation Act, Art. 44 N. 3 P. 3.

(c) Hindu Law — Alienation — Alienation of minor's property — Validity.

Where there is an alienation of the property of a minor it will not be binding on him unless he is a party thereto. Where the name of the minor is disclosed in the body of the document he must be held to be a party thereto notwithstanding any error or defect in description. Where the guardian alienates the property under an assertion of hostile title, the transfer cannot be regarded as one made by a guardian and it will be void. It is, however, doubtful whether where the name of the minor is not disclosed in the deed of transfer that is not conclusive to show that the transfer was not made on behalf of the minor: 20 Bom 286 Doubted. Case law discussed. (Para 15)

(On construction of the deed of gift by the minor's mother in her own right and not as his guardian held that the alienation was void as being a transfer by a guardian in assertion of a hostile title).

(Para 17)

(d) Evidence Act (1872), S. 115 — Estoppel by election — Void deed of gift by mother — Attestation by minor.

A deed of gift by the minor's mother, executed by her, not as a guardian of her son, but in assertion of a hostile title, being void, there is no question of any election to affirm or disaffirm it and the son will not be precluded from recovering the property alienated merely by attesting the deed. (Para 18)

Anno: Evidence Act, S. 115 N. 25.

K. Parasurama Aiyar, for Appellant; B. V. Viswanatha Aiyar and K. K. Gangadhara Aiyar, for Respondents.

JUDGMENT: The plaintiff is the appellant in this second appeal. He is the son of one Ramayya Goundan who died sometime in 1931. The family of Ramayya Goundan consisted, at that time, of his two wives, Ponnammal and Ramayee, two daughters by his first wife, Ponnammal, the elder of whom, Marayee, was married to Marappa Goundan the second defendant in the suit and the younger Karupayee was unmarried and the appellant who was his son by the second wife, Ramayee and at that time a minor aged about ten years. The properties which Ramayya Goundan owned were a land known as Kandan Kadu in which he owned 3 acres & 81½ cents & a land called Thattan Kadu in which he owned 2 acres and 82 cents subject to a usufructuary mortgage for Rs. 450 of which half was payable by him, and a house. Shortly after his death, disputes arose between the two widows and it is stated that they were settled by a panchayat.

On 10-12-1932, three documents came into existence and it is the validity of one of them that is in question in the present litigation. Ex. D. 3 is a deed of release executed by Ponnammal in favour of Ramayee giving up her right of maintenance over the estate; and Ex. D. 5 is a deed of maintenance executed by Ramayee in favour of Ponnammal fixing her annual maintenance at Rs. 50 and charging the land known as Kandan Kadu for its payment. Ex. D. 1 is a deed of gift of the land known as Thattan Kadu executed by Ramayee in favour of Karuppayee the second daughter of Ponnammal. It is this alienation that is attacked by the appellant as void and not binding on him. On 14-4-1943, Karupayee sold the properties, gifted to her under Ex. D. 1 to the second defendant her sister's husband for a consideration of Rs. 875, under Ex. D. 2 and he is the contesting defendant in this action.

(2) The plaintiff challenges the validity of the gift under Ex. D. 1 on the ground that Ramayee acted in the transaction on her own behalf and not as his guardian; and that even viewed as an alienation by his guardian, it is not binding on him for the reason that it was beyond the power of the guardian to make a gift and that it could not be supported on the ground of any necessity. The defendant, apart from demurring to these allegations, pleaded that the suit was barred by limitation as it was filed more than three years after the plaintiff had attained majority and that he was further estopped from disputing the transaction as he had attested the sale deed Ex. D. 2. The learned District Munsif of Erode held that Ex. D. 1 was not executed by Ramayee as guardian of the plaintiff, that even otherwise the gift was invalid as it was greatly disproportionate to the status of the family, that there was no bar of limitation and that further the plaintiff was not estopped by his attestation of Ex. D. 2 from raising the question of the validity of Ex. D. 1. In the result he decreed the suit.

The second defendant appealed against this decree and the District Judge who heard the appeal came to a different conclusion. He held that the gift must be taken to have been made by Ramayee as guardian of the plaintiff and that as the suit had been filed more than three years after the plaintiff had attained majority it was barred under Art. 44 of the Limitation Act. In this view he did not consider it necessary to go into the question whether the alienation was binding on the plaintiff though he indicated that he would be prepared to uphold it as valid. He also held that the plaintiff must have attested Ex. D. 2 with the knowledge of its contents and therefore, he was estopped from disputing the validity of Ex. D. 1. In the result he allowed the appeal and dismissed the suit. Against this judgment, the plaintiff prefers this second appeal.

(3) The first question that arises for determination is whether the suit is barred by limitation. If it is, then no further question arises. It is contended on behalf of the respondent that as Ramayee was the natural guardian of the plaintiff under the Hindu law, any alienation by her must be set aside within the time limited by Art. 44; that the plaintiff attained majority in 1939 and the suit instituted in 1945 is barred by limitation. This is not disputed by Mr. Parasurama Aiyar, the learned advocate for the appellant. He, however, contends that the present suit is not governed by Art. 44 firstly because Ramayee had no power to make a gift under the Hindu law and the transaction was, therefore, beyond her competence and secondly because she did not purport to act as guardian of the plaintiff and there was no alienation by a guardian such as will fall within the purview of Art. 44. Before dealing with these contentions, it is necessary to set out the material recitals in Ex. D. 1. It runs as follows:

"Deed of gift executed on the 19th day of December 1932 in favour of Karupayee Ammal, daughter of Ramayya Gounden, Vellalacaste, ryot, residing at Melapalayam, Attavanaipidariyar village, Erode taluk, by Ramayee Ammal, the junior wife of the said Ramayya Goundan, aforesaid caste and calling, at the aforesaid village.

As you are the daughter of my husband's senior wife and due to the affection I have towards you I have given you the property worth Rs. 500 as a gift for the purpose of celebrating your marriage and making presentations etc. to you. Therefore, you, yourself shall hold and enjoy the said property with absolute rights and powers of alienation by way of gift, sale etc., from son to grandson and so on in succession."

In the schedule of property are included

"Government survey number 212 of the extent of acres 5-97 cents assessed at Rs. 8-3-0 out of which one-twelfth share belonging (to me) punja acre 0-49 9/12 assessed at Re. 0-11-3; punja bearing Government survey No. 213 of the extent of acres 9-34 assessed at Rs. 12-14-0 out of which on the east and to the west of the road, punja of the extent of acres 2-33 2/4 cents assessed at Rs. 3-3-6 belonging (to me) the lands of the above extents inclusive of the fruit bearing and timber trees therein."

(4) On this deed, the first contention of Mr. Parasurama Aiyar is that it is void because Ramayee had no power as guardian to make any marriage gift. It is conceded that the estate of Ramayya Goundan would be liable to meet the marriage expenses of Karupayee but it is argued that it could not be burdened with a gift to her and that the power of a father or widow to make such a gift could not be exercised by the guardian of a minor. That contention is supported by the decision of a Bench of this court reported in — 'Palaniammal v. Kothandaraman', ILR 1944 Mad 418 and Ex. D. 1 will, therefore, be prima facie not binding on the plaintiff. Mr. B. V. Viswanatha Aiyar the learned advocate for the respondent contended that Ex. D. 1 was not a gift to a married woman as in — 'K. Palaniammal v. Kothandarama', ILR 1944 Mad 418 but a transfer made in discharge of an obligation to marry her.

It is somewhat difficult to follow this argument. When the appellant succeeded to the estate of Ramayya Goundan, he took it subject to the obligation of getting Karupayee married. Any alienation made for discharging this obligation will without question be binding on him, but Ex. D. 1 is not of that character. It is not a sale or a mortgage for raising funds for the marriage of Karupayee or for discharging any debts contracted in connection therewith. In fact Karupayee was married only two years later. It is difficult under those circumstances to construe Ex. D. 1 as anything but what it purports to be, that is a gift made to her out of affection, etc. In that view, the decision in — 'Palaniammal v. Kothandaraman', ILR 1944 Mad 418 will apply and it must be held that it would not be binding on the plaintiff.

(5) But it does not follow from this that the alienation is not one which is required to be set aside under Art. 44 of the Limitation Act. Under the law, when a natural guardian having authority to alienate the properties of the ward for proper purposes effects a transfer which is in excess of that authority it cannot be put in the same position as an alienation by an unauthorised person. An unauthorised alienation by a lawful guardian is only voidable and must be set aside within the time prescribed by Art. 44, unlike an alienation by an unauthorised person, which is void under the law and does not require to be set aside under that article. In — 'Labhamal v. Malakram', 6 Lah 447: AIR 1925 Lah 619 dealing with an alienation by a mother which was found to be not supported by any necessity, Shadi Lal C. J. observed as follows:

"Now, it is beyond dispute that the mother is, under the Hindu Law, a guardian of the property of her minor sons; and a conveyance by her is not a void transaction but voidable at the instance of the minors. It is true that the courts below have held that the sale was not for necessity, but that finding does not affect the nature of the transaction, which should be treated as an unauthorised transfer by an authorised guardian. If a sale is effected by a person who is not the minor's guardian either according to his personal law or by appointment by the court, such a sale is a nullity and does not affect the minor's property. If on the other hand, the sale is made by a natural guardian who goes beyond the scope of his authority the transaction cannot be regarded as a nullity and will bind the minor unless he succeeds in impeaching it within the period prescribed by law. There is ample authority for the view that an unauthorised alienation by a guardian recognised by law is voidable and not void, vide 'inter alia' — 'Lamaya v. Rachappa', 42 Bom. 626, — 'Fakirappa Limanna Patil v. Lumanna Bin Mahadu Dhamnekar', 44 Bom 742 and — 'Brojendra Chandra Sarma v. Prosunna Kumar Dhar', 24 C. W. N. 1016."

(6) This view was reiterated in the decision reported in — 'Khusiah v. Faiz Muhammad Khan', 9 Lah 33: AIR 1928 Lah 115, the court observing:

"An alienation by a natural guardian of the minor's property is a voidable and not a void transaction and the fact that it was not for necessity does not alter the nature of the transaction. In other words, it was an unauthorised transfer by an authorised guardian and the limitation to set aside such a transfer is prescribed by Art. 44. Vide inter alia — 'Labha v. Malak Ram', AIR 1925 Lah. 619."

(7) We are not here concerned with a deed which is void under some other provision of law such as Transfer of Property Act or Registration Act in which case there is in existence no transfer of property and therefore, no question of setting aside such a transfer. But where the transfer is operative and the question is whether it is binding on the ward or not it has to be set aside within the time prescribed by Art. 44—Vide — 'Sri Raja Sobhanadri Apparao Bahadur v. Raja Muganti Venkatarama Rao', 54 Mad 352 and — 'Raja Ramasami v. Govindammal', 56 M. L. J. 332. It, therefore, follows that though the alienation by Ramayee under Ex. D. 1 was not binding on the plaintiff for the reason that it was not for a proper purpose, it was nevertheless one which had to be set aside under Art. 44 and not having been so set aside the suit would be barred.

(8) It is next contended that Art. 44 does not apply to the present case for the reason that the alienation under Ex. D. 1 was made by Ramayee not as guardian of the plaintiff but in her own personal capacity. This in fact is the substantial contention that arises for determination in this case. It cannot be doubted that if a person is not a party to a deed there is no need on his part to have it set aside and when the property of a minor is transferred under a deed executed by his guardian, he is under no obligation to have it set aside unless he is a party to it. The question, therefore, to be decided is whether on a fair construction of the deed of transfer, the minor can be held to be party to it and whether the transfer thereunder is made on his behalf. If the answer is in the affirmative, he is bound to have it set aside within the time prescribed by Art. 44; if in the negative, he is entitled to ignore the transaction and a suit by him to establish his rights will not be governed by Art. 44. The law on the subject is thus stated by Mulla:

"No act done by a person who is the guardian of a minor binds the minor unless the act was done by him in his capacity of guardian. It is a question of fact in each case whether a particular act done by a person was done by him in his capacity of guardian or on his own behalf and on his own account. In the former case the act binds the minor provided it was otherwise within the power of the guardian; in the latter case it does not. The mere fact that the name of the minor is not mentioned in a contract or in a deed of sale or mortgage is not conclusive proof that the transaction was not entered into on behalf of the minor."

(9) In — 'Watson & Co. v. Shamlal Mitter', 15 Cal 8 the mother and guardian of a minor executed two 'kabuliyats' and they were signed by her "as Haimabathi Dasi mother of Sham Lal Mitter, minor". In holding that the deed was in substance executed by Haimabathi Dasi as guardian of the minor, the Privy Council observed as follows:

"The addition of Haimabathi Dasi's name to the words 'Mother of Sham Lal Mitter' minor' must in their Lordships' opinion be considered as meaning that she was contracting as the mother and guardian of her infant son and it cannot be presumed that Haimabathi Dasi claimed the estate adversely to her son and the substance of the case is that the estate being under her management as his natural guardian and the appellants being able to sue for an enhancement of the rent, she came to what appeared to be, and she was advised was, a proper arrangement with them. If there were any doubt as to the capacity in which she acted it should be presumed that she did so in her lawful capacity."

This decision is authority for the position that if the minor's name is disclosed in some manner in the document it would be proper to presume that the guardian acted on behalf of the minor and not in her own right.

(10) In — 'Murari v. Tayana', 20 Bom 286 the facts were that the mother of the minor executed a sale deed in her own name without mentioning the name of the minor in the deed. It was held that though the sale deed did not purport to be on behalf of the minor it would be binding on him as it was the intention of the mother to deal with the interest of the minor. Reliance was placed on the decisions in which alienations by managers of joint Hindu families were upheld if they were for proper purposes, even though the transferor was not described as manager.

(11) In — 'Nathu v. Balwanand Rao', 27 Bom 390 the mother alienated the property on the footing that it belonged to her and not to the ward, and debts binding on the minor had been discharged with the sale proceeds. The minor challenged the alienation after he attained majority and it was held that the sale was not binding on him.

(12) In — 'Ammani Ammal v. Ramaswami Naidu', 37 M L J 113 the mother sold certain properties of her minor son, asserting that they belonged to her. It was found that the consideration was applied in discharging debts binding on the minor. It was held that the alienation was not binding on the minor and that the decisions in which transfers by managers of joint family were upheld even though there were assertions of an exclusive title by the transferor, were distinguished, the court observing:

"Further in those cases documents of alienations were not mere waste paper conveying no title or interest whatever in the property alienated as in this case but did affect at least a part-ownership right of the legal alienor."

In that case, there was also a prayer by the plaintiff for cancellation of the sale deed. With reference to this prayer, Sadasiva Aiyar J. observed as follows:

"He also prayed in his plaint for the cancellation, if necessary, of the deed of February 1904 executed by his mother. I might at once say that not only is no such cancellation necessary but that the plaintiff has no legal cause of action to get the relief of the cancellation of a document which was not executed and which does not even purport to have been executed by himself or by anybody from whom he traces his title."

The result of this decision is that when the guardian alienates the property of the minor setting up his or her own title it cannot be upheld as an alienation by that person in the capacity of a guardian and it is wholly void.

(13) In — 'Nandan Prasad v. Abdul Aziz', 45 All 497 the mother mortgaged the properties of her minor sons not as guardian but as the full owner but the amount raised by the mortgage was utilised for the benefit of the sons. In a suit to enforce the mortgage it was held that the mortgage was not binding on the minors as the mother must be taken to have acted not as their guardian but in her own capacity and the decision in — 'Balwant Singh v. Clancy', 34 All 296 was followed. There the alienation was effected by an elder brother who claimed that the property belonged to him exclusively. It was held by the Privy Council that the younger brother who was a minor was not bound by the transaction.

(14) In—'Muthiah Chettiar v. Rayalu Aiyar', 1943-2-M L J 548 which was a case of an alienation of joint family property Patanjali Sastri J. referring to the above cases observed as follows:

"In all these cases it will be observed that the transferor was really asserting an absolute title to the property in himself adversely to another person and could not, therefore, be considered as having represented that other person in making the transfer; for the position assumed by the former was quite inconsistent with any intention to act on behalf of the latter whose interest in the property transferred he was repudiating."

(15) The result of the authorities may thus be summed up:

(1) Where there is an alienation of the property of a minor it will not be binding on him unless he is a party thereto. 'Ammani Ammal v. Ramaswami Naidu', 37 M L J 113.

(2) Where the name of the minor is disclosed in the body of the document he must be held to be a party thereto notwithstanding any error or defect in description. 'Watson & Co. v. Shamlal Mitter', 15 Cal 8.

(3) Where the name of the minor is not disclosed in the deed of transfer, — 'Murari v. Tayana', 20 Bom 286 is an authority for the position that that is not conclusive to show that the transfer was not made on behalf of the minor. This decision goes to the very verge of the law and its correctness is open to doubt in view of the observations in — 'Margaret Lornie v. Abu Bucker Sait'. 1939-1-M L J 664 where it is pointed out that the transaction to be binding on a minor must purport to be on his behalf and in view of the observations in — 'Ammani Ammal v. Ramaswami Naidu', 37 M L J 113 that alienations by a manager of a joint family do not furnish a proper analogy where there is an alienation by a guardian; which is one of the grounds on which the decision in — 'Murari v. Tayana', 20 Bom 286 is based.

(4) Where the guardian alienates the property under an assertion of hostile title, the transfer cannot be regarded as one made by a guardian and it will be void.

(16) In the light of the above observations, the terms of Ex. D. 1 may now be examined: It is a transfer "by Ramayee Ammal the junior wife of the said Ramayya Goundan" and not by the appellant represented by her as his guardian. His name is not even so much as mentioned anywhere in the deed. In the description of property also it is described as "belonging to me". Though in the original which is in Tamil there is no word equivalent to "to me", that is implied in the context and the official translation correctly brings it out. On these features the appellant argues that the alienation cannot in any sense be treated as effected by Ramayee in her character as guardian of the appellant.

The respondent on the other hand refers to Exs. D. 3 and D. 5 and argues that all the three deeds form part of one transaction and must be read together and that they show that there was one family arrangement with reference to the estate of Ramayya Goundan and as the appellant was the person entitled to it, it is reasonable to infer that Ramayee acted in these transactions on behalf of her minor son. There is considerable force in this reasoning but when we turn to the contents of Ex. D. 3 and Ex. D. 5 it is found that there is no mention of the appellant anywhere in these documents either. He has been sadly ignored. Turning to the description of the properties in those deeds, while Ex. D. 5 is couched in the same terms as Ex. D. 1 the language of Ex. D. 3 is explicit. It expressly declares that the properties belonged to the executant, Poonammal.

The studied omission of any reference to the appellant in all the three documents becomes significant when regard is had to the defence set up by the second defendant. His case is that on the eve of his death Ramayya Goundan gave oral directions as to how the properties are to be taken after him and that the three deeds were executed in pursuance of those directions. This is sought to be established by the evidence of himself and of several witnesses examined on his side. It is also stated that when disputes arose between the two widows, the panchayatdars asked them to act according to the wishes of their husband. Apart from Ex. D. 1, no title is now put forward to the properties on the basis of the directions stated to have been given by Ramayya Goundan treating them as non-curative will.

Indeed such a claim would be void under S. 57, Succession Act, Act 39 of 1925, but it is clear that in executing Ex. D. 1 Ramayee acted not as the guardian of her minor son but as the hand of her deceased husband carrying out his directions. In other words, she acted as the executrix of her husband under the non-curative will and it is for this reason that the minor is altogether ignored. There is, therefore, considerable force in the contentions of the appellant that Ex. D. 1 is not an alienation of the appellant's property by his legal guardian Ramayee but an alienation by Ramayee in her own right, and, in her assumed character as the executrix under an alleged non-curative will of her deceased husband.

(17) On these facts, the alienation in question must be held to be void, as being a transfer by a guardian in assertion of a hostile title. The present suit is accordingly not governed by Art. 44, Limitation Act, and as the property was in the possession of the usufructuary mortgagee, the suit is in time.

(18) It remains to deal with the question of estoppel. The defendant pleaded that the appellant had himself brought about the sale in his favour, Ex. D. 2, that he attested it, that he had become a major at that time and that, therefore, he is estopped from disputing the alienation. If these facts are established, the plaintiff will be precluded from laying any claim to the property. But what is found is that the appellant must have known about the nature of the transaction when he attested Ex. D. 2 and that he is, therefore, estopped. If the transaction was voidable, that finding will be sufficient to non-suit the plaintiff because attestation with knowledge of the contents of the sale deed must be held to amount to an election to affirm the transaction under Ex. D. 1 and in the view taken by the learned District Judge that in substance the alienation under Ex. D. 1 must be considered as one made by Ramayee as guardian of the plaintiff, the conclusion would be correct.

But when it is held, as I now hold, that Ex. D. 1 is void, then there is no question of any election to affirm or disaffirm it and the plaintiff will not be precluded from recovering the property, merely by attesting Ex. D. 2. If there had been something more than mere attestation, if the plaintiff had himself brought about the transaction and held out Karuppayee as the true owner, then it would strictly be a case of estoppel. Indeed that was the plea of the defendant but that was shattered by the evidence of Karuppayee who admitted as D. W. 2 that the plaintiff did not take part in the negotiations of the sale under Ex. D. 2. Therefore the plaintiff is not disentitled to relief by reason of his attestation.

(19) In the result, the appeal must be allowed and the suit decreed with costs throughout. The plaintiff, however, is bound to pay to the second defendant the amount paid by him for discharging the usufructuary mortgage on the property with interest thereon at six per cent per annum from 13-5-1943, before he can recover possession of the properties. Leave refused.

B/V.R.B.

Appeal allowed.

A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 234 (Vol 40, C.N. 85)
KRISHNASWAMI NAYUDU J.

Chockalingam Chettiar, Appellant v. Sivakolandu Achi, Respondent.

Second Appeal No. 959 of 1948, D/- 20-3-1952.

Tenancy Laws — Madras Estates Land Act (1 (I) of 1908), S. 125 — Applicability — Sale of holding in execution of rent decree for costs.

The priority that is given to a purchaser under S. 125 can only enure to him if he is a purchaser of the holding and the said holding is sold for arrears, meaning arrears of rent. Where the sale is not a sale for arrears of rent but in execution of a rent decree for costs, a purchaser of a holding would not be entitled under S. 125, Madras Estates Land Act, to hold the property free from the encumbrances which are created before or after the passing of the Act as the section will have no application to such a purchaser. (Paras 4, 5)

T. S. Santhanam, for Appellant; R. Viswanathan, for K. V. Ramachandra Ayyar, for Respondent.

ORDER: The plaintiff is the appellant and he sued for possession of the suit properties on the ground of his purchase in a revenue court auction held in execution of decree in summary suits filed by the land-holder for recovery of arrears of rent. There are three items of property involved: (1) R. S. No. 315/1 measuring 33 cents dry land, (2) R. S. No. 286/1 measuring 26 cents nanja and (3) R. S. No. 286/12 measuring 42 cents dry land. Under Ex. P. 3, dated 7th August 1945, in execution of summary suit No. 52 of 1933, the plaintiff was granted a sale certificate in respect of item No. 1, and Ex. P. 2 is the sale certificate dated 27th January 1945 granted as purchaser in the sale held in pursuance of the rent decrees in S. S. No. 136 of 1933 in respect of items 2 and 3. The claim to possession is on the basis that the purchaser at an auction in a rent sale is entitled to permanent title and he holds it free from the encumbrances. The defendant claimed to purchase these properties under a private sale Ex. D. 3 dated 16th September 1943, from the owners of the land.

(2) The lower appellate Court held that in so far as item 1 is concerned Ex. P. 3 showed that the purchase was in a rent sale held in a revenue court and the decree is for arrears of rent and therefore the sale passed the property to the purchaser free of all encumbrances except those specified in S. 125, Madras Estates Land Act. The defendants claim as purchasers of item 1 not being subject to any encumbrance of the category of those that are so excepted under S. 125 the sale of item 1 in favour of the appellant was upheld and a decree for possession was granted in respect of that item. But as regards the other two items, namely items 2 and 3, it was held that the rent decree in S. S. No. 136 of 1933 was not for any arrears of rent or interest but was only for costs and the execution petition No. 220 of 1944 on the file of the Deputy Collector, Tanjore showed that the sale was in pursuance of the decree for costs alone. The lower appellate court therefore held that no charge was created under the Madras Estates Land Act in respect of costs under S. 5 of the Act. The charge under that section being only for rent and interest thereon and not for costs, the lower appellate court held that the appellant was not entitled to have priority over the defendants' purchase.

(3) S. 125 of the Madras Estates Land Act states:

"When a holding or part of a holding is sold for arrears due in respect thereof, the purchaser shall take, subject to any right or interest which the ryot has created therein with the land-holder's permission in writing registered and subject also to any encumbrances created before the passing of this Act but not subject to any arrears of rent due in respect of the holding before the date of sale or to interest on such arrears, whether a decree has been obtained or not for such arrears of interest."

(4) In this case, the appellant is no doubt the purchaser of the holding. But the question is whether the holding was sold for arrears as specified in the said provision. The arrears would necessarily mean arrears of rent and the priority that is given to a purchaser under S. 125 could only enure to him if he is a purchaser of the holding and the said holding is sold for arrears, meaning arrears of rent. The sale in this case is not a sale for arrears of rent but for costs and on a reading of S. 125 it could not be held that the appellant would be entitled to seek the benefit of S. 125. Apart from that, S. 5 provides:

"The rent of ryoti land together with any interest which may be due in respect thereof shall be a first charge upon the holding and upon the produce of the holding or any part thereof, provided that, if gathered, the produce is in the custody or possession of the ryot or deposited on the holding or on a threshing floor or place for treading out grain, or the like, whether in the fields or within the homestead."

The right of the purchaser to hold the property purchased for arrears under S. 125 free from the encumbrances except those created before the passing of the Act is given in pursuance of the charge already created under S. 5 of the Act for rent and also for interest. If the decree was for interest alone and not even rent, then it may be contended that the appellant would be entitled to the benefit under S. 125. But the decree is neither for rent nor for interest and there being no charge — the only charge that is created by the statute being in respect of rent and interest — it cannot be said that a purchaser of a holding in pursuance of a decree which is not either for rent or interest or both would be entitled to contend that he is a charge-holder and therefore entitled to hold the property free from the encumbrances except those created by the Act.

(5) Learned counsel for the appellant relied on the provisions of Ss. 126 and 127. S. 126 which is as follows:

"The portion of the holding brought to sale by the land-holder shall be, as nearly as possible, equal in value to the amount of arrears due and costs" only provides that the extent of the property that is to be brought to sale may also cover for the costs, which however cannot be taken to mean that a charge for costs is also created though it is not included in S. 5 of the Act. Similarly, S. 127 which provides rules for disposal of the sale proceeds says that in disposing of the proceeds of sale, there shall first be paid to the land-holder the costs incurred by him in bringing the holding to sale and in the next place, the amount due to him for arrears and interest upto date of payment. The costs of sale incurred by the land-holder are not costs of a sale held in pursuance of a decree for sale, but by distraint and other means provided for in the Act with the help of the Collector. In any event, even this provision could not be understood as providing a charge for costs, the same not having been included in S. 5 of the Act where the charge is confined to the rent and to any interest accruing due on the rent. I am therefore of opinion that a purchaser of a holding in execution of a rent decree for costs would not be entitled under S. 125. Madras Estates Land Act, to hold the property free from the encumbrances which are created before or after the passing of the Act. S. 125 will have no application to such a purchaser.

(6) There is a memorandum of cross objections. That arises out of the contention of the respondent that even the purchase by the appellant was benami for the judgment-debtors in O. S. No. 165 of 1944. That was raised as an issue at the trial and the learned District Munsif went into the question and gave a finding that the purchase by the plaintiff was only benami for Nadimuthu and his brothers and that the purchase could not therefore be upheld and in any event not binding on the defendant. The appellate court has not gone into the question and was content with disposing of the appeal on the question of law just dealt with. I consider this is a case which ought to be sent to the lower appellate court for a finding on the issue which was decided by the trial court but was not dealt with by the appellate court. The appeal is remanded for a finding on issue 1. Time for return of the finding one week after the reopening of this court.

B/D.R.R.

Case remanded.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 235 (Vol. 40, C. N. 86)
GOVINDA MENON J.

The State of Madras, represented by the Collector of West Godawari, Appellant v. Nadimpalli Subbaraju, Respondent.

Second Appeal No. 1691 of 1948, D/- 22-2-1952.

Grant — Government through its revenue officers granting darkhast — Order becoming final — Government has no power to revise the order validly and duly made by the Revenue Officer: 26 Mad 268 Rel. on. 1915 M. W. N. 148 Distinguished. — (Madras Revenue Boards Standing Order No. 15).

(Para 1)

N. S. Srinivasan for the Government Pleader, for Appellant; D. Narasaraju for Respondent.

JUDGMENT: Mr. Narasaraju for the respondent conceded that the learned subordinate Judge is in error in thinking that the order in question is one made by the Collector; but it is really and in essence one passed nominally by the Collector but under the directions of the Board of Revenue who themselves have ordered the Collector to act in the manner he did under the behest of the Government. The result comes to this, that when under Ex. B. 20 the Board of Revenue refused to interfere with the order passed by the Collector, the Panchayat Board President had exhausted his remedies and subsequently whatever action has been taken by the Collector the same must be deemed to be passed under the orders of the Government. The question then arises, whether the Government has got any all-pervading or supervening power to interfere, for whatever reason it may be, in the orders passed by the subordinate revenue authority in accordance with the provisions of the Board's Standing Orders in the grant of darkhast. That the Government cannot have any such power and cannot set aside an order of the lower authority when it has become final is evident from the judgment of Bhashyam Aiyangar J., in — 'the Secretary of State for India in Council v. Kasturi Reddi', 26 Mad 268.

There are many passages in that illuminating judgment at pages 273, 277, 278, 279, 280, 281 and 283 wherein the various aspects of the question have been discussed in great detail to show that there is no such residuary or supervisory power vested in the Government. At page 283 the learned Judge observes as follows:

"When the proposal of any applicant is accepted by an officer duly authorised in that behalf by the darkhast rules and the acceptance is communicated to the applicant, there is a valid contract and disposal of the land, unless the grant was procured by fraud, misrepresentation or mutual mistake as to any matter of fact essential to the agreement (Indian Contract Act, Ss. 17, 18 & 20). The grant, therefore, cannot be annulled or revoked by the officer who made the grant, by his successor in office or even by the Governor in Council."

I wish especially to emphasise the words "or even by the Governor in Council." The learned Judge thinks that when there has been valid assignment under dharkhast rules and patta granted to the applicant, the title becomes complete and vested in such assignee and the Government cannot later on revoke or change it. It is as if the Government through its agent the Collector or the Revenue Divisional Officer or the Tahsildar, as the case may be, has sold away or assigned rights in certain land by means of a duly stamped and registered document though according to the Crown Grants Act then in force no such registration or stamp for the document was necessary. The grant of a patta is tantamount to assignment by a registered document and when it is done the title becomes complete in the assignee and cannot later on be revoked by the Government.

Mr. N. S. Srinivasan for the learned Government Pleader strenuously contended that this decision in — 'the Secretary of State for India in Council v. Kasturi Reddi', 26 Mad 268 should no longer be considered as a binding authority because of certain observations in — 'Devaramani Bhugappa v. Pedda Bimakka Gowd', 1915 M. W. N. 148. He further contended that at the time — 'the Secretary of State for India in Council v. Kasturi Reddi', 26 Mad 268 was passed, Board's Standing Order No. 15 did not contain rule No. 18 which empowered the authorities who made the grant to revise their own orders. The fact that rule 18 has later on been incorporated in Standing Order No. 15 would not make any difference because it is conceded here by the respondent that the Collector himself in this case has not revised or reviewed his earlier order. So the only question as I have already stated is whether the Government can set aside an order which has been validly made, for any reason whatever and in my view — 'Devaramani Bhogappa v. Pedd Bhimakka Gowd', 1915 MWN 148 does not say that Government has got that power. As stated by Napier J. — 'the Secretary of State in Council v. Kasturi Reddi', 26 Mad 268, decided two points:

"First, that where Government has given authority to a Tahsildar to grant land subject only to a right of appeal, the grant of such land within the scope of his authority is binding on Government. The other is that a grant like any other disposition arising out of contract can be set aside if it is procured by 'fraud'....."

This decision does not lay down that when the agent of the Government, say the Tahsil-dar, Revenue Divisional Officer or the Collector has exhausted his rights under the orders, the Government can intervene and what cannot be done by an agent, the principal can. If the contention put forward on behalf of the learned Government Pleader is accepted, then it comes to this, that the Government as the principal can revoke an agreement or grant made by its duly constituted agent without giving any reasons whatever. I do not think that I should go to the extent contended by the learned counsel. When the learned Subordinate Judge found that the Collector has no power to cancel his earlier order after it has become final, I would hold that the Government itself has no power to cancel an order validly and duly made by the Collector. There is no provision for a review or revision by the Government. The second appeal fails and is dismissed with costs. No leave.

B/R.G.D.

Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 236 (Vol. 40, C. N. 87)

RAMASWAMI J.

S. J. S. Fernandes, Petitioner v. V. Ranganayakulu Chetty, Respondent.

Civil Misc Petn. No. 3123 of 1952, D/- 16-7-1952.

(a) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 151 and O. 47, R. 1 — Power to review is not inherent power — Such right must be conferred by statute — Case under Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act — Order in revision by High Court — No provision for review under Act — Order cannot be reviewed under inherent powers — (Houses and Rents — Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (25 of 1949), S. 12 (B) ).

(Para 6)

Anno: C. P. C. S. 151 N. 3 Pt. 5.

(b) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 141 and O. 47, R. 1 — Case under Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act — Order in revision by High Court — Review under O. 47, R. 1 — (Houses and Rents — Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (25 of 1949), S. 12B).

S. 141, Civil P. C. is indicative of general enunciation of the principle by the Legislature that to all judicial proceedings the Code is applicable and this arises only where the proceedings reach the Court appealed to as one of the ordinary Courts of the country with regard to whose procedure, orders and decrees the rules of the Code are applicable.

(Para 9)

The Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act is itself a self-contained one and the provisions of the Civil P. C. do not apply to a proceeding under that Act by reason of S. 141 and therefore O. 47, R. 1 is not attracted to an order passed by the High Court in revision in respect of such a proceeding.

(Para 9)

Anno: C. P. C. S. 141 N. 2 O. 47 R. 1 N. 21.

K. Krishnaswami Iyengar, for Petitioner; S. Ramachandra Aiyar for T. V. Balakrishnan, for Respondent.

ORDER: This is an application for review of the order passed by me in C. R. P. No. 85 of 1952, dated 23-1-1952.

(2) The short facts are: The petitioner Sri S. J. S. Fernandez is a tenant and the respondent Sri V. Ranganayakulu Chetti is the landlord in regard to premises No. 3 Singanna Naicken Street, G. T. Madras. The landlord filed a petition for eviction of the petitioner on the ground of sub-letting. The Rent Controller found the allegation proved and ordered eviction. The Appellate Court upheld the order. There was a revision petition to the High Court and after hearing the learned advocate for the petitioner, I dismissed the revision petition on the foot that there were no grounds to interfere in revision. This review application has been filed on grounds which have been made to fall under O. 47, R. 1, Civil P. C.

(3) The short point for determination is whether this application for review lies.

(4) The Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act, 1949, and the rules framed thereunder contain no provision for review and in fact it contained no provision for a revision before that and this Court was holding that no revision lay on account of the fact that the District and Subordinate Judges were appointed under the Act as 'persona designata' and not as courts. It is enough to cite the two decisions, viz., — 'Abdul Wahid Sahib v. Abdul Khader Sahib', 1947-1 MLJ 207 decided by Yahya Ali J. and similar decision by Mack J. in — 'Rajam Aiyar v. Pavanammal', 62 MLW Journal p. 36. Yahya Ali J. held that from the language of S. 12 it seemed clear that the District and Subordinate Judges mentioned by the notification functioned as 'persona designata' and not as courts subordinate to the High Court and as such an application for transfer of an appeal before such authority would not be maintainable. — 'H. A. Aziz v. Kilyoboy', 4 Rang 304 FB and — 'Kiron Chandra v. Kalidas Chatterjee', AIR 1943 Cal 247, were referred to with approval. Therefore when the defects of the Act came to be considered on a suggestion made by the High Court itself, this specific provision for revision was made. But as pointed out just now the Act contains no provision for review.

(5) Inasmuch as the Act contains no explicit provision for review the petitioner has supported his claim to one with reference to (a) the inherent powers of court and (c) the Code of Civil Procedure.

(6) So far as the invocation of the inherent powers of court is concerned, it has been held repeatedly and has now become well settled law that the power to review is not an inherent power of a judicial officer but such a right must be conferred by Statute. This is based upon the common sense principle that prima facie a party who has obtained a decision is entitled to keep it unassailed unless the Legislature has indicated the mode by which it can be set aside. A review is practically the hearing of an appeal by the same officer who decided the case. Therefore, the course of decisions in this country has been to the effect that a right to review is not an inherent power: see — 'David Nadar v. Manicka Vachaka Desika Gnana Sambanda Pandara Sannathi', 33 Mad 65; — 'Lala Prayag Lal v. Jai Narayan Singh', 22 Cal 419; — 'Bajinath Ram Goenka v. Nand Kumar Singh', 34 Cal 677 and — 'Anantharaju Shetty v. Appu Hegade', 37 MLJ 162.

(7) Therefore we have next to consider whether O. 47, R. 1, Civil P. C. applies. It is now well settled once again, that it is only when the court, in this case the High Court, which is appealed to or wherein revision is applied for, is one of the ordinary courts of the country with regard to whose procedure, orders, and decrees, in this particular matter, the rules of the Code of Civil Procedure are applicable, then only it would attract O. 47, R. 1, Civil P. C., because in such a case the ordinary incidents to litigation under the Civil P. C., viz., review would be found available to the party and even that, so long as it is not excluded by specific provisions to the contrary.

So we have got to see whether in the present proceedings where the High Court is reached that court is appealed to as one of the ordinary courts of the country with regard to whose procedure, orders and decrees the rules of the Civil Procedure Code are applicable. The Act itself does not contain any provision regarding the application of the Civil Procedure Code and in fact the provisions of the Act seem to be self-contained in regard to procedure and the Act has gone to the extent of providing for the bringing in of the legal representatives on record and costs, to mention two instances. If really the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure are applicable 'mutatis mutandis' to the procedure under this Act, these provisions are wholly superfluous. On the other hand, they clearly indicate that the Code of Civil Procedure was not intended to be generally applicable to the proceedings under this Act.

(8) This is the view which has been held in a series of decisions of this court. I have already mentioned the decision of Yahya Ali J. and it need not be repeated. In — 'Devichand Moolchand v. Dhanraj Kantilal', 1948-1 MLJ 276, decided by a Bench of this court, it has been held that the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure do not apply to the proceedings under Rent Control Act. The desirability of framing Rules making at least some of the important provisions of the Code applicable to the proceedings under the Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act was pointed out. On account of the suggestion, when the Act came to be extensively amended rules have been framed for the bringing in of legal representatives on record. The above decision quoted the observations of Sir Frederick Gentile C. J. and Govindarajachari J. in — 'Abdul Khadir Hadjar v. A. K. Murthi', 1947-2 MLJ 482. The learned Chief Justice remarked:

"It is, in my view, to be regretted that the provisions of the Code have not been made applicable to proceedings under the Control Act."

Again,

"I have already expressed the view that in the absence of incorporation of the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure in the rules of procedure for the tribunals under the Control Act, there is no justification for the application of the principles of those provisions, otherwise it would mean applying those provisions when they are not made applicable."

Similarly the learned Chief Justice and Raghava Rao J. in C. M. P. No. 6144 of 1948 reported in the journal section of '62 MLW page 36' have pointed out that the appellate authority under the Madras Act 15 of 1946 has not got all the ordinary powers of the appellate court of the land.

(9) In the face of these clear decisions, holding that the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure do not apply and if the Act itself is a self-contained one there is no point in contending that by reason of S. 141, Civil P. C. the provision for review is attracted. This point was considered in — 'Anantharaju Shetty v.

Appu Hegade', 37 MLJ 162, referred to above and it was pointed out there that the section only empowers the Judge to regulate judicial trials by rules as to summoning of witnesses etc., which are to be found in the Code and not that the Code is to be applied in its entirety to such proceedings, including power of appeal and of review.

This contention however does not really arise in this case because S. 141, Civil P. C., is indicative of general enunciation of the principle by the Legislature that to all judicial proceedings the Code of Civil Procedure is applicable and I have pointed out how the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council has held that this arises only where the proceedings reach the court appealed to as one of the ordinary courts of the country with regard to whose procedure, orders and decrees the rules of the Code of Civil Procedure are applicable, and which is not the case in so far as this special enactment is concerned as was found to be the case with regard to the Madras Hindu Religious Endowments Act in — 'Anantharaju Shetty v. Appu Hegade', 37 MLJ 162.

(10) Therefore, this application for review does not lie and consequently it is dismissed and in the circumstances without costs.

B/V.R.B.

Application dismissed.

A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 238 (Vol. 40, C. N. 88)
RAGHAVA RAO J.

Ratnam Pillai and others, Appellants v. Ganapathi Subramaniya Aiyar, Respondents.

Second Appeal No. 2590 of 1948, D/- 29-7-1952.

Hindu Law — Widow's estate — Alienation — Alienation of entire estate for maintenance — Excess of authority.

Where the widow was a paralytic and also an aged woman, and unless from year to year one bit or other of the estate in her possession should be sold out, the money required for her actual maintenance could not be met by the widow, and therefore instead of going on with alienations of bits of property from year to year she went on with a single alienation of the whole estate making out of the bulk of the consideration for the sale a fund from out of which her future maintenance would come:

Held that this sort of conversion of immoveable estate into a cash fund, although it might be that from out of the fund she meant to maintain herself, was absolutely beyond the powers of the widow. (Para 1)

K. V. Venkatasubramania Iyer and N. K. Vinayagam, for Appellants; M. S. Venkatarama Iyer, for Respondent.

JUDGMENT: This, in my opinion, is a clear case in which the appeal has to be allowed. I have, however, since reservation of judgment, carefully considered the pathetic appeal that Mr. M. S. Venkatarama Aiyar, made on behalf of the widow and the alienee from the widow. I still find that the only course which I can take is to allow the appeal. The widow in this case sold practically all the immoveable property in her possession for a sum of Rs. 4800 out of which she utilised a sum of Rs. 1440 for the discharge of debts binding on the estate, and as regards the balance of the consideration of the sale deed, she deposited it with her brother as more or less a fund for her future maintenance.

It has been argued for the alienee that the widow was a paralytic and also an aged woman, and unless from year to year one bit or other of the estate in her possession should be sold out, the money required for her actual maintenance could not be met by the widow, so that if instead of going on with alienations of bits of property from year to year she went on with a single alienation of the whole estate making out of the bulk of the consideration for the sale a fund from out of which her future maintenance would come, there would be nothing objectionable in it, and such an act could not be regarded as an excess of the authority of the widow under the limited estate which she had. It is perfectly clear to my mind that this sort of conversion of immoveable estate into a cash fund, although it may be that from out of the fund she meant to maintain herself is absolutely beyond the powers of the widow.

Ordinarily speaking, an alienation of the corpus is forbidden except for necessity or benefit of the estate, and in the present case except to the extent of the debts binding on the estate, which were, in fact, discharged from out of a part of the consideration for the sale, it cannot be said that there were any circumstances of compelling necessity to justify the widow in converting the corpus into cash.

(2) No doubt, the argument ad misericordiam addressed by Mr. Venkatarama Aiyar with his usual ability impressed me somewhat at the time of the hearing of the appeal; but on a careful consideration, I can only say that hard cases make bad law, and if I give effect to the argument of the respondent in this case, it will be no more than to create a bad precedent on the ground of the peculiar hardship of the party in the present case. In fact, the sale deed itself does not state that on account of the impossibility or impracticability of alienations of bits of the estate from year to year, as the need for her maintenance might arise, the widow had to resort to the method of an alienation of the entire estate for a sum of Rs. 4800, and there was set out no circumstance which rendered it impossible or which would render it impossible to make alienations of such bits of the property as might be required for her future maintenance from time to time.

Mr. Venkatarama Aiyar argued that if such recitals were found in the sale deed, they might be construed as recitals deliberately inserted into the sale deed for the purpose of a show of necessity for the transaction. That may or may not be, and I do not know what the court would have done with such recitals, had they been found in the sale deed. The thing that matters is that there are no recitals in the sale deed. No doubt, one witness has been examined to show that in the circumstances in which the widow was situate on account of her getting about 50 kalams of paddy as the residue out of the income of the property from year to year, which as Mr. Venkatarama Aiyar has pointed out, would not be worth more than Rs. 75, there would be every necessity for the widow to alienate a 'mah' or two of the property from year to year.

As I have said, the matter ought to be judged by the condition in which the estate and the widow stood at the time of the alienation and not by reference to the possibility of sales of small bits of property out of the whole estate, instead of which the widow alienated the entire corpus making, as I have already said, of the bulk of the consideration a fund to be kept by her brother for her future maintenance purposes. In my opinion, it is unnecessary to cite any authority in support of the view that I am taking; but if authority were needed, it would be found in a case, cited by Mr. K. V. Venkatasubramania Aiyar, learned counsel for the appellants, of the Bombay High Court decided by (Beaumont C. J.) and reported in — 'Gyanu Kashiba v. Sarubai Biru', AIR 1943 Bom 266.

(3) The case, in my opinion, is concluded by settled principles of Hindu law, which the Bombay High Court has referred to in the case above noted, and I have no hesitation in allowing the appeal, setting aside the judgment and decree of the lower appellate Court, and restoring the judgment and decree of the trial court with costs throughout. Time for depositing the amount three months from today. No leave.

B/V.R.B.

Appeal allowed.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 239 (Vol. 40, C. N. 89)
SOMASUNDARAM AND BASHEER
AHMED SAYEED JJ.

In re Chinnathambi, Appellant.

Criminal Appeal No. 43 of 1952 and Criminal Revn. Case No. 79 of 1952, D/- 23-7-1952.

Penal Code (1860), Ss. 300, 325 — B rendered unconscious by blow from A — Taking B to be dead A hanging B by rope — Death caused by hanging — Offence not murder.

A dealt a blow on his wife B who was thereby rendered unconscious. Thinking B to be dead, A tied her by a rope and hanged her to a beam in order to create a false evidence. In the trial of A for murdering B, it was proved that B's death was caused, not by the blow, but by the hanging.

Held that as A did not intend to cause B's death by hanging and he was only hanging a body which was dead already according to his belief, in order to make it appear that the woman got herself hanged by the rope and died as a result thereof, the offence that A had committed would be one of grievous hurt falling under S. 325, I.P.C., and not an offence of murder punishable under S. 302: ILR 42 Mad 547 Foll. (Para 6)

Anno: I.P.C., S. 300 N. 4 S. 325 N. 2.

A. B. Nambiar, for K. Krishna Menon, for Accused; The Asst. Public Prosecutor, for the State.

BASHEER AHMED SAYEED J.: The appellant in this case has been convicted for having murdered his wife, one Pappal, on or about the 28th July 1951, at about lamplighting time, at Thiruvagoundanur, and sentenced to transportation for life by the learned Additional Sessions Judge of Salem division.

(2) The prosecution story is that there have been some misunderstanding and quarrels between the appellant and his wife, both being young couple, in respect of certain jewels that had been made for the wife by the appellant. The silver anklet which was made for her by the appellant seems to have been given away to a relation of the wife; and she was questioned about it and then some quarrel ensued in respect thereof. Subsequently, when the wife again went to her parents' house she is said to have parted with silver bangles that were made for her by the appellant. On that occasion the appellant grew very wild and after rebuking her seems to have dealt a blow as a result of which two injuries were caused to the deceased as spoken to by the medical evidence.

(3) The post-mortem certificate reveals that there were two injuries which were not very serious but were of a simple nature. As a result of the blow on the head, the deceased is said to have become unconscious and after she became unconscious the appellant tied a rope round her neck and tied her to the beam in the room and closed the door. Hearing the noise that had been created in the room, P. Ws. 1, 2 and 3 rushed to the spot one after another. P. W. 1 cried out against the appellant that he had committed such an offence against the young woman. P. W. 2 also who rushed later heard P. W. 1 exclaim that the appellant had committed such an offence. P. W. 3 also heard to a similar effect. At first, they saw the body hanging from the beam by a rope and subsequently they saw the body being brought down by the appellant cutting the rope.

(4) P. W. 1 spoke to these facts in her statement under S. 164, Cr. P. C. P. Ws. 2 and 3 spoke to these facts in the committal Court but in the Sessions Court all these witnesses became hostile and they were treated as such by the prosecution and were allowed to be cross-examined by the Public Prosecutor. The statement of P. W. 1 recorded under S. 164, Cr. P. C. as also the statements of P. Ws. 2 and 3 recorded before the committal magistrate have been marked under S. 288, Cr. P. C. as substantive evidence in the trial before the Sessions court.

(5) There is no direct eye-witness to the beating by the appellant by any stick or any other weapon; but the medical evidence is positive to the effect and that two injuries were found on the person of the deceased. The medical evidence is also positive on the fact that death was not due to these injuries but it was due to asphyxia which was due to the hanging by the rope. That the body was hanging in the room by the rope and that it was brought down have also been made fairly clear from the evidence of the witnesses that have spoken at the earlier stage and whose evidence has been marked. It transpires from the evidence that the appellant having caused a blow as a result of which the deceased woman got unconscious tied her by a rope and then hanged her to the beam being afraid that the blow had caused the death of the woman, while, actually, according to the medical evidence, death had not been caused by the blow dealt by him.

(6) The question is what exactly is the offence that has been committed by the appellant? We are unable to see that the offence that has been committed by the appellant on the facts of this case would be one of murder for, the evidence is, so far as it goes, convincing that the hanging has taken place in order to create a false evidence under the impression and belief that the woman had already died as a result of the blow the appellant dealt on her while in fact death has really been caused by the hanging itself. It cannot be said that the appellant intended to cause the death by hanging. He was only hanging a body which was dead already according to his belief in order to make it appear that the woman got herself hanged by the rope and died as a result thereof. In such a case, the offence that has been committed would be one of grievous hurt which would fall under S. 325 IPC, and not an offence.

under S. 302 of the Code. This case is governed by the ruling given by the Full Bench in—'Palani Goundan v. Emperor', 42 Mad. 547 where the facts have been more or less similar to the facts that emerge in this case. The appellant is, therefore, liable to be punished only under S. 325, I. P. C. as he is proved to be guilty of only that offence and nothing more. He has dealt the blow which made the woman become unconscious, so much so that it created the impression and belief in the mind of the appellant as if she was dead.

(7) The evidence of P. Ws. 6 and 7 also goes to prove that the hanging was done by the appellant under the impression that the deceased woman had died by reason of the blow which he dealt on her. Therefore, taking into consideration the material furnished by Exs. P. 4 and P. 6 and the evidence of P. Ws. 6 & 7, the conclusion could be only that the offence of which the appellant is guilty is one that falls under S. 325 I. P. C. We, therefore, think that the conviction and sentence of transportation for life under S. 302, I. P. C. cannot be sustained. They have, therefore, to be set aside. As we are of the opinion that an offence has been proved only under S. 325 I. P. C. we think the appellant has to be convicted under that section and sentenced to seven years' rigorous imprisonment. The conviction and sentence are accordingly modified and the revision is dismissed.

E/D.R.R.

Order accordingly.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 240 (Vol. 40, C. N. 90)

CHANDRA REDDI J.

Veeri Chettiar and others, Appellants v. Karion Chettiar and others, Respondents.

Second Appeal No. 2253 of 1948, D/- 22-7-52.

Hindu law — Joint Family — Sale of undivided share of member in execution of decree against him — Repurchase of share by joint family — Acquisition is for benefit of whole family including the alienating member — He can share in subsequent partition.

Despite the sale of the undivided share of a member in the joint family properties, in execution of a decree against him, the member continues to be a member of the joint family, because the alienation of the undivided share of a member of a joint family does not bring about a disruption in the family. The result is that the sale does not make any difference so far as the status of the member, as a member of the joint family is concerned. That being so, the repurchase of his undivided share by the family cannot be said to be only for the benefit of the non-alienating members, unless it is proved to be so with reference to the terms of the document, Ex. B. 1 read in the light of the recitals in the other relevant documents. Where on the other hand the relevant documents show that the acquisition was for the benefit of the whole family and not for the benefit of the non-alienating members only, the member cannot be excluded from a share in the joint family properties. But in allotting his share in the joint family properties to him, he should be debited with the sum paid by the joint family for the purpose of getting back his share. (Paras 4, 5)

S. Ramachandra Aiyar, for Appellants; K. Veeraswami and C. N. Pattabhiraman, for Respondents.

JUDGMENT: Defendants 1 to 4 are the appellants. The plaintiff filed the suit for partition of the joint family properties of himself and defendants 1 to 6, defendants 1, 5 and 6 being his brothers and defendants 2 to 4 being the sons of a deceased brother of his, who died even during the lifetime of their father, Peddi Chetti. The joint family properties consisted of 76 acres of land, two houses and vacant sites. In 1929, a creditor of the plaintiff filed a small cause suit, obtained a decree and brought his share of the joint family properties to sale in execution of the decree. The decree-holder himself purchased the share and obtained symbolical delivery of the same. Shortly thereafter, Peddi Chetti, as manager of the joint family, obtained a release of it from the auction purchaser on payment of Rs. 300 as seen from Ex. B. 1 dated 13-9-1933. Peddi Chetti seems to have died in or about 1937 and the members of the family seem to have continued as a joint family. Later on, the defendants denied a share to the plaintiff in the joint family properties on the ground that, by reason of the sale of his share in execution of the small cause decree, he ceased to have any interest therein. This led the plaintiff to bring the present suit.

(2) The defence to the suit was that there was a partition in 1934 at which the family properties were divided between Peddi Chetti and his other sons excluding the plaintiff and that the plaintiff was not given any share in the family properties owing to his having lost all interest therein by virtue of the sale of his share in execution of the small cause decree.

(3) The trial court decreed the plaintiff's claim only for a 1/25th share in the joint family properties on the ground that the release of the plaintiff's share by the auction-purchaser was only for the benefit of Peddi Chetti and, therefore, the plaintiff was entitled only to a 1/5th share in that property after the death of Peddi Chetti. On appeal, the District Judge reversed the decree of the trial court in the view that the release under Ex. B. 1 was for the benefit of the whole joint family. The defendants, who are aggrieved by that decision, have preferred this second appeal.

(4) In support of this appeal, various contentions were raised by Mr. Ramachandra Aiyar, the chief of which is that the repurchase or release of the plaintiff's share under Ex. B. 1 was only for the benefit of the non-alienating members and, therefore, the plaintiff would not be entitled to a 1/5th share in the whole joint family properties but only to a 1/5th share in the share of the father. I do not think that there is much substance in this contention. It cannot be disputed that despite the sale of the undivided share of the plaintiff in the joint family properties, the plaintiff continued to be a member thereof, because the alienation of the undivided share of a member of a joint family does not bring about a disruption in the family. The result is that the sale does not make any difference so far as the status of the plaintiff as a member of the joint family is concerned. That being so, the repurchase of the plaintiff's undivided share by the family cannot be said to be only for the benefit of the non-alienating members, unless it is proved to be so with reference to the terms of the document. Ex. B. 1 read in the light of the recitals in the other relevant documents, shows that the acquisition was for the benefit of the whole family and not for the benefit of non-alienating members or only for the benefit of the father. Hence, there is no reason why the plaintiff should be excluded from a share in the joint family properties. In this view, I must say that the judgment of the lower appellate court that the plaintiff is entitled to a 1/5th share in the joint family properties is correct and cannot be successfully challenged.

(5) But in allotting 1/5th share in the joint family properties to the plaintiff, the lower appellate court should have debited the plaintiff with the sum of Rs. 300 paid by the joint family for the purpose of getting back the share of the plaintiff.

(6) Mr. Viraswami strenuously argued that the other members of the family are not entitled to ask that this sum of Rs. 300 should be debited to the share of the plaintiff. This objection can be answered by referring to a passage in Mayne's Hindu Law and Usage (11th Edn.) page 516:

"Where advances are made to any member for his separate and exclusive purpose for which he would have no right whatever to call upon the family purse, or to discharge his own personal debts, contracted for his own exclusive benefit without the authority of the other members and there is no intention of making a present of them to him, the moneys advanced might be treated as joint family funds in his hands which are to be brought into the hotchpot at the division."

There is no suggestion that the debt incurred was not for the separate and exclusive purpose of the plaintiff for which he could not legitimately have a charge upon the joint family purse. In these circumstances, the plaintiff is certainly liable to be debited with the money spent on his behalf for the purpose of getting back his share in the joint family property. It follows that the plaintiff will be entitled to 1/5th share in the family properties subject to this liability.

(7) With this modification, the second appeal is dismissed. The plaintiff will get 2/3rds of his costs throughout.

B/R.G.D.

Appeal dismissed.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 241 (Vol. 40, C. N. 91)
RAMASWAMI J.

Public Prosecutor, Appellant v. Dada Haji Ebrahim Helari, Respondent.

Criminal Appeal No. 698 of 1951, D/- 24-7-52.

Madras Prevention of Adulteration Act (3 of 1918), S. 5 (1) (a) and (b) read with Rr. 29 and 28 D — Sanitary Inspector purchasing small quantity of flour for analysis — Price paid and acknowledged by regular receipts — There is sale.

A Sanitary Inspector went and demanded a small quantity of Bengal gram dhal and flour kept for sale in a godown. He was sold a pavu for two annas and the sale was acknowledged by the clerk of the firm in the receipts which were properly proved. On examination, it was found that they contained artificial, water-soluble-yellow-colouring matter derived from coal-tar.

Held the transaction amounted to a sale and the merchant was guilty of an offence under S. 5 (1) (a) and (b) read with Rr. 29 and 28 D framed under clause (2) of S. 20 (f) and G. O. No. 680 P.H., dated 24-2-50 as amended in G. O. No. 1613 P.H.,

1953 Mad/31 & 32

dated 5-5-50: 1948 MWN Cr. 32 and 1944 MWN Cr. 131, Foll.; AIR 1942 Mad 609, Disting. (Paras 6, 7)

Appellant in person; M. Santosh, for Respondent.

JUDGMENT: This is an appeal preferred by the State against the order of acquittal by the Stationary Sub-Magistrate, Mangalore, in C. C. Nos. 14 and 19 of 1951.

(2) The short facts are: On information received, the Sanitary Inspector Sri Sanjeevi Rao went to the shop of Janab Dada Haji Ibrahim Halari on 28-9-1950 at about 10-45 a.m. The Sanitary Inspector demanded and purchased one pavu of Bengal gram dhal and ten palams of flour at two annas each from out of the stock which was kept for sale in the godown situated at door No. 113 of the 20th Ward of Mangalore municipality. This purchase is spoken to not only by this Sanjeevi Rao examined as P. W. 1 but also by two receipts taken from this merchant marked as Exs. P. 1 and P. 2 & which have been signed "per pro. Dada Haji Ibrahim Halari" by a clerk of that firm. The purchases were bottled and then they have been submitted to the Analyst. On examination it has been found that they contained artificial water-soluble-yellow-colouring matter derived from coal-tar. Therefore this merchant has been put up for an offence under S. 5 (1) (a) and (b) of the Madras Act III of 1918 read with Rr. 29 and 28-D framed under Cl. (f) of sub-s. (2) of S. 20 of the aforesaid Act and G. O. No. 680 P.H., dated 24-2-1950 as amended in G. O. No. 1613 Public Health, dated 5-5-1950.

(3) On coming to court, this Haji Ibrahim Hilari who was represented by a special vakalat contended that he was not guilty of the offence with which he was charged and stated nothing more than that and his learned advocate proceeded to argue on the information available without further examination or adduction of evidence on the part of the accused.

(4) The learned Magistrate who tried this case came to the conclusion that the accused should be acquitted on two grounds, viz., that Exs. P. 1 and P. 2 have not been properly proved and secondly, that the sale in this case was not a voluntary transaction. The State has thereupon instructed the learned Public Prosecutor to file this appeal.

(5) In my opinion, both the grounds put forward by the learned Magistrate are totally devoid of any substance. First of all, Exs. P. 1 and P. 2 have been taken from the accused in the presence of the Sanitary Inspector P.W. 1. They have been signed then and there for the accused by one of his clerks. The learned Magistrate seems to have a singular idea of the provisions of the Evidence Act in that he thinks that a document cannot be proved by a person who was present when the statement therein was made and reduced to writing. So the first point taken by the learned Magistrate, beyond exhibiting his own ignorance of the rule of hearsay evidence, merits no attention at our hands and it has got to be rejected.

(6) Turning to the second point the learned advocate on behalf of the accused before me relies upon the decision of Horwill J. in — 'In re Ballamkonda Kanakayya', AIR 1942 Mad 609. In that case what happened was that A was the owner of shop where he kept and offered ghee for sale. B was working in that shop and his duty was to sell the ghee to customers. The Sanitary Inspector entered the shop, exercised his powers under S. 14 and demanded a sample from B who was then selling articles in his master's absence. The sample was found adulterated ghee and both the accused were prosecuted. The learned Judge remarked as follows:

"The charge against the petitioner was of offering ghee for sale; but it was argued that he would be guilty of selling the ghee. A sale is a voluntary transaction, even when it is preceded by an agreement to sell. When a person exhibits articles in his shop he is making a general offer to sell them, and any person who comes into the shop and offers the price accepts his offer; but the intending purchaser cannot use physical force or threats to compel the owner to part with the goods. If he does, the transaction is not a sale. If the Sanitary Inspector has not exercised his powers under S. 14, but had merely tendered the money and the petitioner had voluntarily handed over the goods, then there would have been a sale; and the fact that it was subsequently found that the goods were required not for consumption but for analysis, would make no difference to the nature of the transaction that had been entered into. In this case, the petitioner would presumably not have parted with the goods voluntarily when he knew that they would be used for the purpose of bringing a case against him and his master. The petitioner was not therefore guilty of selling ghee. Lakshmana Rao J. in a similar case held that the parting with a commodity when it is demanded by the Sanitary Inspector in the exercise of his power under S. 14 of the Act did not amount to a sale."

The facts of this case are however different and fall within the later decision in — 'Public Prosecutor v. Ramachandrayya, 1948 M. W. N. Cr. 32. In that case what happened was that the Sanitary Inspector got a quantity of milk not obviously for his consumption or drinking more milk but only for the purpose of having that milk tested for finding out whether it had been adulterated. This transaction was described as not being a sale by the learned advocate who appeared for the accused in that case. Govinda Menon J. who went into the matter at great length held, following a previous judgment of this court by Kuppuswami Aiyar J. in — 'Public Prosecutor v. Narayan Sing', 1944 MWN Cr. 131, that the transaction was a sale. The learned Judge remarked:

"In — 'Public Prosecutor v. Narayan Sing', 1944 MWN Cr. 131, Kuppuswami Iyer J. has held that when a Sanitary Inspector purchased milk from the accused, tested it and found it was adulterated, the transaction amounted to a purchase and therefore the accused was guilty under rule 29 (b) of the rules and S. 5 (1) (b) read with rule 27 of the Madras Prevention of Adulteration Act. Moreover, in this case Ex. P. 2 the receipt contains an admission by the second accused that he was selling buffalo milk to the Maruthi Vilas Coffee hotel and the transaction by which P.W. 1 got the sample is also admitted to be a sale. Apart from the admission contained in Ex. P. 2 when Mr. Venkatasubbiah exchanged money consideration for the milk, he was acting as a purchaser and the society, a separate legal entity, was performing a contract of sale in delivering milk. Therefore it may even be unnecessary to decide whether the transaction with P.W.

1 was a sale at all, even though I am convinced that it is also a sale."

In this case I have already pointed out how the Sanitary Inspector went and demanded a small quantity of Bengal gram dhal and flour kept for sale in the godown and how he was sold a pavu for two annas and how this is acknowledged in the receipts Exs. P. 1 and P. 2 which have been properly proved. Therefore, the facts of this case fall directly under the decision in — 'Public Prosecutor v. Ramachandrayya', 1948 MWN Cr. 32, cited above and the second ground on which the Magistrate acquitted this accused cannot be supported and has got to be rejected as wholly untenable.

(7) In the result, the acquittal is set aside and the accused is convicted under S. 5(1)(a) and (b) of Madras Act III of 1918 read with rules 29 and 28-D framed under cl. (2) of S. 20 (f) and G. O. No. 680 P.H. dated 24-2-1950 as amended in G. O. No. 1613 P.H. dated 5-5-1950.

(8) The sentence to be awarded remains to be considered and having regard to the time which has elapsed, I think a moderate fine may meet the ends of justice. The accused is fined a sum of Rs. 50.

B./D.R.R.

Acquittal set aside.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 242 (Vol. 40, C. N. 92)

RAMASWAMI J.

Achammagari Venkata Reddy, Petitioner v. The State, Respondent.

Criminal Revn. Case No. 727 of 1951 and Criminal Revn. Petn. No. 721 of 1951, D/-23-7-1952.

Penal Code (1860), S. 268 — Public nuisance — Stagnation of water.

A person commits a public nuisance if he by raising the level and crossbundling a rastha causes stagnation of water leading to breeding of mosquitoes etc., giving rise to offensive smell and causing to the persons living in the vicinity danger to their health and annoyance. (Para 4)

Anno: Penal Code, S. 268 N. 1.

P. Basi Reddi and I. Baliah, for Petitioner; The Public Prosecutor, for the State.

ORDER: The short point for determination in this revision is whether the act attributed to the accused amounted to a public nuisance.

(2) The word "nuisance" has been defined by Stephen to be anything done to the hurt or annoyance of the lands, tenements, or hereditaments of another and not amounting to trespass. (Stephen, III, 499). The word "nuisance" is derived from the French word 'nuire', to do hurt or to annoy. Blackstone describes (no cumentum) as something that "worketh hurt, inconvenience or damage". The offence of public nuisance may thus be analysed (i) it may be caused either by an act or illegal omission (ii) the effect thereof must be either injury, danger or annoyance (iii) actually caused either to the public or to that portion of the public who dwell or occupy property in the vicinity or (iv) threatened of necessity to persons who may have occasion to use any public right.

(3) Bearing these principles in mind, let us examine what the accused did. The accusation is that on 2-6-1950, the petitioner before us raised the level of the public rastha in front of his northern house and also constructed a cross bund across the rastha at the boundary between the two houses with the result that the flow of rain-water northwards through the rasta was impeded, if not completely obstructed and the water began to stagnate in the rasta in front of the southern house, causing annoyance to the complainant and the other residents of the village entitled to use the rasta.

(4) These facts proved through P. Ws. 1 to 4 and whose evidence was not seriously contradicted by the three D. Ws., establish the acts of the accused, viz., raising the level and cross-bunding and the result therefrom namely stagnation of water leading to breeding of mosquitoes etc., and giving rise to offensive smell and causing to the persons living in the vicinity danger to their health and annoyance and threatening also such injury and annoyance to the persons who would of necessity be compelled to use that part of the rasta.

(5) Therefore a clear case of public nuisance having been made out, there are no merits in this revision petition and it is hereby dismissed.

B/V.S.B.

Revision dismissed.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 243 (Vol. 40, C. N. 93)
RAMASWAMI J.

In re, Nimmagadda Raghavalu and others, Petitioners.

Criminal Revn. Case No. 1274 of 1951 (Criminal Revn. Petn. No. 1232 of 1951), D/- 31-7-1952.

(a) Public Gambling Act (1867), S. 4 — Madras Gaming Act (3 of 1930), Ss. 3 and 9 — Essentials to constitute offence under S. 9 — Gaming on Sankranti day — Absence of evidence that house was common gaming house — No offence.

In order to make out the offence of gaming in a common gaming house, first of all the gaming must be in a common gaming house. The mere fact that occasionally people used to play cards in a house and perhaps for money does not necessarily make it a "common gaming house". The term "common gaming house" must at least imply that the house was one used as a place of public resort and a common gaming house is one in which a large number of persons are invited habitually to congregate for the purpose of gaming and it makes no difference that the house was not open to all persons who might be desirous of using the same for gaming. Secondly, under the definition of the common gaming house as defined in S. 3, Madras Gaming Act, the element of profit or gain is an essential ingredient and when this is negatived by the evidence there is nothing to warrant a conviction of the persons found in such a house under S. 9 of the said Act which postulates of course the position of persons found gaming or present for the purpose of gaming in a common gaming house. It is unnecessary that the Police Officer should see the persons in the act of gambling. The words "found gaming" have a wider meaning than "seen gaming." The word "found" is more akin to the word "discovered" in its nature and purpose and that therefore if people are found by the police in such circumstances that it is clear that when the police came upon the scene they were engaged in gaming the section applies. (Para 4)

Where the gambling takes place in a house on the Sankranti day on which such gambling takes place according to local custom and there is no evidence to show that the house is a common gaming house, no offence under S. 9, Madras Gaming Act, is constituted. (Para 5)

Anno: Public Gambling Act, S. 4 N. 1.

(b) Public Gambling Act (1867), S. 5 — Search warrant — Form of — (Madras Gaming Act (3 of 1930), S. 5).

There is no prescribed form for warrant under S. 5 and S. 5 does not require the Magistrate to record anywhere his reasons for believing any information the police may have given him nor even the fact that he had reason to believe that any place is used as a common gaming house, and all that it requires is that the Magistrate shall have reason to believe and that if he has, he can issue his warrant not in any particular form but his warrant giving authority to the police officer to do certain things: AIR 1938 Mad 550, Rel. on. (Para 6)

Anno: Public Gam. Act, S. 5 N. 2.

(c) Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 556 — "Personally interested" — Mere fact that a Magistrate has issued a search warrant under S. 5, Madras Gaming Act, is not sufficient to disqualify him to try the case himself.

S. 556, Criminal P. C. requires something more than the mere issue of a warrant, under S. 5, Madras Gaming Act, by the Magistrate in order to be considered as a party or personally interested precluding him from hearing the case. It depends upon the nature and extent of the enquiry made by the Magistrate before issuing the search warrant as to whether he should or should not try the case. If the Magistrate had made an elaborate enquiry and had come to express his opinion before the issue of the warrant and his warrant results therefrom then his own judicial conscience should suggest to him that he not being able to bring an open mind, should not try the case: AIR 1938 Nag 63 and AIR 1924 Lah 247 Rel. on. (Para 7)

Anno: Cr. P. C., S. 556 N. 5.

(d) Public Gambling Act (1867), S. 5 — Search warrant — Misdescription in — Warrant wrongly describing the house in question as standing in name of accused — Warrant giving sufficient particulars to identify that house had been rented and was being occupied by accused — Misdescription is immaterial and does not vitiate the warrant: AIR 1938 All 252; AIR 1933 Bom 79, Ref. (Para 8)

(e) Public Gambling Act (1867), S. 5 — Search under Act is not covered by S. 103, Criminal P. C. — Mere fact that search witnesses are not persons living in the vicinity and one of them has not been examined will not vitiate the search. (Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 103). Case law Ref. (Para 9)

Anno: Cr. P. C., S. 103 N. 16.

A. Subramaniam, for Petitioners; Public Prosecutor, for the State.

ORDER: This is a criminal revision case filed against the conviction and sentence of the petitioners in C. A. No. 67 of 1951 on the file of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate of Bandar confirming the conviction and sentence in C.C. Nos. 70 to 76 of 1951 on the file of the Stationary Sub-Magistrate, Avanigadda.

(2) The facts are: On 12-1-1951 the Sub-Inspector of Police of Avanigadda approached the Stationary Sub Magistrate of Avanigadda with a requisition, Ex. P. 2; in which he stated that he had reliable information that gambling on a large scale was going on in a common gaming house bearing door No. 21/4 in the fourth ward of Avanigadda belonging to Tangiralla Viswanadha Sastri and requested the issue of a search warrant to enable him to search the house. The Sub-Magistrate is stated to have put further questions also to the Sub Inspector of Police as would justify him to issue the warrant and he is said to have after satisfying himself, issued a search warrant, Ex. D. 1. This search warrant was issued on 12-1-1951. In pursuance of this warrant on 14-1-1951 the Sub-Inspector of Police of Avanigadda accompanied by two Panchayatdars of whom one has been examined as P. W. 1, viz., J. D. Jacob., correspondent of the C. B. H. School, Avanigadda, and another who has not been examined, is said to have raided the place. The seven accused persons who are the seven petitioners before us are stated to have been found playing cards for money in the house and the following were found by the Sub Inspector and Jacob. One set of playing cards numbering 52, money amounting to Rs. 152-5-10, two bed lights, two torch lights and two mats etc. The Station House officer arrested the seven accused and seized the above articles and money before the mediators and got a Panchayatnama, Ex. P. 1, written on the spot and charge-sheeted the accused.

(3) The learned Stationary Sub-Magistrate's judgment shows that this case had been tried under the summons procedure because he writes in para 2 of his judgment that when the accused were called on to explain after the substance of the accusation against them were stated to them they stated that that day being the Sankaranthi festival day Thangirala Anjaneya Sarma was performing Satyanarayana Vritam and that on invitation from him they all went to his house and that the house was not a common gaming house and that they did not gamble there.

(4) Gambling is not by itself an offence and it becomes one only when it takes place in a common gaming house or a public place, with the latter of which we are not concerned here. In order to make out the offence three things must concur. First of all the gambling must be in a common gaming house. "Common gaming house" has been defined as meaning any house in which cards are kept or used for the profit or gain of the person owning, occupying, using or keeping such house whether by way of charge for the use of instruments of gaming or of the house. The mere fact that occasionally people used to play cards in a house and perhaps for money does not necessarily make it a common gaming house. See — 'Emperor v. Subramania', AIR 1935 Mad 648. The term "common gaming house" must at least imply that the house was one used as a place of public resort and a common gaming house is one in which a large number of persons are invited habitually to congregate for the purpose of gaming and it makes no difference that the house was not open to all persons who might be desirous of using the same for gaming; 'In re: Chinniah Naidu', AIR 1924 Mad 729. Secondly under the definition of the common gaming house as defined in S. 3 Madras Gaming Act, the element of profit or gain is an essential ingredient and when this is negatived by the evidence in this case there is nothing to warrant a conviction of the persons found in such a house under S. 9 of the said Act which postulates of course the position of persons found gaming or present for the purpose of gaming in a common gaming house. All that S. 6 of the Act says is that the instruments of gaming and the persons found in a place searched under S. 5 shall be evidence that such place is used as a common gaming house and that the persons found therein were there present for the purpose of gaming, although no play was actually seen by the Police officer or any of his assistants.

In this connection, I may point out that it is unnecessary that the Police Officer should see the persons in the act of gambling. The words "found gaming" have a wider meaning than "seen gaming". The word "found" is more akin to the word "discovered" in its nature and purpose and that therefore if people are found by the police in such circumstances that it is clear that when the police came upon the scene they were engaged in gaming the section applies: see — 'Ghanshamdas v. Emperor', AIR 1936 Sind. 126. It is only a piece of evidence in support of the prosecution for an offence under S. 9. But it would be wrong to treat it as conclusive evidence warranting a finding of guilty of the persons found therein without anything more; see — 'In re Satyanarayana', 58 Mad L W 642. I have already pointed out that the mere fact that occasionally people used to play cards at a house and perhaps for money does not necessarily make it a common gaming house. This becomes all the more so when the day on which the play takes place, is Sankaranthi or other festival day when by local custom people play cards. The presumption of gambling on Diwali day is not so strong as the gambling at other times; — 'Emperor v. Shankar Dayal', A I R 1922 Oudh 224. A person simply allowing the use of his house to gamblers during Diwali festival without any idea of demanding rent, etc., cannot be said to keep a common gambling house: — 'Jai Narain v. Emperor', AIR 1919 All. 345. Gambling in Diwali day should not be considered to be an offence. 'Lachhman v. Emperor', AIR 1930 Oudh 403 where it was found that a certain number of Hindus were gambling in a house on a Satam day on which, according to the local customs Hindus used to gamble and that no non-Hindus were admitted to the premises, held that the presumption under S. 7 of the Bombay Gambling Act was sufficiently rebutted by the fact that it was the Satam day on which the gambling was going on: — 'Pabumal v. Emperor', AIR 1933 Sind. 42.

(5) Therefore, we have to bear in mind these three points when we examine the evidence in this case to find out whether the offence had been made out. In this case none of the three conditions concur. First of all, there is no evidence whatsoever that this house was one used as a place of public resort or one in which a large number of persons were being invited habitually to congregate for the purpose of gaming. Secondly, there is not a tittle of evidence regarding the element of profit or gain which is an essential ingredient in the case. Thirdly, the gambling has taken place on Sankaranthi day and from the statement of the accused it would seem that on Sankaranthi day such gambling takes place in the houses of friends and there is no evidence contra. Therefore, none of the essential ingredients which have to be made out for sustaining a conviction under S. 9 of the Act has been made out in this case.

(6) The learned advocate for the accused has pressed four other points in this case which require consideration at our hands as they arise in this type of cases with monotonous regularity. The first point taken by him is that there is no evidence showing as to how the Magistrate satisfied himself that the place in question was a common gaming house before he issued the search warrant. It was held in 'Subramania Iyer, in re', 69 Mad L J 835 that a search warrant issued by the Magistrate under S. 5, Madras Gaming Act, in the following terms:

"Whereas information has been laid before me that certain premises are being used as a common gaming house and gambling is also going on there and it has been made to appear that a search of the premises is necessary, I authorise you to search" and the warrant was issued, on the basis of a letter brought by the Sub-Inspector of Police and after examining that Sub Inspector it was held that the warrant satisfied the provisions of S. 5 of the Gaming Act. In — 'Bontanathila Naranapayya, In re', 1938-1-Mad L J 509 it was pointed out that there is no prescribed form for warrant under S. 5 and S. 5 does not require the Magistrate to record anywhere his reasons for believing any information the police may have given him nor even the fact that he had reason to believe that any place is used as a common gaming house, and all that it requires is that the Magistrate shall have reason to believe and that if he has, he can issue his warrant not in any particular form but his warrant giving authority to the police officer to do certain things. So point 1 fails.

(7) The second point is that the Magistrate who issued the warrant is a person interested under S. 556, Criminal P. C. & should not have tried this case. S. 556 CrI. P. C. requires something more than the mere issue of a warrant, by the Magistrate in order to be considered as a party or personally interested precluding him from hearing the case. In fact the explanation gives an example, viz.,

"A Judge or Magistrate shall not be deemed a party or personally interested, within the meaning of the section to or in any case by reason only that he is a Municipal Commissioner or otherwise concerned therein in a public capacity or by reason only that he has viewed the place in which an offence is alleged to have been committed, or any other place in which any other transaction material to the case is alleged to have occurred and made an enquiry in connection with the case."

The Illustration to the section states:

"A as Collector upon consideration of information furnished to him, directs the prosecution of B for a breach of the Excise Law. A is disqualified from trying this case as a Magistrate".

Therefore it depends upon the nature and extent of the enquiry made by the Magistrate before issuing the warrant as to whether he should or should not try the case. If the Magistrate had made an elaborate enquiry and had come to express his opinion before the issue of the warrant and his warrant results therefrom, then his own judicial conscience should suggest to him that he not being able to bring an open mind, should not try the case. This is the underlying reason in regard to the decisions in — 'Khemchand v. Emperor', AIR 1938 Nag. 63 and — 'Rajaram v. Emperor', AIR 1924 Lah. 247. In the former, it was held that it is ordinarily undesirable that a Magistrate who believes that the information that a house has been used as a public gambling house is credible should not try the case and in the latter it was held that the Magistrate issuing the warrant may be examined by the accused as to the source of his information and the filling up of the warrant and such Magistrate should not try the case himself. See also — 'Venkobarao v. Emperor', 1948 Mad. W. N. 153. It all depends upon the circumstances of each case and in this case inasmuch as the magistrate is said to have questioned the Sub Inspector and elicited information to satisfy himself and then believed him and issued the warrant it would have been better if the case had been tried by another Magistrate. Records, however, do not show whether the Magistrate who issued the warrant was the Magistrate who tried this case, though it may be so because our Sub-Magistrates love to describe themselves in the third persons. The second point is not substantial.

(8) The third point urged is that Exs. D. 5 and D. 6 give the house door No. 21/4 as standing in the name of Tagirala Kameswara Rao and not in the name of Venami Subbamma as contended by the prosecution and that Viswanatha Sastri has another house at Avanigadda. This point is without substance as on evidence it has been found that notwithstanding the omission in the warrant sufficient particulars have been given to identify that the house had been rented and was being occupied by T. Viswanatha Sastry. In — 'Emperor v. Vallibhai Ibrahim', 34 Bom. L. R. 1447 it was held that if a warrant wrongly described the property to be searched it is bad but that a description may be good in part and bad in part and the court may reject the bad part on the principle of 'Falsa demonstratio non nocet'. Then in — 'Radheylal v. Emperor', A. I. R. 1938 All. 252 it was held that if the description in the search warrant is otherwise adequate to identify the place without ambiguity, it is immaterial that the boundaries are not specified. Point 3 fails.

(9) The fourth point is that the two mediators are not persons living in the vicinity and that one of them has not been examined. But this point is without any substance because the search under the Gambling Act is not covered by the provisions of S. 103, Cr. P. C. — 'Mehadeo Prasad v. Emperor', A. I. R. 1934 Oudh 90; 'Khilinda Ram v. Emperor', AIR 1922 Lah 458 and in re Ramprasad Ganesh Prasad, AIR 1937 Nag 251. The search witnesses need not be residents of the locality and that they need not even be respectable. Such witnesses are not accomplices and their evidence does not require corroboration though it should be submitted to careful scrutiny: In re — 'Ramprasad v. Ganesh Prasad', AIR 1937 Nag 251. The search under the Gambling Act cannot be said to be vitiated on the ground that the search witnesses live half a mile away from the accused's house: — 'Madan Prasad v. Emperor', AIR 1934 Oudh 90. Absence of witnesses does not affect the admissibility but only the weight in regard to searches: — ‘Malak Khan v. Emperor’, 1945 Mad W.N. (Cri) 110. Where there is reasonable explanation why witnesses at site were not employed, viz., on account of ignorance, illiterate people, partisan witnesses who would not stick to truth but are likely to be tampered with and would resile and turn hostile etc. search with the aid of other witnesses from more distant places is not illegal. — ‘Bishnath Raj v. Rex’, AIR 1950 All 147 — ‘Ippili Magatha v. Emperor’, AIR 1920 Mad. 286 (1) and the — ‘State v. Simon Kaitan Fernandex’, 53 Bom LR 713. The fourth point also fails.

(10) The convictions and sentences are set aside and the accused are acquitted and the fine amount, if any, collected from them will be refunded.

B/K.S.

Accused acquitted.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 246 (Vol. 40, C. N. 94)

SUBBA RAO AND KRISHNASWAMI NAYUDU JJ.

K. Somasundaram and others, Petitioners v. The State of Madras and others, Respondents.

Civil Misc. Petns. Nos. 13245 of 1950 and 2615 and 2616 of 1951, D/- 22-4-1952.

Tenancy Laws — Madras Estates Land Act (1 of 1908), S. 3 (2) (d) — Madras Estates (Abolition and Conversion into Ryotwari) Act (26 of 1948), S. 2 (7) — ‘Inam Estate’ — What is — Confirmation of original grant must be of whole village by single title deed — Proceedings under Act 26 of 1948 in respect of estate which is not inam estate are without jurisdiction.

An inam village does not become an estate under the Madras Estates Lands Act unless the grant of the village has been made, confirmed or recognised by the British Government. Therefore, in a case where there has already been a grant by a sovereign other than the British Government the inam village granted becomes an estate only on confirmation or recognition by the British Government. (Para 4)

The confirmation or recognition must be of the grant of an inam village. It is not the confirmation of an inam, but of an inam village and the village that is contemplated is a revenue unit or of a whole village. The inam village is what has been usually termed a major inam as contrasted with minor inams, that is the whole inam villages as opposed to grants of lands, in inam villages, which are considered to be minor inams. Minor inams do not come within the definition of an “estate”, but whole inam villages are brought under the Act and come within the definition of “estates”. (Para 6)

It has been established by a number of decisions that for an inam village to constitute an “estate”, it is necessary that the grant must be of a named village, and must comprise the entire area of the village from which only certain lands, which have already been granted for service or other tenure or reserved for communal purposes, could be excluded. If besides these lands there were certain grants of lands from the village, then it would not be a case of grant of a named village. (Para 8)

Where the confirmation is not of the original grant as such in the sense of confirmation of the whole village, but confirmation of parts, it would not be sufficient to bring it within the language of S. 3(2)(d) of the Act. If at the time of the confirmation, the whole village is not available to the Dharmasanamdars for confirmation and the confirmation takes shape by issue of title deed in respect of a portion of the village, it cannot be confirmation as required under the section. (Para 13)

Thus to constitute an “estate” not only the grant must be of the whole of the named village but the confirmation must be similarly of a whole and named village as required under Explanation I of S. 3(2)(d) of the Estates Land Act, and if there is a grant of a whole village and confirmation only of a part, it could not be an “estate” within the meaning of the Act. (Para 23)

It is the title deed that mainly determines the extent and scope of the grant and from the title deed, one has to find out whether what the title deed covers is the grant of a whole village or only a part of a village. Where there are two separate title deeds for two different portions of the village neither of them can be said to be an “estate”. (Para 24)

Consequently the proceedings taken by Government purporting to act under Madras Act 26 of 1948 and Madras Rent Reduction Act, in respect of estate which is not an “inam estate” within the meaning of Act 26 of 1948, the confirmation being in portions by issue of title deeds for different portions during Inam settlement, are without jurisdiction: Case law discussed.

(Para 24)

M. Sundaram, R. Kesava Aiyangar and K. Parasaram, for Petitioners; Govt. Pleader and T. R. Arunachalam, for Respondents.

KRISHNASWAMI NAYUDU J.:— C.M.P. No. 2615 of 1951 and 13245 of 1950: These petitions are for issue of writs of certiorari and they arise out of proceedings taken under the Madras Estates (Abolition and Conversion into Ryotwari) Act 26 of 1948. In C.M.P. No. 2615 of 1951 the village of Sudiur in the Paramakudi taluk of the Ramanathapuram District has been declared to be an Inam Estate under Act 26 of 1948. The contention of the petitioners is that it is not an inam estate and the Government has no jurisdiction to apply the provisions of the Act to the said village. From the Inam Fair Register (Ex. A. 1) it will be seen that the entire village of Sudiur was granted originally as Dharmasanam inam in 1774. In 1794 one Marudu Servakaran the then Dewan of Sivaganga purchased a portion, that is, 11½ vritties, and granted it for the support of Sudiur chatram. A portion of the village was therefore owned as Dharmasanam and the remaining extent was owned by the chatram. At the time of the Inam settlement, two title deeds were issued one for the Dharmasanam portion and the other for the chatram portion to two different persons and for two different purposes. The total extent of the village being 723-66 acres, an extent of 210-56 acres was reserved for communal purposes and a further extent of 4-16 acres was already granted as minor service inam. The remaining extent of 508-94 acres was originally granted as Dharmasanam inam. At the time of the confirmation in view of the subsequent purchase and regrant to the Sudiur chatram, out of 508-94 acres, 398-48 acres was confirmed as belonging to Dharmasanam inamdars, 76-85 acres for the chatram and the balance of 33-61 acres was shown as belonging to the chatram, but enjoyed as Dharmasanam. On these facts, both the Inam Settlement Officer and the Estates Abolition Tribunal held that the original grant being of a whole village, the confirmation when it recognised the title of the Dharmasanamdars to the portion owned by them, was of the whole village and that therefore it was an inam estate.

(2) In C.M.P. No. 13245 of 1950, the entire village of Perungarai, Paramakudi taluk was granted as Dharmasanam. From the Inam Fair Register, which refers to the copper plate patta of the village, it is found that the Mahajanams said at the time of the Inam Settlement that the Zamindar had arbitrarily resumed a portion of the inam, kept it in his possession, granted a part of the resumed portion in support of the Sudiur chatram & granted the remaining portion to one Muthukakkan as personal inam. The Inam Commissioner found at the time of the inam settlement that the portion held by the chatram was three shares and that the remaining two shares continued as Dharmasanam. In the extract from the inam register, it is found in column 14 that the extent of the Dharmasanam was 512-99 acres and of the chatram was 21-00 acres. It may be noted that in arriving at 512-99 acres it is mentioned as Dharmasanam Perungarai area minus chatram lands, and while arriving at 21 acres, it is mentioned Sudiur chatram minus Dharmasanam lands. In columns 15, 17, 18 and 19 the names of 41 individuals are mentioned as shareholders and the members of the different families, who are entitled to the Dharmasanam, are given. In columns 21 and 22 separate quit rents for the Dharmasanam and the chatram are fixed.

(3) In this case, the Settlement Officer held that the original grant being of a whole village, two title deeds were issued at the time of the Inam Settlement only because subsequent to the original grant two portions of the village were granted for different enjoyment one by the Dharmasanam and the other by the chatram, and that the grant was of a named village as inam and of the whole village and therefore it was an estate. But on a further contention of the Inamdars that both the warams were granted as inam, the Settlement Officer held in their favour declaring that the village was not an estate under S. 2, cl. (7) of the Act 26 of 1948. Though the order of the Settlement Officer is in favour of the petitioners in this petition, it is stated that notwithstanding the said declaration, the revenue officials insist on collection of rents from the ryots, and it is contended that they have no jurisdiction to interfere with the collection as it is not an inam estate.

(4) It is therefore for determination whether the Dharmasanam grants of Sudiur and Perungarai villages are inam estates as defined in S. 2 clause (7) of Act 26 of 1948. "Inam estate" is defined in the said Act "as an estate within the meaning of S. 3 clause (2) (d) of the Estates Land Act, but does not include an inam village which became an estate by virtue of the Madras Estates Land (Third Amendment) Act, 1936." Sec. 3, clause (2) (d) of the Madras Estates Land Act comprises within the term "estate".

"any inam village of which the grant has been made, confirmed or recognised by the British Government, notwithstanding that subsequent to the grant, the village has been partitioned among the grantees or the successors-in-title of the grantee or grantees."

An inam village does not therefore become an estate under the Act unless the grant of the village has been made, confirmed or recognised by the British Government. Therefore, in a case where there has already been a grant by a sovereign other than the British Government the inam village granted becomes an estate only on confirmation or recognition by the British Government. Sudiur village was granted as Dharmasanam to one Ganapathi Battar and from Ex. A. 1, the extract from the Fair Inam Register, it is seen that the Dharmasanam grant was confirmed on 12-6-1867 and title deed No. 1918 was issued, while the chatram portion of the said village of Sudiur was confirmed earlier on 15-2-1865 and a title deed No. 1806 was granted and a separate jodi was fixed for the chatram portion. Both the Dharmasanam portion and the chatram portion are portions of the village of Sudiur. The original grant was of both the portions in 1774 but in 1794 there was a purchase by the Dewan of Sivaganga and a grant of the chatram with the result that in effect the grantee of the village of Sudiur alienated a portion to the representatives of the grantor, who in turn granted it to the Chatram. It may be taken in so far as Sudiur is concerned that the original grant was of the whole village of Sudiur. In the case of Perungarai also, it was a grant as Dharmasanam by the Zamindar of Sivaganga and it was a hereditary grant. It appears from the copper plate referred to in the Inam Fair register that the entire village was granted as Dharmasanam. There was a subsequent resumption of a portion and a re-grant to the Sudiur chatram. In the case of Perungarai, the original grant was of the whole village. But could it be said in view of the resumption of the portion of the grant that the grant by Sivaganga Zamindar to Dharmasanam was of the entire village? There is no alienation in this case by the grantee, but a resumption and regrant resulting in the grant reducing itself to the portion of the village and not to the whole village.

(5) I will proceed to examine the case of both these villages on the assumption that the original grant for Dharmasanam was of the whole village and that subsequent to the original grant, there have been alienations and re-grants. From the extracts of the Inam Fair Register in respect of both the villages it is seen that the confirmation by the British Government was separately made on different dates in the case of Sudiur village, but at the same time in the case of Perungarai village and in both the cases two separate title deeds were issued. The confirmation was of two extents in the said villages in favour of two different individuals under two separate title deeds. In the case of Sudiur, 398-48 acres in the village and another 33-61 acres have been confirmed for the Dharmasanam under title deed No. 1918 on 12-6-1967 subject to payment of quit rent of Rs. 154 and a jodi of Rs. 172-6-0 while 76-85 acres were confirmed in favour of the Chatram and a title deed No. 1806 was granted on 15-2-1865 subject to a payment of quit rent of Rs. 13 and a jodi of Rs. 311-4-3. In the case of Perungarai similarly 512-99 acres being a portion of the Perungarai village were confirmed for the Dharmasanam and 21 acres being a portion of the same village were confirmed for the Sudiur chatram. The entry in column 14 of the Inam Fair Register relating to the Perungarai village makes it clear that the entire portion of the village excluding lands reserved for communal and other purposes have been divided as such and confirmed in favour of the Dharmasanamdars and the chatramdars. From these documents it will be seen that what is confirmed by the British Government in favour of the Dharmasanamdars is not the whole village of Sudiur or Perungarai, but only portions of those villages and it is therefore a case where the grant was of the whole village, but the confirmation was not of the whole village but portions of the village, as the confirmation is expressed in terms of the areas in the villages, not in terms of the names of the villages.

(6) It is for consideration whether this is sufficient to satisfy the requirements of S. 3, clause (2) (d) of the Madras Estates Land Act. A reading of the plain language of S. 3, clause 2(d) would show that the confirmation or recognition must be the grant of an inam village. It is not the confirmation of an inam, but of an inam village, and the village that is contemplated is a revenue unit or of a whole village. The inam village is what has been usually termed a major inam as contrasted with minor inams, that is the whole inam villages as opposed to grants of lands, in inam villages which are considered to be minor inams. Minor inams have been held not to come within the definition of an "estate", but whole inam villages have been brought under the Act and have been held to come within the definition of "estates".

(7) In —Narayanaswami Naidu v. Subramaniam, 39 Mad 683, the learned Judges observed as follows:

"The definition in sub-section 2, clause (d) was obviously intended to exclude from the definition of "estate" what are known as minor inams, namely, particular extents of land in a particular village as contrasted with the grant of the whole village by its boundaries. The latter are known as "whole inam villages." The existence of "minor inams" in whole inam villages is very common and if these inam villages do not come within the definition of "estates" almost all the aghaharam, shrotriyam and mokhasa villages will be excluded. This certainly cannot have been the intention of the Legislature. These minor inams are generally granted for services to be rendered to the village or to the owner and that seems to be the nature of the minor inams in this case."

But what is intended to be covered under the definition are whole inam villages and not portions of inam villages and this is made clear by the explanation (1) to Sec. 3(2) (d) of the Act, which is as follows:

"Where a grant as an inam is expressed to be of a named village, the area which forms the subject-matter of the grant shall be deemed to be an estate notwithstanding that it did not include certain lands in the village of that name which have already been granted on service or other tenures or been reserved for communal purposes."

(8) The difficulty having arisen in recognising certain villages as inam villages by reason of the exclusion from the grant itself of certain lands granted on service or other tenure or lands reserved for communal purposes, this explanation was introduced by the Amending Act II of 1945. It has been established by a number of decisions that for an inam village to constitute an "estate", it is necessary that the grant must be of a named village and must comprise the entire area of the village from which only certain lands, which have already been granted for service or other tenure or reserved for communal purposes, could be excluded. If besides these lands there were certain grants of lands from the village, then it would not be a case of grant of a named village. In the present case, the question whether there has already been a grant of a portion of the village for service or other tenure or grant for communal purposes would not arise, as the grant in favour of the chatram was subsequent to the original grant. This exclusion provided for in the Explanation I of Sec. 3(2)(d) has been permitted for the reason that the lands excluded are lands granted on service or other tenure or reserved for communal purposes, which really are not taken away from the village proper though they are excluded from the grant for the reason that the lands reserved for communal purposes intended for the use of the villagers as also the service of persons to whom the service tenures are granted are similarly utilised for the inhabitants of the village. The exclusion therefore has been restricted to the lands reserved for communal purposes and to service or other tenures.

(9) There is some difference of opinion as regards whether the expression "other tenure" should be considered as 'ejusdem generis' with the words "service tenure" or independent of it. Mahajan J. in — District Board Tanjore v. Noor Mohamed Rowther, 65 L. W. 98 holds that,

"The expression 'other tenure' in the Explanation should ordinarily be construed 'ejusdem generis' with a service tenure owing to the reason that these service tenures usually are resumable and in case of resumable tenures the reversionary right in the land remains in the grantee and therefore even if such resumable tenures are excluded from the grant, in substance the grant can be deemed to be of the whole village. The same cannot be said of lands reserved for communal purposes."

(9a) In the same decision Chandrasekhara Aiyar J. observes that it is unnecessary to hold that the words "or other tenure" in the Explanation to clause (d) of sub-sec. (2) of Sec. 3 must be construed 'ejusdem generis' with "service", and that they are, in his opinion, wide enough to include lands granted as personal inams.

(10) In our High Court in — Suryanarayana v. Venkatadu, 62 L. W. 279 Panchapagesa Sastri J. observed as follows:

"It is argued for the appellants that as there were minor inams and also some poromboke, which was not included in the grant, the inam could not be taken to be a whole inam village and it was further argued that Madras Act II of 1945 could not apply in favour of the defendants, because the minor inams were not service inams, but were Dharmadayam and personal inams and also because poromboke which was excluded could not be regarded as lands reserved for communal purposes. I do not see why personal inams like Bhattavrihi inams and Dharmadayam inams to the temple would not come under the expression "other tenure" in explanation (1) to Sec. 3(2)(d) of the Estates Land Act."

(11) I am unable to find that poromboke lands are of the same category as Dharmadayam or personal inams and that poromboke lands being lands over which no individual has any right could be regarded as lands reserved for common purposes, whereas personal inams like Bhattavrihi inams are grants which are not for service.

(12) In — Basavayya v. Theerthaswamilu Varu, 63 L. W. 921 Viswanatha Sastri J. while not agreeing with Panchapagesa Sastri J. in his observation in — Suryanarayana v. Venkatadu, 62 L. W. 279 that personal inams might fall within the category of lands held on service or other tenure within the meaning of explanation (1) to S. 3(2)(d) of the Act, however, does not express any opinion as to whether the term "other tenure" would include in it personal inams.

(13) Bhattavrihi inams are not grants which could be said to be connected with service or intended for communal purposes. Dharmasanam is like an Aghaharam grant, where a village or portion of a village is granted to Brahmins, who might be of different families, but a Dharmas-sanam like Agraharam grant does not necessarily mean the whole of a village. It is a kind of subsistence grant at a fixed favourable rent held by the grantees and their successors in shares. In the present cases, the confirmation being not of the original grant as such in the sense of confirmation of the whole village, but confirmation of parts, would it be sufficient to bring it within the language of S. 3(2)(d) of the Act? It may be argued that the grant has been confirmed and that what all is required is that there must be confirmation of the grant, but not the confirmation of the grant as such of a whole village. I do not consider that a reading of the section would lend itself to that construction. If the British Government makes the grant, then that would be sufficient to make it an "estate" and the making of the grant must be of an inam village and inam village must be of a whole village and a named village. If that is so, the confirmation must necessarily also pertain to what could be granted to make it an estate, namely, of an inam village being a whole and a named village. The word "confirmation" means to ratify. Ratification has therefore to be complete and not in parts and must therefore refer to the whole and not to a portion. The confirmation that is intended under S. 3(2)(d), is confirmation of the grant of a whole village, and if at the time of the confirmation, the whole village is not available to the Dharma-sanamdars for confirmation and the confirmation taking shape by issue of title deed in respect of a portion of the village, it could not be confirmation as required under the section.

(14) The principle underlying the section is made clear by the explanation that what would constitute an estate is a grant of a named village, which has been held to denote a whole village. A village is defined in S. 3(9) of the Act as "any local area situated in or constituting an estate which is designated as a village in the revenue accounts and for which the revenue accounts are separately maintained by one or more karnams or which is recognised by the Provincial Government or may hereafter be declared by the Provincial Government for the purpose of this Act to be a village, and includes any hamlet or hamlets which may be attached thereto."

A hamlet, sometimes known as "Khandriga" in some parts of the country, though part of a village, cannot be treated as a village by itself. A grant of a "Khandriga" of a village would not amount to a grant of a village. Similarly, confirmation of a hamlet or "Khandriga" would not amount to confirmation of the grant of a village. Therefore, confirmation of a portion of the area covered by the village, as in the present case, would not amount to confirmation of an inam village.

(15) The position of what are called minor inams grant of portion of lands of a village by the original grantor or grantee as to whether they form part of an estate has been considered in certain decisions, all of which are of single judges.

(16) In — 'Viswanadhan Bros v. Subbaiya', 1945-1-M.L.J. 443, Kuppaswami Aiyar J. had occasion to consider the case of a grant of a minor inam by the grantee of a Bhattavriti shrotriya inam. In that case, at the time of the inam settlement, the minor inam which comprised one acre was separately treated and confirmed as inam and a separate title deed was issued. On the question whether a lessee of a piece of land which formed part of the minor inam could claim that it was land in an estate within the meaning of s. 3(2)(d), Madras Estates Land Act, it was held that merely because the land in question formed part of the original grant of an entire village, it cannot be said that at the time when it was recognised, it was part of the Inam in favour of the agraharamdar which was recognised or confirmed by the British Government and hence the land in question cannot be deemed to be part of an estate. After referring to the provision of law, namely, s. 3(2)(d) of the Act, the learned Judge observes:

"The answer to the question as to whether the confirmation or recognition by the British Government was in respect of the entire inam village or of only a portion is the basis for the decision as to whether the land was an estate or not."

(17) It is therefore seen that to make an inam grant an estate, the principle to be applied is whether the confirmation or recognition by the British Government was in respect of the entire inam village or of only a portion. That appears to me, with respect, to be the proper way of approach to the question.

(18) This decision was followed by Happell J. in 'C. R. P. No. 727 of 1945,' where the land in question formed part of a whole inam village, but had been the subject of a separate grant by the mokhasadar. With reference to a similar contention that it was an estate, the learned Judge observed that "as the minor inam was confirmed separately it was not included in the Inam which was confirmed as a whole and could not be regarded as a part of the estate which that inam is by virtue of the confirmation."

(19) In — 'Mangamma v. Appadu', 1948 I-M.L.J. 247 where two parcels of lands comprised in an inam village were treated even before the Inam settlement as separate grants and at the time of the settlement the lands were confirmed under two title deeds, it was held that the lands comprised under one of the title deeds did not form part of an "estate" within the meaning of the Madras Estates Land Act, and that the tenant thereof could not claim occupancy rights. Shahabuddin J. says at page 249:

"The contentions of the learned advocate for the petitioner are these: (1) The very fact that the heading of the extract is "extract of inams in the village of Sitharamudupeta Agraharam" indicates that what was mentioned in the extract Ex. P. 8 was not the whole extent of that village but that there were other inams also ..

.....In any case, the note made by the Inam Commissioner clearly indicates that the old accounts showed the five 'writtis' as a separate devadaya grant. This circumstance in itself is sufficient for rejecting the claim of the defendants that the grant was of a whole village. (2) Even if it be considered that the original grant was of the whole village there can be no doubt that at the time of the confirmation, i.e., the inam settlement the whole village was not regarded as a single inam but as two distinct inams and there the lands in question do not form part of an estate".

With reference to the heading which is similar to the extracts filed in the present case as extract of inam in the village the learned Judge observes:

"The heading which has been referred to already is significant. The word "in" does indicate that there were other inams also in that village. In — 'Suri Reddi v. Agnihotrudu', 1943-2 M.L.J. 528 relied upon by the petitioner with regard to a similar heading it was observed that it itself indicates that various lands in the village were held under inam grants ..... In any case the second contention of the learned counsel for the petitioner has to prevail. According to the definition of an estate mentioned above what has to be seen is whether the confirmation or recognition by the British Government was in respect of the entire inam village or of only a portion".

After referring to the observation of Kuppuswami Aiyar J. in — 'Viswanatham Bros v. Subbayya', 1915 I-M LJ 443 already quoted here and to the decision of Happe J. in C. R. P. No. 727 of 1945 and agreeing with the same, the learned Judge says:

"In both these cases there were two title deeds issued at the time of the Inam Commission & in those cases the original grant was of a whole village. In the present case as stated already the accounts prior to the Inam settlement indicated to the Inam Commissioner that the two extents were treated as two separate grants, thereby indicating that the grant was not a single one at the outset. However, there were two title deeds at the time of the settlement. In my opinion these decisions apply to the facts of this case also and the lands in question did not form parts of an estate".

Satyanarayana Rao J. in S. A. Nos. 1771 and 1772 of 1945 agreed with the view taken by Kuppuswami Aiyar J., in — 'Viswanatham Bros v. Subbaiya', 1945 I-M LJ 443. In that case the question was whether an extent of 3 acres 84 cents formed part of an estate or not. It was held that it did not, for the reason that when these two grants were confirmed it must be taken that the Government did not treat the minor inam as part of the Agharam grant but as being outside its purview.

(20) In — 'Ramaswami v. Jagannathasami', 1950-1-M. L. J. 18, where the question for decision was whether 7 acres and 33 cents in Sankarashanapuram agharam was an estate, following the decision of Kuppuswami Aiyar J. in — 'Viswanatham Bros v. Subbaiya', 1945-1-M. L. J. 443, I held that it would not be part of the inam village simply because it is situated in the village of Sankarashanapuram and that such property would not come under the definition of "estate" in S. 3 (2) (d) of the Act.

(21) Certain observations of mine in that decision are relied upon by the learned Government Pleader and he points out that while I held that 7 acres 33 cents which was a minor inam did not form part of the estate, I observed that the Agharam of Sankarashanapuram minus 7 acres and 33 cents would be an estate. What I said was:

"The question for decision is whether this item of 7 acres 33 cents would come under the definition of "estate" as defined in S. 3 (2) (d) of the Madras Estates Land Act. S. 3 (2) (d) includes in the word "estate" any inam village of which the grant has been made, confirmed or recognised by the British Government notwithstanding that subsequent to the grant, the village has been partitioned among the grantees or the successors in title of the grantee or grantees. The village of Sankarashanapuram has not been granted by the British Government as it is found that it was granted by Kamadana Rayanam Garu in about 1731 A. D. But it has been recognised by the British Government, by the Inam Commission, and the recognition is in respect of the village of Sankarashanapuram to the extent of 247 acres 35 cents in any event excluding 59 acres 53 cents of which the 7 acres 33 cents is a portion. It cannot therefore be said that this is part of the inam village of Sankarashanapuram. Further these lands cannot be said to be a named village as defined in S. 3 (2) (d) and Explanation I read together".

But I further observed as follows:

"The village of Sankarashanapuram would be an inam village coming under the definition of the word "estate" since it is a village the grant of which was recognised by the British Government and a separate title deed was issued and would still be an estate because it is a grant of an inam village notwithstanding that it did not include certain lands such as poromboke and other lands mentioned in the title deed. But that would not make the 7 acres 33 cents also part of that Sankarashanapuram inam village. It is not a named village and since a separate title deed has been issued in respect of the minor agharamdar it cannot be said to be part of the major inam of Sankarashanapuram".

What had to be determined in these cases was as to whether the 7 acres 33 cents would be an estate. Applying the principle of S. 3 (2) (d) and Explanation I, it was assumed that the village of Sankarashanapuram excluding 7 acres 33 cents was the grant of a whole village and therefore an "estate". That observation, however, was not really necessary for the decision of the case excepting to support the argument that 7 acres 33 cents is part of a village and not the whole village. It could not be said that in that case the question was as to whether confirmation of the Agharam portion was of an estate or not, as it did not fall to be decided in that case. But I made it clear by referring to the observation of Kuppuswami Aiyar J. in — 'Viswanatham Bros v. Subbaiya', 1945-1-M. L. J. 443, namely that the question as to whether the confirmation or recognition by the British Government was in respect of the entire inam village or only of a portion would be the basis for a decision as to whether the land is an estate or not. I consider that is the real and proper test and applying that test to the present case, there can be no doubt that the Dharmasanam portion which was confirmed by the British Government could not be an "estate" within the meaning of the Act.

(22) The grant in C. M. P. No. 13245 of 1950 relating to Dharmasanam grant of Perungarai will stand on a stronger footing, as there has not been any alienation by the grantee, but there is a resumption of a portion of the village by the grantor and re-grant to the chatram. In that case, even the grant could not be said to be of a whole village and a named village as the result of the resumption and re-grant to the chatram would reduce itself to the grant being of a portion of the village and not of the whole village of Perungarai.

(23) To constitute an "estate" not only the grant must be of the whole of the named village but the confirmation must be similarly of a whole and named village as required under Explanation I of S. 3 (2) (d) of the Act, and if there is a grant of a whole village and confirmation only of a part, it could not be an "estate" within meaning of the Act.

(24) But it is contended that, if subsequent to the grant, the village has been partitioned among the grantees or the successors in title of the grantee or grantees that would not take away the village from being an estate. The partition among the grantees or the successors in title may be after the grant that is the original grant. In the case of Perungarai, from the extract from the register of Inams it is found that so far as Dharmasanam portion of the village is concerned in columns 16, 17, 18 and 19, 41 persons are mentioned as members of the families that are entitled to the inam for which one title deed is granted and for the chatram portion a separate title deed is granted. The fact that it is owned by several shareholders in severalty has not therefore affected confirmation, but the confirmation is made by the grant of one title deed. But that would not be sufficient to hold that the portion of the grant confirmed by the title deed would be an "estate" since it does not comprise the whole village. Whether the alienees from the grantees after the original grant would be successors in title or whether the words "successor in title" refer only to the heirs do not really arise as affecting the decision of the question raised, since assuming that under the term "successors in title" alienees are included, the crucial point of time is the confirmation; when in spite of alienations it would have been open to the British Government to confirm the title of the alienees by the grant of a single title deed. The existence of any partition or of any alienations subsequent to the grant could not have any material bearing in considering as to whether the grant which is confirmed is an "estate" or not. It is the title deed that mainly determines the extent and scope of the grant and from the title deed, one has to find out whether what the title deed covers is the grant of a whole village or only a part of a village. In this case, there being, two separate title deeds for two different portions of the village neither of them could be said to be an "estate". In the view I am taking of this question as to whether Dharmasanam grants in these villages are inam estates within the meaning of the Estates Abolition Act, the other question as to whether the grants comprise of both the warams or not does not require to be considered. In the result, the proceedings taken by the Government purporting to act under the Madras Estates Abolition Act and the Madras Rent Reduction Act are without jurisdiction and are liable to be quashed.

(25) SUBBA RAO J.: I have the advantage of reading the judgment prepared by my learned brother. The facts have been fully stated therein and it is not necessary to restate them. The applications are argued on the assumption that the original grant was of the whole village, but the Inam Commissioner confirmed them in different parts and issued separate title deeds. It is also disputed that the separate title deeds exhausted the entire village. The question is whether the lands covered by either of the title deeds are parts of an estate within the definition of Sec. 3(2) (d) of the Madras Estates Land Act before the said section was amended by the Madras Estates Land (Third Amendment) Act, 1936. Sec. 3(2) (d) before the said amendment read as follows:

"Any village of which the land revenue alone has been granted in inam to a person not owning the kudiwaram provided that the grant has been made, confirmed or recognised by the British Government or any separate part of such village."

(26) Unhampered by judicial decisions, I shall now proceed to consider the scope of the definition on a construction of the plain words used in the said sub-section and in the light of the historic background of the inam grants.

(27) To come under the definition vis-a-vis the question raised in the case, the grant of the village should have been made, confirmed or recognised by the British Government. During the rule by Hindu rajahs, they used to make grants of land either rent-free or on favourable rent for the support of charitable institutions, for the sustenance of Brahmins and for the maintenance of officers etc. This practice was followed by the Moghul Government. The British Government also made similar grants but they were very few and that system was discontinued. The British Government found that there were various grants of inams the original whereof was lost in antiquity and made various attempts to investigate their title and systematise the tenures. Finally, in the year 1858, they appointed the Madras Inam Commission. The commissioner made an elaborate enquiry, formulated rules and to a large extent investigated the titles and stabilised the tenures. The preparation of the inam register was described by the judicial committee as a great act of State. The investigation was based upon not only oral evidence but on the Collectors' records, the standard inam registers and the accounts of the taluks from the earliest to the most recent period. The Inam Commissioner after satisfying himself about the origin of the tenure either on the basis of the original grants or on the ground of long possession, confirmed the inam grants and, in some cases, enfranchised them. It is not necessary to go into details of the investigation or the manner in which the rate of quit rent was ascertained and fixed. Suffice to say that the Inam Commissioner after satisfying himself, in accordance with the rules framed for the purpose, confirmed the grants or enfranchised them as the case may be, and issued a title deed to the inamdar, or if they were in the hands of different persons, different title deeds to them. The word "confirmed" in the sub-section has always been understood to be the confirmation of the grant by the Inam Commissioner.

(28) The other word "recognised" is not free from ambiguity. One of the attempts made by the British Government for regularising the inams unauthorisedly made by earlier Native Rulers was to issue Regulation 31 of 1802 where under all grants made prior to 26th February 1768 were deemed to be valid and all persons holding such lands would continue to hold them without let or molestation. It has been held that the lands before that specified date were recognised by the Government within the meaning of S. 3(2)(d) of the Madras Estates Land Act. See — 'Ramalinga v. Ramaswami', AIR 1929 Mad 529. There was a conflict of judicial opinion on the question whether any positive act on the part of the Government was necessary to bring in a case within the meaning of the word "recognition" or whether it was enough if the Government acquiesced in continuance of the inam. It is not necessary in this case to consider that question or express my definite opinion thereon. But the decisions indicate that the acceptance of service or the jodi by the Government would be an act of recognition by the Government. It therefore follows that the grant of a village should have been made by the Government, and in a case where the grant was made by some other ruling power, it should have been "confirmed or recognised" by the British Government in the sense indicated above. The emphasis lies on the fact that the grant of a village so made must be confirmed or recognised. The section does not prescribe the mode of confirmation or recognition; nor does it say that the confirmation must be by a single act of the Government. The essential factor is that the entire grant should be confirmed; not parts of the grant.

(29) The definition itself indicates that if in the origin the grant was of a whole village, notwithstanding the fact that separate parts went into the hands of different persons by partition or alienation, nonetheless the parts continued to be parts of an estate. This emphasises the aspect that the origin of the grant is the decisive factor not the subsequent treatment of it. If the inam Commissioner found the village in possession of different individuals with derivative titles, what was more natural and equitable than his issuing separate title deeds? He confirmed the grant of the entire village, but recognising the existing facts, issued separate title deeds. The subtle distinction in the mental process adopted by the Commissioner, namely, confirmation of the whole village but issuing two distinct title deeds does not appeal to me if it is admitted that the original grant was of the whole village. The resultant was the same. The grant of the entire village was confirmed; the process adopted by the Commissioner for convenience or in recognition of the subsequent titles is not a relevant circumstance.

(30) The aforesaid view will be further reinforced and clarified if the steps in the process of recognition are pursued. Suppose there was a grant of an entire village and that subsequent to the grant, by reason of various alienations it was in possession of different persons. The Government continued to collect the quit rent in proportionate shares from the owners of the different parts. It is difficult to argue that the grant of the village was not recognised from the mere fact that the Government realised the revenue due to the Government separately from the various holders. The separate collection of the revenue by the Government on the basis of the jodi originally fixed would certainly constitute recognition of the original grant of the village.

(31) If the construction suggested by the learned counsel for the petitioners is accepted, it will lead to many anomalies. It is now settled law that notwithstanding the existence of certain minor inams, the subsequent grant of an entire village and its confirmation by the British Government would bring it within the definition of an estate. But if the entire village was granted but the minor inams were carved out subsequent to the grant and if the minor inams were separately confirmed, the rest of the village, even though confirmed, would not be an estate. If the British Government made a grant of the village and the village so granted was split up into different parts by alienations, every bit would be part of an estate. If the British Government confirmed and recognised by issuing one title deed, every bit of it would be part of an estate; but if it confirmed it but issued separate title deeds recognising the pre-existing alienations, the entire village would cease to be an estate within the meaning of the Act. In my view all these anomalies can be avoided if the emphasis is laid on the grant and its confirmation and not on the process adopted by the Commissioner. I would like to lay down the following simple formula which would steer clear of all the difficulties: First find out whether the original grant was of the whole village. If it is established, the next question is whether the confirmation or recognition was of the entire grant or a part of the grant. If the entire grant was confirmed or recognised, the process of confirmation or recognition or the fact that different title deeds were issued, or the grant was recognised by separate acts should not matter, for, in either case, the original grant which was of the entire village should be confirmed or recognised by the British Government. Anyhow as I am not differing from my learned brother, it is not necessary for me to pursue the line of reasoning suggested to me in greater detail.

(32) My learned brother relied upon the judgments of single Judge, Kuppuswami Aiyar J. Shahabuddin J. Happell J. and Satyanarayana Rao J. in support of his judgment. He has added his weighty opinion to the views expressed in the long catena of cases cited. The legislature in enacting Act 26 of 1948 must be deemed to have knowledge of the case law and interpretation the learned Judges of this Court put upon the provisions of Sec. 3(2)(e) and with that knowledge adopted the definition of an estate in the Estates Land Act before the Third Amendment in Act 26 of 1948. They must be presumed, therefore, to have accepted the interpretation put upon the definition by the courts. In view of the consensus of judicial opinion on the interpretation of the section and in view of the fact that the legislature presumably accepted that opinion, I do not think I am justified at this stage to strike a different note for it may unsettle or at any rate, introduce confusion in the settled law on the subject. With great reluctance, for the aforesaid reasons, I am not prepared to disagree with the conclusion arrived at by my learned brother.

B/R.G.D.

Order accordingly.

A. I. R. 1953 MADRAS 252 (Vol. 40, C.N. 95)

SUBBA RAO J.

C. Nataraja Mudaliar, Petitioner v. The Madras State represented by the Accommodation Controller, Madras, Respondent.

Civil Misc. Petn. No. 6628 of 1951 D/- 6-8-1952.

(a) Houses and Rents — Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (25 of 1949) (as amended by Madras Act 8 of 1951), Ss. 3 (1) (a), (3) and (4) and 7(3) (a) and (c) — Power of authorised officer to requisition building against landlord's will.

Section 3 (3) clearly indicates that the landlord's intention to let out is not a condition precedent for invoking the power of requisition, for his right to occupy the same accrues to him only if the State or the authorised officer does not require for the purposes stated in the prescribed time. Similarly, S. 3(7) (a) establishes beyond any reasonable doubt that the landlord's intention to let a house is not a condition precedent for the exercise of the authorised officer's jurisdiction. The authorised officer has, therefore, power to requisition a building notwithstanding the fact that the landlord is not willing to let out the same.

(Para 4)

† (b) Constitution of India Arts. 19(1) (f) and 31 (2) and Sch. 7 list II, item 36 — Public purpose — Requisition of house for housing Government servant — Taking possession — Possession taken under S. 3 (3) of Madras Act 25 of 1949 — Exclusion of Art. 19 by Art. 31 — (Houses and Rents — Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control Act (25 of 1949) (as amended by Mad. Act 8 of 1951), S. 3 (3) ).

The difficulty to place a right infringed under one or other of Arts. 19 or 31 is often a difficult one. The following three principles may be borne in mind in approaching the question: The general provision must give place to the specific provision; the pith and substance or the directness of legislation, and whether the right sought to be protected under Art. 19 has been taken away by legislation under another appropriate article.

(Paras 6 and 9)

The requisition of a house for housing a Government servant is a public purpose, for the interests of the Government and that of the public would necessarily suffer if their officers are not properly housed.

(Para 10)

It is not correct to say that Art. 31 deals only with total deprivation of property. Art. 31 (2) deals with acquisition and taking possession. Acquisition means actual transference of property whereas taking possession of property need not imply a total deprivation of the ownership of property. The title to the property may continue in the owner but he may be dispossessed for a public purpose. Item 36 of List II provides both for acquisition and requisition of property. Therefore requisition of property, which does not involve a total deprivation of the property from the owner, does come within the meaning of Art. 31. Therefore it cannot be contended that the Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act 1949, does not deal with the subject-matter covered by Art. 31 of the Constitution of India. S. 3(3) specifically enables the Government or the authorised officer to require any building for the purpose of the State. They can take possession of the same subject to the terms prescribed thereunder. The taking of possession under S. 3(3) is certainly covered by the words "taken possession of" in Art. 31(2). The subject-matter directly comes under Art. 31 which being a special article, excludes the operation of the general article, Art. 19. Hence, where a building is taken possession of under the Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act, the landlord is not protected by the provisions of Art. 19, for Art. 19 (i) (f) can be invoked only if he is legally entitled to use his property.

(Paras 11 and 12)

V. V. Srinivasa Aiyangar and N. Krishnamachari for Petitioner, V. P. Sarathi for the Govt. Pleader for Respondent.

REFERENCES: Courtwise/Chronological/ paras
(50) AIR 1950 SC 27: (51 Cri LJ 1383 SC) 6
(50) 1950 SCR 869: (AIR 1951 SC 41) 8
(51) 87 Cal LJ 140: (AIR 1952 Cal 65) 8
(51) AIR 1951 Nag 33: (ILR (1951) Nag 791) 9
(50) AIR 1950 Pat 392: (29 Pat 790 SB) 7

ORDER: This is an application for issuing a 'writ of certiorari' to quash the order of the Accommodation Controller, Madras, made in respect of the ground floor of the house and premises No. 9 Krishnapuram Street, Royapettah. The petitioner is the owner of the said house. He and his wife with their two sons were living in the said house from the year 1935. For about nine years they occupied the entire building. In June 1944 he let out the ground floor to Miss E. T. Rajeswari M. A., Professor of Physics in Lady Wellington Training College, Triplicane, Madras. It is said that the ground floor was let to her to oblige his friends. In June 1945 the petitioner's son died. Professor Rajeswari vacated the ground floor of the house on 27th April 1951.

The petitioner gave the notice of vacancy to the Accommodation Controller on 28th April 1951. He intimated to the officer his intention not to let it to any other tenants, as he required it for himself. Therein it was also stated that because of their old age and heart troubles, he and his wife were not in a position to get up and down the stair case of the house. The notice of vacancy was received by the Accommodation Controller on 1st May 1951. Thereupon on 7-5-1951 he issued a notice under S. 3(3) of the Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act, 1949, as amended by Act 8 of 1951, allotting the said premises to Sri K. G. Lakshmivenkataraman, Inspector of Police, Crime Branch. The contentions of the learned counsel for the petitioner may be stated thus:

1. The Accommodation Controller has no power under S. 3(3) of the Act to allot a house to a Government servant if the landlord does not intend to let out his house;

2. The allotment of the ground floor of the house in the circumstances of the case is not only arbitrary, but is an unreasonable restriction on the petitioner's fundamental right guaranteed to him under Art. 19(i) (f) of the Constitution of India.

(2) The relevant provisions of the Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act, 1949 bearing on the first contention read as follows:

S. 3(i) (a): Every landlord shall, within seven days after the building becomes vacant by his ceasing to occupy it, or by the termination of a tenancy, or by a release from requisition give notice of the vacancy in writing to the officer authorised in that behalf by the State Government (hereinafter in this section referred to as the 'Authorised officer.')

S. 3(3): If within the ten days of the receipt by the authorised officer of a notice under sub-sec. (i) or sub-sec (2), the State Government or the authorised officer does not intimate to the landlord in writing that the building is required for the purposes of the State or Central Government or any local authority or of any public institution under the control of any such Government or for the occupation of any officer of such Government, the landlord shall be at liberty to let the building to any tenant or to occupy it himself.

S. 3(4): The landlord shall not let the building to a tenant or occupy it himself, before the expiry of the period of ten days specified in sub-sec. (3), unless in the meantime he has received intimation that the building is not required for the purpose, or for occupation by any of the officers, specified in that sub-section.

S. 7(3)(a): A landlord may, subject to the provisions of clause (d), apply to the controller for an order directing the tenant to put the landlord in possession of the building—

(i) in case it is a residential building, if the landlord requires it for his own occupation if he is not occupying a residential building of his own in the City, town or village concerned.....

S. 7(3)(c): A landlord who is occupying only a part of a building, whether residential or non-residential may, notwithstanding anything contained in clause (a), apply to the Controller for an order directing any tenant occupying the whole or any portion of the remaining part of the building to put the landlord in possession thereof, if he requires additional accommodation for residential purposes or for the purposes of a business which he is carrying on, as the case may be."

(3) The first argument is that unless the landlord intends to let out a house, the authorised officer has no power to requisition the same. To put in other words, the volition of the landlord is paramount and the jurisdiction of the authorised officer to allot houses for the purposes mentioned in S. 3(3) of the Act is confined only to those houses intended to be let by the landlords and voluntarily thrown out for allotment. If a landlord has a hundred houses and is rich enough not to care to get any income from them by letting them out, the authorised officer will not have any power to allot them, however convenient and necessary they may be for the purposes of the State. This construction would limit the field of selection and enable wealthy landlords to circumvent the provisions of S. 3 by subterfuges. The conception of a requisition implies compulsion. It is intended to meet an emergency. The emergency necessitated the enacting of the drastic provisions and the construction suggested would defeat the purpose to a large extent.

(4) The relevant provisions of the Act do not yield to any such construction. Under S. 3 (1) (a) every landlord shall give the requisite notice to the authorised officer if the building becomes vacant by his ceasing to occupy it, or by the termination of a tenancy or by release from requisition. This section does not say that the landlord need not give such a notice if he has no intention to let it out. If the Legislature intended to confine the scope of this provision only to such buildings intended to be let by the landlord, they would have said so. Under sub-s. (3) the landlord shall be at liberty to let the building to any tenant or to occupy it himself if the State Government or the authorised officer does not intimate to the owner in writing within ten days of the receipt of the said notice their intention to requisition the building for the purposes mentioned therein. The landlord cannot, therefore, occupy his house till the State or the authorised officer sent the said communication to him.

This clearly indicates that the landlord's intention to let out is not a condition precedent for invoking the power of requisition, for his right to occupy the same accrues to him only if the State or the authorised officer does not require for the purposes stated in the prescribed time. Section 3 (4) prohibits the landlord from letting the building to a tenant or occupying it himself before the expiry of the period of the ten days specified in sub-s. (3). This provision contains a prohibition which flows from the provisions of S. 3 (3). Under S. 3 (7) (a) when a landlord has two or more residential buildings, he is given the option to choose one of such buildings for his occupation and to give notice to the authorised officer of the building so chosen by him and of every other building not so chosen.

This provision, limiting the power of the landlord to choose one building for himself, establishes beyond any reasonable doubt that his intention to let a house is not a condition precedent for the exercise of the authorised officer's jurisdiction. If his intention was paramount, the Legislature would not have given this option to him, for it would have been within his power to reserve as many houses as he liked for himself. Section 7 (3) (a) on which reliance was placed by the learned counsel for the petitioner enables a landlord to apply to the Controller for an order directing the tenant to put him in possession if the landlord requires it for his occupation and is not occupying a residential building of his own in the city, town or village concerned. Section 7 (3) (c) enables a landlord who is occupying only a part of a building, whether residential or non-residential notwithstanding anything contained in clause (a) to apply to the Controller for an order directing any tenant occupying the whole or any portion of the remaining part of the building to put the landlord in possession thereof, if he requires additional accommodation for residential purposes or for the purposes of a business which he is carrying on, as the case may be. These provisions enable the landlord to get possession of his house for his occupation if he is not occupying another house of his own and also enables him to occupy the entire house if he requires additional accommodation.

These provisions are obviously made to allay the hardship and inconvenience that would be felt by a landlord if he was not allowed to occupy at least one of his houses and if he was not given the additional accommodation required by him. The fact that these provisions had to be made to meet a particular contingency shows beyond any reasonable doubt that but for these provisions he might not be in a position to secure one of his own houses for his accommodation or to occupy the entire house if circumstances have changed. If it was within his uncontrolled discretion whether to let his house or not, these provisions would be unnecessary for he can by so intending exclude at least one house from the operation of the provisions of the Act. It is not necessary to pursue this argument further and to scrutinise the other provisions of the Act for it is clear that the landlord's discretion is not the guiding factor. I therefore hold that the authorised officer has power to requisition a building notwithstanding the fact that the landlord is not willing to let out the same.

(5) Learned counsel then contended that the order of the Accommodation Controller allotting the ground floor to a Government servant ignoring the circumstances of the case such as the petitioner's and his wife's old age, heart troubles etc. is an infringement of his fundamental right under Art. 19 (i) (f) read with Art. 19 (5) of the Constitution, whereas the learned Government Pleader contended that the appropriate article applicable is Art. 31(2) of the Constitution and the requisition in question satisfied the conditions laid therein. The relevant provisions read as follows:

" Art. 19 (i): All citizens shall have the right — (f) to acquire, hold and dispose of property;

Art. 19 (5): Nothing in sub-clauses (d), (e) and (f) of the said clause shall affect the operation of any existing law in so far as it imposes, or prevent the State from making any law imposing reasonable restrictions on the exercise of any of the rights conferred by the said sub-clauses either in the interests of the general public or for the protection of the interests of any Scheduled Tribe.

Art. 31 (1): No person shall be deprived of his property save by authority of law:

(2) No property, movable or immovable, including any interest in, or in any company owning, any commercial or industrial undertaking, shall be taken possession of or acquired for public purposes under any law authorising the taking of such possession or such acquisition, unless, the law provides for compensation for the property taken possession of or acquired and either fixes the amount of the compensation, or specifies the principles on which, and the manner in which, the compensation is to be determined and given.

Item 36, List II, 7th Schedule: Acquisition or requisitioning of property, except for the purposes of the Union, subject to the provisions of entry 42 of List III.

Entry 42, List III: Principles on which compensation for property acquired or requisitioned for the purposes of the Union or of a State or for any other public purpose is to be determined and the form and the manner in which such compensation is to be given."

(6) It will be seen that both Arts. 19 and 31 appear in Part. III dealing with fundamental rights. The rights under Art. 19 are placed under the heading "Right to freedom". Article 19 is confined only to citizens whereas Art. 31 applies to any person. Both are fundamental rights. The difficulty to place a right infringed under one or other of the articles is often a difficult one. Before attempting to do so in the present case, it may be convenient at this stage to consider the relevant decisions. In — 'A. K. Gopalan v. State of Madras', AIR 1950 SC 27, the Supreme Court of India have laid down certain principles which in my view can usefully be applied to the present case.

There the question was whether the Preventive Detention Act, 1950, was 'ultra vires' the Constitution. The Supreme Court held that the said Act is 'intra vires' the Constitution, with the exception of S. 14 which is illegal and 'ultra vires'. It was contended in that case that the detention came within the provisions of Art. 22 relating to preventive detention and therefore Art. 19 (i) (d) would not apply. At page 35, Kania C. J. says:

"In my opinion, such result is clearly not the outcome of the Constitution. The article has to be read without any pre-conceived notions. So read, it clearly means that the legislation to be examined must be directly in respect of one of the rights mentioned in the sub-clauses. If there is a legislation directly attempting to control a citizen's freedom of speech or expression, or his right to assemble peacefully and without arms, etc., the question whether that legislation is saved by the relevant saving clause of Art. 19 will arise. If, however, the legislation is not directly in respect of any of these subjects, but as a result of the operation of other legislation for instance for punitive or preventive detention, his right under any of these sub-clauses is abridged, the question of the application of Art. 19 does not arise. The true approach is only to consider the directness of the legislation and not what will be the result of the detention otherwise valid, on the mode of the detenu's life."

(7) Das J. resolves the conflict in a slightly different way. The learned Judge observed at page 113:

"To summarise, the freedom of the person is not the result of Art. 19. Article 19 only deals with certain particular rights which, in their origin and inception, are attributes of the freedom of the person but being of great importance are regarded as specific and independent rights. It does not deal with the freedom of the person as such. Article 19 (i) (d) protected a specific aspect of the right of free locomotion, namely, the right to move freely throughout the territory of India which is regarded as a special privilege or right of an Indian citizen and is protected as such. The protection of Art. 19 is conterminous with the legal capacity of a citizen to exercise the rights protected thereby, for sub-clauses (a) to (e) and (g) of Art. 19 (i) postulate the freedom of the person which alone can ensure the capacity to exercise the rights protected by those sub-clauses. A citizen who loses the freedom of his person by being lawfully detained whether as a result of a conviction for an offence or as a result of preventive detention loses his capacity to exercise those rights and, therefore, has none of the rights which sub-clauses (a) to (e) and (g) may protect. In my judgment, Art. 19 has no bearing on the question of the validity or otherwise of preventive detention and that being so, cl. (5) which prescribed a test of reasonableness to be defined and applied by the court has no application at all."

In — 'Kameshwar Singh v. Province of Bihar', AIR 1950 Pat 392 (SB), the question of the Bihar State Management of Estates and Tenures Act was raised. It was argued in that case that Art. 31 is in the nature of an exception to the general rule laid down in Article 19 (i) (f). Sinha J. in repelling that argument made the following observations at page 418:

"Article 31 cannot be read as an exception to the fundamental rights as declared in Art. 19 (i) (f). But certainly the two articles have got to be read together in order to give full effect to the intention of the Constituent Assembly. Article 31 is as much a part of the fundamental rights contained in Part III of the Constitution as Art. 19; but, whereas Art. 19 comes under "Right to Freedom", Article 31 comes under "Right to Property". Hence, according to the well-established rule of interpretation, where the same statute makes general provisions in respect of a particular subject-matter, and makes specific provisions with respect to a special category, the latter must prevail over the general. It is also well settled that different provisions of the same statute, which are apparently inconsistent with each other, should be so construed as to give effect to all the provisions, so as to avoid a repugnancy."

(8) In this connection the observations of the learned Judges of the Supreme Court in — 'Chiranjit Lal v. Union of India', 1950 SCR 869, and that of the High Court of Calcutta in — 'Sudhindranath v. Sailendranath', 87 Cal LJ 140, may also be usefully referred to.

(9) The following three principles may therefore be borne in mind in approaching the question to be decided in this case:

1. The general provision must give place to the specific provision;

2. The pith and substance or the directness of the legislation, and

3. Whether the right sought to be protected under Art. 19 has been taken away by legislation under another appropriate article?

In the instant case, under S. 3 (3), Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act, 1949, the authorised officer requisitioned the ground floor of the petitioner's house for the occupation of Sri Lakshmi Venkataraman, Inspector of Police, Crime Branch, Madras, for residential purposes. Under Article 31 (2) no property shall be taken possession of or acquired for public purposes under any law authorising the taking of such possession unless the law provides a compensation for the property taken possession of and either fixes the amount of the compensation, or specifies the principles on which, and the manner in which, the compensation is to be determined and given. Item 32 of the Second List read with entry 42 of the III list gives power to the legislature to make such a law. The Legislature, therefore, can make a law, as in the present case, empowering the authorised officer to requisition the property of a person. It would be valid if it were for a public purpose and if the law provides for compensation.

Under S. 3 (3) the authorised officer can require the property for purposes of the State or Central Government or of any local authority or of any public institution under the control of any such Government or for the occupation of any officer of such Government. The question is whether the requisition of a house or a building for the occupation of an officer of Government is a public purpose within the meaning of Art. 31. In — Manohar Ramakrishna v. G. G. Desai, AIR 1951 Nag 33, the learned Judges in dealing with the provisions of the C. P. and Berar Accommodation (Requisition) Act (63 of 1948), expressed the view that a requisition for accommodating a Government servant is a public purpose. At page 36 the learned Judge stated:

"It is said that the 'public purpose' contemplated by the clause must be read such as would 'bring a return to the public'. Section 3 (1) enables the requisitioning accommodation only for the purposes of 'providing residence for any person holding an office of profit under the Crown or for locating any public office of the Central or the Provincial Government or local authority'. Indubitably a public office, whether of the Central or Provincial (now Union or State) Government or a local authority exists for the benefit of the public and requisitioning accommodation for locating such office is a 'public purpose'. Similarly, a person holding an office of profit under the Government is charged with the performance of public duties. Such a person must, for enabling him to discharge his duties, be housed and so, in our opinion, requisitioning accommodation for him would be as much a public purpose as would be the location of a public office."

(10) I agree with the said observations. An officer of Government cannot satisfactorily discharge his duties if he is not given accommodation in the place where he is employed. In an over-populated city like Madras, when it is very difficult to find houses for accommodation, I cannot say that the requisition of a house for housing a Government servant is not a public purpose, for the interests of the Government and that of the public would necessarily suffer if their officers are not properly housed. As regards compensation, suitable provisions are made in the Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act, 1949 for fixing the rent. The terms of the tenancy may be fixed by agreement, and if it is not possible, through civil courts. The Act also lays down the principles for fixing the rent.

(11) Learned counsel for the petitioner contended that Art. 31 has no application as it deals with a total deprivation of property, whereas the Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act, 1949, regulates the letting of residential and non-residential buildings and controls the rents of such buildings and prevents unreasonable eviction of tenants therefrom. It is not correct to say that Art. 31 deals only with total deprivation of property. Under Art. 31 (1) no person shall be deprived of his property save by authority of law. Article 31 (2) deals with acquisition and taking possession. Acquisition means actual transference of property whereas taking possession of property need not imply a total deprivation of the ownership of property. The title to the property may continue in the owner but he may be dispossessed for a public purpose. Item 36 of List II provides both for acquisition and requisition of property.

I cannot therefore agree with the contention that requisition of property, which does not involve a total deprivation of the property from the owner, does not come within the meaning of Art. 31. Nor can I agree with the contention that the Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act, 1949, does not deal with the subject-matter covered by Art. 31 of the Constitution of India. Section 3 (3) specifically enables the Government or the authorised officer to require any building for the purpose of the State. They can take possession of the same subject to the terms prescribed thereunder. The taking of possession under S. 3(3) is certainly covered by the words "taken possession of" in Art. 31 (2) of the Constitution of India.

(12) The subject-matter directly comes under Art. 31. Article 31 being a special article, excludes the operation of the general article, Art. 19. As the building was taken possession of under the law validly made, the petitioner is not protected by the provisions of Art. 19, for Art. 19 (i) (f) can be invoked only if the petitioner is legally entitled to use his property.

(13) I therefore hold that no right under Art. 19 has been infringed by the order of the Accommodation Controller.

(14) In this view it is not necessary to express my opinion on the connotation of the word "hold" in Art. 19 (i) (f) or on the question whether in the circumstances of the case the requisition of the property for a police officer is a reasonable restriction in the interests of the general public on the right of the petitioner to use his premises. In the result the petition is dismissed with costs. Advocate's fee Rs. 100.

A/V.R.B.

Petition dismissed.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 257 (Vol. 40, C. N. 96)

SUBBA RAO J.

Fathima Bi, Petitioner v. The State of Madras, represented by the Accommodation Controller, Madras, Respondent.

Writ Petn. No. 280 of 1951, D/- 7-8-1952.

(a) Houses and Rents — Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (25 of 1949) (as amended by Madras Act 8 of 1951), S. 3(1)(a) and (8) — Tenant in possession in contravention of S. 3(1)(a) — Eviction under S. 3(8).

Occupation of a building by a landlord or his tenant without issuing notice under S. 3(1)(a), which is a part of the general scheme of requisition, is certainly a contravention of the provisions of the section and a tenant in possession in contravention of that sub-section is liable to be summarily evicted under S. 3(8).

(Para 5)

(b) Houses and Rents — Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (25 of 1949) (as amended by Madras Act 8 of 1951), S. 3(8) — Section does not infringe Art. 19(1)(f) of Constitution — (Constitution of India, Arts. 19(1)(f) and 31(2)).

Section 3(8) is not bad as being an unreasonable restriction on the exercise of the fundamental rights guaranteed under Art. 19(1)(f) of the Constitution. The subject-matter of requisition directly comes under Art. 31 which excludes the general Art. 19.

(Para 6)

(c) Houses and Rents — Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (25 of 1949) (as amended by Madras Act 8 of 1951), S. 3(8) — Tenant's possession under void lease — Right to compensate — (Constitution of India, Art. 31(2)).

A lease in contravention of S. 3 is void. The possession of a tenant under such a void lease would only be permissive possession not in his own right, but for and on behalf of the landlord, in which case it would be the dispossession of the landlord who would be compensated under the provisions of the Act and the tenant can be dispossessed without any compensation being paid to him.

(Para 7)

(d) Houses and Rents — Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (25 of 1949) (as amended by Madras Act 8 of 1951), S. 3(8) — Section does not offend Art. 20 of Constitution — (Constitution of India, Art. 20). (Para 8)

(e) Houses and Rents — Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (25 of 1949) (as amended by Madras Act 8 of 1951), S. 3(8)(a) and Explanation — Retrospective operation.

In view of the clear provisions of the Explanation, S. 3(8)(a) must be given retrospective operation.

(Para 9)

R. Mathrubhutham, for Petitioner; V. P. Sarathi, for the Govt. Pleader, for the State.

REFERENCE.....

Para.

('52) C. M. P. No. 6628 of 1951, D/- 6-8-1952:

(AIR 1953 Mad 252)

6

ORDER: This is an application for issuing a writ of certiorari to quash the order of the

1953 Mad./33 &amp; 34

Accommodation Controller dated 17-7-1951 and 4-8-1951. The petitioner is the owner of the house and premises No. 1/3 Jones Street, G. T. Madras. On 15-1-1951 one Fernando wrote a letter to the Accommodation Controller stating that he was a tenant of the said premises and that he was vacating the same on 15-1-1951. After making some enquiries, on 7-2-1951, the Accommodation Controller issued a notice to the petitioner under S. 3(1), Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act, 1949, (hereinafter called the Act) calling for particulars and intimating her that the premises have to be kept vacant for seven days from the date of the furnishing of the particulars. The petitioner did not reply to that notice. On 25-4-1951 a complaint was filed in the court of the Chief Presidency Magistrate and the petitioner was fined a sum of Rs. 75.

(2) The Accommodation Controller allotted the house to one Waters. As the petitioner did not give peaceful possession, on 4-8-1951 the respondent issued a notice under S. 3(8) of the Act directing the petitioner to deliver possession and also stating that if no vacant possession was given necessary steps would be taken to obtain the same. The petitioner states that the said premises is a non-residential house and that she has let the same to one Abdulla Sait in or about the end of 1950 and since that time he has been carrying on business in the said premises. She further alleges that the monthly rent of the building is less than Rs. 50 and therefore she is not bound in law to give the notice to the Accommodation Controller.

(3) Learned counsel appearing for the petitioner raised before me various legal contentions questioning the validity of the requisition. I shall proceed to deal with them 'in seriatim'.

(4) The first argument is that the tenant has not occupied the building in contravention of the provisions of S. 3(4) prohibiting the letting of the building, which would come into play only if the statutory notice was given and that in the instant case such notice was not given. This argument appears to be plausible, but, in my view, not sound. To appreciate this contention the following provisions of the Act may be read:

" S. 3(1)(a): Every landlord shall, within seven days after the building becomes vacant by his ceasing to occupy it, or by the termination of a tenancy, or by release from requisition give notice of the vacancy in writing to the Officer authorised in that behalf by the State Government (hereinafter in the section referred to as the 'authorised officer').

S. 3(3): If, within ten days of the receipt by the authorised officer of a notice under sub-s. (1) or sub-s. (2), the State Government or the authorised officer does not intimate to the landlord in writing that the building is required for the purposes of the State or Central Government or of any local authority or of any public institution under the control of any such Government or for the occupation of any officer of such Government, the landlord shall be at liberty to let the building to any tenant or to occupy it himself.

S. 3(4): The landlord shall not let the building to a tenant or occupy it himself, before the expiry of the period of ten days specified in sub-s. (3), unless in the meantime he has received intimation that the building is not required for the purposes or for occupation by any of the officers, specified in that sub-section.

S. 3 (8) (a): Any officer empowered by the State Government in this behalf may summarily dispossess:

(i) any landlord, tenant or other person occupying any building in contravention of the provisions of this section or any landlord who fails to deliver to the State Government possession of any building in respect of which they are deemed to be the tenants by virtue of this section,..... and take possession of the building including any portion thereof which may have been sub-let;

Explanation: The provisions of this clause shall apply also to cases which arose before the commencement of the Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act, 1951.

(5) Sections 3 (1), (3) and (4) are component parts of the scheme of requisition. The scheme comprises five stages:

1. The landlord gives notice of the vacancy to the authorised officer within seven days of the vacancy;

2. Within ten days of the receipt of the notice the State Government or authorised officer intimates to the landlord in writing that the building is required for the purpose of the State;

3. During the prescribed period the landlord is prohibited from letting the house;

4. If no intimation is given within the prescribed period the landlord is at liberty to let the same to whomsoever he likes;

5. If the landlord or any person occupying the building fails to deliver possession in contravention of the provisions of the Act, an officer appointed by the State may summarily dispossess him.

It will be seen from the other provisions of S. 3 (8) that an officer appointed by the State can dispossess a person occupying a house in contravention of the provisions of the section, be it noted not in contravention of S. 3 (3) or S. 3 (4) alone. Occupation of the building by a landlord or his tenant without issuing notice under S. 3 (1) (a), which, as I already stated, is a part of the general scheme of requisition, is certainly a contravention of the provisions of the section. As the tenant is now in possession in contravention of that sub-section, he is liable to be summarily evicted under S. 3 (8).

(6) Learned counsel then questioned the constitutional validity of S. 3 (8) read with its explanation giving it retrospective operation. He argued that the said section is bad as being an unreasonable restriction on the exercise of the fundamental rights guaranteed under Art. 19 (1) (f), Constitution of India. It is not necessary to consider this argument as I held in — Nataraja Mudaliar v. Madras State, C. M. P. No. 6628 of 1951 (Mad), that the requisition of a house under the Act does not offend the fundamental right under Art. 19, as the subject-matter directly comes under Art. 31 of the Constitution. In that judgment I observed:

"The subject-matter directly comes under Art. 31. Article 31 being a special Article, excludes the operation of a general Article, Art. 19. As the building was taken possession under a law validly made, the petnr.

is not protected by the provisions of Art. 19 for Art. 19 (1) (f) can be invoked only if the petitioner is legally entitled to use his property. I therefore hold that no right under Art. 19 has been infringed by the order of the Accommodation Controller."

Following that judgment I negative this contention.

(7) Even so it was contended that the provisions of that section in so far as they authorise an officer to take possession of the property from the tenant without paying or providing for the payment of the compensation contravene the provisions of Art. 31 (2), Constitution of India, and, therefore, 'ultra vires', the Constitution. Article 31 (2) reads:

"No property, movable or immovable, including any interest in, or in any company, owning any commercial or industrial undertaking, shall be taken possession of or acquired for public purposes under any law authorising the taking of such possession or such acquisition, unless the law provides for compensation for the property taken possession of or acquired and either fixes the amount of the compensation, or specifies the principles on which, and the manner in which, the compensation is to be determined and given."

This article therefore prohibits taking possession of any property without compensation. The contention is that the tenant has a legal interest in the leasehold property and the State cannot dispossess him without paying compensation. There would be considerable force in this argument if a person was in legal possession as a tenant and he was dispossessed; but if the tenancy was void, the possession of the tenant would only be permissive possession not in his own right, but for and on behalf of the landlord, in which case it would be the dispossession of the landlord who would be compensated under the provisions of the Act. The question therefore turns upon the subsidiary question whether the lease in contravention of the provisions of S. 3 was void.

In my view, the object of the agreement of lease in the present case was not only forbidden by law, but if permitted, it would defeat the provisions of the Act within the meaning of S. 23, Contract Act. The landlord was prohibited from letting the building before the expiry of ten days from the receipt of notice by the authorised officer. She was liable to be prosecuted for contravention of sub-ss. (1), (2) and (4) of S. 3 of the Act and indeed she was prosecuted and fined. She therefore let her building by committing an offence and also in the teeth of an express prohibition not to let till certain conditions were complied with. The lease was therefore void. In the circumstances the possession of the tenant must be deemed to be the possession of the landlord. The tenant has no separate and distinct right to be compensated for within the meaning of Art. 31 of the Constitution.

(8) The constitutional competence of the impugned provision was also based on the provisions of Art. 20, Constitution of India. Under Art. 20

"No person shall be convicted of any offence except for violation of a law in force at the time of the commission of the act charged as an offence, nor be subjected to a penalty greater than that which might have been inflicted under the law in force at the time of the commission of the offence."

Under this Article, a subsequent enactment cannot impose a greater penalty on an individual than that which could have been inflicted at the time he committed the offence. It was said that under Madras Act 8 of 1951, the provisions of S. 3 (8) of the Act were given retrospective operation and the effect of the amendment was that for an offence committed prior to the passing of that Act, a person could not only be convicted but could summarily be evicted, and therefore the penalty was greater than that could have been inflicted on him at the time when he committed the offence. There would be force in this argument if the power of summary eviction conferred on an officer empowered by the State under S. 3 (8) of the Act could be equated to the infliction of penalty for the commission of an offence. Under S. 16 of the Act, if any person contravenes any of the provisions of sub-ss. (1), (2), (4), (5) and (7) of S. 3 he shall be punishable with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to three months or with the fine which may extend to two thousand rupees or with both.

That section was not amended by Act 8 of 1951. The punishment for the offence remains the same as it was before the amendment. The Amending Act only conferred the necessary executive power on the officer concerned to carry out the intention of the Legislature. Before the Amendment, the authorised officer can allot a house to an officer but cannot put him in possession if a recalcitrant landlord refused to comply with the order. The landlord might be punished in a criminal court; but there was no procedure to expel him summarily. That power of summary eviction is now given under S. 3 (8). An existing lacuna was filled up for the smooth working of the provisions of the Act. I cannot therefore hold that the impugned provision offends Art. 20, Constitution of India.

(9) It was then argued that S. 3 (8) (a) should not be given retrospective operation. This contention is obviously untenable in view of the clear provisions of the Explanation which says

"the provisions of this clause shall apply also to cases which arose before the commencement of the Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Amendment Act, 1951."

(10) The last argument was that the house was a non-residential house and that the rent for the same was below Rs. 50 and therefore the Accommodation Controller had no jurisdiction to requisition the same.

(11) Section 3 (9) says:

"Nothing contained in this section shall apply—

(a) to a residential building the monthly rent of which does not exceed twenty-five rupees; or

(b) to a non-residential building the monthly rent of which does not exceed fifty rupees."

In the affidavit filed in support of the petition, it was specifically stated that the building is a non-residential building. In the counter though there is an allegation that the house has always been used for residential purposes, the Accommodation Controller does not say definitely that he has decided the question having regard to the materials placed before him. In this case the Accommodation Controller's jurisdiction to requisition the building mainly depends upon the question whether the building is a residential building; for it is not disputed that if it is a non-residential building, there is no power to requisition the same as the rent is below Rs. 50. His order, therefore, is set aside and he is directed to decide on the material that may be placed before him by the petitioner whether the building is a residential or non-residential building. As the petitioner failed on her main contentions, this is a fit case for directing the parties to bear their costs.

A/V.R.B.

Order set aside.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 259 (Vol. 40, C. N. 97)

PANCHAPAKESA AYYAR J.

In re Simhadri Krishnamurthi, Accused.

Criminal Revn. Case No. 1561 of 1950 and Case Ref. No. 78 of 1950, D/- 27-7-1951.

Criminal P. C. (1898), Ss. 438, 417 — Reference by Sessions Judge in case of acquittal — Competency.

An Assistant Sessions Judge, relying upon an uncorrected copy of the Penal Code, took 16 years instead of 18 years as the relevant age and acquitted the accused of a charge of kidnapping a girl from the custody of her lawful guardian. There was no appeal by the Government nor any revision on behalf of the girl. The Sessions Judge discovered the patent error and referred the case to the High Court:

Held, as the referring officer was the Sessions Judge and not a District Magistrate it was certainly competent for him to refer the case to High Court under S. 438, Cr. P. C. He was not a person expected to move the State to file an appeal under S. 417, Cr. P. C. (The acquittal was set aside.): (1951) MWN (Cri) 16 Disting.

(Para 1)

Anno: Cr. P. C., S. 438 N. 3.

The Public Prosecutor, for State.

ORDER: I have perused the records and heard the learned Public Prosecutor. Nobody appears for the accused. No doubt there was an error committed by the learned Assistant Sessions Judge, Tenali, as he himself has admitted when he took 16 years instead of 18 years, (relying on an uncorrected copy of the Penal Code in his office not incorporating the amendment in this respect in 1949) as the relevant age. So he took the girl's consent to be valid and committed errors right along the line on that basis and acquitted the accused Simhadri Krishnamurthi who was charged with kidnapping the girl Tulasamma from the custody of her lawful guardian with intent to marry her against her will. The learned Sessions Judge, Guntur, discovered this patent error on perusing the calendar in the case and after calling for the records and examining them. He has made this reference. The Government had not filed an appeal under S. 417, Cr. P. C., and the aggrieved girl or her guardian has not filed a revision petition against the acquittal. The learned Public Prosecutor drew my attention to the decision of Somasundaram J. in — Eravadu and others v. The State, 1951 MWN Cri p. 16 (Referred Case No. 22 of 1950) wherein the learned Judge held that a reference by a District Magistrate under S. 438, Cr. P. C. was not competent as his remedy was only by way of moving the State to file an appeal under S. 417, Cr. P. C. Here the referring officer is the Sessions Judge and not a District Magistrate and it is certainly competent for him to refer this case to this court under S. 438, Cr. P. C. as he is not the person expected to move the State to file an appeal under S. 417, Cr. P. C. So I accept the reference of the learned Sessions Judge and set aside the acquittal of Simhadri Krishnamurthi in S. C. No. 38 of 1950 by the Assistant Sessions Judge of Tenali and direct the case to be tried afresh by the Sessions Judge, Guntur.

B/D.R.R.

Reference accepted.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 260 (Vol. 40, C. N. 98)

RAJAMANNAR C. J. AND VENKATARAMA AIYAR J.

N. Gopalan, Appellant v. The State of Madras, by the Collector of Tanjore, Respondent.

Letters Patent Appeal No. 263 of 1952, D/- 17-9-1952, from judgment of Subba Rao J., in W. P. No. 674 of 1952, D/- 16-9-1952.

†(a) Tenancy Laws — Madras Estates Land (Reduction of Rent) Second Amendment Act (35 of 1951), S. 1(2) — Act is not invalid as being inconsistent with Art. 372(1) of the Constitution — (Constitution of India, Art. 372(1)).

Section 1(2) of the Amending Act in so far as it makes the provisions of the Act retrospective is not inconsistent with Art. 372(1) of the Constitution and is not unconstitutional on that ground. Article 372(1) of the Constitution clearly recognises the contingency of an enactment which is declared to continue in force, being altered, repealed or amended by a competent Legislature. Since an alteration, repeal or amendment can be retrospective, it follows that Art. 372(1) would not render any alteration, repeal or amendment which is declared to be retrospective, invalid. (Para 3)

†(b) Tenancy Laws — Madras Estates Land (Reduction of Rent) Second Amendment Act (35 of 1951), S. 4 — Provision is not confiscatory and unconstitutional — (Constitution of India, Art. 31).

Section 4 of the Amending Act which provides for the adjustment of rent paid by a ryot before the commencement of the Amending Act is not confiscatory in nature and as such is not unconstitutional. There is no acquisition by the Government of any portion of the rent. The impugned provision is only a provision adjusting the account between landholder and tenant. Such a provision would be a provision pertaining to the relationship of landlord and tenant but would in no sense be a provision for acquisition of any interest in land by the Government. There is, therefore, no question of confiscation. AIR 1952 SC 252, Ref. (Para 4)

R. Kesava Iyengar and K. Parasaram, for Appellant.

REFERENCE .....

/Para
(52) AIR 1952 SC 252: (65 Mad LW 527) 4

RAJAMANNAR C. J.: In this Appeal under the Letters Patent against the decision of Subba Rao J. dismissing the appellant's application for a writ of certiorari, the only ground taken is the invalidity of Madras Estates Land (Reduction of Rent) Second Amendment Act, 1951. That Act inserted a sub-section in S. 3 of the original Act and substituted a clause for a clause already existing in S. 4 of the principal Act and by S. 4 made provision for adjustment of rent paid by a ryot before the commencement of the amending Act. The excess was to be adjusted towards the rent payable by the ryot to the landholder for subsequent faslis. The ryot was in certain circumstances entitled to claim a refund of the amount remaining unadjusted from the landholder to whom it was paid.

(2) Mr. R. Kesava Aiyangar contended that the Act is unconstitutional for two reasons:

(1) because it was retrospective and to that extent was inconsistent with the provisions of Art. 372(1) of the Constitution and (2) because it was confiscatory in so far as it directed the adjustment of rent already paid before the commencement of the Constitution.

(3) Section 1(2) of the Amended Act runs thus:

"Sections 2 and 3 shall be deemed to have come into force on 7th January 1948."

That is the date on which the principal Act came into force. The argument of learned counsel is that Madras Act 30 of 1947 continued to be in force only by virtue of Art. 372(1) of the Constitution and any amendment, alteration or repeal of any provisions of that Act after 26th January 1950 can only be prospective from the date on which the amendment, alteration or repeal is made, or in any event only from 26th January 1950, but it cannot affect the Act as it stood on the date of the commencement of the Constitution in respect of a period prior to the Constitution. Article 372(1) runs thus:

"Notwithstanding the repeal by this Constitution of the enactments referred to in Art. 395 but subject to the other provisions of this Constitution, all the law in force in the territory of India immediately before the commencement of this Constitution shall continue in force therein until altered or repealed or amended by a competent Legislature or other competent authority."

We are unable to agree with learned counsel that there is anything in this Article to support his contention. That Article clearly recognises the contingency of an enactment which is declared to continue in force, being altered, repealed or amended by a competent Legislature. Undeniably in this case the amendment in question has been made by a competent Legislature. It was not suggested that the Madras Legislature is not competent to pass any legislation which would have a retrospective effect. When an alteration, repeal or amendment is itself contemplated under Art. 372(1) and an alteration, repeal or amendment can be retrospective, it follows that Art. 372(1) would not render any alteration, repeal or amendment which is declared to be retrospective, invalid. We therefore reject this contention on behalf of the appellant.

(4) It was next contended that the provision in the Amending Act for adjustment of rents already paid is confiscatory in nature and therefore unconstitutional. Reliance was placed on the observations in the recent decision of the Supreme Court in — 'The State of Bihar v. Kameswar Singh', AIR 1952 SC 252, made in connection with the provision of the Bihar Act under which 50 per cent. of the arrears of rent collected by the Government was appropriated by the Government without payment of any compensation to the landholder. We fail to see how these observations can be of any help to the appellants here. There is no acquisition by the Government of any portion of the rent. The impugned provision is only a provision adjusting the account between landholder and tenant. Such a provision would be a provision pertaining to the relationship of landlord and tenant but would in no sense be a provision for acquisition of any interest in land by the Government. There is therefore no question of confiscation. It is true that the result of the enactment may be to prejudicially affect the rights of the appellants, but that itself would not make the provision illegal or unconstitutional.

(5) The appeal is therefore dismissed.

A/K.S.

Appeal dismissed.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 261 (Vol. 40, C. N. 99)

GOVINDA MENON

AND PANCHAPAKESA AYYAR JJ.

Ruku-ul-Mulk S. Abdul Wazid and others, Appellants v. R. Viswanathan and others, Respondents.

O. S. Appeals Nos. 67 and 84 of 1950, D/- 1-11-1951.

(a) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 13 — 'Foreign judgment' — Meaning of — (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 2 (9) and O. 20 R. 1).

The expression 'foreign judgment' means 'an adjudication by a foreign Court upon the matter before it'. It does not mean a statement by a foreign judge of the reasons for his order, since, if that were the meaning of the judgment, S. 13 would not apply to an order where no reasons were given. AIR 1947 PC 192, Rel. on; AIR 1943 Bom 201, Ref. (Para 13)

Anno: Civil P. C., S. 13 N. 3.

(b) Civil P. C. (1908), Ss. 13 and 11 — Matter directly adjudicated — Some of the items left unadjudicated — No res judicata with regard to them.

The clause "the matter directly adjudicated upon" in S. 13 is narrower than the clause "the matter directly and substantially in issue" in S. 11. Thus, where a foreign judgment has directly adjudicated upon all the properties except four items of immovable properties the judgment would not operate as res judicata in respect of these four items. 1891-1 Ch 83 (sic); 1911-1 Ch 179; 1948-1 Ch 118, Disting. (Para 13)

Anno: Civil P. C., S. 13 N. 2; S. 11 N. 7.

(c) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 13, Exceptions — Foreign judgment, when not conclusive — Scope of enquiry — Proof — Necessity of.

Foreign judgment of a Court of competent jurisdiction regarding movables will be conclusive unless it is vitiated by fraud, or is opposed to fundamental principles of natural justice such as want of due notice to the party affected thereby or denial of an opportunity to a party of presenting his case to the Court. Opposed to natural justice does not mean opposed to the notions of natural justice entertained by the Courts where the foreign judgment is sought to be used as a bar to a suit.

The fraud invalidating a foreign judgment may be either fraud on the part of the party in whose favour the judgment is given or fraud on the part of the Court pronouncing the judgment. AIR 1947 PC 192, Followed. (Paras 13, 14)

There is a distinction between vitiating judgments of Courts subordinate to one's jurisdiction on the grounds of suspected bias, interest etc. and vitiating the judgments of the foreign Courts. The foreign judgments are recognised by private international law only on the principles of comity between the nations, reciprocity, acquired rights and obligations, international usage and custom etc. and not on fundamental rights guaranteed by any world Constitution or world Court. Therefore, a foreign judgment of a competent Court not falling within the exceptions to S. 13 could be conclusive even if it gave no reasons for the judgment, which of course would be unthinkable in the case of Courts subordinate to the High Court. (1924) 1 KB 256; (1927) 2 KB 475; (1930) 143 LT 235; 1937-2 KB 1, Disting.; AIR 1947 PC 192, Relied on. (Para 15)

A mere error in procedure in a foreign Court will not affect its conclusive nature under S. 13, provided that error in procedure does not amount to a violation of natural justice under S. 13 (d) e.g. where a party is not given a notice of hearing of the case, or is not allowed an opportunity of representing his case to the Court. Errors in procedure, interest of slight nature (like using cars, eating dinners etc.) mere suspected bias, pungent observations of Judges at the hearings, a non-liberal attitude towards requests for constituting another Bench and not granting adjournments will be inadequate grounds for vitiating a foreign judgment of a competent Court, as not affecting the jurisdiction or coming under any other exceptions in S. 13. (Para 17)

Moreover, mere allegations and apprehensions will not do to vitiate a judgment because, mere assertion is not proof.

(Para 18)

Anno: Civil P. C., S. 13 N. 15 and 16.

(d) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 41 R. 2 — New plea — Plea of fraud — (Civil P. C. (1908), Ss. 11 and 13).

The point that a previous foreign judgment which was pleaded as a bar to the suit was already prepared and was ready before the hearing began but was delivered after the hearing, fraudulently pretending that it had been prepared only after the hearing and therefore was vitiated by fraud and should be treated as null and void, cannot be urged in appeal for the first time if not raised before the trial Court previously. (Para 14)

Anno: Civil P. C., O. 41 R. 2 N. 1.

Advocate General, for Appellants; C. E. Padmanabhan of Short Bawes and Co., for Respondents.

REFERENCES: Courtwise/Chronological/ Paras

(47) AIR 1947 PC 192: (74 Ind App 203)	13, 14, 15
(50) ILR (1950) Mad 862: (AIR 1950 PC 34)	17
(43) AIR 1943 Bom 201: (ILR (1943) Bom 366)	13
(45) 49 Cal WN 754	13
(51) 1951-1 Mad LJ 488: (AIR 1951 Mad 890)	12
(1891) 1 Ch 83 (Sic)	13
(1899) 1 Ch 781: (68 LJ Ch 281)	15, 16
(1911) 1 Ch 179: (80 LJCh 274)	13
(1930) 1 Ch 377: (99 LJCh 67)	13
(1948) 1 Ch 118: (1947-2 All ER 864)	13
(1870) 4 HL 414: (39 LJCP 350)	14
(1924) 1 KB 256: (93 LJKB 129)	15
(1927) 2 KB 475: (96 LJKB 530)	15
(1937) 2 KB 1: (106 LJKB 344)	15
(1930) 143 LT 235: (1930-2 KB 29)	15
(1894) 2 QB 667: (71 LT 308)	15
(1882) 10 QBD 295: (52 LJQB 1)	14
(1890) 25 QBD 310: (63 LT 128)	14
(1837) 8 Sim 279: (6 LJ (NS) Ch 226)	16

JUDGMENT: These are two appeals against the judgment of our learned brother, Rajagopalan, J., in C. S. No. 214 of 1944 on the Original Side of this Court, holding that the judgment of the Mysore High Court, consisting of Medappa C. J., and Balakrishnaiya and Mallappa JJ., operated as res judicata in this suit regarding the movable properties mentioned therein, subject to proof of pecuniary or other interest of Medappa C. J., in a 'Mercedes' Car, belonging to the estate of the deceased Ramalinga, and proof of his having attempted, in October 1945 and the beginning of 1946, to dissuade Mr. L. S. Raju, Advocate for the plaintiffs, from appearing for the plaintiffs, Ramalinga's sons, and making strong and unwarranted remarks against them, which two facts, if proved, would, in the opinion of our learned Brother, make Medappa C. J., so interested in the subject-matter of the suit or in the parties to the suit as to make him disqualified to be a Judge in the matter, as he would be practically judging his own cause and violating the principle of 'audi alteram partem', and make the trial 'coram non iudice', and the judgment a nullity. Regarding the four items of immovables situated in Madras and included in C. S. No. 214 of 1944, our learned brother held that there was no question of applying the principle of 'res judicata' under S. 13, C. P. C., since there was no attempt at any adjudication of the title to those four items by the Mysore Courts, as three of them (included in the Bangalore City Suit) were specifically excluded from the decree, on objection being taken by the defendants (executors) to the inclusion of properties outside the jurisdiction of the Mysore Courts, and the fourth item had not been included in the Mysore suits at all.

(2) The facts may briefly be stated. V. Ramalinga, the father of the plaintiffs, was a resident of Bangalore in Mysore State. He died at Bangalore on 18-12-1942. He had been extremely affectionate and considerate towards his wife, eldest son, Viswanathan, and other members of the family in the earlier stages and had tried to establish his eldest son, Viswanathan, in his prosperous business, he being worth over 20 lakhs of rupees and having in-fluent connections and friends, but, it is said that he became, later on, disappointed with his eldest son's conduct and application to business, and felt himself insulted by the conduct of his wife, eldest son and other children, and so executed a will, dated 10-9-1942, some three months before his death, leaving to his wife, sons etc. only a comparatively paltry pittance and bequeathing almost his entire properties to charities claiming them all to be his self-acquired properties and therefore devisable by him by will. The properties were admittedly worth more than 20 lakhs and consisted of immovable properties situated in Bangalore cantonment, administered in those days by the British Resident in Mysore and subject to his Court, but admittedly part of Mysore State for purposes of sovereignty though appeals from the Resident's Court lay to the Privy Council till independence and retrocession, in Bangalore City, within the State of Mysore, and in Hospet, Madras City and other parts of Madras State. Ramalinga appointed three persons as executors to administer his estate after his death and conduct the charities he prescribed in the will. Those are the defendants in C. S. No. 214 of 1944.

(3) The executors obtained probate of the will from the District Judge, Civil and Military Station Bangalore Cantonment. An appeal to the Resident's Court by the sons and daughters of Ramalinga (plaintiffs here and others), who had entered 'caveat' failed. A further appeal was preferred by them to the Privy Council. Before that appeal came on for hearing before the Privy Council, the Cantonment area was retroceded to His Highness the Maharajah of Mysore. The Privy Council held, therefore, that they had no more jurisdiction to hear the appeal because Mysore had become an independent State not subject to their jurisdiction any more. An attempt was made to induce them to reconsider the matter, but they refused, by their order dated 12-12-1949, to reconsider the decision. The attempt of the plaintiffs and other members of Ramalinga's family to get the appeals taken on file by the Supreme Court of India and decided there, also failed, apparently because the Supreme Court considered that Mysore had not yet come within its jurisdiction by the relevant date. So, the Privy Council refused to deal with the appeals as it had lost its jurisdiction and the Supreme Court refused to deal with the appeals as it had 'not got' jurisdiction by the relevant date. So, the plaintiffs fell between two stools and remained remediless in that matter.

(4) The Executors applied also to this Court for probate with reference to the properties situated within the jurisdiction of this Court, and Chandrasekhara Aiyar J., on 17-7-1944 in O. P. No. 45 of 1944, granted probate to the executors regarding the properties situated within the jurisdiction of this Court. There was no appeal against that grant by any member of Ramalinga's family, apparently because the proceedings here were merely complementary to those instituted in the Court of the District Judge, Bangalore Cantonment, and appeals were filed in the Privy Council regarding the very same matter.

(5) The plaintiffs here, the three sons of Ramalinga, contended that the properties dealt with under the will of Ramalinga were the properties of the undivided Hindu family, of which he and they were members, and, so could not be bequeathed under the will under the Hindu law applicable to the parties, which is admitted to be the same in Mysore State as well as in Madras State. They at first instituted two suits, O. S. No. 56 of 1942-1943 in the District Court, Bangalore and O. S. 60 of 1944 in the District Court, Bangalore Cantonment, for establishing their contention that the properties were joint family properties, and that the will was null and void and not binding on them, and for directing the executors (defendants 1 to 3) to deliver possession of the properties to them and the 4th defendant, their mother, and for rendering an account to them of their dealings with the properties and the profits, etc., and for costs. The Cantonment suit, of course, comprised only the movables and immovables of Ramalinga situated within the Bangalore Cantonment limits. The Bangalore City suit comprised not only the movables and immovables situated in Mysore State, but also the movables and immovables of Ramalinga situated in Madras State with the exception of one item of immovable property.

On objection being taken by the executors-defendants that the Bangalore City Court had no jurisdiction over the movables and immovables situated in Madras State, the plaintiffs filed C. S. No. 214 of 1944 in this Court, regarding the movables and immovables situated in Madras State, for the same reliefs. These movables consist of sugar shares, Oriental Assurance Company's shares, etc., valued at 4 to 6 lakhs now, and of all four items of immovable properties (one of which has been converted into cash subsequently) worth some four lakhs. The trial of the Madras suit was deferred until the completion of the trial of the suits in Bangalore City and Bangalore Cantonment, as the same witnesses and documents would obviously be required in all the three suits. Before the Cantonment suit was ready for trial, the retrocession intervened. So, both the Cantonment and the Bangalore City suits were tried by the same Judge, Mr. Ramakrishna Iyengar, the Bangalore City suit being renumbered as O. S. No. 61A of 1947. They were disposed of by him by a single judgment, though, of course, there were separate decrees in each of these suits. The District Judge, Mr. Ramakrishna Iyengar, accepted the plaintiff's case and decreed both the suits, on 5-12-1947, but excluded the four items of immovable properties situated in Madras State from the scope of his decree, obviously because of the rule of private international law that a Court has no jurisdiction to entertain an action for the determination of the title to or the right to the possession of any immovable property situated outside its jurisdiction (mentioned by Dicey as Rules 20 and 66 in his book, Conflict of Laws).

(6) The executors-defendants in both the suits appealed to the Mysore High Court against both the decrees. The appeal against the Cantonment suit was numbered as R. A. No. 104 and the appeal against the Bangalore City suit was numbered as R. A. No. 109 of 1947-48 on the file of the Mysore High Court. These two appeals were consolidated, and heard, in the first instance, by a Bench of the Mysore High Court, consisting of Balakrishnaiya and Kandaswami Pillai, JJ. Before the appeals were heard, the plaintiffs-respondents applied to the Mysore High Court, in I. A. No. 6, for a stay of the hearing of the appeal till the disposal of the appeals to the Privy Council against the grant of the probate. That prayer was not granted, though I. A. No. 6 itself was formally dismissed only on 15-3-1949, after the appeals before the Division Bench were heard. The plaintiffs-respondents filed also I. A. No. 8 to record a compromise, which had according to them, been arrived at between them and the appellants. That application also was dismissed On 15-3-1949. On 2-4-1949, the Bench of the Mysore High Court delivered its judgment in the two appeals. Kandaswami Pillai J., held that the decrees of the District Judge in favour of the plaintiffs should be confirmed, while Balakrishnaiya J., held that the appeals should be allowed and the two suits dismissed. Balakrishnaiya J., the senior Judge, directed, under S. 15 (3) of the Mysore High Court Act, as follows:

"Since a difference of opinion is expressed by my learned colleague on material questions involved in the appeals, these appeals are referred to a Full Bench for decision under S. 15(3) of the High Court Act."

(7) A Full Bench of the Mysore High Court had, therefore, to be constituted to hear the matter in Law and on the facts. The plaintiffs strongly objected to the Full Bench being constituted of Medappa C. J., Balakrishnaiya J., and Mallappa J., as proposed, on various grounds. Mallappa J., was not objected to on any specific ground carrying conviction even to the plaintiffs themselves, and, so, the objection to his sitting in the Full Bench was eventually dropped. Balakrishnaiya J., was objected to as having already formed an opinion against the plaintiffs' contentions in the case and delivered judgment against them in the Bench decision, and therefore unfit to sit on the Full Bench which had to consider not merely the law but also the very facts on which he had come to a definite conclusion against the plaintiffs but no interest or bias or partiality or misconduct was alleged against him. Medappa C. J., was objected to on the ground that he had heard the application for probate of Ramalinga's will when he was District Judge of Bangalore Cantonment, and had formed an opinion against the plaintiffs' contentions and overruled their contention that the will had been brought about by undue influence on Ramalinga by two enemies of theirs, converting Ramalinga's expressed original intention to bequeath at least 3/4ths of his properties to his wife and children into a decision to practically cut them off with a pittance. It was also alleged that Medappa C. J., was unfit to sit on the Full Bench, because he and his wife and children had, during the probate proceedings in the Cantonment in 1943 and subsequently, (till 1945, when the car was sold) been using the 'Mercedes' car of Ramalinga's estate for going to Court, school, etc., practically as if the car belonged to him, and had thus a strong reason for favouring the executors who had allowed him the use of the car, and also because, in October 1945 and the beginning of 1946, he had attempted to dissuade Mr. L. S. Raju, the plaintiffs' Counsel, from appearing for them, and had made strong and unwarranted remarks to him against them. The plaintiffs filed I. A. No. 14 for a re-constitution of the Bench on the above grounds. That petition was dismissed, and a Full Bench was constituted of these three learned Judges alone. The attempt of the plaintiffs to move the Government of Mysore to change the constitution of the Full Bench, and to constitute another Full Bench consisting of 'ad hoc' Judges, if necessary, also failed.

(8) The plaintiffs next asked for an adjournment of the hearing of the appeals in I. A. No. 15, so that, they might get Sir Alladi Krishnaswami Ayyar, who was then said to be in Delhi and could not appear at the hearing, or Sri Sarat Chandra Bose who was intended to be briefed, failing Sir Alladi Krishnaswami Ayyar. Neither of these eminent Counsel had requested the Court for an adjournment. I. A. No. 15 was rejected on 20-7-49 by the learned C. J. I. A. No. 16 was then filed by the plffs. for another adjournment. All the three Judges of the Full Bench heard it. In that very application, the plaintiffs had objected at first to the presence of every one of the three Judges on the Full Bench. At the time of the hearing, they withdrew their objection to Mallappa J., being on the Full Bench, but persisted in their objections to the presence of the other two learned Judges. The three learned Judges overruled the objections of the plaintiffs and dismissed I. A. No. 16. Thereupon the Counsel for the plaintiffs asked for permission to withdraw from their appearance. That request also was rejected. All the same, when the two appeals were heard by the Full Bench, on 27-7-1949, the Plaintiffs and their Counsel did not participate in the hearing of the appeals. The appeals were thus virtually heard ex parte, and the judgment of the Full Bench in the appeals was delivered, by Mallappa, J. on 29-7-1949, allowing both the appeals of the executors and dismissing both the suits of the plaintiffs' the other two Judges concurred with him. The plaintiffs then filed I. A. Nos. 49, 50, 61 and 62 for reviewing the judgment of the Full Bench and for setting it aside on various grounds. All those petitions were heard by the same Full Bench and were dismissed. That marks the termination of the proceedings in Mysore State.

(9) In C. S. No. 214 of 1944, the judgment of the above Full Bench was contended, by the executors' Counsel, to operate as 'res judicata' and to be conclusive, under S. 13, C. P. C. regarding the properties comprised in this suit, and to preclude the contention of the plaintiffs, that they were ancestral properties, from being gone into by this Court. It is on this preliminary issue, regarding 'res judicata' under S. 13, that Rajagopalan J., delivered the judgment which is in appeal before us. The plaintiffs, who seem to have succeeded more than the defendants, under the decision on this issue, have filed O. S. A. No. 84 of 1950, contending that Rajagopalan J. ought not to have restricted the scope of the enquiry into proof of bias, interest partiality, misconduct, etc., vitiating the judgment of the Full Bench regarding the movables, to actual proof of bias, partiality, etc., or probable proof thereof, but should have acted on several well-known decisions of the House of the Lords, the Privy Council, and our High Courts, that a mere suspicion of partiality, bias, or misconduct on the part of the Judge by a party would be enough, and ought to have at least allowed the plaintiffs full scope for proving every one of their allegations of partiality, bias, misconduct, pre-formed opinion, etc., against Medappa C. J., and of pre-formed opinion against Balakrishnaiya, J. O. S. A. No. 67 of 1950 has been filed by the defendants-executors and is against the exclusion of the immovable properties from the scope of 'res judicata' in Rajagopalan J.'s order, and against the enquiry directed regarding the proof of interest, and bias by proof of possession of the estate 'Mercedes' Car by Medappa C. J., and his asking the plaintiffs counsel Mr. Raju to withdraw from his appearance for the plaintiffs in the Bangalore suit and making allegations to him against the plaintiffs, it was urged that, under private inter-national law, the contention of the plaintiffs regarding even the immovable properties could not be gone into as the finding of the Full Bench of the Mysore High Court that all the properties of Ramalinga were his self-acquired properties would be conclusive under S. 13, C. P. C., as it related to a matter directly adjudicated upon between the same parties and would not be affected by any of the exceptions and as the enquiry regarding the use of the motor car and the alleged attempt by Medappa C. J. to dissuade Mr. L. S. Raju from appearing for the plaintiffs and the allegations to him against the plaintiffs would be inexpedient and unwarranted under the rules of private inter-national law, though permissible, if alleged against a subordinate Judge, under the municipal law of a State.

(10) So, these appeals raise very important questions of private International Law which require careful consideration. Before proceeding further we may state a few well-settled principles of private inter-national law. As observed by Wolff, in his Private International Law, 1945 Edition, the recognition of foreign judgments and their enforcement is an important problem arising in international intercourse by reason of the extensive foreign trade between a country and foreign countries in these days, and the judgments obtained by merchants of one country in respect of their debts and claims, in foreign Courts, and also because of world wars 1 and 2 having made millions of people migrate from their home country to other countries (like the vast migrations from Pakistan to India and 'vice versa' after partition) and the migrations of the Jews, Poles, etc., from their home-lands and the need to recognise various foreign judgments got by these unfortunate persons.

As Wolff observes, it is impossible to recognise all judgments of all Courts in any country all over the world, despite its manifest advantages, as the disadvantages are equally manifest in so unrestricted a recognition. In his own words,

"It is not advisable to trust every Court in the world to administer justice irreproachably. Bribery of Judges may have become so rare as to reduce this risk to a minimum; but in some countries unsatisfactory legal education, appointment of Judges from political motives, and the influence which the state or some powerful criminal organization within the State brings to bear on the Judges are considerable obstacles to a universal recognition of judgments. Further, even where there is no danger of any kind of corruption of courts, differences between two countries in their fundamental attitude to questions of morality or public policy must often make the recognition of some individual judgments seem undesirable. Finally, general recognition might result in grave injustice where the same relationship was regarded differently by the courts of two countries", as in cases of marriage, divorce, inheritance, etc.

(11) The extent to which foreign judgments will be recognised as conclusive in India has been clearly stated in S. 13, C. P. C. which runs as follows:

"A foreign judgment shall be conclusive as to any matter thereby directly adjudicated upon between the same parties or between parties under whom they or any of them claim, litigating under the same title, except—

(a) where it has not been pronounced by a Court of competent jurisdiction;

(b) where it has not been given on the merits of the case;

(c) where it appears on the face of the proceedings to be founded on an incorrect view of international law or a refusal to recognise the law of British India in cases in which such law is applicable;

(d) where the proceedings in which the judgment was obtained are opposed to natural justice;

(e) where it has been obtained by fraud;

(f) where it sustains a claim founded on a breach of any law in force in British India."

(12) Needless to say, S. 13, C. P. C. is based on well-known decisions of the House of Lords, Privy Council and other Courts in England and abroad, and the High Courts in India. Though, after the coming into force of the Constitution of India on 26-1-1950, and the Independence of India and the severance of India's dependence on the King of England and the Privy Council, the rulings of the Privy Council are not legally binding on Courts in India, they are treated with very great respect, as held by the Federal Court and the Supreme Court and various High Courts including our own, see the Bench decision in — 'Lakshmi Narasa Reddi v. Official Receiver, Sree Films, Ltd.', 1951-1 Mad L J 488 at p. 492. That is why counsel on both sides have profusely quoted from English rulings and text-books, Indian rulings being few, as India was not having this question of 'foreign judgments' frequently till she became independent in 1947. We may add that the qualities required in Judges, and regarding a court of competent jurisdiction and rules of natural justice, and what constitutes fraud and the effect of fraud on judgments, do not differ appreciably in English law and the law of the Indian Republic. The Constitution of India accords the same recognition to foreign judgments as S. 13 C. P. C. does, and has not altered the law of India in this respect. We may go further and say that even under the immemorial Hindu Law the views held regarding the qualities required in Judges and judgments and the views about natural justice were much the same as held in Indian courts now, and judgments were held to be null and void in cases of proved perjury, bribery and fraud and also where the party was not given an opportunity to be heard.

(13) We shall now state the well-settled principles of international private law regarding the recognition of judgments and the application to S. 13 to them, and discuss the merits of the contentions in these appeals. A "foreign judgment" has been defined by the Privy Council in — 'Brijlal v. Govindram', AIR 1947 P C 192, confirming the view expressed by Beaumont, C. J. and Weston J., in the Bench decision of the Bombay High Court reported in — 'Brijlal v. Govindram', AIR 1943 Bom 201, the Privy Council decision being given on appeal. The Privy Council has said that the expression 'foreign judgment' must be understood to mean 'an adjudication by a foreign Court upon the matter before it', and has added that it would be quite impracticable to hold that a foreign judgment means a statement by a foreign Judge of the reasons for his order, since, if that were the meaning of the judgment, S. 13, C. P. C., would not apply to an order where no reasons were given. It is clear to us that the Full Bench judgment is a foreign judgment, as mentioned in S. 13 within the definition accepted by the Privy Council. The phrase 'directly adjudicated upon between the same parties' in S. 13 also admits of little difficulty. It is clear from the Full Bench judgment that all the properties included in C. S. No. 214 of 1944 and the properties in Mysore State, including the Bangalore Cantonment, were directly adjudicated upon, except the four items of immovable properties included in this suit, regarding which there was no direct adjudication at all. We cannot agree with the learned Advocate-General, who appeared for the executors-appellants in O. S. A. No. 67 of 1950, that simply because all the properties of Ramalinga, movable and immovable, were held by the Full Bench to be the self-acquired properties of Ramalinga, and no exception was made, there was an adjudication that these four items of immovable properties, which were not covered by the decree of the trial Court, Bench Court or Full Bench, would be a matter directly adjudicated upon. When there was no decree at all regarding them, there cannot be any adjudication.

Besides, Dicey, Wolff and other authorities on private international law are emphatic that a municipal Court of a country has no jurisdiction to entertain an action for the determination of the title to or the right to the possession of immovables situated in foreign lands. The exception that where a municipal Court has jurisdiction to entertain a suit for administering an estate or trust and the property includes moveables or immovables situated abroad, the municipal Court may have jurisdiction to determine questions of title to the foreign immovables for purposes of the administration, mentioned as an exception to rule 20 by Dicey, and relied on by the learned Advocate-General, will have no application to this case for three reasons. First of all, the trial Court's decision and the decision of the Bench and the Full Bench in these cases were not in administration suits or proceedings, but in regular suits for recovery of properties from the executors, claiming them to be ancestral properties not devisable by Ramalinga by will. Secondly there was 'no decree or adjudication' regarding 'these four items', one of them not being included in the suits at all, and the other three being omitted from the decree after objection taken to jurisdiction. Thirdly, the learned Advocate-General had to confess that there was no direct decision in his favour. The decisions relied on by the learned Advocate-General, namely, — 'In re Piercy', (1891) 1 Ch 83(Sic); — 'In re Hoyles', (1911) 1 Ch 179 and — 'In re Duke of Wellington', (1948) 1 Ch 118, will not prove the point raised by the appellants in O. S. A. No. 67 of 1950, as, though the lands in those cases were situated in Italy, Canada (Ontario), and Spain, the jurisdiction was assumed by the Courts in England and the party submitted to their jurisdiction, and there was 'no consideration or recognition of a foreign judgment and its applicability to lands in England at all'.

Besides, as already mentioned, the lands were 'covered' by the decree in those cases, and were 'not left out' of the decrees, as in our case, 'expressly owing to want of jurisdiction'. In — In re Ross, (1930) 1 Ch 377; it has been held that the 'lex loci' (local law) or 'lex situs' (law of country where the lands are situated) will govern immovables, though the law of domicile will govern movables. That is also the view taken in India, as in all civilised countries, see — Khur Singh v. Achar Khasia, 49 Cal W N 754.

It follows, therefore, that Rajagopalan J.'s judgment holding that 'res judicata' did not operate by virtue of the Full Bench judgment of the Mysore High Court regarding the four immovables was right, and must be confirmed, and the appeal, O. S. A. No. 67 of 1950, dismissed, regarding that matter. We may add that the clause "the matter directly adjudicated upon" in S. 13 C. P. C. is narrower than the clause "the matter directly and substantially in issue" in S. 11.

(14) We now come to the contention of the learned Advocate-General, in O. S. A. 67 of 1950, that Rajagopalan, J., was not justified in ordering any enquiry regarding the motor car allegation or the alleged attempt to dissuade Mr. L. S. Raju from appearing for the plaintiffs, and the contention of Mr. Padmanabha Mudaliar in O. S. A. No. 84 of 1950, that Rajagopalan, J., should have ignored the Full Bench judgment 'in toto' regarding the movables also, or, at least, directed a full and unrestricted enquiry into all allegations of interest, bias, partiality, misconduct, preconceived notions, and errors in procedure, on the part of Medappa, C. J., and Balakrishnayya, J. who took part in the Full Bench. The scope of an enquiry into a foreign judgment, for holding it not to be conclusive, has been laid down in the exceptions to S. 13, C. P. C., which will be conclusive in the matter, as can be inferred from the judgment of the Privy Council in — Brijlal v. Govindram, AIR 1947 P C 192. Dicey and Wolff also expressly say that the foreign judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction regarding movables will be conclusive unless it is vitiated by fraud, or, is opposed to fundamental principles of natural justice, as, for example, by want of due notice to the party affected thereby, or denial of an opportunity to a party of presenting his case to the Court, (under which last heading the alleged attempt of Medappa, C. J., to dissuade Mr. L. S. Raju, if proved, will fall.) Dicey says that the fraud invalidating a foreign judgment may be either 'fraud on the part of the party' in whose favour the judgment is given (as by bringing the Judge to give a decision in his favour, misleading the Judge into giving a decision in his favour, by proved false evidence, etc.), or 'fraud on the part of the Court' pronouncing the judgment (as, for example, by writing a judgment before hearing the parties and delivering that judgment after hearing the parties & pretending that it was written only after hearing the parties, or taking a bribe for delivering a corrupt and untenable decision in favour of a party).

Dicey says:

"There are two rules relating to these matters which have to be borne in mind and the joint operation of which gives rise to difficulty. First of all, there is the rule, which is perfectly well established and well known, that a party to an action can impeach the judgment in it for fraud. Whether it is the judgment of an English Court or of a foreign Court does not matter; using general language, that is a general proposition, 'unconditional and undisputed'. Another general proposition which, speaking in equally general language, is perfectly well settled is, that when you bring an action on a foreign judgment, you cannot go into the merits which have been tried in the foreign Court."

Relying on the ruling in — Abouloof v. Oppenheimer, (1882) 10 Q B D 295 and — Vadala v. Lawes, (1890) 25 Q B D 310, he says that in cases of fraud bringing about a foreign judgment, the Municipal Court will have to go into the very facts which were investigated and which were in issue in the foreign Court. Mr. Padmanabha Mudaliar, for the appellants in O. S. A. No. 84 of 1950, urged before us that the Full Bench judgment was already prepared and was ready before the hearing before it began, and was delivered after the hearing, fraudulently pretending that it had been prepared only after the hearing, and, so, was vitiated by fraud and should be treated as null & void & as not operating as 'res judicata' even regarding the movables. The learned Advocate General urged before us that this point was not raised before Rajagopalan, J., and, so should not be allowed to be raised before us. We agree. The only thing urged by the plaintiffs, even according to Mr. Padmanabha Mudaliar, in their affidavit dated 28-1-1950, before Rajagopalan, J., was the following passage in the affidavit:

"One other feature which makes his judgment unacceptable is that, within 24 hours of the closing of arguments in the case I refused to appear or to be represented by counsel, he pronounces judgment on a complicated matter and accounts, requiring days of laborious study and research, thus giving room for suspicion that the judgment was a foregone conclusion, and that the Full Bench hearing was a farce. Memorials against such an unjudicial performance have been forwarded to the authorities concerned and we are awaiting their decision and action. In these circumstances, which I beg leave of Court to prove by evidence, the said Full Bench judgment is a nullity and the rights of the parties said to have been acquired thereunder are equally null and void."

It is clear to us that that passage only mentioned a preconceived opinion by the Judges, and that it has not actually covered the point of 'fraud' now raised before us, which is much wider and would have been stated in that form had that been the contention relied on, especially seeing that Dicey's rule would have covered it and invalidated the judgment, S. 13(d), C. P. C., also invalidating it, as the proceedings, in which the judgment was obtained, would then be clearly opposed to natural justice. So, we cannot allow the plaintiff-appellants to raise this point before us, and reject this argument, though, we agree that fraud, if alleged and proved, will indeed, vitiate every judgment, as held by the House of Lords in — Castrique v. Imrie, (1870) 4 H. L. 414 at p. 433 and accepted by all courts and text book writers.

(15) The next argument of Mr. Padmanabha Mudaliar, for the plaintiffs-appellants, was that, as per the ruling in — Pemberton v. Hughes, (1899) 1 Ch 781, a foreign judgment would only be recognised and acted upon in England, notwithstanding any irregularity of procedure under the local law, provided the foreign Court had jurisdiction over the subject-matter and over the persons brought before it and the proceedings did not offend against 'English views of substantial justice'. He urged that the clause 'opposed to natural justice' in S. 13(d) would also mean 'opposed to notions of justice entertained in this Court'. He then relied on the rulings in — 'The King v. Sussex Justices; Ex parte McCarthy', (1924) 1 K B 256; — 'The King v. Essex Justice; Ex parte Perkins', (1927) 2 K B 475; — 'Rex v. Divine, Ex parte Walton', (1930) 143 L T 235 and — 'The King v. Salford Assessment Committee; Ex parte Ogden', (1937) 2 K B 1 and urged that, as per those rulings, justice must not only be done, but must also seem to be done, and that a mere apprehension in the minds of the parties that the decision would not be delivered by a Judge impartially, and without bias or partiality, is enough to vitiate a judgment delivered by such a Judge, especially when the party had protested before the Judge himself, as here, against his hearing the case, and that, therefore, the Full Bench judgment of the Mysore High Court would be null and void and would not operate as 'res judicata' even regarding the movables, and that even proof of the alleged acts of bias, partiality, misconduct, pre-conceived notion, etc., would be unnecessary in such a case.

We cannot agree. The rulings relied on by him are all 'rulings of a municipal Court' about courts subordinate to it, and simply vitiated the rulings of subordinate Courts, and 'not any foreign judgments'. The learned Advocate-General rightly urged that there is a distinction in this matter between vitiating the judgments of 'courts subordinate to one's jurisdiction' on the grounds of suspected bias, interest etc., initiating (sic) (and vitiating) the judgments of 'foreign Courts'. As he urged, foreign judgments are recognised by private international law only on the principle of 'comity between the nations, reciprocity, acquired rights, acquired obligations, international usage and custom' etc., and 'not as fundamental rights guaranteed by any world constitution or world court', the world not having reached that stage yet. That is why, as already noticed, the Privy Council in — 'Brijlal v. Govindram', AIR 1947 P. C. 192, agreeing with the Bombay High Court, held that a foreign judgment of a competent Court, not falling within the exceptions to S. 13, C. P. C., would be conclusive, even if it gave 'no reasons for the judgment', which, of course, would be unthinkable in the case of courts subordinate to the High Court or Privy Council. That is also why the Privy Council and the Bombay High Court held in that case an Indian Court cannot go into the question of the misconduct of arbitrators appointed by a foreign Court, by allowing unauthorised persons to approach them and discuss the merits of the arbitration matter with them, to be not vitiating the foreign judgment, as it did not go to the 'jurisdiction' of the foreign Court. Needless to say, the decision would have been different if the misconduct was of arbitrators appointed by a Court subordinate to the municipal Courts, and not by a foreign Court, though in — 'Eckersley v. Mersy Docks and Harbour Board', (1894) 2 Q B 667, it was held that the rule which applies to a Judge or other person holding judicial office, namely, that he ought not to hear cases in which he might be suspected of a bias in favour of one of the parties does not apply to an arbitrator named in a contract, to whom both of the parties have agreed to refer disputes which might arise between them under it. The view of the Bombay High Court and the Privy Council in 'Brijlal v. Govindram', AIR 1947 P C 192, in the case of a foreign judgment, is in favour of the executors, and precludes, in our opinion, an enquiry into mere bias, interest, etc., of the Judges in a 'foreign' judgment.

(16) The learned Advocate-General urged that it is 'neither expedient nor proper' to apply to judgments of foreign Courts, which may be Courts of U. S. A., United Kingdom, U. S. S. R., or other powerful foreign country, in future, (and not merely of near-by Mysore, Pudukkottai, Indore or Bikaner, now part of India), now that India has attained independence and is having ambassadors in those countries and close relations with them, and that, therefore, any principle invalidating 'foreign judgments' not warranted by specific rulings or by authoritative text-book writers like Dicey and Wolff, and merely resting on an alleged bias, partiality, pre-conceived opinion, procedural irregularity, or alleged misconduct of Judges, like those raised by Mr. Padmanabha Mudaliar for the plaintiffs and not recognized by any rulings or responsible text-books writers should not be recognized, by any theory of logical extension, as that would act like a boomerang, recoils on Indian Courts and their judgments when relied on in foreign Courts to the great detriment of private international law and the worsening of relations between nations and countries. On this ground, he vigorously opposed the "logical extension" of the well-established principles of private international law, attempted by Rajagopalan, J., in directing an enquiry into the car episode and the attempt to dissuade Mr. L. S. Raju.

There is force in what he says so far as the car episode is concerned. The alleged attempt to dissuade Mr. L. S. Raju for the plaintiffs, if proved, will fall within the scope of well-established rules. We are not disposed to agree with Mr. Padmanabha Mudaliar in his extreme contentions. It is well settled that a mere error in procedure in a foreign court will not affect its conclusive nature under S. 13, C. P. C., provided that error in procedure does not amount to a violation of natural justice under S. 13 (d), C. P. C., as held in — 'Pemberton v. Hughes', (1899) 1 Ch. 781. If a judgment is pronounced by a foreign Court over persons within its jurisdiction and in a matter with which it is competent to deal, it was held in that case that English Courts will never investigate the propriety of the proceedings of the foreign Court unless they offend against the English views of substantial justice. Of course, one of the rules of 'substantial justice' all over the world is that a man shall not be a judge in his own cause, and that is the basis of the ruling in — 'Price v. Dewhurst', (1837) 3 Sim 279, where a judgment of a Danish Court, consisting of persons interested in the property in dispute, was held to be vitiated and was disregarded by the English Court. That is also the basis of disregarding foreign judgments where a party is not given notice of the hearing of the case, or is not allowed an opportunity of representing his case to the Court. This will all be opposed to natural justice under S. 13 (d), and will make the Court, in most cases, not a Court of competent jurisdiction also, under S. 13 (a), C. P. C.

(17) It is, therefore, clear to us that errors in procedure, interest of slight nature (like using cars, eating marriage dinners etc.), mere suspected bias, pungent observations of judges at hearings, a non-liberal attitude towards requests for constituting another Bench and not hearing the case themselves, and not granting adjournments for engaging eminent counsel, will all be 'inadequate for vitiating' A Foreign Judgment of a competent court, as not affecting the jurisdiction or coming under any other exception mentioned in S. 13, C. P. C. The Full Bench had given its judgment regarding the movables on the merits of the case, under S. 13(b). That judgment was not founded on any incorrect view of international law, or a refusal to recognise the law of British India in cases in which such law is applicable, under S. 13(c), it being admitted before us that the Hindu law applicable to the parties and concerning the matter is the same in Mysore State as in Madras. Under the ruling of the Privy Council in — 'Nataraja v. Subbaraya', ILR (1950) Mad. 862 (PC), where the law is the same, the judgment of the foreign Court regarding 'movables', over which it has jurisdiction, will be 'conclusive' under S. 13, C. P. C., unless vitiated by one of the exceptions in S. 13, C. P. C., like being opposed to natural justice etc.

(18) It follows from the above discussion that we do not agree with the view of Rajagopalan, J., that a 'logical extension' can be made of the well-settled principles of private international law on the point, and an enquiry into the motor car incident justified in order to show that Medappa, C. J. had so identified himself with the executors, who were alleged to have allowed him the use of the car, as to make him practically a person deciding his own cause, he having made the plaintiffs' cause his own. It is not as if the plaintiffs had alleged that Medappa, C. J., had claimed the Mercedes car to be 'his own' and was, therefore not a person competent to decide on the title to the properties under S. 13(a). It was merely alleged that he 'used the car' for himself and his wife and children. It was not even stated whether he had used the car 'free or for hire'. There was 'no claim' by the plaintiffs or others on Medappa, C. J. for any dues in respect of the alleged use of the car. The car itself was alleged to have been used in 1943-45 when Medappa, C. J. was District Judge, Bangalore Cantonment, and was hearing the probate application. It was sold away in 1945 or 1946, long before Medappa, C. J., sat on this Full Bench. It is too much to say that, from these facts, Medappa, C. J., would be 'coram non judice', or had identified himself with the executors, and that his taking part in the Full Bench would be opposed to 'natural justice'. Nor in our opinion, can the contention that Medappa, C. J., and Balakrishnayya J., were disqualified to sit on the Full Bench by reason of previous acquaintance with the matters in dispute and forming opinions regarding the matters in dispute, come within any of the exceptions to S. 13, C. P. C. as interpreted by the Privy Council or our High Courts.

Regarding Mallappa, J., nothing was alleged before us, and 'he' was the person who wrote the judgment of the Full Bench in question. Incidentally, that will also militate against the allegation that the judgment of the Full Bench was ready before the hearing began, as it is 'this Judge', against whom nothing is alleged, who wrote the judgment, and not Medappa, C. J., or Balakrishnaiya, J. However, we entirely agree with Rajagopalan, J. that the matter of the attempt to dissuade Mr. L. S. Raju from appearing for the plaintiffs, and alleged statements to him defaming the plaintiffs, will fall within S. 13(a) and S. 13(b), C. P. C. and amount to a denial of an opportunity to a party of presenting his case to the Court properly, and make Medappa, C. J., 'coram non judice' and vitiate the Full Bench judgment, 'if proved'. We cannot agree with Mr. Padmanabha Mudaliar that a 'mere allegation' to that effect without enquiring into it, or proof of it, will do to vitiate the judgment. Allegations and apprehensions will not do to vitiate a judgment (municipal or foreign) under our law. It is one thing for a Judge himself to decide not to hear a case which the party does not want him to hear, because of alleged fears of the party that he will not get an impartial hearing and judgment; it is quite another thing to hold a judgment to be vitiated when such a request is refused, as here. So too, it is one thing for the executors to decide not to raise the question of 'res judicata' in this suit and rely on it, but to prove, by evidence let in in this suit, that the properties are the self-acquired properties of Ramalinga and not ancestral properties; it is quite another thing to compel them not to raise and rely on 'res judicata'. It is obvious that a party is entitled to rely on 'res judicata', and burke a trial, if he can do so under the law, and many reasons will operate on his mind in deciding on his course of action. What the law allows, a Court cannot disallow. So too, 'a mere statement' by a party of alleged misconduct disentitling a Judge (like Medappa, C. J.) to sit on a Full Bench, on the ground of incompetency or incongruity with natural justice, will not do. As observed by 'Jaimini', the Hindu expert on 'Mimamsa' and Evidence, two thousand years ago, 'mere assertion is not proof', and 'repeated assertions' cannot take the place of 'proof'. So, Rajagopalan J. was fully justified in holding that, even regarding the alleged attempt of Medappa, C. J., to dissuade Mr. L. S. Raju from appearing for the plaintiffs, and presenting their case to the Court, and thus disentitling him from sitting on the Full Bench, 'proof was necessary', and 'mere allegation or assertion would not do'.

(19) In the end, therefore, we are of opinion that O.S.A. No. 84 of 1950 deserves to be dismissed with costs, and that O. S. A. No. 67 of 1950 deserves to be allowed in part, regarding the deletion of the enquiry ordered by Rajagopalan, J. into the 'Mercedes' car incident, but has to be dismissed regarding all other findings, and we do so accordingly. The judgment of Rajagopalan, J., will be modified by deleting the enquiry into the 'Mercedes' car episode, and confirmed in all other respects. In O. S. A. No. 67 of 1950, all the parties are directed to bear their own costs.

A/H.G.P.

Order accordingly.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 268 (Vol. 40, C. N. 100)
GOVINDA MENON J.

Aravamudha Chettiar, Petitioner v. M. Abdul Khader Rowther, Respondent.

Civil Revn. Petn. No. 1577 of 1951, D/- 18-7-1952.

Houses and Rents — Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (25 of 1949), S. 7 (2), Proviso and S. 20 — Controller advising eviction for non-payment of rent — Appellate Court can condone the default.

An appeal is a continuation of the proceedings in the Court of first instance, and hence even after an order for eviction has been made by the Controller for non-payment of rent, if the tenant is able to satisfy the appellate Court that the non-payment was not due to any wilful neglect on his part, it is open to the appellate Court to condone the default and allow the tenant reasonable time to pay the rent under the Proviso to S. 7 (2): (1951) 2 MLJ 477, Rel. on. (Para 2)

K. Raman and K. S. Desikan, for Petitioner.

JUDGMENT: Both the lower courts have held that during the pendency of an appeal against an order made by the Rent Controller for eviction as a result of non-payment of rent, the appellate authority has no power to condone the non-payment by acceptance of rent. The proviso added to S. 7, sub-s. (2) of the Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act states that when an application for eviction is made on the ground of the tenant's default to pay rent in time, if the Controller is satisfied that the default to pay rent was not wilful, the Controller may give the tenant a reasonable time not exceeding 15 days to pay or tender the rent due by him to the landlord upto the date of such payment or tender. This shows that the Controller has got to explain for the non-payment of rent and thereby condone the temporary default on the part of the tenant. If such condonation is made, then, the application by the landlord will be dismissed.

(2) Mr. K. Raman relies upon S. 7 (A) introduced by Madras Act, VIII of 1951 for the contention that this power vested in the Controller can be exercised also by the appellate court in an appeal from the order of eviction made by the Controller. Thus, his argument is to the effect that even after an order for eviction has been made by the Controller for non-payment of rent, if the tenant is able to satisfy the appellate court that the non-payment was not due to any wilful neglect on his part, it is open to the appellate Court to condone the default and allow the tenant to pay the rent. For this purpose, he relies upon the decision — 'Satyanarayana v. Venkataratnam', 1951-2-MLJ 477. The facts of this case are somewhat similar to what we have to consider here and the question which was considered by the learned Chief Justice and Soma-sundaram J. was whether under the circumstances of that case, S. 20 of the Act applied and the learned Judges came to the conclusion that S. 20 applied. If S. 20 applied, it may be said that, during the pendency of the appeal, the order for eviction cannot be deemed to be final. It is common ground that an appeal is a continuation of the proceedings in the court of first instance and I am of opinion that the proviso can be made applicable to the facts of the present case. I therefore set aside the order of the lower Court and direct that the default for non-payment of rent be condoned. There will be no order as to costs.

B/D.R.R.

Application allowed.

*A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 269 (Vol. 40, C.N. 101)

GOVINDA MENON AND BASHEER
AHMED SAYEED JJ.

In re K. V. V. Sarma, Manager, Gemini Studios, Madras, Accused-Appellant.

Criminal Appeal No. 252 of 1951, D/- 18-8-1952.

(a) Cinematograph Act (37 of 1952), Ss. 2 (c) and 10 — Production of films for exhibition — Movies — Nature of.

As regards the production of the films for exhibition, Court can take judicial notice of the fact that the completed production of a film is a highly technical and scientific process which requires the services of persons who are experts in that line. Movies are generally media of expression. What is finally distributed to the various picture houses for exhibition is not what existed at the initial stage, but it is the story, the plot or the idea that are worked up and knit into a continuous version that constitutes the entertainment that is catered to the public. (Paras 7, 8)

(b) Factories Act (1948), S. 2(m) — Difference between definitions of "factory" contained in Indian and English Act — English Factories Act (1937), S. 151(1).

According to the interpretation of the term "factory" in S. 151(1), English Factories Act, 1937, if an establishment satisfies the general words of the definition and if manual labour is employed in such an establishment it becomes a factory. But even if such an establishment cannot be brought within the wide terms of that definition, still as specifically bringing it within the definition are the various defined institutions in items (i) to (xii) of that section. The Indian Factories Act, 1948 does not borrow from the English Act the various amplifications mentioned as items (i) to (x) and (xii) and (xiii) of S. 151(1) of the English Act. (Para 10)

(c) Factories Act (1948), S. 2(k) — Exhibition of films by means of cinematograph — Conversion of raw film into finished product.

The definition of the term "manufacturing process" in S. 2(k) is very wide. The raw film used in the preparation of movies is an article or a substance and when by the process of treating or adapting, after the sounds are absorbed and the photos imprinted, it is rendered fit to be screened in a cinema theatre, then such a change would come within the meaning of the term "treating or adapting any articles or substance with a view to its use." Thus, the conversion of a raw film into a finished product comes within the definition of manufacturing process in the section: (1919) 2 B & Ald 345, Rel. on.

(Paras 13, 14)

(d) Factories Act (1948), S. 2(m) — Comparison between Indian and English Act.

It is futile to make comparisons between the English Factories Act and the Indian Factories Act; for one thing the idea underlying the Factories Act in England is the regulation of the employment of manual labour. There is no such restriction in the Factories Act prevalent in India. The salient fact that with the English statute before them the framers of the Indian Act did not restrict the operation of the Act to manual labour, cannot be lost sight of. It is not surprising that the sponsors of the legislation in India thought it necessary to include intellectual as well as aesthetic and artistic portions of labour within the purview of the Factories Act. (Para 15)

(e) Factories Act (1948), S. 2(1) — "Whether for wages or not" — Construction.

The antithesis "or not" in the expression "whether for wages or not" in S. 2(1) is not intended to bring within the ambit of the definition persons who receive emoluments which cannot be termed as wages. The expression "whether for wages or not" means whether the person receives as remuneration for his services wages, or whether such a person is an apprentice learning work or is an honorary worker. (Para 17)

(f) Payment of Wages Act (1936), S. 2(vi) — "Wages" — Meaning of — Wages is compensation paid for work done for period less than a month — Factories Act (1948), S. 2(1).

The term 'wages' is not intended to apply to persons who receive a fairly good sum of money as monthly salary. On a construction of the various provisions of the Payment of Wages Act, the underlying idea is that the term "wages" should be understood as compensation paid for work done for a period less than a month. It may be either daily or weekly but where the payment is to be made monthly, one finds it difficult to apply the provisions of the Payment of Wages Act to such state of circumstances. Moreover, S. 4, sub-sec. (2) says that no wage period shall exceed one month. That makes it very plain that the Act is not intended to apply to any kind of salaries payable monthly. (Para 32)

Anno: P. W. Act, S. 2 N. 1.

(g) Workmen's Compensation Act (1923), S. 2(1)(m) — "Wages" — Provision whether analogous to that contained in Factories Act (1948), S. 2(1).

The sections of the Workmen's Compensation Act are not in any way in 'pari materia' or even analogous to the provisions of the Factories Act. No useful guidance can be got by considering the provisions of the Workmen's Compensation Act in determining what meaning should be given to the term "wages" in the Factories Act. (Para 32)

Anno: W. C. Act, S. 2(1)(m) N. 1.

*(h) Factories Act (1948), S. 2(1) and (m) — Studio producing films to be exhibited by means of cinematograph — Workers employed in Studio — 'Wages', meaning of — Studio whether factory.

In finding out whether a person employed directly or through any agency in a manufacturing process, is receiving wages, the question has to be determined with regard to the period for which the amount is settled to be paid. If the remuneration is to be paid daily or weekly, it can be called wages. But where it is monthly remuneration payable on the last day of the month or after that date and where the remuneration, considering the general standards of payment, is fairly high, then it has to be understood as salary. It is not necessary that in order to bring the compensation within the term "salary" any lower limit need be fixed. However, even if the compensation is paid at the end of the month is less than Rs. 200 as laid down in the Payment of Wages Act, it would be more appropriate to call it as wages. But where it is Rs. 200 or more the same may be termed as "salary". If, therefore, in a studio where the films are produced, ten or more workers are receiving wages in the sense mentioned above then each of the departments would be a factory. But if there be any departments in which less than ten persons receive wages and the rest receive salary, as defined above, such departments would not be factories within the meaning of the term. Case law referred. (Para 33)

(i) Factories Act (1948), S. 2(m) — "Precincts" — Meaning of.

The term "precincts" is usually understood as a space enclosed by walls. (Para 34)

V. C. Gopalaratnam and B. T. Sundararajan, for Appellant; State Prosecutor, for the State.

REFERENCES: Courtwise/Chronological/ Paras
(30) 32 Bom LR 329: (AIR 1930 Bom 162: 34

31 Cri LJ 1094)

(42) 1LR (1942) Bom 287: (AIR 1942 Bom 191) 22

(46) AIR 1946 Bom 102: (ILR (1945) Bom 899) 22

(34) AIR 1934 Cal 730: (152 Ind cas 566) 33

(27) 8 Lah 666: (AIR 1928 Lah 78: 29 Cri LJ 583) 34

(27) 50 Mad 834: (AIR 1927 Mad 345: 28 Cri LJ 267) 34

(42) AIR 1942 Pat 194: (20 Pat 866) 22

(1819) 2 B & Ald 345: (106 ER 392) 16

(1853) 13 CB 166: (22 LJCP 86) 19

(1901) 1 KB 700: (70 LJKB 571) 20

(1905) 1 KB 453: (74 LJKB 347) 20, 21

(1907) 1 KB 531: (76 LJKB 234) 20, 21

(1911) 1 KB 445: (80 LJKB 141) 23

(1848) 18 LJ Ex 120: (1848-2 Ex 59) 19

(1857) 26 LJQB 319: (110 RR 524) 19

(1882) 51 LJQB 417: 9 QBD 45 18

GOVINDA MENON J.: This is an appeal against the conviction of the manager of the Gemini Studios, Madras, by the Chief Presidency Magistrate, for having contravened the provisions of the Factories Act and having thereby committed an offence under S. 92 of the said Act.

(2) The appellant has been found guilty of the following three offences: (1) under S. 61 and S. 108(2) read with Rule 79 for having failed to specify, or enter, in the notice of periods of work exhibited at the main entrance of the studio, the working hours of the workers engaged in the departments, of directors and artists, cameramen and sound engineers, make-up artists, electricians, editors, laboratorians and still photographers and their assistants; (2) under S. 62 read with Rule 80 for having failed to enter the particulars of all the workers engaged in the said department in Form No. 12 register; and (3) under S. 20 read with Rule 51 for having failed to provide spittoons in the factory as per the type prescribed under Rule 51.

(3) The main question that has been argued is whether the studio in which the films are produced is a "factory" within the meaning of the term in the Factories Act and whether the persons employed there are "workers" as defined in the Act. The Factories Act (63 of 1948) is the Act in force which is said to have been contravened; but the studio in question was in existence before this Act was passed and had been registered when the earlier Act 25 of 1934 which was replaced by Act 63 of 1948 was in vogue. The appellant contends that except for the three departments, viz., those connected with carpenters, moulders and tinkers, the rest of the portions of the studio cannot be called a "factory" and that these three departments are housed in a separate building where all the requirements of the Factories Act have already been attended to. The learned Chief Presidency Magistrate did not accept the contentions put forward on behalf of the appellant, but agreeing with the prosecution, convicted the appellant and sentenced him as stated above.

(4) Exhibit P. 1 is the notice of occupation and notice of work periods relating to this factory given by the appellant on the 7th June 1949 under the provisions of the Act whereunder the appellant styles himself as the manager of this factory. It is evidently a notice sent to the Chief Inspector of Factories under S. 7(1) of Act 63 of 1948 which corresponds to S. 9(1) of the Act of 1934. Ex. P. 2 in Form No. 11 prescribed under Rule 79 is the notice of the periods of work for the adult workers. Reading Exs. P. 1 and P. 2 together, it is clear that the appellant has restricted those portions of the studio wherein carpentry, moulding, tinkering, painting etc., are done in connection with the erection and dismantling of sets as a factory and that the other portions do not come within the provisions of the Act. It is not clear from the evidence that the authorities have ever questioned the correctness of the two notices, Ex. P. 1 being of 7th June 1949.

(5) P. W. 1 inspected the Gemini Studio on 2-10-1950. According to him he found the defects mentioned above, which necessitated the filing of the charge-sheet. The evidence before the lower court lay in a short compass, one witness being examined for the prosecution and one for the defence. In addition to the notice of occupation, Ex. P. 1, and the Form No. 2 prescribed under Rule 79, Ex. P. 2, relating to notice of periods of work for adult workers, we have Ex. P. 3, a notice by the Inspector of Factories, Second Circle, asking the appellant to show cause why prosecution should not be launched against him for contravening the provisions of the Factories Act and the rules. Ex. P. 4 is the reply sent by the appellant to Ex. P. 3 and Ex. P. 5 is the factory inspection report by the Inspector of Factories. Ex. P. 6 is the sanction to prosecute the manager and Ex. P. 7 is the notice dated 10-10-1950 issued by the Inspector of Factories.

(6) The question that has been elaborately argued at the Bar is whether the departments other than those admitted by the appellant as coming within the provisions of the Factories Act, are also of the same nature as carpentry, moulding and tinkering, so as to attract the operation of the Act. According to D. W. 1, whose evidence we have no reason to reject and which we accept, there are a number of departments such as creative, administrative, technical and directory. (1) The creative department comprises of story and dialogue writers, song composers and music composers and musicians; (2) the administrative department consists of the proprietor, secretaries, chief executive officer, accountants and programme makers; (3) the technical department consists of cameramen, sound engineers, make-up artists, electricians, editor, laboratorians and still-photographers; (4) the directorial department consists of picture directors and art directors. His evidence is also to the effect that for the production of each picture, there should be actors and actresses called artists, some being permanent and others part-time and temporary. The gist of the evidence of D. W. 1 is that excepting the labour department consisting of carpenters, tinkers and moulders for which department a labour officer is in charge and for which a licence had already been taken under the Factories Act, the other departments engaged in producing films in the Gemini Studio are under no obligation to observe the Factories Act and the rules thereunder.

(7) Though there is no evidence let in as regards the production of the films for exhibition, we can take judicial notice of the fact that the completed production of a film is a highly technical and scientific process which requires the services of persons who are experts in that line. Raw films which consist of nothing but celluloid sheets are put into the camera and on them are imprinted the actions of the artists. This is done by means of high-powered electric lights and these films are also made to absorb the sounds and dialogues by means of the sound engineering process. There are also other processes such as the cutting of the films and editing them before they are made fit for being screened. There is no dispute whatever as to how the above processes are being conducted. But the divergence between the parties is as to whether the action of converting a raw film into a finished product by means of the various scientific and physical processes will come within the meaning of the provisions in the Factories Act. According to P. W. 1 all these departments are factories and that persons working in those departments are workers. He deposed that in the laboratory he found persons engaged in developing and printing films with the aid of electric power; in the wardrobe section he found men engaged in making dresses with the aid of sewing machines; in the property room there were persons engaged in keeping and distributing properties to the various departments. In the editing department, films were being tested through "Moviala" editing machines; on the shooting floors persons were engaged in arranging furniture, showing flood-lights, moving cameras and other machines. In the programme department, persons were engaged in preparing call sheets. In the reception department, men were receiving people and directing them to various other departments. In the administrative department were persons engaged in maintaining the accounts and other registers relating to the production of cinema films. In the publicity department workers were found preparing slides and posters for advertisement. The watch and ward department employed men who watched and cleaned the premises and maintained the garden. In this Court the appellant filed a list of the names of the persons engaged, their designation, their salary per mensem and other details relating to each of the departments and though these details were not available to the lower Court, no objection has been taken as regards the correctness of the details contained in this statement. We shall therefore proceed on the basis that there is no dispute with regard to the nature of the work done or the number of persons employed and other matters.

(8) As against this, it is urged on behalf of the appellant that the fundamental and all-important business in a film studio is the creation of entertainment for the public who pay for it & that movies are essentially entertainment though they may be called media of expression. It is, therefore, urged that in order to bring the work of a cinema studio into the category of a "factory" it will be essential to bring entertainment as an article or a substance. That movies are generally media of expression cannot be disputed and therefore what is finally distributed to the various picture houses for exhibition is not what existed at the initial stage, but it is the story, the plot or the idea that are worked up and knit into a continuous version that constitutes the entertainment that is catered to the public. A correct decision on this topic depends entirely on the proper interpretation to be put upon the sections of the Factories Act and the rules made thereunder. Section 2 cl. (m) of the Act defines "factory" as under: "Factory" means any premises including the precincts thereof—

(i) whereon ten or more workers are working, or were working on any day of the preceding twelve months, and in any part of which a manufacturing process is being carried on with the aid of power, or is ordinarily so carried on, or

(ii) whereon twenty or more workers are working, or were working on any day of the preceding twelve months, and in any part of which a manufacturing process is being carried on without the aid of power, or is ordinarily so carried on, but does not include a mine subject to the operation of the Indian Mines Act, 1923 (4 of 1923), or a railway running shed."

"Worker" is defined in S. 2 cl. (1) as follows:

"Worker" means a person employed, directly or through any agency, whether for wages or not, in any manufacturing process, or in cleaning any part of the machinery or premises used for a manufacturing process, or in any other kind of work incidental to, or connected with, the manufacturing process, or the subject of the manufacturing process;" "Manufacturing process" is defined in S. 2 cl. (k) as follows:

"Manufacturing process" means any process for—

(i) making, altering, repairing, ornamenting, finishing, packing, oiling, washing, cleaning, breaking up, demolishing, or otherwise treating or adapting any article or substance with a view to its use, sale, transport, delivery or disposal or

(ii) pumping oil, water or sewage, or

(iii) generating, transforming or transmitting power; or

(iv) printing by letterpress, lithography, photogravure or other similar work or book-binding, which is carried on by way of trade or for purposes of gain, or incidentally to another business so carried on; or

(v) constructing, reconstructing, repairing, refitting, finishing or breaking up ships or vessels;"

(9) It is not disputed that in the premises in question there are ten or more individuals working or were working on any day in the preceding twelve months, but what is disputed is that the persons are not workers and that what is being carried on is not manufacturing process. The learned State Prosecutor has admitted that sub-cl. (ii), (iii) and (iv) of S. 2 clause (k) will not be applicable to the facts of the present case; but what he contends is that the business that is being carried on in the Gemini Studio is a "manufacturing process" within the meaning of the term in the first clause and that the persons employed there directly or indirectly are employed for "wages" in manufacturing process and such being the case, the premises and precincts would be a factory. The necessary implication of this argument is that all the three elements mentioned above are to be found in this factory. First of all we have to see whether what is being carried on is a manufacturing process. Secondly, if it is a manufacturing process, whether the persons engaged in it are those who receive wages in such manufacturing process. And thirdly whether the premises and precincts where these things are carried on is a factory. Before we proceed to discuss the correct interpretation of these sections, it is useful to set out the provisions of the Indian Factories Act, 1934, as well as those of the English Factories Act of 1937. Section 2, cl. (g), Factories Act, 1934, defines "manufacturing process" as follows:

"Manufacturing process" means any process—

(i) for making, altering, repairing, ornamenting, finishing, or packing, or otherwise treating any article or substance with a view to its use, sale, transport, delivery or disposal, or

(ii) for pumping oil, water or sewage, or

(iii) for generating, transforming or transmitting power."

Clause (h) of S. 2 defines "worker" in the following terms:

"Worker" means a person employed, whether for wages, or not, in any manufacturing process, or in cleaning any part of the machinery or premises used for a manufacturing process, or in any other kind of work whatsoever incidental to, or connected with the manufacturing process or connected with the subject of the manufacturing process, but does not include any person solely employed in a clerical capacity in any room or place where no manufacturing process is being carried on;" "Factory" is defined in cl. (j) as follows:

"Factory" means any premises including the precincts thereof whereon twenty or more workers are working, or were working on any day of the preceding twelve months and in any part of which a manufacturing process is being carried on with the aid of power, or is ordinarily so carried on, but does not include a mine subject to the operation of the Indian Mines Act, 1923."

The English Factories Act, 1937, in S. 151(1) gives an interpretation of the term "factory" in the following terms:

"Subject to the provisions of this section, the expression 'factory' means any premises in which, or within the close or curtilage or precincts of which, persons are employed in manual labour in any process for or incidental to any of the following purposes, namely:

.....
And (whether or not they are factories by reason of the foregoing definition) the expression 'factory' also includes the following premises in which persons are employed in manual labour, that is to say:

(xi) any premises in which the production of cinematograph films is carried on by way of trade or for purposes of gain, so, however, that the employment at any such premises of theatrical performers within the meaning of the Theatrical Employers Registration Act, 1925, and of attendants on such theatrical performers, shall not be deemed to be employment in a factory;

Section 152 of the Act which deals with general interpretation does not contain any definition of the term "wages" or of "worker". But it is clear that cl. (xi) of S. 151(1) as extracted above brings a cinema studio within the meaning of the term "factory".

(10) A comparison of the English statute with the Indian Statute shows that in England the expression "factory" can be applied only to a premises in which, or within the close curtilage or precincts of which, persons are employed in manual labour in any process for, or incidental to, what have been described later on in that section. A general definition of the word "factory" is formulated in the earlier part of the section, and 'ex abundanti cautela' various institutions are brought within the definition specifically, whether they can, or cannot be brought within the general terms of the definition. In other words according to the English statute if an establishment satisfies the general words of the definition and if manual labour is employed in such an establishment it becomes a factory. But even if such an establishment cannot be brought within the wide terms of that definition, still as specifically bringing it within the definition are the various defined institutions. The Indian Act of 1934 in defining "manufacturing process" is not as wide as the definition in the present Act. The Select Committee which considered the Bill before it was passed into an Act stated that the definition of "manufacturing process" has been made much wider and more comprehensive than in the 1934 Act. Section 2(k), sub-cl. (iv) and (v) were added by the Select Committee and it is stated that this addition is intended to amplify the definition so as to include printing and ship-building. The Indian Act did not borrow from the English Act the various amplifications mentioned as items (i) to (x) and (xii) and (xiii) of S. 151(1) of the English Act.

(11) For the State it is conceded that in the definition of "manufacturing process" sub-cl. (ii), (iii), (iv) and (v) of Cl. (k) of S. 2 cannot be made applicable to the Studio in question. What is urged is that in converting a raw film into a finished product on which, by the use of power lights, photographic emblems are printed and sounds absorbed, the process involved is "adapting any article or substance with a view to its use". The other expressions such as making, altering, repairing, ornamenting, finishing, packing, oiling, washing, cleaning, breaking up, and demolition, do not apply to the process that is adapted here. But what is stated is that the raw film which is an article is treated or adapted with a view to its use, the use being the exhibition of the film for entertainment. Therefore the conversion of a raw film into a film fit for exhibition in a cinema is a manufacturing process.

(12) The appellant's contention is that no manufacture takes place at all but that the production of a finalised talkie film is mostly intangible material constituted by individual genius incapable of regimentation or standardisation. It cannot be said that any artificial or mechanical process is primarily the basis which makes the raw film into a finished product. An illustration is put forward on behalf of the defence that the conversion of a raw film into a finished product is exactly like the writing of a book of poems by a poet wherein the paper and the card board on which they are printed from the raw material for an elaborate production which is finally given to the public. It is urged that in the writing of a book there is a conversion of a raw material, viz., the paper, into a finished product, viz., the book, where the ideas are formulated and exhibited. In short the argument is that it is misleading and incorrect to bring in the idea that a raw film upon which songs and photos are recorded and absorbed constitutes a raw material which is converted into a manufactured article.

(13) The difficulty in accepting this argument is on account of the very wide words used in the statute in defining "manufacturing process". None can dispute that the raw film is an article or a substance and when by the process of treating or adapting, after the sounds are absorbed and the photos imprinted, it is rendered fit to be screened in a cinema theatre, then such a change would come within the meaning of the term "treating or adapting any article or substance with a view to its use". When a negative is cut to match the positive, and is kept in reserve it is certainly adapting for use. In S. 2(g), Factories Act, 1934, the word "adapting" does not find a place. But the definition contained some of the words used in the present definition. The words such as oiling, washing, cleaning, breaking up, demolishing, were also absent in the earlier section. But for purposes of the present case, the insertion of those words in the new section is not of any consequence. It is the case for the State that the introduction of the words "treating or adapting any article or substance with a view to its use", brings the conversion of raw films into a finished product within the meaning of this definition. Under the English Act it is only if manual labour is employed in any process for, or incidental to, the various matters described in the section that the premises would become a factory.

(14) It is strongly urged by Mr. Gopalaratnam for the appellant that film production seeks to purvey an intangible entertainment and not the creation of some commodity which is marketable and while in ordinary manufacturing process it is possible to standardise the product by particular designs or formula whereby success is ensured, film production is incapable of such standardisation. Whatever might be the nature, or the popular appreciation of the work done, in production of cinema films, and the mental exhilaration or outlook which it gives to the public, one thing cannot be gained, that the conversion of a raw film into a finished product comes within the definition of manufacturing process in the section. It is unnecessary for us to expatiate in any detail as to how the process is being worked out for on that part of the case there is no dispute between the parties.

(15) It is next contended that because in the Indian Act, sub-cl. (i) and (vii) of S. 151 (1) of the English Act relating to ship-building and printing alone are adopted and sub-cl. (xi) which deals with cinematograph films is left out of account, the intention of the framers of the Statute who, when drafting the Factories Act, had the English statute before them, was to exclude from the definition of "manufacturing process" such productions as film productions. It is also said that since the Select Committee on the Act has definitely stated that "manufacturing process" has been made much wider and more comprehensive by the addition of these two clauses by implication, the intention of the statute to be gathered by such expulsion is that film production cannot be manufacturing process within the definition. It is futile to make comparisons between the English Act and ours; for one thing the idea underlying the Factories Act in England is the regulation of the employment of manual labour. There is no such restriction so far as one can see in the Factories Act prevalent in this country. The salient fact that with the English statute before them the framers of the Indian Act did not restrict the operation of the Act to manual labour, cannot be lost sight of. Conditions in England with regard to the control of intellectual labour are not the same as in our country. In India the intelligentsia require protection from the exploitation of capitalists probably in a greater measure than in England. "Educated unemployed" cannot be said to be a feature of English life today. But one need not devote much attention or research to see that in our country with the advancement of higher university education the problem of finding employment to those who have qualified themselves is becoming an acute one. In such circumstances, it is not surprising that the sponsors of the legislation in India thought it necessary to include intellectual as well as aesthetic and artistic portions of labour within the purview of the Factories Act.

(16) Though every alteration of an article does not confer on it a new character as a manufactured article, still in the present case when a raw film is moulded and transformed into a finished product, a new and different article emerges out of it which has a positive and specific use in its new state. In defining the word "manufacture", Abbott C. J. in — The King v. Wheeler, (1819) 2 B. & Ald. 345 states that something of a corporeal and substantial nature, something that can be made by man from matters subjected to his art and skill, or at the least some new mode of employing practically his art and skill are required to satisfy the word "manufacture". Applying that definition to the present case, we see that by the art and skill of the various persons as well as by the use of the camera & the sound recording equipment the raw film is transformed into a new substance. It does not require much knowledge of science to understand that by combining various elements a thoroughly different substance from the elements can be manufactured. Chemists are able to manufacture common salt with two such dissimilar elements like sodium and chlorine. The question in such cases will be has there been a transformation? We have no doubt whatever that the conversion of a raw film into a finished product is a transformation which would make it a manufacturing process within the meaning of the term.

(17) If in the Gemini Studio "manufacturing process" can be said to be going on, still strong objection is taken to the view that it is a factory because the persons employed in that occupation do not receive "wages" and are therefore not "workers" as defined in sub-cl. (1). A "worker" should be a person employed directly or through any agency whether for wages or not in the manufacturing process, the other portions of the definition being immaterial for the purpose of the present case. It cannot be disputed that the antithesis "or not" is not intended to bring within the ambit of the definition persons who receive emoluments which cannot be termed as wages. The expression "whether for wages or not" means whether the person receives as remuneration for his services wages, or whether such a person is an apprentice learning work or is an honorary worker. It is not the case of the State that if a person receives something which is not wages when employed directly or through any agency in any manufacturing process, he can be called a worker. So we proceed on the basis that for the purposes of the present case the phrase "or not" should not cause any difficulty. We have already rejected the contention that the Act is restricted to the employment of manual labour. Therefore even if intellectual or artistic labour is employed, if what is received as remuneration for such labour by the individual concerned can be termed wages in the manufacturing process, then the person so employed is a worker. For this purpose we have to appreciate in the present setting the meaning of the term "wages". That in statutory enactments, the two terms "salary" and "wages" are often employed to describe the same idea or at least different facets of one and the same idea is pressed on us as a consideration for giving a very extended and wide import to the term "wages". What are the legal contents of this word and how it is used in the section have to be correctly determined. In cls. (h) and (i) of the proviso to S. 60, sub-sec. (1), Civil P. C., we have the provision that the wages of labourers and domestic servants, whether payable in money or in kind, and salary to the extent of the first hundred rupees and one half the remainder of such salary, shall not be liable to attachment or sale. These clauses were amended and substituted for the original clause by the Civil Procedure Code (Amendment) Act V of 1943. Therefore, for the purpose of attachment of the emoluments of a person employed, the Code makes a distinction between wages and salary. At page 245 of Mulla's Civil Procedure Code, there is a definition of the term "wages of labourers" in the following terms:

"Wages of labourers: A 'labourer' is a person who earns his daily bread by personal manual labour, or in occupations which require little or no art, skill or previous education. Thus, persons who agree to spin cotton and to receive a certain amount of money for a certain quantity of cotton spun by them are labourers and their wages cannot be attached. The old provision only applied to the wages of labourers and domestic servants and there was no provision to exempt the salary of a person in private employment. From the collocation of words used in the clause it was arguable that the word 'salary' in the clause was intended to mean salary of labourers and domestic servants only. It has, however, been held that though the latter part of the clause should have been the subject of a separate clause, yet on a consideration of the entire section, there is no doubt that the clause protects from attachment salary of all persons in receipt of it other than public officers and servants of a railway company or local authority so far as the protection goes." In Stroud's Judicial Dictionary, Vol. III, at page 2205 the word "wages" is defined in the following manner:

"Though this word might be said to include payment for any services yet in general the word "salary" is used for payment for services of a higher class and wages is confined to the earnings of labourers and artisans."

In Wharton's Law Lexicon, at page 1052, the definition contemplates:

"Compensation agreed upon by a master to be paid to a servant, or any other person hired to do work or business for him."

Stroud's Judicial Dictionary gives the meaning of the word 'wages' in the various English Statutes as well as in certain enactments in the United States. In the United States the word 'wages' in some of the enactments does not imply that the compensation is to be determined solely upon the basis of time spent in service. It may be determined by the work done. But the English statutes make a distinction between 'wages' and 'salary'.

(18) In — 'Gordon v. Jennings', (1882) 51 LJ QB 417, Grove J. attempted to define and make a distinction between the words 'wages' and 'salary'. The learned Judge was of opinion that regard must be had to the object and intention of the Act, and to the connotation of the words used. In the context of the particular statute he was considering, the use of the word 'wages' is an indication of the object of the Act, for according to the learned Judge though it might be said to include payment for any services, in general the word "salary" is used for payment of services of a higher class, and "wages" is confined to the earnings of labourers and artisans. We find a report of the same case in — 'Gordon v. Jennings', (1882) 9 QBD 45, where the judgment as reported differs in material particulars from that reported in — 'Gordon v. Jennings', (1882) 51 LJ QB 417. At page 46 of the former report, Grove J. makes the following observation:

"The intention of the Act is to abolish the attachment of 'wages'. Now it may be that the term 'wages' according to the etymological meaning of the word, may be correctly applied to any remuneration for services, but it seems to me that the popular signification must be looked to. The term 'wages' is not applied to the remuneration of a high or important officer of the State or a company, for instance, but to that of domestic servants, labourers, and persons of a similar description."

(19) Parke B. in — 'Riley v. Warden', (1849) 18 L. J. Ex. 120, uses the term 'compensation wages'. This decision is followed by Cockburn C. J. in — 'Ingram v. Barnes', (1857) 26 LJQB 319. Observations of a similar kind can be found in — 'Sharman v. Sanders', (1853) 13 C B 166. In — 'Ingram v. Barnes', (1857) 26 LJQB 319, Gresswell J. speaks of personal services being paid in wages.

(20) 'Wages' is defined in the English Statute Truck Amendment Act, 1887, 50 and 51 Vict. Ch. XLVI. In Halsbury's Laws of England, 2nd Edn., Vol. 14, at page 650 we find the following definition for 'wages':

"Any money or other thing had or contracted to be paid, delivered, or given as recompense, reward, or remuneration for any labour done, or to be done, whether within a certain time or to a certain amount, or for a time or an amount uncertain, is deemed to be wages for such labour."

In the Concise Oxford Dictionary 'salary' is defined as a fixed periodical payment made to a person doing other than manual or mechanical work. The terms 'workman' and 'wages' were also the subject of consideration in a number of English cases: Vide — 'Simpson v. Ebbw Vale Steel Iron and Coal Co.', (1905) 1 K B 453, — 'Bagnall v. Levinstein Ltd.', (1907) 1 KB 531 and — 'Nash v. Hollinshead', (1901) 1 KB 700.

(21) In — 'Simpson v. Ebbw Vale Steel Iron & Coal Co.', (1905) 1 K B 453, the Court of Appeal held that the certificated manager of a coal mine, who is paid a yearly salary, and who, although his duties require his presence in the mine, is not required to engage in manual labour, is not a 'workman' within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897. There are various passages in the judgments of Collins M. R. as well as in the judgment of the other Lord Justices which deal with the meaning of the term 'workman' and the definition to be put upon 'wages'. At page 459 Collins M. R. observes as follows:

"In my opinion it should be so drawn as to embrace the classes whose remuneration can properly be described as wages. The popular meaning must be given to a definition where we are confronted with such an expression as 'wages', and we must interpret the Act as applying to persons whom 'ex hypothesi' the Legislature regards as not being in a position to protect themselves. None of these considerations apply to the case of a person holding the position of a certified manager of a colliery, who comes within a very different category from that of an ordinary workman."

'Bagnall v. Levinstein Ltd.', (1907) 1 K B 531 which follows — 'Simpson v. Ebbw Vale Steel Iron & Coal Co. Ltd.', (1905) 1 K B 453 is instructive in this way; in that even if a person who is employed in a dye and chemical company under a written agreement for five years service and upon terms with regard to salary, commission on profits of inventions or improvements, had to do manual labour, still it cannot be said that he can be called a "workman" within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Act. The criterion applied by the majority of the Court of Appeal in that case was whether the remuneration was a fixed one and a salary was paid. The agreement provided that the person employed was to receive a salary payable monthly at the rate of £ 200 a year in the first year, increasing by £ 15 yearly till the fifth year. In addition to that he was to be paid a commission on the net profits of inventions, improvements and discoveries etc. Since his duties included manual labour it was contended that he was a "workman" though he was receiving a salary. The majority of the Court of Appeal, following — 'Simpson v. Ebbw Vale Steel Iron & Coal Co.', (1905) 1 KB 453 repelled that argument.

(22) To make out the distinction between wages and salary a few Indian decisions have been referred to by the learned counsel for the appellant. 'K. U. Kulkarni v. Ganpati Hiraji', ILR (1942) Bom 287 and — 'Manilal Bhaichand v. Mohanlal Maganlal', AIR 1946 Bom 102, were cited for showing that where the compensation is for manual or physical labour, the term used is wages & not "salary" & that in ordinary parlance the word "wages" cannot be used to apply to persons other than manual labourers. In — Manilal Bhaichand v. Mohanlal Maganlal, AIR 1946 Bom 102 it was even suggested that a clerk doing manual labour is not a "labourer" receiving wages and what he gets is "salary". The substance of the decision in — Raghunandan v. Jaigobind, AIR 1942 Pat 194 is to the same effect.

(23) Mr. Gopalaratnam then contends that the preamble to the Factories Act should be looked into for the purpose of finding out the intention with which the enactment was brought into being and that the Factories Act of 1948 was an Act to consolidate and amend the law regulating labour in factories. The preamble states that whereas it is expedient to consolidate and amend the law regulating labour in factories, it is hereby enacted as follows: For this purpose he invites the attention of the Court to certain excerpts in — London County Council v. Bermondsey Bioscope Co. Ltd. (1911) 1 KB 445. However useful it might be to consider an Act with the aid of its preamble and though such a practice was prevalent in England for some time, the present tendency is not to lay much stress on the preamble unless it is so difficult to determine the scope of the statute by understanding its provisions. We have already expressed our opinion that the Act is not confined to manual labour alone and that its operation is extended to persons whose intellect is utilised and compensation paid for it by the Gemini Studio. It does not therefore seem very helpful to read into the preamble the intention of the framers.

(24) It is very strongly pressed before us that the artists employed in Studio, some of whom receive a monthly remuneration of more than Rs. 3000 can under no stretch of imagination be termed as persons who receive wages. They belong to a category of people whose natural talents, aptitude and expression, have been so trained as to bring out in full blossom the results of a combination of training and equipment. Such people cannot be considered as "workers" who receive wages, is the argument of learned counsel. It is further contended that the directorial department consisting of individuals who regulate the production and whose work is not in any way connected with physical exertion should not be considered a person receiving wages. The same point of view has been put forward in favour of those employed in the departments of art, make-up, music and dance. It cannot be disputed that those engaged in the camera, sound and electricity departments are persons trained in the field of science and the question has to be considered as to whether their emoluments can be treated as wages. Departments like laboratory and wardrobe also can be said to come under the same conditions.

(25) The strenuous argument very forcibly put forward on behalf of the appellant is that it will be doing violence to the language to describe the compensation for work done by the persons engaged in aforesaid departments as "wages" in any sense of the term. One has to visualise an overall and general picture of the whole situation in viewing whether the Factories Act was intended to control the nature of work of such persons. For this purpose a rather extended and wide review of the provisions of the Factories Act and the scheme of the same has been attempted on behalf of the appellant. Looking at the scheme of the Act it is urged that there could be no intention to bring within its purview employees of the category described above. We are told that even a cursory glance of the various parts of the Act would be sufficient to confirm the above view. Chapter III of the Act deals with health, and among the sections are those devoted to cleanliness, disposal of wastes and effluents, ventilation, dust and fume..... artificial humidification, overcrowding, lighting, drinking water, latrines and urinals. Chapter IV deals with the safety of the machines and employees in the factory. Chapter V deals with labour welfare. Chapter VI deals with working hours of adults and Chapter VII deals with the employment of young persons in the factory and S. 67, the first section in that chapter contains a strict and absolute prohibition that no child who has not completed his fourteenth year shall be required or allowed to work in any factory. Chapter VIII concerns itself with leave with wages and Ss. 78 and 79 specifically relate to annual leave with wages and wages during the leave period. S. 79, sub-sec. (1) states that every worker who has completed a period of twelve months' continuous service in a factory shall be allowed during the subsequent period of twelve months' leave with wages for a number of days calculated at the rate of..... so that wages have to be calculated during leave according to the number of days. S. 80 lays down that the worker shall be paid at a rate equal to the daily average of his total full time earnings exclusive of any overtime earnings and bonus, but inclusive of dearness allowance. This section contemplates "daily wages". The learned counsel for the appellant contends that it is ludicrous and highly fanciful if not thoroughly harmful to apply these provisions of the Act to the intellectual labour employed in the Gemini Studio, and such being the case it could not have been the intention of the framers of the Act to bring such an institution within the ambit of the Factories Act. It is rather further argued that if the application of the Act is tested in the light of the considerations to be adumbrated below, then it would mean that insurmountable difficulties & absurdities would ensue by the acceptance of the construction put forward by the authorities. The following are stated as some of them.

(26) According to the argument for the State the managing director of this Studio who controls the working and who feels the throb and the pulse of the whole institution would be a worker, and the manager, the person who is now prosecuted, would also be a worker.

(27) If we are to apply S. 66 of the Act, as is intended to be applied, then no woman can be employed in the shooting of films for acting after 7 p.m. and before 6 a.m. because S. 66(1) clause (b) says that no woman shall be employed in any factory, except between the hours of 6 a.m. and 7 p.m. provided that the Provincial Government may, by notification in the official Gazette in respect of any class or description of factories, vary the limits laid down in clause (b), but so that no such variation shall authorise the employment of any woman between the hours of 10 p.m. and 5 a.m. Such a prohibition would reduce the preparation of a film to a nullity.

(28) Section 79 of the Act which allows annual leave with wages cannot apply to part time workers because they do not work every day or even part of the day. What they turn out is spasmodic work under contracts by which they cannot be subject to regular hours. In the application of Ss. 67, 68 and 71 which relate to the prohibition about the employment of young persons, it is impossible to conform to the provisions of those sections because it is well known that in many films dealing with stories from Hindu Puranas young children will have to act. It is emphatically contended by Mr. Gopalaratnam that if these sections are to be strictly complied with, a Shirley Temple could never act in a studio. Other instances of the impossibility of applying the provisions of this Act are those contained in S. 60 which lays down that no adult worker shall be required or allowed to work in any factory on any day on which he has already been working in any other factory, save in such circumstances as may be prescribed. It is common knowledge that most of the well known actors and actresses have contracts with more than one production studio and therefore one person has to work in different studios at various hours of the day. It is impossible for the management to have any control over them. Lastly it is argued that the Factories Act and rules cannot regulate the work of people like poet, song composers, story writers and others whose art is creative and who rely upon their genius produce works of art and it is urged that this consideration should weigh upon the Court in finding out whether the Act can be applied. It may be that a song composer or a story writer or a poet may find an opportunity to express his genius at odd hours of the day when he has to compose or put down in writing the results of sudden impulses and intentions that come upon him. These persons cannot be regulated by the rules under the Factories Act.

(29) The learned State Prosecutor contends that these difficulties are not insurmountable because under the rules framed under the Act it is possible to exempt such persons. He invites our attention to Rules 81, 82 and 84 framed under the Act. Rule 81 says that the persons mentioned in the schedule thereto are deemed to hold positions of supervision or management and Rule 82 says that the persons mentioned thereunder are deemed to hold confidential positions. The schedule gives the provisions of the Act from which such persons can be exempted. With regard to cinema studios, the nature of the exempted work consists of erection or dismantling of "settings" or the make up of actors and actresses in cinema studios and the extent of exemption relates to Ss. 51, 54, 55, 56 and 61 of the Act. Because there are provisions regarding exemption it is contended on behalf of the State that there is no insuperable difficulty in the application of the Act to Cinema studios. By G. O. No. 5072 (Development) dated 14-11-1951, certain cinema workers are exempted from the operation of S. 64 (2) (b) and (c) and S. 64 (3) such as light boys, shifting furniture or set attendants, and clap boys.

(30) In view of the provisions regarding the exemption we are asked to hold that there can be no difficulty in applying the Act.

(31) The fact that exemption can be given to employees engaged in a 'bona fide' executive, administrative or professional capacity is relied upon for the contention that the Act is intended to apply to the Studio as such. We are not prepared to accede to the argument that because in certain classes of cases it is possible under the provisions of the Act to grant exemption, such a state of circumstances would make the Act applicable to persons to whom it would not be applicable if the Act is properly construed.

(32) The learned State Prosecutor, by applying analogies, laid stress upon the meaning of the term "wages" occurring in certain similar statutes. In the Payment of Wages Act, 4 of 1936, S. 2 clause (vi) defines wages as follows:

"'Wages' means all remuneration, capable of being expressed in terms of money, which would, if the terms of the contract of employment express or implied, were fulfilled, be payable whether conditionally upon the regular attendance, good work or conduct or other behaviour of the person employed, or otherwise, to a person employed in respect of his employment or of work done in such employment, and includes any bonus or other additional remuneration of the nature aforesaid which would be so payable and any sum payable to such person by reason of the termination of his employment, but does not include..."

Various other provisions of the same statute were brought to our notice viz., S. 5, sub-sec. (4) relating to the payment of wages on a working day, and S. 6 to the effect that all wages, shall be paid in current coin or currency notes or in both. If anything at all can be gathered from the preamble to this Act it is that this legislation is intended to regulate the payment of wages to certain classes of persons employed in industry. One cannot by reference to this Act gather the impression that the term wages is intended to apply to persons who receive a fairly good sum of money as monthly salary. It is noteworthy that S. 1 sub-sec. (6) prohibits the application of the Act to wages payable in respect of a wage-period, which, over such wage-period, average two hundred rupees a month or more. If the intention of the legislature had been that the term "wages" can be applied to monthly salaries, in our opinion, there was no necessity for the enactment of this section. By restricting the remuneration for a wage-period, to Rs. 200 and less, the section seems to suggest that the wage period is something which is less than a month. Otherwise it could easily have said that the wages for a period of one month should not exceed Rs. 200. Moreover the Act is intended to apply to persons to whom wages have to be paid in current coin or in currency notes or in both. It is admitted that in the case of most, if not all, of the highly paid employees, the remuneration is paid in the form of cheques drawn on banks. To such persons if S. 6 is made applicable, then their remuneration would not have been properly paid if the same is paid through cheques drawn on banks. We are inclined to think that on a construction of the various provisions of the Payment of Wages Act, the underlying idea is that the term "wages" should be understood as compensation paid for work done for a period less than a month. It may be either daily or weekly but where the payment is to be made monthly, one finds it difficult to apply the provisions of the Payment of Wages Act to such state of circumstances. Moreover, S. 4, sub-sec. (2) says that no wage period shall exceed one month. That makes it very plain that the Act is not intended to apply to any kind of salaries payable monthly. The other enactment on which reliance is placed is the Workmen's Compensation Act (8 of 1923) where the word "wages" has been defined in S. 2(1), clause (m) as follows:

"'Wages' includes any privilege or benefit which is capable of being estimated in money, other than a travelling allowance or the value of any travelling concession or a contribution paid by the employer of a workman towards any pension or provident fund or a sum paid to a workman to cover any special expenses entailed on him by the nature of his employment."

Clause (n) defines "workman" in the following terms:

"'workman' means any person (other than a person whose employment is of a casual nature and who is employed otherwise than for the purpose of the employer's trade or business).

(i) ..... .

(ii) employed on monthly wages not exceeding four hundred rupees, in any such capacity as is specified in schedule II."

We do not think that the sections of this Act are in any way in 'pari materia' or even analogous to the provisions of the Act we have to construe. There are schedules to the Workmen's Compensation Act where a large number of persons are defined as workmen coming within the meaning of S. 2(1) clause (n) of the Act and the third paragraph of schedule II is to some extent analogous to the definition "manufacturing process". No useful guidance can be got by considering an analogous statute like the Workmen's Compensation Act determining what meaning should be given to the term "wages" in the Factories Act. We do not feel satisfied that a reference to this Act would in any way help in the solution of the question before us.

(33) The learned State Prosecutor also referred to S. 2 cl. (h), Factories Act of 1934 where "worker" is defined and this clause excludes from its scope any person solely employed in a clerical capacity in any room or place where no manufacturing process is being carried on. In this connection a decision of the Calcutta High Court in — 'Superintendent, Legal Remembrancer Bengal v. H. E. Watson', AIR 1934 Cal 730 was also brought to our notice. At page 733 there are observations to the effect that the expression "worker" need not necessarily be restricted to manual labour. We have on a construction of the present Act, already come to that conclusion. It seems to us that in finding out whether a person employed directly or through any agency in a manufacturing process, is receiving wages, the question has to be determined with regard to the period for which the amount is settled to be paid. We are definitely of opinion that if the remuneration is to be paid daily or weekly, it can be called wages. But where it is monthly remuneration payable on the last day of the month or after that date and where the remuneration, considering the general standards of payment, is fairly high, then it has to be understood as salary. We do not think that in order to bring the compensation within the term "salary" any lower limit need be fixed. In the Payment of Wages Act the same is Rs. 200 and under the Workmen's Compensation Act it is Rs. 400 per month. So far as the Factories Act is concerned there is no restriction at all. But we also feel that even if the compensation is paid at the end of the month is less than Rs. 200 as laid down in Payment of Wages Act, it would be more appropriate to call it as wages. But where it is Rs. 200 or more the same may be termed as salary". There has been no evidence let in as to how many of the persons employed in directorial, technical and other departments are receiving wages. If ten or more workers are receiving wages, then each of those departments would be a factory. But if there are departments in which less than ten persons receive wages and the rest receive salary, as defined by us above, such departments would not be factories within the meaning of the term. This question has to be gone into before the various departments can be held to employ workers as defined in S. 2 clause (1).

(34) The next question is, what is meant by the expression "premises" including "precincts" in clause (m). There is no difficulty in understanding the term "precincts" because it is usually understood as a space enclosed by walls. We are told that within the enclosed space of the Gemini Studio there are a number of buildings in which the various departments are housed. We have no doubt whatever that each of these buildings if they employ ten or more workers as defined in S. 2 clause (1) will be a factory. Various decisions such as — 'Pragnarain v. The Crown', 8 Lah 666, — 'Emperor v. Ganpat', 32 Bom L R 329 and — 'Ramanathan v. Emperor', 50 Mad 834, were cited before us for the elucidation of the term "precincts". We are not satisfied that these decisions help us in ascertaining whether the buildings in question are factories or not.

(35) The further question has to be considered whether if any one of these departments is a factory as being situated within the precincts of the Gemini Studio, then it is legally possible to separate those departments from the others which cannot be styled as factories. The building where carpenters, moulders, and tinkers are carrying on their work is admittedly a factory and the rules and regulations of the Factories Act apply to that departments. Evidence is lacking as to whether the other departments can be so separated. It is permissible to separate the carpentry, moulding and tinkering departments which are really unnecessary for the production of films from the others. There is no evidence to show that the other departments are so intertwined as to be a composite one without being able to be separated. On that aspect of the case there does not seem to have been any evidence let in. In our opinion it is possible, even if some of those departments are factories, to separate those which are not factories from those which are factories. No attention seems to have been paid to this aspect of the case also.

(36) In the view which we take that it is not specifically determined as to whether workers, as defined in the Act, of the requisite number have been employed in the various departments, it is difficult to sustain the conviction. We therefore set aside the convictions and sentences and direct a retrial of the case to find out whether the persons employed are workers or not. In respect of those departments where the provisions of the Factories Act have been held to be not applicable, there will be no retrial and the order of the lower court will stand.

A/V.S.B.

Retrial ordered.

A.I.R. 1953 MADRAS 279 (Vol. 40, C.N. 102)

RAJAMANNAR C. J.

AND VENKATARAMA AIYAR J.

C. S. S. Motor Service, Tenkasi and others, Petitioners v. The State of Madras, represented by the Secretary to the Government of Madras, Home Department, and another, Respondents.

Writ Petns. Nos. 333, 334, 615, 200, 723, 777 and 591 of 1951, D/- 25-4-1952.

(a) Constitution of India, Art. 19 (1) (g), (6) — Motor Vehicles Act (1939) — Validity.

All public streets and roads vest in the State but the State holds them as trustee on behalf of the public. The members of the public are entitled as beneficiaries to use them as a matter of right and this right is limited only by the similar rights possessed by every other citizen to use the pathways. The State as trustee on behalf of the public is entitled to impose all such limitations on the character and extent of the user as may be requisite for protecting the rights of the public generally. Under the Constitution of India both the contract carriers and common carriers would stand in the same position. The right of a citizen to carry on business in motor transport on public streets, is within the protection of Art. 19 (1) (g). As it is a right guaranteed under Art. 19 (1) (g) the validity of the impugned sections of the Motor Vehicles Act must be determined with reference to the requirements of Art. 19(6). They will be valid only if they are reasonable restrictions imposed in the interests of the public. Case law discussed.

(Paras 21, 24, 25, 26)

(b) Constitution of India, Art. 19 (1) (g), (6) — Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 42 is valid — Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 42.

While a permit system is unconstitutional in so far as it relates to the exercise of fundamental rights, a system of licensing which has for its object the regulation of trades is not repugnant to Art. 19 (1) (g). What is prescribed under S. 42, Motor Vehicles Act, is in substance not a permit but a licence. Section 42 must accordingly be held to be valid. Case law ref.

(Paras 27, 28)

Anno: M. V. Act, S. 42 N. 1.

(c) Constitution of India, Art. 19 (1) (g) (6) — Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 43 A is valid — Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 43 A.

Section 43 A, Motor Vehicles Act, appears to be intended to clothe the Government with authority to issue directions of an administrative character and in that view it would be valid, though particular orders passed thereunder might be open to challenge as unconstitutional. (Para 29)

(d) Motor Vehicles Act (1939), Ss. 47 and 48 — Power to take into account condition of road — Constitution of India, Art. 19(6).

The Transport Authorities can take into account the condition of the road in granting or refusing the permit for a stage carriage or limiting its number on a particular route. Conservation of roads is a matter of general public interest and they have to be well maintained not merely for purposes of motor traffic but also for other vehicular traffic and to enable pedestrians to pass and repass safely and comfortably and their maintenance involves considerable expenditure of public funds. A regulation of motor traffic with the object of conserving the roads must be upheld as protected by Art. 19 (6) of the Constitution: (1926) 70 Law Ed 1101, Rel. on.

(Para 30)

Anno: M. V. Act, S. 48 N. 1.

(e) Motor Vehicles Act (1939), Ss. 47 and 48 — Consideration of nature of locality — Constitution of India, Art. 19 (6).

The Transport Authorities can take into account the nature of the locality before deciding whether the use of transport vehicles could be permitted. It is in the interests of the public that where the streets are narrow or the locality is congested there should be a restriction on the running of motor transport vehicles in that area. (1933) 77 Law Ed 1053, Rel. on.

(Para 30)

Anno: M. V. Act, S. 48 N. 1.

(f) Motor Vehicles Act (1939), Ss. 47 and 48 — Consideration of adequacy of existing services — Constitution of India, Art. 19(6).

It will not be a proper ground to refuse a permit on the ground that there is no need for extension of service. Under Art. 19 (6) what has to be decided is whether the grant is for the benefit of the public and not whether it is injurious to the interests of the existing operators. (1925) 69 Law Ed 623, (1925) 69 Law Ed 627 and (1926) 70 Law Ed 1101, Rel. on.

(Para 31)

Anno: M. V. Act, S. 48 N. 1.

(g) Motor Vehicles Act (1939), Ss. 47 and 48 — Consideration of running of unremunerative services by existing operators — Constitution of India, Art. 19(6).

The Transport Authorities cannot take into consideration that the existing operators are running other services which are not remunerative and they cannot grant permits to them with a view to compensate them for those unremunerative services. This will be clearly opposed to Art. 19 (6).

(Para 32)

Anno: M. V. Act, S. 48 N. 1.

(h) Motor Vehicles Act (1939), Ss. 47 and 48 — Refusal to grant permit at all — Constitution of India, Art. 19(6).

The Transport Authorities cannot refuse to grant permit altogether to any applicant. Article 19 (6) of the Constitution is intended only to cover restrictions which are of a regulatory character but a power to regulate does not carry with it the power to prohibit and refusal to grant permits is not a reasonable restriction on the exercise of the right to carry on trade but an unconstitutional denial of it. Case law referred.

(Para 33)

(i) Motor Vehicles Act (1939), Ss. 47 and 48 — Principles to be applied in granting or refusing permits — Uniformity — Constitution of India, Art. 14.

Whatever principles be adopted as criteria for making the selection among the applicants it is necessary that they should be applied uniformly and without differentiation as if they had been enacted as part of the statute. This does not, however, prevent the State from altering its rules from time to time when as a result of experience it discovers that they require to be altered in the interests of the public. But what is necessary is that at any given time there must be one set of rules and regulations governing the disposal of all the applications. There should not be two different and opposing principles both in operation at the same time, one being applied to one applicant and the other to the other. Rules should be observed not 'ad hoc' with reference to particular applicants but generally with reference to all applicants. There should be a Government of laws and not of men. (1940) 84 Law Ed 1368 and (1950) 94 Law Ed 381, Ref. (Paras 37, 38)

Anno: M. V. Act, S. 48 N. 1.

(j) Constitution of India, Art. 19 — Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 47 — Validity — Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 47.

In S. 47 (1), clauses (a), (b), (d) and (f) are valid, as being in the interest of the public and clause (e) is invalid as being not in the interests of the public but of the permit holder. With reference to S. 47 (1) (c) adequacy of extension of service can be taken into account only in so far as it is in the interests of the public. The factor to be considered is not whether the existing operators will suffer by competition but whether extension of service will be in the interests of the public. Therefore, S. 47 (1) (c) will not be legal in so far as it provides that the effect of the service proposed upon the existing service should be taken into account. (Para 39)

(k) Constitution of India, Art. 19 — Motor Vehicles Act (1939), Ss. 48 (a), (b) are valid — Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 48.

The procedure prescribed by S. 48 (a) must be held to be in the interests of the public. S. 48(b) must also be held to be valid. (Para 40)

Anno: M. V. Act, S. 48 N. 1.

(l) Constitution of India, Art. 19 — Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 64A is valid — Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 64A.

The language of S. 64A is undoubtedly wide. But it is a judicial power to review the orders of subordinate officers passed in judicial proceedings. The extent of the powers of those officers is sufficiently defined in the Act and it would be reasonable to construe the powers of the Government under S. 64A as subject to the same limitations as those subordinate authorities. The word "propriety" in S. 64A must be understood as meaning "reasonableness." The words "as it thinks fit" cannot be equated with the words "to its own satisfaction". S. 64A is therefore valid. (1893) 1 Ch 547, (1934) 1 KB 277 and CMP No. 5942 of 1951 (Mad), Rel. on. (Para 42)

(m) Constitution of India, Art. 19(6) — Power of Court to decide reasonableness of legislation.

When a legislation which interferes with fundamental rights guaranteed under Part 3 of the Constitution is sought to be sustained as falling within the scope of Art.

19(6) the question whether it is reasonable and made in the interests of the public is one open to judicial review. The decisions of the Transport Authorities granting or refusing to grant permits are liable to be reviewed by the Courts and set aside if they are unreasonable, arbitrary or discriminatory. The observations of Supreme Court in AIR 1952 Supreme Court 192, that the provisions of the Motor Vehicles Act which prescribe an elaborate procedure for the grant of permits are self-contained, that the applicant has no absolute right to get a permit and that it is within the discretion of the authorities to grant or refuse one would correctly represent the position under the Act before the Constitution. They must be limited to cases under the Motor Vehicles Act arising before the Constitution. Case law Relied on; AIR 1952 SC 192, Disting.

(Paras 44, 46, 51, 53)

(n) Constitution of India, Arts. 301, 305 — Restrictions under Motor Vehicles Act (1939).

Commerce includes all forms of transportation and motor traffic is within Art. 301 but provisions of any existing law under Art. 305 will cover the Motor Vehicles Act. (Para 45)

K. V. Venkatasubramania Ayyar, K. Hariharan, K. Bashyam Iyengar, M. Natesan, S. Srinivasan, N. G. Krishna Ayyangar and N. Panchapagesa Ayyar, for Petitioners; Advocate General, for Govt. Pleader, for the State, and on behalf of Attorney General of India; M. K. Nambiar, N. G. Krishna Iyengar, G. R. Jagadisa Iyer, R. Raghavachariar, D. Narasaraju, R. S. Venkatachari and T. Chengalvarayan, for Respondents.

REFERENCES: Courtwise/Chronological/ Paras

('50) 1950 SCJ 324: (AIR 1950 SC 163)	25, 33, 52
('50) 1950 SCJ 571: (AIR 1951 SC 118)	33, 44
('51) Cri A No 159 of 1951: (AIR 1952 SC 192)	47, 48, 50, 51, 53
('85) 7 All 362: (1885 All WN 56)	23
('36) AIR 1936 All 112: (159 Ind Cas 790)	25
('51) AIR 1951 All 257: (ILR (1951) 1 All 269 FB)	25
('41) ILR (1941) Bom 226: AIR 1941 Bom 161	23
('96) 19 Mad 154	23
('02) 25 Mad 635: (12 Mad LJ 37)	23
('16) Basaveswaraswami v. Bellary Municipal Council: (AIR 1916 Mad 613)	23
('38) 1938-1 Mad LJ 391: (AIR 1938 Mad 227)	25
('48) 1948-1 Mad LJ 85: (AIR 1948 Mad 400)	29, 35
('51) C M P No 5942 of 1951 (Mad)	42
('52) 1952-1 Mad LJ 38: (AIR 1952 Mad 253)	27
('52) 65 Mad LW 114: (AIR 1952 Mad 395)	28
('52) AIR 1952 Orissa 42	25
(1896) AC 88: (65 LJPC 4)	33
(1922) 2 AC 128: (91 LJPC 146)	51
(1950) AC 235: (1949-2 All ER 755)	33, 34
(1952) 1 All ER 122 affirming the decision in 1951-1 All ER 268	51
4 Bell's App 374	23
(1876) 1 CPD 329: (34 LT 62)	22
(1893) 1 Ch 547: (62 LJ Ch 233)	42
62 CLR 116	33
70 CLR 1	33
71 CLR 29	33
(1855) 4 El & Bl 860: (119 ER 319)	22

2 HBL 527

(1917) 2 KB 318: (86 LJ KB 1247)	22, 25
(1934) 1 KB 277: (103 LKKB 257)	42
(1837) 9 Law Ed 773: (11 Peters 420)	14
(1873) 21 Law Ed 394: (16 Wall 130)	13
(1877) 24 Law Ed 77: (4 Otto 113)	13, 16, 18
(1884) 28 Law Ed 585: (111 US 746)	13
(1885) 29 Law Ed 516: (115 US 650)	14
(1885) 29 Law Ed 525: (115 US 674)	14
(1886) 30 Law Ed 220: (118 US 356)	35
(1888) 32 Law Ed 253: (127 US 678)	13
(1888) 32 Law Ed 150: (127 US 1)	14
(1897) 41 Law Ed 832: (165 US 578)	13
(1903) 48 Law Ed 148: (191 US 207)	20
(1905) 49 Law Ed 937: (198 US 45)	17
(1909) 53 Law Ed 315: (211 US 539)	44
(1911) 55 Law Ed 112: (219 US 104)	17
(1914) 58 Law Ed 1011: (233 US 389)	17
(1916) 60 Law Ed 445 (sic)	21
(1917) 61 Law Ed 1336: (244 US 590)	17
(1923) 67 Law Ed 1103: (262 US 522)	17
(1923) 67 Law Ed 1042: (262 US 390)	44
(1924) 68 Law Ed 596: (264 US 140)	19, 20
(1925) 69 Law Ed 623: (267 US 307)	31
(1925) 69 Law Ed 627: (267 US 317)	31
(1926) 70 Law Ed 1101: (271 US 583)	20, 21, 30, 31
(1927) 71 Law Ed 718: (273 US 418)	13, 17
(1927) 71 Law Ed 966: (274 US 135)	24
(1928) 72 Law Ed 913: (277 US 350)	17
(1929) 73 Law Ed 483: (278 US 515)	14
(1929) 73 Law Ed 282: (278 US 228)	17
(1931) 75 Law Ed 1264: (283 US 553)	21
(1932) 76 Law Ed 747: (285 US 262)	17
(1932) 76 Law Ed 1167: (286 US 374)	24
(1932) 77 Law Ed 288: (287 US 251)	20
(1933) 77 Law Ed 1053: (289 US 92)	21, 30
(1934) 78 Law Ed 940: (291 US 502)	17, 18
(1935) 79 Law Ed 1311: (295 US 76)	21
(1936) 80 Law Ed 1033: (298 US 38)	44
(1938) 82 Law Ed 734: (303 US 177)	24
(1938) 82 Law Ed 949: (303 US 444)	27
(1939) 83 Law Ed 1423: (307 US 496)	27
(1933) 84 Law Ed 155: (308 US 147)	27
(1940) 84 Law Ed 1368: (310 US 573)	36
(1941) 85 Law Ed 1305: (313 US 236)	17
(1943) 87 Law Ed 873: (318 US 418)	27
(1950) 94 Law Ed 381: (338 US 604)	36
(1867) LR 3 Ch 306: (37 LJ Ch 313)	22
LTR 78 (Sic)	16
(1893) 1 QB 142: (62 LJQB 117)	22
(1900) 1 QB 752: (69 LJQB 511)	22
1 Vest 189	22

VENKATARAMA AIYAR J.: (W. P. Nos. 333, 334 and 615 of 1951): These applications raise questions of considerable importance about the validity of the permit system under the Motor Vehicles Act and of some of the provisions of that Act.

(2) The facts in W. P. No. 333 of 1951 are these: In the Tenkasi Uthumalai route in the district of Tirunelveli respondent 2 was running one stage carriage. On 25-7-1950 applications were invited for a second stage carriage service over the route. Among the applicants were the petitioner and respondent 2. On 25-8-1950 the Regional Transport Authority granted the permit to respondent 2. On appeal the Central Road Traffic Board set aside this order on 5-11-1950 and granted the permit to the petitioner. The respondent moved the Government under S. 64A of the Act and after various proceedings which it is unnecessary now to detail the Government passed an order on 5-7-1951 setting aside the order of the Central Road Traffic Board and restored that of the Regional Transport Authority. The petitioner now seeks to set aside this order as unconstitutional.

(3) The facts in W. P. No. 334 of 1951 are these: A new route between Tenkasi and Sendamaram in the district of Tirunelveli was opened in 1950 and applications were invited for two stage carriage permits in that route. The petitioner and respondent 2, who may be mentioned, are the same as in W. P. No. 333 of 1951 were among the sixteen applicants for the permit. On 8-1-1951 the Regional Transport Authority granted one permit to the petitioner and the other to respondent 2 and dismissed the other applications. On appeal by respondent 2 the Central Road Traffic Board passed an order on 2-4-1951 setting aside the grant of permit to the petitioner and granting it to respondent 2. The petitioner moved the Government under S. 64A, Motor Vehicles Act but the Government rejected the petition summarily on 30-7-1951 by an order which is in these terms: "The Government sees no reason to interfere". It is this order that is attacked in W. P. No. 334 of 1951.

(4) In W. P. No. 615 of 1951 the material facts are these: In 1950 it was decided to open a new bus route between Kodavasal and Saliamangalam in the Tanjore district. The petitioner first got permits to run two stage carriages on this route. Later on applications were invited for two more permits. There were eight applicants including the petitioner and respondents 4 and 5. On 2-6-1951 the Regional Transport Authority granted these two permits to the petitioner. On appeal the Central Road Traffic Board passed an order on 10-8-1951 setting aside the grant of the two permits to the petitioner and dividing it between respondents 4 and 5. A revision petition filed by the petitioner under S. 64A was dismissed on 4-10-1951, the order of the Government being in these terms: "Government sees no reason to interfere". It is this order that is questioned in W. P. No. 615 of 1951.

(5) These and other similar petitions were heard together as they raised more or less the same controversies about the validity of the various provisions of the Motor Vehicles Act. Notice was issued to the Attorney General of India as the legislation impugned was an Act of Central Legislature, and the learned Advocate General has addressed us on his behalf as well. We had the benefit of able and exhaustive arguments on various aspects of the case by Mr. K. V. Venkatasubramania Aiyar for the petitioner in W. P. Nos. 333 and 334 of 1951, by Mr. K. Bhashyam Aiyangar for the petitioner in W. P. No. 615 of 1951, by other learned counsel who appeared for the petitioners in other cases, by the learned Advocate General on behalf of the Government respondent and by Mr. M. K. Nambiar on behalf of the successful applicants who are respondents in these petitions.

(6) Before dealing with the several contentions urged in the case it is necessary to set out the relevant provisions of the Act. They occur in Chapter 4 of the Act entitled "Control of Transport Vehicles". Under S. 42 no owner of a transport vehicle can use it in any public place

"save in accordance with the conditions of a permit granted or countersigned by a Regional or Provincial Transport Authority authorising the use of the vehicle in that place in the manner in which the vehicle is being used."

(7) Section 43A empowers the Provincial Government to issue such orders and directions of a general character as it may consider necessary in respect of any matter relating to the road transport to the provincial transport authority or regional transport authority and such orders are to be given effect to by the transport authority. Application for permit should be made under S. 45 to the Regional Transport Authority and it should contain the particulars mentioned in S. 46. Then follows S. 47 (1) which is in these terms:

"A Regional Transport Authority shall, in deciding whether to grant or refuse a stage carriage permit, have regard to the following matters, namely: (a) the interest of the public generally;

(b) the advantages to the public of the service to be provided including the saving of time likely to be effected thereby and any convenience arising from journeys not being broken;

(c) the adequacy of existing road passenger transport services between the places to be served, the fares charged by these services and the effect upon those services of the service proposed;

(d) the benefit to any particular locality or localities likely to be afforded by the service;

(e) the operation by the applicant of other transport services and in particular of unremunerative services in conjunction with remunerative services; and

(f) the condition of the roads included in the proposed route or routes; and shall also take into consideration any representation made by persons already providing road transport facilities along or near the proposed route or routes or by any local authority or police authority within whose jurisdiction any part of the proposed route or routes lie or by any association interested in the provision of road transport facilities."

Section 48 runs as follows:

"A Regional Transport Authority may, after consideration of the matters set forth in subsec. (1) of S. 47, — (a) limit the number of the stage carriages or stage carriages of any specified type for which stage carriage permits may be granted in the region or in any specified area or on any specified route within the region;

(b) issue a stage carriage permit in respect of a particular stage carriage or a particular service of stage carriages."

(8) Then follow regulations relating to the timings, load, number of passengers and the like. Section 57 prescribes the procedure to be followed in the grant of permits; S. 59 for their cancellation or suspension. S. 64 provides for appeals to the Central Road Traffic Board against the orders of the Regional Transport Authority specified therein. Then comes S. 64A which is in these terms:

"The Provincial Government may, of its own motion or on application made to it, call for the records of any order passed or proceeding taken under this Chapter by any authority or officer subordinate to it, for the purpose of satisfying itself as to the legality, regularity or propriety of such order or proceeding and after examining such records, may pass such order in reference thereto as it thinks fit."

(9) On these provisions several contentions have been urged on either side; they may broadly be classed under the following heads:

1. Is a citizen entitled to ply, as a matter of right, transport vehicles for hire on public streets? The petitioners contend that he is entitled and that it is a right protected by Art. 19(1)(g). Mr. M. K. Nambiar for the respondents argues that it is a privilege and not a right and it does not fall within Art. 19(1)(g).

2. If it falls under Art. 19(1)(g) are Ss. 42, 43A, 47, 48(a) and (b) and S. 64A void as inconsistent with the rights declared under that Article? Are they protected by Art. 19(6)? Are the above sections or any of them repugnant to Art. 14 of the Constitution as denying equal protection?

3. What is the extent of the jurisdiction of the Courts to review the order of the authorities constituted under the Act?

4. Are the provisions of the Act obnoxious to Art. 301 which declares that commerce and trade within the territory of India shall be free?

(10) (1) It is contended by Mr. Nambiar that a citizen has no right to ply transport vehicles on public pathways as a matter of right, that it is a mere privilege and that, therefore, it is not protected by Art. 19(1)(g). The arguments in favour of this position may be summarised as follows:

(11) The pathways belong to the State. The only right which the public has over them is to pass and re-pass. Subject to this right the State, as the owner of the pathways has a right to control it in such a manner as it chooses. The citizens cannot, therefore, claim as a matter of right that they are entitled to carry on business on the roads and streets and use them for earning profit; and that if the State permits the streets to be used for the purpose of business it is a privilege and not a right. It is also contended that a citizen has no right to carry on any and every trade, that the business of motor transport is a public utility service over which the State has paramount powers of control, that it is for the Legislature to determine the conditions under which the business could be carried on and that its decision is final in respect of those matters. These contentions are sought to be supported largely by citation of American authorities.

(12) Mr. Venkatasubramania Aiyar, however, argues that the American law relating to business differs widely from the law as laid down in the Constitution; that the right to carry on business is not one of the freedoms expressly protected by the American Constitution; that it was only by a process of judicial construction that it has come to be recognised as comprised in the liberty guaranteed under the 14th amendment, that in American law distinctions were made between trades which could be carried on as a matter of right and trades which could be carried on only with the permission of the Government and between trades which were private and trades which were affected with public interest and that the decisions of the American Courts could not, therefore, be accepted as safe guides for interpreting the rights of the parties under the Constitution.

(13) The right to carry on a trade or calling or profession is not one of the freedoms expressly guaranteed by the American Constitution. So far as the States were concerned, there was no constitutional limitation on their power to enact legislation with reference to business so long as it did not encroach on the powers of the Congress to legislate or inter-state commerce and so long as freedom of contract was not violated. "Business" apart from "contract" was not, as such, a freedom protected by the Constitution. In 1868 the 14th Amendment was promulgated. It provided 'inter alia'

"Nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws."

Even under this amendment freedom to carry on business was not expressly mentioned. In 1873 when the butchers of New Orleans challenged a State law which granted a monopoly of that business to a corporation, as unconstitutional, no contention was urged on their behalf that the right to carry on business was one of the freedoms included in the word "Liberty" in the 14th amendment.

It was Bradley J. who observed in his dissenting judgment as follows:

"For the preservation, exercise and enjoyment of these rights the individual citizen, as a necessity, must be left free to adopt such calling, profession or trade as may seem to him most conducive to that end. Without this right he cannot be a free man. This right to choose one's calling is an essential part of that liberty which it is the object of Government to protect; and a calling, when chosen, is a man's property and right. Liberty and property are not protected where these rights are arbitrarily assailed,"

and again

"In my view, a law which prohibits a large class of citizens from adopting a lawful employment, or from following a lawful employment previously adopted, does deprive them of liberty as well as property, without due process of law. Their right of choice is a portion of their liberty; their occupation is their property." Vide 'Slaughter-house cases', (1873) 21 Law Ed 394 at pp. 421 and 423.

It will be noticed that even in these passages there is no clear conception of a right to carry on a trade as a freedom distinct from the right to hold property.

The view that liberty in the 14th Amendment comprised also freedom to carry on business was stated by Field J. in — 'Munn v. People of Illinois', (1877) 24 Law Ed 77 at p. 90, in the following words:

"By the term 'liberty' as used in the provision, something more is meant than mere freedom from physical restraint or the bounds of a prison. It means freedom to go where one may choose, and to act in such manner not inconsistent with the equal rights of others, as his judgment may dictate for the promotion of his happiness; that is, to pursue such callings and avocations as may be most suitable to develop his capacities, and give to them their highest enjoyment."

The same view was expressed in — 'Butchers Union v. Crescent City Co.', (1884) 28 Law Ed 585 at p. 591 and — 'Powell v. Pennsylvania', (1888) 32 Law Ed 253 at p. 256. In — 'Allgeyer v. State of Louisiana', (1897) 41 Law Ed 832, dealing with the right of citizen to carry on insurance business the Court observed as follows:

"The liberty mentioned in that amendment means not only the right of the citizen to be free from the mere physical restraint of his person, as by incarceration, but the term is deemed to embrace the right of the citizen to be free in the enjoyment of all his faculties; to be free to use them in all lawful ways; to live and work where he will; to earn his livelihood by any lawful calling; to pursue any livelihood or avocation, and for that purpose to enter into all contracts which may be proper, necessary and essential to his carrying out to a successful conclusion the purposes above mentioned."

Thus the right to carry on business came to be recognised as one of the liberties protected by the Constitution but even so it did not acquire the full status of the freedoms which had been expressly mentioned in the Constitution such as the freedom of speech, of person and of religion; and was viewed somewhat in the light of an inter-loper or parvenu among them. Thus in — 'Tyson & Brother v. Banton', (1927) 71 Law Ed 718, where the question was about the powers of the Legislature to control the business of selling theatre tickets, Holmes J. in a dissenting judgment observed as follows:

"I think the proper course is to recognise that a State Legislature can do whatever it sees fit to do unless it is restrained by some express prohibition in the Constitution of the United States or of the State, and that Courts should be careful not to extend such prohibitions beyond their obvious meaning by reading into them conceptions of public policy that the particular Court may happen to entertain."

Thus the freedoms expressly mentioned in the Constitution occupied an exalted position which was denied to the unexpressed freedoms such as the one to carry on business. Under the Indian Constitution the right to carry on business is one of the freedoms expressly protected under Art. 19(1)(g) and it is placed on the same footing as freedom of speech and as liberty of the person. It is accordingly contended, with considerable force, that the decisions of the American Courts and the observations contained therein should be used with reserve in determining the rights of the parties under the Constitution.

(14) Then again under the American law, the doctrine is well established that while some trades could be carried on by the citizens as a matter of common law right there are others which could be carried on only if the State permits. This is called a franchise or a privilege and it has an English origin. Under that law a franchise means a grant made by the Sovereign in exercise of the Royal prerogative, which is thus defined in Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol. 6, p. 443, para 511:

"The Royal prerogative may be defined as being that pre-eminence which the Sovereign enjoys over and above all other persons by virtue of the common law, but out of its ordinary course, in right of his regal dignity, and comprehends all the special dignities, liberties, privileges, powers, and royalties allowed by the common law to the Crown of England."

At page 444 in para 513 it is stated:

"Prerogatives, however, connected with the royal revenues, such as treasure trove, waifs,